 Still growing in a majesty and pomp, the which
 To leave's a thousand-fold more bitter, than Sweet at first t' acquire,—after this process,
 To give her the avaunt! it is a pity
 Would move a monster.

Old L. Hearts of most hard temper
 Melt and lament for her.

Anne. O, God's will! much better,
 She ne'er had known pomp: though it be temporal
 Yet, if that cruel fortune do divorce¹
 It from the bearer, 't is a surfeance panging
 As soul and body's severing.

Old L. Alas, poor lady!
 She's a stranger now again?

Anne. So much the more
 Must pity drop upon her. Verily,
 I swear, 't is better to be lowly born,
 And range with humble livers in content,
 Than to be perk'd up in a glistering grief,
 And wear a golden sorrow.

Old L. Our content
 Is our best having.

Anne. By my troth, and maidenhead,
 I would not be a queen.

Old L. Beshrew me, I would,
 And venture maidenhead for 't; and so would you,
 For all this spice of your hypocrisy.
 You that have so fair parts of woman on you,
 Have, too, a woman's heart: which ever yet
 Affected eminence, wealth, sovereignty:
 Which, to say sooth, are blessings, and which gifts
 (Saving your mining) the capacity
 Of your soft cheveril² conscience would receive,
 If you might please to stretch it.

Anne. Nay, good troth.

Old L. Yes, troth, and troth.—You would not be a queen?

Anne. No, not for all the riches under heaven.

Old L. 'T is strange: a three-pence bowed would hire
 me,

Old as I am, to queen it. But, I pray you,
 What think you of a duchess? have you limbs
 To bear that load of title?

Anne. No, in troth.

Old L. Then you are weakly made. Pluck off³ a little:

¹ Not in f. e. ² If that quarrel, fortune, do divorce, &c.: in f. e.

³ Kid-skin. ⁴ Descend.

I would not be a young count in your way,
For more than blushing comes to. If your back
Cannot vouchsafe this burden, 't is too weak
Ever to get a boy.

Anne. How you do talk!

I swear again, I would not be a queen
For all the world.

Old L. In faith, for little England
You'd venture an emballing: 'I myself
Would for Carnarvonshire, although there 'long'd
No more to the crown but that. Lo! who comes here?

Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Good morrow, ladies. What were 't worth to know

The secret of your conference?

Anne. My good lord,
Not your demand: it values not your asking.
Our mistress' sorrows were pitying.

Cham. It was a gentle business, and becoming
The action of good women: there is hope
All will be well.

Anne. Now, I pray God, amen!

Cham. You bear a gentle mind, and heavenly blessings

Follow such creatures. That you may, fair lady,
Perceive I speak sincerely, and high notes
Ta'en of your many virtues, the king's majesty
Commends his good opinion of you to you, and Does purpose honour to you, no less flowing
Than marchioness of Pembroke; to which title
A thousand pound a year, annual support,
Out of his grace he adds.

Anne. I do not know,
What kind of my obedience I should tender:
More than my all is nothing; nor my prayers
Are not words duly hallow'd, nor my wishes
More worth than empty vanities: yet prayers, and wishes,

Are all I can return. Beseech your lordship,
Vouchsafe to speak my thanks, and my obedience,
As from a blushing handmaid, to his highness;
Whose health, and royalty, I pray for.

Cham. Lady,
I shall not fail 't improve^a the fair conceit.
The king hath of you.—I have perus'd her well: [Aside.
Beauty and honour in her are so mingled,
That they have caught the king; and who knows yet,
But from this lady may proceed a gem
To lighten all this isle?—[To her.] I'll to the king,
And say, I spoke with you.

Anne. My honour'd lord. [Exit Lord Chamberlain.]

Old L. Why, this it is; see, see!
I have been begging sixteen years in court,
(Am yet a courtier beggarly) nor could Come pat betwixt too early and too late
For any suit of pounds; and you, O fate!
A very fresh-fish here, (fie, fie, fie upon
This compell'd fortune!) have your mouth fill'd up,
Before you open it.

Anne. This is strange to me.

Old L. How tastes it? is it bitter? forty pence, no.
There was a lady once, ('t is an old story)
That would not be a queen, that would she not,
For all the mud in Egypt:—have you heard it?

Anne. Come, you are pleasant.

Old L. With your theme I could
O'er mount the lark. The marchioness of Pembroke!
A thousand pounds a year for pure respect;

No other obligation. By my life,
That promises more thousands: honour's train
Is longer than his foreskirt. By this time,
I know, your back will bear a duchess.—Say,
Are you not stronger than you were?

Anne.

Good lady,
Make yourself mirth with your particular fancy,
And leave me out on 't. Would I had no being,
If this elate^a my blood a jot: it faints me,
To think what follows.

The queen is comfortless, and we forgetful
In our long absence. Pray, do not deliver
What here you've heard, to her.

Old L.

What do you think me? [Exeunt]

SCENE IV.—A Hall in Black-Friars

Trumpets, Sennet, and Cornets. Enter two Vergers, with short silver Wands; next them, two Scribes, in the habit of Doctors; after them, the Archbishop of CANTERBURY alone; after him, the Bishops of LINCOLN, ELY, ROCHESTER, and SAINT ASAPH; next them, with some small distance, follows a Gentleman bearing the Purse, with the Great Seal, and a Cardinal's Hat; then two Priests, bearing each a silver Cross; then a Gentleman-Usher bare-headed, accompanied with a Sergeant at Arms, bearing a silver Mace; then two Gentlemen, bearing two great silver Pillars; after them, side by side, the two Cardinals WOLSEY and CAMPEIUS; two Noblemen with the Sword and Mace. The King takes place under the cloth of state; the two Cardinals sit under him as judges. The Queen takes place at some distance from the King. The Bishops place themselves on each side the court, in manner of a consistory; below them, the Scribes. The Lords sit next the Bishops. The rest of the Attendants stand in convenient order about the stage.

Vol. Whilst our commission from Rome is read,
Let silence be commanded.

K. Hen.

What 's the need?

It hath already publicly been read,
And on all sides th' authority allow'd;

You may, then, spare that time.

Vol.

Be 't so.—Proceed.

Scribe. Say, Henry king of England, come into the court.

Crier. Henry king of England, &c.

K. Hen. Here.

Scribe. Say, Katharine queen of England, come into the court.

Crier. Katharine, queen of England, &c.

[The Queen makes no answer, rises out of her chair, goes about the court, comes to the King, and kneels at his feet; then speaks.]

Q. Kath. Sir, I desire you, do me right and justice,
And to bestow your pity on me; for
I am a most poor woman, and a stranger,
Born out of your dominions; having here
No judge indifferent, nor no more assurance
Of equal friendship and proceeding. Alas! sir,
In what have I offended you? what cause
Hath my behaviour given to your displeasure,
That thus you should proceed to put me off.
And take your good grace from me? Heaven witness
I have been to you a true and humble wife,
At all times to your will conformable;
Ever in fear to kindle your dislike,
Yea, subject to your countenance: glad, or sorry,
As I saw it inclin'd. When was the hour

^a Referring to the ball, one of the royal insignia. ^b approve: in f. e. ^c salute: in f. e.

I ever contradicted your desire,
Or made it not mine too? or which of your friends
Have I not strove to love, although I knew
He were mine enemy? what friend of mine,
That had to him deriv'd your anger, did I
Continue in my liking? nay, gave notice
He was from thence discharg'd. Sir, call to mind
That I have been your wife, in this obedience,
Upward of twenty years, and have been blest
With many children by you: if in the course
And process of this time you can report,
And prove it too, against mine honour aught,
My bond to wedlock, or my love and duty,
Against your sacred person, in God's name,
Turn me away; and let the foul'st contempt
Shut door upon me, and so give me up
To the sharpest knife¹ of justice. Please you, sir,
The king, your father, was reputed for
A prince most prudent, of an excellent
An unmatch'd wit and judgment: Ferdinand,
My father, king of Spain, was reckon'd one
The wisest prince, that there had reign'd by many
A year before: it is not to be question'd
That they had gather'd a wise council to them
Of every realm, that did debate this business,
Who deem'd our marriage lawful. Wherefore I humbly
Beseech you, sir, to spare me, till I may
Be by my friends in Spain advis'd, whose counsel
I will implore: if not, in the name of God,
Your pleasure be fulfill'd!

Vol. You have here, lady,
(And of your choice) these reverend fathers; men
Of singular integrity and learning,
Yea, the elect of the land, who are assembled
To plead your cause. It shall be therefore bootless,
That longer you defer the court, as well
For your own quiet, as to rectify
What is unsettled in the king.

Cam. His grace
Hath spoken well, and justly: therefore, madam,
't is fit this royal session do proceed,
And that, without delay, their arguments
Be now produc'd and heard.

Q. Kath. Lord cardinal,
To you I speak.

Vol. Your pleasure, madam?
Q. Kath. Sir,
I am about to weep; but, thinking that
We are a queen, (or long have dream'd so) certain
The daughter of a king, my drops of tears
I'll turn to sparks of fire.

Vol. Be patient yet.
Q. Kath. I will, when you are humble; nay, before,
(Or God will punish me. I do believe,
Induc'd by potent circumstances, that
You are mine enemy, and make my challenge
You shall not be my judge: for it is you
Have blown this coal betwixt my lord and me,
Which God's dew quench.—Therefore, I say again,
I utterly abhor, yea, from my soul,
Refuse you for my judge; whom, yet once more,
I hold my most malicious foe, and think not
At all a friend to truth.

Vol. I do profess,
You speak not like yourself: who ever yet
Have stoov to charity, and display'd th' effects
Of disposition gentle, and of wisdom
O'ertopping woman's power. Madam, you do me wrong:
I have no spleen against you, nor injustice

For you, or any: how far I have proceeded,
Or how far farther shall, is warrant'd
By a commission from the consistory,
Yea, the whole consistory of Rome. You charge me,
That I have blown this coal: I do deny it.
The king is present: if it be known to him,
That I gainsay my deed, how may he wound,
And worthily, my falsehood; yea, as much
As you have done my truth. If he know
That I am free of your report, he knows,
I am not of your wrong: therefore, in him
It lies to cure me; and the cure is, to Remove these thoughts from you: the which, before
His highness shall speak in, I do beseech
You, gracious madam, to unthink your speaking,
And to say so no more.

Q. Kath. My lord, my lord,
I am a simple woman, much too weak
To oppose your cunning. Y' are meek and humblemouth'd;

You sign your place and calling in full seeming,
With meekness and humility: but your heart
Is erram'd with arrogance, spleen, and pride.
You have, by fortune and his highness' favours,
Gone slightly o'er low steps, and now are mounted
Where powers are your retainers; and your words,
Domestics to you, serve your will, as 't please
Yourself pronounce their office. I must tell you,
You tender more your person's honour, than
Your high profession spiritual; that again
I do refuse you for my judge, and here,
Before you all, appeal unto the pope,
To bring my whole cause 'fore his holiness,
And to be judg'd by him.

[She curtsies to the King, and offers to depart.
Cam. The queen is obstinate,
Stubborn to justice, apt to accuse it, and Disdainful to be tried by't: 't is not well
She's going away.

K. Hen. Call her again.
Crier. Katharine, queen of England, come into the court.

Gent. Ush.² Madam, you are call'd back.
Q. Kath. What need you note it? pray you, keep your way:

When you are call'd, return.—Now the Lord help!
They vex me past my patience.—Pray you, pass on.
I will not tarry: no, nor ever more,
Upon this business, my appearance make
In any of their courts.

[Exeunt Queen, and her Attendants
K. Hen. Go thy ways, Kate:
That man in the world who shall report he has
A better wife, let him in nought be trusted,
For speaking false in that. Thou art alone
(If thy rare qualities, sweet gentleness,
Thy meekness saint-like, wife-like government,
Obeying in commanding, and thy parts
Sovereign and pious else, could speak thee out)
The queen of earthly queens.—She's nobly born;
And, like her true nobility, she has Carried herself towards me

Vol. Most gracious sir,
In humblest manner I require your highness,
That it shall please you to declare, in hearing
Of all these ears, (for where I am robb'd and bound,
There must I be unloos'd, although not there
At once, and fully satisfied) whether ever I Did broach this business to your highness, or

¹ kind in f. e. desire: in f. e. ² In some mod. eds. this speech is given, without warrant, to GRIFFITH.

Laid any scruple in your way, which might Induce you to the question on 't? or ever
Have to you, but with thanks to God for such A royal lady, spake one the least word, that might Be to the prejudice of her present state,
Or touch of her good person?

K. Hen. My lord cardinal,
I do excuse you; yea, upon mine honour,
I free you from 't. You are not to be taught
That you have many enemies, that know not
Why they are so, but, like to village curs,
Bark when their fellows do: by some of these
The queen is put in anger. Y^e are excus'd;
But will you be more justified? You ever
Have wish'd the sleeping of this business: never Desir'd it to be stirr'd; but oft have hinder'd. off.
The passages made toward it.—On my honour,
I speak my good lord cardinal to this point,
And thus far clear him. Now, what mov'd me to 't,
I will be bold with time, and your attention:—
Then, mark th' inducement. Thus it came;—give heed to 't.

My conscience first receiv'd a tenderness,
Scruple, and prick, on certain speeches utter'd
By the bishop of Bayonne, then French ambassador,
Who had been hither sent, on the debating Aⁿ marriage 'twixt the duke of Orleans and
Our daughter Mary. Iⁿ the progress of this business,
Ere a determinate resolution, he
(I mean, the bishop) did require a respite;
Wherein he might the king his lord advertise
Whether our daughter were legitimate,
Respecting this our marriage with the dowager,
Sometime our brother's wife. This respite shook
The bottom of my conscience, enter'd me,
Yea, with a splitting power, and made to tremble
The region of my breast: which forc'd such way,
That many maz'd considerings did throng,
And press in with this caution. First, methought,
I stood not in the smile of heaven; who had Commanded nature, that my lady's womb,
If it conceiv'd a male child by me, should Do no more offices of life to 't, than
The grave does to the dead; for her male issue
Or died where they were made, or shortly after
This world had air'd them. Hence I took a thought,
This was a judgment on me; that my kingdom,
Well worthy the best heir o' the world, should not Be gladd in 't by me. Then follows, that I weigh'd the danger which my realms stood in

By this my issue's fail; and that gave to me
Many a groaning throe. Thus, hulling² in
The wild sea of my conscience, I did steer
Toward this remedy, whereupon we are Now present here together; that 's to say,
I meant to rectify my conscience,—which
I then did feel full sick, and yet not well,—
By all the reverend fathers of the land,
And doctors learn'd. First, I began in private
With you, my lord of Lincoln: you remember
How under my oppression I did reek,
When I first mov'd you.

Lin. Very well, my liege.
K. Hen. I have spoke long: be pleas'd yourself to say
How far you satisfied me.

Lin. So please your highness,
The question did at first so stagger me,—
Bearing a state of mighty moment in 't,
And consequence of dread,—that I committed
The daring³ counsel which I had to doubt,
And did entreat your highness to this course,
Which you are running here.

K. Hen. I then mov'd you,
My lord of Canterbury: and got your leave
To make this present summons.—Unsolicited
I left no reverend person in this court;
But by particular consent proceeded,
Under your hands and seals: therefore, go on,
For no dislike iⁿ the world against the person
Of the good queen, but the sharp thorny points
Of my alleged reasons drive this forward.
Prove but our marriage lawful, by my life,
And kingly dignity, we are contented
To wear our mortal state to come with her,
Katharine our queen, before the primest creature
That 's paragon'd o' the world.

Cam. So please your highness,
The queen being absent, 't is a needful fitness
That we adjourn this court till farther day:
Meanwhile must be an earnest motion
Made to the queen, to call back her appeal
She intends unto his holiness.

K. Hen. I may perceive, [Aside.]
These cardinals trifle with me: I abhor
This dilatory sloth, and tricks of Rome.
My learn'd and well-belov'd servant, Cranmer,
Pr'ythee, return! with thy approach. I know,
My comfort comes along. [Aloud.—Break up the court:
I say, set on. [Exeunt, in manner as they entered.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Palace at Bridewell.

A Room in the Queen's Apartment.

The Queen, and her Women, as at work

Q. Kath. Take thy lute, wench: my soul grows sad with troubles;

Sing, and disperse them, if thou canst. Leave working.
SONG.

*Orpheus with his lute made trees,
And the mountain-tops, that freeze,
Bow themselves, when he did sing:
To his music, plants, and flowers,
Ever sprung; as sun, and showers,
There had made a lasting spring.*

*Every thing that heard him play,
Even the billows of the sea.*

Hung their heads, and then lay by.

In sweet music is such art.

Killing care and grief of heart

Fall asleep, or, hearing, die.

Enter a Gentleman.

Q. Kath. How now!

Gent. An't please your grace, the two great cardinals
Wait in the presence.

Q. Kath. Would they speak with me?

Gent. They will'd me say so, madam.

Q. Kath. Pray their graces

* And: in o'd copies Pope made the change. * Driven to and fro by the waves.

To come near. [Exit Gent.] What can be their business
With me, a poor weak woman, fallen from favour?
I do not like their coming now I think on't.
They should be good men, their affairs as righteous;
But all hoods make not monks.

Enter WOLSEY and CAMPEIUS.

Wol. Peace to your highness.

Q. Kath. Your graces find me here part of a housewife;

would be all, against the worst may happen.

What are your pleasures with me, reverend lords?

Wol. May it please you, noble madam, to withdraw
'nto your private chamber, we shall give you
The full cause of our coming.

Q. Kath. Speak it here.

There's nothing I have done yet, o' my conscience,
Deserves a corner: would all other women
Could speak this with as free a soul as I do!

My lords, I care not, (so much I am happy Above a number) if my actions

Were tried by every tongue, every eye saw them,

Envy and base opinion set against them,

I know my life so even. If your business

Seek me out, and that way I am wit in,

But with it boldly: truth loves open dealing.

Wol. Tanta est erga te mentis integritas, regina serene- nissima,—

Q. Kath. O, good my lord, no Latin:

am not such a truant since my coming,

As not to know the language I have liv'd in:

A strange tongue makes my cause more strange, suspicious;

Pray, speak in English. Here are some will thank you,

If you speak truth, for their poor mistress' sake:

Believe me, she has had much wrong. Lord cardinal,

The willing'st sin I ever yet committed

May be absolv'd in English.

Wol. Noble lady,

I am sorry, my integrity should breed,

(And service to his majesty and you)

So deep suspicion, where all faith was meant.

We come not by the way of accusation,

To taint that honour every good tongue blesses,

Nor to betray you any way to sorrow;

You have too much, good lady; but to know

How you stand minded in the weighty difference

Between the king and you, and to deliver,

Like free and honest men, our just opinions,

And comforts to your cause.

Cam. Most honour'd madam,

My lord of York,—out of his noble nature,

Zeal and obedience he still bore your grace,

Forgetting, like a good man, your late censure

Both of his truth and him. (which was too far)—

Offers, as I do, in a sign of peace.

His service and his counsel.

Q. Kath. To betray me. [Aside.

My lords, I thank you both for your good wills,

Ye speak like honest men. (pray God, ye prove so!)

But how to make ye suddenly an answer.

In such a point of weight, so near mine honour,

(More near my life, I fear,) with my weak wit,

And to such men of gravity and learning,

in truth, I know not. I was set at work

Among my maids; full little, God knows, looking

Either for such men, or such business.

For her sake that I have been, for I feel

The last fit of my greatness, good your graces,

Let me have time and counsel for my cause.

Alas! I am a woman, friendless, hopeless.

Wol. Madam, you wrong the king's love with these fears:

Your hopes and friends are infinite.

Q. Kath. In England,

But little for my profit: can you think, lords,

That any Englishman dare give me counsel?

Or be a known friend, 'gainst his highness' pleasure,

(Though he be grown so desperate to be honest)

And live a subject? Nay, forsooth, my friends,

They that must weigh out my afflictions,

They that my trust must grow to, live not here

They are, as all my other comforts, far hence,

In mine own country, lords.

Cam. I would, your grace

Would leave your griefs, and take my counsel.

Q. Kath. How, sir?

Cam. Put your main cause into the king's protection:

He's loving, and most gracious: 't will be much

Both for your honour better, and your cause;

For if the trial of the law o'ertake you,

You'll part away disgrac'd.

Wol. He tells you rightly.

Q. Kath. Ye tell me what ye wish for both,—my ruin.

Is this your Christian counsel? out upon ye!

Heaven is above all yet: there sits a Judge

That no king can corrupt.

Cam. Your rage mistakes us.

Q. Kath. The more shame for ye! holy men I thought ye,

Upon my soul, two reverend cardinal virtues;

But cardinal sins, and hollow hearts, I fear ye.

Mend them for shame, my lords. Is this your comfort?

The cordial that ye bring a wretched lady?

A woman lost among ye, laugh'd at, scorn'd?

I will not wish ye half my miseries,

I have more charity; but say, I warn'd ye:

Take heed, for heaven's sake, take heed, lest at once

The burden of my sorrows fall upon ye.

Wol. Madam, this is a mere distraction;

You turn the good we offer into envy.

Q. Kath. Ye turn me into nothing. Woe upon ye,

And all such false professors! Would ye have me

(If ye have any justice, any pity,

If ye be any thing but churchmen's habits)

Put my sick cause into his hands that hates me?

Alas! he has banish'd me his bed already;

His love, too long ago: I am old, my lords,

And all the fellowship I hold now with him

Is only my obedience. What can happen

To me above this wretchedness? all your studies

Make me a curse like this.

Cam. Your fears are worse.

Q. Kath. Have I liv'd thus long—(let me speak myself,

Since virtue finds no friends.)—a wife, a true one?

A woman (I dare say without vain-glory)

Never yet branded with suspicion?

Have I with all my full affections

Still met the king? lov'd him next heaven? obey'd
him?

Been, out of fondness, superstitious to him?

Almost forgot my prayers to content him?

And am I thus rewarded? 't is not well, lords.

Bring me a constant woman to her husband,

One that ne'er dream'd a joy beyond his pleasure,

And to that woman, when she has done most,

Yet will I add an honour,—a great patience.

Wol. Madam, you wander from the good we aim at

Q. Kath. My lord, I dare not make myself so guilty,
To give up willingly that noble title
Your master wed me to : nothing but death
Shall e'er divorce my dignities.

Nor. Pray, hear me.
Q. Kath. Would I had never trod this English earth,
Or felt the flatteries that grow upon it !
I have angels' faces, but heaven knows your hearts.
What will become of me now, wretched lady ?
Am the most unhappy woman living.—
Alas ! poor wenches, where are now your fortunes !

[To her Women.

Shipwreck'd upon a kingdom, where no pity.
No friends, no hope, no kindred weep for me,
Almost no grave allow'd me.—Like the lily,
That once was mistress of the field and flourish'd,
I'll hang my head, and perish.

Nor. If your grace
Could but be brought to know our ends are honest,
You'd feel more comfort. Why should we, good lady
Upon what cause, wrong you ? alas ! our places,
The way of our profession is against it :
We are to cure such sorrows, not to sow them :
For goodness' sake, consider what you do ;
How you may hurt yourself, ay, utterly
Grow from the king's acquaintance, by this carriage.
The hearts of princes kiss obedience,
So much they love it ; but to stubborn spirits,
They swell, and grow as terrible as storms.
I know, you have a gentle, noble temper,
A soul as even as a calm : pray, think us
Those we profess, peace-makers, friends, and servants.

Cam. Madam, you'll find it so. You wrong your virtues

With these weak women's fears : a noble spirit,
As yours was put into you, ever casts
Such doubts, as false coin, from it. The king loves you ;
Beware, you lose it not : for us, if you please
To trust us in your business, we are ready
To use our utmost study in your service.

Q. Kath. Do what ye will, my lords : and, pray, forgive me,

If I have us'd myself unmannerly :
You know I am a woman, lacking wit
To make a seemly answer to such persons.
Pray do my service to his majesty :
He has my heart yet, and shall have my prayers,
While I shall have my life. Come, reverend fathers ;
Bestow your counsels on me : she now begs.
That little thought, when she set footing here,
She should have bought her dignities so dear. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Ante-chamber to the King's Apartment.

Enter the Duke of NORFOLK, the Duke of SUFFOLK, the Earl of SURREY, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. If you will now unite in your complaints,
And force them with a constancy, the cardinal
Cannot stand under them : if you omit
The offer of this time, I cannot promise,
But that you shall sustain more new disgraces
With these you bear already.

Sur. I am joyful
To meet the least occasion, that may give me
Remembrance of my father-in-law, the duke.
To be reveng'd on him.

Suf. Which of the peers
Have unconte'n'd gone by him, or at least
Strangely neglected ? when did he regard
The stamp of nobleness in any person,

Out of himself ?

Cham. My lords, you speak your pleasures
What he deserves of you and me. I know,
What we can do to him, (though now the time Gives way to us) I much fear. If you cannot Bar his access to the king, never attempt
Any thing on him, for he hath a witchcraft
Over the king in's tongue.

Nor. O ! fear him not,
His spell in that is out : the king hath found
Matter against him, that for ever mars
The honey of his language. No, he's settled,
Not to come off, in his displeasure.

Sur. Sir,
I should be glad to hear such news as this Once every hour.

Nor. Believe it, this is true.
In the divorce his contrary proceedings
Are all unfolded ; wherein he appears,
As I could wish mine enemy.

Sur. How came
His practices to light ?

Suf. Most strangely.
Sur. O ! how ? how !

Suf. The cardinal's letter to the pope miscarried,
And came to the eye o' the king ; wherein was read,
How that the cardinal did entreat his holiness
To stay the judgment o' the divorce ; for if
It did take place, "I do," quoth he, "perceive,
My king is tangled in affection to
A creature of the queen's, lady Anne Bullen."

Sur. Has the king this ?

Suf. Believe it.
Cham. Will this work ?

Cham. The king in this perceives him, how he coasts,
And hedges, his own way. But in this point
All his tricks founder, and he brings his physie
After his patient's death : the king already Hath married the fair lady.

Sur. Would he had !
Suf. May you be happy in your wish, my lord ;
For, I profess, you have it.

Sur. Now may all joy¹
Trace the conjunction !

Suf. My amen to't.

Nor. All men's.

Suf. There's order given for her coronation :
Marry, this is yet but young, and may be left
To some ears unrecounted.—But, my lords,
She is a gallant creature, and complete
In mind and feature : I persuade me, from her
Will fall some blessing to this land, which shall
In it be memoriz'd.

Sur. But, will the king
Digest this letter of the cardinal's ?
The lord forbid !

Nor. Marry, amen !

Suf. No, no :
There be more wasps than buz about his nose,
Will make this sting the sooner. Cardinal Campeus
Is stolen away to Rome ; hath ta'en no leave,
Has left the cause o' the king unhanded, and
Is posted as the agent of our cardinal.
To second all his plot. I do assure you
The king cried, ha ! at this.

Cham. Now, God incense him.
And let him cry ha ! louder.

Nor. But, my lord,
When returns Cranmer ?

Suf. He is return'd in his opinions, which
Have satisfied the king for his divorce;
Together with all famous colleges
Almost in Christendom. Shortly, I believe,
His second marriage shall be publish'd, and
Her coronation. Katharine no more
Shall be call'd queen, but princess dowager,
And widow to prince Arthur.

Nor. This same Cranmer's
A worthy fellow, and hath ta'en much pain
In the king's business.

Suf. He has; and we shall see him
For it an archbishop.

Nor. So I hear.

Suf. 'T is so.
The cardinal—[They stand back.]

Enter WOLSEY and CROMWELL.

Nor. Observe, observe; he's moody.

Wol. The packet, Cromwell, gave it you the king?

Crom. To his own hand, in his bedchamber.

Wol. Look'd he o' th' inside of the paper?

Crom. Presently

He did unseal them, and the first he view'd,

He did it with a serious mind; a heed

Was in his countenance: you he bade

Attend him here this morning.

Wol. Is he ready

To come abroad?

Crom. I think, by this he is.

Wol. Leave me awhile.—[Exit CROMWELL.]

It shall be to the duchess of Alençon,

The French king's sister: he shall marry her.—

Anne Bullen? No: I'll no Anne Bullens for him:

There's more in 't than fair visage.—Bullen!

No, we'll no Bullens.—Speedily I wish

To hear from Rome.—The marchioness of Pembroke!

Nor. He's discontented.

Suf. May be, he hears the king
Does whet his anger to him.

Sur. Sharp enough,

Lord! for thy justice.

Wol. The late queen's gentlewoman, a knight's daughter,

To be her mistress' mistress! the queen's queen!—

This candle burns not clear: 't is I must snuff it;

Then, out it goes.—What though I know her virtuous,

And well deserving, yet I know her for

A spleeny Lutheran; and not wholesome to

Our cause, that she should lie i' the bosom of

Our hard-ru'd king. Again, there is sprung up

An heretic, an arch one, Cranmer; one

Hath crawl'd into the favour of the king.

And is his oracle. [Retires, musing.]

Nor. He is vex'd at something.

Suf. I would, 't were something that would fret the string.

The master-chord on 's heart.

Enter the King, reading a Schedule; and LOVELL.

Suf. The king, the king!

K. Hen. What piles of wealth hath he accumulated,
To his own portion! and what expense by the hour

Seems to flow from him! How, i' the name of thrift,

Does he rake this together?—Now, my lords;

Saw you the cardinal?

Nor. My lord, we have [Coming forward.]
Stood here observing him. Some strange commotion

Is in his brain: he bites his lip, and starts;

Stops on a sudden, looks upon the ground;

Then, lays his finger on his temple; straight,

Springs out into fast gait; then, stops again,
Strikes his breast hard; and anon he casts
His eye against the moon. In most strange postures
We have seen him set himself.

K. Hen. It may well be.

There is a mutiny in 's mind. This morning

Papers of state he sent me to peruse,

As I requir'd; and, wot you, what I found

There, on my conscience, put unwittingly?

Forsooth an inventory, thus importing,—

The several parcels of his plate, his treasure,

Rich stuffs, and ornaments of household; which

I find at such proud rate, that it out-speaks

Possession of a subject.

Nor. It's heaven's will:

Some spirit put this paper in the packet,

To bless your eye withal.

K. Hen. If we did think

His contemplation were above the earth,

And fix'd on spiritual object, he should still

Dwell in his musings; but, I am afraid,

His thinkings are below the moon, not worth

His serious considering.

[He takes his seat, and whispers LOVELL, who goes to WOLSEY.]

Wol. Heaven forgive me! [Amazedly.]

Ever God bless your highness.

K. Hen. Good my lord,

You are full of heavenly stuff, and bear the inventory

Of your best graces in your mind, the which

You were now running o'er: you have scarce time

To steal from spiritual labour, a brief span,

To keep your earthly audit. Sure, in that

I deem you an ill husband, and am glad

To have you therein my companion.

Wol. Sir,

For holy offices I have a time; a time

To think upon the part of business, which

I bear i' the state; and nature does require

Her times of preservation, which, perforce,

I her frail son, amongst my brethren mortal,

Must give my tendance to.

K. Hen. You have said well.

Wol. And ever may your highness yoke together,

As I will lend you cause, my doing well

With my well saying!

K. Hen. 'T is well said again;

And 't is a kind of good deed to say well:

And yet words are no deeds. My father lov'd you;

He said he did, and with his deed did crown

His word upon you: since I had my office,

I have kept you next my heart; have not alone

Employ'd you where high profits might come home,

But pard' my present havings, to bestow

My bounties upon you.

Wol. What should this mean? [Aside.]

Sur. The Lord increase this business! [Behind.]

K. Hen. Have I not made you

The prime man of the state? I pray you, tell me,

If what I now pronounce you have found true;

And if I may confess it, say withal,

If you are bound to us, or no. What say you?

Wol. My sovereign, I confess, your royal graces,

Show'd on me daily, have been more than could

My studied purposes requite; which went

Beyond all man's endeavours: my endeavours

Have ever come too short of my desires,

Yet fil'd with my abilities. Mine own ends

Have been mine so, that evermore they pointed

To the good of your most sacred person, and
The profit of the state. For your great graces
Heap'd upon me, poor undeserver, I
Can nothing render but allegiant thanks;
My prayers to heaven for you; my loyalty,
Which ever has, and ever shall be growing,
Till death, that winter, kill it.

K. Hen. Fairly answer'd:

A loyal and obedient subject is Therein illustrated. The honour of it
Does pay the act of it; as, i' the contrary,
The foulness is the punishment. I presume,
That as my hand has open'd bounty to you,
My heart dropp'd love, my power rain'd honour, more
On you than any; so your hand, and heart,
Your brain, and every function of your power,
Should, notwithstanding that your bond of duty,
As 't were in love's particular, be more
To me, your friend, than any.

Wol. I do profess,
That for your highness' good I ever labour'd
More than mine own: that am, have, and will be—(Though all the world should crack their duty to you,
And throw it from their soul: though perils did Abound, as thick as thought could make them, and Appear in forms more horrid) yet my duty,
As doth a rock against the sliding flood,
Should the approach of this wild river break,
And stand unshaken yours.

K. Hen. 'Tis nobly spoken.
Take notice, lords, he has a loyal breast.

For you have seen him open 't.—Read o'er this:

[Giving him Papers.]

And, after, this; and then to breakfast, with What appetite you have.

[Exit King, frowning upon Cardinal Wolsey: the Nobles throw after him, smiling, and whispering.]

Wol. What should this mean?

What sudden anger 's this? how have I reap'd it?

He parted frowning from me, as if ruin

Leap'd from his eyes: so looks the chafed lion

Upon the daring huntsman that has gall'd him.

Then, makes him nothing. I must read this paper:

I fear, the story of his anger.—'Tis so:

[Opens the Paper and reads, trembling.]

This paper has undone me!—'Tis th' account

Of all that world of wealth I have drawn together

For mine own ends; indeed, to gain the popedom,

And fee my friends in Rome. O negligence!

Fit for a fool to fall by. What cross devil

Made me put this main secret in the packet

I sent the king? Is there no way to cure this?

No new device to beat this from his brains?

I know 't will stir him strongly; yet I know

A way, if it take right, in spite of fortune

Will bring me off again. What 's this?—"To the Pope?"

The letter, as I live, with all the business

I writ to his holiness. Nay then, farewell!

I have touch'd the highest point of all my greatness,

And from that full meridian of my glory,

I haste now to my setting: I shall fall

Like a bright exhalation in the evening,

And no man see me more. [Sinks in a chair.]

Re-enter the Dukes of NORFOLK and SUFFOLK, the

Earl of SURREY, and the Lord Chamberlain

Nor. Hear the king's pleasure, cardinal, who commands you

To render up the great seal presently

Into our hands, and to confine yourself

To Asher²-house, my lord of Winchester's,

Till you hear farther from his highness.

Wol.

Stay: [Rising.]

Where's your commission, lords? words cannot carry Authority so weighty.

Suf.

Who dare cross them,

Bearing the king's will from his mouth expressly?

Wol. Till I find more than will, or words, to do it,

(I mean your malice) know, officious lords,

I dare, and must deny it. Now, I feel

Of what coarse metal ye are moulded,—envy;

How eagerly ye follow my disgraces,

As if it fed ye; and how sleek and wanton

Ye appear in every thing may bring my ruin.

Follow your envious courses, men of malice:

You have Christian warrant for them, and, no doubt,

In time will find their fit rewards. That seal,

You ask with such a violence, the king,

(Mine, and your master) with his own hand gave me

Bade me enjoy it, with the place and honours,

During my life, and to confirm his goodness,

Tied it by letters patent. Now, who 'll take it?

Sur. The king that gave it.

Wol.

It must be himself, then.

Sur. Thou art a proud traitor, priest.

Wol.

Proud lord, thou liest.

Within these forty hours Surrey durst better

Have burnt that tongue, than said so.

Sur.

Thy ambition

Thou scarlet sin, robb'd this bewailing land

Of noble Buckingham, my father-in-law:

The heads of all thy brother cardinals,

(With thee, and all thy best parts bound together)

Weigh'd not a hair of his. Plague of your policy

You sent me deputy for Ireland.

Far from his succour, from the king, from all

That might have mercy on the fault thou gav'st him

Whilst your great goodness, out of holy pity,

Absolv'd him with an axe.

Wol.

This, and all else

This talking lord can lay upon my credit,

I answer, is most false. The duke by law

Found his deserts: how innocent I was

From any private malice in his end.

His noble jury and foul cause can witness.

If I lov'd many words, lord, I should tell you,

You have as little honesty as honour,

That in the way of loyalty and truth

Toward the king, my ever royal master,

Dare mate a sounder man than Surrey can be,

And all that love his follies.

Sur.

By my soul,

Your long coat, priest, protects you: thou shouldst feel

My sword i' the life-blood of thee else.—My lords,

Can ye endure to hear this arrogance?

And from this fellow? If we live thus tamely,

To be thus jaded by a piece of scarlet,

Farewell nobility; let his grace go forward,

And dare us with his cap, like larks³.

Wol.

All goodness.

Is poison to thy stomach.

Sur.

Yes, that goodness

Of gleaming all the land's wealth into one.

Into your own hands, cardinal, by extortion;

The goodness of your intercepted packets,

You writ to the pope, against the king: your goodness

Since you provoke me, shall be most notorious.

My lord of Norfolk,—as you are truly noble,

¹ Not in f. e. ² Esher. ³ Not in f. e. ⁴ Larks are lured by small mirrors attached to scarlet cloth

As you respect the common good, the state
Of our despis'd nobility, our issues,
(Who, if he live, will scarce be gentlemen)
Produce the grand sum of his sins, the articles
Collected from his life.—I'll startle you

Worse than the sacring bell, when the brown wench
Lay kissing in your arms, lord cardinal.

Wol. How much, methinks, I could despise this man,
But, that I am bound in charity against it.

Nor. Those articles, my lord, are in the king's hand;
But, thus much, they are foul ones.

Wol. So much fairer,
And spotless, shall mine innocence arise,
When the king knows my truth.

Sur. This cannot save you.
I thank my memory, I yet remember
Some of these articles; and out they shall.

Now, if you can blush, and cry guilty, cardinal,
You'll show a little honesty.

Wol. Speak on, sir;
I dare your worst objections: if I blush,
It is to see a nobleman want manners.

Sur. I had rather want those, than my head. Have at you.—

First, that without the king's assent or knowledge,
You wrought to be a legate; by which power
You main'd the jurisdiction of all bishops.

Nor. Then, that in all you writ to Rome, or else
To foreign princes, Ego et Rex meus
Was still inscrib'd; in which you brought the king
To be your servant.

Sur. Then, that without the knowledge
Either of king or council, when you went
Ambassador to the emperor, you made bold
To carry into Flanders the great seal.

Sur. Item, you sent a large commission
To Gregory de Cassalis, to conclude,
Without the king's will or the state's allowance,
A league between his highness and Ferrara.

Sur. That out of mere ambition you have caus'd
Your holy hat to be stump'd on the king's coin.

Sur. Then, that you have sent innumerable substance,

(By what means got I leave to your own conscience)
To furnish Rome, and to prepare the ways
You have for dignities; to the mere undoing
Of all the kingdom. Many more there are;
Which, since they are of you, and odious,
I will not taint my mouth with.

Cham. O my lord!
Press not a falling man too far; 't is virtue.

His faults be open to the laws: let them;
Not you, correct him. My heart weeps to see him
So little of his great self.

Sur. I forgive him.

Sur. Lord cardinal, the king's farther pleasure is,— Because all those things, you have done of late
By your power legatine within this kingdom,
Fall into the compass of a præmunire,—
That therefore such a writ be sued against you;
To forfeit all your goods, lands, tenements,
Chattels, and whatsoever, and to be
Out of the king's protection.—This is my charge.

Nor. And so we'll leave you to your meditations,
How to live better. For your stubborn answer,
About the giving back the great seal to us.
The king shall know it, and, no doubt, shall thank you.
So, fare you well, my little good lord cardinal.

{Exeunt all but WOLSEY.}

Apologue.

Wol. So, farewell to the little good you bear me
Farewell, a long farewell, to all my greatness!
This is the state of man: to-day he puts forth
The tender leaves of hopes, to-morrow blossoms,
And bears his blushing honours thick upon him:
The third day comes a frost, a killing frost;
And,—when he thinks, good easy man, full sure!
His greatness is a ripening,—nips his root,
And then he falls, as I do. I have ventur'd,
Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders,
This many summers in a sea of glory,
But far beyond my depth: my high blown pride
At length broke under me; and now has left me,
Weary and old with service, to the mercy
Of a rude stream, that must forever hide me.
Vain pomp and glory of this world, I hate ye:
I feel my heart new open'd. O! how wretched
Is that poor man, that hangs on princes' favours!
There is, betwixt that smile we would aspire to,
That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin,
More pangs and fears than wars or women have
And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer,
Never to hope again.—

Enter CROMWELL, amazedly.

Why, how now, Cromwell

Crom. I have no power to speak, sir.

Wol. What! amazed
At my misfortunes? can thy spirit wonder,
A great man should decline? Nay, an you weep,
I am fallen indeed.

Crom. How does your grace?

Wol. Why, well
Never so truly happy, my good Cromwell.
I know myself now; and I feel within me
A peace above all earthly dignities,
A still and quiet conscience. The king has cur'd me,
I humbly thank his grace, and from these shoulders,
These ruin'd pillars, out of pity, taken
A load would sink a navy—too much honour.
O! 't is a burden, Cromwell, 't is a burden,
Too heavy for a man that hopes for heaven.

Crom. I am glad your grace has made that right use of it.

Wol. I hope I have: I am able now, methinks,
(Out of a fortitude of soul I feel)
To endure more miseries, and greater far,
Than my weak-hearted enemies dare offer.
What news abroad?

Crom. The heaviest, and the worst,
Is your displeasure with the king.

Wol. God bless him!

Crom. The next is, that sir Thomas More is chosen
Lord Chancellor in your place.

Wol. That's somewhat sudden
But he's a learned man. May he continue
Long in his highness' favour, and do justice
For truth's sake, and his conscience; that his bones,
When he has run his course and sleeps in blessings,
May have a tomb of orphans' tears wept on 'em!
What more?

Crom. That Cranmer is returned with welcome,
Install'd lord Archbishop of Canterbury.

Wol. That's news indeed!

Crom. Last, that the lady Anne
Whom the king hath in secrecy long married,
This day was view'd in open, as his queen,
(Going to chapel; and the voice is now
Only about her coronation.

Wol. There was the weight that pulled me down.

O Cromwell!

The king has gone beyond me: all my glories

In that one woman I have lost for ever.

No sun shall ever usher forth mine honours,

Or gild again the noble troops that waited

Upon my smiles. Go, get thee from me, Cromwell;

I am a poor fallen man, unworthy now

To be thy lord and master. Seek the king;

(That sun, I pray, may never set!) I have told him

What, and how true thou art: he will advance thee.

Some little memory of me will stir him,

(I know his noble nature) not to let

Thy hopeful service perish too. Good Cromwell,

Neglect him not; make use¹ now, and provide

For thine own future safety.

Crom. O, my lord!

Must I then leave you? must I needs forego

So good, so noble, and so true a master?

Bear witness all that have not hearts of iron,

With what a sorrow Cromwell leaves his lord.—

The king shall have my service; but my prayers,

For ever and for ever, shall be yours.

Wol. Cromwell, I did not think to shed a tear

In all my miseries; but thou hast forc'd me,

Out of thy honest truth, to play the woman.

Let's dry our eyes; and thus far hear me, Cromwell:

And,—when I am forgotten, as I shall be,

And sleep in dull cold marble, where no mention

Of me more must be heard of,—say, I taught thee

Say, Wolsey, that once trod the ways of glory

And sounded all the depths and shoals of honour,

Found thee a way, out of his wreck, to rise in;

A sure and safe one, though thy master miss'd it.

Mark but my fall, and that that ruin'd me.

Cromwell, I charge thee, fling away ambition:

By that sin fell the angels; how can man, then,

The image of his Maker, hope to win by't?

Love thyself last: cherish those hearts that hate thee

Corruption wins not more than honesty.

Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace,

To silence envious tongues: be just, and fear not

Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's,

Thy God's, and truth's: then, if thou fall'st, O Cromwell!

Thou fall'st a blessed martyr.

Serve the king; and,—Pr'ythee, lead me in

There take an inventory of all I have,

To the last penny; 't is the king's: my robe,

And my integrity to heaven, is all

I dare now call mine own. O Cromwell, Cromwell!

Had I but serv'd my God with half the zeal

I serv'd my king, he would not in mine age

Have left me naked to mine enemies.

Crom. Good sir, have patience.

Wol.

So I have.—Farewell!

The hopes of court: my hopes in heaven do dwell.

[Exeunt.]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A Street in Westminster.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting.

1 Gent. You're well met once again.

2 Gent. So are you.

1 Gent. You come to take your stand here, and behold

The lady Anne pass from her coronation?

2 Gent. 'T is all my business. At our last encounter,

The duke of Buckingham came from his trial.

1 Gent. 'T is very true; but that time offer'd sorrow,

This, general joy.

2 Gent. 'T is well: the citizens,

I am sure, have shown at full their royal minds:

As, let 'em have their rights, they are ever forward

In celebration of this day with shows,

Pageants, and sights of honour.

1 Gent. Never greater;

Nor, I'll assure you, better taken, sir.

2 Gent. May I be bold to ask what that contains,

That paper in your hand?

1 Gent. Yes; 't is the list

Of those that claim their offices this day,

By custom of the coronation.

The duke of Suffolk is the first, and claims

To be high steward: next, the duke of Norfolk,

He to be earl marshal. You may read the rest.

2 Gent. I thank you, sir; had I not known those customs,

I should have been beholding to your paper.

But, I beseech you, what's become of Katharine,

The princess dowager? how goes her business?

1 Gent. That I can tell you too. The archbishop

Of Canterbury, accompanied with other

Learned and reverend fathers of his order,

Held a late court at Dunstable, six miles off

From Amptill, where the princess lay; to which

She was often cited by them, but appear'd not:

And, to be short, for not appearance, and

The king's late scruple, by the main assent

Of all these learned men she was divorc'd,

And the late marriage made of none effect:

Since which she was removed to Kimbolton,

Where she remains now, sick.

2 Gent. Alas, good lady!—

[Trumpets.]

The trumpets sound: stand close, the queen is coming.

[Hautboys.]

THE ORDER OF THE CORONATION.

A lively flourish of Trumpets.

1. Then, two Judges.

2. Lord Chancellor, with purse and mace before him.

3. Choristers singing. [Music.]

4. Mayor of London bearing the mace. Then, Garter in his coat of arms; and on his head he wore a gilt copper crown.

5. Marquess Dorset, bearing a sceptre of gold; on his head a demi-coronal of gold. With him the Earl of Surrey, bearing the rod of silver with the dove: crowned with an earl's coronet. Collars of SS.

6. Duke of Suffolk, in his robe of estate, his coronet on his head, bearing a long white wand, as high-steward. With him, the Duke of Norfolk, with the rod of marshalship; a coronet on his head. Collars of SS.

7. A canopy borne by four of the Cinque-ports; under it, the Queen in her robe; in her hair, richly adorned with pearl, crowned. On each side her, the Bishops of London and Winchester.

8. The old Duchess of Norfolk, in a coronal of gold, wrought with flowers, bearing the Queen's train.

9. Certain Ladies or Countesses, with plain circlets of gold without flowers.

2 Gent. A royal train, believe me.—These I know: Who's that, that bears the sceptre?

1 Gent. Marquess Dorset: And that the earl of Surrey, with the rod.

2 Gent. A bold brave gentleman. That should be The duke of Suffolk.

1 Gent. 'T is the same; high-steward.

2 Gent. And that my lord of Norfolk?

1 Gent. Yes.

2 Gent. Heaven bless thee! [Looking on the Queen. Thou hast the sweetest face I ever look'd on.—

Sir, as I have a soul, she is an angel:

Our king has all the Indies in his arms,

And more, and richer, when he strains that lady. I cannot blame his conscience.

1 Gent. They, that bear The cloth of honour over her, are four barons Of the cinque-ports.

2 Gent. Those men are happy; and so are all, are near her.

I take it, she that carries up the train

Is that old noble lady, duchess of Norfolk.

1 Gent. It is; and all the rest are countesses.

2 Gent. Their coronets say so. These are stars, indeed;

And sometimes falling ones.

1 Gent. No more of that.

[Exit Procession, with a great flourish of Trumpets.]

Enter a third Gentleman.

God save you, sir! Where have you been broiling?

3 Gent. Among the crowd 'i the abbey? where a finger

Could not be wedg'd in more: I am stifled

With the mere rankness of their joy.

2 Gent. You saw the ceremony?

3 Gent. That I did.

1 Gent. How was it?

3 Gent. Well worth the seeing.

2 Gent. Good sir, speak it to us.

3 Gent. As well as I am able. The rich stream,

Of lords and ladies, having brought the queen

To a prepar'd place in the choir, fell off

A distance from her; while her grace sat down

To rest a while, some half an hour or so.

In a rich chair of state, opposing freely

The beauty of her person to the people.

Believe me, sir, she is the goodliest woman

That ever lay by man: which when the people

Had the full view of, such a noise arose

As the shrouds make at sea in a stiff tempest

As loud, and to as many tunes: hats, cloaks,

(Doublets, I think) flew up; and had their faces

Been loose, this day they had been lost. Such joy

I never saw before. Great-bellied women,

That had not half a week to go, like rams

In the old time of war, would shake the press.

And make them reel before them. No man living

Could say, "This is my wife;" there: all were woven So strangely in one piece.

2 Gent. But, what follow'd?

3 Gent. At length her grace arose, and with modest paces

Not in f. a.

Came to the altar; where she kneel'd, and saint like Cast her fair eyes to heaven, and pray'd devoutly.

Then rose again, and bowed her to the people:

When by the archbishop of Canterbury

She had all the royal makings of a queen;

As holy oil, Edward Confessor's crown,

The rod, and bird of peace, and all such emblems

Laid nobly on her: which perform'd, the choir,

With all the choicest music of the kingdom,

Together sung Te Deum. So she parted,

And with the same full state pac'd back again

To York-place, where the feast is held.

1 Gent. Sir,

You must no more call it York-place, that's past;

For, since the cardinal fell, that title's lost:

'T is now the king's, and call'd—Whitehall.

3 Gent. I know it

But 't is so lately alter'd, that the old name

Is fresh about me.

2 Gent. What two reverend bishops

Were those that went on each side of the queen?

3 Gent. Stokesley and Gardiner; the one of Winchester,

Newly pierc'd from the king's secretary;

The other, London.

2 Gent. He of Winchester

Is held no great good lover of the archbishop's,

The virtuous Crammer.

3 Gent. All the land knows that,

However, yet there's no great breach. when it comes, Crammer will find a friend will not shrink from him.

2 Gent. Who may that be, I pray you?

3 Gent. Thomas Cromwell;

A man in much esteem with the king, and truly

A worthy friend.—The king has made him

Master o' the jewel-house,

And one, already, of the privy-council.

2 Gent. He will deserve more.

3 Gent. Yes, without all doubt

Come, gentlemen, ye shall go my way, which

Is to the court, and there ye shall be my guests:

Something I can command. As I walk thither,

I'll tell ye more.

Both. You may command us, sir. [Exeunt]

SCENE II.—Kimbolton.

Enter KATHARINE, Dowager, sick; led between GRIFFITH and PATIENCE.

Grif. How does your grace?

Kath. O, Griffith! sick to death

My legs, like loaden branches, bow to the earth,

Willing to leave their burden. Reach a chair.—

[Sits down]

So,—now, methinks, I feel a little ease.

Didst thou not tell me, Griffith, as thou led'st me,

That the great child of honour, cardinal Wolsey,

Was dead?

Grif. Yes, madam; but, I think, your grace,

Out of the pain you suffer'd, gave no ear to 't.

Kath. Pr'ythee, good Griffith, tell me how he died

If well, he stepp'd before me, happily,

For my example.

Grif. Well, the voice goes, madam:

For after the stout earl Northumberland

Arrested him at York, and brought him forward,

As a man sorely tainted, to his answer,

He fell sick suddenly, and grew so ill,

He could not sit his mule.

Kath. Alas, poor man!

Grif. At last, with easy roads, he came to Leicester;
Lodg'd in the abbey, where the reverend abbot,
With all his convent, honourably receiv'd him;
To whom he gave these words.—“O father abbot
An old man, broken with the storms of state,
Is come to lay his weary bones among ye:
Give him a little earth for charity!”
So went to bed, where eagerly his sickness
Pursu'd him still; and three nights after this,
About the hour of eight, which he himself
Foretold should be his last, full of repentance,
Continual meditations, tears, and sorrows,
He gave his honours to the world again.
His blessed part to heaven, and slept in peace.

Kath. So may he rest: his faults lie lightly¹ on him:
Yet thus far, Griffith, give me leave to speak him,
And yet with charity.—He was a man
Of an unbowed stomach, ever ranking
Himself with princes; one, that by suggestion
Tied all the kingdom: simony was fair play;
His own opinion was his law: if the presence
He would say untruths, and be ever double,
Both in his words and meaning. He was never,
But where he meant to ruin, pitiful:
His promises were, as he then was, mighty;
But his performance, as he is now, nothing.
Of his own body he was ill, and gave
The clergy ill example.

Grif. Noble madam,
Men's evil manners live in brass: their virtues
We write in water. May it please your highness
To hear me speak his good now?

Kath. Yes, good Griffith;
I were malicious else.

Grif. This cardinal.
Though from an humble stock, undoubtedly
Was fashion'd to much honour from his cradle.
He was a scholar, and a ripe, and good one;
Exceeding wise, fair spoken, and persuading:
Lofty and sour to them that lov'd him not;
But, to those men that sought him, sweet as summer:
And though he were unsatisfied in getting,
(Which was a sin) yet in bestowing, madam,
He was most princely. Ever witness for him
Those twins of learning, that he rais'd in you,
Ipswich, and Oxford! one of which fell with him,
Unwilling to outlive the good man² did it:
The other, though unfinished, yet so famous,
So excellent in art, and still so rising,
That Christendom shall ever speak his virtue.
His overthrow heap'd happiness upon him:
For then, and not till then, he felt himself.
And found the blessedness of being little:
And, to add greater honours to his age
Than man could give him, he died fearing God.

Kath. After my death I wish no other herald.
No other speaker of my living actions,
To keep mine honour from corruption.
But such an honest chronicler as Griffith.
Whom I most hated living, thou hast made me.
With thy religious truth and modesty.
Now in his ashes honour. Peace be with him!—
Patience, be near me still; and set me lower:
I have not long to trouble thee.—Good Griffith,
Cause the musicians play me that sad note
I nam'd my knell, whilst I sit meditating
On that celestial harmony I go to.

[Sad and solemn music.]

Grif. She is asleep. Good wench, let's sit down quiet,

For fear we wake her:—softly, gentle Patience.

*The Vision. Enter, solemnly tripping one after another six Personages, clad in white robes, wearing on their heads garlands of bays, and golden vizards on their faces; branches of bays, or palm, in their hands. They first congregate unto her, then dance; and, at certain changes, the first two hold a spare garland over her head; at which, the other four make reverend curtesies:
then, the two that held the garland deliver the same to the other next two, who observe the same order in their changes, and holding the garland over her head
Which done, they deliver the same garland to the last two, who likewise observe the same order: at which,
(as it were by inspiration) she makes in her sleep signs of rejoicing, and holdeth up her hands to heaven. And so in their dancing they vanish, carrying the garland with them. The music continues.*

Kath. Spirits of peace, where are ye? Are ye all gone, [Waking.
And leave me here in wretchedness behind ye?

Grif. Madam, we are here.

Kath. It is not you I call for:
Saw ye none enter, since I slept?

Grif. None, madam.

Kath. No! saw you not, even now, a blessed troop
Invite me to a banquet; whose bright faces
Cast thousand beams upon me, like the sun?
They promis'd me eternal happiness,
And brought me garlands, Griffith, which I feel
I am not worthy yet to wear: I shall, assuredly.

Grif. I am most joyful, madam, such good dreams
Possess your fancy.

Kath. Bid the music leave.
They are harsh and heavy to me. [Music ceases

Pat. Do you note,
How much her grace is alter'd on the sudden?
How long her face is drawn? How pale she looks.
And of an earthy coldness? Mark her eyes!

Grif. She is going, wench. Pray, pray.

Pat. Heaven comfort her

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. An't like your grace.—

Kath. You are a saucy fellow.
Deserve we no more reverence?

Grif. You are to blame.
Knowing she will not lose her wonted greatness,
To use so rude behaviour: go to: kneel.

Mess. I humbly do entreat your highness' pardon:
[Kneeling.
My haste made me unmannerly. There is staying
A gentleman, sent from the king to see you.

Kath. Admit him entrance. Griffith: but this fellow
Let me ne'er see again.

[Exit Griffith, and Messenger

Re-enter Griffith, with Capucius.

If my sight fail not,
You should be lord ambassador from the emperor.
My royal nephew: and your name Capucius.

Cap. Madam, the same, your servant.

Kath. O my lord!
The times, and titles, now are alter'd strangely
With me, since first you knew me. But, I pray you
What is your pleasure with me?

Cap. Noble lady,

First, mine own service to your grace; the next.
The king's request that I would visit you;
Who grieves much for your weakness, and by me
Sends you his princely commendations,
And heartily entreats you take good comfort

¹ gently: in f. e. ² that: in f. e. ³ cold: in f. e. ⁴ Not in f. e.

Kath. O! my good lord, that comfort comes too late:
'T is like a pardon after execution.
That gentle physie, given in time, had cur'd me;
But now I am past all comforts here, but prayers.
How does his highness?

Cap. Madam, in good health.

Kath. So may he ever do; and ever flourish,
When I shall dwell with worms, and my poor name
Banish'd the kingdom.—Patience, is that letter,
I caus'd you write, yet sent away?

Pat. No, madam. [Giving it to KATHARINE.]

Kath. Sir, I most humbly pray you to deliver
This to my lord the king.

Cap. Most willing, madam.

Kath. In which I have commended to his goodness
The model of our chaste loves, his young daughter:—
The dew of heaven fall thick in blessings on her!
Beseeching him to give her virtuous breeding.
She is young, and of a noble modest nature,
I hope, she will deserve well; and a little
To love her for her mother's sake, that lov'd him,
Heaven knows how dearly. My next poor petition
Is, that his noble grace would have some pity
Upon my wretched women, that so long
Have follow'd both my fortunes faithfully:
Of which there is not one. I dare avow,
(And now I should not lie) but will deserve,
For virtue, and true beauty of the soul,
For honesty, and decent carriage,

A right good husband, let him be a noble;
And, sure, those men are happy that shall have them.
The last is, for my men:—they are the poorest,
But poverty could never draw them from me:—
That they may have their wages duly paid them,
And something over to remember me by:
If heaven had pleas'd to have given me longer life,
And able means, we had not parted thus.
These are the whole contents:—and, good my lord,
By that you love the dearest in this world,
As you wish Christian peace to souls departed.
Stand these poor people's friend, and urge the king
To do me this last right.

Cap. By heaven, I will,
Or let me lose the fashion of a man!

Kath. I thank you, honest lord. Remember me
In all humility unto his highness:
Say, his long trouble now is passing
Out of this world: tell him, in death I bless'd him,
For so I will.—Mine eyes grow dim.—Farewell,
My lord.—Griffith, farewell.—Nay, Patience,
You must not leave me yet: I must to bed;
Call in more women.—When I am dead, good wench!
Let me be us'd with honour: strew me over
With maiden flowers, that all the world may know
I was a chaste wife to my grave. Embalm me;
Then lay me forth: although unqueen'd, yet like
A queen, and daughter to a king, inter me.
I can no more.— [Exeunt, leading KATHARINE]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Gallery in the Palace.

Enter GARDINER, Bishop of Winchester, a Page with a Torch before him; met by Sir THOMAS LOVELL.

Gar. It's one o'clock, boy, is't not?

Boy. I hath struck.

Gar. These should be hours for necessities,
Not for delights; times to repair our nature
With comforting repose, and not for us
To waste these times.—Good hour of night, sir Thomas:
Whither so late?

Lov. Came you from the king, my lord?

Gar. I did, sir Thomas; and left him at primero
With the duke of Suffolk.

Lov. I must to him too,
Before he go to bed. I'll take my leave.

Gar. Not yet, sir Thomas Lovell. What's the matter?
It seems you are in haste: an if there be
No great offence belongs to't, give your friend
Some touch of your late business. Affairs that walk
(As, they say, spirits do) at midnight have
In them a wilder nature, than the business
That seeks despatch by day.

Lov. My lord, I love you,
And durst commend a secret to your ear Much weightier than this work. The queen's in labour;

They say, in great extremity, and fear'd.
She'll with the labour end.

Gar. The fruit she goes with
I pray for heartily; that it may find
Good time, and live: but for the stock, sir Thomas,
I wish it grubb'd up now.

Lov. Methinks, I could

Cry thee amen; and yet my conscience says
She's a good creature, and, sweet lady, does
Deserve our better wishes.

Gar. But, sir, sir,—
Hear me, sir Thomas: y' are a gentleman
Of mine own way; I know you wise, religious;
And, let me tell you, it will ne'er be well,
'T will not, sir Thomas Lovell, take't of me.
Till Cranmer, Cromwell, her two hands, and she,
Sleep in their graves.

Lov. Now, sir, you speak of two
The most remark'd i' the kingdom. As for Cromwell,
Beside that of the jewel-house, he's¹ made master
Of the rolls, and the king's secretary; farther, sir,
Stands in the gap and trade of more preferences,
With which the time will load him. Th' archbishop
Is the king's hand, and tongue: and who dare speak
One syllable against him?

Gar. Yes, yes, sir Thomas,
There are that dare; and I myself have ventur'd
To speak my mind of him: and, indeed, this day,
Sir, (I may tell it you) I think, I have Incens'd the lords of the counsel, that he is (For so I know he is, they know he is)
A most arch heretic, a pestilence
That does infect the land: with which they're
Have broken with the king: who hath so far
Given ear to our complaint, (of his great grace
And princely care, foreseeing those fell mischiefs
Our reasons laid before him) hath commanded,
To-morrow morning to the council-board
He be convented². He's a rank weed, sir Thomas.
And we must root him out. From your affairs
I hinder you too long: good night, sir Thomas.

¹ is: in folio. Theobald made the change. ² Summoned.

Lev. Many good nights, my lord. I rest your servant
[Exeunt GARDINER and Page.]
As Lovell is going out, enter the King, and the Duke of Suffolk.

K. Hen. Charles, I will play no more to-night: My mind's not on't; you are too hard for me.

Suf. Sir, I did never win of you before
K. Hen. But little, Charles;
 Nor shall not when my fancy's on my play.—
 Now, Lovell, from the queen what is the news?

Lov. I could not personally deliver to her
 What you commanded me, but by her woman
 I sent your message; who return'd her thanks
 In the greatest humbleness, and desir'd your highness
 Most heartily to pray for her.

K. Hen. What say'st thou? ha!
 To pray for her? what! is she crying out?

Lov. So said her woman; and that her sufferance made

Almost each pang a death.

K. Hen. Alas, good lady!

Suf. God safely quit her of her burden, and
 With gentle travail, to the gladdening of
 Your highness with an heir!

K. Hen. 'T is midnight, Charles:
 Pr'ythee, to bed; and in thy prayers remember
 Th' estate of my poor queen. Leave me alone,
 For I must think of that, which company
 Would not be friendly to.

Suf. I wish your highness
 A quiet night; and my good mistress will
 Be remember'd in my prayers.

K. Hen. Charles, good night.—[Exit SUFFOLK.]
Enter Sir ANTHONY DENNY.

Well, sir, what follows?

Den. Sir, I have brought my lord the archbishop,
 As you commanded me.

K. Hen. Ha! Canterbury?

Den. Ay, my good lord.

K. Hen. 'T is true: where is he, Denny?

Den. He attends your highness' pleasure.

K. Hen. Bring him to us.[Exit DENNY.]

Lov. This is about that which the bishop spake:
[Aside.]

I am happily come hither.

Re-enter DENNY, with CRANMER.

K. Hen. Avoid the gallery.[LOVELL seems to stay.]
 Ha!—I have said.—Be gone.

What!—[Exeunt LOVELL and DENNY.]

Cran. I am fearful.—Wherefore frowns he thus?
[Aside.]

'T is his aspect of terror: all's not well.

K. Hen. How now, my lord! You do desire to know
 Wherefore I sent for you.

Cran. It is my duty [Kneeling.]
 T' attend your highness' pleasure.

K. Hen. Pray you, arise,
 My good and gracious lord of Canterbury.
 Come, you and I must walk a turn together;
 I have news to tell you. Come, come, give me your hand.

Ah, my good lord, I grieve at what I speak,
 And am right sorry to repeat what follows.
 I have, and most unwillingly, of late
 Heard many grievous, I do say, my lord,
 Grievous complaints of you; which being consider'd
 Have mov'd us and our council, that you shall
 This morning come before us: where, I know,
 You cannot with such freedom purge yourself,

But that, till farther trial in those charges
 Which will require your answer, you must take
 Your patience to you, and be well contented
 To make your house our Tower: to^a a brother of us.
 It fits me thus proceed, or else no witness
 Would come against you.

Cran. I humbly thank your highness
 And am right glad to catch this good occasion

[Kneeling]
 Most thoroughly to be winnow'd, where my chaff
 And corn shall fly asunder; for, I know,
 There's none stands under more calumnious tongues
 Than I myself, poor man.

K. Hen. Stand up, good Canterbury
 Thy truth, and thy integrity, is rooted
 In us, thy friend. Give me thy hand, stand up.

[Rising.]
 Pr'ythee, let's walk. Now, by my holy dame,
 What manner of man are you? My lord, I look'd
 You would have given me your petition, that I should have ta'en some pains to bring together
 Yourself and your accusers; and to have heard you,
 Without insurance, farther.

Cran. Most dread liege,
 The ground^e I stand on, is my truth, and honesty:
 If they shall fail, I, with mine enemies,
 Will triumph o'er my person, which I weigh not,
 Being of those virtues vacant. I fear nothing
 What can be said against me.

K. Hen. Know you not How your state stands i' the world, with the whole world?

Your enemies are many, and not small; their practices
 Must bear the same proportion: and not ever
 The justice and the truth o' the question carries
 The due o' the verdict with it. At what ease
 Might corrupt minds procure knaves, as corrupt,
 To swear against you: such things have been done:
 You are potently oppos'd, and with a malice
 Of as great size. When you of better luck,
 I mean in perjur'd witness, than your Master,
 Whose minister you are, whiles here he liv'd
 Upon this naughty earth? Go to, go to:
 You take a precipice for no leap of danger,
 And woo your own destruction.

Cran. God, and your majesty,
 Protect mine innocence, or I fall into
 The trap is laid for me!

K. Hen. Be of good cheer;
 They shall no more prevail, than we give way to.

Keep comfort to you; and this morning, see
 You do appear before them. If they shall chance,
 In charging you with matters, to commit you,
 The best persuasions to the contrary
 Fail not to use, and with what vehemency
 The occasion shall instruct you: if entreaties
 Will render you no remedy, this ring
 Deliver them, and your appeal to us
 There make before them.—Look, the good man weeps
 He's honest, on mine honour. God's blest mother!
 I swear, he is true-hearted; and a soul
 None better in my kingdom.—Get you gone.
 And do as I have bid you.—[Exit CRANMER.] He has strangled

His language in his tears.

Enter an old Lady, in haste.

Gent. [Within.] Come back: what mean you?

Lady. I'll not come back; the tidings that I bring
 Will make my boldness manners.—Now, good angels

^a Not in f. e. ^b you: in f. e. ^c Not in f. e. ^d good: in f. e.

Fly o'er thy royal head, and shade thy person
Under their blessed wings!

K. Hen. Now, by thy looks
I guess thy message. Is the queen deliver'd?
Say, ay; and of a boy.

Lady. Ay, ay, my liege;
And of a lovely boy: the God of heaven
Both now and ever bless her!—'t is a girl,
Promises boys hereafter. Sir, your queen
Desires your visitation, and to be Acquainted with this stranger: 't is as like you
As cherry is to cherry.

K. Hen. Lovell!

Re-enter LOVELL.

Low. Sir,

K. Hen. Give her an hundred marks I'll to the queen. [Exit King.]

Lady. An hundred marks! By this light, I'll ha' more.

An ordinary groom is for such payment:
I will have more, or scold it out of him.
Said I for this the girl was like to him?
I will have more, or else nunsay't; and now,
While it is hot, I'll put it to the issue. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Lobby before the Council-Chamber.

Enter CRANMER: Servants, Door-Keeper, &c. attending.

Cran. I hope I am not too late: and yet the gentleman,

That was sent to me from the council, pray'd me
To make great haste. All fast! what means this?
Ho!

Who waits there?—Sure, you know me?

D. Keep. Yes, my lord:

But yet I cannot help you.

Cran. Why?

D. Keep. Your grace must wait till you be call'd for.

Enter Doctor BUTTS.

Cran. So,

Butts. This is a piece of malice. I am glad, [Aside.]
I came this way so happily: the king
Shall understand it presently. [Exit BUTTS.]

Cran. 'T is Butts.

The king's physician. As he past along,
How earnestly he cast his eyes upon me.

Pray heaven, he sound not my disgrace! For certain,
This is of purpose laid by some that hate me,

(God turn their hearts! I never sought their malice)
To quench mine honour: they would shame to make me

Wait else at door, a fellow-counsellor
Among boys, grooms, and lackeys. But their pleasures

Must be fulfill'd, and I attend with patience.

Enter the King and BUTTS, at a window above.

Butts. I'll show your grace the strangest sight.—

K. Hen. What's that, Butts?

Butts. I think, your highness saw this many a day.

K. Hen. Body o' me, where is it?

Butts. There, my lord:

The high promotion of his grace of Canterbury,
Who holds his state at door, amongst pursuivants,
Pages, and footboys

K. Hen. Ha! 'T is he, indeed

Is this the honour they do one another?
'T is well, there's one alive 'em yet. I had thought

They had parted so much honesty among 'em,
(At least good manners) as not thus to suffer

A man of his place, and so near our favour,
To dance attendance on their lordships' pleasures
And at the door too, like a post with packets

By holy Mary, Butts, there's knavery:
Let 'em alone, and draw the curtain close:

We shall hear more anon.— [Exeunt]

THE COUNCIL-CHAMBER.

*Enter the Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Suffolk, Earl of SURREY, Lord Chamberlain, GARDINER, and CROM-WELL. The Chancellor places himself at the upper end of the table on the left hand; a seat being left void above him, as for the Archbishop of CANTERBURY
The rest seat themselves in order on each side. CROM-
WELL at the lower end, as secretary.*

Chan. Speak to the business, master secretary:
Why are we met in council?

Crom. Please your honours,
The chief cause concerns his grace of Canterbury.

Gar. Has he had knowledge of it?

Crom. Yes.

Nor. Who waits there?

D. Keep. Without, my noble lords?

Gar. Yes.

D. Keep. My lord archbishop;

And has done half an hour, to know your pleasures.

Chan. Let him come in.

D. Keep. Your grace may enter now.

[CRANMER approaches the Council-table]

Chan. My good lord archbishop, I am very sorry
To sit here at this present, and behold

That chair stand empty: but we all are men,
In our own natures frail, and culpable

Of our flesh, few are angels: out of which frailty,
And want of wisdom, you, that best should teach us,

Have misdemean'd yourself, and not a little,
Toward the king first, then his laws, in filling

The whole realm, by your teaching, and your chaplains
(For so we are inform'd) with new opinions

Divers, and dangerous; which are heresies.
And, not reform'd, may prove pernicious.

Gar. Which reformation must be sudden too,
My noble lords: for those that tame wild horses

Pace them not in their hands to make them gentle,
But stop their mouths with stubborn bits, and spur

them.

Till they obey the manage. If we suffer,
Out of our easiness and childish pity

To one man's honour, this contagious sickness,
Farewell all physic: and what follows then?

Commotions, uproars, with a general taint
Of the whole state; as, of late days, our neighbours,

The upper Germany, can dearly witness,
Yet freshly pitied in our memories.

Cran. My good lords, hitherto, in all the progress,
Both of my life and office, I have labour'd,

And with no little study, that my teaching,
And the strong course of my authority,

Might go one way, and safely; and the end
Was ever, to do well: nor is there living

(I speak it with a single heart, my lords,)
A man, that more detests, more strives against

Both in his private conscience and his place,
Defacers of the public peace, than I do.

Pray heaven, the king may never find a heart
With less allegiance in it! Men, that make

Envy and crooked malice nourishment,
Dare bite the best. I do beseech your lordships,

That in this case of justice, my accusers,
Be what they will, may stand forth face to face.
And freely urge against me.

Suf. Nay, my lord.
That cannot be: you are a counsellor.

And by that virtue no man dare accuse you.

Gar. My lord, because we have business of more moment,

We will be short with you. 'T is his highness' pleasure,

And our consent, for better trial of you,

From hence you be committed to the Tower:

Where, being but a private man again,

You shall know many dare accuse you boldly,

More than, I fear, you are provided for.

Cran. Ah! my good lord of Winchester. I thank you;

You are always my good friend: if your will pass,

I shall both find your lordship judge and juror,

You are so merciful. I see your end;

'T is my undoing. Love and meekness, lord,

Become a churchman better than ambition:

Win straying souls with modesty again,

Cast none away. That I shall clear myself,

Lay all the weight ye can upon my patience,

I make as little doubt, as you do conscience

In doing daily wrongs. I could say more,

But reverence to your calling makes me modest.

Gar. My lord, my lord, you are a sectary:

That's the plain truth: your painted gloss discovers,

To men that understand you, words and weakness.

Crom. My lord of Winchester, you are a little,

By your good favour, too sharp: men so noble,

However faulty, yet should find respect

For what they have been: 't is a cruelty,

To load a falling man.

Gar. Good master secretary

I cry your honour mercy: you may, worst

Of all this table, say so.

Crom. Why, my lord?

Gar. Do not I know you for a favourer

Of this new sect? ye are not sound.

Crom. Not sound?

Gar. Not sound, I say.

Crom. Would you were half so honest;

Men's prayers, then, would seek you, not their fears.

Gar. I shall remember this bold language.

Crom. Do:

Remember your bold life too.

Chan. This is too much:

Forbear, for shame, my lords.

Gar. I have done.

Crom. And I.

Chan. Then thus for you, my lord.—It stands agreed,

I take it, by all voices, that forthwith

You be convey'd to the Tower a prisoner:

There to remain, till the king's farther pleasure

Be known unto us. Are you all agreed, lords?

All. We are.

Cran. Is there no other way of mercy,

But I must needs to the Tower, my lords?

Gar. What other

Would you expect? You are strangely troublesome.

Let some o' the guard be ready there.

Cran. For me?

Must I go like a traitor thither?

Enter Guard.

Gar. Receive him,

And see him safe i' the Tower.

Cran. Stay, good my lords;

I have a little yet to say.—Look there, my lords:

By virtue of that ring I take my cause

Out of the gripes of cruel men, and give it

To a most noble judge, the king my master.

Chan. This is the king's ring.

Sur. 'T is no counterfeit.

Suf. 'T is the right ring, by heaven! I told ye all

When we first put this dangerous stone a rolling,

'T would fall upon ourselves.

Nor. Do you think, my lords

The king will suffer but the little finger

Of this man to be vex'd?

Chan. 'T is now too certain,

How much more is his life in value with him.

Would I were fairly out on't.

Crom. My mind gave me.

In seeking tales, and informations.

Against this man, whose honesty the devil

And his disciples only envy at.

Ye blew the fire that burns ye. Now, have at ye

Enter the King, frowning on them: he takes his seat.

Gar. Dread sovereign, how much are we bound to heaven

In daily thanks, that gave us such a prince;

Not only good and wise, but most religious:

One that in all obedience makes the church

The chief aim of his honour; and, to strengthen

That holy duty, out of dear respect,

His royal self in judgment comes to hear

'The cause betwixt her and this great offender.

K. Hen. You were ever good at sudden commendations.

Bishop of Winchester; but know, I come not

To hear such flattery now, and in my presence:

They are too thin and base to hide offences.

To me you cannot reach. You play the spaniel.

And think with wagging of your tongue to win me

But, whatso'er thou tak'st me for, I'm sure,

Thou hast a cruel nature, and a bloody.—

Good man, [To CRANMER.] sit down. Now, let me see the proudest. [CRANMER sits.]

He that dares most, but wag his finger at thee:

By all that's holy, he had better starve,

Than but once think this place becomes thee not.

Sur. May it please your grace.—

K. Hen. No, sir, it does not please me

I had thought, I had had men of some understanding

And wisdom of my council; but I find none.

Was it discretion, lords, to let this man.

This good man, (few of you deserve that title)

This honest man, wait like a lousy footboy

At chamber door? and one as great as you are?

Why, what a shame was this! Did my commission

Bid ye so far forget yourselves? I gave ye

Power, as he was a counsellor to try him,

Not as a groom. There's some of ye, I see,

More out of malice than integrity,

Would try him to the utmost, had ye mean;

Which ye shall never have the while I live.

Chan. Thus far

My most dread sovereign, may it like your grace

To let my tongue excuse all. What was purpos'd

Concerning his imprisonment, was rather

(If there be faith in men) meant for his trial,

And fair purgation to the world, than malice,

I'm sure, in me.

K. Hen. Well, well, my lords, respect him:

Take him, and use him well; he's worthy of it.

I will say thus much for him: if a prince

May be beholding to a subject. I

Am, for his love and service, so to him.

Make me no more ado, but all embrace him:

[They embrace him: GARDINER last.]

Be friends, for shame, my lords.—My lord of Canterbury,

I have a suit which you must not deny me;
That is, a fair young maid that yet wants baptism,
You must be godfather, and answer for her.

Cran. The greatest monarch now alive may glory
In such an honour: how may I deserve it,
That am a poor and humble subject to you?

K. Hen. Come, come, my lord, you'd spare your spoons¹.

You shall have two noble partners with you:
The old duchess of Norfolk, and lady marquess Dorset:
Will these please you?

Once more, my lord of Winchester, I charge you,
nubrae and love this man.

Gar. With a true heart.
And brother's love, I do it. [Embrace again.]

Cran. And let heaven
Witness, how dear I hold this confirmation.

K. Hen. Good man! those joyful tears show thy
The common voice, I see, is verified [true heart.
Of thee, which says thus, "Do my lord of Canterbury
A shrewd turn, and he is your friend for ever."—
Come, lords, we trifle time away: I long
To have this young one made a Christian.
As I have made ye one, lords, one remain:
So I grow stronger, you more honour gain. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Palace Yard.

Noise and Tumult within. Enter Porter and his Man.

Port. You'll leave your noise anon, ye rascals: do you take the court for Paris-garden?² ye rude slaves, leave your zapping.

[Within.] Good master porter, I belong to the larder.
Port. Belong to the gallows, and be hanged, you rogue! Is this a place to roar in?—Fetch me a dozen crab-tree staves, and strong ones: these are but switches to them.—I'll scratch your heads: you must be seeing christenings? Do you look for ale and cakes here, you rude rascals? [Tumult within.]

Man. Pray, sir, be patient: 't is as much impossible,
Unless we sweep 'em from the door with cannons.
To scatter 'em, as 't is to make 'em sleep
On May-day morning: which will never be.

We may as well push against Paul's, as stir 'em.

Port. How got they in, and be hang'd?

Man. Alas, I know not: how gets the tide in?
As much as one sound cudgel of four foot
[You see the poor remainder] could distribute,
I made no spare, sir.

Port. You did nothing, sir.

Man. I am not Samson, nor sir Guy, nor Colbrand,
To mow 'em down before me: but if I spared any,
That had a head to hit, either young or old,
He or she, cuckold or cuckold-maker,

Let me ne'er hope to see a queen³ again:
And that I would not for a crown.⁴ God save her.

[Within.] You hear, master Porter?

Port. I shall be with you presently, good master puppy.—Keep the door close, sirrah.

Man. What would you have me do?

Port. What should you do, but knock 'em down by the dozens? Is this Moorfields to muster in, or have we some strange Indian with the great tool come to court, the women so besiege us? [Noise.] Bless me, what a fry of fornication is at door! On my Christian conscience, this one christening will beget a thousand:
here will be father, godfather, and all together.

Man. The spoons will be the bigger, sir. There is a fellow somewhat near the door, he should be a brazier by his face, for, o' my conscience, twenty of the dog days now reign in 's nose: all that stand about him are under the line: they need no other penance. That fire-drake⁵ did hit three times on the head, and three times was his nose discharg'd against me: he stands there, like a mortar-piece, to blow us. There was a haberdasher's wife of small wit near him, that railed upon me till her pink'd porringer⁶ fell off her head, for kindling such a combustion in the state. I miss'd the meteor once, and hit that woman, who cried out, clubs!⁷ when I might see from far some forty trun-cheons draw to her succour, which were the hope o' the Strand, where she was quartered. They fell on:
I made good my place: at length they came to the broomstaff with me: I defied 'em still: when suddenly a file of boys behind 'em, loose shot, delivered such a shower of pebbles, that I was fain to draw mine honour in, and let 'em win the work. The devil was amongst 'em, I think, surely. [Shouts.]

Port. These are the youths that thunder at a play house, and fight for bitten apples: that no audience but the Tribulation⁸ of Tower-hill, or the limbs or Lincolnhouse⁹, their dear brothers, are able to endure.
I have some of 'em in Limbo Patrum, and there they are like to dance these three days, besides the running banquet of two beadles, that is to come.

[Tumult and Shouts.]

Enter the Lord Chamberlain.

Cham. Merely o' me, what a multitude are here!
They grow still, too: from all parts they are coming,
As if we kept a fair! Where are these porters,
These lazy knaves?—Ye have made a fine hand, fellows:

There's a trim rabble let in. Are all these
Your faithful friends o' the suburbs? We shall have Great store of room, no doubt, left for the ladies,
When they pass back from the christening.

Port. An't please your honour
We are but men; and what so many may do,
Not being torn a piece, we have done:
An army cannot rule 'em.

Cham. As I live,
If the king blame me for 't, I'll lay ye all
By the heels, and suddenly; and on your heads
Clap round ye fines for neglect. Y^e are lazy knaves:
And here ye lie baiting of bombards,¹⁰ when [Trumpets.]
Ye should do service. Hark! the trumpets sound:
They're come already from the christening.
Go, break among the press, and find a way out
To let the troop pass fairly, or I'll find
A Marshalsea shall hold ye play these two months.

Port. Make way there for the princess.

Man. You great fellow, [Tumult and confusion.]
Stand close up, or I'll make your head ache.

Port. You i' the cumblet, get up o' the rail:
I'll peek you o'er the pole¹¹ else. [Exeunt

SCENE IV.—The Palace at Greenwich.

Enter Trumpets, sounding; then two Aldermen, Lord Mayor, Garter, CRANMER, Duke of NORFOLK, with his Marshal's staff, Duke of SUFFOLK, two Noblemen bearing great standing bowls for the christening gifts, then, four Noblemen bearing a canopy, under which the Duchess of NORFOLK, godmother, bearing the child richly habited in a mantle, &c. Train borne by a Lady: then follows the Murchioness of Dorset, the other godmother, and Ladies. The Troop pass once about the stage, and Garter speaks.

Gart. Heaven,

*From thy endless goodness, send prosperous life,
Long, and ever happy, to the high and mighty
Princess of England, Elizabeth!*

Flourish. Enter King, and Train.

Cran. And to your royal grace, and the good queen,

[Kneeling.]

My noble partners, and myself, thus pray:—

*All comfort, joy, in this most gracious lady,
Heaven ever laid up to make parents happy,
May hourly fall upon ye!*

K Hen. Thank you, good lord archbishop.

What is her name?

Cran. Elizabeth.

K Hen. Stand up, lord.—[CRAN. rises.]

With this kiss take my blessing: God protect thee!

Into whose hand I give thy life. [Kissing the child.]

Cran. Amen!

K Hen. My noble gossips, ye have been too prodigal.

I thank ye heartily: so shall this lady,

When she has so much English.

Cran. Let me speak, sir,

For Heaven now bids me; and the words I utter

Let none think flattery, for they'll find them truth.

This royal infant,—heaven still move about her!—

Though in her cradle, yet now promises

Upon this land a thousand thousand blessings,

Which time shall bring to ripeness. She shall be

(But few now living can behold that goodness)

A pattern to all princes living with her,

And all that shall succeed: Sheba was never

More covetous of wisdom, and fair virtue,

Than this pure soul shall be: all princely graces,

That mould up such a mighty piece as this is,

With all the virtues that attend the good,

Shall still be doubled on her: truth shall nurse her;

Holy and heavenly thoughts still counsel her:

She shall be lov'd, and fear'd: her own shall bless her:

Her foes shake like a field of beaten corn,

And hang their heads with sorrow: good grows with her.

In her days every man shall eat in safety

Under his own vine what he plants, and sing

The merry songs of peace to all his neighbours.

God shall be truly known; and those about her

From her shall read the perfect ways of honour,

And by those claim their greatness, not by blood

Nor shall this peace sleep with her: but as when

The bird of wonder dies, the maiden phoenix,

Her ashes new create another heir,

As great in admiration as herself;

So shall she leave her blessedness to one,

[ness]

(When heaven shall call her from this cloud of dark-

Who, from the sacred ashes of her honour,

Shall star-like rise, as great in fame as she was,

And so stand fix'd. Peace, plenty, love, truth, terror,

That were the servants to this chosen infant,

Shall then be his, and like a vine grow to him:

Wherever the bright sun of heaven shall shine,

His honour and the greatness of his name

Shall be, and make new nations: he shall flourish,

And, like a mountain cedar, reach his branches

To all the plains about him. Our children's children

Shall see this, and bless heaven.

K Hen.

Thou speakest wonders

Cran. She shall be, to the happiness of England.

An aged princess; many days shall see her,

And yet no day without a deed to crown it.

Would I had known no more! but she must die:

She must; the saints must have her: yet a virgin,

A most unspotted lily shall she pass

To the ground, and all the world shall mourn her.

K Hen. O, lord archbishop!

Thou hast made me now a man: never, before

This happy child, did I get any thing.

This oracle of comfort has so pleased me,

That when I am in heaven I shall desire

To see what this child does, and praise my Maker.—

I thank ye all.—To you, my good lord mayor,

And you, good brethren, I am much beholding:

I have receiv'd much honour by your presence.

And ye shall find me thankful.—Lead the way, lords.—

Ye must all see the queen, and she must thank ye:

She will be sick else. This day, no man think

He has business at his house, for all shall stay:

This little one shall make it holiday.

[Exeunt]

EPILOGUE.

'T is ten to one, this play can never please

All that are here. Some come to take their ease,

And sleep an act or two; but those, we fear,

We have frighted with our trumpets; so, 't is clear,

They'll say, 't is naught: others, to hear the city

Abus'd extremely, and to cry,—“that 's witty,”

Which we have not done neither: that, I fear,

All the expected good we're like to hear

For this play, at this time, is only in

The merciful construction of good women;

For such a one we show'd 'em. If they smile,

And say, 't will do, I know, within a while

All the best men are ours: for 't is ill hap,

If they hold, when their ladies bid 'em clap.

SCENE. Troy, and the Grecian Camp before it.

THE PROLOGUE¹ (*in Armour*²).

In Troy, there lies the scene. From isles of Greece,
The princes orgulous, their high blood chaf'd,
Have to the port of Athens sent their ships,
Fraught with the ministers and instruments
Of cruel war: sixty and nine, that wore
Their crowns regal, from th' Athenian bay
Put forth toward Phrygia; and their vow is made,
To ransack Troy, within whose strong immures
The ravish'd Helen, Menelaus' queen.
With wanton Paris sleeps; and that's the quarrel.
To Tenedos they come,
And the deep-drawing barks do there discharge
Their warlike fraughtage: now on Dardan plains
The fresh and yet unbruised Greeks do pitch
Their brave pavilions: Priam's six-gated city,
Dardan, and Tymbria, Ilius, Chetas, Trojan,

And Antenorides, with massy staples
And corresponsive and fulfilling bolts,
Sperr³ up the sons of Troy.
Now expectation, tickling skittish spirits
On one and other side, Trojan and Greek,
Sets all on hazard.—And hither am I come
A Prologue arm'd,—but not in confidence
Of author's pen, or actor's voice, but suited
In like conditions as our argument,—
To tell you, fair beholders, that our play
Leaps o'er the vaunt⁴ and firstlings of those broils,
Beginning in the middle; starting thence away
To what may be digested in a play.
Like, or find fault; do as your pleasures are;
Now, good or bad, 't is but the chance of war.

ACT I.

SCENE I—Troy. Before PRIAM'S Palace.

Enter TROILUS armed, and PANDARUS.

Tro. Call here my varlet⁵: I'll unarm again:
Why should I war without the walls of Troy,
That find such cruel battle here within?
Each Trojan, that is master of his heart,
Let him to the field; Troilus, alas! hath none.

Pan. Will this gear ne'er be mended?

Tro. The Greeks are strong, and skilful to their strength,
Fierce to their skill, and to their fierceness valiant;

But I am weaker than a woman's tear,
Tamer than sleep, fonder than ignorance,
Less valiant than the virgin in the night,
And skill-less as unpractis'd infancy.

Pan. Well, I have told you enough of this. for my part, I'll not meddle nor make no farther. He that will have a cake out of the wheat must⁶ tarry the grinding.

Tro. Have I not tarried?

Pan. Ay, the grinding; but you must tarry the bolting.

Tro. Have I not tarried?

Van. ² Hireling, servant

² The words in parenthesis are not in f. o.
must needs: in folio.

³ Stir: in folio. Theobald made the change to sperr, or law

Pan. Ay, the bolting; but you must tarry the leav'ning.

Tro. Still have I tarried.

Pan. Ay, to the leav'ning: but here's yet, in the word hereafter, the kneading, the making of the cake, the heating the oven, and the baking: nay, you must stay the cooling too, or you may chance burn your lips.

Tro. Patience herself, what goddess e'er she be, Doth lesser blench at sufferance than I do.

At Priam's royal table do I sit;

And when fair Cressid comes into my thoughts,—

So, traitor!—when she comes!—When is she thence?

Pan. Well, she looked yesternight fairer than ever I saw her look, or any woman else.

Tro. I was about to tell thee,—when my heart,

As wedged with a sigh, would rise in twain,

Lest Hector or my father should perceive me,

I have (as when the sun doth light a storm)

Bury'd this sigh in wrinkle of a smile;

But sorrow, that is couch'd in seeming gladness,

Is like that mirth fate turns to sudden sadness.

Pan. An her hair were not somewhat darker than Helen's, (well, go to) there were no more comparison between the women,—but, for my part, she is my kinswoman: I would not, as they term it, praise her,—but I would somebody had heard her talk yesterday, as I did: I will not dispraise your sister Cassandra's wit, but—

Tro. O Pandarus! I tell thee, Pandarus,—

When I do tell thee, there my hopes lie drown'd,

Reply not in how many fathoms deep

They lie indrench'd. I tell thee, I am mad

In Cressid's love: thou answer'st, she is fair;

Pour'st in the open ulcer of my heart

Her eyes, her hair, her cheek, her gait, her voice;

Hindlest in thy discourse, O! that her hand,

In whose comparison all whites are ink,

Writing their own reproach: to whose soft seizure

The eygne't's down is harsh, and spirit of sense

Hard as the palm of ploughman! This thou tell'st me,

As true thou tell'st me, when I say—I love her;

But, saying thus, instead of oil and balm,

Thou lay'st in every gash that love hath given me

The knife that made it.

Pan. I speak no more than truth.

Tro. Thou dost not speak so much.

Pan. 'Faith, I'll not meddle in't. Let her be as she is: if she be fair, 't is the better for her; an she be not, she has the 'mends in her own hands.

Tro. Good Pandarus. How now, Pandarus!

Pan. I have had my labour for my travail; ill-thought on of her, and ill-thought on of you: gone between and between, but small thanks for my labour.

Tro. What, art thou angry, Pandarus? what, with me?

Pan. Because she's kin to me, therefore, she's not so fair as Helen: and she were not kin to me, she would be as fair on Friday, as Helen is on Sunday. But what care I? I care not, an she were a black-a-moor; 't is all one to me.

Tro. Say I, she is not fair?

Pan. I do not care whether you do or no. She's a fool to stay behind her father: let her to the Greeks: and so I'll tell her the next time I see her. For my part, I'll meddle nor make no more i' the matter.

Tro. Pandarus,—

Pan. Not I.

Tro. Sweet Pandarus,—

Pan. Pray you, speak no more to me: I will leave all as I found it, and there an end. [Exit PAN. An Alarum.]

Tro. Peace, you ungracious clamours! peace, rude sounds!

Fools on both sides! Helen must needs be fair, When with your blood you daily paint her thus.

I cannot fight upon this argument:

It is too starv'd a subject for my sword.

But Pandarus!—O gods, how do you plague me!

I cannot come to Cressid, but by Pandar;

And he's as tetchy to be woo'd to woo,

And she is stubborn-chaste against all suit.

Tell me, Apollo, for thy Daphne's love,

What Cressid is, what Pandar, and what we?

Her bed is India; there she lies, a pearl:

Between our Ilium, and where she resides,

Let it be call'd the wild and wandering flood:

Ourself the merchant, and this sailing Pandar,

Our doubtful hope, our convoy, and our bark.

Alarum. Enter ÆNEAS.

Æne. How now, prince Troilus! wherefore not afield?

Tro. Because not there: this woman's answer sorts,¹ For womanish it is to be from thence.

What news, Æneas, from the field to-day?

Æne. That Paris is returned home, and hurt.

Tro. By whom, Æneas?

Æne.

Troilus, by Menelaus.

Tro. Let Paris bleed: 't is but a scar to scorn;

Paris is gor'd with Menelaus' horn. [Alarum.]

Æne. Hark, what good sport is out of town to-day!

Tro. Better at home, if "would I might," were "may."

But to the sport abroad:—are you bound thither?

Æne. In all swift haste.

Tro. Come; go we, then, together. [Exeunt]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Street.

Enter CRESSIDA and ALEXANDER.

Cres. Who were those went by?

Alex. Queen Hecuba, and Helen

Cres. And whither go they?

Alex.

Up to the eastern tower

Whose height commands as subject all the vale,

To see the battle. Hector, whose patience

Is as a virtue fix'd, to-day was mov'd:

He chid Andromache, and struck his armourer;

And, like as there were husbandry in war,

Before the sun rose he was harness'd light,

And to the field goes he; where every flower

Did, as a prophet, weep what it foresaw

In Hector's wrath.

Cres. What was his cause of anger?

Alex. The noise goes, thus: there is among the Greeks

A lord of Trojan blood, nephew to Hector;

They call him, Ajax.

Cres. Good; and what of him?

Alex. They say he is a very man per se,

And stands alone.

Cres. So do all men; unless they are drunk, sick, or have no legs.

Alex. This man, lady, hath robbed many beasts of their particular additions: he is as valiant as the lion, churlish as the bear, slow as the elephant; a man into whom nature hath so crowded humours, that his valour is crushed into folly, his folly sauced with discretion: there is no man hath a virtue that he hath not a glimpse of, nor any man an attain but he carries some stain of it. He is melancholy without cause, and merry against the hair: he hath the joints of every thing; but every thing so out of joint, that he is a gouty Briareus, many hands and no use; or purblind Argus, all eyes and no sight.

Cres. But how should this man, that makes me smile, make Hector angry?

Alex. They say, he yesterday coped Hector in the battle, and struck him down: the disdain and shame whereof hath ever since kept Hector fasting and aking.

Enter PANDARUS.

Cres. Who comes here?

Alex. Madam, your uncle Pandarus.

Cres. Hector's a gallant man.

Alex. As may be in the world, lady.

Pan. What's that? what's that?

Cres. Good morrow, uncle Pandarus.

Pan. Good morrow, cousin Cressid. What do you talk of?—Good morrow, Alexander.—How do you, cousin? When were you at Ilium?

Cres. This morning, uncle.

Pan. What were you talking of, when I came? Was Hector armed, and gone, ere ye came to Ilium? Helen was not up, was she?

Cres. Hector was gone; but Helen was not up.

Pan. E'en so: Hector was stirring early.

Cres. That were we talking of, and of his anger.

Pan. Was he angry?

Cres. So he says, here.

Pan. True, he was so; I know the cause too. He'll lay about him to-day, I can tell them that; and there's Troilus will not come far behind him: let them take need of Troilus, I can tell them that too.

Cres. What, is he angry too?

Pan. Who, Troilus? Troilus is the better man of the two.

Cres. O, Jupiter! there's no comparison.

Pan. What, not between Troilus and Hector? Do you know a man if you see him?

Cres. Ay; if I ever saw him before, and knew him.

Pan. Well, I say, Troilus is Troilus.

Cres. Then you say as I say; for, I am sure, he is not Hector.

Pan. No, nor Hector is not Troilus, in some degrees.

Cres. 'Tis just to each of them; he is himself.

Pan. Himself? Alas, poor Troilus! I would, he were,—

Cres. So he is.

Pan.—Condition, I had gone bare-foot to India.

Cres. He is not Hector.

Pan. Himself? no, he's not himself.—Would 'a were himself! Well, the gods are above; time must friend, or end. Well, Troilus, well.—I would, my heart were in her body!—No, Hector is not a better man than Troilus.

Cres. Excuse me.

Pan. He is elder.

Cres. Pardon me, pardon me.

Pan. Th' other's not come to 't: you shall tell me another tale, when th' other's come to 't. Hector shall not have his wit this year.

Cres. He shall not need it, if he have his own.

Pan. Nor his qualities.

Cres. No matter.

Pan. Nor his beauty.

Cres. 'T would not become him; his own's better.

Pan. You have no judgment, niece. Helen herself swore th' other day, that Troilus, for a brown favour, (for so 't is, I must confess)—not brown neither—

Cres. No, but brown.

Pan. 'Faith, to say truth, brown and not brown.

Cres. To say the truth, true and not true.

Pan. She prais'd his complexion above Paris.

Cres. Why, Paris hath colour enough.

Pan. So he has.

Cres. Then, Troilus should have too much: if she praised him above, his complexion is higher than his. he having colour enough, and the other higher, is too flouting a praise for a good complexion. I had as lief Helen's golden tongue had commended Troilus for a copper nose.

Pan. I swear to you, I think Helen loves him better than Paris.

Cres. Then she's a merry Greek, indeed.

Pan. Nay, I am sure she does. She came to him th' other day into the compassed window²; and, you know, he has not past three or four hairs on his chin.

Cres. Indeed, a tapster's arithmetic may soon bring his particulars therein to a total.

Pan. Why, he is very young; and yet will he, within three pound, lift as much as his brother Hector.

Cres. Is he so young a man, and so old a lifter?

Pan. But, to prove to you that Helen loves him:—she came, and puts me her white hand to his cloven chin.—

Cres. Juno have mercy! How came it cloven?

Pan. Why, you know, 't is dimpled. I think his smiling becomes him better than any man in all Phrygia.

Cres. O! he smiles valiantly.

Pan. Does he not?

Cres. O! yes, an 't were a cloud in autumn.

Pan. Why, go to then.—But to prove to you that Helen loves Troilus,—

Cres. Troilus will stand to the proof, if you 'll prove it so.

Pan. Troilus? why, he esteems her no more than I esteem an addle egg.

Cres. If you love an addle egg as well as you love an idle head, you would eat chickens i' the shell.

Pan. I cannot choose but laugh, to think how she tickled his chin:—indeed, she has a marvellous white hand, I must needs confess.

Cres. Without the rack.

Pan. And she takes upon her to spy a white hair on his chin.

Cres. Alas, poor chin! many a wart is richer.

Pan. But, there was such laughing: queen Hecuba laughed, that her eyes ran o'er.

Cres. With mill-stones.

Pan. And Cassandra laughed.

Cres. But there was more temperate fire under the pot of her eyes: did her eyes run o'er too?

Pan. And Hector laughed.

Cres. At what was all this laughing?

Pan. Marry, at the white hair that Helen spied on Troilus' chin.

Cres. An't had been a green hair I should have laughed too.

Pan. They laughed not so much at the hair, as at his pretty answer.

Cres. What was his answer?

Pan. Quoth she, "Here's but two and fifty hairs on your chin, and one of them is white."

Cres. This is her question.

Pan. That's true; make no question of that. "Two and fifty hairs," quoth he, "and one white: that white hair is my father, and all the rest are his sons." "Jupiter!" quoth she, "which of these hairs is Paris, my husband?" "The forked one," quoth he; "pluck't out, and give it him." But there was such laughing, and Helen so blushed, and Paris so chafed, and all the rest so laughed, that it passed!

Cres. So let it now, for it has been a great while going by.

Pan. Well, cousin, I told you a thing yesterday; think on't.

Cres. So I do.

Pan. I'll be sworn, 't is true: he will weep you, and 't were a man born in April.

Cres. And I'll spring up in his tears, an 't were a nettle against May. [A retreat sounded.]

Pan. Hark! they are coming from the field. Shall we stand up here, and see them, as they pass toward Ilium? good niece, do; sweet niece, Cressida.

Cres. At your pleasure.

Pan. Here, here; here's an excellent place: here we may see most bravely. I'll tell you them all by their names, as they pass by, but mark Troilus above the rest.

Cres. Speak not so loud.

ÆNEAS passes over the Stage.

Pan. That's Æneas. Is not that a brave man? he's one of the flowers of Troy, I can tell you: but mark Troilus; you shall see anon.

Cres. Who's that?

ANTENOR passes over.

Pan. That's Antenor: he has a shrewd wit, I can tell you; and he's a man good enough: he's one of the soundest judgment in Troy, whosoever, and a proper man of his¹ person.—When comes Troilus?—I'll show you Troilus anon: if he see me, you shall see him nod at me.

Cres. Will he give you the nod?

Pan. You shall see.

Cres. If he do, the rich shall have more.

HECTOR passes over.

Pan. That's Hector; that, that, look you, that; there's a fellow!—Go thy way, Hector.—There's a brave man, niece.—O brave Hector!—Look how he looks; there's a countenance. Is't not a brave man?

Cres. O! a brave man.

Pan. Is'a not? It does a man's heart good—Look you what hacks are on his helmet! look you yonder, do you see? look you there. There's no jesting: there's laying on, take't off who will, as they say; there be hacks!

Cres. Be those with swords?

PARIS passes over.

Pan. Swords? any thing, he cares not; an the devil come to him, it's all one: by god's lid, it does one's heart good.—Yonder comes Paris; yonder comes Paris: look ye yonder, niece: is't not a gallant man too, is't not?—Why, this is brave now.—Who said he came hurt home to-day? he's not hurt: why, this will do Helen's heart good now. Ha! would I could see Troilus now.—You shall see Troilus anon.

Cres. Who's that?

HELENUS passes over.

Pan. That's Helenus.—I marvel, where Troilus is. That's Helenus.—I think he went not forth to-day.—That's Helenus.

Cres. Can Helenus fight, uncle?

Pan. Helenus? no;—yes, he'll fight indifferent well.—I marvel, where Troilus is.—Hark! do you not hear the people cry, Troilus?—Hecienus is a priest.

Cres. What sneaking fellow comes yonder?

TROILUS passes over.

Pan. Where? yonder? that's Deiphobus.—'T is Troilus! there's a man, niece!—Hem!—Brave Troilus, the prince of chivalry!

Cres. Peace! for shame; peace!

Pan. Mark him; note him.—O brave Troilus!—look well upon him, niece: look you how his sword is bloodied, and his helm more hack'd than Hector's: and how he looks, and how he goes!—O admirable youth! he ne'er saw three and twenty. Go thy way, Troilus, go thy way; had I a sister were a grace, or a daughter a goddess, he should take his choice. O admirable man! Paris?—Paris is dirt to him; and, I warrant, Helen, to change, would give an eye² to boot.

Soldiers pass over the Stage.

Cres. Here come more.

Pan. Asses, fools, dolts, chaff and bran, chaff and bran; porridge after meat. I could live and die i' the eyes of Troilus. Ne'er look, ne'er look: the eagles are gone; crows and daws, crows and daws. I had rather be such a man as Troilus, than Agamemnon and all Greece.

Cres. There is among the Greeks Achilles, a better man than Troilus.

Pan. Achilles? a drayman, a porter, a very camel.

Cres. Well, well.

Pan. Well, well?—Why, have you any discretion? have you any eyes? Do you know what a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and such like³, the spice and salt that season a man?

Cres. Ay, a minced man; and then to be baked with no date in the pye,—for then the man's date's out.

Pan. You are such a woman! one knows not at what ward you lie.

Cres. Upon my back, to defend my belly; upon my wit, to defend my wiles; upon my secrecy, to defend mine honesty; upon my mask, to defend my beauty; and upon you, to defend all these: and at all these wards I lie, at a thousand watches.

Pan. Say one of your watches.

Cres. Nay, I'll watch you for that: and that's one of the chiefest of them too: if I cannot ward what would not have hit, I can watch you for telling how I took the blow, unless it swell past hiding, and then it's past watching.

Pan. You are such another!

Enter TROILUS' Boy.

Boy. Sir, my lord would instantly speak with you.

Pan. Where?

Boy. At your own house⁴; there he unarms him.

Pan. Good boy, tell him I come. [Exit Boy]
I doubt he be hurt.—Fare ye well, good niece.

Cres. Adieu, uncle

Pan. I'll be with you, niece, by and by.

Cres. To bring, uncle,—

Pan. Ay, a token from Troilus.

Cres. By the same token, you are a bawd.—

[Exit PANDARUS]

Words, vows, gifts, tears, and love's full sacrifice,
He offers in another's enterprise:
But more in Troilus thousand fold I see,
Than in the glass of Pandar's praise may be.
Yet hold I off. Women are angels, wooing:
Things won are done, joy's soul lies in the doing:
That she belov'd knows nought, that knows not this,— Men prize the thing ungain'd more than it is:
That she was never yet, that ever knew
Love got so sweet as when desire did sue.

SCENE III.—The Grecian Camp. Before AGAMEMNON'S TENT.

Sennet. Enter AGAMEMNON, NESTOR, ULYSSES, MENELAUS, and others.

Agam. Princes.

What grief hath set the jaundice on your cheeks?
 The ample proposition, that hope makes
 In all designs begun on earth below,
 Fails in the promis'd largeness: checks and disasters
 Grow in the veins of actions highest rear'd;
 As knots, by the conflux of meeting sap,
 Infect the sound pine, and divert his grain
 Tortive and errant from his course of growth.
 Nor, princes, is it matter new to us,
 That we come short of our suppose so far,
 That after seven years' siege yet Troy walls stand;
 Sith every action that hath gone before,
 Whereof we have record, trial did draw
 Bias and thwart, not answering the aim,
 And that unbodied figure of the thought
 That gave 't surmised shape. Why then, you princes,
 Do you with cheeks abash'd behold our wrecks²,
 And call³ them shames, which are, indeed, nought else
 But the protractive trials of great Jove,
 To find perceptive constancy in men?
 The fineness of which metal is not found
 In fortune's love; for then, the bold and coward,
 The wise and fool, the artist and unlearn'd,
 The hard and soft, seem all afflu'd and kin:
 But, in the wind and tempest of her frown,
 Distinction, with a broad⁴ and powerful fan,
 Putting at all, winnows the light away:
 And what hath mass, or matter, by itself
 Lies rich in virtue, and unmingled.

Nest. With due observance of thy godlike seat,
 Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall apply
 Thy latest words. In the reproof of chance
 Lies the true proof of men. The sea being smooth,
 How many shallow bauble boats dare sail
 Upon her patient breast, making their way
 With those of nobler bulk:
 But let the rullian Boreas once enrage
 The gentle Thetis, and, anon, behold,
 The strong-ribb'd bark through liquid mountains cut,
 Bounding between the two moist elements,
 Like Perseus' horse: where's then the saucy boat,
 Whose weak untimber'd sides but even now
 Co-ri-val'd greatness⁵ either to harbour fled,
 Or made a toast for Neptune. Even so
 Doth valour's show, and valour's worth, divide
 In storms of fortune: for, in her ray and brightness,
 The herd hath more annoyance by the briz⁶,
 Than by the tiger; but when the splitting wind
 Makes flexible the knees of knotted oaks,
 And flies fled under shade, why then, the thing of courage,

As rous'd with rage, with rage doth sympathize,
 And with an accent tun'd in self-same key,
 Replies⁷ to chiding fortune.

Ulyss. Agamemnon,
 Thou great commander, nerve and bone of Greece,
 Heart of our numbers, soul and only spirit,
 In whom the tempers and the minds of all

Should be shut up, hear what Ulysses speaks.

Besides the applause and approbation.

The which,—most mighty for thy place and sway.—
 [To AGAMEMNON.]

And thou most reverend for thy stretch'd-out life,—
 [To NESTOR]

I give to both your speeches, which were such,
 As Agamemnon and the hand of Greece
 Should hold up high in brass; and such again,
 As Venerable Nestor, hatch'd⁸ in silver,
 Should with a bond of air (strong as the axletree
 On which heaven rides) knit all the Greekish ears
 To his experience'd tongue,—yet let it please both,—
 Thou great,—and wise,—to hear Ulysses speak.

Agam. Speak, prince of Ithaca; and be 't of less expect

That matter needless, of importless burden,
 Divide thy lips, than we are confident,
 When rank Theristes opes his mastiff jaws,
 We shall hear music, wit, and oracle.

Ulyss. Troy, yet upon his basis, had been down,
 And the great Hector's sword had lack'd a master.
 But for these instances.

The speciality of rule hath been neglected:
 And look, how many Grecian tents do stand
 Hollow upon this plain, so many hollow factions.
 When that the general is not like the hive,
 To whom the foragers shall all repair,
 What honey is expected? Degree being vizarded,
 Th' unworliest shows as fairly in the mask.
 The heavens themselves, the planets, and this centre,
 Observe degree, priority, and place,
 Insisture, course, proportion, season, form,
 Office, and custom, in all line of order:
 And therefore is the glorious planet, Sol,
 In noble eminence enthron'd and spheer'd⁹
 Amidst the other; whose med'cinable eye
 Corrects the ill aspects of planets evil,
 And posts, like the commandment of a king,
 Sans check, to good and bad. But when the planets,
 In evil mixture, to disorder wander,
 What plagues, and what portents! what mutiny!
 What raging of the sea, shaking of earth,
 Commotion in the winds, frights, changes, horrors,
 Divert and crack, rend and deracinate
 The unity and married calm of states
 Quite from their fixure! O! when degree is shak'd,
 Which is the ladder to all high designs,
 The enterprise is sick. How could communities,
 Degrees in schools, and brotherhoods in cities,
 Peaceful commerece from dividable shores,
 The primogenitive and due of birth,
 Prerogative of age, crowns, sceptres, laurels,
 But by degree stand in authentic place?
 Take but degree away, untune that string,
 And, hark, what discord follows! each thing meets¹⁰
 In mere oppugnancy: the bounded waters
 Should lift their bosoms higher than the shores,
 And make a sop of all this solid globe:
 Strength should be lord of imbecility,
 And the rude son should strike his father dead:
 Force should be right; or, rather, right and wrong,
 (Between whose endless jar justice resides)
 Should lose their names, and so should justice too.
 Then every thing includes itself in power,
 Power into will, will into appetite;
 And appetite, an universal wolf,
 So doubly seconded with will and power,

¹ Achievement is command: in f. e. ² works: in f. e. ³ think: in folio. ⁴ loud: in folio. ⁵ Gadfly. ⁶ Returns: in f. e. ⁷ change

Must make perforce an universal prey,
And last eat up himself. Great Agamemnon,
This chaos, when degree is suffocate,
Follows the choking:

And this neglect of degree it is.
That by a pace goes backward, with a purpose
It hath to climb. The general's disdain'd
By him one step below; he, by the next;
That next, by him beneath: so, every step,
Exempl'd by the first pace that is sick
Of his superior, grows to an envious fever
Of pale and bloodless emulation:
And 't is this fever that keeps Troy on foot.
Not her own sinews. To end a tale of length,
Troy in our weakness stands,¹ not in her strength.

Nest. Most wisely hath Ulysses here discover'd
The fever whereof all our power is sick.

Agam. The nature of the sickness found, Ulysses,
What is the remedy?

Ulyss. The great Achilles, whom opinion crowns
The sinew and the forehead of our host,
Having his ear full of his airy fame,
Grows dainty of his worth, and in his tent
Lies mocking our designs. With him, Patroclus,
Upon a lazy bed the livelong day
Breaks scurril jests;

And with ridiculous and awkward² action
(Which, slanderer, he imitation calls.)

He pageants us: sometime, great Agamemnon,
Thy topless deputation he puts on;

And, like a strutting player,—whose conceit
Lies in his hamstring, and doth think it rich
To hear the wooden dialogue and sound
'Twixt his stretch'd footing and the scaffoldage,—
Such to-be-pitied and o'er-wrested seeming
He acts thy greatness in: and when he speaks.

'T is like a chime a mending; with terms unsquar'd,
Which, from the tongue of roaring Typhon dropp'd,
Would seem hyperboles. At this fustly stuff

The large Achilles, on his press'd bed lolling,
From his deep chest laughs out a loud applause:

Cries—"Excellent!"—'t is Agamemnon right.³
Now play me Nestor:—hem, and stroke thy beard

As he, being 'drest to some oration."

That's done;—as near as the extremest ends
Of parallels—as like as Vulcan and his wife:

Yet god Achilles still cries, "Excellent!"
'T is Nestor right! Now play him me, Patroclus.

Arming to answer in a night alarm."

And then, forsooth, the faint defects of age,
Must be the scene of mirth; to cough, and spit,

And with a palsy, fumbling on his gorget,
Shake in and out the rivet:—and at this sport.

Sir Valour dies; cries "O!—enough, Patroclus,
Or give me ribs of steel! I shall split all

In pleasure of my spleen." And in this fashion,
All our abilities, gifts, natures, shapes,

Severals and generals, all grace extract,⁴
Achievements, plots, orders, preventions,

Excitements to the field, or speech for truce,
Success, or loss, what is, or is not, serves

As stuff for these two to make paradoxes.

Nest. And in the imitation of these vain,
(Whom, as Ulysses says, opinion crowns

With an imperial voice) many are infect.
Ajax is grown self-will'd; and bears his head

In such a rein, in full as proud a place
As broad Achilles: keeps his tent like him;

Makes factious feasts; rails on our state of war,

Bold as an oracle; and sets Thersites,
A slave whose gall coins slanders like a mint,
To match us in comparisons with dirt;
To weaken and discredit our exposure,
How rank soever rounded in with danger.

Ulyss. They tax our policy, and call it cowardice.
Count wisdom as no member of the war;
Fore-stall prescience, and esteem no act
But that of hand: the still and mental parts,—
That do contrive how many hands shall strike,
When fitness calls them on, and know, by measure
Of their observant toil, the enemies' weight,—
Why, this hath not a finger's dignity.

They call this bed-work, mappery, closet-war:
So that the ram, that batters down the wall,
For the great swing and rudeness of his poise,
They place before his hand that made the engine,
Or those that with the fineness of their souls
By reason guide his execution.

Nest. Let this be granted, and Achilles' horse
Makes many Thetis' sons.

Agam. What trumpet? look, Menelaus
Enter ÆNEAS.

Men. From Troy.

Agam. What would you fore our tent.
Æne. Is this:

Great Agamemnon's tent, I pray you?

Agam. Even this.

Æne. May one, that is a herald and a prince,
Do a fair message to his kingly ears?

Agam. With surety stronger than Achilles' arm,
'Fore all the Greekish heads, which with one voice
Call Agamemnon head and general.

Æne. Fair leave, and large security. How may
A stranger to those most imperial looks
Know them from eyes of other mortals?

Agam. How?

Æne. Ay; I ask, that I might waken reverence,
And bid the cheek be ready with a blush,

Modest as morning when she coldly eyes
The youthful Phœbus.

Which is that god in office, guiding men?
Which is the high and mighty Agamemnon?

Agam. This Trojan scorns us, or the men of Troy
Are ceremonious courtiers.

Æne. Courtiers as free, as debonair, unarm'd,
As bending angels: that's their fame in peace:
But when they would seem soldiers, they have galls,
Good arms, strong joints, true swords: and, Jove's accord.

Nothing so full of heart. But peace. Æneas!

Peace, Trojan! lay thy finger on thy lips.

The worthiness of praise distains his worth.

If that the prais'd himself bring the praise forth;

What⁵ the repining enemy commends.

That breath fame blows; that praise, soul-pure,⁶ transends.

Agam. Sir, you of Troy, call you yourself Æneas?
Æne. Ay, Greek, that is my name.

Agam. What's your affair, I pray you?
Æne. Sir, pardon: 't is for Agamemnon's ears.

Agam. He hears nought privately that comes from Troy.

Æne. Nor I from Troy came not to whisper him
I bring a trumpet to awake his ear.

To set his sense on the attentive bent,

And then to speak.

Agam. Speak frankly as the wind.

It is not Agamemnon's sleeping hour:

¹ Lives: in folio ² silly: in quartos ³ just: in folio ⁴ of grace exact: in f. o. ⁵ But what: in f. o. ⁶ sole pure: in f. o.

That thou shalt know, Trojan, he is awake,
He tells thee so himself.

Enc. Trumpet, blow loud,
Send thy brass voice through all these lazy tents;
And every Greek of mettle, let him know,
What Troy means fairly shall be spoke aloud.

[Trumpet sounds.]

We have, great Agamemnon, here in Troy,
A prince call'd Hector, Priam is his father,
Who in this dull and long-contin'd truce
Is rusty grown: he bade me take a trumpet.
And to this purpose speak.—Kings, princes, lords,
If there be one among the fair'st of Greece,
That holds his honour higher than his ease:
That seeks¹ his praise more than he fears his peril:
That knows his valour, and knows not his fear;
That loves his mistress more than in confession
With truant vows to her own lips he loves,
And dare avow her beauty and her worth
In other arms than hers,—to him this challenge.
Hector, in view of Trojans and of Greeks,
Shall make it good, or do his best to do it.
He hath a lady, wiser, fairer, truer.
Than ever Greek did couple² in his arms:
And will to-morrow with his trumpet call,
Mid-way between your tents and walls of Troy,
To rouse a Grecian that is true in love.
If any come, Hector shall honour him;
If none, he'll say in Troy, when he retires,
The Grecian dames are sun-burnt, and not worth
The splinter of a lance. Even so much.

Agam. This shall be told our lovers, lord Æneas:
If none of them have soul in such a kind,
We left them all at home; but we are soldiers,
And may that soldier a mere recreant prove,
That means not, hath not, or is not in love!
If then one is, or hath, or means to be,
That one meets Hector; if none else, I am³ he.

Nest. Tell him of Nestor, one that was a man
When Hector's grandsire suck'd: he is old now;
But if there be not in our Grecian host⁴
One noble man that hath one spark of fire,
To answer for his love, tell him from me.
I'll hide my silver beard in a gold beaver.
And in my vanbrace put this wither'd brawn;
And, meeting him, will tell him, that my lady
Was fairer than his grandam, and as chaste
As may be in the world. His youth in flood.

I'll prove⁵ this truth with my three drops of blood.

Enc. Now heavens forbid such scarcity of youth!
Ulys. Amen.

Agam. Fair lord Æneas, let me touch your hand;
To our pavilion shall I lead you, sir.
Achilles shall have word of this intent,
So shall each lord of Greece, from tent to tent;
Yourself shall feast with us before you go.
And find the welcome of a noble foe.

[Exeunt all but ULYSSES and NESTOR.]

Ulys. Nestor!

Nest. What says Ulysses?

Ulys. I have a young conception in my brain;
Be you my time to bring it to some shape.

Nest. What is't?

Ulys. This 'tis.

Blunt wedges rive hard knots: the seeded pride,
That hath to this maturity grown up
In rank Achilles, must or now be cropp'd,
Or, shedding, breed a nursery of like evil,

To overbulk us all.

Nest.

Well, and how?

Ulys. This challenge that the gallant Hector sends,
However it is spread in general name,
Relates in purpose only to Achilles.

Nest. The purpose is perspicuous even as substance,
Whose grossness little characters sum up:
And in the publication make no strain,
But that Achilles, were his brain as barren
As banks of Libya, (though, Apollo knows,
'T is dry enough) will, with great speed of judgment,
Ay, with celerity, find Hector's purpose
Pointing on him.

Ulys. And wake him to the answer, think you?

Nest. Why? 't is most meet: whom may you else oppose,

That can from Hector bring his honour off.
If not Achilles? Though 't be a sportful combat,
Yet in the trial much opinion dwells;
For here the Trojans taste our dear'st repute
With their fin'st palate: and trust to me, Ulysses,
Our reputation shall be oddly pois'd
In this wild action; for the success,
Although particular, shall give a scantling
Of good or bad unto the general;
And in such indexes (although small pricks
To their subsequent volumes) there is seen
The baby figure of the giant mass

Of things to come at large. It is suppos'd,
He that meets Hector issues from our choice:
And choice, being mutual act of all our souls,
Makes merit her election, and doth boil,
As 't were from forth us all, a man distill'd
Out of our virtues; who miscarrying,
What heart receives from hence the conquering part
To steel a strong opinion to themselves?
Which entertain'd, limbs are his instruments,
In no less working, than are swords and bows
Directive by the limbs.

Ulys. Give pardon to my speech:—

Therefore 't is meet Achilles meet not Hector.
Let us, like merchants, show our foulest wares,
And think, perchance, they'll sell; if not,
The lustre of the better shall exceed,⁷
By showing the worst first.⁸ Do not consent,
That ever Hector and Achilles meet;
For both our honour and our shame, in this,
Are dogg'd with two strange followers.

Nest. I see them not with my old eyes: what are they?

Ulys. What glory our Achilles shares from Hector.

Were he not proud, we all should share⁹ with him:
But he already is too insolent;
And we were better parch in Afric sun,
Than in the pride and salt scorn of his eyes,
Should he 'scape Hector fair. If he were foil'd,
Why, then we did our main opinion crush
In taint of our best man. No; make a lottery,
And by device let blockish Ajax draw
The sort to fight with Hector: among ourselves
Give him allowance for the better man.¹⁰
For that will physic the great Myrmidon,
Who broils in loud applause; and make him fall
His crest, that prouder than blue Iris bends.
If the dull, brainless Ajax come safe off,
We'll dress him up in voices: if he fail,
Yet go we under our opinion still,
That we have better men. But, hit or miss,

¹ feeds: in quartos. ² compass: in folio. ³ I'll be: in folio. ⁴ mould: in folio. ⁵ pawn: in folio. ⁶ Yes: in folio. ⁷ yet show: in folio. ⁸ Shall show the better: in folio. ⁹ wear: in folio. ¹⁰ As the worthier.

Our project's life this shape of sense assumes,—
Ajax employ'd plucks down Achilles' plumes.

Nest. Now I begin to relish thy advice;
And I will give a taste of it forthwith

To Agamemnon: go we to him straight.
Two curs shall tame each other: pride alone
Must tarre¹ the mastiffs on, as 't were their bone.

[Exeunt]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Another Part of the Grecian Camp.

Enter AJAX and THERSITES.

Ajax. Thersites!

Ther. Agamemnon—how if he had boils? full, all over, generally?

Ajax. Thersites!

Ther. And those boils did run?—Say so.—did not the general run then? were not that a botchy sore?

Ajax. Dog!

Ther. Then would come some matter from him: I see none now.

Ajax. Thou bitch-volf's son, canst thou not hear? Feel then.

[Strikes him.]

Ther. The plague of Greece upon thee, thou mongrel beef-witted lord!

Ajax. Speak then, thou vinew'd²st³ leaven, speak: I will beat thee into handsomeness.

Ther. I shall sooner rail thee into wit and holiness: but, I think, thy horse will sooner con an oration, than thou learn a prayer without book. Thou canst strike, canst thou? a red murrain o' thy jade's tricks!

Ajax. Toads-stool, learn me the proclamation.

Ther. Dost thou think I have no sense, thou strik'st me thus?

Ajax. The proclamation,—

Ther. Thou art proclaimed a fool, I think.

Ajax. Do not, porcupine, do not: my fingers itch.

Ther. I would, thou didst itch from head to foot, and I had the scratching of thee: I would make thee the loathomest scab in Greece.³ When thou art forth in the incursions, thou strikest as slow as another.

Ajax. I say, the proclamation,—

Ther. Thou grumblest and raillest every hour on Achilles; and thou art as full of envy at his greatness, as Cerberus is at Proserpina's beauty, ay, that thou barkest at him.

Ajax. Mistress Thersites:

Ther. Thou shouldst strike him.

Ajax. Cobloaf!

Ther. He would pun⁴ thee into shivers with his fist, as a sailor breaks a biscuit.

Ajax. You whoreson cur!

[Beating him.]

Ther. Do, do.

Ajax. Thou stool for a witch!

Ther. Ay, do, do; thou sodden-witted lord! thou hast no more brain than I have in mine elbows; an assinego⁵ may tutor thee: thou scurvy valiant ass! thou art here but to thrash Trojans; and thou art bought and sold among those of any wit, like a Barbarian slave. If thou use to beat me, I will begin at thy heel, and tell what thou art by inches, thou thing of no bowels, thou!

Ajax. You dog!

Ther. You scurvy lord!

Ajax. You cur!

[Beating him.]

Ther. Mar's idiot! do, rudeness; do, camel; do, do.

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.

Achil. Why, how now, Ajax! wherefore do you this?

How now, Thersites! what's the matter, man?

Ther. You see him there, do you?

Achil. Ay; what's the matter?

Ther. Nay, look upon him.

Achil. So I do: what's the matter?

Ther. Nay, but regard him well.

Achil. Well, why I do so.

Ther. But yet you look not well upon him; for whosoever you take him to be, he is Ajax Achil. I know that, fool.

Ther. Ay, but that fool knows not himself.

Ajax. Therefore I beat thee.

Ther. Lo, lo, lo, lo, what modicums of wit he utters! his orations have ears thus long. I have bobbed his brain, more than he has beat my bones: I will buy nine sparrows for a penny, and his pia mater is not worth the ninth part of a sparrow. This lord, Achilles, Ajax, who wears his wit in his belly, and his guts in his head, I'll tell you what I say of him.

Achil. What?

Ther. I say, this Ajax—

Achil. Nay, good Ajax. [AJAX offers to strike him.]

Ther. Has not so much wit—

Achil. Nay, I must hold you.

Ther. As will stop the eye of Helen's needle, for whom he comes to fight.

Achil. Peace, fool!

Ther. I would have peace and quietness, but the fool will not: he there; that he, look you there.

Ajax. O, thou damned cur! I shall—

Achil. Will you set your wit to a fool's?

Ther. No, I warrant you; for a fool's will shame it.

Patr. Good words, Thersites.

Achil. What's the quarrel?

Ajax. I bade the vile owl go learn me the tenour of the proclamation, and he rails upon me.

Ther. I serve thee not.

Ajax. Well, go to, go to.

Ther. I serve here voluntary.

Achil. Your last service was sufferance, 't was not voluntary; no man is beaten voluntary: Ajax was here the voluntary, and you as under an impress.

Ther. Even so?—a great deal of your wit, too, lies in your sinews, or else there be liars. Hector shall have a great catch, if he knock out either of your brains: he were as good crack a fusty nut with no kernel

Achil. What, with me too, Thersites?

Ther. There's Ulysses, and old Nestor.—whose wit was mouldy ere your grandsires had nails on their toes,—yoke you like draught oxen, and make you plough up the war.

Achil. What? what?

Ther. Yes, good sooth: to Achilles! to Ajax! to—

Ajax. I shall cut out your tongue.

Ther. 'T is no matter; I shall speak as much as thou, afterwards.

Patr. No more words, Thersites; peace!

Ther. I will hold my peace when Achilles' brach' bids me, shall I?

Achil. There's for you, Patroclus.

Ther. I will see you hanged, like clotpoles, ere I come any more to your tents: I will keep where there is stir stirring, and leave the faction of fools. [Exit.]

Patr. A good riddance.

Achil. Marry, this, sir, is proclaimed through all our host:—

That Hector, by the fifth hour of the sun, Will, with a trumpet, 'twixt our tents and Troy, To-morrow morning call some knight to arms, That hath a stomach; and such a one, that dare Maintain—I know not what: 't is trash. Farewell.

Ajox. Farewell. Who shall answer him?

Achil. I know not: it is put to lottery; otherwise, He knew his man.

Ajox. O! meaning you.—I will go learn more of it. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—TROY. A Room in PRIAM'S Palace.

Enter PRIAM, HECTOR, TROILUS, PARIS, and HELENUS.

Pri. After so many hours, lives, speeches spent, This once again says Nestor from the Greeks:—

'Deliver Helen, and all damage else—

As honour, loss of time, travail, expence.

Wounds, friends, and what else dear that is consum'd

In hot digestion of this comorant war,—

Shall be struck off:—Hector, what say you to 't?

Hect. Though no man lesser fears the Greeks than I, As far as toucheth my particular,

Yet, dread Priam,

There is no lady of more softer bowels,

More spongy to suck in the sense of fear.

More ready to cry out—"Who knows what follows?"

Than Hector is. The wound of peace is surety,

Surety secure; but modest doubt is call'd

The beacon of the wise, the tent that searches

To the bottom of the worst. Let Helen go:

Since the first sword was drawn about this question,

Every tittle soul, 'mongst many thousand dismes¹,

Hath been as dear as Helen; I mean, of ours:

If we have lost so many tenths of ours.

To guard a thing not ours, nor worth to us,

Had it our name, the value of one ten,

What merit's in that reason which denies

The yielding of her up?

Tro. Fie, fie! my brother

Weigh you the worth and honour of a king,

So great as our dread father, in a scale

Of common ounces? will you with counters sum

The past-proportion of his infinite?

And buckle in a waist most fathomless.

With spans and inches so diminutive

As fears and reasons? fie, for godly shame!

Hec. No marvel, though you bite so sharp at reasons.

You are so empty of them. Should not our father

Bear the great sway of his affairs with reasons.

Because your speech hath none, that tells him so?

Tro. You are for dreams and slumbers, brother

priest:

You fur your gloves with reason. Here are your reasons:

You know, an enemy intends you harm.

You know, a sword employ'd is perilous.

And reason flies the object of all harm.

Who marvels, then, when Helenus beholds

A Grecian and his sword, if he do set

The very wings of reason to his heels,

And fly like chidden Mercury from Jove.

Or like a star dis-orb'd?—Nay, if we talk of reason,

Let's shut our gates, and sleep: manhood and honour Should have hare hearts, would they but fat their thoughts

With this cramm'd reason: reason and respect

Make livers pale, and lustihood deject.

Hect. Brother, she is not worth what she doth cost The holding.

Tro. What is aught, but as 't is valued?

Hect. But value dwells not in particular will;

It holds his estimate and dignity,

As well wherein 't is precious of itself,

As in the prizer. 'T is mad idolatry,

To make the service greater than the god;

And the will dotes, that is inclinable²

To what infection itself affects,

Without some image of th' affected merit.

Tro. I take to-day a wife, and my election

Is led on in the conduct of my will;

My will enkindled by mine eyes and ears,

Two traded pilots 'twixt the dangerous shores

Of will and judgment. How may I avoid,

Although my will distaste what it elected.

The wife I chose? there can be no evasion

To blench³ from this, and to stand firm by honour.

We turn not back the silks upon the merchant,

When we have soil'd⁴ them; nor the remainder viand

We do not throw in unrespective sieve,

Because we now are full. It was thought meet,

Paris should do some vengeance on the Greeks:

Your breath of full consent bellied his sails;

The seas and winds (old wranglers) took a truce,

And did him service; he touch'd the ports desir'd;

And for an old aunt, whom the Greeks held captive, He brought a Grecian queen, whose youth and freshness

Wrinkles Apollo's, and makes pale⁵ the morning.

Why keep we her? the Grecians keeps our aunt.

Is she worth keeping? why, she is a pearl,

Whose price hath launch'd above a thousand ships,

And turn'd crown'd kings to merchants.

If you'll avouch 't was wisdom Paris went,

As you must need, for you all cry'd—"Go, go;"

If you'll confess, he brought home noble prize,

As you must needs, for you all clapp'd your hands,

And cry'd—"Inestimable!" why do you now

The issue of your proper wisdoms rate,

And do a deed that fortune never did.

Beggar the estimation which you priz'd

Richer than sea and land? O, theft most base,

That we have stolen what we do fear to keep!

But, thieves, unworthy of a thing so stolen,

That in their country did them that disgrace,

We fear to warrant in our native place!

Cas. [Within.] Cry, Trojans, cry!

Pri. What noise? what shriek is this?

Tro. 'T is our mad sister: I do know her voice.

Cas. [Within.] Cry, Trojans!

Hect. It is Cassandra.

Enter CASSANDRA, raving.

Cas. Cry, Trojans, cry! lend me ten thousand eyes

And I will fill them with prophetic tears.

Hect. Peace, sister, peace!

Cas. Virgins and boys, mid-age and wrinkled eld,

Soft infancy, that nothing canst but cry,

Add to my clamours! let us pay betimes

A moiety of that mass of moan to come.

Cry, Trojans, cry! practise your eyes with tears

Troy must not be, nor goodly Ilion stand;

Our fire-brand brother, Paris, burns us all.

Cry, Trojans, cry ! a Helen, and a woe !
Cry, cry ! Troy burns, or else let Helen go. [Exit.

Hect. Now, youthful Troilus, do not these high strains

Of divination in our sister work
Some touches of remorse ? or is your blood
So madly hot, that no discourse of reason,
Nor fear of bad success in a bad cause,
Can qualify the same ?

Tro. Why, brother Hector,
We may not think the justness of each act
Such and no other than event doth forx it ;
Nor once deject the courage of our minds,
Because Cassandra's mad : her brain-sick raptures
Cannot distaste the goodness of a quarrel,
Which hath our several honours all engag'd
To make it gracious. For my private part,
I am no more touch'd than all Priam's sons ;
And Jove forbid, there should be done amongst us
Such things as might offend the weakest spleen
To fight for, and maintain.

Par. Else might the world convince¹ of levity,
As well my undertakings, as your counsels ;
But, I attest the gods, your full consent
Gave wings to my propension, and cut off
All fears attending on so dire a project :
For what, alas ! can these my single arms ?
What propugnation is in one man's valour,
To stand the push and enmity of those
This quarrel would excite ? Yet, I protest,
Were I alone to poise² the difficulties,
And had as ample power as I have will,
Paris should ne'er retract what he hath done,
Nor faint in the pursuit.

Pri. Paris, you speak
Like one besotted on your sweet delights :
You have the honey still, but these the gall.
So to be valiant is no praise at all.

Par. Sir, I propose not merely to myself
The pleasures such a beauty brings with it,
But I would have the soil of her fair rape
Wip'd off in honourable keeping her.
What treason were it to the ransack'd queen,
Disgrace to your great worths, and shame to me,
Now to deliver her possession up,
On terms of base compulsion ? Can it be,
That so degenerate a strain as this,
Should once set footing in your generous bosoms ?
There's not the meanest spirit on our party,
Without a heart to dare, or sword to draw,
When Helen is defended : nor none so noble,
Whose life were ill bestow'd, or death unfam'd,
Where Helen is the subject : then, I say,
Well may we fight for her, whom we know well,
The world's large spaces cannot parallel.

Hect. Paris, and Troilus, you have both said well ;
And on the cause and question now in hand
Have glaz'd, — but superficially ; not much
Unlike young men, whom Aristotle thought
Unfit to hear moral philosophy.
The reasons you allege do more conduce
To the hot passion of distemper'd blood,
Than to make up a free determination
Twixt right and wrong ; for pleasure, and revenge,
Have ears more deaf than adders to the voice
Of any true decision. Nature craves,
All dues be render'd to their owners : now,
What nearer debt in all humanity
Than wife is to the husband ? if this law

Of nature be corrupted through affection,
And that great minds, of partial indulgence
To their benumbed wills, resist the same.
There is a law in each well-order'd nation,
To curb those raging appetites that are
Most disobedient and refractory.
If Helen, then, be wife to Sparta's king,
As it is known she is, these moral laws
Of nature, and of nation, speak aloud
To have her back return'd : thus to persist
In doing wrong extenuates not wrong,
But makes it much more heavy. Hector's opinion
Is this, in way of truth : yet, ne'ertheless,
My spritely brethren, I propend to you
In resolution to keep Helen still ;
For 't is a cause that hath no mean dependance
Upon our joint and several dignities.

Tro. Why, there you touch'd the life of our design
Were it not glory that we more affected,
Than the performance of our heaving spleens,
I would not wish a drop of Trojan blood
Spent more in her defence. But, worthy Hector,
She is a theme of honour and renown ;
A spur to valiant and magnanimous deeds ;
Whose present courage may beat down our foes.
And fame in time to come canonize us :
For, I presume, brave Hector would not lose
So rich advantage of a promis'd glory,
As smiles upon the forehead of this action,
For the wide world's revenue.

Hect. I am yours,
You valiant offspring of great Priamus. —
I have a roisting challenge sent amongst
The dull and factious nobles of the Greeks,
Will strike amazement to their drowsy spirits.
I was advertis'd, their great general slept,
Whilst emulation in the army crept :
This, I presume, will wake him. [Exeunt

SCENE III.—The Grecian Camp. Before ACHILLES' Tent.

Enter THERSITES.

Ther. How now, Thersites ! what ! lost in the labyrinth of thy fury ? Shall the elephant Ajax carry it thus ? he beats me, and I rail at him : O worthy satisfaction ! would, it were otherwise ; that I could beat him, whilst he railed at me. 'Sfoot, I'll learn to conjure and raise devils, but I'll see some issue of my spiteful execrations. Then, there's Achilles, — a rare engineer. If Troy be not taken till these two undermine it, the walls will stand till they fall of themselves. [Kneels.] O, thou great thunder-darter of Olympus ! forget that thou art Jove the king of gods : and, Mercury, lose all the serpentine craft of thy Caduceus, if ye take not that little, little, less-than-little wit from them that they have : which short-armed⁴ ignorance itself knows is so abundant scarce, it will not in circumvention deliver a fly from a spider, without drawing their massy irons and cutting the web. After this, the vengeance on the whole camp ! or, rather the Neapolitan⁵ bone-ache : for that, methinks, is the curse dependant on those that war for a placket. [Rises.] I have said my prayers, and devil, envy, say Amen ! What, ho ! my lord Achilles !

Enter PATROCLUS.

Patr. Who's there ? Thersites ? Good Thersites, come in and rail.

Ther. If I could have remembered a gilt counterfeit, thou wouldest not have slipped out of my contemplation; but it is no matter; thyself upon thyself! The common curse of mankind, folly and ignorance, be thine in great revenue! heaven bless thee from a tutor, and discipline come not near thee! Let thy blood be thy direction till thy death! then, if she, that lays thee out, says thou art a fair corpse, I'll be sworn and sworn upon't she never shrouded any but lazars. Amen. Where's Achilles?

Patr. What! art thou devout? wast thou in prayer?

Ther. Ay, the heavens hear me!

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Who's there?

Patr. Thersites my lord.

Achil. Where, where?—Art thou come? Why, my cheese, my digestion, why hast thou not served thyself in to my table so many meals? Come; what's Agamemnon?

Ther. Thy commander, Achilles. Then, tell me, Patroclus, what's Achilles?

Patr. Thy lord, Thersites. Then, tell me, I pray thee, what's thyself?

Ther. Thy knower, Patroclus. Then tell me, Patroclus, what art thou?

Patr. Thou must tell, that knowest.

Achil. O! tell, tell.

Ther. I'll decline the whole question. Agamemnon commands Achilles: Achilles is my lord; I am Patroclus' knower; and Patroclus is a fool.

Patr. You rascal!

Ther. Peace, fool! I have not done.

Achil. He is a privileged man.—Proceed, Thersites. Ther. Agamemnon is a fool: Achilles is a fool; Thersites is a fool; and, as aforesaid, Patroclus is a fool.

Achil. Derive this: come.

Ther. Agamemnon is a fool to offer to command Achilles; Achilles is a fool to be commanded of Agamemnon; Thersites is a fool to serve such a fool; and Patroclus is a fool positive.

Patr. Why am I a fool?

Ther. Make that demand of thy Creator.¹—It suffices me, thou art. Look you, who comes here?

Enter AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, NESTOR, DIOMEDES, and AJAX.

Achil. Patroclus, I'll speak with nobody.—Come in with me, Thersites. [Exit.]

Ther. Here is such patchery,² such juggling, and such knavery! all the argument is a cuckold, and a whore; a good quarrel, to draw emulous factions, and bleed to death upon. Now, the dry serpig³ on the subject, and war and lechery confound all! [Exit.]

Agam. Where is Achilles?

Patr. Within his tent: but ill-dispos'd, my lord.

Agam. Let it be known to him that we are here.

We sent⁴ our messengers; and we lay by

Our appertainments visiting of him:

Let him be told so, lest,⁵ perchance, he think

We dare not move the question of our place,

Or know not what we are.

Patr. I shall say so to him. [Exit.]

Ulyss. We saw him at the opening of his tent: He is not sick.

Ajax. Yes, lion-sick sick of proud heart: you may call it melancholy, if you will favour the man; but, by my head, 'tis pride: but why? why? let him show us a cause.—A word, my lord.

[Taking AGAMEMNON aside.]

Nest. What moves Ajax thus to bay at him?

Ulyss. Achilles hath overweighed his fool from him.

Nest. Who? Thersites?

Ulyss. He.

Nest. Then will Ajax lack matter, if he have lost his argument.

Ulyss. No; you see, he is his argument, that has his argument, Achilles.

Nest. All the better; their faction is more our wish, than their faction: but it was a strong composition, a fool could disunite.

Ulyss. The amity that wisdom knits not, folly may easily untie. Here comes Patroclus.

Nest. No Achilles with him.

Re-enter PATROCLUS.

Ulyss. The elephant hath joints, but none for ourtesy: his legs are legs for necessity, not for flexure.

Patr. Achilles bids me say, he is much sorry,

If any thing more than your sport and pleasure

Did move your greatness, and this noble state,

To call upon him: he hopes, it is no other,

But, for your health and your digestion sake,

An after-dinner's breath.

Agam. Hear you, Patroclus.

We are too well acquainted with these answers;

But his evasion, wing'd thus swift with scorn,

Cannot outfly our apprehensions.

Much attribute he hath, and much the reason

Why we ascribe it to him; yet all his virtues

Not virtuously on his own part beheld,

Do in our eyes begin to lose their gloss;

Yea, like fair fruit in an unwholesome dish,

Are like to rot untasted. Go and tell him,

We come to speak with him; and you shall not sin

If you do say, we think him over-proud,

And under-honest; in self-assumption greater,

Than in the note of judgment; and worthier than

Here tend the savage strangeness he puts on, [himself]

Disguise the holy strength of their command,

And underwrite in an observing kind

His humorous predominance; yea, watch

His pettish luns,⁶ his ebbs, his flows, as if

The passage and whole carriage of this action

Rode on his tide. Go, tell him this: and add,

That, if he overhold his price so much,

We'll none of him; but let him, like an engine

Not portable, lie under this report—

Bring action hither, this cannot go to war.

A stirring dwarf we do allowance give

Before a sleeping giant:—tell him so.

Patr. I shall; and bring his answer presently. [Exit]

Agam. In second voice we'll not be satisfied,

We come to speak with him.—Ulysses, enter you.

[Exit ULYSSES]

Ajax. What is he more than another?

Agam. No more than what he thinks he is.

Ajax. Is he so much? Do you not think, he thinks himself a better man than I am?

Agam. No question.

Ajax. Will you subscribe his thought, and say he is?

Agam. No, noble Ajax: you are as strong, as valiant, as wise, no less noble, much more gentle, and altogether more tractable.

Ajax. Why should a man be proud? How doth pride grow? I know not what pride is.

Agam. Your mind is the clearer, Ajax, and your virtues the fairer. He that is proud, eats up himself: pride is his own glass, his own trumpet, his own chronicle; and whatever praises itself but in the deed, devours the deed in the praise.

¹ of the prover: in quartos. ² Patching up to deceive; roguery. ³ A kind of tetter. ⁴ He sent: in folio. Theobald reads: He sent of, so: in folio. ⁵ Lunacies. ⁶ Luns: in folio.

Ajax. I do hate a proud man, as I hate the engendering of toads.

Nest. Yet he loves himself: is't not strange? [Aside. Re-enter ULYSSES.

Ulyss. Achilles will not to the field to-morrow.

Agam. What 's his excuse?

Ulyss. He doth rely on none;

But carries on the stream of his dispose

Without observance or respect of any,

In will peculiar, and in self-admission.

Agam. Why will he not, upon our fair request, Untire his person, and share the air with us?

Ulyss. Things small as nothing, for request's sake only,

He makes important. Possess'd he is with greatness;

And speaks not to himself, but with a pride

That quarrels at self-breath: imagin'd worth

Holds in his blood such swoln and hot discourse.

That, 'twixt his mental and his active parts,

Kingdom'd Achilles in commotion rages,

And batters down himself.¹ What should I say?

He is so plaguily proud, that the death tokens of it Cry—"No recovery."

Agam. Let Ajax go to him.—

Dear lord, go you and greet him in his tent:

'Tis said, he holds you well; and will be led,

At your request, a little from himself.

Ulyss. O Agamemnon! let it not be so:

We 'll consecrate the steps that Ajax makes

When they go from Achilles. Shall the proud lord,

That bastes his arrogance with his own seam,²

And never suffers matter of the world

Enter his thoughts,—save such as doth revolve

and ruminate himself,—shall he be worshipp'd

Of that we hold an idol more than he?

No, this thrice worthy and right valiant lord

Must not so stale his palm, nobly acquir'd;

Nor, by my will, assubjugate his merit,

As amply titled³ as Achilles is, by going to Achilles:

That were to enlard his fat-already pride;

And add more coals to Cancer, when he burns

With entertaining great Hyperion.

This lord go to him? Jupiter forbid;

And say in thunder—"Achilles, go to him."

Nest. O! this is well; he rubs the vein of him.

[Aside.

Dio. And how his silence drinks up this applause!

[Aside.

Ajax. If I go to him, with my armed fist

I'll pash him o'er the face.

Agam. O, no! you shall not go.

Ajax. An a' be proud with me, I 'll pheeze⁴ his pride.

Let me go to him.

Ulyss. Not for the worth that hangs upon our quarrel.

Ajax. A paltry, insolent fellow!

Nest. How he describes himself? [Aside.

Ajax. Can he not be sociable?

Ulyss. The raven

Chides blackness. [Aside.

Ajax. I'll let his humours blood.

Agam. He will be the physician, that should be the patient. [Aside.

Ajax. An all men were o' my mind,—

Ulyss. Wit would be out of fashion. [Aside.

Ajax. 'A should not bear it so,

'A should eat swords first: shall pride carry it?

Nest. An 't would, you 'd carry half. [Aside.

Ulyss. 'A would have ten shares. [Aside.

Ajax. I will knead him; I will make him supple.

Nest. He 's not yet thorough warm; force him with praises.

Pour in, pour in; his ambition is dry. [Aside.

Ulyss. My lord, you feed too much on this dislike

[To AGAMEMNON.

Nest. Our noble general, do not do so.

Dio. You must prepare to fight without Achilles.

Ulyss. Why, 't is this naming of him does him harm.

Here is a man—but 't is before his face;

I will be silent.

Nest. Wherefore should you so?

He is not emulous, as Achilles is.

Ulyss. Know the whole world, he is as valiant.

Ajax. A whoreson dog, that shall palter thus with us!

Would he were a Trojan!

Nest. What a vice

Were it in Ajax now—

Ulyss. If he were proud?

Dio. Or covetous of praise?

Ulyss. Ay, or surly borne?

Dio. Or strange, or self-affected?

Ulyss. Thank the heavens, lord, thou art of sweet composure:

Praise him that got thee, her that gave thee suck:

Fam'd be thy tutor, and thy parts of nature

Thrice-fam'd, beyond all erudition;

But he that disciplin'd thine arms to fight,

Let Mars divide eternity in twain,

And give him half; and for thy vigour,

Bull-bearing Milo his addition yield

To sinewy Ajax. I will not praise thy wisdom,

Which, like a bourn, a pale, a shore, confines

Thy spacious and dilated parts: here 's Nestor,

Instructed by the antiquary times,

He must, he is, he cannot but be wise;

But pardon, father Nestor, were your days

As green as Ajax, and your brain so temper'd,

You should not have the eminence of him,

But be as Ajax.

Ajax. Shall I call you father?

Nest. Ay, my good son.

Dio. Be rul'd by him, lord Ajax.

Ulyss. There is no tarrying here: the hart Achilles

Keeps thicket.—Please it our great⁵ general

To call together all his state of war:

Fresh kings are come to Troy; to-morrow,

We must with all our main of power stand fast:

And here 's a lord,—come knights from east to west,

And cull their flower, Ajax shall cope the best.

Agam. Go we to council: let Achilles sleep.

Light boats sail⁶ swift, though greater hulks⁷ draw deep. [Exeunt.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Troy. A Room in PRIAM'S Palace.

Enter PANDARUS and a Servant.

Pan. Friend you; pray you, a word. Do not you follow the young lord Paris?

Serv. Ay, sir, when he goes before me.

Pan. You depend upon him, I mean?

Serv. Sir, I do depend upon the lord.

Pan. You depend upon a noble gentleman: I must needs praise him.

Serv. The lord be praised!

Pan. You know me, do you not?

Serv. Faith, sir, superficially.

Pan. Friend, know me better. I am the lord Pandarus.

Serv. I hope, I shall know your honour better.

Pan. I do desire it.

Serv. You are in the state of grace. [Music within.]

Pan. Grace! not so, friend; honour and lordship are my titles.—What music is this?

Serv. I do but partly know, sir; it is music in parts.

Pan. Know you the musicians?

Serv. Wholly, sir.

Pan. Who play they to?

Serv. To the hearers, sir.

Pan. At whose pleasure, friend?

Serv. At mine, sir; and theirs that love music.

Pan. Command, I mean, friend.

Serv. Who shall I command, sir?

Pan. Friend, we understand not one another: I am too courtly, and thou art too cunning. At whose request do these men play?

Serv. That's to't, indeed, sir. Marry, sir, at the request of Paris, my lord, who is there in person; with him, the mortal Venus, the heart-blood of beauty, love's invisible soul—

Pan. Who? my cousin Cressida?

Serv. No, sir, Helen: could you not find out that by her attributes?

Pan. It should seem, fellow, that thou hast not seen the lady Cressida. I come to speak with Paris from the prince Troilus: I will make a complimentary assault upon him, for my business seeths.

Serv. Sudden business: there's a stewed phrase, indeed.

Enter PARIS and HELEN, attended.

Pan. Fair be to you, my lord, and to all this fair company! fair desires, in all fair measure, fairly guide them; especially to you, fair queen: fair thoughts be your fair pillow!

Helen. Dear lord, you are full of fair words.

Pan. You speak your fair pleasure, sweet queen.—Fair prince, here is good broken music.

Par. You have broke it, cousin; and, by my life, you shall make it whole again: you shall piece it out with a piece of your performance.—Nell, he is full of harmony.

Pan. Truly, lady, no.

Helen. O, sir!—

Par. Rude, in sooth; in good sooth, very rude.

Pan. Well said, my lord. Well, you say so in fits.

Pan. I have business to my lord, dear queen.—My lord, will you vouchsafe me a word?

Helen. Nay, this shall not hedge us out: we'll hear you sing, certainly.

Pan. Well, sweet queen, you are pleasant with me. But, marry, thus, my lord.—My dear lord, and most esteemed friend, your brother Troilus—

Helen. My lord Pandarus; honey-sweet lord,—

Pan. Go to, sweet queen, go to:—commends himself, most affectionately to you.

Helen. You shall not bob us out of our melody: if you do, our melancholy upon your head.

Pan. Sweet queen, sweet queen; that's a sweet queen,—i' faith—

Helen. And to make a sweet lady sad is a sour offence.

Pan. Nay, that shall not serve your turn: that shal' it not, in truth, la! Nay, I care not for such words: no, no.—And, my lord, he desires you, that if the king call for him at supper, you will make his excuse.

Helen. My lord Pandarus,—

Pan. What says my sweet queen,—my very very sweet queen?

Par. What exploit's in hand? where sups he to night?

Helen. Nay, but my lord,—

Pan. What says my sweet queen?—My cousin will fall out with you. You must not know where he sups.

Par. I'll lay my life,¹ with my dispraiser,² Cressida

Pan. No, no; no such matter, you are wide. Come, your dispraiser is sick.

Par. Well, I'll make excuse.

Pan. Ay, good my lord. Why should you say Cressida? no, your poor dispraiser's sick.

Par. I spy.

Pan. You spy! what do you spy?—Come, give me an instrument.—Now, sweet queen.

Helen. Why, this is kindly done.

Pan. My niece is horribly in love with a thing you have, sweet queen.

Helen. She shall have it, my lord, if it be not my lord Paris.

Pan. He! no, she'll none of him; they two are twain

Helen. Falling in, after falling out, may make them three.

Pan. Come, come, I'll hear no more of this. I'll sing you a song now.

Helen. Ay, ay, pr'ythee now. By my troth, sweet lord, thou hast a fine forehead.

Pan. Ay, you may, you may.

Helen. Let thy song be love: this love will undo us all. O, Cupid, Cupid, Cupid!

Pan. Love? ay, that it shall, i' faith.

Par. Ay, good now, love, love, nothing but love.

Pan. In good troth, it begins so:

Love, love, nothing but love, still more!

For oh! loves bow

Shoots buck and doe:

The shaft confounds,

Not that it wounds

But tickles still the sore.

These lovers cry—Oh! oh! they die!

Yet that which seems a wound to kill,

Doth turn oh! oh! to ha! ha! he!

So dying love lives still:

Oh! oh! a while, but ha! ha! ha!

Oh! oh! groans out for ha! ha! ha!—

Hey ho!

Helen. In love, i' faith, to the very tip of the nose.

Par. He eats nothing but doves, love.

Pan. And that breeds hot blood, and hot blood begets hot thoughts, and hot thoughts beget hot deeds, and hot deeds is love.

Helen. Is this the generation of love? hot blood, not thoughts, and hot deeds?—Why, they are vipers: is love a generation of vipers?

Pan. Sweet lord, who's a-field to-day?

Par. Hector, Deiphobus, Helenus, Antenor, and all the gallantry of Troy: I would fain have armed to-day, but my Nell would not have it so. How chance my brother Troilus went not?

Helen. He hangs the lip at something.—You know all, lord Pandarus.

Pan. Not I, honey-sweet queen.—I long to hear how they sped to-day.—You'll remember your brother's excuse?

Par. To a hair.

Pan. Farewell, sweet queen.

Helen. Commend me to your niece.

Pan. I will, sweet queen.

[Exit.]

[A Retreat sounded.]

Helen. They're come from field: let us to Priam's hall,

To greet the warriors.

Par. Sweet Helen, I must woo you

To help unarm our Hector: his stubborn buckles,

With these your white enchanting fingers touch'd,

Shall more obey than to the edge of steel,

Or force of Greekish sinews: you shall do more,

Than all the island kings, disarm great Hector.

Helen. 'T will make us proud to be his servant, Paris:

Yea, what he shall receive of us in duty,

Gives us more palm in beauty than we have:

Yea, overshines ourself.

Par. Sweet, above thought I love thee. [Exit]

SCENE II.—The Same. PANDARUS' Orchard.

Enter PANDARUS and a Servant, meeting.

Pan. How now! where's thy master? at my cousin Cressida's?

Serv. No, sir; he stays for you to conduct him thither.

Enter TROILUS.

Pan. O! here he comes.—How now, how now!

Tro. Sirrah, walk off.

[Exit Servant.]

Pan. Have you seen my cousin?

Tro. No, Pandarus: I stalk about her door,

Like a strange soul upon the Stygian banks

Staying for waftage. O! be thou my Charon,

And give me swift transporance to those fields,

Where I may wallow in the lily beds

Propos'd for the deserfer. O. gentle Pandarus!

From Cupid's shoulder pluck his painted wings,

And fly with me to Cressid.

Pan. Walk here i' the orchard: I'll bring her straight.

[Exit PANDARUS.]

Tro. I am giddy: expectation whirls me round.

Th' imaginary relish is so sweet

That it enchants my sense; what will it be,

When that the watery palate tastes indeed

Love's thrice-repured nectar? death, I fear me;

Swooning destruction; or some joy too fine,

Too subtle-potent, tun'd² too sharp in sweetness,

For the capacity of my ruder powers.

I fear it much; and I do fear besides,

That I shall lose distinction in my joys,
As doth a battle, when they charge on heaps
The enemy flying.

Re-enter PANDARUS.

Pan. She's making her ready; she'll come straight, you must be witty now. She does so blush, and fetches her wind so short, as if she were frayed with a sprite: I'll fetch her. It is the prettiest villain: she fetches her breath so short as a new-ta'en sparrow.

[Exit PANDARUS.]

Tro. Even such a passion doth embrace my bosom: My heart beats thicker than a feverous pulse, And all my powers do their bestowing lose, Like vassalage at unawares encountering The eye of majesty.

Enter PANDARUS and CRESSIDA.

Pan. Come, come, what need you blush? shame's a baby.—Here she is now: swear the oaths now to her, that you have sworn to me.—What! are you gone again? you must be watched ere you be made tame. must you? Come your ways, come your ways: an you draw backward, we'll put you i' the fills.³—Why do you not speak to her?—Come, draw this curtain, and let's see your picture. [Unveiling her.]⁴ Alas the day, how loath you are to offend daylight! an't were dark, you'd close sooner. So, so; rub on,⁵ and kiss the mistress.⁶ How now! a kiss in fee-farm?⁷ build there, carpenter, the air is sweet. Nay, you shall fight your hearts out, ere I part you. The falcon as the tercel,⁸ for all the ducks i' the river: go to, go to.

Tro. You have bereft me of all words, lady.

Pan. Words pay no debts, give her deeds; but she'll bereave you of the deeds too, if she call your activity in question. What! billing again? Here's—“In witness whereof the parties interchangeably”—Come in, come in: I'll go get a fire. [Exit PANDARUS.]

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Tro. O Cressida! how often have I wished me thus?

Cres. Wished, my lord?—The gods grant!—O my lord!

Tro. What should they grant? what makes this pretty abruption? What too curious dreg espies my sweet lady in the fountain of our love?

Cres. More dregs than water, if my fears have eyes.

Tro. Fears make devils of cherubins; they never see truly.

Cres. Blind fear, that seeing reason leads, finds safer footing than blind reason, stumbling without fear: to fear the worst, oft cures the worse.

Tro. O! let my lady apprehend no fear: in all Cupid's pageant there is presented no monster.

Cres. Nor nothing monstrous neither?

Tro. Nothing, but our underakings: when we vow to weep seas, live in fire, eat rocks, tame tigers; thinking it harder for our mistress to devise imposition enough, than for us to undergo any difficulty imposed. This is the monstrosity in love, lady,—that the will is infinite, and the execution confined; that the desire is boundless, and the act a slave to limit.

Cres. They say, all lovers swear more performance than they are able, and yet reserve an ability that they never perform; vowing more than the perfection of ten, and discharging less than the tenth part of one. They that have the voice of lions, and the act of hares, are they not monsters?

Tro. Are there such? such are not we. Praise us as we are tasted; allow us as we prove; our head shall go bare, till merit crown it. No perfection in reversion shall have a praise in present: we will not name desert, before his birth; and, being born, his addition shall be humble. Few words to fair faith: Troilus shall be such to Cressid, as what envy can say worst, shall be a mock for his truth; and what truth can speak truest, not truer than Troilus.

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Re-enter PANDARUS.

Pan. What! blushing still? have you not done asking yet?

Cres. Well, uncle, what folly I commit, I dedicate to you.

Pan. I thank you for that: if my lord get a boy of you, you'll give him me. Be true to my lord; if he finely chide me for it.

Tro. You know now your hostages; your uncle's word, and my firm faith.

Pan. Nay, I'll give my word for her too. Our kindred, though they be long ere they are wooed, they are constant, being won: they are burs, I can tell you; they'll stick where they are thrown.

Cres. Boldness comes to me now, and brings me heart—

Prince Troilus, I have lov'd you night and day For many weary months.

Tro. Why was my Cressid, then, so hard to win?

Cres. Hard to seem won; but I was won, my lord, With the first glance that ever—Pardon me,— If I confess much, you will play the tyrant.

I love you now; but not, till now, so much

But I might master it.—In faith, I lie:

My thoughts were like unbridled children, grown Too headstrong for their mother: see, we fools!

Why have I blabb'd? who shall be true to us,

When we are so unsecret to ourselves?—

But, though I lov'd you well, I wou'd you not;

And yet, good faith, I wish'd myself a man,

Or that we women had men's privilege

Of speaking first. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue;

For, in this rapture, I shall surely speak

The thing I shall repent. See, see! your silence.

Cunning! in dumbness, from my weakness draws

My very soul of counsel.¹ Stop my mouth.

Tro. And shall, albeit sweet music issues hence.

[Kissing her.²

Pan. Pretty, if faith.

Cres. My lord, I do beseech you, pardon me;

'T was not my purpose thus to beg a kiss.

I am ashamed:—O heavens! what have I done?—

For this time will I take my leave, my lord.

Tro. Your leave, sweet Cressid?

Pan. Leave! an you take leave till to-morrow morning—

Cres. Pray you, content you.

Tro.

What offends you, lady?

Cres. Sir, mine own company.

Tro.

You cannot shun

Yourself.

Cres. Let me go and try.

I have a kind self³ that resides with you;

But an unkind self, that itself will leave

To be another's fool. I would be gone.—

Where is my wit? I know not what I speak⁴.

Tro. Well know they what they speak, that speak so wisely.

Cres. Perchance, my lord, I show more craft than love And fell so roundly to a large confession,

To angle for your thoughts; but you are wise,

Or else you love not, for to be wise, and love,

Exceeds man's might; that dwells with gods above.

Tro. O! that I thought it could be in a woman, (As, if it can, I will presume in you)

To feed for aye her lamp and flame of love;

To keep her constancy in plight and youth,

Outliving beauty's outward, with a mind

That doth renew swifter than blood decays:

Or, that persuasion could but thus convince me,

That my integrity and truth to you

Might be affronted with the match and weight

Of such a winnow'd purity in love;

How were I then uplifted! but, alas!

I am as true as truth's simplicity,

And simpler than the infancy of truth.

Cres. In that I'll war with you.

Tro.

O, virtuous fight!

When right with right wars who shall be most right.

True swains in love shall, in the world to come,

Approve their truths by Troilus: when their rhymes,

Full of protest, of oath, and big compare,

Want similes, truth tir'd with iteration,—

As true as steel, as plantage⁵ to the moon,

As sun to day, as turtle to her mate,

As iron to adamant, as earth to the centre.—

Yet, after all comparisons of truth,

As truth's authentic author to be cited,

As true as Troilus shall crown up the verse,

And sanctify the numbers.

Cres.

Prophet may you be!

If I be false, or swerve a hair from truth,

When time is old and hath forgot itself,

When waterdrops have worn the stones of Troy,

And blind oblivion swallow'd cities up,

And mighty states characterless are grated

To dusty nothing: yet let memory,

From false to false among false maids in love,

Upbraid my falsehood. When they have said—as false

As air, as water, wind, or sandy earth.

As fox to lamb, as wolf to heifer's calf,

Pard to the hind, or stepdame to her son,

Yea, let them say, to stick the heart of falsehood,

As false as Cressid. [Troilus kisses her.⁶

Pan. Go to, a bargain made: seal it, seal it; I'll be the witness.—Here I hold your hand: here, my cousin's:

if ever you prove false one to another, since I have taken such pains to bring you together, let all pitiful goers-between be called to the world's end after my name, call them all—Pandars: let all constant me-

be Troiluses, all false women Cressids, and all broken-between Pandars! say, amen.

Tro. Amen.

Cres. Amen.

Pan. Amen. Whereupon I will show you a chamber: which bed, because it shall not speak of your pretty encounters, press it to death: away! [Exeunt.⁷

And Cupid grant all tongue-tied maidens here,

Bed, chamber, Pandar to provide this gear! [Exit.⁸

SCENE III.—The Grecian Camp.

Enter AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, DIOMEDES, NESTOR, AJAX, MENELAUS, and CALCHAS.

Cal. Now, princes, for the service I have done you, Th' advantage of the time prompts me, aloud To call for recompense. Appeal¹ it to your mind, That, through the sight I bear in things above², I have abandon'd Troy, left my possession, Incurr'd a traitor's name; expos'd myself, From certain and possess'd conveniences, To doubtful fortunes; sequestering from me all That time, acquaintance, custom, and condition, Made tame and most familiar to my nature; And here, to do you service, am become As new into the world, strange, unacquainted: I do beseech you, as in way of taste, To give me now a little benefit, Out of those many register'd in promise, Which, you say, live to come in my behalf.

Agam. What wouldst thou of us, Trojan? Make demand.

Cal. You have a Trojan prisoner, call'd Antenor, Yesterday took: Troy holds him very dear. Oft have you, (often have you thanks therefore) Desir'd my Cressid in right great exchange, Whom Troy hath still denied; but this Antenor, I know, is such a wrest³ in their affairs, That their negotiations all must slack, Wanting his manage: and they will almost Give us a prince of blood, a son of Priam, In change of him: let him be sent, great princes, And he shall buy my daughter; and her presence Shall quite strike off all service I have done In most accepted pain.

Agam. Let Diomedes bear him, And bring us Cressid hither: Calchas shall have What he requests of us.—Good Diomed, Furnish you fairly for this interchange: Withal, bring word, if Hector will to-morrow Be answer'd in his challenge. Ajax is ready.

Dio. This shall I undertake; and 't is a burden Which I am proud to bear.

[Exeunt DIOMEDES and CALCHAS.]

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS, before their Tent.

Ulyss. Achilles stands? the entrance of his tent: Please it our general to pass strangely by him, As if he were forgot; and princes all, Lay negligent and loose regard upon him. I will come last: 't is like, he'll question me, Why such unplausible eyes are bent, why turn'd on him? If so, I have derision medicinal, To use between your strangeness and his pride, Which his own will shall have desire to drink. It may do good: pride hath no other glass To show itself, but pride; for supple knees Feed arrogance, and are the proud man's fees.

Agam. We'll execute your purpose, and put on A form of strangeness as we pass along: So do each lord: and either greet him not, Or else disdainfully, which shall shake him more Than if not look'd on. I will lead the way.

Achil. What! comes the general to speak with me? You know my mind: I'll fight no more 'gainst Troy.

Agam. What says Achilles? would he aught with us?

Nest. Would you, my lord, aught with the general?

Achil. No.

Nest. Nothing, my lord.

Agam. The better. [Exeunt AGAMEMNON and NESTOR]
Achil. Good day, good day.

Men. How do you? how do you? [Exit MENELAUS]
Achil. What! does the cuckold scorn me?

Ajax. How now, Patroclus!

Achil. Good morrow, Ajax.

Ajax. Ha?

Achil. Good morrow.

Ajax. Ay, and good next day too. [Exit AJAX]

Achil. What mean these fellows? Know they not Achilles?

Patr. They pass by strangely; they were us'd to bend, To send their smiles before them to Achilles; To come as humbly, as they us'd to creep To holy altars.

Achil. What! am I poor of late?

'T is certain, greatness, once fallen out with fortune, Must fall out with men too: what the declin'd is, He shall as soon read in the eyes of others, As feel in his own fall; for men, like butterflies, Show not their mealy wings but to the summer. And not a man, for being simply man, Hath any honour; but honour for those honours That are without him, as place, riches, favour, Prizes of accident as oft as merit: Which, when they fall, as being slippery standers, The love that lean'd on them, as slippery too, Doth one pluck down another, and together Die in the fall. But 't is not so with me: Fortune and I are friends: I do enjoy At ample point all that I did possess, Save these men's looks; who do, methinks, find out Something not worth in me such rich beholding As they have often given. Here is Ulysses: I'll interrupt his reading.—

How now, Ulysses!

Ulyss.

Now, great Thetis' son!

[Looking up from his book.]

Achil. What are you reading?

Ulyss.

A strange fellow here

Writes me, that man—how dearly ever parted⁴, How much in having, or without or in,— Cannot make boast to have that which he hath, Nor feels not what he owes, but by reflection; As when his virtues shining upon others Heat them, and they retort that heat again To the first giver.

Achil.

This is not strange, Ulysses.

The beauty that is borne here, in the face, The bearer knows not, but commends itself To others' eyes: nor doth the eye itself, That most pure spirit of sense, behold itself.⁵ Not going from itself: but eye to eye oppos'd Salutes each other with each other's form: For speculation turns not to itself, Till it hath travell'd, and is mirror'd⁶ there Where it may see itself. This is not strange at all

Ulyss. I do not strain at the position.

It is familiar, but at the author's drift: Who in his circumstance expressly proves, That no man is the lord of any thing, Though in and of him there be much consisting, Till he communicate his parts to others: Nor doth he of himself know them for aught Till he behold them form'd in the applause Where they are extended; which, like an arch, reverbates

Fronting the sun, receives and renders back
His figure and his heat. I was much wrapt in this ;
And apprehended here immediately
The unknown Ajax.

Heavens, what a man is there ! a very horse ;
That has he knows not what. Nature ! what things there are,

Most abject in regard, and dear in use ;
What things, again, most dear in the esteem,
And poor in worth. Now, shall we see to-morrow,
An act that very chance doth throw upon him,
Ajax renowned. O heavens ! what some men do,
While some men leave to do.
How some men creep in skittish fortune's hall,
Whiles others play the idiots in her eyes !
How one man eats into another's pride,
While pride is feasting in his wantonness !
To see these Grecian lords !—why, even already
They clap the lubber Ajax on the shoulder.
As if his foot were on brave Hector's breast,
And great Troy shrieking !

Achil. I do believe it ; for they pass'd by me,
As misers do by beggars, neither gave to me,
Good word, nor look. What ! are my deeds forgot ?

Ulyss. Time hath, my lord, a wallet at his back,
Wherein he puts alms for oblivion ;
A great-sized monster of ingratitude :
Those scraps are good deeds past ; which are devour'd
As fast as they are made, forgot as soon
As done. Perseverance, dear my lord,
Keeps honour bright : to have done, is to hang
Quite out of fashion, like a rusty mail
In monumental mockery. Take the instant way ;
For honour travels in a strait so narrow,
Where one but goes abreast : keep, then, the path
For emulation hath a thousand sons.
That one by one pursue : if you give way,
Or edge¹ aside from the direct forthright,
Like to an enter'd tide, they all rush by,
And leave you hindmost :
Or, like a gallant horse fallen in first rank,
Lie there for pavement to the abject rear.
O'er-run and trampled on. Then, what they do in present,

Though less than yours in past, must o'er-top yours ;
For time is like a fashionable host,
That slightly shakes his parting guest by the hand,
And with his arms out-stretch'd, as he would fly,
Grasps in the comer : welcome ever smiles,
And farewell goes out sighing. Let not virtue seek Remuneration for the thing it was ; for beauty, wit,
High birth, vigour of bone, desert in service,
Love, friendship, charity, are subjects all
To envious and calumniating time.
One touch of nature makes the whole world kin,—
That all, with one consent, praise new-born gawds,
Though they are made and moulded of things past,
And give to dust, that is a little gilt,
More land than gilt o'er-dusted.

The present eye praises the present object :
Then, marvel not, thou great and complete man,
That all the Greeks begin to worship Ajax,
Since things in motion quicklier² catch the eye,
Than what is still. The cry went once on thee,
And still it³ might, and yet it may again,
If thou wounds, not entomb thyself alive,
And ease thy reputation in thy tent ;
Whose glorious deeds, but in these fields of late,
Made emulous missions 'mongst the gods themselves,

And drove great Mars to faction.

Achil. Of this my privacy

I have strong reasons.

Ulyss. But 'gainst your privacy
The reasons are more potent and heroic.

'T is known, Achilles, that you are in love
With one of Priam's daughters.

Achil. Ha ! known ?

Ulyss. Is that a wonder ?

The providence that's in a watchful state
Knows almost every grain of Plutus' gold,
Finds bottom in th' uncomprehensive deeps,
Keeps pace⁴ with thought, and almost, like the gods,
Does thoughts unveil in their dumb crudities.⁵
There is a mystery (with whom relation Durst never meddle) in the soul of state,
Which hath an operation more divine
Than breath, or pen, can give expression to.
All the commerce that you have had with Troy
As perfectly is ours, as yours, my lord ;
And better would it fit Aehilles much
To throw down Hector, than Polyxena :
But it must grieve young Pyrrhus, now at home,
When fame shall in our islands sound her trumpet,
And all the Greekish girls shall tripping sing,—
" Great Hector's sister did Achilles win.
But our great Ajax bravely beat down him."
Farewell, my lord ; I as your lover speak :
The fool slides o'er the ice that you should break.

[Exit

Patr. To this effect, Achilles, have I mov'd you.
A woman impudent and mannish grown
Is not more loath'd, than an effeminate man
In time of action. I stand condemn'd for this :
They think, my little stomach to the war,
And your great love to me, restrains you thus.
Swift⁶, rouse yourself : and the weak wanton Cupid
Shall from your neck unloose his amorous fold,
And, like a dew-drop from the lion's mane,
Be shook to air⁷.

Achil. Shall Ajax fight with Hector ?

Patr. Ay ; and, perhaps, receive much honour by him.

Achil. I see, my reputation is at stake ;
My fame is shrewdly gor'd.

Patr. O ! then beware :
Those wounds heal ill that men do give themselves.
Omission to do what is necessary
Seals a commission to a blank of danger ;
And danger, like an ague, subtly taints,
Even then, when we sit idly in the sun.

Achil. Go call Therisites hither, sweet Patroclus.
I'll send the fool to Ajax, and desire him
T' invite the Trojan lords, after the combat,
To see us here unarm'd. I have a woman's longing,
An appetite that I am sick withal,
To see great Hector in his weeds of peace ;
To talk with him, and to behold his visage,
Even to my full of view.—A labour sav'd !

Enter THERISITES.

Ther. A wonder !

Achil. What ?

Ther. Ajax goes up and down the field asking for himself.

Achil. How so ?

Ther. He must fight singly to-morrow with Hector, and is so prophetically proud of an heroic cudgelling that he raves in saying nothing.

Achil. How can that be ?

¹ shrines, ng : in folio. ² turn : in quartos. ³ sooner : in f. e. ⁴ place : in f. e. ⁵ cradles : in f. e. ⁶ Sweet : in f. e. ⁷ airy air : in folio

Ther. Why, he stalks up and down like a peacock; a stride, and a stand: ruminates, like an hostess, that hath no arithmetic but her brain to set down her reckoning: bites his lip with a politic regard, as who should say—"there were wit in this head, an't would out;" and so there is; but it lies as coldly in him as fire in a flint, which will not show without knocking. The man's undone for ever: for if Hector break not his neck i' the combat, he'll break 't himself in vain-glory. He knows not me: I said, "Good-morrow, Ajax;" and he replies, "Thanks, Agamemnon." What think you of this man, that takes me for the general? He's grown a very land-fish, languageless, a monster. A plague of opinion! a man may wear it on both sides, like a leather jerkin.

Achil. Thou must be my ambassador to him, Ther. sites.

Ther. Who, I? why, he'll answer nobody; he professes not answering: speaking is for beggars; he wears his tongue in his arins. I will put on his presence: let Patroclus make his demands to me, you shall see the pageant of Ajax.

Achil. To him, Patroclus: tell him,—I humbly desire the valiant Ajax to invite the most valorous Hector to come unarmed to my tent; and to procure safe conduct for his person of the magnanimous, and most illustrious, six-or-seven-times-honoured, captain-general of the Grecian army, Agamemnon. Do this.

Patr. Jove bless great Ajax.

Ther. Humph!

Patr. I come from the worthy Achilles,—

Ther. Ha!

Patr. Who most humbly desires you to invite Hector to his tent.—

Ther. Humph!

Patr. And to procure safe conduct from Agamemnon

Ther. Agamemnon?

Patr. Ay, my lord.

Ther. Ha!

Patr. What say you to 't?

Ther. God be wi' you with all my heart.

Patr. Your answer, sir.

Ther. If to-morrow be a fair day, by eleven o'clock it will go one way or other: howsoever, he shall pay for me ere he has me.

Patr. Your answer, sir.

Ther. Fare you well with all my heart.

Achil. Why, but he is not in this tune, is he?

Ther. No, but he's out o' tune thus. What music will be in him when Hector has knocked out his brains, I know not; but, I am sure, none, unless the fiddler Apollo get his sinews to make catlings on.

Achil. Come, thou shalt bear a letter to him straight.

Ther. Let me bear^d another to his horse, for that's the more capable creature.

Achil. My mind is troubled, like a fountain stirr'd, And I myself see not the bottom of it.

[Exeunt ACHILLES and PATROCLUS]

Ther. Would the fountain of your mind were clear again, that I might water an ass at it. I had rather be a tick in a sheep, than such a valiant ignorance.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Troy. A Street.

Enter, at one side, ÆNEAS, and Servant, with a Torch; at the other, PARIS, DEIPHOBUS, ANTEOR, DIOMEDES, and others, with Torches.

Par. See, ho! who is that there?

Dei. It is the lord Æneas.

Æne. Is the prince there in person?—

Had I so good occasion to lie long.

As you, prince Paris, nothing but heavenly business Should rob my bed-mate of my company.

Dio. That's my mind too.—Good morrow, lord Æneas.

Par. A valiant Greek, Æneas, take his hand, Witness the process of your speech, wherein 'You told how Diomed, a whole week by days, Did haunt you in the field.

Æne. Health to you, valiant sir, During all question of the gentle truce; But when I meet you arm'd, as black defiance, As heart can think, or courage execute.

Dio. The one and other Diomed embraces. Our bloods are now in calm, and so long health; But when contention and occasion meet, By Jove, I'll play the hunter for thy life, With all my fierce^d pursuit, and policy.

Æne. And thou shalt hunt a lion, that will fly With his face backward.—In humane gentleness, Welcome to Troy: now, by Anchises' life, Welcome, indeed. By Venus' hand I swear, No man alive can love, in such a sort, The thing he means to kill, more excellently.

Dio. We sympathize.—Jove, let Æneas live,

If to my sword his fate be not the glory, A thousand complete courses of the sun! But, in mine emulous honour, let him die

With every joint a wound, and that to-morrow!

Æne. We know each other well.

Dio. We do; and long to know each other worse.

Par. This is the most despitest^d gentle greeting, The noblest hateful love, that e'er I heard of.—

What business, lord, so early?

Æne. I was sent for to the king: but why, I know not.

Par. His purpose meets you. 'T was to bring this To Calchas' house; and there to render him, [Greek] For the enfrèd Antenor, the fair Cressid.

Let's have your company: or, if you please, Haste there before us. I constantly do think. (Or, rather, call my thought a certain knowledge)

My brother Troilus lodges there to-night:

Rouse him, and give him note of our approach,

With the whole quality wherefore: I fear,

We shall be much unwelcome.

Æne. That I assure you:

Troilus had rather Troy were borne to Greece,

Than Cressid borne from Troy.

Par. There is no help;

The bitter disposition of the time

Will have it so. On, lord; we'll follow you.

Æne. Good morrow, all. [Exit]

Par. And tell me, noble Diomed: 'faith, tell me true Even in the soul of sound good-fellowship, Who, in your thoughts, merits fair Helen best? Myself, or Menelaus?

Dio. Both alike:

He merites well to have her, that doth seek her
Not making any scruple of her soileure,
With such a hell of pain, and world of charge;
And you as well to keep her, that defend her
Not palating the taste of her dishonour,
With such a costly loss of wealth and friends.
He, like a pining cuckold, would drink up
The lees and dregs of a flat tamed piece;
You, like a leecher, out of whorish loins
Are pleas'd to breed out your inheritors;
Both merites pois'd, each weighs nor less nor more;
But he as he, each¹ heavier for a whore.

Par. You are too bitter to your countrywoman.

Dio. She's bitter to her country. Hear me, Paris:—
For every false drop in her bawdy veins
A Grecian's life hath sunk: for every scruple
Of her contaminated carrion weight,

A Trojan hath been slain. Since she could speak,
She hath not given so many good words breath,
As for her Greeks and Trojans suffer'd death.

Par. Fair Diomed, you do as chappmen do,
Dispraise the thing that you desire to buy;
But we in silence hold this virtue well.—
We'll not commend what we intend not sell.
Here lies our way.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Court before the House of PANDARUS.

Enter TROILUS and CRESSIDA.

Tro. Dear, trouble not yourself: the morn is cold.

Cres. Then, sweet my lord, I'll call mine uncle down:
He shall unbolt the gates.

Tro. Trouble him not;
To bed, to bed: sleep kill those pretty eyes,
And give as soft attachment to thy senses,
As infants' empty of all thought!

Cres. Good morrow, then.

Tro. Pr'ythee now, to bed.

Cres. Are you awearry of me?

Tro. O Cressida! but that the busy day,
Wak'd by the lark, hath rous'd the ribald crows,
And dreaming night will hide our joys² no longer,
I would not from thee.

Cres. Night hath been too brief,

Tro. Beshrew the witch! with venomous wights she stays,

As tedious³ as hell: but flies the grasps of love,
With wings more momentary-swift than thought.
You will catch cold, and curse me.

Cres. Pr'ythee, tarry.—

You men will never tarry.

O foolish Cressid!—I might have still held off.

And, then, you would have married. Hark! there's one up.

Pan. [Within] What! are all the doors open here?

Tro. It is your uncle.

Enter PANDARUS.

Cres. A pestilence on him! now will he be mocking:
I shall have such a life.—

Pan. How now, how now! how go maidenheads?—
Here, you maid: where's my cousin Cressid?

Cres. Go hang yourself, you naughty mocking uncle!
You bring me to do,—and then you flout me too.

Pan. To do what? to do what?—let her say what:
—what have I brought you to do?

Cres. Come, come; beshrew your heart! you'll ne'er be good,
Nor suffer others.

Pan. Ha, ha! Alas, poor wretch! a poor capocchio!⁴
—hast not slept to-night? would he not, a naughty man, let it sleep? a bugbear take him!

Cres. Did not I tell you?—would he were knock'd
o' the head!

Who's that at door? good uncle, go and see.—

My lord, come you again into my chamber:

You smile, and mock me, as if I meant naughtily.

Tro. Ha, ha!

Cres. Come, you are deceiv'd; I think of no such thing.—

How earnestly they knock.—Pray you, come in:

I would not for half Troy have you seen here.

[Exeunt TROILUS and CRESSIDA.]

Pan. [Going to the door.] Who's there? what's the matter? will you beat down the door? How now!
what's the matter?

Enter ÆNEAS.

Æne. Good morrow, lord, good morrow.

Pan. Who's there? my lord Æneas! By my troth,
I knew you not: what news with you so early?

Æne. Is not prince Troilus here?

Pan. Here! what should he do here?

Æne. Come, he is here, my lord: do not deny him:
it doth import him much to speak with me.

Pan. Is he here, say you? 'tis more than I know, I'll be sworn:—for my own part, I came in late. What should he do here?

Æne. Who!—nay, then:—come, come, you'll do him wrong ere y^e are 'ware. You'll be so true to him, to be false to him. Do not you know of him, but yet go fetch him hither: go.

Enter TROILUS.

Tro. How now! what's the matter?

Æne. My lord, I scarce have leisure to salute you,
My matter is so rash. There is at hand
Paris your brother, and Deiphobus,
The Grecian Diomed, and our Antenor
Deliver'd to us; and for him, forthwith,
Ere the first sacrifice, within this hour,
We must give up to Diomedes' hand
The lady Cressida.

Tro. Is it so concluded?

Æne. By Priam, and the general state of Troy:
They are at hand, and ready to effect it.

Tro. How my achievements mock me!

I will go meet them:—and, my lord Æneas,
We met by chance; you did not find me here.

Æne. Good, good, my lord: the secret laws of⁵ nature,
Have not more gift in taciturnity [Exeunt Tro. & Æne.]

Pan. Is't possible? no sooner got, but lost? The devil take Antenor! the young prince will go mad. A plague upon Antenor! I would, they had broke's neck⁶

Enter CRESSIDA.

Cres. How now! What is the matter? Who was here?
Pan. Ah! ah!

Cres. Why sigh you so profoundly? where's my lord? gone!

Tell me, sweet uncle, what's the matter?

Pan. Would I were as deep under the earth as I am above!

Cres. O the gods!—what's the matter?

Pan. Pr'ythee, get thee in. Would thou hadst ne'er been born! I knew, thou wouldst be his death.—
O poor gentleman!—A plague upon Antenor!

Cres. Good uncle, I beseech you, on my knees I beseech you, what's the matter?

Pan. Thou must be gone, wench, thou must be gone: thou art chang'd for Antenor. Thou must be

¹ the in f. o. ² eyes: in folio. ³ hideously: in folio. ⁴ Doit. ⁵ Not in f. e. ⁶ the secrets of: in f. o.

thy father, and be gone from Troilus: 'twill be his death; 't will be his bane; he cannot bear it.

Cres. O, you immortal gods!—I will not go.

Pan. Thou must.

Cres. I will not, uncle: I have forgot my father;

I know no touch of consanguinity;

No kin, no love, no blood, no soul so near me,

As the sweet Troilus.—O, you gods divine,

Make Cressid's name the very crown of falsehood,

If ever she leave Troilus! Time, force, and death,

Do to this body what extremes you can,

But the strong base and building of my love

Is as the very centre of the earth,

Drawing all things to it.—I'll go in, and weep.—

Pan. Do, do.

Cres. Tear my bright hair, and scratch my praised cheeks:

Crack my clear voice with sobs, and break my heart

With sounding Troilus. I will not go from Troy.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same. Before PANDARUS' House.

Enter PARIS, TROILUS, ÆNEAS, DEIPHOBUS, ANTENOR, and DIOMEDES.

Par. It is great morning, and the hour prefix'd

Of her delivery to this valiant Greek

Comes fast upon.—Good my brother Troilus,

Tell you the lady what she is to do,

And haste her to the purpose.

Tro. Walk into her house,

I'll bring her to the Grecian presently;

And to his hand when I deliver her,

Think it an altar, and thy brother Troilus

A priest, there offering to it his own heart.

[Exit.]

Par. I know what 't is to love;

And would, as I shall pity, I could help!

Please you, walk in, my lords.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Room in PANDARUS' House.

Enter PANDARUS and CRESSIDA.

Pan. Be moderate, be moderate.

Cres. Why tell you me of moderation?

The grief is fine, full, perfect, that I taste,

And violenteth¹ in a sense as strong

As that which causeth it: how can I moderate it?

If I could temporize with my affection,

Or brew it to a weak and colder palate,

The like allayment could I give my grief:

My love admits no qualifying dross,²

No more my grief, in such a precious loss.

Enter TROILUS.

Pan. Here, here, here he comes.—A sweet duck!

Cres. O Troilus! Troilus! [Embracing him.]

Pan. What a pair of spectacles is here! Let me embrace too. O heart,—as the goodly saying is,—

O heart, O heart, O heavy heart!

Why sigh'st thou without breaking?

where he answers again,

Because thou canst not ease thy smart,

By silence³ nor by speaking.

There was never a truer rhyme. Let us cast away nothing, for we may have to have need of such a verse:

we see it, we see it.—How now, lambs!

Tro. Cressid, I love thee in so strain'd⁴ a purity,

That the bless'd gods—as angry with my fancy,

More bright in zeal than the devotion which

Cold lips blow to their deities,—take thee from me.

Cres. Have the gods envy?

Pan. Ay, ay, ay, ay: 't is too plain a case.

Cres. And is it true, that I must go from Troy?

Tro. A hateful truth.

Cres.

What! and from Troilus to?

Tro. From Troy, and Troilus.

Cres.

Is it possible?

Tro. And suddenly; where injury of chance

Puts back leave-taking, justles roughly by

All time of pause, rudely beguiles our lips

Of all rejoindure, forcibly prevents

Our lock'd embrasures, strangles our dear vows

Even in the birth of our own labouring breath.

We two, that with so many thousand sighs

Did buy each other, must poorly sell ourselves

With the rude brevity and discharge of one.

Injurious time, now, with a robber's haste,

Cramps his rich thievary up, he knows not how

As many farewell as be stars in heaven,

With distinct breath and consign'd kisses to them,

He fumbles up into one loose adieu:

And scants us with a single fannish kiss,

Distasting with the salt of broken tears.

Æne. [Within.] My lord! is the lady ready?

Tro. Hark! you are call'd; some say, the Genius so

Cries, "Come!" to him that instantly must die.—

Bid them have patience; she shall come anon.

Pan. Where are my tears? rain, to lay this wind or my heart will be blown up by the root!⁵ [Exit PAN.]

Cres. I must then to the Grecians?

Tro.

No remedy.

Cres. A woeful Cressid 'mongst the merry Greeks!

When shall we see again?

Tro. Hear me, my love. Be thou but true of heart.—

Cres. I true? how now! what wicked deem is this?

Tro. Nay, we must use expostulation kindly,

For it is parting from us.

I speak not, "be thou true," as fearing thee;

For I will throw my glove to death himself,

That there 's no maculation in thy heart;

But, "be thou true," say I, to fashion in My sequent protestation. Be thou true,

And I will see thee.

Cres. O! you shall be expos'd, my lord, to dangers

As infinite as imminent; but I'll be true.

Tro. And I'll grow friend with danger. Wear this sleeve.

Cres. And you this glove. When shall I see you?

Tro. I will corrupt the Grecian sentinels,

To give thee nightly visitation.

But yet, be true.

Cres. O heavens!—be true, again?

Tro. Hear why I speak it, love,

The Grecian youths are full of quality:

Their loving well compos'd with gift of nature,

Flowing and swelling o'er with arts and exercise—

How novelties may move, and parts with person,

Alas! a kind of goodly jealousy

(Which, I beseech you, call a virtuous sin)

Makes me afraid.

Cres. O heavens! you love me not.

Tro. Die I a villain, then!

In this I do not call your faith in question,

So mainly as my merit: I cannot sing.

Nor heel the high lavolt⁶, nor sweeten talk,

Nor play at subtle games; fair virtues all,

To which the Grecians are most prompt and pregnant:

But I can tell, that in each grace of these

¹ And no less: in folio. The word is found in Fuller and Latimer. ² cross: in folio. ³ friendship: in f. o. ⁴ strange: in four ⁵ throat: in quartos. ⁶ A quick dance.

There lurks a still and dumb-discoursive devil,
That tempts most cunningly. But be not tempted.

Cres. Do you think, I will?

Tro. No;

But something may be done, that we will not:
And sometimes we are devils to ourselves,
When we will tempt the frailty of our powers,
Presuming on their chafinful¹ potency.

Æne. [Within.] Nay, good my lord,—

Tro. Come, kiss; and let us part.

Par. [Within.] Brother Troilus!

Tro. Good brother, come you hither;

And bring Æneas, and the Grecian, with you.

Cres. My lord, will you be true?

Tro. Who, I? alas, it is my vice, my fault:
Whiles others fish with craft for great opinion,
I with great truth catch mere simplicity:
Whilst some with cunning gild their copper crowns,
With truth and plainness I do wear mine bare.
Fear not my truth: the moral of my wit
Is plain, and true,—there's all the reach of it.

Enter ÆNEAS, PARIS, ANTEOR, DEIPHOBUS, and DIOMEDES.

Welcome, sir Diomed. Here is the lady,
Which for Antenor we deliver you:
At the port, lord, I'll give her to thy hand,
And by the way possess thee what she is.
Entreat her fair; and, by my soul, fair Greek,
If e'er thou stand at mercy of my sword,
Name Cressid, and thy life shall be as safe,
As Priam is in Ilium.

Dio. Fair lady Cressid,
So please you, save the thanks this prince expects:
The lustre in your eye, heaven in your cheek,
Pleads your fair usage; and to Diomed
You shall be mistress, and command him wholly.

Tro. Grecian, thou dost not use me courteously,
To shame the zeal of my petition to thee,
In praising her. I tell thee, lord of Greece,
She is as far high-soaring o'er thy praises,
As thou unworthy to be call'd her servant.
I charge thee, use her well, even for my charge;
For, by the dreadful Pluto, if thou dost not,
Though the great bulk Achilles be thy guard,
I'll cut thy throat.

Dio. O! be not mov'd, prince Troilus.
Let me be privileg'd by my place, and message,
To be a speaker free: when I am hence,
I'll answer to thy last²; and know you, lord,
I'll nothing do on charge. To her own worth
She shall be priz'd: but that you say—be 't so,
I'll speak it in my spirit and honour.—no.

Tro. Come to the port.—I'll tell thee, Diomed,
This brave shall oft make thee to hide thy head.—
Lady, give me your hand: and, as we walk,
To our own selves bend we our needful talk.

[Exit Tro. Cres. and Dio. Trumpet sounded.
Par. Hark! Hector's trumpet.

Æne. How have we spent this morning!
The prince must think me tardy and remiss,
That swore to ride before him to the field. [him.]

Par. 'T is Troilus' fault. Come, come, to field with
Dio. Let us make ready straight.

Æne. Yea, with a bridegroom's fresh alacrity,
Let us address to tend on Hector's heels.
The glory of our Troy doth this day lie
On his fair worth, and single chivalry. [Exit.]

SCENE V.—The Grecian Camp. Lists set out.

Enter AJAX, armed; AGAMEMNON, ACHILLES, PATRO-CLUS, MENELAUS, ULYSSES, NESTOR, and others.

Agam. Here art thou in appointment fresh and fair
Anticipating time. With startling courage
Give with thy trumpet a loud note to Troy,
Thou dreadful Ajax; that the appalled air
May pierce the head of the great combatant,
And hale him hither.

Ajax. Thou, trumpet, there's my purse
Now crack thy lungs, and split thy brazen pipe.

Blow, villain, till thy spher'd bias cheek
Out-swell the colic of puff'd Aquilon.

Come, stretch thy chest, and let thy eyes spout blood;
Thou blow'st for Hector. [Trumpet sounds.]

Ulyss. No trumpet answers.

Achil. 'T is but early day.

Agam. Is not yond³ Diomed with Calchas' daughter?

Ulyss. 'T is he, I ken the manner of his gait;

He rises on the toe; that spirit of his

In aspiration lifts him from the earth.

Enter DIOMED, with CRESSIDA.

Agam. Is this the lady Cressid?

Dio. Even she.

Agam. Most dearly welcome to the Greeks, sweet lady. [Kissing her.]

Nest. Our general doth salute you with a kiss.

Ulyss. Yet is the kindness but particular;

'T were better she were kiss'd in general.

Nest. And very courtly counsel: I'll begin.—

[Kissing her.]

So much for Nestor.

Achil. I'll take that winter from your tips, fair lady.
Achilles bids you welcome. [Kissing her.]

Men. I had good argument for kissing once.

Patr. But that's no argument for kissing now:

[Putting him back.]

For thus poppy'd Paris in his hardiment,

And parted thus you and your argument.⁴ [Kissing her.]

Ulyss. O! deadly gail, and theme of all our scorn
For which we lose our heads, to gild his horns.

Patr. The first was Menelaus' kiss;—this, mine;
Patroclus kisses you. [Kissing her again.]

Men. O! this is trim.

Patr. Paris, and I, kiss evermore for him.

Men. I'll have my kiss, sir.—Lady, by your leave.

Cres. In kissing do you render or receive?

Patr. Both take and give.

Cres. I'll make my match to live.

The kiss you take is better than you give;

Therefore no kiss.

Men. I'll give you boot; I'll give you three for one.

Cres. You're an odd man: give even, or give none.

Men. An odd man, lady? every man is odd.

Cres. No, Paris is not; for, you know, 't is true,

That you are odd, and he is even with you.

Men. You fillip me o' the head.

Cres. No, I'll be sworn

Ulyss. It were no match, your nail against his horn—

May I, sweet lady, beg a kiss of you?

Cres. You may.

Ulyss. I do desire it.

Cres. Why, beg then.

Ulyss. Why then, for Venus' sake, give me a kiss,

When Helen is a maid again, and his.

Cres. I am your debtor; claim it when 't is due.

Ulyss. Never's my day, and then a kiss of you.

Dio. Lady, a word :—I'll bring you to your father.

[DIOMEDES leads out CRESSIDA.]

Nest. A woman of quick sense.

Ulyss. Fie, fie upon her !

There's language in her eye, her cheek, her lip,
Nay, her foot speaks ; her wanton spirits look out
At every joint and motive of her body.

O ! these encounters¹ welcome, so glib of tongue.

That give occasion² welcome ere it comes,

And wide unclasp the tables of their thoughts

To every tickling³ reader, set them down

For sluttish spoils of opportunity,

And daughters of the game.

[Trumpet within.]

All. The Trojans' trumpet.

Agam. Yonder comes the troop.

Enter HECTOR, armed ; ÆNEAS, TROILUS, and other Trojans, with Attendants.

Æne. Hail, all you state of Greece ! what shall be done

To him that victory commands ? Or do you purpose,

A victor shall be known ? will you, the knights

Shall to the edge of all extremity

Pursue each other ; or shall be divided

By any voice or order of the field ?

Hector bade ask.

Agam. Which way should Hector have it ?

Æne. He cares not : he'll obey conditions.

Achil. 'Tis done like Hector ; but securely done,

A little proudly, and great deal misprizing

The knight oppos'd.

Æne. If not Achilles, sir,

What is your name ?

Achil. If not Achilles, nothing.

Æne. Therefore Achilles ; but, whate'er, know this :—

In the extremity of great and little,

Valour and pride excel themselves in Hector ;

The one almost as infinite as all,

The other blank as nothing. Weigh him well,

And that which looks like pride is courtesy.

This Ajax is half-made of Hector's blood :

In love whereof half Hector stays at home ;

Half heart, half hand, half Hector comes to seek

This blended knight, half Trojan, and half Greek.

Achil. A maiden battle, then ?—O ! I perceive you.

Re-enter DIOMEDES.

Agam. Here is sir Diomed.—Go, gentle knight,

Stand by our Ajax : as you and lord Æneas

Consent upon the order of their fight,

So be it ; either to the utterance⁴.

Or else a breach : the combatants being kin,

Half stints their strife before their strokes begin.

[AJAX and HECTOR enter the lists.]

Ulyss. They are oppos'd already.

Agam. What Trojan is that same that looks so heavy ?

Ulyss. The youngest son of Priam, a true knight ;

Not yet mature, yet matchless ; firm of word,

Speaking in deeds, and deedless in his tongue :

Not soon provok'd, nor being provok'd soon calm'd :

His heart and hand both open, and both free :

For what he has, he gives, what thinks, he shows ;

Yet gives he not till judgment guide his bounty,

Nor dignifies an impure⁵ thought with breath.

Manly as Hector, but more dangerous ;

For Hector, in his blaze of wrath, subscribes

To tender objects ; but he, in heat of action,

Is more vindictive than jealous love.

They call him Troilus ; and on him erect

A second hope, as fairly built as Hector.

Thus says Æneas ; one that knows the youth,

Even to his inches, and with private soul

Did in great Ilium thus translate him to me.

[Alarum. HECTOR and AJAX fight

Agam. They are in action.

Nest. Now, Ajax, hold thine own.

Tro.

Hector thou sleep'st

Awake thee !

Agam. His blows are well dispos'd :—there, Ajax !

Dio. You must no more. [Trumpets cease.]

Æne.

Princes, enough, so please you.

Ajax. I am not warm yet : let us fight again.

Dio. As Hector pleases.

Hect.

Why then, will I no more.—

Thou art, great lord, my father's sister's son.

A cousin-german to great Priam's seed ;

The obligation of our blood forbids

A gory emulation 'twixt us twain.

Were thy commixtion Greek and Trojan so,

That thou couldst say—"This hand is Grecian all,

And this is Trojan ; the sinews of thy leg

All Greek, and this all Troy ; my mother's blood

Runs on the dexter cheek, and this sinister

Bounds in my father's ;" by Jove multipotent,

Thou shouldst not bear from me a Greekish member

Wherein my sword had not impressure made

Of our rank feud. But the just gods gainsay,

That any drop thou borrow'st from thy mother,

My sacred aunt, should by my mortal sword

Be drain'd. Let me embrace thee, Ajax.—

By him that thunders, thou hast lusty arms.

Hector would have them fall upon him thus :

Cousin, all honour to thee ! [They embrace.]

Ajax.

I thank thee, Hector :

Thou art too gentle, and too free a man.

I came to kill thee, cousin, and bear hence

A great addition earned in thy death.

Hect. Not Neoptolemus so mirable

On whose bright crest Fame with her loud'st Oyez

Cries, "This is he !" could promise to himself

A thought of added honour torn from Hector.

Æne. There is expectation here from both the sides,

What farther you will do

Hect.

We'll answer it ;

The issue is embracement.—Ajax, farewell.

Ajax. If I might in entreaties find success,

As sold I have the chance, I would desire

My famous cousin to our Grecian tents.

Dio. 'Tis Agamemnon's wish ; and great Achilles

Doth long to see unarm'd the valiant Hector.

Hect. Æneas, call my brother Troilus to me ;

And signify this loving interview

To the expecters of our Trojan part :

Desire them home.—Give me thy hand, my cousin ;

I will go eat with thee, and see your knights.

Ajax. Great Agamemnon comes to meet us here.

Hect. The worthiest of them tell me, name by name ;

But for Achilles, mine own searching eyes

Shall find him by his large and portly size.

Agam. Worthy of arms ! as welcome as to one

That would be rid of such an enemy.

But that's no welcome : understand more clear.

What's past, and what's to come, is strew'd with husks

And formless ruin of oblivion ;

But in this extant moment, faith and truth,

Strain'd purely from all hollow bias-drawing,

Bids thee, with most divine integrity,

From heart of very heart, great Hector, welcome.

Hect. I thank thee, most imperious Agamemnon.

Agam. My well-fam'd lord of Troy, no less to you.

[To TROILUS.]

Men. Let me confirm my princely brother's greeting:
You brace of warlike brothers, welcome hither.

Hect. Whom must we answer?

Æne. The noble Menelaus.

Hect. O! you, my lord? by Mars his gauntlet, thanks.
Mock not, that I affect th' untraded oath:

Your quondam wife swears at Venus' glove;
She's well, but bade me not commend her to you.

Men. Name her not now, sir; she's a deadly theme.

Hect. O! pardon: I offend.

Nest. I have, thou gallant Trojan, seen thee oft,
Labouring for destiny, make cruel way
Through ranks of Greekish youth: and I have seen thee,
As hot as Perseus, spur thy Phrygian steed,
Despising many¹ forefets and subduements,
When thou hast hung thy advanced sword i' th' air,
Not letting it decline on the declin'd;
That I have said unto my standers-by,
"Lo! Jupiter is yonder, dealing life."

And I have seen thee pause, and take thy breath,
When that a ring of Greeks have hemm'd thee in,
Like an Olympian wrestling: this have I seen;
But this thy countenance, still lock'd in steel,
I never saw till now. I knew thy grandsire,
And once fought with him: he was a soldier good;
But, by great Mars the captain of us all,
Never like thee. Let an old man embrace thee;
And, worthy warrior, welcome to our tents.

Æne. 'Tis the old Nestor.

Hect. Let me embrace thee, good old chronicle,
That hast so long walk'd hand in hand with time.
Most reverend Nestor, I am glad to clasp thee.

Nest. I would my arms could match thee in contention.

As they contend with thee in courtesy.

Hect. I would they could.

Nest. Ha! by this white beard, I'd fight with thee to-morrow.

Well, welcome, welcome! I have seen the time.

Ulyss. I wonder now how yonder city stands,
When we have here her base and pillar by us.

Hect. I know your favour, lord Ulysses, well.
Ah, sir! there's many a Greek and Trojan dead,
Since first I saw yourself and Diomed
In Ilion, on your Greekish embassy.

Ulyss. Sir, I foretold you then what would ensue:
My prophecy is but half his journey yet;
For yonder walls, that portly front your town,
Yond' towers, whose wanton tops do buss the clouds,
Must kiss their own feet.

Hect. I must not believe you.
There they stand yet: and modestly I think,
The fall of every Phrygian stone will cost
A drop of Grecian blood: the end crowns all;
And that old common arbitrator, Time,
Will one day end it.

Ulyss. So to him we leave it.
Most gentle, and most valiant Hector, welcome.
After the general, I beseech you next
To feast with me, and see me at my tent.

Achil. I shall forestall thee, lord Ulysses, then.—
Now, Hector, I have fed mine eyes on thee:
I have with exact view perus'd thee, Hector,
And quoted² joint by joint.

Hect. Is this Achilles?

Achil. I am Achilles.

Hect. Stand fair, I pray thee: let me look on thee

Achil. Behold thy fill.

Hect. Nay, I have done already.
Achil. Thou art too brief: I will the second time,
As I would buy thee, view thee limb by limb.

Hect. O! like a book of sport thou'lt read me o'er;
But there's more in me than thou understand'st.
Why dost thou so oppress me with thine eye?

Achil. Tell me, you heavens, in which part of his body

Shall I destroy him, whether there, the a, or there?
That I may give the local wound a name,
And make distinct the very breach, whereout
Hector's great spirit flew. Answer me, heavens!

Hect. It would discredit the bless'd gods, proud man,
To answer such a question. Stand aside;
Think'st thou to catch my life so pleasantly,
As to predominate in nice conjecture,
Where thou wilt hit me dead?

Achil. I tell thee, yea.

Hect. Wert thou an³ oracle to tell me so,
I'd not believe thee. Henceforth guard thee well,
For I'll not kill thee there, nor there, nor there;
But, by the forge that stithied⁴ Mars his helm,
I'll kill thee every where, yea, o'er and o'er.—
You, wisest Grecians, pardon me this brag:
His insolence draws folly from my lips:
But I'll endeavour deeds to match these words,
Or may I never—

Ajox. Do not chafe thee, cousin:—
And you, Achilles, let these threats alone,
Till accident, or purpose, bring you to't:
You may have every day enough of Hector,
If you have stomach. The general state, I fear,
Can scarce entreat you to be odd with him.

Hect. I pray you, let us see you in the field:
We have had pelting⁵ wars, since you refus'd
The Grecians' cause.

Achil. Dost thou entreat me, Hector?
To-morrow, do I meet thee, fell as death;
To-night, all friends.

Hect. Thy hand upon that match.
Agam. First, all you peers of Greece, go to my tent,
There in the full convive we⁶ afterwards,
As Hector's leisure and your bounties shall Concure together, severally entreat him.—
Beat loud the tabourines, let the trumpets blow,
That this great soldier may his welcome know.

[Exeunt all but TROILUS and ULYSSES]
Tro. My lord Ulysses, tell me, I beseech you,
In what place of the field doth Calchas keep?

Ulyss. At Menelaus' tent, most princely Troilus:
There Diomed doth feast with him to-night;
Who neither looks upon the heaven, nor earth,
But gives all gaze and bent of amorous view
On the fair Cressida.

Tro. Shall I, sweet lord, be bound to you so much,
After we part from Agamemnon's tent,
To bring me thither?

Ulyss. You shall command me, sir.
As gentle tell me, of what honour was
This Cressida in Troy? Had she no lover there
That waits her absence?

Tro. O, sir! to such as boasting show their scars
A mock is due. Will you walk on, my lord?
She was belov'd, she lov'd; she is, and doth:
But still sweet love is food for fortune's tooth. [Exeunt]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Grecian Camp. Before ACHILLES' Tent.

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.

Achil. I'll heat his blood with Greekish wine to-night, Which with my scimitar I'll cool to-morrow. Patroclus, let us feast him to the height.

Patr. Here comes Thersites.

Enter THERSITES.

Achil. How now, thou cur! of envy!

Thou crusty batch of nature, what's the news?
Ther. Why, thou picture of what thou seemest, and idol of idiot-worshippers, here's a letter for thee.

Achil. From whence, fragment?

Ther. Why, thou full dish of fool, from Troy.

Patr. Who keeps the tent now?

Ther. The surgeon's box, or the patient's wound.

Patr. Well said, adversity! and what need these tricks?

Ther. Prythee be silent, boy; I profit not by thy talk: thou art thought to be Achilles' male varlet.

Patr. Male varlet, you rogue! what's that.

Ther. Why, his masculine whore. Now the rotten diseases of the south, the guts-griping, ruptures, catarrhs, loads o' gravel i' the back, lethargies, cold palsies, raw eyes, dirt-rotten livers, wheezing lungs, bladders full of imposthume, sciaticas, lime-kilns i' the palm, incurable bone-ache, and the rivelled fee-simple of the tetter, take and take again such preposterous discolourers!

Patr. Why, thou damnable box of envy, thou, what meanest thou to curse thus?

Ther. Do I curse thee?

Patr. Why no, you ruinous butt, you whoreson indistinguishable cur, no.

Ther. No? why art thou then exasperate, thou idle immaterial skein of sleeve's silk, thou green sarcenet flap for a sore eye, thou tassel of a prodigal's purse, thou? Ah! how the poor world is pestered with such water-flies, diminutives of nature!

Patr. Out, gall!

Ther. Finch egg!

Achil. My sweet Patroclus, I am thwarted quite

From my great purpose in to-morrow's battle.

Here is a letter from queen Hecuba;

A token from her daughter, my fair love;

Both taxing me, and 'gaging me to keep

An oath that I have sworn. I will not break it:

Fall Greeks, fall fame, honour, or go, or stay,

My major vow lies here: this I'll obey.—

Come, come, Thersites, help to trim my tent;

This night in banqueting must all be spent.—
Away, Patroclus. [Exeunt ACHILLES and PATROCLUS.]

Ther. With too much blood, and too little brain, these two may run mad: but if with too much brain, and too little blood, they do, I'll be a curer of madmen. Here's Agamemnon,—an honest fellow enough, and one that loves quails; but he has not so much brain as ear-wax: and the goodly transformation of Jupiter there, his brother, the bull,—the primitive statue, and oblique memorial of cuckolds, a thrifty shoeing-horn in a chain, hanging at his brother's leg,—to what form, but that he is, should wit larded with malice, and malice forced with wit, turn him to? To an ass, were nothing: he is both ass and ox: to an ox were nothing; he is both ox and ass. To be a dog, a mule, a cat, a fitchew, a toad, a lizard, an owl, a puttock, or a herring without a roe, I would not care; but to be Mene-laus,—I would conspire against destiny. Ask me not what I would be, if I were not Thersites, for I care not to be the louse of a lazar, so I were not Mene-laus.—

Hoy-day! spirits and fires!

Enter HECTOR, TROILUS, AJAX, AGAMEMNON, ULYSSES, NESTOR, MENELAUS, and DIOMEDES, with lights.

Agam. We go wrong; we go wrong.

Ajax.

No, yonder 't is

There, where we see the lights.

Hect.

I trouble you.

Ajax. No, not a whit.

Ulyss.

Here comes himself to guide you

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Welcome, brave Hector. welcome, princes all.

Agam. So now, fair prince of Troy, I bid good night. Ajax commands the guard to tend on you.

Hect. Thanks, and good night, to the Greeks' general.

Men. Good night, my lord.

Hect. Good night, sweet lord Mene-laus.

Ther. Sweet draught: sweet, quoth 'a! sweet sink, sweet sewer.

Achil. Good night, and welcome, both at once to these That go, or tarry.

Agam. Good night. [Exeunt AGAM. and MEN.]

Achil. Old Nestor tarries; and you too, Diomed, Keep Hector company an hour or two.

Dio. I cannot, lord; I have important business, The tide whereof is now.—Good night, great Hector.

Hect. Give me your hand.

Ulyss.

Follow his torch, he goes

To Calchas' tent: I'll keep you company.

[Aside to TROILUS.]

Tro. Sweet sir, you honour me.

Hect.

And so good night.

[Exit DIOMEDES.] ULYSSES and TROILUS following.

Achil. Come, come; enter my tent.

[Exeunt ACHILLES, HECTOR, AJAX, and NESTOR.]

Ther. That same Diomed's a false-hearted rogue, a most unjust knave: I will no more trust him when he leers, than I will a serpent when he hisses. He will spend his mouth, and promise, like Brabler the hound; but when he performs, astronomers foretel it: it is prodigious, there will come some change: the sun borrows of the moon when Diomed keeps his word, I will rather leave to see Hector, than not to dog him: they say, he keeps a Trojan drab, and uses the traitor Calchas' tent. I'll after.—Nothing but lechery: all incontinent varlets. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—The Same. Before CALCHAS' Tent.

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio. What are you up here, ho? speak.

Cal. [Within.] Who calls?

Dio. Diomed.—Calchas, I think.—Where's your daughter?

Cal. [Within.] She comes to you.

Enter TROILUS and ULYSSES, at a distance; after them THERSITES.

Ulyss. Stand where the torch may not discover us.

Enter CRESSIDA.

Tro. Cressid comes forth to him.

Dio. How now, my charge!

Cres. Now, my sweet guardian.—Hark! a word with you. [Whispers]

Tro. Yea, so familiar!
Ulyss. She will sing any man at first sight.
Ther. And any man may find her key,¹ if he can take her cleft;² she's noted.
Dio. Will you remember?
Cres. Remember? yes.
Dio. Nay, but do then; and let your mind be coupled with your words.
Tro. What should she remember?
Ulyss. List.
Cres. Sweet honey Greek, tempt me no more to folly.
Ther. Roguery?
Dio. Nay, then,—
Cres. I'll tell you what—
Dio. Pho! pho! come tell, a pin; you are forsworn.—
Cres. In faith, I cannot. What would you have me do?
Ther. A juggling trick.—to be secretly open.
Dio. What did you swear you would bestow on me?
Cres. I pr'ythee, do not hold me to mine oath;
 Bid me do any thing but that, sweet Greek.
Dio. Good night.
Tro. Hold, patience!
Ulyss. How now, Trojan?
Cres. Diomed!—
Dio. No, no: good night: I'll be your fool no more.
Tro. Thy better must.
Cres. Hark! one word in your ear.
Tro. O, plague and madness!
Ulyss. You are mov'd, prince: let us depart, I pray you,
 Lost your displeasure should enlarge itself
 To wrathful terms. This place is dangerous;
 The time right deadly: I beseech you, go.
Tro. Behold, I pray you!
Ulyss. Nay, my good lord, go off:
 You flow to great distraction; come, my lord.
Tro. I pr'ythee, stay.
Ulyss. You have not patience; come.
Tro. I pray you, stay. By hell, and all hell's torments,
 I will not speak a word.
Dio. And so, good night.
Cres. Nay, but you part in anger.
Tro. Doth that grieve thee?
 O, wither'd truth!
Ulyss. Why, how now, lord!
Tro. By Jove,
 I will be patient.
Cres. Guardian!—why, Greek!
Dio. Pho, pho! adieu; you palter.
Cres. In faith, I do not: come hither once again.
Ulyss. You shake, my lord, at something: will you go?
 You will break out.
Tro. She strokes his cheek!
Ulyss. Come, come.
Tro. Nay, stay: by Jove, I will not speak a word.
 There is between my will and all offences
 A guard of patience.—Stay a little while.
Ther. How the devil luxury, with his fat rump and potatoe finger, tickles these together! Fry, lechery, fry!
Dio. But will you then?
Cres. In faith, I will, lord:³ never trust me else.
Dio. Give me some token for the surety of it.
Cres. I'll fetch you one. [Exit.
Ulyss. You have sworn patience.
Tro. Fear me not, sweet lord;
 I will not be myself, nor have cognition
 Of what I feel: I am all patience.
 Re-enter CRESSIDA.
Ther. Now the pledge! now, now, now!

Cres. Here, Diomed, keep this sleeve. [Giving u
Tro. O beauty! where is thy faith?
Ulyss. My lord,—
Tro. I will be patient; outwardly I will.
Cres. You look upon that sleeve; behold it well.—
 He lov'd me—O false wench!—Give 't me again.
Dio. Whose was 't?
Cres. It is no matter, now I have 't again
 I will not meet with you to-morrow night.
I pr'ythee. Diomed, visit me no more.
Ther. Now she sharpens.—Well said, whetstone.
Dio. I shall have it.
Cres. What, this?
Dio. Ay, that.
Cres. O, all you gods!—O pretty, pretty pledge!
 Thy master now lies thinking in his bed
 Of thee, and me; and sighs, and takes my glove,
 And gives memorial dainty kisses to it,
 As I kiss thee.—Nay, do not snatch it from me;
 He that takes that doth take my heart withal.
Dio. I had your heart before; this follows it.
Tro. I did swear patience.
Cres. You shall not have it, Diomed; 'faith you shall not:
 I'll give you something else. [They strive.
Dio. I will have this. Whose was it?
Cres. 'T is no matter.
Dio. Come, tell me whose it was.
Cres. 'T was one's that lov'd me better than you will.
 But, now you have it, take it.
Dio. Whose was it?
Cres. By all Diana's waiting-women yond',
 And by herself, I will not tell you whose.
Dio. To-morrow will I wear it on my helm,
 And grieve his spirit that dares not challenge it.
Tro. Wert thou the devil, and wor'st it on thy horn,
 It should be challeng'd.
Cres. Well, well, 't is done, 't is past;—and yet it is not:
 I will not keep my word.
Dio. Why then, farewell.
 Thou never shalt mock Diomed again.
Cres. You shall not go.—One cannot speak a word,
 But it straight starts you.
Dio. I do not like this fooling.
Ther. Nor I, by Pluto: but that that likes not you, pleases me best.
Dio. What! shall I come? the hour?
Cres. Ay, come:—O Jove!—
 Do come:—I shall be plagu'd.
Dio. Farewell till then.
Cres. Good night: I pr'ythee, come.— [Exit Dio
 Troilus, farewell! one eye yet looks on thee,
 But with my heart the other eye doth see.
 Ah, poor our sex! this fault in us I find,
 The error of our eye directs our mind.
 What error leads must err: O! then conclude,
 Minds, sway'd by eyes, are full of turpitude.
 [Exit CRESSIDA
Ther. A proof of strength, she could not publish more.
 Unless she said, "my mind is now turn'd whore."
Ulyss. All's done, my lord.
Tro. It is.
Ulyss. Why stay we then?
Tro. To make a recordation to my soul
 Of every syllable that here was spoke.
 But if I tell how these two did co-act,
 Shall I not lie in publishing a truth?
 Sith yet there is a credence in my heart,

¹ may sing her: in f. e. ² cliff: in f. o. ³ la: in f. e. ⁴ Not in f. a. ⁵ me: in f. o.

An esperance so obstinately strong,
That doth invert th' attest of eyes and ears;
As if those organs had deceptive functions,
Created only to calumniate.
Was Cressid here?

Ulyss. I cannot conjure, Trojan.

Tro. She was not, sure.

Ulyss. Most sure, she was.

Tro. Why, my negation hath no taste of madness.

Ulyss. Nor mine, my lord: Cressid was here but now.

Tro. Let it not be believ'd for womanhood!

Think we had mothers: do not give advantage

To stubborn critics—apt, without a theme,

For depravation,—to square the general sex

By Cressid's rule: rather think this not Cressid.

Ulyss. What hath she done, prince, that can soil our mothers?

Tro. Nothing at all, unless that this were she.

Ther. Will he swagger himself out on 's own eyes?

Tro. This she? no; this is Diomed's Cressida.

If beauty have a soul, this is not she:

If souls guide vows, if vows be sanctimony,

If sanctimony be the gods' delight,

If there be rule in unity itself,

This is not she. O madness of discourse,

That cause sets up with and against itself!

Bi-fold authority! where reason can revolt

Without perdition, and loss assume all reason

Without revolt: this is, and is not, Cressid.

Within my soul there doth conduce a fight

Of this strange nature, that a thing inseparate

Divides more wider than the sky and earth:

And yet the spacious breadth of this division

Admits no orifice for a point, as subtle

As Arachne's broken web, to enter.

Instance? O instance! strong as Pluto's gates,

Cressid is mine, tied with the bonds of heaven:

Instance? O instance! strong as heaven itself:

The bonds of heaven are slipp'd, dissolv'd, and loos'd;

And with another knot, five-finger-tied,

The fractions of her faith, orts of her love,

The fragments, scraps, the bits, and greasy reliques

Of her o'er-eaten faith, are given² to Diomed.

Ulyss. May worth³ Troilus be half attach'd

With that which here his passion doth express?

Tro. Ay, Greek; and that shall be divulged well

In characters as red as Mars his heart

Inflam'd with Venus: never did young man fancy

With so eternal and so fix'd a soul.

Hark, Greek:—as much as I do Cressid love,

So much by weight hate I her Diomed.

That sleeve is mine, that he'll bear on his helm:

Were it a casque composed by Vulcan's skill,

My sword should bite it. Not the dreadful spout,

Which shipmen do the hurricano call,

Construng'd in mass by the almighty sun,

Shall dizzy with more clamour Neptune's ear

In his descent, than shall my prompted sword

Falling on Diomed.

Ther. He'll tickle it for his concupy.

Tro. O Cressid! O false Cressid! false, false, false!

Let all untruths stand by thy stained name.

And they'll seem glorious.

Ulyss. O! contain yourself;

Your passion draws ears hither.

Enter ÆNEAS.

Æne. I have been seeking you this hour, my lord.

Hector, by this, is arming him in Troy:

Ajax, your guard, stays to conduct you home.

Tro. Have with you, prince.—My courteous lord,
adieu.—

Farewell, revolted fair!—and, Diomed,

Stand fast, and wear a castle on thy head!

Ulyss. I'll bring you to the gates.

Tro. Accept distracted thanks.

[Exeunt TROILUS, ÆNEAS, and ULYSSES.

Ther. [Coming forward.] Would, I could meet that rogue Diomed. I would croak like a raven; I would bode. I would bode. Patroclus will give me anything for the intelligence of this whore: the parrot will not do more for an almond, than he for a commodious drab.
Leechery, leechery; still, wars and lechery: nothing else holds fashion. A burning devil take them! [Exit.

SCENE III.—Troy. Before PRIAM'S Palace.

Enter HECTOR and ANDROMACHE.

And. When was my lord so much ungently temper'd.

To stop his ears against admonishment?

Unarm, unarm, and do not fight to-day.

Hect. You train me to offend you; get you in:

By all⁴ the everlasting gods, I'll go.

And. My dreams will, sure, prove ominous to-day.

Hect. No more, I say.

Enter CASSANDRA.

Cas. Where is my brother Hector

And. Here, sister; arm'd, and bloody in intent.

Consort with me in loud and dear petition:

Pursue we him on knees; for I have dream'd

Of bloody turbulence, and this whole night

Hath nothing been but shapes and forms of slaughter.

Cas. O! 'tis true.

Hect. Ho! bid my trumpet sound.

Cas. No notes of sally, for the heavens, sweet brother

Hect. Begone, I say: the gods have heard me swear

Cas. The gods are deaf to hot and peevish⁵ vows:

They are polluted offerings, more abhor'd

Than spotted livers in the sacrifice.

And. O! be persuaded: do not count it holy

To hurt by being just: it is as lawful

For us to give much count to violent thefts,⁶

And rob in the behalf of charity.

Cas. It is the purpose that makes strong the vow:

But vows to every purpose must not hold.

Unarm, sweet Hector.

Hect. Hold you still, I say;

Mine honour keeps the weather of my fate:

Life every man holds dear; but the dear man

Holds honour far more precious dear than life.—

Enter TROILUS.

How now, young man! mean'st thou to fight to-day?

And. Cassandra, call my father to persuade.

[Exit CASSANDRA.

Hect. No, 'faith, young Troilus; doff thy harness youth;

I am to-day i' the vein of chivalry.

Let grow thy sinews till their knots be strong,

And tempt not yet the brushes of the war.

Unarm thee, go; and doubt thou not, brave boy,

I'll stand to-day for thee, and me, and Troy.

Tro. Brother, you have a vice of mercy in you,

Which better fits a lion than a man.

Hect. What vice is that, good Troilus? chide me for it.

Tro. When many times the captive Grecians fail,

Even in the fan and wind of your fair sword,

¹ thyself: in folio. ² bound: in folio. ³ gone: in folio. ⁴ Not in folio. ⁵ Foolish. ⁶ The folio: "For we would count give much as violent thefts." The line has been variously arranged by modern editors. "For we would give much, to count violent thefts," is one of the best.

You bid them rise, and live.

Hect. O! 't is fair play.

Tro. Fool's play, by heaven, Hector.

Hect. How now! how now!

Tro. For the love of all the gods,

Let 's leave the hermit pity with our mothers,

And when we have our amours buckled on,

The venom'd vengeance ride upon our swords;

Spur them to ruthless work, rein them from ruth.

Hect. Fie, savage, fie!

Tro. Hector, then 't is wars.

Hect. Troilus, I would not have you fight to-day.

Tro. Who should withhold me?

Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mars

Beckoning with fiery truncheon my retire;

Not Priamus and Hecuba on knees,

Their eyes o'ergalled with recourse of tears;

Nor you, my brother, with your true sword drawn.

Oppos'd to hinder me, should stop my way,

But by my ruin.

Re-enter CASSANDRA with PRIAM.

Cas. Lay hold upon him, Priam, hold him fast:

He is thy crutch; now, if thou lose thy stay,

Thou on him leaning, and all Troy on thee,

Fall all together.

Pri. Come, Hector, come: go back.

Thy wife hath dream'd; thy mother hath had visions,

Cassandra doth foresee: and I myself

Am like a prophet suddenly enrapt,

To tell thee that this day is ominous:

Therefore, come back.

Hect. Aeneas is a-field;

And I do stand engag'd to many Greeks;

Even in the faith of valour, to appear

This morning to them.

Pri. Ay, but thou shalt not go.

Hect. I must not break my faith.

You know me dutiful; therefore, dear sir,

Let me not shame respect, but give me leave

To take that course by your consent and voice,

Which you do here forbid me, royal Priam.

Cas. O Priam! yield not to him.

And.

Do not, dear father.

Hect. Andromache, I am offended with you:

'Upon the love you bear me, get you in.

[Exit ANDROMACHE.]

Tro. This foolish, dreaming, superstitious girl

Makes all these bodements.

Cas.

O farewell, dear Hector!

Look, how thou diest! look, how thine eye turns pale!

Look, how thy wounds do bleed at many vents!

Hark, how Troy roars! how Hecuba cries out!

How poor Andromache shrills her dolour forth!

Behold, distraction, frenzy, and amazement,

Like witless antics, one another meet.

And all cry—Hector! Hector's dead! O Hector!

Tro. Away!—Away!

Cas. Farewell.—Yet, soft!—Hector, I take my leave:

Thou dost thyself and all our Troy deceive. [Exit.]

Hect. You are amaz'd, my liege, at her exclaim.

Go in, and cheer the town: we'll forth, and fight;

Do deeds worth praise, and tell you them at night.

Pri. Farewell: the gods with safety stand about thee!

[Exeunt severally PRIAM and HECTOR. Alarums.]

Tro. They are at it; hark!—Proud Diomed, believe,

I come to lose mine arm, or win my sleeve. [Going]

Enter PANDARUS.

Pan. Do you hear, my lord? do you hear?

Tro. What now?

Pan. Here 's a letter come from yond' poor girl.

[Giving it.]

Tro. Let me read.

Pan. A whoreson phthisick, a whoreson rascally phthisick so troubles me, and the foolish fortune of this girl; and what one thing, what another, that I shall leave you one o' these days: and I have a rheum in mine eyes too; and such an ache in my bones, that, unless a man were cursed, I cannot tell what to think on 't.—What says she there?

Tro. Words, words, mere words, no matter from the heart; [Tearing the letter.]

Th' effect doth operate another way.—

Go, wind to wind, there turn and change together.—

My love with words and air still she feeds,

But edifies another with her deeds. [Exeunt severally]

SCENE IV.—Between Troy and the Grecian Camp

Alarums: Excursions. Enter THERSITES.

Ther. Now they are clapper-clawing one another:

I'll go look on. That dissembling abominable varlet,

Diomed, has got that same scurvy doting foolish young knave's sleeve, of Troy there, in his helm: I would fain see them meet; that same young Trojan ass, that loves the whore there, might send that Greekish whoremasterly villain, with the sleeve, back to the dissembling luxurious drab of a sleeveless errand. O' the other side, the policy of those crafty swearing rascals.

—that stale old mouse-eaten dry cheese, Nestor, and that same dog-fox, Ulysses,—is not proved worth a blackberry:—they set me up in policy that mongrel

cur, Ajax, against that dog of as bad a kind, Achilles;

and now is the cur Ajax prouder than the cur Achilles,

and will not arm to-day: whereupon the Grecians begin to proclaim barbarism, and policy grows into an ill opinion. Soft! here come sleeve, and sleeveless. [Stands back.]

Enter DIOMEDES, TROILUS following.

Tro. Fly not, for shouldst thou take the river Styx,

I would swim after.

Dio.

Thou dost miscall retire:

I do not fly, but advantageous ease

Withdrew me from the odds of multitude.

Have at thee!

Ther. Hold thy whore, Grecian!—now for thy whore, Trojan!—now the sleeve! now the sleeveless! [Exeunt TROILUS and DIOMEDES, fighting.]

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. What art thou, Greek? art thou for Hector's match?

Art thou of blood, and honour?

[Dragging THER. forward.]

Ther. No, no:—I am a rascal; a scurvy railing knave, a very filthy rogue.

Hect. I do believe thee:—live. [Exit.]

Ther. God-a-mercy, that thou wilt believe me; but a plague break thy neck, for frightening me! What's become of the wenching rogues? I think, they have swallowed one another: I would laugh at that miracle;

yet, in a sort, lechery eats itself. I'll seek them. [Exit.]

SCENE V.—The Same.

Enter DIOMEDES and a Servant.

Dio. Go, go, my servant, take thou Troilus' horse;
Present the fair steed to my lady Cressid.
Fellow, commend my service to her beauty:
Tell her, I have chasti'd the amorous Trojan,
And am her knight by proof.

Serv. I go, my lord. [Exit Servant.]

Enter AGAMEMNON.

Agam. Renew, renew! The fierce Polydamus
Hath beat down Menon: bastard Margarelon
Hath Doreus prisoner,
And stands colossus-wise, waving his beam,
Upon the pashed corpses of the kings
Epistrophus and Cediüs: Polixenes is slain;
Amphimachus, and Thoas, deadly hurt;
Patroclus ta'en, or slain; and Palamedes
Sore hurt and bruised: the dreadful Sagittary
Appals our numbers. Haste we, Diomed,
To reinforcement, or we perish all.

Enter NESTOR.

Nest. Go, bear Patroclus' body to Achilles,
And bid the snail-pac'd Ajax arm for shame.—
There is a thousand Hectors in the field:
Now, here he fights on Galathea his horse,
And there lacks work; anon, he's there afoot,
And there they fly, or die, like scaled sculls!
Before the belching whale: there, is he yonder,
And there the strawy² Greeks, ripe for his edge,
Fall down before him, like the mower's swath.
Here, there, and every where, he leaves, and takes;
Dexterity so obeying appetite,
That what he will, he does; and does so much,
That proof is call'd impossibility.

Enter ULYSSES.

Ulyss. O, courage, courage, princes! great Achilles
Is arming, weeping, cursing, vowing vengeance.
Patroclus' wounds have rous'd his drowsy blood,
Together with his mangled Myrmidons,
That noseless, handless, hack'd and chipp'd, come to
him,
Crying on Hector. Ajax hath lost a friend.
And foams at mouth, and he is arm'd, and at it,
Roaring for Troilus: who hath done to-day
Mad and fantastic execution,
Engaging and redeeming of himself,
With such a careless force, and forceless care,
As if that luck, in very spite of cunning,
Bade him win all.

Enter AJAX.

Ajax. Troilus! thou coward Troilus! [Exit.]

Dio. Ay, there, there.

Nest. So, so, we draw together.

Enter ACHILLES.

Achil. Where is this Hector?
Come, come, thou boy-queller, show thy face;
Know what it is to meet Achilles angry.
Hector! where's Hector? I will none but Hector.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter AJAX.

Ajax. Troilus! thou coward Troilus, show thy head!

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio. Troilus, I say! where's Troilus?

Ajax. What wouldst thou?

Dio. I would correct him.

Ajax. Were I the general, thou shouldst have my office,

Ere that correction.—Troilus, I say! what, Troilus!

Enter TROILUS.

Tro. O, traitor Diomed!—turn thy false face, thou traitor,

And pay the life thou ow'st me for my horse.

Dio. Ha! art thou there?

Ajax. I'll fight with him alone: stand, Diomed.

Dio. He is my prize: I will not look upon³.

Tro. Come both, you cogging⁴ Greeks; have at ye both. [Exeunt fighting.]

Enter HECTOR.

Hect. Yea, Troilus. O' well fought, my youngest brother

Enter ACHILLES

Achil. Now do I see thee. Ha!—Have it thee
Hector

Hect. Pause, if thou wilt

Achil. I do disdain thy courtesy, proud Trojan.

Be happy that my arms are out of use;

My rest and negligence befriended thee now,

But thou anon shalt hear of me again;

Till when, go seek thy fortune. [Exeunt]

Hect. Fare thee well.

I would have been much more a fresher man,

Had I expected thee.—How now, my brother!

Re-enter TROILUS.

Tro. Ajax hath ta'en Æneas: shall it be?

No, by the flame of yonder glorious heaven,

He shall not carry him: I'll be taken too,

Or bring him off.—Fate, hear me what I say!

I reck not though I⁵ end my life to-day. [Exit]

Enter one in goodly Armour.

Hect. Stand, stand, thou Greek: thou art a goodly mark.—

No! wilt thou not?—I like thy armour well;

I'll frush⁶ it, and unlock the rivets all,

But I'll be master of it.—Wilt thou not, beast, abide?

Why then, fly on, I'll hunt thee for thy hide. [Exeunt]

SCENE VII.—The Same.

Enter ACHILLES, with Myrmidons.

Achil. Come here about me, you my Myrmidons;

Mark what I say.—Attend me where I wheel:

Strike not a stroke, but keep yourselves in breath;

And when I have the bloody Hector found,

Empale him with your weapons round about;

In fell'st manner execute your aims⁷.

Follow me, sirs, and my proceedings eye.—

It is decreed—Hector the great must die. [Exeunt]

SCENE VIII.—The Same.

Enter MENELAUS and PARIS, fighting: then, THESSITES

Ther. The cuckold and the cuckold-maker are at it.

Now, bull! now, dog! 'Loo, Paris, 'loo! now, m double-henned sparrow! 'loo, Paris, 'loo! The bul has the game:—ware horns, ho!

[Exeunt PARIS and MENELAUS]Enter MARGARELON.

Mar. Turn, slave, and fight.

Ther. What art thou?

Mar. A bastard son of Priam's.

Ther. I am a bastard too. I love bastards; I am a bastard begot, bastard instructed, bastard in mind, bastard in valour, in every thing illegitimate. One bear will not bite another, and therefore should one be bastard? Take heed, the quarrel's most ominous to us:

if the son of a whore fight for a whore, he tempts judgment. Farewell, bastard.

Mar. The devil take thee, coward! [Exeunt]

SCENE IX.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter Hector.

Hect. Most putrified core, so fair without,
Thy goodly armour thus hath cost thy life.
Now is my day's work done; I'll take good breath;
Rest, sword; thou hast thy fill of blood and death!

[Puts off his Helmet, and lays down his Sword.]Enter Achilles and Myrmidons.

Achil. Look, Hector, how the sun begins to set;
How ugly night comes breathing at his heels;
Even with the vail¹ and darkening of the sun,
To close the day up. Hector's life is done.

Hect. I am unarm'd: forego this vantage, Greek.Achil. Strike, fellows, strike! this is the man I seek.[Hector is slain.]

So, Ilium, fall thou next!² now, Troy, sink down;
Here lies thy heart, thy sinews, and thy bone.—
On, Myrmidons; and cry you all amain,
Achilles hath the mighty Hector slain.

[A Retreat sounded.]Hark! a retire³ upon our Grecian part.Myr. The Trojan trumpets sound the like, my lord.

Achil. The dragon wing of night o'erspreads the earth,
And, stickler⁴ like, the armies separates.
My half-suppl'd sword, that frankly would have fed,
Pleas'd with this dainty bit,⁵ thus goes to bed.—

[Sheathes his Sword.]

Come, tie his body to my horse's tail;

Along the field I will the Trojan trail.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE X.—The Same.

Enter AGAMEMNON, AJAX, MENELAUS, NESTOR, DIOMEDES, and others, marching. Shouts within.Agam. Hark! hark! what shout is that?Nst.

Peace, drums!

[Voices Within.]

Achilles!

Achilles! Hector's slain! Achilles!

Dio. The bruit is, Hector's slain, and by Achilles.Ajax. If it be so, yet bragless let it be:

Great Hector was a man as good as he.

Agam. March patiently along.—Let one be sent

To pray Achilles see us at our tent.—

If in his death the gods have us befriended,

Great Troy is ours, and our sharp wars are ended.

[Exeunt, marching.]

SCENE XI.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter AENEAS and Trojan Forces.

Aene. Stand, ho! yet are we masters of the field.
Never go home: here starve we out the night.

Enter TROILUS.Tro. Hector is slain.All.

Hector?—The gods forbid!

Tro. He's dead; and at the murderer's horse's tail,
In beastly sort dragg'd through the shameful field.—

Frown on, you heavens, effect your rage with speed!
Sit, gods, upon your thrones, and smile at Troy!
I say, at once let your brief plagues be merey,
And linger not our sure destructions on!

Aene. My lord, you do discomfort all the host.Tro. You understand me not, that tell me so.

I do not speak of flight, of fear, of death;

But dare all imminence, that gods and men

Address their dangers in. Hector is gone!

Who shall tell Priam so, or Hecuba?

Let him, that will a screech-owl aye be call'd,

Go in to Troy, and say there—Hector's dead:

There is a word will Priam turn to stone,

Make wells and Niobes of the maids and wives.

Cold⁶ statues of the youth; and, in a word,

Scare Troy out of itself. But, march, away:

Hector is dead; there is no more to say.

Stay yet.—You vile abominable tents,

Thus proudly pight⁷ upon our Phrygian plains,

Let Titan rise as early as he dare,

I'll through and through you!—And, thou great-siz'd
coward,

No space of earth shall sunder our two hates:

I'll haunt thee like a wicked conscience still,

That mouldeth goblins swift as frenzy's thoughts.—

Strike a free march to Troy!—with comfort go:

Hope of revenge shall hide our inward woe.

[Exeunt AENEAS and Trojan forces]As TROILUS is going out, enter, from the other side,PANDARUS.Pan. But hear you, hear you!

Tro. Hence, brothel-lackey⁸! ignomy and shame
Pursue thy life, and give aye with thy name!

[Exit TROILUS.]

Pan. A goodly medicine for mine aching bones!—
[Left alone, let him say this by way of Epilogue.] O world! world! world! thus is the poor agent despised.
O, traitors and bawds, how earnestly are you set 'a work, and how ill requited! why should our endeavour be so loved⁹, and the performance so loathed? what verse for it? what instance for it?—Let me see.—

"Full merrily the humble-bee doth sing,
Till he hath lost his honey, and his sting;
And being once subdued in armed tail,
Sweet honey a sweet notes together fail."

Good traders in the flesh, set this in your painted cloths¹⁰

As many as be here of Pander's Hall,

Your eyes, half out, weep out at Pandar's fall;

Or, if you cannot weep, yet give some groans,

Though not for me, yet for your aching bones.

Brethren, and sisters, of the hold-door trade,

Some two months hence my will shall here be mad¹¹

It should be now, but that my fear is this,—

Some galled goose of Winchester¹² would hiss.

Till then I'll sweat, and seek about for cases;

And at that time bequeath you my diseases. [Exit]

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter a Company of mutinous Citizens, with Staves, Clubs, and other Weapons.

1 Cit. Before we proceed any farther, hear me speak.
All. Speak, speak.

1 Cit. You are all resolved rather to die, than to famish?

All. Resolved, resolved.

1 Cit. First you know, Caius Marcius is chief enemy to the people.

All. We know 't, we know 't.

1 Cit. Let us kill him, and we'll have corn at our own price. Is't a verdict?

All. No more talking on't; let it be done. Away, away!

2 Cit. One word, good citizens.—

1 Cit. We are accounted poor citizens; the patricians good. What authority surfeits on, would relieve us: if they would yield us but the superfluity, while it were wholesome, we might guess they relieved us humanely; but they think, we are too dear: the lean-ness that afflicts us, the abjectness of our misery, is as an inventory to particularize their abundance; our sufferance is a gain to them.—Let us revenge this with our pikes, ere we become rakes: for the gods know, I speak this in hunger for bread, not in thirst for revenge.

2 Cit. Would you proceed especially against Caius Marcius?

All. Against him first: he's a very dog to the commonalty.

2 Cit. Consider you what services he has done for his country?

1 Cit. Very well; and could be content to give him good report for't, but that he pays himself with being proud.

2 Cit. Nay, but speak not maliciously.

1 Cit. I say unto you, what he hath done famously, he did it to that end: though soft-conscienced men can be content to say it was for his country, he did it to please his mother, and partly to be proud; which he even to the altitude of his virtue.

2 Cit. What he cannot help in his nature, you account a vice in him. You must in no way say he is covetous.

1 Cit. If I must not, I need not be barren of accusations: he hath faults, with surplus, to tire in repetition. [Shouts within.] What shouts are these? The other side o' the city is risen: why stay we prating here? to the Capitol!

All. Come, come.

1 Cit. Soft! who comes here?

Enter MENENIUS AGRIPPA.

2 Cit. Worthy Menenius Agrippa; one that hath always loved the people.

1 Cit. He's one honest enough: would, all the rest were so!

Men. What work's, my countrymen, in hand? Where go you

With bats and clubs? The matter? Speak, I pray you.

2 Cit. Our business is not unknown to the senate: they have had inkling this fortnight what we intend to do, which now we'll show 'em in deeds. They say, poor suitors have strong breaths: they shall know, we have strong arms too.

Men. Why, masters, my good friends, mine honest neighbours,

Will you undo yourselves?

2 Cit. We cannot, sir; we are undone already.

Men. I tell you, friends, most charitable care

Have the patricians of you. For your wants, Your suffering in this dearth, you may as well Strike at the heaven with your staves, as lift them Against the Roman state; whose course will on The way it takes, cracking ten thousand curbs Of more strong link asunder, than can ever Appear 'n your impediment. For the dearth, The gods, not the patricians, make it; and Your knees to them, not arms, must help. Alack! You are transported by calamity.

Thither where more attends you; and you slander The helms o' the state, who care for you like fathers, When you curse them as enemies.

2 Cit. Care for us?—True, indeed!—They ne'er cared for us yet. Suffer us to famish, and their store-houses crammed with grain; make edicts for usury, to support usurers; repeal daily any wholesome act established against the rich, and provide more piercing statutes daily to chain up and restrain the poor. If the wars eat us not up, they will; and there's all the love they bear us.

Men. Either you must Confess yourselves wondrous malicious, Or be accus'd of folly. I shall tell you A pretty tale: it may be, you have heard it; But, since it serves my purpose, I will venture To scale¹ 't a little more.

2 Cit. Well, I'll hear it, sir: yet you must not think To fob off our disgraces with a tale; But, an't please you, deliver.

Men. There was a time, when all the body's members Rebell'd against the belly; thus accus'd it:— That only like a gulf it did remain I' the midst o' the body, idle and unactive, Still cupboarding the viand, never bearing Like labour with the rest; where th' other instruments Did see, and hear, devise, instruct, walk, feel, And mutually partipate, did minister Unto the appetite, and affection common Of the whole body. The belly answered.—

2 Cit. Well, sir, what answer made the belly?

Men. Sir, I shall tell you.—With a kind of smile, Which ne'er came from the lungs, but even thus, 'For, look you, I may make the belly smile, As well as speak' it tauntingly replied To the discontented members, the mutinous parts That envied his receipt; even so most fitly As you malign our senators, for that They are not such as you.

2 Cit. Your belly's answer? What! The kingly crowned head, the vigilant eye, The counsellor heart, the arm our soldier, Our steed the leg, the tongue our trumpeter, With other muniments and petty helps In this our fabric, if that they—

Men. What then? Fore me, this fellow speaks!—what then? what then?

2 Cit. Should by the cornorant belly be restrain'd, Who is the sink o' the body,—

Men. Well, what then?

2 Cit. The former agents, if they did complain, What could the belly answer?

Men. I will tell you, If you'll bestow a small (of what you have little) Patience a while, you'll hear the belly's answer.

2 Cit. You're long about it.

Men. Note me this, good friend; our most grave belly was deliberate, Not rash like his accusers, and thus answer'd:— "True is it, my incorporate friends," quoth he,

"That I receive the general food at first, Which you do live upon; and fit it is, Because I am the store-house, and the shop Of the whole body: but if you do remember, I send it through the rivers of your blood, Even to the court, the heart, the senate, brain;² And through the ranks³ and offices of man: The strongest nerves, and small inferior veins, From me receive that natural competency Whereby they live. And though that all at once, You, my good friends," this says the belly, mark me.—

2 Cit. Ay, sir; well, well.

Men. "Though all at once cannot See what I do deliver out to each, Yet I can make my audit up, that all From me do back receive the flour of all, And leave me but the bran."⁴ What say you to't?

2 Cit. It was an answer. How apply you this?

Men. The senators of Rome are this good belly, And you the mutinous members: for examine Their counsels, and their cares; digest things rightly Touching the weal o' the common, you shall find, No public benefit which you receive, But it proceeds, or comes, from them to you, And no way from yourselves.—What do you think, You, the great toe of this assembly?—

2 Cit. I the great toe? Why the great toe?

Men. For that being one o' the lowest, basest, poorest, Of this most wise rebellion, thou go'st foremost: Thou rascal, that art worst in blood to run, Lead'st first to win some vantage.— But make you ready your stiff bats and clubs, Rome and her rats are at the point of battle; The one side must have bale.⁵—Hail, noble Marcius!

Enter CAIUS MARCIUS.

Mar. Thanks.—What's the matter, you dissentious rogues,

That rubbing the poor itch of your opinion, Make yourselves scabs?

2 Cit. We have ever your good word.

Mar. He that will give good words to ye, will flatter Beneath abhorring.—What would you have, you curs, That like no peace, nor war? the one affrights you, The other makes you proud. He that trusts to you, Where he should find you lions, finds you hares; Where foxes, geese: you are no surer, no, Than is the coal of fire upon the ice, Or hailstone in the sun. Your virtue is To make him worthy, whose offence suddens him, And curse that justice did it. Who deserves greatness, Deserves your hate; and your affections are A sick man's appetite, who desires most that Which would increase his evil. He that depends Upon your favours swims with fins of lead, And hews down oaks with rushes. Hang ye! Trust ye! With every minute you do change your mind, And call him noble, that was now your hate, Him vile, that was your garland. What's the matter That in these several places of the city You cry against the noble senate, who, Under the gods, keep you in awe, which else Would feed on one another?—What's their seeking?

Men. For corn at their own rates; whereof, they say The city is well stor'd.

Mar. Hang 'em! They say? They'll sit by the fire, and presume to know What's done i' the Capitol; who's like to rise, Who thrives, and who declines; side factions, and put out Conjectural marriages; making parties strong, And feebling such as stand not in their liking Below their cobbled shoes. They say, there's a great enough?

Would the nobility lay aside their ruth, And let me use my sword, I'd make a quarry⁶ With thousands of these quarter'd slaves, as high As I could pick⁷ my lance.

Men. Nay, these are all most⁸ thoroughly persuaded For though abundantly they lack discretion, Yet are they passing cowardly. But, I beseech you

What says the other troop?

Mar. They are dissolved. Hang 'em !
They said, they were an-hungry ; sigh'd forth proverbs,—

That hunger broke stone walls ; that dogs must eat ;
That meat was made for mouths ; that the gods sent not
Corn for the rich men only.—With these shreds
They vented their complainings ; which being answer'd, and a petition granted them, a strange one,
(To break the heart of generosity,
And make bold power look pale) they threw their caps
As they would hang them on the horns o' the moon,
Shouting their exultation¹.

Men. What is granted them ?
Mar. Five tribunes, to defend their vulgar wisdoms,
Of their own choice : one's Junius Brutus,
Sicinius Velutus, and I know not.—²Sdeath !
The rabble should have first unroof'd the city,
Ere so prevail'd with me : it will in time
Win upon power, and throw forth greater themes
For insurrection's arguing.

Men. This is strange.
Mar. Go ; get you home, you fragments !

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Where's Caius Marcius ?
Mar. Here. What's the matter ?
Mess. The news is, sir, the Volscies are in arms.
Mar. I am glad on't : then, we shall have means to vent

Our musty superfluity.—See, our best elders.

Enter COMINIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, and other Senators ;
JUNIUS BRUTUS, and SICINIUS VELUTUS.

1 Sen. Marcius, 't is true that you have lately told us ;
The Volscies are in arms.

Mar. They have a leader,
Tullus Aufidius, that will put you to 't.
I sin in envying his nobility,
And, were I any thing but what I am,
Would wish me only he.

Com. You have fought together.
Mar. Were half to half the world by th' ears, and he Upon my party, I'd revolt, to make
Only my wars with him ; he is a lion
That I am proud to hunt.

1 Sen. Then, worthy Marcius,
Attend upon Cominius to these wars.

Com. It is your former promise.

Mar. Sir, it is ;
And I am constant.—Titus Lartius, thou
Shalt see me once more strike at Tullus' face.
What ! art thou stiff ? stand'st out ?

Tit. No, Caius Marcius ;
I'll lean upon one crutch, and fight with the other,
Ere stay behind this business.

Men. O, true bred !

1 Sen. Your company to the Capitol ; where, I know,
Our greatest friends attend us.

Tit. Lead you on :
Follow, Cominius ; we must follow you,
Right worthy your priority.

Com. Noble Marcius !

1 Sen. Hence ! To your homes ! be gone.

To the Citizens.
Mar. Nay, let them follow.
The Volscies have much corn : take these rats thither,
To gnaw their garners.—Worshipful mutineers,
Our valour puts well forth : pray, follow.

[Exit Senators, COM. MAR. TIT. and MENEN.
Citizens steal away.

Sic. Was ever man so proud as is this Marcius ?

Bru. He has no equal.

Sic. When we were chosen tribunes for the people,—

Bru. Mark'd you his lip, and eyes ?

Sic. Nay, but his taunts

Bru. Being mov'd, he will not spare to gird² the gods

Sic. Bemock the modest moon.

Bru. The present wars devour him : he is grown
Too proud to be so valiant.

Sic. Such a nature,
Tickled with good success, disdains the shadow
Which he treads on at noon. But I do wonder,
His insolence can brook to be commanded
Under Cominius.

Bru. Fame, at the which he aims,
In whom already he is well grac'd, cannot Better be held, nor more attain'd, than by
A place below the first ; for what misearries
Shall be the general's fault, though he perform
To the utmost of a man ; and giddy censure
Will then cry out of Marcius, "O, if he Had borne the business !"

Sic. Besides, if things go well,
Opinion, that so sticks on Marcius, shall
Of his demerits³ rob Cominius.

Bru. Come :
Half all Cominius' honours are to Marcius,
Though Marcius earn'd them not ; and all his faults
To Marcius shall be honours, though, indeed,
In aught he merit not.

Sic. Let's hence, and hear
How the despatch is made ; and in what fashion,
More than his singularity, he goes
Upon his present action.

Bru. Let's along. [Exit]

SCENE II.—Corioli. The Senate-House.

Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS, and Senators.

1 Sen. So, your opinion is, Aufidius,
That they of Rome are enter'd in our counsels,
And know how we proceed.

Auf. Is it not yours ?
What ever have been thought on in this state,
That could be brought to bodily act ere Rome
Had circumvention ? 'T is not four days gone,
Since I heard thence ; these are the words : I think,
I have the letter here ; yes, here it is :— [Reads]
"They have press'd a power, but it is not known
Whether for east, or west. The dearth is great ;
The people mutinous ; and it is rumour'd,
Cominius, Marcius your old enemy,
(Who is of Rome worse hated than of you)
And Titus Lartius, a most valiant Roman,
These three lead on this preparation
Whether 't is bent : most likely, 't is for you.
Consider of it."⁴

1 Sen. Our army's in the field.
We never yet made doubt but Rome was ready
To answer us.

Auf. Nor did you think it folly,
To keep your great pretences veil'd, till when [ing]
They needs must show themselves : which in the hatch
It seem'd, appear'd to Rome. By the discovery.
We shall be shorten'd in our aim ; which was
To take in many towns, ere, almost, Rome
Should know we were afoot.

2 Sen. Noble Aufidius,
Take your commission ; hie you to your bands.

[Gong ut]

Let us alone to guard Corioli:

If they set down before 's, for the remove Bring up your army; but, I think, you 'll find
They 've not prepar'd for us.

Auf. O! doubt not that:

I speak from certainties. Nay, more;
Some parcels of their power are forth already,
And only hitherward. I leave your honours.

If we and Caius Marcius chance to meet,

'T is sworn between us, we shall ever strike

Till one can do no more.

All. The gods assist you!

Auf. And keep your honours safe!

1 Sen.

Farewell.

2 Sen.

Farewell.

All. Farewell.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Rome. An Apartment in MARCIUS' House.

Enter VOLUMNIA, and VIRGILIA. They sit down on two low Stools, and sew.

Vol. I pray you, daughter, sing; or express yourself in a more comfortable sort. If my son were my husband, I should freelier rejoice in that absence wherein he won honour, than in the embracements of his bed, where he would show most love. When yet he was but tender-bodied, and the only son of my womb; when youth with comeliness plucked all gaze his way; when, for a day of king's entreaties, a mother should not sell him an hour from her beholding; I,—considering how honour would become such a person; that it was no better than picture-like to hang by the wall, if renown made it not stir,—was pleased to let him seek danger where he was like to find fame. To a cruel war I sent him; from whence he returned, his brows bound with oak. I tell thee, daughter, I sprang not more in joy at first hearing he was a man-child, than now in first seeing he had proved himself a man.

Vir. But had he died in the business, madam? how then?

Vol. Then, his good report should have been my son; I therein would have found issue. Hear me profess sincerely:—had I a dozen sons,—each in my love alike, and none less dear than mine and my good Marcius,—I had rather had eleven die nobly for their country, than one voluptuously surfeit out of action.

Enter a Gentlewoman.

Gent. Madam, the lady Valeria is come to visit you.

Vir. Beseech you, give me leave to retire myself.

Vol. Indeed, you shall not.

Methinks, I hear hither your husband's drum,
See him pluck Aufidius down by the hair;
As children from a bear the Volscies shunning him:
Methinks, I see him stamp thus, and call thus,—
"Come on, you cowards! you were got in fear, Though you were born in Rome." His bloody brow
With his mail'd hand then wiping, forth he goes,
Like to a harvest-man, that's task'd to mow
Or all, or lose his hire.

Vir. His bloody brow? O Jupiter! no blood.

Vol. Away, you fool! it more becomes a man,
Than gilt his trophy: the breasts of Hebea,

When she did suckle Hector, look'd not lovelier
Than Hector's forehead, when it spit forth blood
At Grecian swords contemning.¹—Tell Valeria,

We are fit to bid her welcome. [Erit Gent.]

Vir. Heavens-bless my lord from fell Aufidius!

Vol. He 'll beat Aufidius' head below his knee,
And tread upon his neck.

Re-enter Gentlewoman, with VALERIA and her Usher.

Val. My ladies both, good day to you.

Vol. Sweet madam.

Vir. I am glad to see your ladyship.

Val. How do you both? you are manifest house-keepers. What are you sewing here? A fine spot,² in good faith.—How does your little son?

Vir. I thank your ladyship; well, good madam.

Vol. He had rather see swords, and hear a drum, than look upon his school-master.

Val. O! my word, the father's son: I'll swear, 't is a very pretty boy. O! my troth, I looked upon him o' Wednesday half an hour together: he has such a confirmed countenance. I saw him run after a gilded but-terfly; and when he caught it, he let it go again; and after it again; and over and over he comes, and up again; catch'd it again: or whether his fall enraged him, or how 't was, he did so set his teeth, and tear it; O! I warrant, how he mammoeked it!

Vol. One of his father's moods.

Val. Indeed la, 't is a noble child.

Vir. A crack³, madam.

Val. Come, lay aside your stitchery; I must have you play the idle huswife with me this afternoon.

Vir. No, good madam; I will not out of doors.

Val. Not out of doors?

Vol. She shall, she shall.

Vir. Indeed, no, by your patience: I will not over the threshold, till my lord return from the wars.

Val. Fie! you confine yourself most unreasonably. Come; you must go visit the good lady that lies in.

Vir. I will wish her speedy strength, and visit her with my prayers; but I cannot go thither.

Vol. Why, I pray you?

Vir. 'T is not to save labour, nor that I want love.

Val. You would be another Penelope; yet, they say, all the yarn she spun in Ulysses' absence did but fill Ithaca full of moths. Come: I would, your cambric were sensible as your finger, that you might leave pricking it for pity. Come, you shall go with us.

Vir. No, good madam, pardon me; indeed, I will not forth.

Val. In truth, la, go with me; and I'll tell you excellent news of your husband.

Vir. O! good madam, there can be none yet.

Val. Verily, I do not jest with you, there came news from him last night.

Vir. Indeed, madam?

Val. In earnest, it's true; I heard a senator speak it. Thus it is:—The Volscies have an army forth, against whom Cominius the general is gone, with one part of our Roman power: your lord, and Titus Lartius, are set down before their city Corioli; they nothing doubt prevailing, and to make it brief wars. This is true on mine honour; and so, I pray, go with us.

Vir. Give me excuse, good madam; I will obey you in every thing hereafter.

Vol. Let her alone, lady: as she is now, she will but disease our better mirth.

Val. In troth, I think, she would.—Fare you well then.—Come, good sweet lady.—Pr'ythee, Virginia, turn thy solemnness out o' door, and go along with us.

Vir. No, at a word, madam: indeed, I must no I wish you much mirth.

Val. Well then, farewell.

[Exeunt.]

¹ contending in it. ² A fine boy.

SCENE IV.—Before Corioli.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, MARCIUS', TITUS LARTIUS, Officers, and Soldiers.

Mar. Youder comes news :—a wager, they have met.

Lart. My horse to yours, no.

Mar. 'T is done.

Lart. Agreed.

Enter a Messenger.

Mar. Say, has our general met the enemy?

Mess. They lie in view, but have not spoke as yet

Lart. So, the good horse is mine.

Mar. I'll buy him of you.

Lart. No, I'll nor sell, nor give him : lend you him I will,

For half a hundred years.—Summon the town.

Mar. How far off lie these armies?

Mess. Within this mile and half.

Mar. Then shall we hear their 'larum, and they ours.

Now, Mars, I pry'thee, make us quick in work.

That we with smoking swords may march from hence,

To help our fielded friends !—Come, blow thy blast.

A Parley sounded. Enter, on the Walls, two Senators, and others.

Tullus Aufidius, is he within your walls?

1 Sen. No, nor a man that fears you less than he, That's lesser than a little. Hark, our drums

[Drums afar off.]

Are bringing forth our youth : we'll break our walls,

Rather than they shall pound us up. Our gates,

Which yet seem shut, we have but pinn'd with rushes ;

They'll open of themselves. Hark you, far off :

[Alarum afar off.]

There is Aufidius : list, what work he makes

Amongst your cloven army.

Mar. O ! they are at it.

Lart. Their noise be our instruction.—Ladders, ho !

The Volsees enter, and pass over the Stage.

Mar. They fear us not, but issue forth their city.

Now put your shields before your hearts, and fight

With hearts more proof than shields.—Advance, brave

Titus :

They do disdain us much beyond our thoughts,

Which makes me sweat with wrath.—Come on, my

He that retires, I'll take him for a Volsee, [follows :

And he shall feel mine edge.

Alarum, and exeunt Romans and Volsees, fighting. The Romans are beaten back to their Trenches. Re-enter

MARCIUS enraged.

Mar. All the contagion of the south light on you,

You shames of Rome ! Unheard-of boils and plagues'

Plaster you o'er, that you may be abhorr'd

Farther than seen, and one infect another

Against the wind a mile ! You souls of geese,

That bear the shapes of men, how have you run

From slaves that apes would beat ! Pluto and hell !

All hurt behind ; backs red, and faces pale

With tight and agued fear ! Mend, and charge home.

Or, by the fires of heaven, I'll leave the foe,

And make my wars on you. Look to't : come on,

If you'll stand fast, we'll beat them to their wives,

As they us to our trenches follow.

Another Alarum. The Volsees and Romans re-enter, and the Fight is renewed. The Volsees retire into

Corioli, and MARCIUS follows them to the Gates.

So, now the gates are open :—now prove good seconds.

'T is for the followers fortune widens them,

Not for the fliers : mark me, and do the like.

[He enters the Gates, and is shut in.]

1 Sol. Fool-hardiness ! not I.

2 Sol. Nor.

3 Sol. See, they have shut him in. [Alarum continues]

All.

To the port ! I warrant him

Enter TITUS LARTIUS.

Lart. What is become of Marcius?

All. Slain, sir, doubtless

1 Sol. Following the fliers at the very heels,

With them he enters ; who, upon the sudden,

Clapp'd to their gates : he is himself alone,

To answer all the city.

Lart. O noble fellow !

Who sensibly outdares his senseless sword,

And, when it bows, stands up. Thou art left, Marcius

A carbuncle entire, as big as thou art,

Were not so rich a jewel. Thou wast a soldier

Even to Cato's wish, not fierce and terrible

Only in strokes ; but, with thy grim looks, and

The thunder-like percussion of thy sounds,

Thou mad'st thine enemies shake, as if the world

Were feverous, and did tremble.

The Gates open. Re-enter MARCIUS, bleeding, assaulted by the Enemy.

1 Sol.

Look, sir !

Lart. O, 't is Marcius !

Let's fetch him off, or make remain alike.

[They fight, and all enter the City]

SCENE V.—Within the Town. A Street.

Enter certain Romans, with Spoils.

1 Rom. This will I carry to Rome.

2 Rom. And I this.

3 Rom. A murrain on't ! I took this for silver.

[Alarum continues still afar off.]

Enter MARCIUS, and TITUS LARTIUS, with a Trumpet.

Mar. See here these movers, that do prize their hours

At a crack'd drachm ! Cushions, leaden spoons,

Irons of a doit, doublets that hangmen would

Bury with those that wore them, these base slaves,

Ere yet the fight be done, pack up.—Down with them !—

And hark, what noise the general makes.—To him !

There is the man of my soul's hate, Aufidius,

Piercing our Romans : then, valiant Titus, take

Convenient numbers to make good the city,

Whilst I, with those that have the spirit, will haste

To help Cominius.

Lart. Worthy sir, thou bleed'st ;

Thy exercise hath been too violent

For a second course of fight.

Mar.

Sir, praise me not :

My work hath yet not warm'd me. Fare you well.

The blood I drop is rather physical

Than dangerous to me. To Aufidius thus

I will appear, and fight.

Lart.

Now the fair goddess, Fortune,

Fall deep in love with thee ; and her great charms

Misguide thy opposers' swords ! Bold gentleman,

Prosperity be thy page !

Mar.

Thy friend no less

Than those she placeth highest. So, farewell.

Lart. Thou worthiest Marcius !—[Exit MARCIUS]

Go, sound thy trumpet in the market-place ;

Call thither all the officers of the town.

Where they shall know our mind. Away ! [Exeunt]

SCENE VI.—Near the Camp of COMINIUS.

Enter COMINIUS and Forces, as in retreat.

Com. Breathe you, my friends. Well fought : we are come off

* * * add : "to them a Messenger," and omit the stage direction below.

* You herd of—Boils and plagues : in f. 3. 3 port : in f. e.

Like Romans, neither foolish in our stands,
Nor cowardly in retire: believe me, sirs,
We shall be charg'd again. Whiles we have struck,
By interims and conveying gusts we have heard
The charges of our friends:—ye, Roman gods,
Lead their successes as we wish our own,
That both our powers, with smiling fronts encountering
May give you thankful sacrifice!—

Enter a Messenger.

Thy news?
Mess. The citizens of Corioli have issued,
And given to Lartius and to Marcius battle:
I saw our party to their trenches driven,
And then I came away.

Com. Though thou speak'st truth,
Methinks, thou speak'st not well. How long is 't since?
Mess. Above an hour, my lord.

Com. 'T is not a mile; briefly we heard their drums:
How couldst thou in a mile confound an hour,
And bring thy news so late?

Mess. Spies of the Volscies
Held me in chase, that I was forc'd to wheel
Three or four miles about; else had I, sir,
Half an hour since brought my report.

Enter MARCIUS.

Com. Who's yonder,
That does appear as he were flay'd? O gods!
He has the stamp of Marcius, and I have Before-time seen him thus.

Mar. Come I too late?
Com. The shepherd knows not thunder from a tabor,
More than I know the sound of Marcius' tongue
From every meaner man.

Mar. Come I too late?
Com. Ay, if you come not in the blood of others,
But mantled in your own.

Mar. O! let me clip you
In arms as sound, as when I woo'd; in heart
As merry, as when our nuptial day was done,
And tapers burn'd to bedward.

Com. Flower of warriors,
How is 't with Titus Lartius?

Mar. As with a man busied about decrees:
Condemning some to death, and some to exile;
Ransoming him, or pitying, threatening the other;
Holding Corioli in the name of Rome,
Even like a fawning greyhound in the leash,
To let him slip at will.

Com. Where is that slave,
Which told me they had beat you to your trenches?
Where is he!—Call him hither.

Mar. Let him alone.
He did inform the truth: but for our gentlemen.
The common file. (A plague!—Tribunes for them?)
The mouse ne'er shunn'd the cat, as they did budge
From rascals worse than they.

Com. But how prevail'd you?
Mar. Will the time serve to tell? I do not think it.
Where is the enemy? Are you lords of the field?
If not, why cease you till you are so?

Com. Marcius, we have at disadvantage fought,
And did retire to win our purposes.

Mar. How lies their battle? Know you on which side
They have plac'd their men of trust?

Com. As I guess, Marcius,
Those bands of the wayward are the Antiates,
Of their best trust: o'er them Aufidius,
Their very heart of hope.

Mar. I do beseech you.

By all the battles wherein we have fought,
By the blood we have shed together, by the vows
We have made to endure friends, that you directly
Set me against Aufidius, and his Antiates;
And that you not delay the present, but,
Filling the air with swords advanc'd and darts,
We prove this very hour.

Com. Though I could wish
You were conducted to a gentle bath,
And balsam applied to you, yet dare I never Deny your asking. Take your choice of those
That best can aid your action.

Mar. Those are they
That most are willing.—If any such be here,
(As it were sin to doubt) that love this painting
Wherein you see me smear'd; if any fear
Lesser his person than an ill report;
If any think brave death outweighs bad life,
And that his country's dearer than himself;
Let him, alone, or so many so minded,
Wave thus, to express his disposition,
And follow Marcius.

[They all shout, and wave their Swords; take him up in their arms, and cast up their Caps

O me, alone! Make you a sword of me?
If these shows be not outward, which of you
But is four Volscies? None of you, but is Able to bear against the great Aufidius
A shield as hard as his. A certain number,
Though thanks to all, must I select from all: the rest
Shall bear the business in some other fight,
As cause will be obey'd. Please you, march before!
And I shall quickly draw out my command,
Which men are best inclin'd.

Com. March on, my fellows:
Make good this ostentation, and you shall Divide in all with us. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—The Gates of Corioli.

TITUS LARTIUS, having set a Guard upon Corioli, going with Drum and Trumpet toward COMINIUS and CAIUS MARCIUS, enters with a Lieutenant, a party of Soldiers, and a Scout.

Lart. So; let the ports be guarded: keep your duties,
As I have set them down. If I do send, despatch
Those centuries to our aid; the rest will serve
For a short holding: if we lose the field,
We cannot keep the town.

Lieu. Fear not our care, sir.
Lart. Hence, and shut your gates upon us.—
Our guider, come; to the Roman camp conduct us. [Exeunt.

SCENE VIII.—A Field of Battle between the Roman and the Volscian Camps.

Alarm. Enter MARCIUS and AUFIDIUS.

Mar. I'll fight with none but thee; for I do hate thee
Worse than a promise-breaker.

Auf. We hate alike:
Not Afric owns a serpent I abhor
More than thy fame I envy. Fix thy foot.

Mar. Let the first budger die the other's slave,
And the gods doom him after!

Auf. If I fly, Marcius,
Hail me like a hare.

Mar. Within these three hours, Tullus,
Alone I fought in your Corioli walls,
And made what work I pleas'd. 'T is not my blood,
Wherein thou seest me mask'd: for thy revenge,

Wrench up thy power to the highest.

Aut. Were thou the Hector,
That was the whip of your bragg'd progeny,
Thou shouldst not scape me here.—

[They fight, and certain Volscies come to the aid of AUFIDIUS.

Officious, and not valiant—you have sham'd me
In your condemned seconds.

[Exeunt fighting, all driven in by MARCIUS.

SCENE IX.—The Roman Camp.

Alarm. A Retreat sounded. Flourish. Enter at one side, COMINIUS, and Romans ; at the other side,
MARCIUS, with his Arm in a Scarf, and other Romans.

Com. If I should tell thee o'er this thy day's work,
Thou 'lt not believe thy deeds; but I'll report it,
Where senators shall mingle tears with smiles,
Where great patricians shall attend, and shrug,
P' the end, admire; where ladies shall be frighted,
And, gladly quak'd, hear more; where the dull Tribunes,
That with the fusty plebeians hate thine honours,
Shall say, against their hearts,—

“We thank the gods our Rome hath such a soldier!”—
Yet cam'st thou to a morsel of this feast,
Having fully dined before.

Enter TITUS LARTIUS with his Power, from the pursuit.

Lart. O general,
Here is the steed, we the caparison:
Hast thou beheld—

Mar. Pray now, no more: my mother,
Who has a charter to extol her blood,
When she does praise me, grieves me. I have done,
As you have done; that's what I can; induc'd
As you have been; that's for my country:
He that has but effected his good will
Hath overta'en mine act.

Com. You shall not be
The grave of your deserving: Rome must know
The value of her own: 't were a concealment
Worse than a theft, no less than a traducement,
To hide your doings; and to silence that,
Which, to the spire and top of praises vouch'd,
Would seem but modest. Therefore, I beseech you,
In sign of what you are, not to reward
What you have done, before our army hear me.

Mar. I have some wounds upon me, and they smart
To hear themselves remember'd.

Com. Should they not,
Well might they fester 'gainst ingratitude,
And tent themselves with death. Of all the horses,
(Whereof we have ta'en good, and good store) of all
The treasure, in this field achiev'd and city,
We render you the tenth: to be ta'en forth,
Before the common distribution,
At your only choice.

Mar. I thank you, general;
But cannot make my heart consent to take
A bribe to pay my sword: I do refuse it;
And stand upon my common part with those
That have beheld the doing.

[A long flourish. They all cry, MARCIUS! MARCIUS!
cast up their Caps and Lances: COMINIUS and LAR-TIUS stand bare.

Mar. May these same instruments, which you profane,
Never sound more: when drums and trumpets shall
P' the field prove flatterers, let courts and cities be Made all of false-fac'd soothing;
When steel grows soft as the parasite's silk,
Let it¹ be made a coverture² for the wars.

No more, I say. For that I have not wash'd
My nose that bled, or foil'd some debile wretch,
Which without note here's many else have done,
You shout me forth

In acclamations hyperbolical;
As if I loved my little should be dieted
In praises sauc'd with lies.

Com. Too modest are you:
More cruel to your good report, than grateful
To us that give you truly. By your patience,
If 'gainst yourself you be incens'd, we'll put you (Like one that means his proper harm) in manacles.
Then reason safely with you.—Therefore, be it known,
As to us, to all the world, that Caius Marcius
Wears this war's garland: in token of the which
My noble steed, known to the camp, I give him,
With all his trim belonging: and, from this time,
For what he did before Corioli, call him,
With all th' applause and clamour of the host,
CAIUS MARCIUS CORIOLANUS—
Bear the addition nobly ever!

[Flourish. Trumpets sound, and Drums
All. Caius Marcius Coriolanus!

Cor. I will go wash:
And when my face is fair, you shall perceive
Whether I blush, or no: howbeit, I thank you.—
I mean to stride your steed: and, at all times,
To undercrest your good addition
To the fairness of my power.

Com. So, to our tent;
Where, ere we do repose us, we will write
To Rome of our success.—You, Titus Lartius,
Must to Corioli back: send us to Rome
The best, with whom we may articulate,
For their own good, and ours.

Lart. I shall, my lord.
Cor. The gods begin to mock me. I, that now
Refus'd most princely gifts, am bound to beg
Of my lord general.

Com. Take it: 't is yours.—What is 't?

Cor. I sometime lay, here in Corioli.
At a poor man's house: he us'd me kindly:
He cried to me; I saw him prisoner;
But then Aufidius was within my view,
And wrath o'erwhelm'd my pity. I request you
To give my poor host freedom.

Com. O, well-begg'd!
Were he the butcher of my son, he should Be free as is the wind. Deliver him, Titus.

Lart. Marcius, his name?
Cor. By Jupiter, forgot:—
I am weary; yea, my memory is tir'd.—
Have we no wine here?

Com. Go we to our tent.
The blood upon your visage dries; 't is time
It should be look'd to. Come. [Exeunt.

SCENE X.—The Camp of the Volscies.

A Flourish. Cornets. Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS, bloody, with two or three Soldiers.

Auf. The town is ta'en.

1 Sold. 'T will be deliver'd back on good condition.

Auf. Condition!—
I would I were a Roman; for I cannot,
Being a Volsee, be that I am.—Condition!
What good condition can a treaty find
I' the part that is at mercy?—Five times, Marcius,
I have fought with thee: so often hast thou beat me
And wouldst do so, I think, should we encounter

As often as we eat.—By the elements,
If e'er again I meet him beard to beard,
He is mine, or I am his. Mine emulation
Hath not that honour in 't, it had: for where
I thought to crush him in an equal force,
True sword to sword, I'll patch¹ at him some way.
Or wrath, or craft, may get him.

1 Sold. He 's the devil.

Auf. Bolder, though not so subtle. My valour 's poison'd,

With only suffering stain by him: for him
'T shall fly out of itself: nor sleep, nor sanctuary,
Being naked, sick; nor fume, nor Capitol,
The prayers of priests, nor times of sacrifice,

Embargments² all of fury, shall lift up
Their rotten privilege and custom 'gainst
My hate to Marcius. Where I find him, were it
At home, upon my brother's guard, even there,
Against the hospitable canon, would I
Wash my fierce hand in 's heart.—Go you to the city
Learn, how 't is held; and what they are, that must Be hostages for Rome.

1 Sold. Will not you go?

Auf. I am attended at the cypress grove: I pray you.
(T is south the city mills) bring me word thither
How the world goes, that to the pace of it
I may spur on my journey.

1 Sold. I shall, sir. [Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Public Place.

Enter MENENIUS, SICINIUS, and BRUTUS.

Men. The augurer tells me, we shall have news tonight.

Bru. Good, or bad?

Men. Not according to the prayer of the people, for they love not Marcius.

Sic. Nature teaches beasts to know their friends.

Men. Pray you, whom does the wolf love?

Sic. The lamb.

Men. Ay, to devour him; as the hungry plebeians would the noble Marcius.

Bru. He 's a lamb, indeed, that baes like a bear.

Men. He 's a bear, indeed, that lives like a lamb. You two are old men: tell me one thing that I shall ask you.

Both Trib. Well, sir.

Men. In what enormity is Marcius poor in, that you two have not in abundance?

Bru. He 's poor in no one fault, but stor'd with all.

Sic. Especially in pride.

Bru. And topping all others in boasting.

Men. This is strange now. Do you two know how you are censured here in the city, I mean of us o' the right-hand file? Do you?

Both Trib. Why, how are we censured?

Men. Because you talk of pride now,—Will you not be angry?

Both Trib. Well, well, sir; well.

Men. Why, 't is no great matter; for a very little thief of occasion will rob you of a great deal of patience:
give your dispositions the reins, and be angry at your pleasures; at the least, if you take it as a pleasure to you, in being so. You blame Marcius for being proud?

Bru. We do it not alone, sir.

Men. I know, you can do very little alone; for your helps are many, or else your actions would grow wondrous single: your abilities are too infant-like for doing much alone. You talk of pride: O! that you could turn your eyes toward the napes of your necks, and make but an interior survey of your good selves! O, that you could!

Bru. What then, sir?

Men. Why, then you should discover a brace of unmeriting, proud, violent, testy magistrates, (alias, fools)
as any in Rome.

Sic. Menenius, you are known well enough, too.

Men. I am known to be a humorous patrician, and one that loves a cup of hot wine, without³ a drop of allaying Tiber in 't: said to be something imperfect in favouring the thirst⁴ complaint; hasty, and under-like, upon too trivial motion: one that converses more with the buttock of the night, than with the forehead of the morning. What I think I utter, and spend my malice in my breath. Meeting two such weals-men as you are, (I cannot call you Lycurguses) if the drink you give me touch my palate adversely, I make a crooked face at it. I cannot say, your worship has delivered the matter well, when I find the ass in compound with the major part of your syllables; and though I must be content to bear with those that say you are reverend grave men, yet they lie dead, that tell you, you have good faces. If you see this in the map of my microcosm, follows it, that I am known well enough, too?

What harm can your bisson⁵ conspectivities glean out of this character, if I be known well enough, too?

Bru. Come, sir, come; we know you well enough.

Men. You know neither me, yourselves, nor any thing. You are ambitious for poor knaves' caps and legs: you wear out a good wholesome forenoon in hearing a cause between an orange-⁶ 'fe and a fosset-seller, and then adjourn⁶ the controversy of three-pence to a second day of audience.—When you are hearing a matter between party and party, if you chance to be pinched with the colic, you make faces like mummers, set up the bloody flag against all patience, and, in roaring for a chamber-pot, dismiss the controversy plead-ing⁷, the more entangled by your hearing: all the peace you make in their cause is calling both the parties knaves. You are a pair of strange ones.

Bru. Come, come, you are well understood to be a perfecter giber for the table, than a necessary bench-er in the Capitol.

Men. Our very priests must become mockers, if they shall encounter such ridiculous subjects as you are.
When you speak best unto the purpose, it is not worth the wagging of your beards; and your beards deserve not so honourable a grave as to stuff a botcher's cushion.
or to be entomb'd in an ass's pack-saddle. Yet you must be saying, Marcius is proud; who, in a cheap estimation, is worth all your predecessors since Deuca-lion, though, peradventure, some of the best of 'em were hereditary hangmen. Good den to your worships: more of your conversation would infect my brain, being the herdsmen of the beastly plebeians. I will be to take my leave of you. [BRUTUS and SICINIUS stand back

Enter VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, VALERIA, &c.

How now, my as fair as noble ladies, (and the moon, were she earthly, no nobler) whither do you follow your eyes so fast?

Vol. Honourable Menenius, my boy Marcius approaches: for the love of Juno let's go.

Men. Ha! Marcius coming home?

Vol. Ay, worthy Menenius, and with most prosperous approbation.

Men. Take my cap, Jupiter, and I thank thee.—Ho! Marcius coming home? [Throwing up his Cap.]

Both Ladies. Nay, 't is true.

Vol. Look, here's a letter from him: the state hath another, his wife another; and, I think, there's one at home for you.

Men. I will make my very house reel to-night.—A letter for me?

Vir. Yes, certainly, there's a letter for you; I saw it.

Men. A letter for me? It gives me an estate of seven years' health; in which time I will make a lip at the physician: the most sovereign prescription in Galen is but empiric physic¹. and, to this preservative, of no better report than a horse-drench. Is he not wounded? he was wont to come home wounded.

Vir. O! no, no, no.

Vol. O! he is wounded; I thank the gods for 't.

Men. So do I too, if it be not too much.—Brings 'a victory in his pocket, the wounds become him.

Vol. On's brows: Menenius, he comes the third time home with the oaken garland.

Men. Has he disciplined Aufidius soundly?

Vol. Titus Lartius writes, they fought together, but Aufidius got off.

Men. And 't was time for him too; I'll warrant him that: an he had stay'd by him, I would not have been so fidused for all the chests in Corioli, and the gold that's in them. Is the senate possessed of this?

Vol. Good ladies, let's go.—Yes, yes, yes: the senate has letters from the general, wherein he gives my son the whole name of the war. He hath in this action outdone his former deeds doubly.

Val. In troth, there's wondrous things spoke of him.

Men. Wondrous: ay, I warrant you, and not without his true purchasing.

Vir. The gods grant them true!

Vol. True! pow, wow.

Men. True! I'll be sworn they are true.—Where is he wounded?—God save your good worships! [To the Tribunes, who come forward.] Marcius is coming home: he has more cause to be proud.—Where is he wounded?

Vol. I' the shoulder, and i' the left arm: there will be large cicatrices to show the people, when he shall stand for his place. He received in the repulse of Tarquin seven hurts i' the body.

Men. One i' the neck, and two i' the thigh,—there's nine that I know.

Vol. He had, before this last expedition, twenty-five wounds upon him.

Men. Now it's twenty-seven: every gash was an enemy's grave. [A Shout and Flourish.] Hark! the trumpets.

Vol. These are the ushers of Marcius: before him He carries noise, and behind him he leaves tears. Death, that dark spirit, in 's nerry arm doth lie, Which, being advanc'd, declines, and then men die.

A Sennet. Trumpets sound. Enter COMINIUS and TITUS LARTIUS: between them, CORIOLANUS, crowned with an oaken Garland; with Captains, Soldiers, and a Herald.

Her. Know, Rome, that all alone Marcius did fight

Within Corioli's gates: where he hath won, With fame, a name to Caius Marcius; these In honour follows, Coriolanus:—

Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus! [Flourish.]

All. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus!

Cor. No more of this; it does offend my heart:

Pray now, no more.

Com. Look, sir, your mother.—

Cor. O!

You have, I know, petition'd all the gods

For my prosperity. [Kneel]

Vol. Nay, my good soldier, up;

My gentle Marcius, worthy Caius, and

By deed-achieving honour newly nam'd,

What is it? Coriolanus, must I call thee?

But O! thy wife—

Cor. My gracious silence, hail! [Rising.]

Wouldst thou have laugh'd, had I come coffin'd home,

That weep'st to see me triumph? Ah! my dear,

Such eyes the widows in Corioli wear,

And mothers that lack sons.

Men. Now, the gods crown thee!

Cor. And live you yet?—O my sweet lady, pardon [To VALERIA]

Vol. I know not where to turn:—O! welcome home, And welcome, general;—and you are welcome all.

Men. A hundred thousand welcomes: I could weep And I could laugh; I am light, and heavy. Welcome!

A curse begin at very root on's heart, That is not glad to see thee!—You are three,

That Rome should dote on: yet, by the faith of men, We have some old crab-trees here at home, that will not

Be grafted to your relish. Yet welcome, warriors! We call a nettle, but a nettle; and

The faults of fools, but folly.

Com. Ever right.

Cor. Menenius, ever, ever.

Her. Give way there, and go on!

Cor. Your hand,—and yours. [To his Wife and Mother.]

Ere in our own house I do shade my head,

The good patricians must be visited;

From whom I have receiv'd, not only greetings,

But with them charge of honours.

Vol. I have lived

To see inherited my very wishes,

And the buildings of my fancy:

Only there's one thing wanting, which I doubt not,

But our Rome will cast upon thee.

Cor. Know, good mother,

I had rather be their servant in my way,

Than sway with them in theirs.

Com. On, to the Capitol!

[Flourish. Cornets. Exit in state, as before The Tribunes remain.]

Bru. All tongues speak of him, and the bleared sights

Are spectacl'd to see him: your prattling nurse

Into a rapture⁴ lets her baby cry

While she cheers⁵ him: the kitchen malkin⁶ pins

Her richest lockram⁷ 'bout her reechy⁸ neck,

Clambering the walls to eye him: stalls, bulks, windows,

Are smother'd up, leads fill'd, and ridges hors'd

With variable complexions, all agreeing

In earnestness to see him: seld-shown flames

Do press among the popular throngs, and puff

To win a vulgar station: our veild dames

Commit the war of white and damask, in

Their nicely-gaued cheeks, to the wanton spoil

¹ Not in f. e. ² is but empiricute: in f. e.; empirick jutique: in folio. ³ Not in f. e. ⁴ Fyt. ⁵ chats: in f. e. ⁶ The di minuts of Mall or Mary—used as "wench." It also means a mop, a clout. ⁷ A kind of cheap linen. ⁸ Smoky, dirty.

Of Phœbus' burning kisses: such a pother,
As if that whatsoever god, who leads him,
Were slyly crept into his human powers,
And gave him graceful posture.

Sic. On the sudden

I warrant him consul.

Bru. Then our office may,

During his power, go sleep.

Sic. He cannot temperately transport his honours
From where he should begin, and end; but will Lose those he hath won.

Bru. In that there's comfort.

Sic. Doubt not, the commoners, for whom we stand.
But they, upon their ancient malice, will Forget, with the least cause, these his new honours:
Which that he'll give them, make I as little question
As he is proud to do't.

Bru. I heard him swear.

Were he to stand for consul, never would he Appear i' the market-place, nor on him put
The napless vesture of humility:
Nor, showing (as the manner is) his wounds
To the people, beg their stinking breaths.

Sic. 'T is right.

Bru. It was his word. O! he would miss it, rather Than carry it but by the suit o' the gentry to him,
And the desire of the nobles.

Sic. I wish no better.

Than have him hold that purpose, and to put it
In execution.

Bru. 'T is most like, he will.

Sic. It shall be to him, then, at our good wills,
A sure destruction.

Bru. So it must fall out

To him, or our authorities, for an end.
We must suggest the people, in what hatred
He still hath held them: that to his power he would Have made them mules, silenc'd their pleaders, and Disproportioned their freedoms: holding them,
In human action and capacity,
Of no more soul, nor fitness for the world.
Than camels in the war; who have their provand
Only for bearing burdens, and sore blows
For sinking under them.

Sic. This, as you say, suggested

At some time when his soaring insolence
Shall touch¹ the people. (which time shall not want,
If he be put upon't; and that's as easy,
As to set dogs on sheep) will be his fire
To kindle their dry stubble; and their blaze
Shall darken him for ever.

Enter a Messenger.

Bru. What's the matter?

Mess. You are sent for to the Capitol. 'T is thought,
That Marcius shall be consul. I have seen
The dumb men throng to see him, and the blind
To hear him speak: matrons flung gloves,
Ladies and maids their scarfs and handkerchiefs,
Upon him as he pass'd; the nobles bended,
As to Jove's statue, and the commons made
A shower, and thunder, with their caps, and shouts.
I never saw the like.

Bru. Let's to the Capitol:

And carry with us ears and eyes for the time,
But hearts for the event.

Sic. Have with you. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. The Capitol.

Enter two Officers, to lay Cushions.

1 Off. Come, come; they are almost here. How many stand for consulships?

2 Off. Three, they say; but 't is thought of every one
Coriolanus will carry it.

1 Off. That's a brave fellow; but he'll vengeance proud, and loves not the common people.

2 Off. Faith, there have been many great men that have flattered the people, who ne'er loved them; and there be many that they have loved, they know not wherefore: so that, if they love they know not why, they hate upon no better a ground. Therefore, for Coriolanus neither to care whether they love or hate him manifests the true knowledge he has in their disposition: and, out of his noble carelessness, lets them plainly see 't.

1 Off. If he did not care whether he had their love or no, he wad' indifferently 'twixt doing them neither good, nor harm; but he seeks their hate with greater devotion than they can render it him, and leaves nothing undone that may fully discover him their opposite. Now, to seem to affect the malice and displeasure of the people is as bad as that which he dislikes, to flatter them for their love.

2 Off. He hath deserved worthily of his country;
and his ascent is not by such easy degrees as those,
who, having been supple and courteous to the people, bonneted, without any farther deed to have them at all into their estimation and report: but he hath so planted his honours in their eyes, and his actions in their hearts, that for their tongues to be silent, and not confess so much, were a kind of ingrateful injury.
To report otherwise were a malice, that, giving itself
the lie, would pluck reproof and rebuke from every ear that heard it.

1 Off. No more of him: he is a worthy man. Make way, they are coming.

A Sennet. Enter, with Victors before them, COMINIUS the Consul, MENENIUS, CORIOLANUS, many other Senators, SCINIUS and BRUTUS. The Senators take their places; the Tribunes take theirs also by themselves.

Men. Having determin'd of the Volscés, and
To send for Titus Lartius, it remains,

As the main point of this our after-meeting,
To gratify his noble service that

Hath thus stood for his country. Therefore, please you

Most reverend and grave elders, to desire

The present consul, and last general

In our well-found successes, to report

A little of that worthy work perform'd

By Caius Marcius Coriolanus; whom

We meet here, both to thank, and to remember

With honours like himself.

1 Sen. Speak, good Cominius

Leave nothing out for length, and make us think,

Rather our state's defective for requital,

Than we to stretch it out.—Masters o' the people,

We do request your kindest ears; and, after,

Your loving motion toward the common body,

To yield what passes here.

Sic. We are convert'd

Upon a pleasing treatise; and have hearts

Inclinable to honour and advance

The theme of our assembly.

Bru. Which the rather

We shall be prest² to do, if he remember

A kinder value of the people, than

He hath hereto priz'd them at.

Men. That's off, that's off:
I would you rather had been silent. Please you
To hear Cominius speak?

Bru. Most willingly;
But yet my caution was more pertinent,
Than the rebuke you give it.

Men. He loves your people;
But tie him not to be their bed-fellow.—
Worthy Cominius, speak.—Nay, keep your place.

[CORIOLANUS rises, and offers to go away.]

1 Sen. Sit, Coriolanus: never shame to hear
What you have nobly done.

Cor. Your honours' pardon:
I had rather have my wounds to heal again,
Than hear say how I got them.

Bru. Sir, I hope,
My words dis-bench'd you not.

Cor. No, sir: yet oft,
When blows have made me stay, I fled from words.
You sooth'd not, therefore hurt not. But, your people,
I love them as they weigh.

Men. Pray now, sit down.

Cor. I had rather have one scratch my head i' the sun,
When the alarm was struck, than idly sit
To hear my nothings monstered.

Men. Masters of the people.
Your multiplying spawn how can he flatter,
(That's thousand to one good one) when you now see,
He had rather venture all his limbs for honour,
Than one on's ears to hear it?—Proceed, Cominius.

Com. I shall lack voice: the deeds of Coriolanus
Should not be utter'd feebly.—It is held,
That valour is the chiefest virtue, and
Most dignifies the haver: if it be,
The man I speak of cannot in the world
Be singly counterpois'd. At sixteen years,
When Tarquin made a head for Rome, he fought
Beyond the mark of others: our then dictator,
Whom with all praise I point at, saw him fight,
When with his Amazonian chin he drove
The bristled lips before him. He bestrid
An o'er-pressed Roman, and i' the consul's view
Slew three opposers: Tarquin's self he met,
And struck him on his knee. In that day's feats,
When he might act the woman in the scene,
He prov'd best man i' the field; and for his meed
Was brow-bound with the oak. His pupil age
Man-enter'd thus, he waxed like a sea;
And in the brunt of seventeen battles since,
He lurch'd^d all swords of the garland. For this last,
Before and in Corioli, let me say,
I cannot speak him home: he stopp'd the fliers,
And by his rare example made the coward
Turn terror into sport. As weeds before
A vessel under sail, so men obey'd,
And fell below his stem: his sword, death's stamp,
Where it did mark, it took: from face to foot
He was a thing of blood, whose every motion
Was tun'd^d with dying cries. Alone he enter'd
The mortal gate of the city, which he painted
With shunless destiny, aidless came off,
And with a sudden re-inforcement struck
Corioli like a planet. Now all's his;
When by and by the din of war^d gan pierce
His ready sense: then, straight his doubled spirit
Re-quickn'd what in flesh was fatigate,
And to the battle came he; where he did
Run reeking o'er the lives of men, as if

'T were a perpetual spoil; and till we call'd
Both field and city ours, he never stood
To ease his breast with panting.

Men. Worthy man!

1 Sen. He cannot but with measure fit the honours
Which we devise him.

Com. Our spoils he kick'd at;
And look'd upon things precious, as they were
The common muck o' the world: he covets less
Than misery itself would give, rewards
His deeds with doing them, and is content
To spend the time to end it.

Men. He's right noble:
Let him be called for.

1 Sen. Call Coriolanus.

Off. He doth appear.

Re-enter CORIOLANUS.

Men. The senate, Coriolanus, are well pleas'd
To make thee consul.

Cor. I do owe them still
My life, and services.

Men. It then remains,
That you do speak to the people.

Cor. I do beseech you,

Let me o'erleap that custom: for I cannot
Put on the gown, stand naked, and entreat them.

For my wounds' sake, to give their suffrage: please you,
That I may pass this doing.

Sic. Sir, the people
Must have their voices; neither will they bate
One jot of ceremony.

Men. Put them not to't.

Pray you, go fit you to the custom, and Take to you, as your predecessors have,
Your honour with your form.

Cor. It is a part
That I shall blush in acting, and might well
Be taken from the people.

Bru. Mark you that? [To SICINIUS.]

Cor. To brag unto them,—thus I did, and thus;—
Show them th' unaching scars which I should hide,
As if I had receiv'd them for the hire
Of their breath only.—

Men. Do not stand upon't.—
We recommend to you, tribunes of the people,
Our purpose:—to them, and to our noble consul,
Wish we all joy and honour.

Sen. To Coriolanus come all joy and honour!

[Flourish. Exeunt Senators.]

Bru. You see how he intends to use the people.

Sic. May they perceive's intent! He will require them,
As if he did condemn what he requested
Should be in them to give.

Bru. Come; we'll inform them
Of our proceedings here: on the market-place,
I know they do attend us. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same. The Forum.

Enter several Citizens.

1 Cit. Once, if he do require our voices, we ought not to deny him.

2 Cit. We may, sir, if we will.

3 Cit. We have power in ourselves to do it, but it is a power that we have no power to do: for if he show us his wounds, and tell us his deeds, we are to put our tongues into those wounds, and speak for them; so, if he tell us his noble deeds, we must also tell him our noble acceptance of them. Ingratitude is monstrous, and for the multitude to be ingrateful were to make a monster of the multitude ; of the which we, being members, should bring ourselves to be monstrous members.

1 Cit. And to make us no better thought of, a little help will serve ; for once, when we stood up about the corn, he himself stuck not to call us the many-headed multitude.

3 Cit. We have been called so of many ; not that our heads are some brown, some black, some auburn, some bald, but that our wits are so diversely coloured ; and truly, I think, if all our wits were to issue out of one skull, they would fly east, west, north, south ; and their consent of one direct way should be at once to all the points of the compass.

2 Cit. Think you so ? Which way, do you judge, my wit would fly ?

3 Cit. Nay, your wit will not so soon out as another man's will : 't is strongly wedged up in a block-head ; but if it were at liberty, 't would, sure, southward.

2 Cit. Why that way ?

3 Cit. To lose itself in a fog ; where, being three parts melted away with rotten dews, the fourth would return, for conscience sake, to help to get thee a wife.

2 Cit. You are never without your tricks :—you may, you may.

3 Cit. Are you all resolved to give your voices ? But that 's no matter : the greater part carries it. I say, if he would incline to the people, there was never a worthier man.

Enter CORIOLANUS and MENENIUS.

Here he comes, and in the gown of humility : mark his behaviour. We are not to stay altogether, but to come by him, where he stands, by ones, by twos, and by threes. He 's to make his requests by particulars ; wherein every one of us has a single honour, in giving him our own voices with our own tongues : therefore, follow me, and I 'll direct you how you shall go by him.

All. Content, content.

[Exeunt.]

Men. O sir ! you are not right : have you not known The worstest men have done 't ?

Cor. What must I say ?—I pray, sir.—Plague upon 't ! I cannot bring My tongue to such a pace.—Look, sir :—my wounds ;—I got them in my country's service, when Some certain of your brethren roar'd, and ran From the noise of our own drums.

Men. O me, the gods ! You must not speak of that : you must desire them To think upon you.

Cor. Think upon me ? Hang 'em ! I would they would forget me, like the virtues Which our divines lose by 'em.

Men. You 'll mar all : I 'll leave you. Pray you, speak to them. I pray you, In wholesome manner. [Exit.]

Enter two Citizens.

Cor. Bid them wash their faces, And keep their teeth clean.—So, here comes a brace.— You know the cause, sir, of my standing here.

1 Cit. We do, sir : tell us what hath brought you to 't.

Cor. Mine own desert.

2 Cit. Your own desert ?

Cor. Ay, not

Mine own desire.

1 Cit. How ! not your own desire ?

Cor. No, sir : 't was never my desire yet,

To trouble the poor with begging.

1 Cit. You must think, if we give you any thing, we hope to gain by you.

Cor. Well then, I pray, your price of the consulship ?

woolwich : in f. e.

1 Cit. The price is, to ask it kindly.

Cor.

Kindly ?

Sir, I pray, let me ha't : I have wounds to show you, Which shall be yours in private.—Your good voice, sir ; What say you ?

2 Cit. You shall ha't, worthy sir.

Cor. A match, sir.—

There is in all two worthy voices begg'd.—

I have your alms : adieu.

1 Cit.

But this is something odd.

2 Cit. An 't were to give again,—but 't is no matter.

[Exeunt the two Citizens.]

Enter two other Citizens.

Cor. Pray you now, if it may stand with the tune of your voices that I may be consul, I have here the customary gown.

3 Cit. You have deserved nobly of your country, and you have not deserved nobly.

Cor. Your enigma ?

3 Cit. You have been a scourge to her enemies, you have been a rod to her friends : you have not, indeed, loved the common people.

Cor. You should account me the more virtuous, that I have not been common in my love. I will not, sir, flatter my sworn brothers, the people, to earn a dearer estimation of them : 't is a condition they account gentle ; and since the wisdom of their choice is rather to have my hat than my heart, I will practise the insinuating nod, and be off to them most counterfeitedly : that is, sir, I will counterfeit the bewitchment of some popular man, and give it bountifully to the desirers. Therefore, beseech you, I may be consul.

4 Cit. We hope to find you our friend, and therefore give you our voices heartily.

3 Cit. You have received many wounds for your country.

Cor. I will not stale your knowledge with showing them. I will make much of your voices, and so trouble you no farther.

Both Cit. The gods give you joy, sir, heartily.

[Exeunt.]

Cor. Most sweet voices !—

Better it is to die, better to starve, Than crave the hire which first we do deserve. Why in this woolless' toge should I stand here, To beg of Hob and Dick, that do appear, Their needless vouches ? Custom calls me to 't :—What custom wills, in all things should we do 't, The dust on antique time would lie unswept, And mountainous error be too highly heap'd For truth to o'er-peer.—Rather than fool it so, Let the high office and the honour go To one that would do thus.—I am half through. The one part suffer'd, the other will I do.

Enter three other Citizens.

Here come more voices.—

Your voices : for your voices I have fought ; Watch'd for your voices ; for your voices bear Of wounds two dozen odd ; battles thrice six I have seen, and heard of : for your voices, Have done many things, some less, some more. Your voices ; for indeed, I would be consul.

5 Cit. He has done nobly, and cannot go without any honest man's voice.

6 Cit. Therefore, let him be consul. The gods give him joy, and make him good friend to the people.

All. Amen, amen.—

God save thee, noble consul !

[Exeunt Citizens.]

Cor.

Worthy voices !

Re-enter MENENIUS, with BRUTUS, and SICINIUS.

Men. You have stood your limitation; and the tribunes
Endue you with the people's voice: remains
That, in th' official marks invested, you
Anon do meet the senate.

Cor. Is this done?

Sic. The custom of request you have discharg'd:
The people to admit you; and are summon'd
To meet anon upon your approbation.

Cor. Where? at the senate-house?

Sic. There, Coriolanus.

Cor. May I change these garments?

Sic. You may, sir.

Cor. That I'll straight do; and, knowing myself again,
Repair to the senate-house.

Men. I'll keep you company.—Will you along?

Bru. We stay here for the people.

Sic. Fare you well.—[Exeunt CORIOL. and MENEN.]

He has it now; and by his looks, methinks,
'T is warm at 's heart.

Bru. With a proud heart he wore
His humble weeds. Will you dismiss the people?

Re-enter Citizens.

Sic. How now, my masters! have you chose this man?

1 Cit. He has our voices, sir.

Bru. We pray the gods he may deserve your loves.

2 Cit. Amen, sir. To my poor unworthy notice,
He mock'd us when he begg'd our voices.

3 Cit. Certainly,
He flouted us down-right.

1 Cit. No, 't is his kind of speech: he did not mock us.

2 Cit. Not one amongst us, save yourself, but says,
He has us'd scornfully: he should have show'd us
His marks of merit, wounds receiv'd for 's country.

Sic. Why, so he did, I am sure.

All. No, no; no man saw 'em.

3 Cit. He said, he had wounds, which he could show in private;

And with his hat thus waving it in scorn,
"I would be consul," says he: "aged custom,
But by your voices, will not so permit me;
Your voices therefore." When we granted that,
Here was,—"I thank you for your voices,—thank you,—
Your most sweet voices:—now you have left your voices,
I have no farther with you."—Was not this mockery?

Sic. Why, either, were you ignorant to see 't,
Or, seeing it, of such childish friendliness
To yield your voices?

Bru. Could you not have told him,
As you were lesson'd, when he had no power,
But was a petty servant to the state,
He was your enemy; ever spake against
Your liberties, and the charters that you bear
Of the body of the weal: and now, arriving
A place of potency, and sway in the state,
If he should still malignantly remain
Fast foe to the plebeii, your voices might
Be curses to yourselves. You should have said,
That, as his worthy deeds did claim no less
Than what he stood for, so his gracious nature
Would think upon you for your voices, and Translate his malice towards you into love,
Standing your friendly lord.

Sic. Thus to have said,
As you were fore-advis'd, had touch'd his spirit,
And tried his inclination; from him pluck'd
Either his gracious promise, which you might
As cause had called you up, have held him to,
Or else it would have gall'd his surly nature.

Which easily endures not article

Tying him to aught; so, putting him to rage,
You should have ta'en the advantage of his choler,
And pass'd him unelected.

Bru. Did you perceive,
He did solicit you in free contempt,
When he did need your loves, and do you think
That his contempt shall not be bruising to you,
When he hath power to crush? Why, had your bodies
No heart among you? or had you tongues to cry
Against the rectorship of judgment?

Sic. Have you,
Ere now, denied the asker; and, now again,
Op'd him, that did not ask, but mock, bestow
Your sued-for tongues?

3 Cit. He's not confirmed: we may deny him yet.

2 Cit. And will deny him:

I'll have five hundred voices of that sound.

1 Cit. Ay, twice five hundred, and their friends to piece 'em.

Bru. Get you hence instantly, and tell those friends,
They have chose a consul that will from them take
Their liberties: make them of no more voice
Than dogs, that are as often beat for barking,
As therefore kept to do so.

Sic. Let them assemble;
And, on a safer judgment, all revoke
Your ignorant election. Enforce his pride,
And his old hate unto you: besides, forget not
With what contempt he wore the humble weed,
How in his suit he scorn'd you; but your loves,
Thinking upon his services, took from you
The apprehension of his present portance,
Which most gibingly, ungravely, he did fashion
After the inveterate hate he bears you.

Bru. Lay
A fault on us, your tribunes; that we labour'd
(No impediment between) but that you must Cast your election on him.

Sic. Say, you chose him
More after our commandment, than as guided
By your own true affections; and that, your minds,
Pre-occupy'd with what you rather must do,
Than what you should, made you against the grain
To voice him consul. Lay the fault on us.

Bru. Ay, spare us not. Say, we read lectures to you,
How youngly he began to serve his country.
How long continued, and what stock he springs of,
The noble house of the Marcians: from whence came
That Ancus Marcius, Numa's daughter's son,
Who, after great Hostilius, here was king.
Of the same house Publius and Quintus were,
That our best water brought by conduits hither,
And Censorinus, darling of the people,
And nobly nam'd so, twice being censor,
Was his great ancestor.

Sic. One thus descended,
That hath beside well in his person wrought
To be set high in place, we did commend
To your remembrances; but you have found,
Sealing his present bearing with his past,
That he's your fixed enemy, and revoke
Your sudden approbation.

Bru. Say, you ne'er had done 't.
(Harp on that still) but by our putting on:
And presently, when you have drawn your number,
Repair to the Capitol.

All. We will so: almost all
Repent in their election. [Exeunt Citizens]

Bru. Let them go on:
This mutiny were better put in hazard,
Than stay, past doubt, for greater.
If, as his nature is, he fall in rage
With their refusal, both observe and answer

The vantage of his anger.

Sic. To the Capitol:
Come, we'll be there before the stream o' the people;
And this shall seem, as partly 't is, their own, [Exit
Which we have goaded onward.

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Same. A Street.

Cornets. Enter CORIOLANUS, MENENIUS, COMINIUS, TITUS LARTIUS, Senators, and Patricians.

Cor. Tullus Aufidius, then, had made new head?

Lart. He had, my lord: and that it was, which caus'd
Our swifter composition.

Cor. So then, the Volsees stand but as at first;
Ready, when time shall prompt them, to make road
Upon us again.

Com. They are worn, lord consul, so.
That we shall hardly in our ages see
Their banners wave again.

Cor. Saw you Aufidius?

Lart. On safe-guard he came to me: and did curse
Against the Volsees, for they had so vilely
Yielded the town: he is retir'd to Antium.

Cor. Spoke he of me?

Lart. He did, my lord.

Cor. How? what?

Lart. How often he had met you, sword to sword;
That of all things upon the earth he hated
Your person most; that he would pawn his fortunes
To hopeless restitution, so he might Be call'd your vanquisher.

Cor. At Antium lives he?

Lart. At Antium.

Cor. I wish, I had a cause to seek him there,
To oppose his hatred fully.—Welcome home.

[To LARTIUS.

Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Behold! these are the tribunes of the people,
The tongues o' the common mouth. I do despise them,
For they do prank them in authority,
Against all noble sufferance.

Sic. Pass no farther.

Cor. Ha! what is that?

Bru. It will be dangerous to go on: no farther.

Cor. What makes this change?

Men. The matter?

Com. Hath he not pass'd the nobles, and the commons?

Bru. Cominius, no.

Cor. Have I had children's voices?

Sen. Tribunes, give way: he shall to the market-place.

Bru. The people are incens'd against him.

Sic. Stop.

Or all will fall in broil.

Cor. Are these your herd?—

Must these have voices, that can yield them now.

And straight disclaim their tongues?—What are your offices?

You being their mouths, why rule you not their teeth?
Have you not set them on?

Men. Be calm, be calm.

Cor. It is a purpos'd thing, and grows by plot,

To curb the will of the nobility:

Suffer 't, and live with such as cannot rule,

Nor ever will be rul'd.

Bru.

Call 't not a plot.

The people cry, you mock'd them; and, of late,
When corn was given them gratis, you repin'd;
Scandal'd the suppliants for the people, call'd them
Time-pleasers, flatterers, foes to nobleness.

Cor. Why, this was known before.

Bru.

Not to them all.

Cor. Have you inform'd them since?

Bru.

How! I inform them?

Com. You are like to do such business.

Bru.

Not unlike,

Each way, to better yours.

Cor. Why, then, should I be consul? By yond' clouds,
Let me deserve so ill as you, and make me
Your fellow tribune.

Sic.

You show too much of that,

For which the people stir. If you will pass

To where you are bound, you must inquire your way,

Which you are out of, with a gentler spirit;

Or never be so noble as a consul,

Nor yoke with him for tribune.

Men.

Let's be calm.

Com. The people are abus'd: set on.—This paltering
Becomes not Rome; nor has Coriolanus
Deserv'd this so dishonour'd rub, laid falsely
I' the plain way of his merit.

Cor.

Tell me of corn!

This was my speech, and I will speak 't again—

Men. Not now, not now.

Sen.

Not in this heat, sir, now

Cor. Now, as I live, I will.—My nobler friends,
I crave their pardons:—

For the mutable, rank-scented many, let them

Regard me as I do not flatter, and Therein behold themselves. I say again,

In soothing them we nourish 'gainst our senate

The cockle of rebellion, insolence, sedition,

Which we ourselves have plough'd for, sow'd, and scatter'd,

By mingling them with us, the honour'd number;

Who lack not virtue, no, nor power, but that

Which they have given to beggars.

Men.

Well, no more.

Sen. No more words, we beseech you.

Cor.

How! no more?

As for my country I have shed my blood,

Not fearing outward force, so shall my lungs

Coin words till they decay against those meazels',

Which we disdain should tetter us, yet sought

The very way to catch them.

Bru.

You speak o' the people,

As if you were a god to punish, not

A man of their infirmity. 'T were well,

Sic.

'T were well,

We let the people know 't.

Men.

What, what? his choler?

Cor. Choler!

Were I as patient as the midnight sleep,

By Jove, 't would be my mind.

Sic. It is a mind,
That shall remain a poison where it is,
Not poison any farther.

Cor. Shall remain !—
Hear you this Triton of the minnows? mark you
His absolute "shall?"

Com. 'T was from the canon.
Cor. "Shall!"

O, good but most unwise patricians! why,
You grave but reckless senators, have you thus
Given Hydra ave¹ to choose an officer,
That with his peremptory "shall," being but
The horn and noise o' the monster², wants not spirit
To say, he'll turn your current in a ditch,
And make your channel his? If he have power,
Then vail your impotence³: if none, revoke⁴
Your dangerous bounty⁵. If you are learned,
Be not as common fools; if you are not,
Let them have cushions by you. You are plebeians,
If they be senators; and they are no less,
When both your voices blended, the great⁶st taste
Most palates theirs. They choose their magistrate:
And such a one as he, who puts his "shall."
His popular "shall," against a graver bench
Than ever frown'd in Greece. By Jove himself,
It makes the consuls base; and my soul aches
To know, when two authorities are up,
Neither supreme, how soon confusion
May enter 'twixt the gap of both, and take
The one by the other.

Com. Well—on to the market-place.

Cor. Whoever gave that counsel, to give forth
The corn o' the store-house gratis, as 't was used
Sometime in Greece,—

Men. Well, well; no more of that.

Cor. Though there the people had more absolute power,

I say, they nourish'd disobedience, fed
The ruin of the state.

Bru. Why, shall the people give
One that speaks thus their voice?

Cor. I'll give my reasons,
More worthier than their voices. They know the corn
Was not their⁶ recompence, resting well assur'd
They ne'er did service for 't. Being press'd to the war,
Even when the navel of the state was touch'd,
They would not thread the gates: this kind of service
Did not deserve corn gratis: being i' the war,
Their mutinies and revolts, wherein they show'd
Most valour, spoke not for them. Th' accusation
Which they have often made against the senate,
All cause unborn, could never be the motive⁷
Of our so frank donation. Well, what then?
How shall this bisson⁸ multitude digest
The senate's courtesy? Let deeds express
What's like to be their words:—"We did request it:
We are the greater poll, and in true fear
They gave us our demands."—Thus we debase
The nature of our seats, and make the rabble
Call our cares, fears; which will in time break ope
The locks o' the senate, and bring in the crows
To peck the eagles.—

Men. Come, enough.

Bru. Enough, with over-measure.

Cor. No, take more:
What may be sworn by, both divine and human,
Seal what I end withal!—This double worship,—

Where one part does disdain with cause, the other
Insult without all reason; where gentry, title, wisdom
Cannot conclude, but by the yea and no
Of general ignorance,—it must omit
Real necessities, and give way the while
To unstable slightness. Purpose so barr'd, it follows
Nothing is done to purpose: therefore, beseech you,
You that will be less fearful than discreet,
That love the fundamental part of state,
More than you doubt the change on 't; that prefer
A noble life before a long, and wish
To jump⁹ to a body with a dangerous physic
That's sure of death without it, at once pluck out
The multitudinous tongue: let them not lick
The sweet which is their poison. Your dishonour
Mangles true judgment, and bereaves the state
Of that integrity which should become it,
Not having the power to do the good it would,
For th' ill which doth control it.

Bru. He has said enough.
Sic. He has spoken like a traitor, and shall answer
As traitors do.

Cor. Thon wretch! despite o'erwhelm thee!—
What should the people do with these bald tribunes?
On whom depending, their obedience fails
To the greater bench. In a rebellion,
When what's not meet, but what must be, was law,
Then were they chosen: in a better hour,
Let what is meet be said, it must be meet,
And throw their power i' the dust.

Bru. Manifest treason.

Sic. This a consul? no.
Bru. The Ædiles, ho!—Let him be apprehended.

Enter an Ædile.

Sic. Go, call the people: [Exit Ædile.] in whose name, myself

Attach thee as a traitorous innovator,
A foe to the public weal. Obey, I charge thee,
And follow to thine answer.

Cor. Hence, old goat!

Sen. We'll surety him.

Com. Aged sir, hands off.

Cor. Hence, rotten thing, or I shall shake thy bones
Out of thy garments.

Sic. Help, ye citizens!

Re-enter the Ædile, with others, and a Rabble of Citizens.
Men. On both sides more respect.

Sic. Here's he, that would Take from you all your power.

Bru. Seize him, Ædiles.

Cit. Down with him! down with him! [Several speak.]

2 Sen. Weapons! weapons! weapons!
[They all bustle about CORIOLANUS.]

Tribunes, patricians, citizens!—what ho!—

Sicinius, Brutus, Coriolanus, citizens!

Cit. Peace, peace, peace! stay, hold, peace!

Men. What is about to be?—I am out of breath:
Confusion's near: I cannot speak.—You, tribunes
To the people,—Coriolanus, patience:—
Speak, good Sicinius.

Sic. Hear me! people, peace!

Cit. Let's hear our tribune:—Peace! Speak, speak, speak.

Sic. You are at point to lose your liberties:
Marcius would have all from you: Marcius.
Whom late you have nam'd for consul.

Men. Fie, fie, fie!
This is the way to kindle, not to quench.

¹ here: in f.e. ² monsters: in f.e. ³ ignorance: in f.e. ⁴ awake: in f.e. ⁵ lenity: in f.e. ⁶ our: in f.e. ⁷ native: in f.e.
⁸ Blind. ⁹ bosom multiplied: in f.e. ¹⁰ Risk

Sen. To unbuild the city, and to lay all flat.

Sic. What is the city, but the people?

Cit. True;

The people are the city.

Bru. By the consent of all, we were establish'd

The people's magistrates.

Cit. You so remain.

Men. And so are like to do.

Com. That is the way to lay the city flat.

To bring the roof to the foundation,

And bury all, which yet distinctly ranges.

In heaps and piles of ruin.

Sic. This deserves death.

Bru. Or let us stand to our authority.

Or let us lose it.—We do here pronounce,

Upon the part o' the people, in whose power

We were elected theirs, Marcius is worthy

O' present death.

Sic. Therefore, lay hold of him.

Bear him to the rock Tarpeian, and from thence
Into destruction cast him.

Bru. Ediles, seize him.

Cit. Yield, Marcius, yield.

Men. Hear me one word.

Beseech you, tribunes, hear me but a word.

Edi. Peace, peace!

Men. Be that you seem, truly your country's friend,

And temperately proceed to what you would

Thus violently redress.

Bru. Sir, those cold ways,

That seem like prudent helps, are very poisonous

Where the disease is violent.—Lay hands upon him,

And bear him to the rock.

Cor. No: I'll die here. [Drawing his Sword.]

There's some among you have beheld me fighting:

Come, try upon yourselves what you have seen me.

Men. Down with that sword!—Tribunes, withdraw a while.

Bru. Lay hands upon him.

Men. Help Marcius, help.

You that be noble: help him, young and old!

Cit. Down with him! down with him!

[In this mutiny, the Tribunes, the Ediles, and the People, are beat in.]

Men. Go, get you to your house: be gone, away!

All will be naught else.

2 Sen. Get you gone.

Com. Stand fast:

We have as many friends as enemies.

Men. Shall it be put to that?

1 Sen. The gods forbid!

I prythee, noble friend, home to thy house;

Leave us to cure this cause.

Men. For 't is a sore upon us,

You cannot tent yourself. Beseech you.

Com. Come, sir, along with us.

Cor. I would they were barbarians, as they are.

Though in Rome hither'd, not Romans, as they are not,

Though call'd i' the porch o' the Capitol!

Men. Be gone;

Put not your worthy rage into your tongue:

One time will owe another.

Cor. On fair ground,

I could beat forty of them.

Men. I could myself

Take up a brace of the best of them; yea, the two tribunes.

Com. But now 't is odds beyond arithmetic:

And manhood is call'd foolery, when it stands

Against a falling fabric.—Will you hence,

Before the tag return, whose rage doth rend

Like interrupted waters, and o'erbear

What they are used to bear?

Men. Pray you, be gone.

I'll try whether my old wit be in request

With those that have but little: this must be patch'd

With cloth of any colour.

Com. Nay, come away.

[Exeunt CORIOLANUS, COMINIUS, and others.]

1 Pat. This man has marr'd his fortune.

Men. His nature is too noble for the world:

He would not flatter Neptune for his trident,

Or Jove for 's power to thunder. His heart's his mouth:

What his breast forges, that his tongue must vent;

And, being angry, does forget that ever

He heard the name of death. [A noise within.]

Here's goodly work!

2 Pat. I would they were a-bed!

Men. I would they were in Tyber!—What, the vengeance.

Could he not speak them fair?

Re-enter BRUTUS and SICIPIUS, with the Rabble.

Sic. Where is this viper,

That would depopulate the city, and

Be every man himself?

Men. You worthy tribunes,—

Sic. He shall be thrown down the Tarpeian rock

With rigorous hands: he hath resisted law,

And therefore law shall scorn him farther trial

Than the severity of the public power.

Which he so sets at naught.

1 Cit. He shall well know,

The noble tribunes are the people's mouths,

And we their hands.

Cit. He shall, sure on 't.

Men. Sir, sir,—

Sic. Peace!

Men. Do not ery havock, where you should but hunt

With modest warrant.

Sic. Sir, how comes 't, that you

Have hold to make this rescue?

Men. Hear me speak.—

As I do know the consul's worthiness,

So can I name his faults.—

Sic. Consul!—what consul?

Men. The consul Coriolanus.

Bru. He a consul!

Cit. No, no, no, no, no.

Men. If, by the tribunes' leave, and yours, good people

I may be heard, I would crave a word or two;

The which shall turn you to no farther harm.

Than so much loss of time.

Sic. Speak briefly then;

For we are peremptory to despatch

This viperous traitor. To eject him hence,

Were but one danger, and to keep him here,

Our certain death: therefore, it is decreed

He dies to-night.

Men. Now the good gods forbid.

That our renowned Rome, whose gratitude

Towards her deserving children is enroll'd

In Jove's own book, like an unnatural dam

Should now eat up her own!

Sic. He's a disease, that must be cut away.

Men. O! he's a limb, that has but a disease:

Mortal, to cut it off: to cure it, easy.

What has he done to Rome that's worthy death?

Killing our enemies? The blood he hath lost,

(Which, I dare vouch, is more than he hath,

By many an ounce) he dropp'd it for his country :
And what is left, to lose it by his country,
Were to us all, that do't and suffer it,
A brand to th' end of the world.

Sic. This is clean kam'.
Bru. Merely awry. When he did love his country,
It honour'd him.

Men. The service of the foot,
Being once gangren'd, is not then respected
For what before it was.

Bru. We'll hear no more.—
Pursue him to his house, and pluck him thence,
Lest his infection, being of catching nature,
Spread farther.

Men. One word more, one word.
This tiger-footed rage, when it shall find
The harm of unscann'd swiftness, will, too late,
Tie leaden pounds to 's heels. Proceed by process ;
Lest parties (as he is belov'd) break out,
And sack great Rome with Romans.

Bru. If it were so,—
Sic. What do ye talk ?

Have we not had a taste of his obedience ?
Our Ediles smote ? ourselves resisted ?—Come !—

Men. Consider this :—he has been bred i' the wars
Since he could draw a sword, and is ill school'd
In boulded language ; meal and bran together
He throws without distinction. Give me leave,
I'll go to him, and undertake to bring him in peace
Where he shall answer, by a lawful form,
In peace, to his utmost peril.

1 Sen. Noble tribunes,
It is the humane way : the other course
Will prove too bloody, and the end of it
Unknown to the beginning.

Sic. Noble Menenius,
Be you, then, as the people's officer.—
Masters, lay down your weapons.

Bru. Go not home.
Sic. Meet on the market-place.—We'll attend you
there :
Where, if you bring not Marcius, we'll proceed
In our first way.

Men. I'll bring him to you.—
Let me desire your company. [To the Senators.] He must come,
Or what is worst will follow.

1 Sen. Pray you, let's to him. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in CORIOLANUS's House.

Enter CORIOLANUS, and Patricians.

Cor. Let them pull all about mine ears : present me
Death on the wheel, or at wild horses' heels ;
Or pile ten hills on the Tarpeian rock,
That the precipitation might down stretch
Below the beam of sight, yet will I still Be thus to them.*

1 Pat. You do the nobler.

Cor. I muse my mother
Does not approve me farther, who was wont
To call them woollen vassals ; things created
To buy and sell with groats ; to show bare heads
In congregations, to yawn, be still, and wonder,
When one but of my ordinance stood up
To speak of peace, or war.

Enter VOLUMNIA.

I talk of you :
Why did you wish me milder ? Would you have me

False to my nature ? Rather say, I play
The man I am.

Vol. O, son, son, son !
I would have had you put your power well on,
Before you had worn it out.

Cor. Let go.
Vol. You might have been enough the man you are
With striving less to be so : lesser had been
The thwartings of your dispositions, if
You had not show'd them how you were dispos'd,
Ere they lack'd power to cross you.

Cor. Let them hang.
Vol. Ay, and burn too.

Enter MENENIUS, and Senators.

Men. Come, come ; you have been too rough, something too rough :
You must return, and mend it.

1 Sen. There's no remedy ;
Unless, by not so doing, our good city
Cleave in the midst, and perish.

Vol. Pray, be counsel'd
I have a heart as little apt as yours
To brook control without the use of anger,³
But yet a brain, that leads my use of anger
To better vantage.

Men. Well said, noble woman !
Before he should thus stoop o' the heart,⁴ but that
The violent fit o' the time craves it as physic
For the whole state, I would put mine armour on,
Which I can scarcely bear.

Cor. What must I do ?

Men. Return to the tribunes.

Cor. Well, what then ? what then ?

Men. Repent what you have spoke.

Cor. For them ?—I cannot do it to the gods ;
Must I then do 't to them ?

Vol. You are too absolute ;
Though therein you can never be too noble,
But when extremities speak. I have heard you say,
Honour and policy, like unsever'd friends,
I' the war do grow together : grant that, and tell me,
In peace what each of them by th' other lose,
That they combine not there ?

Cor. Tush, tush !

Men. A good demand

Vol. If it be honour in your wars to seem
The same you are not, (which for your best ends
You adopt your policy) how is it less, or worse,
That it shall hold companionship in peace
With honour, as in war, since that to both
It stands in like request ?

Cor. Why force you this ?

Vol. Because that now it lies on you to speak
To the people ; not by your own instruction,
Nor by the matter which your heart prompts you
But with such words that are but roted⁵ in
Your tongue, though but bastards, and syllables
Of no allowance to your bosom's truth.
Now, this no more dishonours you at all,
Than to take in a town with gentle words,
Which else would put you to your fortune, and
The hazard of much blood.—

I would dissemble with my nature, where,
My fortunes and my friends at stake, requir'd
I should do so in honour : I am in this,
Your wife, your son, these senators, the nobles :
And you will rather show our general lows
How you can frown, than spend a fawn upon 'em,

* Crooked. ² Enter VOLUMNIA : in f. e. ³ Not in f. e. ⁴ Sir, sir, sir : in f. e. ⁵ This line is not in f. e. ⁶ To the head : in f. e. changed by Theobald, from heart, in the folio. ⁷ roated : in folio. Dyce reads : rooted

For the inheritance of their loves, and safeguard
Of what that want might ruin.

Men. Noble lady!—
Come, go with us: speak fair: you may salve so,
Not what is dangerous present, but the loss
Of what is past.

Vol. I pry'three now, my son,
Go to them, with this bonnet in thy hand;
And thus far having stretch'd it, (here be with them)
Thy knee bussing the stones, (for in such business
Action is eloquence, and the eyes of the ignorant
More learned than the ears) waving thy head,
Which often, thus, correcting thy stout heart,
Now 's humble as the ripest mulberry
That will not hold the handling. Or say to them,
Thou art their soldier, and being bred in broils,
Hast not the soft way, which thou dost confess,
Were fit for thee to use as they to claim,
In asking their good loves; but thou wilt frame
Thyself, forsooth, hereafter theirs, so far
As thou hast power, and person.

Men. This but done,
Even as she speaks, why, their hearts were yours;
For they have pardons, being ask'd, as free
As words to little purpose.

Vol. Pry'three now,
Go, and be rul'd; although, I know, thou hadst rather Follow thine enemy in a fiery gulf,
Than flatter him in a bower. Here is Cominius.

Enter COMINIUS.

Com. I have been i' the market-place; and, sir, 't is fit
You make strong party, or defend yourself
By calmness, or by absence: all 's in anger.

Men. Only fair speech.

Com. I think, 't will serve; if he
Can thereto frame his spirit.

Vol. He must, and will.—
Pry'three now, say you will, and go about it.

Cor. Must I go show them my unbarb'd scence?
Must I with my base tongue give to my noble heart
A lie, that it must bear? Well, I will do't:
Yet were there but this single plot to lose,
This mould of Marcus, they to dust should grind it,
And throw 't against the wind.—To the market-place!
You have put me now to such a part, which never
I shall discharge to the life.

Com. Come, come, we 'll prompt you.

Vol. I pry'three now, sweet son: as thou hast said,
My praises made thee first a soldier, so,
To have my praise for this, perform a part
Thou hast not done before.

Cor. Well, I must do 't.
Away, my disposition, and possess me
Some harlot's spirit! My throat of war be turn'd,
Which quired with my drum, into a pipe
Small as an eunuch, or the virgin voice
That babies lulls asleep! The smiles of knaves
Tent in my cheeks; and school-boys' tears take up
The glasses of my sight! A beggar's tongue
Make motion through my lips; and my arm'd knees,
Who bow'd but in my stirrup, bend like his
That hath receiv'd alms!—I will not do 't,
Lest I surcease to honour mine own truth,
And by my body's action teach my mind
A most inherent baseness.

Vol. At thy choice, then:
To beg of thee is my more dishonour,
Than thou of them. Come all to ruin; let
Thy mother rather feel thy pride, than fear

Thy dangerous stoutness; for I mock at death
With as big heart as thou. Do as thou list.
Thy valiantness was mine, thou suck'dst it from me,
But ow'st¹ thy pride thyself.

Cor. Pray, be content:
Mother, I am going to the market-place;
Chide me no more. I'll mountbank their loves,
Cog their hearts from them, and come home belov'd
Of all the trades in Rome. Look, I am going.
Commend me to my wife. I'll return consul,
Or never trust to what my tongue can do
I' the way of flattery farther.

Vol. Do your will. [Exit.]

Com. Away! the tribunes do attend you: arm yourself
To answer mildly; for they are prepar'd
With accusations, as I hear, more strong
Than are upon you yet.

Cor. The word is, mildly:—pray you, let us go.
Let them accuse me by invention, I
Will answer in mine honour.

Men. Ay, but mildly.

Cor. Well, mildly be it then; mildly. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same. The Forum.

Enter SICINIUS AND BRUTUS.

Bru. In this point charge him home; that he affects Tyrannical power: if he evade us there,
Enforce him with his envy² to the people;
And that the spoil got on the Antiates
Was ne'er distributed.—

Enter an Ædile.

What! will he come?

Æd. He's coming.

Bru. How accompanied?

Æd. With old Menenius, and those senators
That always favour'd him.

Sic. Have you a catalogue
Of all the voices that we have procur'd,
Set down by the poll?

Æd. I have; 't is ready.

Sic. Have you collected them by tribes?

Æd. I have.

Sic. Assemble presently the people hither:
And when they hear me say, "It shall be so,
I' the right and strength o' the commons," be it either
For death, for fine, or banishment, then let them,
If I say, fine, cry "fine;" if death, cry "death;"
Insisting on their old prerogative
And power i' the truth o' the cause.

Æd. I shall inform them.

Bru. And when such time they have begun to cry,
Let them not cease, but with a din confus'd
Enforce the present execution
Of what we chance to sentence.

Æd. Very well.

Sic. Make them be strong, and ready for this hint,
When we shall hap to give 't them.

Bru. Go; about it.—
[Exit Ædile]

Put him to choler straight. He hath been us'd
Ever to conquer, and to have his mouth³
Of contradiction: being once chaf'd, he cannot
Be rein'd again to temperance; then he speaks
What's in his heart; and that is there, which looks
With us to break his neck.

Enter CORIOLANUS, MENENIUS, COMINIUS, Senators, and Patricians.

Sic. Well, here he comes.

Men. Calmly, I do beseech you

Cor. Ay, as an ostler, that for the poorest piece
Will bear the knave by the volume.—The honour'd gods
Keep Rome in safety, and the chairs of justice
Supplied with worthy men! plant love among us!
Throng our large temples with the shows of peace,
And not our streets with war!

1 Sen.

Amen, amen.

Men. A noble wish.

Re-enter Ædile, with Citizens.

Sic. Draw near, ye people.

Æd. List to your tribunes. Audience: peace! I say.

Cor. First, hear me speak.

Both Tri.

Well, say.—Peace, ho!

Cor. Shall I be charg'd no farther than this present?
Must all determine here?

Sic. I do demand,

If you submit you to the people's voices,

Allow their officers, and are content

To suffer lawful censure for such faults

As shall be prov'd upon you?

Cor.

I am content.

Men. Lo, citizens! he says, he is content.

The warlike service he has done, consider;

Think upon the wounds his body bears, which show

Like graves i' the holy churchyard.

Cor.

Scratches with briars;

Sears to move laughter only.

Men.

Consider farther,

That when he speaks not like a citizen,

You find him like a soldier. Do not take

His rougher accents for malicious sounds,

But, as I say, such as become a soldier,

Rather than envy you.

Com.

Well, well; no more.

Cor. What is the matter,

That being pass'd for consent with full voice,

I am so dishonour'd, that the very hour

You take it off again?

Sic.

Answer to us.

Cor. Say then: 't is true, I ought so.

Sic. We charge you, that you have contriv'd to take

From Rome all season'd office, and to wind

Yourself into a power tyrannical:

For which you are a traitor to the people.

Cor. How! Traitor?

Men.

Nay, temperately; your promise.

Cor. The fires i' the lowest hell fold in the people!

Call me their traitor?—Thou injurious tribune,

Within thine eyes sat twenty thousand deaths,

In thy hands clutch'd as many millions. in

Thy lying tongue both numbers, I would say,

Thou liest, unto thee, with a voice as free

As I do pray the gods.

Sic.

Mark you this, people?

Cit. To the rock! to the rock with him!

Sic.

Peace!

We need not put new matter to his charge:

What you have seen him do, and heard him speak,

Beating your officers, cursing yourselves,

Opposing laws with strokes, and here defying

Those whose great power must try him; even this,

So criminal, and in such capital kind,

Deserves th' extremest death.

Bru.

But since he hath

Serv'd well for Rome,—

Cor.

What do you prate of service?

Bru. I talk of that, that know it.

Cor.

You?

Men.

Is this

The promise that you made your mother?

Com.

Know,

I pray you,—

Cor.

I'll know no farther.

Let them pronounce the steep Tarpeian death,

Vagabond exile, flaying, pent to linger

But with a grain a day, I would not buy

Their mercy at the price of one fair word.

Nor check my carriage¹ for what they can give,

To have't with saying, good morrow.

Sic.

For that he has

(As much as in him lies) from time to time

Envied against the people, seeking means

To pluck away their power; as now at last

Given hostile strokes, and that not in the presence

Of dreaded justice, but on the ministers

That do distribute it; in the name o' the people,

And in the power of us, the tribunes, we,

Even from this instant, banish him our city,

In peril of precipitation

From off the rock Tarpeian, never more

To enter our Rome gates. I' the people's name,

I say, it shall be so.

Cit. It shall be so, it shall be so: let him away.

He's banish'd, and it shall be so.

Com. Hear me, my masters, and my common friends;—

Sic. He's sentenc'd: no more hearing.

Com.

Let me speak

I have been consul, and can show for Rome,

Her enemies' marks upon me. I do love

My country's good, with a respect more tender,

More holy and profound, than mine own life,

My dear wife's estimate, her womb's increase,

And treasure of my loins; then, if I would

Speak that—

Sic.

We know your drift. Speak what?

Bru. There's no more to be said; but he is banish'd

As enemy to the people, and his country.

It shall be so.

Cit.

It shall be so: it shall be so.

Cor. You common cry of curs! whose breath I hate

As reek o' the rotten fens, whose loves I prize

As the dead carcases of unburied men

That do corrupt my air, I banish you;

And here remain with your uncertainty.

Let every feeble rumour shake your hearts!

Your enemies, with nodding of their plumes,

Fan you into despair! Have the power still

To banish your defenders; till, at length,

Your ignorance, (which finds not, till it feels)

Making not² reservation of yourselves,

(Still your own foes) deliver you as most

Abated captives, to some nation

That won you without blows! Despising,

For you, the city, thus I turn my back.

There is a world elsewhere.

[Exeunt CORIOLANUS, COMINIUS, MENENIUS,

Senators, and Patricians.

Æd. The people's enemy is gone, is gone!

Cit. Our enemy is banish'd! he is gone! Hoo! hoo

[The People shout, and throw up their Caps

Sic. Go, see him out at gates; and follow him,

As he hath follow'd you, with all despite:

Give him deserv'd vexation. Let a guard

Attend us through the city.

Cit. Come, come; let us see him out at gates: come.—

The gods preserve our noble tribunes!—Come. [Exeunt

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Same. Before a Gate of the City.

Enter CORIOLANUS, VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, MENENIUS, COMINIUS, and several young Patricians.

Cor. Come, leave your tears : a brief farewell.—The beast

With many heads butts me away.—Nay, mother,
Where is your ancient courage? you were us'd
To say, extremity was the trier of spirits;
That common chances common men could bear;
That, when the sea was calm, all boats alike
Show'd mastership in floating; fortune's blows,
When most struck home, being gentle minded' craves
A noble cunning. You were us'd to load me
With precepts, that would make invincible
The heart that could'n't them.

Vir. O heavens! O heavens!

Cor. Nay, I pry'thee, woman.—

Vol. Now, the red pestilence strike all trades in Rome,
And occupations perish!

Cor. What, what, what!

I shall be lov'd when I am lack'd. Nay, mother,
Resume that spirit, when you were wont to say,
If you had been the wife of Hercules,
Six of his labours you'd have done, and sav'd
Your husband so much sweat.—Cominius.
Droop not: adieu.—Farewell, my wife! my mother!
I'll do well yet.—Thou old and true Menenius,
Thy tears are saltier than a younger man's,
And venomous to thine eyes.—My sometime general,
I have seen thee stern, and thou hast oft beheld
Heart-hardening spectacles; tell these sad women,
Tis fond to wail inevitable strokes,
As 't is to laugh at 'em.—My mother, you wet well,
My hazards still have been your solace; and Believe't not lightly, though I go alone,
Like to a lonely dragon, that his fen
Makes fear'd, and talk'd of more than seen, your son
Will or exceed the common, or be caught
With cautious baits and practice.

Vol. My first son,
Whither wilt thou go? Take good Cominius
With thee a while: determine on some course
More than a wild exposure² to each chance,
That starts i' the way before thee.

Cor. O the gods!

Com. I'll follow thee a month: devise with thee
Where thou shalt rest, that thou may'st hear of us,
And we of thee: so, if the time thrust forth
A cause for thy repeal, we shall not send
O'er the vast world to seek a single man.
And lose advantage, which doth ever cool
I' the absence of the needier.

Cor. Fare ye well:

Thou hast years upon thee: and thou art too full
Of the wars' surfeits to go rove with one
That's yet unbruist: bring me but out at gate.—
Come, my sweet wife, my dearest mother, and
My friends of noble touch, when I am forth,
Bid me farewell, and smile. I pray you, come.
While I remain above the ground, you shall Hear from me still; and never of me aught
But what is like me formerly.

Men. That's worthily
As any ear can hear.—Come; let's not weep.—

If I could shake off but one seven years
From these old arms and legs, by the good gods,
I'd with thee every foot.

Cor. Give me thy hand.—
Come. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Street near the Gate.

Enter SICINIUS, BRUTUS, and an Edile.

Sic. Bid them all home: he's gone, and we'll ne farther.—

The nobility are vex'd, who, we see, have sided
In his behalf.

Bru. Now we have shown our power,
Let us seem humbler after it is done,
Than when it was a doing.

Sic. Bid them home:
Say, their great enemy is gone, and they Stand in their ancient strength.

Bru. Dismiss them home.
[Exit Edile]

Enter VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, and MENENIUS.

Here comes his mother.

Sic. Let's not meet her.

Bru. Why?

Sic. They say, she's mad.

Bru. They have ta'en note of us: keep on your way.
Vol. O! y'are well met. The hearded plague o' the Requite your love! [gods]

Men. Peace, peace! be not so loud.

Vol. If that I could for weeping, you should hear,—
Nay, and you shall hear some.—Will you be gone?

[To BRUTUS]

Vir. You shall stay too. [To SICIN.] I would, I had the power

To say so to my husband.

Sic. Are you mankind?

Vol. Ay, fool; is that a shame?—Note but this fool.
Was not a man my father? Hadst thou foxship
To banish him that struck more blows for Rome,
Than thou hast spoken words?

Sic. O, blessed heavens!

Vol. More noble blows, than ever thou wise words
And for Rome's good.—I'll tell thee what—yet go:—
Nay, but thou shalt stay too.—I would my son
Were in Arabia, and thy tribe before him,
His good sword in his hand.

Sic. What then?

Vir. What then!
He'd make an end of thy posterity.

Vol. Bastards, and all.—

Good man, the wounds that he does bear for Rome!

Men. Come, come: peace!

Sic. I would he had continued to his country,
As he began; and not unknit himself
The noble knot he made.

Bru. I would he had.

Vol. I would he had. 'T was you incens'd the rabble
Curs, that can judge as fitly of his worth,
As I can of those mysteries, which heaven
Will not have earth to know.

Bru. Pray, let us go.

Vol. Now, pray, sir, get you gone.
You have done a brave deed. Ere you go, hear this.—
As far as doth the Capitol exceed
The meanest house in Rome, so far my son.

This lady's husband here, this, do you see,
Whom you have banish'd, does exceed you all.

Bru. Well, well; we'll leave you.

Sic. Why stay we to be baited

With one that wants her wits?

Vol. Take my prayers with you.—[Exeunt Tribunes.]

I would the gods had nothing else to do,

But to confirm my curses. Could I meet 'em

But once a day, it would unclog my heart

Of what lies heavy to't.

Men. You have told them home,

And, by my troth, you have cause. You'll sup with me?

Vol. Anger's my meat: I sup upon myself.

And so shall starve with feeding.—Come, let's go.

Leave this faint puling, and lament as I do,

In anger, Juno-like. Come, come, come.

Men. Fie, fie, fie!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A Highway between Rome and Antium.

Enter a Roman and a Volscie, meeting.

Rom. I know you well, sir; and you know me.
Your name, I think, is Adrian.

Vol. It is so, sir: truly, I have forgot you.

Rom. I am a Roman: and my services are, as you are, against 'em. Know you me yet?

Vol. Nicanor? No.

Rom. The same, sir.

Vol. You had more beard, when I last saw you; but your favour is well approved¹ by your tongue. What 's the news in Rome? I have a note from the Volscian state, to find you out there: you have well sav'd me a day's journey.

Rom. There hath been in Rome strange insurrection:
the people against the senators, patricians, and nobles.

Vol. Hath been! Is it ended then? Our state thinks not so: they are in a most warlike preparation, and hope to come upon them in the heat of their division.

Rom. The main blaze of it is past, but a small thing would make it flame again: for the nobles receive so to heart the banishment of that worthy, Coriolanus, that they are in a ripe aptness to take all power from the people, and to pluck from them their tribunes for ever.
This lies glowing, I can tell you, and is almost mature for the violent breaking out.

Vol. Coriolanus banished?

Rom. Banished, sir.

Vol. You will be welcome with this intelligence, Nicanor.

Rom. The day serves well for them now. I have heard it said, the fittest time to corrupt a man's wife is when she's fallen out with her husband. Your noble Tullus Aufidius will appear well in these wars, his great opposer, Coriolanus, being now in no request of his country.

Vol. He cannot choose. I am most fortunate, thus accidentally to encounter you: you have ended my business, and I will merrily accompany you home.

Rom. I shall between this and supper tell you most strange things from Rome, all tending to the good of their adversaries. Have you an army ready, say you?

Vol. A most royal one; the centurions and their charges distinctly billeted, already in the entertainment, and to be on foot at an hour's warning.

Rom. I am joyful to hear of their readiness, and am the man, I think, that shall set them in present action. So, sir, heartily well met, and most glad of your company.

Vol. You take my part from me, sir: I have the most cause to be glad of yours.

Rom. Well, let us go together.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Antium. Before the House of Aufidius.

Enter CORIOLANUS, in mean Apparel, disguised and muffled.

Cor. A goodly city is this Antium.—City,
'T is I that made thy widows: many an heir
Of these fair edifices 'fore my wars
Have I heard groan, and drop: then, know me not,
Lest that thy wives with spits, and boys with stones,
Enter a Citizen.

In puny battle slay me.—Save you, sir.

Cit. And you.

Cor. Direct me, if it be your will,
Where great Aufidius lies. Is he in Antium?

Cit. He is, and feasts the nobles of the state
At his house this night.

Cor. Which is his house, beseech you?

Cit. This, here before you.

Cor. Thank you, sir. Farewell. [Exit Citizen.]

O world, thy slippery turns! Friends now fast sworn,

Whose double bosoms seem to wear one heart,

Whose house², whose bed, whose meal, and exercise,

Are still together, who twin, as 't were, in love

Unseparable, shall within this hour,

On a dissension of a doit, break out

To bitterest enmity: so, fellest foes,

Whose passions and whose plots have broken their sleep

To take the one the other, by some chance,

Some trick not worth an egg, shall grow dear friends,

And interjoin their issues. So with me:—

My birth-place hate³ I, and my love 's upon

This enemy town. I'll enter: if he slay me,

He does fair justice; if he give me way,

I'll do his country service.

[Exit]

SCENE V.—The Same. A Hall in Aufidius's House.

Music within. Enter a Servant.

1 Serv. Wine, wine, wine! What service is here?
I think our fellows are asleep. [Exit.]

Enter a second Servant.

2 Serv. Where's Cotus? My master calls for him.—
Cotus! [Exit]

Enter CORIOLANUS.

Cor. A goodly house. The feast smells well; but I
Appear not like a guest.

Re-enter the first Servant.

1 Serv. What would you have, friend? Whence are you? Here's no place for you: pray, go to the door.

Cor. I have deserv'd no better entertainment,
In being Coriolanus.

Re-enter second Servant.

2 Serv. Whence are you, sir? Has the porter lost eyes in his head, that he gives entrance to such companions⁴? Pray, get you out.

Cor. Away!

2 Serv. Away? Get you away.

Cor. Now, th' art troublesome.

2 Serv. Are you so brave? I'll have you talked with anon.

Enter a third Servant: the first meets him.

3 Serv. What fellow 's this?

1 Serv. A strange one as ever I looked on: I cannot get him out o' the house. Pr'ythee, call my master to him.

3 Serv. What have you to do here, fellow? Pray you, avoid the house.

Cor. Let me but stand; I will not hurt your hearth

3 Serv. What are you?

Cor. A gentleman.

¹ appeared: in f. e. ² hours: in f. e. ³ have: in folio. Steevens made the change. ⁴ Often used in a disparaging sense, like fellows

3 Serv. A marvellous poor one.

Cor. True, so I am.

3 Serv. Pray you, poor gentleman, take up some other station; here 's no place for you. Pray you, avoid: come.

Cor. Follow your function; go.

And batten on cold bits. [Pushes him away.]

3 Serv. What, wilt you not? Pr'ythee, tell my master what a strange guest he has here.

2 Serv. And I shall.

3 Serv. Where dwellest thou?

Cor. Under the canopy.

3 Serv. Under the canopy?

Cor. Ay.

3 Serv. Where 's that?

Cor. I the city of kites and crows.

3 Serv. I the city of kites and crows?—What an ass it is!—Then, thou dwellest with daws too?

Cor. No: I serve not thy master.

3 Serv. How, sir! Do you meddle with my master?

Cor. Ay: 't is an honest service than to meddle with thy mistress.

Thou prat'st, and prat'st: serve with thy trencher. Hence! [Beats him.]

Enter AUFIDIUS and the second Servant.

Auf. Where is this fellow?

2 Serv. Here, sir. I'd have beaten him like a dog, but for disturbing the lords within.

Auf. Whence com'st thou? what wouldst thou? Thy name?

Why speak'st not? Speak, man: what's thy name?

Cor. If, Tullus, [Unmuffling.]

Not yet thou know'st me, and seeing me, dost not Think me for the man I am, necessity

Commands me name myself.

Auf. What is thy name? [Servants retire.]

Cor. A name unmusical to the Volscians' ears, And harsh in sound to thine.

Auf. Say, what's thy name?

Thou hast a grim appearance, and thy face

Bears a command in 't: though thy tackle's torn,

Thou show'st a noble vessel. What's thy name?

Cor. Prepare thy brow to frown. Know'st thou me yet?

Auf. I know thee not.—Thy name?

Cor. My name is Caius Marcius, who hath done

To thee particularly, and to all the Volsees

Great hurt and mischief; thereto witness may

My surname, Coriolanus. The painful service,

The extreme dangers, and the drops of blood

Shed for my thankless country, are requited

But with that surname; a good memory,

And witness of the malice and displeasure

Which thou shouldst bear me. Only that name remains:

The cruelty and envy of the people,

Permitted by our dastard nobles, who

Have all forsook me, hath devour'd the rest;

And suffered me by the voice of slaves to be

Whoop'd out of Rome. Now, this extremity

Hath brought me to thy hearth: not out of hope,

Mistake me not, to save my life; for if

I had fear'd death, of all the men i' the world

I would have avoid'd thee; but in mere spite,

To be full quit of those my banishers,

Stand I before thee here. Then, if thou hast

A heart of wreak in thee, that will revenge

Thine own particular wrongs, and stop those mains

Of shame seen through thy country, speed thee straight,

And make my misery serve thy turn: so use it,

That my revengeful services may prove

As benefits to thee; for I will fight

Against my canker'd country with the spleen

Of all the under fiends. But if so be

Thou dar'st not this, and that to prove more fortunes

Thou art tir'd; then, in a word, I also am

Longer to live most weary, and present

My throat to thee, and to thy ancient malice:

Which not to cut would show thee but a fool,

Since I have ever follow'd thee with hate

Drawn tuns of blood out of thy country's breast,

And cannot live but to thy shame, unless

It be to do thee service.

Auf.

O Marcius, Marcius!

Each word thou hast spoke hath weeded from my heart

A root of ancient envy. If Jupiter

Should from yond' cloud speak divine things,

And say, "Tis true;" I'd not believe them more

Than thee, all noble Marcius.—Let me twine

Mine arms about that body, where against

My grained ash an hundred times hath broke,

And scar'd¹ the moon with splinters! Here I clip²

The anvil of my sword; and do contest

As hotly and as nobly with thy love,

As ever in ambitious strength I did

Contend against thy valour. Know thou first,

I lov'd the maid I married: never man

Sigh'd truer breath; but that I see thee here,

Thou noble thing, more dances my rapt heart,

Than when I first my wedded mistress saw

Bestride my threshold. Why, thou Mars, I tell thee,

We have a power on foot; and I had purpose

Once more to hew thy target from thy brawn,

Or lose mine arm for 't. Thou hast beat me out³

Twelve several times, and I have nightly since

Dreamt of encounters 'twixt thyself and me:

We have been down together in my sleep,

Unbuckling helms, fisting each other's throat,

And wak'd half dead with nothing. Worthy Marcins,

Had we no other quarrel else to Rome, but that

Thou art thence banish'd, we would muster all

From twelve to seventy: and, pouring war

Into the bowels of ungrateful Rome,

Like a bold flood o'er-bear⁴ it. O! come: go in,

And take our friendly senators by the hands,

Who now are here, taking their leaves of me,

Who am prepar'd against your territories,

Though not for Rome itself.

Cor.

You bless me, gods!

Auf. Therefore, most absolute sir, if thou wilt have

The leading of thine own revenges, take

Th' one half of my commission: and set down,—

As best thou art experienc'd, since thou know'st

Thy country's strength and weakness,—thine own ways;

Whether to knock against the gates of Rome,

Or rudely visit them in parts remote,

To fright them, ere destroy. But come in:

Let me commend thee first to those, that shall Say, "yea," to thy desires. A thousand welcomes!

And more a friend than e'er an enemy:

Yet, Marcius, that was much. Your hand: most welcome! [Exit CORIOLANUS and AUFIDIUS.]

1 Serv. [Advancing.] Here 's a strange alteration!

2 Serv. By my hand, I had thought to have strucken him with a cudgel; and yet my mind gave me, his clothes made a false report of him.

1 Serv. What an arm he has! He turned me about with his finger and his thumb, as one would set up a top.

2 Serv. Nay, I knew by his face that there was something in him: he had, sir, a kind of face, methought,—

I cannot tell how to term it.

1 Serv. He had so; looking as it were,—Would I were hanged, but I thought there was more in him than I could think.

2 Serv. So did I, I'll be sworn. He is simply the rarest man i' the world.

1 Serv. I think, he is; but a greater soldier than he, you wot one.

2 Serv. Who? my master?

1 Serv. Nay, it's no matter for that.

2 Serv. Worth six on him.

1 Serv. Nay, not so neither; but I take him to be the greater soldier.

2 Serv. Faith, look you, one cannot tell how to say that: for the defence of a town, our general is excellent.

1 Serv. Ay, and for an assault too.

Re-enter third Servant.

3 Serv. O, slaves! I can tell you news; news, you rascals.

1. 2. Serv. What, what, what? let's partake. [cals.]

3 Serv. I would not be a Roman, of all nations; I had as lieve be a condemned man.

1. 2. Serv. Wherefore? wherefore?

3 Serv. Why, here's he that was wont to thwack our general.—Caius Marcius.

1 Serv. Why do you say thwack our general?

3 Serv. I do not say, thwack our general; but he was always good enough for him.

2 Serv. Come, we are fellows, and friends: he was ever too hard for him; I have heard him say so himself.

1 Serv. He was too hard for him directly, to say the truth on't: before Corioli, he scotched him and notched him like a carbonado¹.

2 Serv. An he had been cannibally given, he might have broiled² and eaten him too.

1 Serv. But, more of thy news?

3 Serv. Why, he is so made on here within, as if he were son and heir to Mars: set at upper end o' the table; no question asked him by any of the senators, but they stand bald before him. Our general himself makes a mistress of him; sanctifies himself with's hand, and turns up the white o' the eye to his discourse. But the bottom of the news is, our general is cut i' the middle, and but one half of what he was yesterday, for the other has half, by the entreaty and grant of the whole table. He'll go; he says, and sowl³ the porter of Rome gates by the ears. He will mow down all before him, and leave his passage polled⁴.

2 Serv. And he's as like to do't, as any man I can imagine.

3 Serv. Do't! he will do't; for, (look you, sir,) he has as many friends as enemies; which friends, sir, (as it were,) durst not (look you, sir) show themselves (as we term it) his friends, whilst he's in dejectitude⁵.

1 Serv. Dejectitude⁶! what's that?

3 Serv. But when they shall see, sir, his crest up again, and the man in blood, they will out of their burrows, like conies after rain, and revel all with him.

1 Serv. But when goes this forward?

3 Serv. To-morrow; to-day; presently. You shall have the drum struck up this afternoon: 't is, as it were, a parcel of their feast, and to be executed ere they wipe their lips.

2 Serv. Why, then we shall have a stirring world again. This piece is nothing, but to rust iron, increase tailors, and breed ballad-makers.

1 Serv. Let me have war, say I: it exceeds peace, as far as day does night; it's spritely, waking, audible, and full of vaunt.⁷ Peace is a very apoplexy, lethargy muffled, deaf, sleepy, insensible; a getter of more bastard children, than wars a destroyer of men.

2 Serv. 'T is so: and as wars in some sort may be said to be a ravisher, so it cannot be denied, but peace is a great maker of cuckolds.

1 Serv. Ay, and it makes men hate one another.

3 Serv. Reason; because they then less need one another. The wars, for my money. I hope to see Romans as cheap as Volscians.—They are rising, they are rising.

All. In, in, in, in.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Rome. A Public Place.

Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Sic. We hear not of him, neither need we fear him. His remedies are tamed by⁸ the present peace. And quietness o' the people, which before were in wild hurry. Here do we make his friends blush that the world goes well; who rather had, though they themselves did suffer by't, behold Dissension numbers pestering streets, than see Our tradesmen singing in their shops, and going About their functions friendly.

Enter MENENIUS.

Bru. We stood to't in good time. Is thus Menenius?

Sic. 'T is he, 't is he. O! he is grown most kind Of late.—Hail, sir!

Men. Hail to you both!

Sic. Your Coriolanus is not much miss'd, But with his friends: the common-wealth doth stand, And so would do, were he more angry at it.

Men. All's well; and might have been much better, if

He could have temporiz'd.

Sic. Where is he, hear you?

Men. Nay, I hear nothing: his mother and his wife Hear nothing from him.

Enter three or four Citizens.

Cit. The gods preserve you both!

Sic. Good-den, our neighbours.

Bru. Good-den to you all, good-den to you all

1 Cit. Ourselves, our wives, and children, on our knees. Are bound to pray for you both.

Sic. Live, and thrive.

Bru. Farewell, kind neighbours. We wish'd Corio Had lov'd you as we did. [lanus

Cit. Now the gods keep you!

Both Tri. Farewell, farewell. [Exeunt Citizens]

Sic. This is a happier and more comely time, Than when these fellows ran about the streets, Crying confusion.

Bru. Caius Marcius was

A worthy officer i' the war; but insolent, O'ercome with pride, ambitious last all thinking, Self-loving,—

Sic. And affecting one sole throne, Without assistance.

Men. I think not so.

Sic. We should by this, to all our lamentation, If he had gone forth consul, found it so.

Bru. The gods have well prevented it; and Rome Sits safe and still without him.

Enter an Edile.

Ed. Worthy tribunes,

There is a slave, whom we have put in prison, Reports, the Volscs with two several powers Are enter'd in the Roman territories;

¹ A piece of meat cut and hacked for broiling ² boiled: in folio. ³ Pull out. ⁴ Cleared. ⁵ & directitude: in f. o. ⁶ vent: in f. o. ⁷ same? in f. o.

And with the deepest malice of the war
Dostroy what lies before them.

Men. 'Tis Aufidius.
Who, hearing of our Marcius' banishment,
Thrusts forth his horns again into the world;
Which were inshell'd when Marcius stood for Rome,
And durst not once peep out.

Sic. Come, what talk you
Of Marcius?

Bru. Go see this rumourer whipp'd.—It cannot be,
The Volsces dare break with us.

Men. Cannot be!
We have record that very well it can;

And three examples of the like have been Within my age. But reason with the fellow,
Before you punish him, where he heard this.
Lest you shall chance to whip your information,
And beat the messenger who bids beware
Of what is to be dreaded.

Sic. Tell not me:
I know, this cannot be.

Bru. Not possible.
Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The nobles in great earnestness are going
All to the senate house: some news is come in,
That turns their countenances.

Sic. 'Tis this slave.
Go whip him 'fore the people's eyes:—his raising;
Nothing but his report.

Mess. Yes, worthy sir,
The slave's report is seconded; and more,
More fearful, is deliver'd.

Sic. What more fearful?
Mess. It is spoke freely out of many mouths,
How probable I do not know, that Marcius,
Join'd with Aufidius, leads a power 'gainst Rome,
And vows revenge as spacious, as between
The young'st and oldest thing.

Sic. This is most likely!
Bru. Rais'd only, that the weaker sort may wish
God! Marcius home again.

Sic. The very trick on 't.
Men. This is unlikely:

He and Aufidius can no more atone,²
Than violentest contrariety.

Enter another Messenger.
Mess. You are sent for to the senate.
A fearful army, led by Caius Marcius,
Associated with Aufidius, rages
Upon our territories: and have already Overborne their way, consum'd with fire, and took
What lay before them.

Enter COMINIUS.
Com. O! you have made good work.

Men. What news? what news?
Com. You have help to ravish your own daughters, and
To melt the city leads upon your pates:

To see your wives dishonour'd to your noses:—
Men. What's the news? what's the news?

Com. Your temples burned in their cement; and
Your franchises, whereon you stood, confin'd
Into an auger's bore.

Men. Pray now, your news?—
You have made fair work, I fear me.—Pray, your news?
If Marcius should be join'd with Volsceans,—

Com. If!
He is their god, he leads them like a thing
Made by some other deity than nature.
That shapes man better; and they follow him

Against us brats, with no less confidence
Than boys pursuing summer butterflies,
Or butchers killing flies.

Men. You have made good work.
You, and your apron-men; you that stood so much Upon the voice of occupation, and
The breath of garlic-eaters!

Com. He will shake
Your Rome about your ears.

Men. As Hercules
Did shake down mellow fruit. You have made fair work

Bru. But is this true, sir?

Com. Ay; and you'll look pale

Before you find it other. All the legions
Do smilingly revolt, and who resist
Are muck'd for valiant ignorance,
And perish constant fools. Who is't can blame him?
Your enemies, and his, find something in him.

Men. We are all undone unless

The noble man have mercy.

Com. Who shall ask it?

The tribunes cannot do't for shame; the people
Deserve such pity of him, as the wolf
Does of the shepherds: for his best friends, if they Should say, "Be good to Rome," they charg'd him, even
As those should do that had deserv'd his hate,
And therein show'd like enemies.

Men. 'Tis true:

If he were putting to my house the brand
That should consume it, I have not the face
To say, "Beseech you, cease."—You have made fair
You, and your handy* crafts have crafted fair. [hands,

Com. You have brought
A trembling upon Rome, such as was never
So incapable of help.

Tri. Say not, we brought it.

Men. How! Was it we? We lov'd him; but, like beasts

And cowardly nobles, gave way unto your clusters,
Who did hoot him out o' the city.

Com. But I fear
They'll roar him in again. Tullus Aufidius,
The second name of men, obeys his points
As if he were his officer. Desperation
Is all the policy, strength, and defence,
That Rome can make against them.

Enter a Troop of Citizens.

Men. Here come the clusters.—

And is Aufidius with him?—You are they
That made the air unwholesome, when you cast
Your stinking, greasy caps, in hooting at Coriolanus' exile. Now he's coming;
And not a hair upon a soldier's head,
Which will not prove a whip: as many coxcombs,
As you threw caps up, will he tumble down,
And pay you for your voices. 'Tis no matter:
If he could burn us all into one coal,
We have deserv'd it.

Cit. Faith, we hear fearful news.

1 Cit. For mine own part,
When I said, banish him, I said, 't was pity.

2 Cit. And so did I.

3 Cit. And so did I; and, to say the truth, so did very many of us. That we did, we did for the best:
and though we willingly consented to his banishment,
yet it was against our will.

Com. Y' are goodly things, you voices!

Men. You have made
Good work, you and your cry!—Shall 's to the Capitol?

* God: in f. e. 2 At one, agree 3 This word is not in f. e.

Com. O! ay, what else? [Exeunt COM. and MEN.]

Sic. Go, masters, get you home; be not dismay'd: These are a side that would be glad to have This true, which they so seem to fear. Go home, And show no sign of fear.

1 Cit. The gods be good to us! Come, masters, let's home. I ever said, we were i' the wrong, when we banished him.

2 Cit. So did we all. But come, let's home. [Exeunt Citizens.]

Bru. I do not like this news.

Sic. Nor I.

Bru. Let's to the Capitol.—Would half my wealth Would buy this for a lie!

Sic. Pray, let us go. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—A Camp; at a small distance from Rome.

Enter AUFIDIUS, and his Lieutenant.

Auf. Do they still fly to the Roman?

Lieu. I do not know what witchcraft's in him, but Your soldiers use him as the grace 'fore meat, Their talk at table, and their thanks at end; And you are darken'd in this action, sir, Even by your own.

Auf. I cannot help it now, Unless, by using means, I lame the foot Of our design. He bears himself more proudlier, Even to my person, than I thought he would When first I did embrace him; yet his nature In that's no changeling, and I must excuse What cannot be amended.

Lieu. Yet I wish, sir, (I mean, for your particular) you had not Join'd in commission with him; but either Had borne the action of yourself, or else To him had left it solely.

Auf. I understand thee well; and be thou sure, When he shall come to his account, he knows not What I can urge against him. Though it seems,

And so he thinks, and is no less apparent To the vulgar eye, that he bears all things fairly, And shows good husbandry for the Volscian state, Fights dragon-like, and does achieve as soon As draw his sword; yet he hath left undone That, which shall break his neck, or hazard mine, Whene'er we come to our account.

Lieu. Sir, I beseech you, think you he'll carry Rome?

Auf. All places yield to him ere he sits down; And the nobility of Rome are his: The senators and patricians love him too. The tribunes are no soldiers; and their people Will be as rash in the repeal, as hasty To expel him thence. I think, he'll be to Rome, As is the osprey to the fish, who takes it By sovereignty of nature.¹ First he was A noble servant to them, but he could not Carry his honours even; whether 't was pride, Which out of daily fortune ever taints The happy man; whether defect of judgment, To fail in the disposing of those chances Which he was lord of; or whether nature, Not to be other than one thing, not moving From the casque to the cushion, but commanding peace, Even with the same austerity and garb As he controll'd the war; but one of these (As he hath spies of them all, not all, For I dare so far free him) made him fear'd, So hated, and so banish'd: but he has a merit, To choke it in the utterance. So our virtues Live² in the interpretation of the time, And power, in³ itself most commendable, Hath not a tomb so evident as a cheer⁴ To extol what it hath done. One fire drives out one fire; one nail, one nail; Rights by rights suffer⁵, strengths by strengths do fail. Come, let's away.—When, Caius, Rome is thine, Thou art poor'st of all; then, shortly art thou mine. [Exeunt]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Public Place.

Enter MENENIUS, COMINIUS, SICIINIUS, BRUTUS, and others.

Men. No, I'll not go: you hear what he hath said To one sometime his general: who lov'd him him In a most dear particular. He call'd me father, But what o' that? Go, you that banish'd him, A mile before his tent fall down, and kneel The way into his mercy. Nay, if he coy'd To hear Cominius speak, I'll keep at home.

Com. He would not seem to know me.

Men. Do you hear? Com. Yet one time he did call me by my name.

I urg'd our old acquaintance, and the drops That we have bled together. Coriolanus He would not answer to; forbad all names: He was a kind of nothing, titleless, Till he had forg'd himself a name o' the fire Of burning Rome.

Men. Why, so; you have made good work: A pair of tribunes, that have wreck'd for Rome, To make coals cheap, a noble memory!

Com. I minded him, how royal 't was to pardon

When it was least expected: he replied, It was a bare petition of a state To one whom they had punish'd.

Men. Very well: could he say less?

Com. I offer'd to awaken his regard For his private friends: his answer to me was, He could not stay to pick them in a pile Of noisome, musty chaff. He said, 't was folly For one poor grain or two, to leave unburnt, And still to nose th' offence.

Men. For one poor grain or two? I am one of those; his mother, wife, his child. And this brave fellow too; we are the grains: You are the musty chaff, and you are smelt Above the moon. We must be burnt for you.

Sic. Nay, pray, be patient: if you refuse your aid In this so never-needed help, yet do not Upbraid's with our distress. But, sure, if you Would be your country's pleader, your good tongue, More than the instant army we can make, Might stop our countryman.

Men. No; I'll not meddle.

Sic. Pray you, go to him.

Men. What should I do?

¹ An old popular belief is referred to. ² Lie: in f. e. ³ unto: in f. e. ⁴ cheer: in f. e. ⁵ fouler: in f. e. ⁶ Most mod. eds. read: rack'd

Bru. Only make trial what your love can do
For Rome towards Marcius.

Men. Well; and say that Marcius
Return me, as Cominius is return'd,
Unheard, what then?—
But as a discontented friend, grief-shot
With his unkindness? say 't be so?

Sir. Yet your good will Must have that thanks from Rome, after the measure
As you intended well.

Men. I'll undertake it:
I think, he'll hear me. Yet to bite his lip,
And hum at good Cominius, much unhearts me.
He was not taken well: he had not din'd:
The veins unfill'd, our blood is cold, and then
We pout upon the morning, are unapt
To give or to forgive: but when we have stuff'd
These pipes, and these conveyances of blood
With wine and feeding, we have suppler souls
Than in our priest-like fasts: therefore, I'll watch him
Till he be dieted to my request,
And then I'll set upon him.

Bru. You know the very road into his kindness,
And cannot lose your way.

Men. Good faith, I'll prove him,
Speed how it will. You shall ere long have knowledge
Of my success.

Com. He'll never hear him. [Exit.]

Sir. Not?

Com. I tell you, he does sit in gold, his eye
Red as 't would burn Rome, and his injury
The gaoler to his pity. I kneel'd before him:
'T was very faintly he said, "Rise;" dismiss'd me
Thus, with his speechless hand. What he would do,
He sent in writing after me; what he would not,
Bound with an oath to yield to his conditions:
So that all hope is vain,
Unless his noble mother, and his wife;
Who, as I hear, mean to solicit him
For mercy to his country. Therefore, let's hence,
And with our fair entreaties haste them on. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Volseian Camp before Rome. The Guards at their Sations.

Enter to them, MENENIUS.

1 G. Stay! Whence are you?
2 G. Stand, and go back.
Men. You guard like men: 't is well; but, by your leave,

I am an officer of state, and come
To speak with Coriolanus.

1 G. From whence?
Men. From Rome.
1 G. You may not pass; you must return: our general
Will no more hear from thence.

2 G. You'll see your Rome embrac'd with fire, before
You'll speak with Coriolanus.

Men. Good my friends,
If you have heard your general talk of Rome,
And of his friends there, it is lots to blanks.
My name hath touch'd your ears: it is Menenius.

1 G. Be it so; go back: the virtue of your name
Is not here passable.

Men. I tell thee, fellow,
Thy general is my lover: I have been
The book of his good acts, whence men have read
His fame unparallel'd, haply, amplified;
For I have ever magnified my friends,
Of whom he's chief, with all the size that verity

Would without lapsing suffer: nay, sometimes,
Like to a bowl upon a subtle ground,
I have tumbled past the throw, and in his praise
Have almost stamp'd the leasing². Therefore, fellow,
I must have leave to pass.

1 G. Faith, sir, if you had told as many lies in his behalf, as you have uttered words in your own, you should not pass here: no, though it were as virtuous to lie, as to live chastely. Therefore, go back.

Men. Pr'ythee, fellow, remember my name is Menenius, always factious on the party of your general.

2 G. Howsoever you have been his liar, as you say you have, I am one that, telling true under him, must say, you cannot pass. Therefore, go back.

Men. Has he din'd, canst thou tell? for I would not speak with him till after dinner.

1 G. You are a Roman, are you?

Men. I am, as thy general is.

1 G. Then you should hate Rome, as he does. Can you, when you have pushed out your gates the very defender of them, and, in a violent popular ignorance, given your enemy your shield, think to front his revenges with the queasy groans of old women, the virginal palms of your daughters, or with the palsied intercession of such a decayed dotard as you seem to be? Can you think to blow out the intended fire your city is ready to flame in with such weak breath as this? No, you are deceived: therefore, back to Rome, and prepare for your execution. You are condemned, our general has sworn you out of reprieve and pardon.

Men. Sirrah, if thy captain knew I were here, he would use me with estimation.

2 G. Come, my captain knows you not.

Men. I mean, thy general.

1 G. My general cares not for you. Back, I say:
go, lest I let forth your half pint of blood,—back,— that's the utmost of your having:—back.

Men. Nay, but fellow, fellow;—

Enter CORIOLANUS and AUFIDIUS.

Cor. What's the matter?

Men. Now, your companion, I'll say an errand for you: you shall know now that I am in estimation; you shall perceive that a Jack guardant cannot office me from my son Coriolanus; guess, but by my entertainment with him, if thou stand'st not i' the state of hanging, or of some death more long in spectatorship, and crueller in suffering: behold now presently, and swoon for what's to come upon thee.—The glorious gods sit in hourly synd about thy particular prosperity, and love thee no worse than thy old father Menenius does! O, my son! my son! thou art preparing fire for us: look thee, here's water to quench it.
I was hardly moved to come to thee; but being assured, none but myself could move thee, I have been blown out of your gates with sighs, and conjure thee to pardon Rome, and thy petitionary countrymen. The good gods assuage thy wrath, and turn the dregs of it upon this varlet here; this, who, like a block, hath denied my access to thee.

Cor. Away!

Men. How? a way?

Cor. Wife, mother, child, I know not. My affairs
Are servanted to others: though I owe
My revenge properly, my remission lies
In Volseian breasts. That we have been familiar.
Ingrate forgetfulness shall poison, rather Than pity note how much.—Therefore, be gone:
Mine ears against your suits are stronger than
Your gates against my force. Yet, for I lov'd thee,

EDWIN FORREST.

as Corichinus

Take this along; I writ it for thy sake, [Gives a Paper.]
And would have sent it. Another word, Menenius,
I will not hear thee speak.—This man, Aufidius,
Was my belov'd in Rome: yet thou behold'st—

Auf. You keep a constant temper.

[Exeunt CORIOLANUS and AUFIDIUS.]

1 G. Now, sir, is your name Menenius?

2 G. 'T is a spell, you see, of much power. You know the way home again.

1 G. Do you hear how we are shent¹ for keeping your greatness back?

2 G. What cause, do you think, I have to swoon?

Men. I neither care for the world, nor your general: for such things as you, I can scarce think there's any, you are so slight. He that hath a will to die by himself, fears it not from another. Let your general do his worst. For you, be that you are, long; and your misery increase with your age. I say to you, as I was said to, away! [Exit.]

1 G. A noble fellow, I warrant him.

2 G. The worthy fellow is our general: he is the rock, the oak not to be wind-shaken. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Tent of CORIOLANUS.

Enter CORIOLANUS, AUFIDIUS, and others.

Cor. We will before the walls of Rome to-morrow set down our host.—My partner in this action, You must report to the Volscian lords, how plainly I have borne this business.

Auf. Only their ends
You have respected; stopp'd your ears against
The general suit of Rome; never admitted
A private whisper, no, not with such friends
That thought them sure of you.

Cor. This last old man,
Whom with a crack'd heart I have sent to Rome,
Loved me above the measure of a father;
Nay, godded me, indeed. Their latest refuge
Was to send him; for whose old love, I have (Though I show'd sourly to him) once more offer'd
The first conditions, which they did refuse,
And cannot now accept, to grace him only
That thought he could do more. A very little
I have yielded, too: fresh embassies, and suits,
Nor from the state, nor private friends, hereafter
Will I lend ear to.—Ha! what shout is this? [Shout
Shall I be tempted to infringe my vow [within.]
In the same time 't is made? I will not.—

Enter, in mourning Habits, VIRGILIA, VOLUMNIA, leading young MARCIUS, VALERIA, and Attendants.

My wife comes foremost; then, the honour'd mould
Wherein this trunk was fram'd, and in her hand
The grand-child to her blood. But, out, affection!
All bond and privilege of nature, break!
Let it be virtuous, to be obstinate.—
What is that curt'sy worth? or those doves' eyes,
Which can make gods forsworn?—I melt, and am not
Of stronger earth than others.—My mother bows,
As if Olympus to a molehill should
In supplication nod; and my young boy
Hath an aspect of intercession, which
Great nature cries, "Deny not."—Let the Volscies
Plough Rome, and harrow Italy; I'll never
Be such a gosling to obey instinct, but stand
As if a man were author of himself,
And knew no other kin.

Vir. My lord and husband!

Cor. These eyes are not the same I wore in Rome.

Vir. The sorrow, that delivers us thus chang'd
Makes you think so.

Cor. Like a dull actor, now,
I have forgot my part, and I am out,
Even to a full disgrace. Best of my flesh,
Forgive my tyranny; but do not say
For that, "Forgive our Romans."—O! a kiss
Long as my exile, sweet as my revenge!
Now, by the jealous queen of heaven, that kiss
I carried from thee, dear; and my true lip
Hath virgin'd it e'er since.—You gods! I prate,²
And the most noble mother of the world
Leave unsaluted. Sink, my knee, i' the earth; [Kneels
Of thy deep duty more impression show
Than that of common sons.

Vol. O, stand up bless'd!

Whilst, with no softer cushion than the flint,
I kneel before thee, and unproperly
Show duty, as mistaking³ all this while
Between the child and parent. [Kneels

Cor. What is this?

Your knees to me? to your corrected son?
Then, let the pebbles on the hungry beach
Fillip the stars; then, let the mutinous winds
Strike the proud cedars 'gainst the fiery sun,
Murdering impossibility, to make
What cannot be slight work. [Rising and raising her
Vol. Thou art my warrior
I help⁴ to frame thee. Do you know this lady?

Cor. The noble sister of Publicola,
The moon of Rome; chaste as the icicle,
That's curdled by the frost from purest snow,
And hangs on Dian's temple: dear Valeria!

Vol. This is a poor epitome of yours,
Which, by the interpretation of full time,
May show like all yourself.

Cor. The god of soldiers,
With the consent of supreme Jove, inform
Thy thoughts with nobleness; that thou may'st prove
To shame invulnerable, and stick i' the wars
Like a great sea-mark, standing every flaw
And saving those that eye thee!

Vol. Your knee, sirrah.

Cor. That's my brave boy?

Vol. Even he, your wife, this lady, and myself,
Are suitors to you.

Cor. I beseech you, peace;
Or, if you'd ask, remember this before:
The things I have forsworn to grant may never
Be held by you denials. Do not bid me
Dismiss my soldiers, or capitulate
Again with Rome's mechanics: tell me not Wherein I seem unnatural: desire not
To allay my rages and revenges with
Your colder reasons.

Vol. O! no more, no more!
You have said, you will not grant us any thing,
For we have nothing else to ask, but that
Which you deny already: yet we will ask:
That, if we fail in our request, the blame
May hang upon your hardness. Therefore, hear us.

Cor. Aufidius, and you Volscies, mark; for we'll Hear nought from Rome in private. [Takes his seat.

—Your request?

Vol. Should we be silent and not speak, our raiment
And state of bodies, would bewray what life
We have led since thy exile. Think with thyself,
How more unfortunate than all living women

¹ Rebuked. ² pray: in folio. Theobald made the change. ³ mistaken: in f. e. ⁴ Not in f. e. ⁵ hope: in folio. Corrected by Per-

Are we come hither; since that thy sight, which should Make our eyes flow with joy, hearts dance with comforts,
 Constrains them weep, and shake with fear and sorrow;
 Making the mother, wife, and child, to see
 The son, the husband, and the father, tearing
 His country's bowels out; and so poor we,
 Thine enemies most capital.¹ Thion barr'st us
 Our prayers to the gods; which is a comfort
 That all but we enjoy: for how can we,
 Alas! how can we, for our country pray,
 Whereto we are bound, together with thy victory.
 Whereto we are bound? Alack! or we must lose
 The country, our dear nurse; or else thy person,
 Our comfort in the country. We must find
 An evident calamity, though we had
 Our wish, which side should win: for either thou
 Must, as a foreign recreant, be led
 With manacles through our streets, or else
 Triumphantly tread on thy country's ruin.
 And bear the palm, for having bravely shed
 Thy wife and children's blood. For myself, son,
 I purpose not to wait on fortune, till
 These wars determine: if I cannot persuade thee
 Rather to show a noble grace to both parts,
 Than seek the end of one, thou shalt no sooner
 March to assault thy country, than to tread
 (Trust to 't, thou shalt not) on thy mother's womb,
 That brought thee to this world.

Vir. Ay, and mine.
 That brought you forth this boy, to keep your name
 Living to time.

Boy. He shall not tread on me:
 I'll run away till I am bigger, but then I'll fight.

Cor. Not of a woman's tenderness to be. [Aside.]
 Requires nor child nor woman's face to see.
 I have sat too long. [Rising.]

Vol. Nay, go not from us thus.
 If it were so, that our request did tend
 To save the Romans, thereby to destroy
 The Volsees whom you serve, you might condemn us,
 As poisonous of your honour: no; our suit
 Is, that you reconcile them: while the Volsees
 May say, "This mercy we have show'd: the Romans
 'Tis we receiv'd;" and each in either side
 Give the all-hail to thee, and cry, "Be bless'd
 For making up this peace!" Thion know'st, great son,
 The end of war's uncertain; but this certain,
 That if thou conquer Rome, the benefit
 Which thou shalt thereby reap is such a name,
 Whose repetition shall be dogg'd with curses,
 Whose chronicle thus writ,—"The man was noble,
 But with his last attempt he wip'd it out.
 Destroy'd his country, and his name remains
 To each ensuing age abhorr'd." Speak to me, son!
 Thou hast affected the fine strains of honour,
 To imitate the graces of the gods:
 To tear with thunder the wide cheeks of the air,
 And yet to charge thy sulphur with a bolt
 That should but rive an oak. Why dost not speak?
 Think'st thou it honourable for a noble man
 Still to remember wrongs?—Daughter, speak you;
 He cares not for your weeping.—Speak thou, boy:
 Perhaps, thy childishness will move him more
 Than can our reasons. There is no man in the world
 More bound to 's mother; yet here he lets me prate
 Like one of the stocks.—Thou hast never in thy life
 Show'd thy dear mother any courtesy;

When she, (poor hen!) fond of no second brood,
 Has cluck'd thee to the wars, and safely home,
 Loaden with honour. Say, my request's unjust,
 And spurn me back; but, if it be not so,
 Thou art not honest, and the gods will plague thee,
 That thou restrain'st from me the duty, which
 To a mother's part belongs.—He turns away:
 Down, ladies; let us shame him with our knees.

[All kneel.]
 To his surname, Coriolanus, 'longs more pride,
 Than pity to our prayers. Down: an end;
 This is the last;—so we will home to Rome,
 And die among our neighbours.—Nay, behold us:
 This boy, that cannot tell what he would have,
 But kneels and holds up hands for fellowship,
 Does reason our petition with more strength
 Than thou hast to deny 't.—Come, let us go.
 This fellow had a Volscian to his mother;
 His wife is in Corioli, and his child
 Like him by chance.—Yet give us our despatch
 I am hush'd until our city be afire,
 And then I'll speak a little. [struggling.]

[He holds VOLUMNIA by the hand, long, and self.]

Cor. O mother, mother!
 What have you done? Behold! the heavens do ope,
 The gods look down, and this unnatural scene
 They laugh at. O my mother! mother! O!
 You have won a happy victory to Rome;
 But, for your son,—believe it, O! believe it,—
 Most dangerously you have with him prevail'd,
 If not most mortal to him. But let it come.—
 Aufidius, though I cannot make true wars,
 I'll frame convenient peace. Now, good Aufidius,
 Were you in my stead, would you have heard
 A mother less, or granted less, Aufidius?
Auf. I was mov'd withal.

Cor. I dare be sworn, you were:
 And, sir, it is no little thing to make
 Mine eyes to sweat compassion. But, good sir,
 What peace you'll make, advise me. For my part,
 I'll not to Rome, I'll back with you; and pray you,
 Stand to me in this cause.—O mother! wife!
Auf. [Aside.] I am glad, thou hast set thy mercy and thy honour
 At difference in thee: out of that I'll work
 Myself a firmer fortune.

[The Ladies make signs to CORIOLANUS]
Cor. Ay, by and by;
 [To VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, &c.]
 But we will drink together; and you shall bear
 A better witness back than words, which we
 On like conditions will have counter-seal'd.
 Come, enter with us. Ladies, you deserve
 To have a temple built you: all the swords
 In Italy, and her confederate arms,
 Could not have made this peace. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Rome. A Public Place.

Enter MENENIUS and SICINIUS.

Men. See you yond' coign of the Capitol; yond', corner-stone?

Sic. Why, what of that?

Men. If it be possible for you to displace it with your little finger, there is some hope the ladies of Rome, especially his mother, may prevail with him;
 but I say, there is no hope in 't. Our throats are sentenced, and stay upon execution.

And to poor we,

Thine enemy's most capital.

² Not in f.o. • He holds VOLUMNIA by the hand, silent in f.o.

Sic. Is't possible, that so short a time can alter the condition of a man?

Men. There is difference between a grub, and a butterfly; yet your butterfly was a grub. This Marcius is grown from man to dragon: he has wings; he's more than a creeping thing.

Sic. He loved his mother dearly.

Men. So did he me; and he no more remembers his mother now, than an eight year old horse. The tartness of his face sours ripe grapes: when he walks, he moves like an engine, and the ground shrinks before his treading. He is able to pierce a corslet with his eye: talks like a knell, and his hem! is a battery. He sits in his state as a thing made for Alexander. What he bids be done, is finished with his bidding: he wants nothing of a god but eternity, and a heaven to throne in.

Sic. Yes, mercy, if you report him truly.

Men. I paint him in the character. Mark what merey his mother shall bring from him: there is no more mercy in him, than there is milk in a male tiger; that shall our poor city find: and all this is 'long of you.

Sic. The gods be good unto us!

Men. No, in such a case the gods will not be good unto us. When we banished him, we respected not them, and he returning to break our necks, they respect not us.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Sir, if you'd save your life, fly to your house. The plebeians have got your fellow-tribune, And hale him up and down; all swearing, if The Roman ladies bring not comfort home, They'll give him death by inches.

Enter another Messenger.

Sic. What's the news?

Mess. Good news, good news!—The ladies have pre-The Volscians are dislodg'd, and Marcius gone. [vail'd, A merrier day did never yet greet Rome, No, not the expulsion of the Tarquins.

Sic. Friend, Art thou certain this is true? is it most certain?

Mess. As certain, as I know the sun is fire: Where have you lurk'd, that you make doubt of it? Ne'er through an arch so hurried the blown tide, As the recomforted through the gates. Why, hark you!

[Shouts, Trumpets and Huntboys sounded, and Drums beaten, all together.

The trumpets, sackbuts, psalteries, and fifes, Tabors, and cymbals, and the shouting Romans, Make the sun dance. Hark you! [Shouting again.

Men. This is good news.

I will go meet the ladies. This Volumnia Is worth of consuls, senators, patricians, A city full; of tribunes, such as you, A sea and land-full. You have pray'd well to-day: This morning for ten thousand of your throats I'd not have given a doit. Hark, how they joy!

[Shouting and Music.

Sic. First, the gods bless you for the tidings: next, Accept my thankfulness.

Mess. Sir, we have all Great cause to give great thanks.

Sic. They are near the city.

Mess. Almost at point to enter.

Sic. We will meet them, And help the joy. [Going.

Enter the Ladies, accompanied by Senators, Patricians, and People. They pass over the Stage.

1 Sen. Behold our patroness, the life of Rome! Call all your tribes together, praise the gods,

And make triumphant fires; strew flowers before them Unshout the noise that banish'd Marcius; Repeat him with the welcome of his mother Cry.—Welcome, ladies, welcome!

All.

Welcome, ladies.

Welcome! [A Flourish with Drums and Trumpets [Exeunt

SCENE V.—Antium. A Public Place

Enter TULLUS AUFIDIUS, with Attendants

Auf. Go tell the lords of the city, I am here. Deliver them this paper: having read it, Bid them repair to the market-place; where I, Even in theirs and in the common's ears, Will vouch the truth of it. Him I accuse The city ports by this hath enter'd, and Intends t' appear before the people, hoping [Attendants To purge himself with words. Despatch. [Exeunt

Enter Conspirators of AUFIDIUS' Faction.

Most welcome!

1 Con. How is it with our general?

Auf. Even so, As with a man by his own alms empoison'd, And with his charity slain.

2 Con. Most noble sir,

If you do hold the same intent, wherein You wish'd us parties, we'll deliver you Of your great danger.

Auf. Sir, I cannot tell: We must proceed, as we do find the people.

3 Con. The people will remain uncertain, whilst 'Twixt you there's difference; but the fall of either Makes the survivor heir of all.

Auf. I know it; And my pretext to strike at him admits A good construction. I rais'd him, and I pawn'd Mine honour for his truth: who being so lighten'd, He water'd his new plants with dews of flattery, Seducing so my friends: and to this end He bow'd his nature, never known before But to be rough, unswayable, and fierce.

3 Con. Sir, his stoutness.

When he did stand for consul, which he lost By lack of stooping,—

Auf. That I would have spoke of: Being banish'd for't, he came unto my hearth; Presented to my knife his throat: I took him; Made him joint-servant with me: gave him way In all his own desires; nay, let him choose Out of my files, his projects to accomplish, My best and freshest men: serv'd his designments In mine own person; help to reap the fame Which he did ear! all his; and took some pride To do myself this wrong: till, at the last, I seem'd his follower, not partner; and He rag'd me with his countenance, as if I had been mercenary.

1 Con. So he did, my lord; The army marvell'd at it; and, in the last, When he had carried Rome, and that we look'd For no less spoil, than glory.—

Auf. There was it; For which my sinews shall be stretch'd upon him At a few drops of women's rheum, which are As cheap as lies, he sold the blood and labour Of our great action: therefore shall he die, And I'll renew me in his fall. But, hark!

'Drums and Trumpets sound, with great Shouts of the People.

1 Con. Your native town you enter'd like a post,
And had no welcomes home; but he returns,
Splitting the air with noise.

2 Con. And patient fools,
Whose children he hath slain, their base throats tear
With giving him glory.

3 Con. Therefore, at your vantage,
Ere he express himself, or move the people
With what he would say, let him feel your sword,
Which we will second. When he lies along,
After your way his tale pronounc'd shall bury
His reasons with his body

Auf. Say no more.
Here come the lords.

Enter the Lords of the City.

Lords. You are most welcome home.

Auf. I have not deserv'd it.
But, worthy lords, have you with heed perus'd
What I have written to you?

Lords. We have.
1 Lord. And grieve to hear it.

What faults he made before the last, I think,
Might have found easy fines: but there to end,
Where he was to begin, and give away
The benefit of our levies, answering us
With our own charge, making a treaty where
There was a yielding; this admits no excuse.

Auf. He approaches: you shall hear him.
Enter CORIOLANUS, with Drums and Colours; a crowd of Citizens with him.

Cor. Hail, lords! I am return'd your soldier;
No more infected with my country's love,
Than when I parted hence, but still subsisting
Under your great command. You are to know,
That prosperously I have attempted, and
With bloody passage led your wars, even to
The gates of Rome. Our spoils we have brought home,
Do more than counterpoise, a full third part.
The charges of the action. We have made peace,
With no less honour to the Antiates,
Than shame to the Romans; and we here deliver,
Subscribed by the consuls and patricians,
Together with the seal of the senate, what We have compounded on.

Auf. Read it not, noble lords;
But tell the traitor in the highest degree
He hath abus'd your powers.

Cor. Traitor!—how now!

Auf. Ay, traitor, Marcius.
Cor. Marcius!

Auf. Ay, Marcius. Caius Marcius. Dost thou think
I'll grace thee with that robbery, thy stol'n name
Coriolanus in Corioli?

You lords and heads of the state, perfidiously
He has betray'd your business, and given up
For certain drops of salt your city, Rome;
I say your city, to his wife and mother,
Breaking his oath and resolution, like
A twist of rotten silk: never admitting
Counsel of the war, but at his nurse's tears
He whin'd and roar'd away your victory,
That pages blush'd at him, and men of heart
Look'd wondering each at other.

Cor. Hear'st thou, Mars?
Auf. Name not the god, thou boy of tears.
Cor. Ha!
Auf. No more

Cor. Measureless liar, thou hast made my heart
Too great for what contains it. Boy! O slave!—
Pardon me, lords, 't is the first time that ever
I was forc'd to scold. Your judgments, my grave lords.
Must give this cur the lie: and his own notion (Who wears my stripes impress'd upon him, that Must bear my beating to his grave) shall join
To thrust the lie unto him.

1 Lord. Peace both, and hear me speak
Cor. Cut me to pieces, Volscies; men and lads,
Stain all your edges on me.—Boy! False hound!
If you have writ your annals true, 't is there,
That like an eagle in a dove-cote, I
Flutter'd your Volscians in Corioli:
Alone I did it.—Boy!

Auf. Why, noble lords,
Will you be put in mind of his blind fortune,
Which was your shame, by this unholy braggart,
Fore your own eyes and ears?

All Con. Let him die for 't.
All People. Tear him to pieces; do it presently. He killed my son;—my daughter;—he killed my cousin
Marcus;—he killed my father.—

2 Lord. Peace, ho!—no outrage:—peace!
The man is noble, and his fame folds in
This orb of the earth. His last offences to us
Shall have judicious hearing.—Stand, Aufidius,
And trouble not the peace.

Cor. O! that I had him,
With six Aufidiuses, or more, his tribe,
To use my lawful sword!

Auf. Insolent villain!
All Con. Kill, kill, kill, kill, kill him!
[*AUFIDIUS and the Conspirators draw, and kill CO-
RIOLANUS, who falls: AUFIDIUS stands on him.*]

Lords. Hold, hold, hold, hold!
Auf. My noble masters, hear me speak.

1 Lord. O Tullus!—
2 Lord. Thou hast done a deed whereat valour will weep.

3 Lord. Tread not upon him.—Masters all, be quiet.—
Put up your swords.

Auf. My lords, when you shall know (as in this rage, Provok'd by him, you cannot) the great danger
Which this man's life did owe you, you'll rejoice
That he is thus cut off. Please it your honours
To call me to your senate, I'll deliver
Myself your loyal servant, or endure
Your heaviest censure.

1 Lord. Bear from hence his body,
And mourn you for him. Let him be regarded,
As the most noble corpse that ever herald
Did follow to his urn.

2 Lord. His own impatience
Takes from Aufidius a great part of blame
Let's make the best of it.

Auf. My rage is gone,
And I am struck with sorrow.—Take him up.—
Help, three of the chiefest soldiers; I'll be one.—
Beat thou the drum, that it speak mournfully;
Trail your steel spikes.—Though in this city he Hath widow'd and unchilded many a one,
Which to this hour bewail the injury,
Yet he shall have a noble memory.—

Assist. [Exit, bearing the Body of CORIOLANUS
A dead March, while they pass round the Stage]

TITUS ANDRONICUS.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

SATURNINUS, Son to the late Emperor of Rome, and afterwards declared Emperor.

BASSIANUS, Brother to Saturninus; in love with Lavinia.

TITUS ANDRONICUS, a noble Roman, General against the Goths.

MARCUS ANDRONICUS, Tribune of the People; and Brother to Titus.

LUCIUS,
QUINTUS, MARTIUS,
MUTIUS,
} Sons to Titus Andronicus.

Young Lucius, a Boy, Son to Lucius.

PUBLIUS, Son to Marcus the Tribune.

ÆMILIUS, a noble Roman.

ALARBUS,
DEMETRIUS, CHIRON,
} Sons to Tamora

AARON, a Moor, beloved by Tamora.

A Captain, Tribune, Messenger, and Clown
Goths and Romans.

TAMORA, Queen of the Goths.

LAVINIA, Daughter to Titus Andronicus.

A Nurse, and a black Child.

Kinsmen of Titus, Senators, Tribunes, Officers, Soldiers, and Attendants.

SCENE, Rome; and the Country near it.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rome. Before the Capitol.

The Tomb of the Andronici appearing; the Tribunes and Senators aloft, as in the Capitol. Enter, below, SATURNINUS and his Followers, on one side; and BASSIANUS and his Followers, on the other; with Drum and Colours.

Sat. Noble patricians, patrons of my right,
Defend the justice of my cause with arms;
And, countrymen, my loving followers,
Plead my successive title with your swords.
I am the first-born son, of him the last
That wore the imperial diadem of Rome;
Then, let my father's honours live in me,
Nor wrong mine age with this indignity.

Bas. Romans,—friends, followers, favourers of my right,

If ever Bassianus, Cæsar's son,
Were gracious in the eyes of royal Rome,
Keep then this passage to the Capitol;
And suffer not dishonour to approach
Th' imperial seat, to virtue consecrate,
To justice, conscience,¹ and nobility,
But let desert in pure election shine;
And, Romans, fight for freedom in your choice.

Enter MARCUS ANDRONICUS, aloft, with the Crown.

Mar. Princes, that strive by factions, and by friends,
Ambitiously for rule and empery,
Know, that the people of Rome, for whom we stand
A special party, have by common voice
In election for the Roman empery,
Chosen Andronicus, surnamed Pius,
For many good and great deserts to Rome:
A nobler man, a braver warrior,
Lives not this day within the city walls.
He by the senate is accited² home,
From weary wars against the barbarous Goths,
That, with his sons, a terror to our foes,

Hath yok'd a nation strong, train'd up in arms.
Ten years are spent since first he undertook
This cause of Rome, and chastised with arms
Our enemies' pride: five times he hath return'd
Bleeding to Rome, bearing his valiant sons
In coffins from the field;

And now at last, laden with honour's spoils,
Returns the good Andronicus to Rome,
Renowned Titus, flourishing in arms.
Let us entreat,—by honour of his name,
Whom worthily you would have now succeed,
And in the Capitol and senate's right,
Whom you pretend to honour and adore,—
That you withdraw you, and abate your strength:
Dismiss your followers, and, as suitors should,
Plead your deserts in peace and humbleness.

Sat. How fair the tribune speaks to calm my thoughts!

Bas. Marcus Andronicus, so I do affy³

In thy uprightness and integrity,
And so I love and honour thee and thine,
Thy noble brother Titus, and his sons,
And her, to whom my thoughts are humbled all,
Gracious Lavinia, Rome's rich ornament,
That I will here dismiss my loving friends;
And to my fortunes, and the people's favour,
Commit my cause in balance to be weigh'd.

[Exeunt the Followers of BASSIANUS.]

Sat. Friends, that have been thus forward in my right,
I thank you all and here dismiss you all;
And to the love and favour of my country
Commit myself, my person, and my cause.

[Exeunt the Followers of SATURNINUS.]

Rome, be as just and gracious unto me,
As I am confident and kind to thee.—
Open the brazen gates, and let me in.

Bas. Tribunes, and me, a poor competitor.

[SAT. and BAS. go into the Capitol; and exeunt with Senators, MARCUS, &c.]

SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter a Captain, and others.

Cap. Romans! make way! The good Andronicus,
Patron of virtue, Rome's best champion.

Successful in the battles that he fights,
With honour, and with fortune, is return'd,
From where he circumscrib'd with his sword,
And brought to yoke, the enemies of Rome.

Sound Drums and Trumpets, &c. Enter MARTIUS and MUTIUS; after them, two Men bearing a Coffin covered with black; then LUCIUS and QUINTUS. After them, TITUS ANDRONICUS; and then TAMORA, with ALARBUS, CHIRON, DEMETRIUS, AARON, and other Goths, prisoners; Soldiers and People, following. The Bearers set down the Coffin.

Tit. Hail, Rome, victorious in thy mourning weeds!

Lo! as the bark that hath discharg'd her fraught
Returns with precious lading to the bay,
From whence at first she weigh'd her anchorage,
Cometh Andronicus, bound with laurel boughs,
To re-salute his country with his tears;
Tears of true joy for his return to Rome
Thou great defender of this Capitol,
Stand gracious to the rites that we intend!
Romans, of five-and-twenty valiant sons,
Half of the number that king Priam had.
Behold the poor remains, alive, and dead!
These that survive let Rome reward with love;
These that I bring unto their latest home,
With burial amongst their ancestors:
Here Goths have given me leave to sheath my sword.
Titus, unkind, and careless of thine own,
Why suffer'st thou thy sons, unburied yet,
To hover on the dreadful shore of Styx?
Make way to lay them by their brethren.

[The Tomb is opened.]

There greet in silence, as the dead are wont,
And sleep in peace, slain in your country's wars!
O sacred receptacle of my joys,
Sweet cell of virtue and nobility,

How many sons hast thou of mine in store,
That thou wilt never render to me more?

Luc. Give us the proudest prisoner of the Goths.

That we may hew his limbs, and on a pile
Ad munes fratrum sacrifice his flesh.

Before this earthy¹ prison of their bones;
That so their shades be not unappeas'd;
Nor we disturb'd with prodigies on earth.

Tit. I give him you; the noblest that survives,
The eldest son of this distressed queen.

Tam. Stay, Roman brethren!—Gracious conqueror,
Victorious Titus, rue the tears I shed.

A mother's tears in passion for her son;
And, if thy sons were ever dear to thee,
O! think my son to be as dear to me.
Sufficeth not, that we are brought to Rome,
To beautify thy triumphs, and return.

Captive to thee, and to thy Roman yoke;
But must my sons be slaughter'd in the streets,
For valiant doings in their country's cause?

O! if to fight for king and common weal
Were pity in thine, it is in these.
Andronicus, stain not thy tomb with blood.
Wilt thou draw near the nature of the gods?

Draw near them, then, in being merciful:
Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge.

Three-noble Titus, spare my first-born son.

Tit. Patient yourself, madam, and pardon me.

These are their brethren, whom you Goths beheld
Alive, and dead; and for their brethren slain,
Religiously they ask a sacrifice:

To this your son is marked; and die he must,
T' appease their groaning shadows that are dust.²

Luc. Away with him! and make a fire straight;
And with our swords, upon a pile of wood,
Let's hew his limbs, till they be clean consum'd.

[Exit LUCIUS, QUINTUS, MARTIUS, and MUTIUS with ALARBUS.]

Tam. O cruel, irreligious piety!

Chi. Was ever Scythia half so barbarous?

Dem. Oppose not Scythia to ambitious Rome.

Alarbus goes to rest; and we survive
To tremble under Titus' threatening look.

Then, madam, stand resolv'd; but hope withal,
The self same gods, that arm'd the queen of Troy
With opportunity of sharp revenge
Upon the Thracian tyrant in his tent,
May favour Tamora, the queen of Goths,
(When Goths were Goths, and Tamora was queen)
To quit the bloody wrongs upon her foes.

Re-enter LUCIUS, QUINTUS, MARTIUS, and MUTIUS, with their Swords bloody.

Luc. See, lord and father, how we have perform'd
Our Roman rites. Alarbus' limbs are lopp'd,
And entrails feed the sacrificing fire.

Whose smoke, like incense, doth perfume the sky.
Remaineth nought, but to inter our brethren,
And with loud 'larums welcome them to Rome.

Tit. Let it be so; and let Andronicus
Make this his latest farewell to their souls.

[Trumpets sounded; and the Coffins laid in the tomb.]

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons: [Kneeling.]
Rome's readiest champions, repose you here in rest,
Secure from worldly chances and mishaps!

Here lurks no treason, here no envy swells,
Here grow no damned grudges; here no storms,
No noise, but silence and eternal sleep.

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons! [Rising.]

Enter LAVINIA.

Lav. In peace and honour live lord Titus long;

My noble lord and father, live in fame.

Lo! at this tomb my tributary tears

I render, for my brethren's obsequies;

And at thy feet I kneel, with tears of joy

Shed on the earth for thy return to Rome:

O! bless me here with thy victorious hand.

Whose fortunes Rome's best citizens applaud.

Tit. Kind Rome, that hast thus lovingly reserv'd

The cordial of mine age to glad my heart!

Lavinia, live: outlive thy father's days,

And fame's eternal date, for virtue's praise!

Enter MARCUS ANDRONICUS, SATURNINUS, BASIANUS and others.

Marc. Long live lord Titus, my beloved brother,
Gracious triumpher in the eyes of Rome!

Tit. Thanks, gentle tribune, noble brother Marcus.

Marc. And welcome, nephews, from successful wars

You that survive, and you that sleep in fame.

Fair lords, your fortunes are alike in all,

That in your country's service drew your swords;

But safer triumph is this funeral pomp.

That hath aspir'd to Solon's happiness,

And triumphs over chance in honour's bed.—

Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome,

Whose friend in justice thou hast ever been,

Send thee by me, their tribune and their trust,

This palliament of white and spotless hue;

And name thee in election for the empire,
With these our late-deceased emperor's sons.
Be candidatus then, and put it on,
And help to set a head on headless Rome.

Tit. A better head her glorious body fits,
Than his that shakes for age and feebleness :
What ! should I don this robe, and trouble you ?
Be chose^d with acclamations^s to-day ;
To-morrow, yield up rule, resign my life,
And set abroad^d new business for you all ?—
Rome, I have been thy soldier forty years,
And led my country's strength successfully,
And buried one-and-twenty valiant sons,
Knighted in field, slain manfully in arms,
In right and service of their noble country.
Give me a staff of honour for mine age,
But not a sceptre to control the world :
Upright he held it, lords, that held it last.

Mar. Titus, thou shalt obtain the empery.

Sat. Proud and ambitious tribune, canst thou tell ?—

Tit. Patience, prince Saturninus.

Sat. Romans, do me right.—

Patricians, draw your swords, and sheath them not Till Saturninus be Rome's emperor.—

Andronicus, would thou wert shipp'd to hell,
Rather than rob me of the people's hearts.

Luc. Proud Saturnine, interrupter of the good
That noble-minded Titus means to thee !

Tit. Content thee, prince : I will restore to thee
The people's hearts, and wean them from themselves.

Bas. Andronicus, I do not flatter thee,
But honour thee, and will do till I die :
My faction if thou strengthen with thy friends,
I will most thankful be ; and thanks, to men
Of noble minds, is honourable meed.

Tit. People of Rome, and people's tribunes, here
I ask your voices, and your suffrages :
Will you bestow them friendly on Andronicus ?

Trib. To gratify the good Andronicus,
And gratulate his safe return to Rome.
The people will accept whom he admits.

Tit. Tribunes, I thank you ; and this suit I make,
That you create your emperor's eldest son,
Lord Saturnine, whose virtues will, I hope,
Reflect on Rome, as Titan's rays on earth,
And ripen justice in this common-weal :
Then, if you will elect by my advice,
Crown him, and say,—“ Long live our emperor !”

Mar. With voices and applause of every sort,
Patricians, and plebeians, we create
Lord Saturninus, Rome's great emperor.
And say,—“ Long live our Emperor Saturnine !”

[A long Flourish. Shouts.]

Sat. Titus Andronicus, for thy favours do
To us in our election this day,
I give thee thanks in part of thy deserts
And 'will with deeds requite thy gentleness :
And, for an onset, Titus, to advance
Thy name and honourable family,
Lavinia will I make my empress,
Rome's royal mistress, mistress of my heart,
And in the sacred Pantheon her espouse.
Tell me, Andronicus, doth this motion please thee ?

Tit. It doth, my worthy lord ; and in this match
I hold me highly honour'd of your grace :
And here, in sight of Rome, to Saturnine,
King and commander of our common-weal,
The wide world's emperor, do I consecrate
My sword, my chariot, and my prisoners ;

Presents well worthy Rome's imperial lord :

Receive them, then, the tribute that I owe,
Mine honour's ensigns humbled at thy feet.

Sat. Thanks, noble Titus, father of my life !
How proud I am of thee, and of thy gifts,
Rome shall record ; and, when I do forget
The least of these unspeakable deserts,
Romans, forget your fealty to me.

Tit. Now, madam, are you prisoner to an emperor ;
[To TAMORA]

To him that for your honour and your state,
Will use you nobly, and your followers.

Sat. A goodly lady, trust me ; of the hue [Aside]
That I would choose, were I to choose anew.—
[To her.] Clear up, fair queen, that cloudy countenance :
Though chance of war hath wrought this change of cheer,

Thou com'st not to be made a scorn in Rome :
Princely shall be thy usage every way.

Rest on my word, and let not discontent
Daunt all your hopes : madam, he comforts you,
Can make you greater than the queen of Goths.—
Lavinia, you are not displeas'd with this ?

Lav. Not I, my lord ; with true nobility
Warrants these words in princely courtesy.

Sat. Thanks, sweet Lavinia.—Romans, let us go.
Ransomless here we set our prisoners free :

Proclaim our honours, lords, with trump and drum.
Bas. Lord Titus, by your leave, this maid is mine.

[Seizing LAVINIA.]

Tit. How, sir ! Are you in earnest, then, my lord ?
Bas. Ay, noble Titus : and resolv'd whilst,
To do myself this reason and this right.

[The Emperor courts TAMORA in dumb show.]

Mar. Suum cuique is our Roman justice :
This prince in justice seizeth but his own.

Luc. And that he will, and shall, if Lucius live.

Tit. Traitors, avant ! Where is the emperor's guard ?
Treason, my lord ! Lavinia is surpris'd.

Sat. Surpris'd ! By whom ?

Bas. By him that justly may
Bear his bethroth'd from all the world away.

[Exeunt MARCUS and BASSIANUS, with LAVINIA.]

Mut. Brothers, help to convey her hence away,
And with my sword I'll keep this door safe.

[Exeunt LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MARTIUS.]

Tit. Follow, my lord, and I'll soon bring her back.
Mut. My lord, you pass not here.

Tit. What, villain boy ?
Barr'st me my way in Rome ? [TITUS kills MUTIUS]

Mut. Help, Lucius, help !

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. My lord, you are unjust ; and, more than so,
In wrongful quarrel you have slain your son.

Tit. Nor thou, nor he, nor any sons of mine :
My sons would never so dishonour me.

Traitor, restore Lavinia to the emperor.

Luc. Dead, if you will ; but not to be his wife.
That is another's lawful promis'd love. [Exit]

Sat. No, Titus, no : the emperor needs her not,
Nor her, nor thee, nor any of thy stock :
I'll trust by leisure him that mocks me once ;
Thee never, nor thy traitorous haughty sons,
Confederates all thus to dishonour me.

Was there none else in Rome to make a stale^d,
But Saturnine ? Full well, Andronicus,
Agree these deeds with that proud brag of thee,
That said'st, I begg'd the empire at thy hands.

Tit. O monstrous ! what reproachful words are these !

• chosen in f. e. • proclamations : in f. e. • abroad : in f. e.

• Not in f. e. • A stalking horse.

Sat. But go thy ways; go, give that changing piece
To him that flourish'd for her with his sword.
A valiant son-in-law thou shalt enjoy;
One fit to bandy with thy lawless sons,
To rattle in the commonwealth of Rome.

Tit. These words are razors to my wounded heart.

Sat. And therefore, lovely Tamora, queen of Goths,
That, like the stately Phoebe 'mongst her nymphs,
Dost overshadow the gailant¹ dames of Rome,
I thou be pleas'd with this my sudden choice,
Behold, I choose thee, Tamora, for my bride,
And will create thee empress of Rome.

Sat. Speak, queen of Goths, dost thou applaud my choice?
And here I swear by all the Roman gods,—
Sith priest and holy water are so near,
And tapers burn so bright, and every thing
In readiness for Hymeneus stand,—
I will not re-salute the streets of Rome,
Or climb my palace, till front forth this place
I lead espous'd my bride along with me.

Tam. And here, in sight of heaven, to Rome I swear,
If Saturnine advance the queen of Goths,
She will a handmaid be to his desires,
A loving nurse, a mother to his youth.

Sat. Ascend, fair queen, Pantheon.—Lords, accompany
Your noble emperor, and his lovely bride,
Sent by the heavens for prince Saturnine,
Whose wisdom hath her fortune conquered:
There shall we consummate our spousal rites.
[Exeunt SATURNINE and his Followers; TAMORA, and her sons; AARON and Goths.]

Tit. I am not bid to wait upon this bride.
Tutus, when wert thou wont to walk alone,
Dishonour'd thus, and challenged of wrongs?

Re-enter MARCUS, LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MARTIUS.
Mar. O, Titus, see, O, see what thou hast done!
In a bad quarrel slain a virtuous son.

Tit. No, foolish tribune, no; no son of mine,
Nor thou, nor these, confederates in the deed
That hath dishonour'd all our family:
Unworthy brother, and unworthy sons!

Luc. But let us give him burial, as becomes:
Give Mutius burial with our brethren.

Tit. Traitors, away! he rests not in this tomb.
This monument five hundred years hath stood,
Which I have sumptuously re-edified:
Here none but soldiers, and Rome's servitors,
Repose in fame; none basely slain in brawls.
Bury him where you can, he comes not here.

Mar. My lord, this is impiety in you.
My nephew Mutius' deeds do plead for him:
He must be buried with his brethren.

Quin. Mart. And shall, or him we will accompany.
Tit. And shall! What villain was it spoke that word?

Quin. He that would vouch 't in any place but here.
Tit. What! would you bury him in my dispute?

Mar. No, noble Titus; but entreat of thee
To pardon Mutius, and to bury him.

Tit. Marcus, even thou hast struck upon my crest,
And, with these boys, mine honour thou hast wounded:
My foes I do repute you every one:

So, trouble me no more, but get you gone.

Mar. He is not himself; let us withdraw awhile.

Quin. Not I, till Mutius' bones be buried.

[MARCUS and the Sons of Tyres kneel.]

Mar. Brother, for in that name doth nature plead.

Quin. Father, and in that name doth nature speak.

Tit. Speak thou no more, if all the rest will speak.

Mar. Renowned Titus, more than half my soul,—

Luc. Dear father, soul and substance of us all,—

Mar. Suffer thy brother Marcus to inter

His noble nephew here in virtue's nest,

That died in honour and Lavinia's cause.

Thou art a Roman, be not barbarous:

The Greeks upon advice did bury Ajax,

That slew himself, and wise Laertes' son

Did graciously plead for his funerals.

Let not young Mutius, then, that was thy joy,

Be barr'd his entrance here.

Tit. Rise, Marcus, rise.—

The dismal'st day is this, that e'er I saw,

To be dishonour'd by my sons in Rome!

Well, bury him, and bury me the next.

[MUTIUS is put into the Tomb]

Luc. There lie thy bones, sweet Mutius, with thy friends,

Till we with trophies do adorn thy tomb!

All. No man shed tears for noble Mutius;

He lives in fame that died in virtue's cause.

Mar. My lord,—to step out of these dreary² dumps,—

How comes it that the subtle queen of Goths

Is of a sudden thus advanc'd in Rome?

Tit. I know not, Marcus, but I know it is:

Whether by device or no, the heavens can tell.

Is she not, then, beholding to the man

That brought her for this high good turn so far?

Yes, and will nobly him remunerate.³

Flourish. Re-enter, at one side, SATURNINE, attended, TAMORA, DEMETRIUS, CHIRON, and AARON: at the other side, BASSIANUS, LAVINIA, and others.

Sat. So Bassianus, you have play'd your prize?

God give you joy, sir, of your gallant bride.

Bas. And you of yours, my lord. I say no more,
Nor wish no less; and so I take my leave.

Sat. Traitor, if Rome have law, or we have power,
Thou and thy faction shall repent this rape.

Bas. Rape, call you it, my lord, to seize my own,
My true-betrothed love, and now my wife?

But let the laws of Rome determine all;

Mean while, I am possess'd of that is mine.

Sat. 'Tis good, sir; you are very short with us;
But, if we live, we'll be as sharp with you.

Bas. My lord, what I have done, as best I may,
Answer I must, and shall do with my life:

Only thus much I give you grace to know.

By all the duties that I owe to Rome,

This noble gentleman, lord Titus here,

Is in opinion, and in honour, wrong'd;

That in the rescue of Lavinia

With his own hand did slay his youngest son,

In zeal to you, and highly mov'd to wrath,

To be controll'd in that he frankly gave

Receive him, then, to favour, Saturnine,

That hath express'd himself, in all his deeds,

A father, and a friend, to thee, and Rome.

Tit. Prince Bassianus, leave to plead my deeds

'Tis thou, and those, that have dishonour'd me.

Rome and the righteous heavens be my judge,

How I have lov'd and honour'd Saturnine.

Tam. My worthy lord, if ever Tamora

Were gracious in those princely eyes of thine,

Then hear me speak indifferently for all;

And at my suit, sweet, pardon what is past.

Sat. What, madam! be dishonour'd openly,

And basely put it up without revenge?

Tam. Not so, my lord: the gods of Rome forefend.

I should be author to dishonour you!

¹ not worth: in f. e. ² folio: sullen: a dump was originally a strain of music, or a poem. ³ This line is not in the quarto.

But, on mine honour, dare I undertake
For good lord Titus' innocence in all,
Whose fury, not dissembled, speaks his griefs.
Then, at my suit look graciously on him;
Lose not so noble a friend on vain suppose,
Nor with sour looks afflict his gentle heart.—
My lord, be rul'd by me, be ▼on at last; [Aside to SAT.
Dissemble all your griefs and discontents:
You are but newly planted in your throne;
Lest, then, the people, and patricians too,
Upon a just survey, take Titus' part,
And so supplant you for ingratitude,
Which Rome reputes to be a heinous sin,
Yield at entreats, and then let me alone.
I'll find a day to massacre them all.
And raze their faction, and their family,
The cruel father, and his traitorous sons,
To whom I sued for my dear son's life;
And make them know what 't is to let a queen
Kneel in the streets, and beg for grace in vain.—
Come, come, sweet emperor,—come, Andronicus,—

[Aloud.]

Take up this good old man, and cheer the heart
That dies in tempest of thy angry frown.

Sat. Rise, Titus, rise: my empress hath prevail'd.

Tit. I thank your majesty, and her, my lord.

These words, these looks, infuse new life in me.

Tam. Titus, I am incorporate in Rome,
A Roman now adopted happily,
And must advise the emperor for his good.
This day all quarrels die, Andronicus;

And let it be mine honour, good my lord,
That I have reconcil'd your friends and you.—
For you, prince Bassianus, I have pass'd
My word and promise to the emperor,
That you will be more mild and tractable—
And fear not, lords,—and you, Lavinia,—
By my advice, all humbled on your knees,
You shall ask pardon of his majesty.
Luc. We do: and vow to heaven, and to his highness,
That what we did was mildly, as we might, [They kneel.]
Tendering our sister's honour, and our own.

Mar. That on mine honour here I do protest.

Sat. Away, and talk not: trouble us no more.—

Tam. Nay, nay, sweet emperor, we must all be friends.
The tribune and his nephews kneel for grace:
I will not be denied. Sweet heart, look back.

Sat. Marcus, for thy sake, and thy brother's here,
And at my lovely Tamora's entreats,
I do remit these young men's heinous faults.

[They stand up.]

Lavinia, though you left me like a churl,
I found a friend; and sure as death I swore,
I would not part a bachelor from the priest.
Come; if the emperor's court can feast two brides,
You are my guest, Lavinia, and your friends.—
This day shall be a love-day, Tamora.

Tit. To-morrow, an it please your majesty,
To hunt the panther and the hart with me,
With horn and hound we'll give your grace bonjour.

Sat. Be it so, Titus, and gracemercy too.

[Trumpets. Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The Same. Before the Palace.

Enter AARON.

Aar. Now climbeth Tamora Olympus' top,
Safe out of fortune's shot; and sits aloft,
Secure of thunder's crack, or lightning flash,
Advanc'd above pale envy's threatening reach.
As when the golden sun salutes the morn,
And having gilt the ocean with his beams,
Gallops the zodiac in his glistering coach,
And overlooks the highest-peering hills;
So Tamora.—
Upon her will doth earthly honour wait,
And virtue stoops and trembles at her frown.
Then, Aaron, arm thy heart, and fit thy thoughts,
To mount aloft with thy imperial mistress;
And mount her pitch, whom thou in triumph long
Hast prisoner held, fetter'd in amorous chains,
And faster bound to Aaron's charming eyes,
Than was Prometheus tied to Caneasus.
Away with slavish weeds, and servile thoughts!
I will be bright, and shine in pearl and gold,
To wait upon this new-made empress.
To wait, said I? to wanton with this queen,
This goddess, this Semiramis, this nymph,
This syren, that will charm Rome's Saturnine,
And see his shipwreck, and his commonweal's.
Holla! what storm is this?

Enter DEMETRIUS AND CHIRON, braving.

Dem. Chiron, thy years want wit, thy wit wants edge
And manners, to intrude where I am grac'd,
And may, for aught thou know'st, affected be.

Chi. Demetrius, thou dost over-ween in all,

And so in this, to bear me down with braves.
'Tis not the difference of a year, or two,
Makes me less gracious, thee more fortunate:
I am as able, and as fit, as thou,
To serve, and to deserve my mistress' grace;
And that my sword upon thee shall approve,
And plead my passions for Lavinia's love.

Aar. Clubs, clubs! these lovers will not keep the peace.

Dem. Why, boy, although our mother, unadvis'd,
Gave you a dancing rapier by your side,
Are you so desperate grown, to threat your friends?
Go to: have your lath glued within your sheath,
Till you know better how to handle it.

Chi. Mean while, sir, with the little skill I have,
Full well shalt thou perceive how much I dare.

Dem. Ay, boy; grow ye so brave? [They draw

Aar. Why, how now, lords.]

So near the emperor's palace dare you draw,
And maintain such a quarrel openly?
Full well I wot the ground of all this grudge:
I would not for a million of gold,
The cause were known to them it most concerns;
Nor would your noble mother for much more
Be so dishonour'd in the court of Rome.
For shame! put up.

Dem. Not I; till I have sheath'd
My rapier in his bosom, and, withal,
Thrust those reproachful speeches down his throat,
That he hath breath'd in my dishonour here.

Chi. For that I am prepar'd and full resolv'd,
Foul-spoken coward, that thunder'st with thy tongue
And with thy weapon nothing dar'st perform.

Aar. Away, I say!

Now by the gods that warlike Goths adore,
This petty brabble will undo us all.—
Why, lords,—and think you not how dangerous
It is to jet¹ upon a prince's right?

What! is Lavinia then become so loose.

Or Bassianus so degenerate,

That for her love such quarrels may be broach'd,

Without controulment, justice, or revenge?

Young lords, beware!—an should the empress know

This discord's ground, the music would not please.

Chi. I care not, I knew she and all the world:

love Lavinia more than all the world.

Dem. Youngling, learn thou to make some meaner choice:

Lavinia is thine elder brother's hope.

Aar. Why, are ye mad? or know ye not, in Rome

How furious and impatient they be.

And cannot brook competitors in love?

I tell you, lords, you do but plot your deaths

By this device.

Chi. Aaron, a thousand deaths
Would I propose, to achieve her whom I love.

Aar. To achieve her!—How?

Dem. Why mak'st thou it so strange?

She is a woman, therefore may be woo'd;

She is a woman, therefore may be won;²

She is Lavinia, therefore must be lov'd.

What, man! more water glideth by the mill

Than wets the miller of; and easy 'tis

Of a cut loaf to steal a shive,³ we know:

Though Bassianus be the emperor's brother,

Better than he have worn Vulcan's badge.

Aar. Ay, and as good as Saturninus may. [Aside.]

Dem. Then, why should he despair, that knows to court it

With words, fair looks, and liberality?

What! hast thou not full often struck a doe,

And borne her cleanly by the keeper's nose?

Aar. Why then, it seems, some certain snatch or so
Would serve your turns.

Chi. Ay, so the turn were serv'd.

Dem. Aaron, thou hast hit it.

Aar. Would you had hit it too;

Then should not we be tir'd with this ado.

Why, hark ye, hark ye.—and are you such fools,

To square for this? Would it offend you, then,

That both should speed?⁴

Chi. Faith, not me.

Dem. Nor me, so I were one.

Aar. For shame! be friends, and join for that you jar.

'Tis policy and stratagem must do

That you affect: and so must you resolve.

That what you cannot as you would achieve,

You mu't perforce, accomplish as you may.

Take this of me: Lucrece was not more chaste

Than this Lavinia, Bassianus' love.

A speedier course than lingering languishment

Must we pursue, and I have found the path

My lords, a solemn hunting is in hand:

There will the lovely Roman ladies troop:

The forest walks are wide and spacious,

And many unfrequented plots there are,

Fitted by kind for rape and villainy.

Single you thither, then, this dainty doe,

And strike her home by force, if not by words:

This way, or not at all, stand you in hope.

Come, come; our empress, with her sacred wit,

To villainy and vengeance consecrate,

Will we acquaint with all that we intend;

And she shall file our engines with advice,

That will not suffer you to square yourselves,

But to your wishes' height advance you both.

The emperor's court is like the house of fame,

The palace full of tongues, of eyes, and ears:

The woods are ruthless, dreadful,⁵ deaf, and dull;

There speak, and strike, brave boys, and take your turns

There serve your lust, shadow'd from heaven's eye,

And revel in Lavinia's treasury.

Chi. Thy counsel, lad, smells of no cowardice.

Dem. Sit fast, aut nefas, till I find the stream

To cool this heat, a charm to calm these fits,

Per Styga, per manes vehor.

[Exeunt]

SCENE II.—A Forest near Rome. Horns, and cry of Hounds heard.

Enter TITUS ANDRONICUS, with Hunters, &c. MARCUS
LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MARTIUS.

Tit. The hunt is up, the morn is bright and gay

The fields are fragrant, and the woods are wide.⁶

Uncouple here, and let us make a bay,

And wake the emperor and his lovely bride,

And rouse the prince, and sing⁷ a hunter's round.⁸

That all the court may echo with the sound.⁹

Sons, let it be your charge, and so will I,¹⁰

To attend the emperor's person carefully:

I have been troubled in my sleep this night,

But dawning day brought comfort and delight.¹¹

[*Horns wind:*¹² they sing "The hunt is up."¹³

Enter SATURNINUS, TAMORA, BASSIANUS, LAVINIA,

DEMETRIUS, CHIRON, and Attendants.

Tit. Many good morrows to your majesty:—

Madam, to you as many and as good.—

I promised your grace a hunter's peal.

Sat. And you have rung it lustily, my lords,

Somewhat too early for new-married ladies.

Bas. Lavinia, how say you?

Lav. I say, no;

I have been broad¹⁴ awake two hours and more.

Sat. Come on, then: horse and chariots let us have,

And to our sport.—Madam, now shall ye see

Our Roman hunting. [To TAMORA]

Mor. I have dogs, my lord,

Will rouse the proudest panther in the chase,

And climb the highest promontory's top.

Tit. And I have horse will follow where the game

Makes way, and run like swallows o'er the plain.

Dem. Chiron, we hunt not, we, with horse nor hound,

But hope to pluck a dainty doe to ground. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A desert Part of the Forest.

Enter AARON, with a Bag of Gold.

Aar. He, that had wit, would think that I had none,

To bury so much gold under a tree,

And never after to inherit it.

Let him that thinks of me so abjectly,

Know that this gold must coin a stratagem,

Which, cunningly effected, will beget

A very excellent piece of villainy:

And so repose, sweet gold, for thy unrest

[Hides the Gold]

That have their alms out of the empress' chest.

Enter TAMORA.

Tam. My lovely Aaron, wherefore look'st thou sad.

When every thing doth make a gleeful boast ?

The birds chaunt melody on every bush ;
The snake lies coiled in the cheerful sun ;
The green leaves quiver with the cooling wind,
And make a checquer'd shadow on the ground.
Under their sweet shade, Aaron, let us sit,
And, whilst the babbling echo mocks the hounds,
Replying shrilly to the well-tun'd horns,
As if a double hunt were heard at once,
Let us sit down, and mark their yelling noise :
And—after conflict, such as was suppos'd
The wandering prince and Dido once enjoy'd.
When with a happy storm they were surpris'd,
And certain'd with a counsel-keeping cave.—
We may, each wreathed in the other's arms,
Our pastimes done, possess a golden slumber ;
While hounds, and horns, and sweet melodious birds,
Be unto us, as is a nurse's song
Of lullaby to bring her babe asleep.

Aar. Madam, though Venus govern your desires,
Saturn is dominator over mine.

What signifies my deadly-standing eye,
My silence, and my cloudy melancholy ?
My fleece of woolly hair that now uncurls,
Even as an adder, when she doth unroll
To do some fatal execution ?
No, madam, these are no venereal signs :
Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand,
Blood and revenge are hammering in my head.
Hark, Tamora, the empress of my soul,
Which never hopes more heaven than rests in thee,
This is the day of doom for Bassianus ;
His Philomel must lose her tongue to-day :
Thy sons make pillage of her chastity,
And wash their hands in Bassianus' blood.
Seest thou this letter ? take it up, I pray thee,
And give the king this fatal-plotted scroll.—
Now question me no more ; we are espied :
Here comes a parcel of our hopeful booty,
Which dreads not yet their lives' destruction.

Tam. Ah, my sweet Moor, sweeter to me than life !

Aar. No more, great empress. Bassianus comes :
Be cross with him ; and I'll go fetch thy sons
To back thy quarrels, whatsoever they be. [Exit.]

Enter BASSIANUS and LAVINIA.

Bas. Whom have we here ? Rome's royal empress,
Unfurnish'd of her ! well-beseeming troop ?
Or is it Dian, habited like her ;

Who hath abandoned her holy groves,
To see the general hunting in this forest ?

Tam. Saneey controller of my private secrets !
Had I the power, that, some say, Dian had,
Thy temples should be planted presently
With horns, as was Actæon's ; and the hounds
Should dine ' upon thy new-transformed limbs,
Unmanly intruder as thou art !

Lav. Under your patience, gentle empress,
T is thought you have a goodly gift in horning ;
And to be doubted, that your Moor and you
Are singled forth to try experiments.
Jove shield your husband from his hounds to-day !
'T is pity, they should take him for a stag.

Bas. Believe me, queen, your swarth Cimberian
Doth make your honour of his body's hue,
Spotted, detested, and abominable.
Why are you sequester'd from all your train,
Dismounted from your snow-white goodly steed,
And wander'd hither to an obscure plot,
Accompanied but with a barbarous Moor,

If foul desire had not conducted you ?

Lav. And being intercepted in your sport,
Great reason that my noble lord be rated
For sauciness !—I pray you, let us hence,
And let her joy her raven-coloured love :
This valley fits the purpose passing well.

Bas. The king, my brother, shall have note of this.
Lav. Ay, for these slips have made him noted long,
Good king ! to be so mightily abus'd.

Tam. Why have I patience to endure all this ?

Enter DEMETRIUS and CHIRON.

Dem. How, now, dear sovereign, and our gracious mother !

Why doth your highness look so pale and wan ?

Tam. Have I not reason, think you, to look pale ?

These two have 'tied me hither to this place,
A barren detested vale, you see, it is :

The trees, though summer, yet forlorn and lean,
O'ercome with moss, and baleful misletoe,

Here never shines the sun ; here nothing breeds,
Unless the nightly owl, or fatal raven,

And, when they show'd me this abhorred pit,

They told me, here, at dead time of the night,

A thousand fiends, a thousand hissing snakes,

Ten thousand swelling toads, as many urchins, *

Would make such fearful and confused cries,

As any mortal barely hearing it,

Should straight fall mad, or else die suddenly

No sooner had they told this hellish tale,

But straight they told me, they would bind me here

Unto the body of a dismal yew,

And leave me to this miserable death :

And then they call'd me, foul adulteress,

Lascivious Goth, and all the bitterest terms

That ever ear did hear to such effect ;

And, had you not by wondrous fortune come,

This vengeance on me had they executed.

Revenge it, as you love your mother's life,

Or be ye not henceforth call'd my children.

Dem. This is a witness that I am thy son.

[Stabs BASSIANUS.]

Chi. And this for me, struck home to show my strength. [Stabbing him likewise.]

Lav. Ay, come, Semiramis !—nay, barbarous Ta-mora :

For no name fits thy nature but thy own.

Tam. Give me thy poniard : you shall know, my boys,
Your mother's hand shall right your mother's wrong.

Dem. Stay, madam ; here is more belongs to her :

First, thrash the corn, then after burn the straw.

This minion stood upon her chastity,

Upon her nuptial vow, her loyalty,

And with that painted shape she braves your night :

And shall she carry this unto her grave ?

Chi. An if she do, I would I were an eunuch.

Drag hence her husband to some secret hole,

And make his dead trunk pillow to our lust.

Tam. But when ye have the honey ye desire,

Let not this wasp outlive us both to sting.

Chi. I warrant you, madam, we will make that sure.—

Come, mistress, now perforce, we will enjoy

That nice preserved honesty of yours.

Lav. O Tamora ! thou bear'st a woman's face.—

Tam. I will not hear her speak : away with her !

Lav. Sweet lords, entreat her hear me but a word

Dem. Listen, fair madam : let it be your glory

To see her tears ; but be your heart to them,

As unrelenting flint to drops of rain.

Lav. When did the tiger's young ones teach the dam !

* So the quarto, 1600 ; other old copies : ear. † drive : in f. e. ‡ Hedge-hogs ; also, evil spirits

O! do not learn her wrath; she taught it thee.
The milk, thou suck'dst from her, did turn to marble;
Even at her teat thou hadst thy tyranny.
Yet every mother breeds not sons alike:
Do thou entreat her show a woman pity. [To CHIRON.
Chi. What! wouldst thou have me prove myself a bastard?

Lav. 'T is true; the raven doth not hatch a lark:
Yet have I heard, O, could I find it now!
The lion, mov'd with pity, did endure
To have his princely claws^a par'd all away.
Some say that ravens foster forlorn children,
The whilst their own birds famish in their nests:
O! be to me, though thy hard heart say no,
Nothing so kind, but something pitiful.

Tam. I know not what it means. Away with her!

Lav. O! let me teach thee: for my father's sake,
That gave thee life, when well he might have slain thee,
Be not obdurate. Open thy deaf ears.

Tam. Hadst thou in person ne'er offended me,
Even for his sake am I pitiless.—

Remember, boys, I pour'd forth tears in vain,
To save your brother from the sacrifice;
But fierce Andronicus would not relent.
Therefore, away, and use her as you will:
The worse to her, the better lov'd of me.

Lav. O Tamora! be call'd a gentle queen, [Kneeling.
And with thine own hands kill me in this place;
For 't is not life that I have begg'd so long:
Poor I was slain when Bassianus died. [Go.

Tam. What begg'st thou then? fond^b woman, let me

Lav. 'T is present death I beg: and one thing more,
That womanhood denies my tongue to tell.
O! keep me from their worse than killing lust,
And tumble me into some loathsome pit.
Where never man's eye may behold my body:
Do this, and be a charitable murderer.

Tam. So should I rob my sweet sons of their fee:
No: let them satisfy their lust on thee.

Dem. Away! for thou hast stay'd us here too long.

Lav. No grace? no womanhood? Ah, beastly creature,

The blot and enemy to our general name! [Rising.
Confusion fall—

Chi. Nay, then, I'll stop your mouth.—Bring thou her husband: [Dragging off LAVINIA.

This is the hole where Aaron bid us hide him. [Exeunt.

Tam. Farewell, my sons: see, that you make her sure

Ne'er let my heart know merry cheer indeed,
Till all the Andronici be made away.

Now will I have to see my lovely Moor,
And let my spleenful sons this trull deilour. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—The Same.

Enter AARON, with QUINTUS and MARTIUS.

Aar. Come on, my lords, the better foot before:
Straight will I bring you to the lonesome pit,
Where I espj'd the panther fast asleep.

Quin. My sight is very dull, where'er it bodes.

Mart. And mine. I promise you, 'wer't not for shame,
Well could I leave our sport to sleep awhile.

[MARTIUS falls into the Pit.

Quin. What! art thou fallen? What subtle hole is this,
Whose mouth is cover'd with rude-growing briars,
Upon whose leaves are drops of new-shed blood,
As fresh as morning's dew distill'd on flowers?

A very fatal place it seems to me.—

Speak, brother, hast thou hurt thee with the fall?

Mart. [Under the stage.^c] O, brother! with the dismall'st object hurt.

That ever eye with sight made heart lament.

Aar. [Aside.] Now will I fetch the king to sit them here;

That he thereby may give a likely guess,
How these were they that made away his brother.

[Exit AARON
From this unhallow'd and blood-stained hole?

Quin. I am surpris'd with an uncouth fear;
A chilling sweat o'er-runs my trembling joints:
My heart suspects more than mine eye can see.

Mart. To prove thou hast a true-divining heart,
Aaron and thou look down into this den,
And see a fearful sight of blood and death.

Quin. Aaron is gone; and my compassionate heart
Will not permit mine eyes once to behold
The thing whereat it trembles by surmise.
O! tell me how^d it is; for ne'er till now
Was I a child, to fear I know not what.

Mart. Lord Bassianus lies embrewed here,
All on a heap, like to a slaughter'd lamb,
In this detested, dark, blood-drinking pit.

Quin. If it be dark, how dost thou know 't is he?

Mart. Upon his bloody finger he doth wear

A precious ring, that lightens all the hole,
Which, like a taper in some monument,
Doth shine upon the dead man's earthy cheeks,
And shows the ragged entrails of the pit:

So pale did shine the moon on Pyramus,
When he by night lay bath'd in maiden blood.

O brother! help me with thy fainting hand,—
If fear hath made thee faint, as me it hath,—
Out of this fell devouring receptacle,
As hateful as Coeetus' misty mouth.

Quin. Reach me thy hand that I may help thee out,
Or, wanting strength to do thee so much good,
I may be pluck'd into the swallowing womb
Of this deep pit, poor Bassianus' grave.

I have no strength to pluck thee to the brink.

Mart. Nor I no strength to climb without thy help.

Quin. Thy hand once more: I will not loose again,
Till thou art here aloft, or I below.—

Thou canst not come to me: I come to thee. [Falls in.

Enter SATURNINUS and AARON.

Sat. Along with me:—I'll see what hole is here,
And what he is that now is leap'd into it.
Say, who art thou, that lately did descend
Into this gaping hollow of the earth?

Mart. The unhappy son of old Andronicus,
Brought hither in a most unlucky hour,
To find thy brother Bassianus dead.

Sat. My brother dead! I know, thou dost but jest
He and his lady both are at the lodge,
Upon the north side of this pleasant chase;
'T is not an hour since I left him there.

Mart. We know not where you left him all alive,
But, out alas! here have we found him dead.

Enter TAMORA, with Attendants; TITUS ANDRONICUS and LUCIUS.

Tam. Where is my lord, the king?

Sat. Here, Tamora; though griev'd with killing grief.

Tam. Where is thy brother Bassianus?

Sat. Now to the bottom dost thou search my wound
Poor Bassianus here lies murdered.

Tam. Then, all too late I bring this fatal writ.

[Giving a Letter
The complot of this timeless tragedy;

^a paws: in f. o. ^b Not in f. o. ^c Foolish. ^d Not in f. o. ^e who: in quarto, 1600

And wonder greatly, that man's face can fold
In pleasing smiles such murderous tyranny.

Sat. [Reads.] "An if we miss to meet him handsomely,—

Sweet huntsman, Bassianus 't is, we mean,—
Do thou so much as dig the grave for him.
Thou know'st our meaning: look for thy reward
Among the nettles at the elder-tree,
Which overshades the mouth of that same pit,
Where we decreed to bury Bassianus.
Do this, and purchase us thy lasting friends."
O, Tamora! was ever heard the like?
This is the pit, and this the elder-tree.
Look, sirs, if you can find the huntsman out,
That should have murder'd Bassianus here.

Aar. My gracious lord, here is the bag of gold.

Sat. Two of thy whelps, [To Titus] fell curs of bloody kind.

Have here bereft my brother of his life.—
Sirs, drag them from the pit unto the prison:
There let them bide, until we have devis'd
Some never-heard-of torturing pain for them.

Tam. What! are they in this pit? O wondrous thing!
How easily murder is discovered.

Tit. High emperor, upon my feeble knee
I beg this boon with tears not lightly shed;
That this fell fault of my accursed sons,
Accurs'd, if the fault be prov'd in them,—

Sat. If it be prov'd! you see, 't is apparent.—
Who found this letter? Tamora, was it you?

Tam. Andronicus himself did take it up.

Tit. I did, my lord: yet let me be their bail;
For by my father's reverend tomb I vow,
They shall be ready at your highness' will
To answer this suspicion with their lives.

Sat. Thou shalt not bail them: see, thou follow me.
Some bring the murder'd body, some the murderers:
Let them not speak a word, their guilt is plain:
For, by my soul, were there worse end than death,
That end upon them should be executed.

Tam. Andronicus, I will entreat the king:
Fear not thy sons, they shall do well enough.

Tit. Come, Lucius, come; stay not to talk with them.

[Exeunt severally.]

SCENE V.—The Same.

Enter DEMETRIUS and CHIRON, with LAVINIA, ravished; her Hands cut off, and her Tongue cut out.

Dem. So, now go tell, an if thy tongue can speak,
Who 't was cut out thy tongue, and ravish'd thee.

Chi. Write down thy mind, bewray thy meaning so;
And, if thy stumps will let thee, play the scribe.

Dem. See how with signs and tokens she can scrowl.¹

Chi. Go home, call for sweet water, wash thy hands.

Dem. She hath no tongue to call, nor hands to wash;
And so let's leave her to her silent walks.

Chi. An 't were my case, I should go hang myself
Dem. If thou hadst hands to help thee knit the cord.

[Exeunt DEMETRIUS and CHIRON.]

Wind Horns. Enter MARCUS, from hunting.

Mar. Who 's this,—my niece, that flies away so fast?
Cousin, a word: where is your husband?—

If I do dream, 'would all my wealth would wake me.
If I do wake, some planet strike me down,
That I may slumber in eternal sleep!—

Speak, gentle niece, what stern ungentle hands
Have lopp'd, and hew'd, and made thy body bare
Of her two branches: those sweet ornaments,
Whose circling shadows kings have sought to sleep in
And might not gain so great a happiness,

As have thy love? Why dost not speak to me?—

Alas! a crimson river of warm blood,
Like to a bubbling fountain stirr'd with wind,

Doth rise and fall between thy roseate lips,
Coming and going with thy honey breath.

But, sure, some Tereus hath devour'd thee,
And, lest thou shouldst detect him,² cut thy tongue

Ah! how thou turn'st away thy face for shame;
And, notwithstanding all this loss of blood,—

As from a conduit with three³ issuing spouts,—
Yet do thy cheeks look red, as Titan's face

Blushing to be encounter'd with a cloud.
Shall I speak for thee? shall I say, 't is so?

O! that I knew thy heart; and knew thee best,
That I might rail at him to ease my mind.

Sorrow concealed, like an oven stopp'd,
Doth burn the heart to cinders where it is.

Fair Philomela, she but lost her tongue,
And in a tedious sampler sew'd her mind;

But, lovely niece, that mean is cut from thee.
A craftier Tereus, cousin,⁴ hast thou met,

And he hath cut those pretty fingers off,
That could have better sew'd than Philomel.

O! had the monster seen those lily hands
Tremble, like aspen leaves, upon a lute,

And make the silken strings delight to kiss them,
He would not then have touch'd them for his life,

Or, had he heard the heavenly harmony,
Which that sweet tongue hath made in minstrelsy,⁵

He would have dropp'd his knife, and fell asleep,
As Cerberus at the Thracian poet's feet.

Come: let us go, and make thy father blind;
For such a sight will blind a father's eye.

One hour's storm will drown the fragrant meads;
What will whole months of tears thy father's eyes?

Do not draw back, for we will mourn with thee
O, could our mourning ease thy misery!

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter Senators, Tribunes, and Officers of Justice, with MARTIUS and QUINTUS, bound, passing on to the Place of Execution; Titus going before, pleading.

Tit. Hear me, grave fathers! noble tribunes, stay!

For pity of mine age, whose youth was spent
In dangerous wars, whilst you securely slept;

For all my blood in Rome's great quarrel shed,
For all the frosty nights that I have watch'd,

And for these bitter tears, which now you see
Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheeks;

Be pitiful to my condemned sons.

Whose souls are not corrupted as 't is thought.

For two and twenty sons I never wept,

Because they died in honour's lofty bed:

¹ scrowl in folio. ² them: in old copies. Rowe made the change. ³ their: in old copies; Hammer's correction. ⁴ Not in folio which adds "withal" to the end of the line. ⁵ These two words are not in f. o.

For these, these, tribunes, in the dust I write

[Throwing himself on the ground.]

My heart's deep anguish in my soul's sad tears.

Let my tears stanch the earth's dry appetite;

My sons' sweet blood will make it shame and blush.

[Exeunt Senators, Tribunes, &c., with the Prisoners.]

O earth! I will befriended thee with more rain,

That shall distil from these two ancient urns!

Than youthful April shall with all his showers:

In summer's drought I'll drop upon thee still;

In winter with warm tears I'll melt the snow,

And keep eternal spring-time on thy face,

So thou refuse to drink my dear sons' blood.

Enter Lucius, with his Sword drawn.

O, reverend tribunes! gentle, aged men!

Unbind my sons, reverse the doom of death;

And let me say, that never wept before,

My tears are now prevailing orators.

Luc. O, noble father! you lament in vain:

The tribunes hear you not, no man is by,

And you recount your sorrows to a stone.

Tit. Ah, Lucius! for thy brothers let me plead —

Grave tribunes, once more I entreat of you.

Luc. My gracious lord, no tribune hears you speak.

Tit. Why, 't is no matter, man: if they did hear,

They would not mark me; or if they did mark,

They would not pity me, yet plead I must,

And bootless unto them.¹

Therefore, I tell my sorrows to the stones;

Who, though they cannot answer my distress,

Yet in some sort they are better than the tribunes,

For that they will not intercept my tale. [Rising.]

When I do weep, they humbly at my feet

Receive my tears, and seem to weep with me;

And were they but attired in grave weeds,

Rome could afford no tribune like to these.

A stone is soft as wax, tribunes more hard than stones;

A stone is silent, and offendeth not,

And tribunes with their tongues doo men to death.

But wherefore stand'st thou with thy weapon drawn?

Luc. To rescue my two brothers from their death;

For which attempt the judges have pronounc'd

My everlasting doom of banishment.

Tit. O happy man! they have befriended thee.

Why, foolish Lucius, dost thou not perceive,

That Rome is but a wilderness of tigers?

Tigers must prey; and Rome affords no prey,

But me and mine: how happy art thou, then,

From these devourers to be banished?

But who comes with our brother Marcus here?

Enter Marcus and Lavinia.

Mar. Titus, prepare thy aged eyes to weep;

Or, if not so, thy noble heart to break:

I bring consuming sorrow to thine age.

Tit. Will it consume me? let me see it, then.

Mar. This was thy daughter.

Tit. Why, Marcus, so she is.

Luc. Ah me! this object kills me.

Tit. Faint-hearted boy, arise, and look upon her. —

Speak, my Lavinia, what accursed hand

Hath made thee handless in thy father's sight?

What fool hath added water to the sea,

Or brought a faggot to bright-burning Troy?

My grief was at the height before thou cam'st,

And now, like Nilus, it disdaineth bounds. —

Give me a sword, I'll chop off my hands too,

For they have fought for Rome, and all in vain,

And they have nurs'd this woe in feeding life;

In bootless prayer have they been held up,

And they have serv'd me to effectless use:

Now, all the service I require of them

Is, that the one will help to cut the other. —

'T is well, Lavinia, that thou hast no hands,

For hands to do Rome service are but vain.

Luc. Speak, gentle sister, who hath martyr'd thee?

Mar. O! that delightful engine of her thoughts.²

That blabb'd them with such pleasing eloquence,

Is torn from forth that pretty hollow cage,

Where, like a sweet melodious bird, it sung

Rich varied notes, enchanting old and young.

Luc. O! say thou for her, who hath done this deed?

Mar. O! thus I found her straying in the park

Seeking to hide herself, as doth the deer,

That hath receiv'd some unrecuring wound.

Tit. It was my deer; and he that wounded her

Hath hurt me more, than had he kill'd me dead:

For now I stand as one upon a rock,

Environ'd with a wilderness of sea;

Who marks the waxing tide grow wave by wave,

Expecting ever when some envious surge

Will in his brinish bowels swallow him.

This way to death my wretched sons are gone,

Here stands my other son, a banish'd man,

And here my brother, weeping at my woes;

But that which gives my soul the greatest spurn,

Is dear Lavinia, dearer than my soul. —

Had I but seen thy picture in this plight,

It would have maddened me: what shall I do

Now I behold thy living body so?

Thou hast no hands to wipe away thy tears,

Nor tongue to tell me who hath martyr'd thee:

Thy husband he is dead; and for his death.

Thy brothers are condemn'd, and dead by this.

Look, Marcus: ah! son Lucius, look on her:

When I did name her brothers, then fresh tears

Stood on her cheeks, as doth the honey dew

Upon a gather'd lily almost wither'd.

Mar. Perchance, she weeps because they kill'd her husband;

Perchance, because she knows them innocent.

Tit. If they did kill thy husband, then be joyful,

Because the law hath ta'en revenge on them. —

No, no, they would not do so foul a deed;

Witness the sorrow that their sister makes. —

Gentle Lavinia, let me kiss thy lips,

Or make some sign how I may do thee ease.

Shall thy good uncle, and thy brother Lucius,

And thou, and I, sit round about some fountain,

Looking all downwards, to behold our cheeks

How they are stain'd, as meadows yet not dry,

With miry slime left on them by a flood?

And in the fountain shall we gaze so long,

Till the fresh taste be taken from that clearness,

And made a brine-pit with our bitter tears?

Or shall we cut away our hands, like thine?

Or shall we bite our tongues, and in dumb shows

Pass the remainder of our hateful days?

What shall we do? let us, that have our tongues,

Plot some device of farther misery.

To make us wonder'd at in time to come.

Luc. Sweet father, cease your tears; for at your grief,

See, how my wretched sister sobs and weeps.

Mar. Patience, dear niece. — Good Titus, dry thine eyes.

¹ ruins: in old copies. Hammer made the change. ² So the quarto, 1609: the folio:

Oh! if they did hear,

They would not pity me.

noble: in quarto, 1611, and folio. ⁴ This phrase is also found in Venus and Adonis. ⁵ like: in f. o.

Tit. Ah, Marcus, Marcus! brother, well I wot,
Thy napkin cannot drink a tear of mine,
For thou, poor man, hast drown'd it with thine own.

Luc. Ah, my Lavinia! I will wipe thy cheeks.

Tit. Mark, Marcus, mark! I understand her signs
Had she a tongue to speak, now would she say
That to her brother which I said to thee:
His napkin, with his true tears all bewet,
Can do no service on her sorrowful cheeks.
O! what a sympathy of woes is this;
As far from help as limbo is from bliss.

Enter AARON.

Aar. Titus Andronicus, my lord the emperor
Sends thee this word,—that, if thou love thy sons,
Let Marcus, Lucius, or thyself, old Titus,
Or any one of you, chop off your hand,
And send it to the king: he for the same,
Will send thee hither both thy sons alive,
And that shall be the ransom for their fault.

Tit. O, gracious emperor! O, gentle Aaron!
Did ever raven sing so like a lark
That gives sweet tidings of the sun's uprise?
With all my heart, I'll send my hand to him.
Good Aaron, wilt thou help to chop it off?

Luc. Stay, father! for that noble hand of thine,
That hath thrown down so many enemies,
Shall not be sent: my hand will serve the turn.
My youth can better spare my blood than you,
And therefore mine shall save my brothers' lives.

Mar. Which of your hands hath not defended Rome,
And rear'd aloft the bloody battle-axe,
Writing destruction on the enemy's castle?
O! none of both but are of high desert.
My hand hath been but idle; let it serve
To ransom my two nephews from their death,
Then, have I kept it to a worthy end.

Aar. Nay, come agree, whose hand shall go along,
For fear they die before their pardon come.

Mar. My hand shall go.

Luc. By heaven, it shall not go.

Tit. Sirs, strive no more: such wither'd herbs as these Are meet for plucking up, and therefore mine.

Luc. Sweet father, if I shall be thought thy son.
Let me redeem my brothers both from death.

Mar. And, for our father's sake, and mother's care,
Now let me show a brother's love to thee.

Tit. Agree between you; I will spare my hand.

Luc. Then I'll go fetch an axe.

Mar. Ere I will use it. [Exeunt LUCIUS and MARCUS.]

Tit. Come hither, Aaron; I'll deceive them both:
Lend me thy hand, and I will give thee mine.

Aar. If that be call'd deceit, I will be honest. [Aside.]
And never, whilst I live, deceive men so:—
But I'll deceive you in another sort,
And that you'll say, ere half an hour pass.

[He cuts off Titus's Hand with his Sword.]

Re-enter LUCIUS with an Axe, and MARCUS.

Tit. Now, stay your strife: what shall be is despatch'd.—

Good Aaron, give his majesty my hand:
Tell him, it was a hand that warded him
From thousand dangers. Bid him bury it:
More hath it merited; that let it have.
As for my sons, say, I account of them
As jewels purchas'd at an easy price;
And yet dear too, because I bought mine own.

Aar. I go, Andronicus; and for thy hand,
Look by and by to have thy sons with thee.—
[Aside.] Their heads, I mean.—O, how this villainy

Doth fat me with the very thought of it!

Let fools do good, and fair men call for grace,
Aaron will have his soul black like his face. [Exit]

Tit. O! here I lift this one hand up to heaven,
And bow this feeble ruin to the earth:
If any power pities wretched tears,
To that I call.—What! wilt thou kneel with me?

[TO LAVINIA.]

Do then, dear heart; for heaven shall hear our prayers
Or with our sighs we'll breathe the welkin dim
And stain the sun with fog, as sometime cloude
When they do hug him in their melting bosoms.

Mar. O! brother, speak with possibilities,
And do not break into these deep extremes.

Tit. Is not my sorrow deep, having no bottom?
Then, be my passions bottomless with them.

Mar. But yet let reason govern thy lament.

Tit. If there were reason for these miseries,
Then into limits could I bind my woes.
When heaven doth weep, doth not the earth o'erflow?
If the winds rage, doth not the sea wax mad,
Threat'ning the welkin with his big-swallow face?

And wilt thou have a reason for this coil?
I am the sea; hark, how her sighs do blow!
She is the weeping welkin, I the earth:
Then, must my sea be moved with her sighs;
Then, must my earth with her continual tears
Become a deluge, overflow'd and drown'd.
For why? my bowels cannot hide her woes,
But like a drunkard must I vomit them.
Then, give me leave, for losers will have leave
To ease their stomachs with their bitter tongues.

Enter a Messenger, with Two Heads and a Hand.

Mess. Worthy Andronicus, ill art thou repaid
For that good hand thou sent'st the emperor.
Here are the heads of thy two noble sons:
And here's thy hand, in scorn to thee sent back:
Thy griefs their sports, thy resolution mock'd,
That woe is me to think upon thy woes.
More than remembrance of my father's death. [Exit]

Mar. Now, let hot Aetna cool in Sicily,
And be my heart an ever-burning hell!
These miseries are more than may be borne.
To weep with them that weep doth ease some deal.
But sorrow flouted at is double death.

Luc. Ah, that this sight should make so deep a wound
And yet detested life not shrink thereat!
That ever death should let life bear his name.
Where life hath no more interest but to breathe!

[LAVINIA kisses him]

Mar. Alas, poor heart! that kiss is comfortless.
As frozen water to a starved snake.

Tit. When will this fearful slumber have an end?

Mar. Now, farewell, flattery: die, Andronicus.
Thou dost not slumber: see, thy two sons' heads;
Thy warlike hand: thy mangled daughter here;
Thy other banish'd son, with this dear sight
Struck pale and bloodless; and thy brother, I,
Even like a stony image, cold and numb.

Ah! now no more will I control my griefs:
Rend off thy silver hair, thy other hand
Gnawing with thy teeth; and be this dismal sight
The closing up of our most wretched eyes!
Now is a time to storm; why art thou still?

Tit. Ha, ha, ha!

Mar. Why dost thou laugh? it fits not with this hour.

Tit. Why, I have not another tear to shed:
Besides, this sorrow is an enemy,
And would usurp upon my watery eyes

And make them blind with tributary tears;
Then, which way shall I find revenge's cave?
For these two heads do seem to speak to me,
And threat me, I shall never come to bliss,
Till all these mischiefs be return'd again,
Even in their throats that have committed them.
Come, let me see what task I have to do.—
You heavy people, circle me about,
That I may turn me to each one of you,
And swear unto my soul to right your wrongs.—
The vow is made.—Come, brother, take one head;
And in this hand the other will I bear:
Lavinia, thou shalt be employed in these things¹;
Bear thou my hand, sweet wench, between thy teeth.
As for thee, boy, go, get thee from my sight:
Thou art an exile, and thou must not stay.
Hie to the Goths, and raise an army there;
And, if you love me, as I think 't is true,²
Let's kiss and part, for we have much to do.

[Exit TITUS, MARCUS, and LAVINIA.

Luc. Farewell, Andronicus, my noble father;
The woful'st man that ever liv'd in Rome.
Farewell, proud Rome: till Lucius come again,
He leaves³ his pledges dearer than his life.
Farewell, Lavinia, my noble sister:
O, would thou wert as thou 'fore hast been!
But now nor Lucius, nor Lavinia lives,
But in oblivion, and hateful griefs.
If Lucius live, he will requite your wrongs,
And make proud Saturnine, and his empress,
Beg at the gates, like Tarquin and his queen.
Now will I to the Goths, and raise a power,
To be reveng'd on Rome and Saturnine.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—A Room in TITUS'S HOUSE. A Banquet set out.

Enter TITUS, MARCUS, LAVINIA, and young LUCIUS, a Boy.

Tit. So, so, now sit; and look, you eat no more
Than will preserve just so much strength in us
As will revenge these bitter woes of ours.
Marcus, unknot that sorrow-wreathen knot:
Thy niece and I, poor creatures, want our hands,
And cannot passionate our tenfold grief
With folded arms. This poor right hand of mine
Is left to tyrannize upon my breast:
And⁴ when my heart, all mad with misery,
Beats in this hollow prison of my flesh,
Then, thus I thump it down.—
Thou map of woe, that thus dost talk in signs.

[To LAVINIA.

When thy poor heart beats with outrageous beating
Thou canst not strike it thus to make it still.
Wound it with sighing, girl, kill it with groans;
Or get some little knife between thy teeth,
And just against thy heart make thou a hole,
That all the tears that thy poor eyes let fall,
May run into that sink, and soaking in,
Drown the lamenting fool in sea-salt tears.

Mar. Fie, brother, fie! teach her not thus to lay
Such violent hands upon her tender life.

Tit. How now! has sorrow made thee dote already?
Why, Marcus, no man should be mad but I.

What violent hands can she lay on her life?
Ah! wherefore dost thou urge the name of hands?
To bid Æneas tell the tale twice o'er,
How Troy was burnt, and he made miserable?
O! handle not the theme, to talk of hands,
Lest we remember still, that we have none.

Fie, fie! how frantically I square my talk!
As if we should forget we had no hands,
If Marcus did not name the word of hands.—
Come, let's fall to; and, gentle girl, eat this.—
Here is no drink. Hark, Marcus, what she says;
I can interpret all her martyr'd signs:

She says, she drinks no other drink but tears,
Brew'd with her sorrow, mesh'd upon her cheeks.—
Speechless complainer, I will learn thy thought;
In thy dumb action will I be as perfect,

As begging hermits in their holy prayers:
Thou shalt not sigh, nor hold thy stumps to heaven,
Nor wink, nor nod, nor kneel, nor make a sign,
But I of these will wrest an alphabet,
And by still practice learn to know thy meaning.

Boy. Good grandsire, leave these bitter deep lamentations:

Make my aunt merry with some pleasing tale.

Mar. Alas! the tender boy, in passion mov'd,
Doth weep to see his grandsire's heaviness.

Tit. Peace, tender sapling; thou art made of tears,
And tears will quickly melt thy life away.—

[MARCUS strikes the Dish with a Knife.

What dost thou strike at, Marcus, with thy knife?

Mar. At that that I have kill'd, my lord—a fly.

Tit. Out on thee, murderer! thou kill'st my heart:

Mine eyes are cloy'd with view of tyranny:

A deed of death, done on the innocent,
Becomes not Titus's brother. Get thee gone;
I see, thou art not for my company.

Mar. Alas! my lord, I have but kill'd a fly.

Tit. But how, if that fly had a father and mother,
How would he hang his slender gilded wings,
And buzz lamenting doings in the air?
Poor harmless fly!

That with his pretty buzzing melody,
Came here to make us merry; and thou hast kill'd him

Mar. Pardon me, sir: it was a black ill-favour'd fly
Like to the empress's Moor; therefore, I kill'd him.

Tit. O, O, O!

Then pardon me for reprehending thee,
For thou hast done a charitable deed.
Give me thy knife, I will insult on him;
Flattering myself, as if it were the Moor
Come hither purposely to poison me.—

ere's for thyself, and that's for Támara. Ah, sirrah!—
I think we are not brought so low,
But that between us we can kill a fly,
That comes in likeness of a coal-black Moor.

Mar. Alas, poor man! grief has so wrought on him
He takes false shadows for true substances.

Tit. Come, take away.—Lavinia, go with me:

I'll to thy closet; and go read with thee

Mad stories chanced in the times of old.—

Come, boy, and go with me: thy sight is young,

And thou shalt read, when mine begins to dazzle.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Same. Before TITUS's House.

Enter TITUS and MARCUS. Then enter young LUCIUS, LAVINIA running after him.Boy. Help, grandsire, help! my aunt Lavinia Follows me every where, I know not why.—Good uncle Marcus, see how swift she comes.—
Alas! sweet aunt, I know not what you mean.Mar. Stand by me, Lucius: do not fear thine aunt.Tit. She loves thee, boy, too well to do thee harm.Boy. Ay, when my father was in Rome, she did.Mar. What means my niece Lavinia by these signs?Tit. Fear her not, Lucius: somewhat doth she mean.

See, Lucius, see, how much she makes of thee:

Somewhat whither she have thee go with her.

Ah, boy! Cornelia never with more care

Read to her sons, than she hath read to thee,

Sweet poetry, and Tully's Orator.

Canst thou not guess wherefore she plies thee thus?

Boy. My lord, I know not, I, nor can I guess,

Unless some fit, or frenzy do possess her;

For I have heard my grandsire say full oft,

Extremity of griefs would make men mad;

And I have read that Hecuba of Troy

Ran mad through sorrow: that made me to fear;

Although, my lord, I know, my noble aunt

Loves me as dear as e'er my mother did,

And would not, but in fury, fright my youth;

Which made me down to throw my books, and fly,

Causeless, perhaps.—But pardon me, sweet aunt;

And, madam, if my uncle Marcus go,

I will most willingly attend your ladyship.

Mar. Lucius, I will.[LAVINIA turns over the books which LUCIUS had let fall.]Tit. How now, Lavinia!—Marcus, what means this?

Some book there is that she desires to see.—

Which is it, girl, of these?—Open them, boy.—

But thou art deeper read, and better skill'd;

Come, and take choice of all my library,

And so beguile thy sorrow, till the heavens

Reveal the damn'd contriver of this deed.—

What book?

Why lifts she up her arms in sequence thus?

Mar. I think, she means, that there was more than one

Confederate in the fact.—Ay, more there was;

Or else to heaven she heaves them to revenge.

Tit. Lucius, what book is that she tosseth so?Boy. Grandsire, 't is Ovid's Metamorphosis:

My mother gave 't me.

Mar. For love of her that's gone,

Perhaps, she cull'd it from among the rest.

Tit. Soft! see how busily she turns the leaves!

Help her: what would she find?—Lavinia, shall I read?

This 's the tragic tale of Philomel,

And treats of Tereus' treason, and his rape;

And rape, I fear, was root of thine annoy.

Mar. See, brother, see! note, how she quotes the leaves.Tit. Lavinia, wert thou thus surpris'd, sweet girl,

Ravish'd and wrong'd, as Philomela was,

Ferc'd in the ruthless, vast, and gloomy woods?—

See, see!—

Ay, such a place there is, where we did hunt,

(O, had we never, never hunted there!)

Pattern'd by that the poet here describes,

By nature made for murders, and for rapes

Mar. O! why should nature build so foul a den,

Unless the gods delight in tragedies?

Tit. Give signs, sweet girl, for here are none but friends,

What Roman lord it was durst do the deed:

Or slunk not Saturnine, as Tarquin erst,

That left the camp to sin in Lucrece' bed?

Mar. Sit down, sweet niece:—brother, sit down to me.—

Apollo, Pallas, Jove, or Mereury,

Inspire me, that I may this treason find!—

My lord, look here;—look here, Lavinia:

This sandy plot is plain; guide, if thou canst,

This after me, where I have writ my name

[He writes his Name with his Staff, and guides it with Feet and Mouth.]

Without the help of any hand at all.

Curs'd be the heart, that fore'd us to this shift!—

Write thou, good niece; and here display, at last,

What God will have discover'd for revenge.

Heaven guide thy pen to print thy sorrows plain,

That we may know the traitors, and the truth!

[She takes the Staff in her mouth, and guides it with her stumps, and writes.]Tit. O! do you read, my lord, what she hath writ?Stuprum—Chiron—Demetrius.Mar. What, what!—the lustful sons of Tamora

Performers of this heinous, bloody deed?

Tit. Magni dominator poli,

Tum lentus audis scelera? tam lentus viles?

Mar. O! calm thee, gentle lord, although, I know,

There is enough written upon this earth,

To stir a mutiny in the mildest thoughts,

And arm the minds of infants to exclaims.

My lord, kneel down with me; Lavinia, kneel,

And kneel, sweet boy, the Roman Hector's hope,

And swear with me,—as with the woful feere,¹

And father, of that chaste dishonour'd dame,

Lord Junius Brutus swear for Lucrece' rape,—

That we will prosecute, by good advice,

Mortal revenge upon these traitorous Goths.

And see their blood, or die with this reproach.

[They kneel.]Tit. 'T is sure enough, and you knew how to do it;

But if you hurt these bear-whelps, then beware:

The dam will wake, and if she wind you once,

She's with the lion deeply still in league.

And lulls him whilst she playeth on her back;

And when he sleeps will she do what she list.

You're a young huntsman: Marcus, let it alone;

And, come, I will go get a leaf of brass,

And with a gad of steel will write these words,

And lay it by. The angry northern wind

Will blow these sands, like Sybil's leaves, abroad,

And where's your lesson then?—Boy, what say you?Boy. I say, my lord, that if I were a man,

Their mother's bed-chamber should not be safe

For these bad bondmen to the yoke of Rome.

Mar. Ay, that's my boy! thy father hath full ear

For his ungrateful country done the like.

Boy. And, uncle, so will I, an if I live.Tit. Come, go with me into mine armoury,¹ No in the quartos ² Not in f. a ³ Companion. ⁴ Not in f. a.

Lucius, I'll fit thee: and withal, my boy
 Shall carry from me to the empress' sons
 Presents, that I intend to send them both.
 Come, come; I thou'lt do thy message, wilt thou not?
Boy. Ay, with my dagger in their bosoms, grandsire.
Tit. No, boy, not so: I'll teach another course.
Lavinia, come.—Marcus, look to my house:
 Lucius and I'll go brave it at the court:
 Ay, marry, will we, sir: and we'll be waited on.

[Exit TITUS, LAVINIA, and Boy.]

Mar. O heavens! can you hear a good man groan,
 And not relent, or not compassion him?
Marcus, attend him in his ecstasy.
 That hath more scars of sorrow in his heart,
 Than for-men's marks upon his batter'd shield;
 But yet so just, that he will not revenge.—
 Revenge, ye heavens, for old Andronicus! [Exit.]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter AARON, DEMETRIUS, and CHIRON, at one Door;
 at another door, young LUCIUS, and an Attendant, with a Bundle of Weapons, and Verses writt upon them.

Chi. Demetrius, here's the son of Lucius:

He hath some message to deliver us.

Aar. Ay, some mad message from his mad grandfather.

Boy. My lords, with all the humbleness I may,
 I greet your honours from Andronicus:—

[Aside.] And pray the Roman gods, confound you both.

Dem. Gramercy, lovely Lucius. What's the news?

Boy. [Aside.] That you are both deceiver'd, that's the news.¹

For villains mark'd with rape. [To them.] May it please
 you,

My grandsire, well advis'd, hath sent by me

The goodliest weapons of his armoury.

To gratify your honourable youth.

The hope of Rome: for so he bade me say,

And so I do, and with his gifts present

Your lordships, that whenever you have need,

You may be armed and appointed well.

And so I leave you both, [Aside.] like bloody villains.

[Exit Boy and Attendant.]

Dem. What's here? A scroll, and written round
 Let's see; [about.]

Integer vitæ, scelerisque purus.

Non ego Mauri jaculis, nec arcu.

Chi. O! 'T is a verse in Horace. I know it well:
 I read it in the grammar long ago.

Aar. Ay, just!—a verse in Horace:—right, you have it.

[Aside.] Now, what a thing it is to be an ass!

Here's no sound jest! the old man hath found their guilt,

And sends them weapons wrapp'd about with lines,

That wound, beyond their feeling, to the quick:

But were our witty empress well a-foot,

She would applaud Andronicus' conceit:

But let her rest in her unrest awhile.—

[To them.] And now, young lords, was't not a happy star

Led us to Rome, strangers, and more than so,

Captives, to be advanced to this height?

It did me good, before the palace gate,

To brave the tribune in his brother's hearing.

Dem. But me more good, to see so great a lord

Basely insinuate, and send us gifts.

Aar. Hath he not reason, lord Demetrius?

Did you not use his daughter very friendly?

Dem. I would, we had a thousand Roman dames

At such a bay, by turn to serve our lust.

Chi. A charitable wish, and full of love.

Aar. Here lacks but your mother for to say amen.

Chi. And that would she for twenty thousand more.

Dem. Come, let us go, and pray to all the gods

For our beloved mother in her pains.

Aar. Pray to the devils; the gods have given us over. [Trumpets sound]

Dem. Why do the emperor's trumpets flourish thus?

Chi. Belike, for joy the emperor hath a son.

Dem. Soft! who comes here?

Enter a Nurse, hiding a Black-and-moor Child in her Arms.

Nur. Good morrow, lords. O! tell me, did you see
 Aaron the Moor.

Aar. Well, more, or less, or ne'er a whit at all,

Here Aaron is; and what with Aaron now?

Nur. O, gentle Aaron, we are all undone!

Now help, or woe betide thee evermore.

Aar. Why, what a caterwauling dost thou keep.

What dost thou wrap and fumble in thine arms?

Nur. O! that which I would hide from heaven's eye,

Our empress' shame, and stately Rome's disgrace.—

She is deliver'd, lords; she is deliver'd.

Aar. To whom?

Nur. I mean she's brought to bed.

Aar. Well, God

Give her good rest! What hath he sent her?

Nur. A devil.

Aar. Why, then she's the devil's dam: a joyful issue.

Nur. A joyless, dismal, black, and sorrowful issue.

Here is the babe, as loathsome as a toad [Showing it.]

Amongst the fairest burdens² of our climate.

The empress sends it thee, thy stamp, thy seal,

And bids thee christen it with thy dagger's point.

Aar. Zounds! ye whore, is black so base a hue?—

Sweet blowse, you are a beauteous blossom, sure.

Dem. Villain, what hast thou done?

Aar. That which thou canst not undo.

Chi. Thou hast undone our mother.

Aar. Villain, I have done thy mother.³

Dem. And therein, hellish dog, thou hast undone.

Woe to her chance, and damn'd her loathed choice!

Accurs'd the offspring of so foul a fiend!

Chi. It shall not live.

Aar. It shall not die.

Nur. Aaron, it must: the mother wills it so.

Aar. What! must it, nurse? then let no man but I,
 Do execution on my flesh and blood.

Dem. I'll broach the tadpole on my rapier's point.

Nurse. Give it me: my sword shall soon despatch it.

Aar. Sooner this sword shall plow thy bowels up.

[Takes the Child from the Nurse, and draws]

Stay, murderous villains! will you kill your brother?

Now, by the burning tapers of the sky,

That shone so brightly when this boy was got,

He dies upon my scimitar's sharp point.

That touches this my first-born son and heir.

I tell you, younglings, not Eneladus.

With all his threatening band of Typhon's brood,

Nor great Aleides, nor the god of war,

Shall seize this prey out of his father's hands.

What, what, ye sanguine, shallow-hearted boys!

Ye white-limb'd⁴ walls! ye alehouse painted signs!

Coal-black is better than another hue,

In that it seems to bear another hue;

For all the water in the ocean

Can never turn the swan's black legs to white,

Although she lave them hourly in the flood.

Tell the empress from me, I am a man [To the Nurse.¹
To keep mine own; excuse it how she can.

Dem. Wilt thou betray thy noble mistress thus?

Aur. My mistress is my mistress; this, myself;

The vigour, and the picture of my youth:

This, before all the world, do I prefer,

This, maugre all the world, will I keep safe,

Or some of you shall smoke for it in Rome.

Dem. By this our mother is for ever shamed.

Chi. Rome will despise her for this foul escape.

Nur. The emperor in his rage will doom her death.

Chi. I blush to think upon this ignomy.

Aur. Why, there's the privilege your beauty bears.

Fie! treacherous hue, that will betray with blushing

The close enacts and counsels of the heart:

Here's a young lad fram'd of another lea².

Look, how the black slave smiles upon the father,

As who should say, "Old lad. I am thine own."

He is your brother, lords, sensibly fed

Of that self-blood that first gave life to you;

And, from that womb, where you imprison'd were,

He is enfranchis'd and come to light:

Nay, he is your brother by the surer side,

Although my seal be stamped in his face.

Nur. Aaron, what shall I say unto the empress?

Dem. Advise thee, Aaron, what is to be done,

And we will all subscribe to thy advice:

Save thou the child, so we may all be safe.

Aur. Then sit we down, and let us all consult.

My son and I will have the wind of you:

Keep there; now talk at pleasure of your safety.

[They sit at a distance.

Dem. How many women saw this child of his?

Aur. Why, so, brave lords: when we all join in league,

I am a lamb; but if you brave the Moor,

The chafed boar, the mountain lioness,

The ocean swells not so as Aaron storms.—

But say again, how many saw the child?

Nur. Cornelia the midwife, and myself:

And no one else, but the deliver'd empress.

Aur. The empress, the midwife, and yourself:

Two may keep counsel, when the third's away.

Go to the empress; tell her, this I said.—

[Stabbing her: she screams.

Weke, weke!—so cries a pig, prepared to the spit.

Dem. What mean'st thou, Aaron? Wherefore didst

Aur. O lord! sir, 't is a deed of policy. [thou this?

Shall she live to betray this guilt of ours,

A long-tongu'd babbling gossip? no, lords, no.

And now be it known to you my full intent.

Not far hence Muli lives,³ my countryman;

His wife but yesternight was brought to bed.

His child is like to her, fair as you are;

Go pack⁴ with him, and give the mother gold,

And tell them both the circumstance of all;

And how by this their child shall be advanc'd

And be receiv'd for the emperor's heir,

And substituted in the place of mine,

To calm this tempest whirling in the court,

And let the emperor dandle him for his own.

Hark ye, lords; ye see, I have given her physic.

[Pointing to the Nurse.

And you must needs bestow her funeral:

The fields are near, and you are gallant grooms.

This done, see that you make no long delays,⁵

But send the midwife presently to me:

The midwife, and the nurse, well made away,

Then, let the ladies tattle what they may.

Chi. Aaron, I see, thou wilt not trust the air
With secrets.

Dem. For this care of Tamora,
Herself and hers are highly bound to thee.

[Exeunt DEM. and CHI. bearing off the Nurse

Aur. Now to the Goths, as swift as swallow flies;

There to dispose this treasure in mine arms,

And secretly to greet the empress' friends.—

Come on, thou thick-lipp'd slave; I'll bear you hence

For it is you that puts us to our shifts:

I'll make you thrive on berries and on roots,

And feed on curds and whey, and suck the goat,

And cabin in a cave; and bring you up

To be a warrior, and command a camp.

[Exit with the child.

SCENE III.—The Same. A public Place.

Enter TITUS, bearing Arrows, with Letters on the ends of them; with him MARCUS, young LUCIUS, and other Gentlemen, with Bows.

Tit. Come, Marcus, come.—Kinsmen, this is the way.—

Sir boy, now let me see your archery:

Look ye draw home enough, and 't is there straight.

Terras Astræa reliquit:

Be you remember'd, Marcus, she's gone, she's fled.

Sirs, take you to your tools. You, cousins, shall Go sound the ocean, and cast your nets;

Happily you may catch⁶ her in the sea,

Yet there's as little justice as at land.—

No; Publius and Sempromius, you must do it;

'T is you must dig with mattock, and with spade,

And pierce the inmost centre of the earth:

Then, when you come to Pluto's region,

I pray you, deliver him this petition;

Tell him, it is for justice, and for aid,

And that it comes from old Andronicus,

Shaken with sorrows in ungrateful Rome.—

Ah, Rome!—Well, well; I made thee miserable,

What time I threw the people's suffrages

On him that thus doth tyrannize o'er me.—

Go, get you gone; and pray be careful all,

And leave you not a man of war unsearch'd:

This wicked emperor may have shipp'd her hence,

And, kinsmen, then we may go pipe for justice.

Mar. O, Publius! is not this a heavy case,

To see thy noble uncle thus distract?

Pub. Therefore, my lord, it highly us concerns,

By day and night 't attend him carefully;

And feed his humour kindly as we may,

Till time beget some careful remedy.

Mar. Kinsmen, his sorrows are past remedy.

Join with the Goths; and with revengeful war

Take wreak on Rome for this ingratitude,

And vengeance on the traitor Saturnine.

Tit. Publius, how now! how now, my masters! What Have you met with her?

Pub. No, my good lord; but Pluto sends you word,

If you will have revenge from hell, you shall.

Marry, for Justice, she is so employ'd,

He thinks with Jove in Heaven, or somewhere else,

So that perforce you must needs stay a time.

Tit. He doth me wrong to feed me with delays.

I'll dive into the burning lake below.

And pull her out of Acheron by the heels.—

Marcus, we are but shrubs, no cedars we;

No big-bon'd men, fram'd of the Cyclops' size,

But metal, Marcus, steel to the very back;

And, sith no justice is in earth nor hell,
We will solicit heaven, and move the gods
To send down justice for to wreak our wrongs.
Come, to this gear. You are a good archer, Marcus.

[He gives them the Arrows.]

Ad Jovem, that's for you :—here, ad Apollinem :—

Ad Martem, that's for myself :—

Here, boy, to Pallas :—here, to Mercury .

To Saturn, Caius, not to Saturnine ;

You were as good to shoot against the wind.—

To it, boy : Marcus, loose when I bid.

Of my word, I have written to effect ;

There's not a god left unsolicited.

Mar. Kinsmen, shoot all your shafts into the court :

We will afflict the emperor in his pride.

Tit. Now, masters, draw. [They shoot.] O, well said !
Lucius !

Good boy, in Virgo's lap : give it Pallas.

Mar. My lord, I aim'd a mile beyond the moon :

Your letter is with Jupiter by this.

Tit. Ha ! Publius, Publius, what hast thou done ?

See, see ! thou hast shot off one of Taurus' horns.

Mar. This was the sport, my lord : when Publius shot,

The bull, being gall'd, gave Aries such a knock

That down fell both the ram's horns in the court ;

And who should find them but the empress' villain.

She laugh'd, and told the Moor, he should not choose

But give them to his master for a present.

Tit. Why, there it goes ; God give his lordship joy.

Enter the Clown, with a Basket and Two Pigeons.

News ! news from heaven ! Marcus, the post is come.

Sirrah, what tidings ? have you any letters ?

Shall I have justice ? what says Jupiter ?

Clo. Ho ! the gibbet-maker ? he says, that he hath taken them down again, for the man must not be hanged till the next week.

Tit. But what says Jupiter, I ask thee ?

Clo. Alas, sir ! I know not Jupiter : I never drank with him in all my life.

Tit. Why, villain, art not thou the carrier ?

Clo. Ay, of my pigeons, sir ; nothing else.

Tit. Why, didst thou not come from heaven ?

Clo. From heaven ? alas, sir ! I never came there.
God forbid, I should be so bold to press to heaven in my young days. Why, I am going with my pigeons to the tribunal plebs, to take up a matter of brawl betwixt my uncle and one of the imperial's men.

Mar. Why, sir, that is as fit as can be, to serve for your oration ; and let him deliver the pigeons to the emperor from you.

Tit. Tell me, can you deliver an oration to the emperor with a grace ?

Clo. Nay, truly, sir, I could never say grace in all my life.

Tit. Sirrah, come hither. Make no more ado,

But give your pigeons to the emperor ;

By me thou shalt have justice at his hands.

Hold, hold : mean while, here's money for thy charges.
Give me pen and ink.—

Sirrah, can you with a grace deliver a supplication ?

Clo. Ay, sir.

Tit. Then here is a supplication for you. And when you come to him, at the first approach you must kneel ;
then kiss his foot ; then deliver up your pigeons, and then look for your reward. I'll be at hand, sir : see you do it bravely.

Clo. I warrant you, sir ; let me alone.

Tit. Sirrah, hast thou a knife ? Come, let me see it.—

Here, Marcus, fold it in the oration,
For thou hast made it like an humble suppliant.—

And when thou hast given it to the emperor,
Knock at my door, and tell me what he says.

Clo. God be with you, sir : I will.

Tit. Come, Marcus, let us go.—Publius, follow me
[Exeunt]

SCENE IV.—The Same. Before the Palace.

Enter SATURNINUS, TAMORA, DEMETRIUS, CHIRON, Lords and others : SATURNINUS with the arrows in his hand, that had been shot.

Sat. Why, lords, what wrongs are these ? Was ever seen

An emperor of Rome thus overborne,
Troubled, confronted thus : and, for the extent
Of equal justice, us'd in such contempt ?

My lords, you know, the mighty gods no less,¹

(However these disturbers of our peace

Buz in the people's ears) there nought hath pass'd,

But even with law, against the willful sons

Of old Andronicus. And what an if

His sorrows have so overwhelm'd his wits,

Shall we be thus afflicted in his freaks,

His fits, his frenzy, and his bitterness ?

And now he writes to heaven for his redress :

See, here's to Jove, and this to Mercury ;

This to Apollo ; this to the god of war ;

Sweet scrolls to fly about the streets of Rome !

What's this but libelling against the state,

And blazoning our injustice every where ?

A goodly humour, is it not, my lords ?

As who would say, in Rome no justice were.

But if I live, his feigned ecstasies

Shall be no shelter to these outrages ;

But he and his shall know, that justice lives

In Saturninus' health : whom, if she sleep,

He'll so awake, as she in fury shall

Cut off the proud'st conspirator that lives. [Takes his seat.]

Tam. My gracious lord, my lovely Saturnine,

Lord of my life, commander of my thoughts,

Calm thee, and bear the faults of Titus' age,

Th' effects of sorrow for his valiant sons,

Whose loss hath pierc'd him deep, and scarr'd his heart

And rather comfort his distressed plight,

Than prosecute the meanest, or the best,

For these contempt. [Aside.] Why, thus it shall become High-witted Tamora to gloze with all :

But, Titus, I have touch'd thee to the quick,

The life-blood on't. If Aaron now be wise,

Then is all safe, the anchor's in the port.—

Enter Clown.

How now, good fellow ! wouldst thou speak with us ?

Clo. Yea, forsooth, an your mistresship be imperial.

Tam. Empress I am, but yonder sits the emperor.

Clo. 'Tis he.—God, and Saint Stephen,

Give you good even.

I have brought you a letter,

And a couple of pigeons, for want of better.

SATURNINUS reads the Letter.

Sat. Go, take him away, and hang him presently.

Clo. How much money must I have ?

Tam. Come, sirrah ; you must be hang'd.

Clo. Hang'd ! By'r lady, then, friend,

I have brought my neck to a fair end. [Exit, guarded]

Sat. Despicable and intolerable wrongs !

Shall I endure this monstrous villainy ?

I know from whence this same device proceeds.

May this be borne ?—as if his traitorous sons

¹ Well done ² your in quarto, 1611, and folio. ³ as do the mighty gods : in f. e. ⁴ Not in f. e.

That died by law for murder of our brother,
Have by my means been butcher'd wrongfully.—
Go, drag the villain hither by the hair :
Nor age, nor honour, shall have privilege.—
For this proud mock, I'll be thy slaughter-man ;
Sly frantic wretch, that holp'st to make me great,
In hope thyself should govern Rome and me.

Enter ÆMILIUS.

What news with thee, Æmilius ?

Æmil. Arm, my lords ! Rome never had more cause.
The Goths have gather'd head, and with a power
Of high-resolved men, bent to the spoil,
Thy hither march amain, under conduct
Of Lucius, son to old Andronicus ;
Who threatens, in course of this revenge, to do
As much as ever Coriolanus did.

Sat. Is warlike Lucius general of the Goths ?
These tidings nip me ; and I hang the head
As flowers with frost, or grass beat down with storms.
Ay, now begin our sorrows to approach.
'Tis he the common people love so much :
Myself hath very often heard them say,
When I have walked like a private man,
That Lucius' banishment was wrongfully,
And wish'd that Lucius were their emperor.

Tom. Why should you fear ? is not our city strong ?

Sat. Ay, but the citizens favour Lucius,
And will revolt from me to succeed him.

Tam. King, be thy thoughts imperious, like thy name.
Is the sun dimm'd, that gnats do fly in 's flame ?
The eagle suffers little birds to sing,
And is not careful what they mean thereby ;

Knowing that with the shadow of his wing,
He can at pleasure stint their melody :
Even so may'st thou the giddy men of Rome.
Then cheer thy spirit ; for know, thou emperor,
I will enchant the old Andronicus,
With words more sweet, and yet more dangerous,
Than baits to fish, or honey-stalks to sheep ;
When as the one is wounded with the bak,
The other rotted with delicious food.

Sat. But he will not entreat his son for us.

Tam. If Tamora entreat him, then he will ;
For I can smooth, and fill his aged ear
With golden promises, that were his heart
Almost impregnable, his old ears deaf,
Yet should both ear and heart obey my tongue.—
Go thou before ; be our ambassador : [To ÆMILIUS
Say that the emperor requests a parley

Of warlike Lucius, and appoint the meeting,
Even at his father's house, the old Andronicus.

Sat. Æmilius, do this message honourably :
And if he stand on hostage for his safety,
Bid him demand what pledge will please him best.

Æmil. Your bidding shall I do effectually.

[Exit ÆMILIUS

Tam. Now will I to that old Andronicus,
And temper him with all the art I have,
To pluck proud Lucius from the warlike Goths.
And now, sweet emperor, be blithe again,
And bury all thy fear in my devices.

Sat. Then go successfully, and plead 'fore him.

[Exeunt

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Plains near Rome.

Enter Lucius, and an Army of Goths, with Drum and Colours.

Luc. Approved warriors, and my faithful friends,
I have received letters from great Rome,
Which signify what hate they bear their emperor,
And how desirous of our sight they are.
Therefore, great lords, be, as your titles witness,
Imperious, and impatient of your wrongs ;
And, wherein Rome hath done you any scath,
Let him make treble satisfaction.

1 Goth. Brave slip, sprung from the great Andronicus,
Whose name was once our terror, now our comfort ;
Whose high exploits, and honourable deeds,
Ingrateful Rome requites with foul contempt.
Be bold in us : we'll follow where thou lead'st,
Like stinging bees in hottest summer's day,
Led by their master to the flower'd fields ;
And be aveng'd on cursed Tamora.

Goths. And, as he saith, so say we all with him.

Luc. I humbly thank him, and I thank you all.

But who comes here, led by a lusty Goth ?

Enter a Goth, leading AARON, with his Child in his Arms.

2 Goth. Renowned Lucius, from our troops I stray'd,
To gaze upon a ruinous monastery ;
And as I earnestly did fix mine eye
Upon the wasted building, suddenly
I heard a child cry underneath a wall.

I made unto the noise ; when soon I heard
The crying babe controll'd with this discourse :—

"Peace, tawny slave ; half me, and half thy dam !

Did not thy hue bewray whose brat thou art,
Had nature lent thee but thy mother's look,
Villain, thou mightst have been an emperor :
But where the bull and cow are both milk-white,
They never do beget a coal-black calf.
Peace, villain, peace !"—even thus he rates the babe,—
"For I must bear thee to a trusty Goth ;
Who, when he knows thou art the empress' babe,
Will hold thee dearly for thy mother's sake."
With this, my weapon drawn, I rush'd upon him,
Surpris'd him suddenly, and brought him hither,
To use as you think needful of the man.

Luc. O worthy Goth ! this is the incarnate devil,
That robb'd Andronicus of his good hand :
This is the pearl that pleas'd your empress' eye,
And here 's the base fruit of his burning lust.—
Say, wall-cy'd slave, whither wouldst thou convey
This growing image of thy fiend-like face ?
Why dost not speak ? What ! deaf ? no, not a word !
A halter, soldiers ! hang him on this tree,
And by his side his fruit of bastardy.

Aar. Touch not the boy : he is of royal blood

Luc. Too like the sire for ever being good.—
First, hang the child, that he may see it sprawl ;
A sight to vex the father's soul withal.

Get me a ladder ! [A Ladder brought

Aar. Lucius, save the child ;
And bear it from me to the empress.
If thou do this, I'll show thee wondrous things,
That highly may advantage thee to hear :
If thou wilt not, befall what may befall,
I'll speak no more ; but vengeance rot you all !

* In old copies this line is given to AARON Theobald made the change.

Luc. Say on: and if it please me which thou speak'st,
Thy child shall live, and I will see it nourish'd.

Aar. An if it please thee? why, assure thee, Lucius,
[Speaking on the Ladder.]

'T will vex thy soul to hear what I shall speak:
For I must talk of murders, rapes, and massacres,
Acts of black night, abominable deeds,
Complots of mischief, treason, villainies
Ruthful to hear, despiteously² perform'd:
And this shall all be buried in my death,
Unless thou swear to me, my child shall live.

Luc. Tell on thy mind: I say, thy child shall live.

Aar. Swear that he shall, and then I will begin.

Luc. Whom should I swear by? thou believ'st no god:
That granted, how canst thou believe an oath?

Aar. What if I do not, as, indeed, I do not;
Yet, for I know thou art religious,
And hast a thing within thee, called conscience,
With twenty popish tricks and ceremonies,
Which I have seen thee careful to observe,
Therefore I urge thy oath—for that, I know,
An idiot holds his bauble for a god,
And keeps the oath which by that god he swears,
To that I'll urge him.—Therefore, thou shalt vow
By that same god, what god soe'er it be,
That thou ador'st and hast in reverence,
To save my boy, to nourish, and bring him up,
Or else I will discover nought to thee.

Luc. Even by my god I swear to thee, I will.

Aar. First, know thou, I begot him on the empress.

Luc. O most insatiate, luxurious woman!

Aar. Tut! Lucius, this was but a deed of charity,
To that which thou shalt hear of me anon.

'T was her two sons that murder'd Bassianus:
They cut thy sister's tongue, and ravish'd her,
Cut her hands off, and trimm'd her as thou saw'st.

Luc. O, detestable villain! call'st thou that trimming?

Aar. Why, she was wash'd, and cut, and trimm'd; and 't was

Trim sport for them that had the doing of it.

Luc. O, barbarous, beastly villains, like thyself!

Aar. Indeed, I was thy tutor to instruct them.

That codding spirit had they from their mother,
As sure a card as ever won the set:

That bloody mind, I think, they learn'd of me,
As true a dog as ever fought at head.

Well, let my deeds be witness of my worth.

I train'd thy brethren to that guileful hole,

Where the dead corpse of Bassianus lay;

I wrote the letter that thy father found,

And hid the gold, within the letter mentioned,

Confederate with the queen, and her two sons;

And what not done, that thou hast cause to rue,

Wherein I had no stroke of mischief in it?

I play'd the cheater for thy father's hand,

And, when I had it, drew myself apart.

And almost broke my heart with extreme laughter.

I pry'd me through the crevice of a wall,

When for his hand, he had his two sons' heads;

Beheld his tears, and laugh'd so heartily,

That both mine eyes were rainy like to his:

And when I told the empress of this sport,

She swooned almost at my pleasing tale,

And for my tidings gave me twenty kisses.

Goth. What! canst thou say all this, and never blush?

Aar. Ay, like a black dog, as the saying is.

Luc. Art thou not sorry for these heinous deeds?

Aar. Ay, that I had not done a thousand more.

Even now I curse the day, (and yet, I think,

Few come within the compass of my curse)

Wherein I did not some notorious ill:

As kill a man, or else devise his death;

Ravish a maid, or plot the way to do it;

Accuse some innocent, and forswear myself;

Set deadly enmity between two friends:

Make poor men's cattle oftentimes break their necks

Set fire on barns and hay-stacks in the night,

And bid the owners quench them with their tears.

Oft have I digg'd up dead men from their graves,

And set them upright at their dear friends' doors,

Even when their sorrows almost were forgot;

And on their skins, as on the bark of trees,

Have with my knife carved in Roman letters,

"Let not your sorrow die, though I am dead."

Tut! I have done a thousand dreadful things,

As willingly as one would kill a fly;

And nothing grieves me heartily indeed,

But that I cannot do ten thousand more.

Luc. Bring down the devil, for he must not die

So sweet a death as hanging, presently.

Aar. If there be devils, would I were a devil,

To live and burn in everlasting fire,

So I might have your company in hell,

But to torment you with my bitter tongue!

Luc. Sirs, stop his mouth, and let him speak no more.

Enter a Goth.

Goth. My lord, there is a messenger from Rome,
Desires to be admitted to your presence.

Luc. Let him come near.

Enter ÆMILIUS.

Welcome, Æmilius! what's the news from Rome?

Æmil. Lord Lucius, and you princes of the Goths,

The Roman emperor greets you all by me:

And, for he understands you are in arms,

He craves a parley at your father's house,

Willing you to demand your hostages,

And they shall be immediately deliver'd.

1 Goth. What says our general?

Luc. Æmilius, let the emperor give his pledges

Unto my father and my uncle Marcus,

And we will come.—March! away! * [Exeunt

SCENE II.—Rome. Before Titus's House.

Enter TAMORA, DEMETRIUS, and CHIRON, disguised³ as Revenge, Rapine, and Murder.

Tam. Thus, in this strange and sad habiliment,

I will encounter with Andronicus,

And say, I am Revenge, sent from below,

To join with him, and right his heinous wrongs.—

Kneel at his study, where, they say, he keeps,

To ruminate strange plots of dire revenge:

Tell him, Revenge is come to join with him,

And work confusion on his enemies. [They kneel

Titus opens his study door above.

Tit. Who doth molest my contemplation?

Is it your trick to make me ope the door,

That so my sad decrees may fly away,

And all my study be to no effect?

You are deceiv'd; for what I mean to do,

See here, in bloody lines I have set down,

[Showing a Paper]
And what is written shall be executed.

Tam. Old⁴ Titus, I am come to talk with thee.

Tit. No; not a word. How can I grace my talk,

Wanting a hand to give it action?

Thou hast the odds of me; therefore no more.

Tam. If thou didst know me, thou wouldst talk with me.

¹ Not in f. e. ² yet pitiously: in f. e. ³ The rest of this stage direction is not in f. e. ⁴ Not in f. e.

Tit. I am not mad ; I know thee well enough ;
Witness this wretched stump, witness these crimson lines ;

Witness these trenches made by grief and care ;

Witness the tiring day, and heavy night ;

Witness all sorrow, that I know thee well

For our proud empress, mighty Tamora.

Is not thy coming for my other hand ?

Tam. Know, thou sad man, I am not Tamora :

She is thy enemy, and I thy friend.

I am Revenge ; sent from th' infernal kingdom,

To ease the gnawing vulture of thy mind,

By working wreakful vengeance on thy foes.

Come down, and welcome me to this world's light ;

Confer with me of murder and of death.

There's not a hollow cave, or lurking-place,

No vast obscurity, or misty vale,

Where bloody murder, or detested rape,

Can couch for fear, but I will find them out ;

And in their ears tell them my dreadful name,

Revenge, which makes the foul offender quake.

Tit. Art thou Revenge ? and art thou sent to me,

To be a torment to mine enemies ?

Tam. I am ; therefore come down, and welcome me.

Tit. Do me some service, ere I come to thee.

Lo ! by thy side where Rape, and Murder, stand ;

Now, give some 'surance that thou art Revenge :

Stab them, or tear them on thy chariot wheels,

And then I'll come, and be thy waggoner,

And whirl along with thee about the globes.

Provide two proper palfreys, black as jet,

To hale thy vengeful waggon swift away,

And find out murderers¹ in their guilty caves :

And when thy car is laden with their heads,

I will dismount, and by the waggon wheel

Trot like a servile footman all day long,

Even from Hyperion's rising in the east,

Until his very downfall in the sea :

And day by day I'll do this heavy task,

So thou destroy Rapine and Murder there.

Tam. These are my ministers, and come with me.

Tit. Are they thy ministers ? what are they call'd ?

Tam. Rapine, and Murder ; therefore called so,

'Cause they take vengeance of such kind of men.

Tit. Good lord ! how like the empress' sons they are ;

And you, the empress : but we worldly men

Have miserable, mad, mistaking eyes.

O sweet Revenge ! now do I come to thee ;

And, if one arm's embracement will content thee,

I will embrace thee in it by and by. [Exit TITUS above.]

Tam. This closing with him fits his lunacy.

Whate'er I forge, to feed his brain-sick fits,

Do you uphold and maintain in your speeches,

For now he firmly takes me for Revenge ;

And being credulous in this mad thought,

I'll make him send for Lucius, his son,

And, whi s. I at a banquet hold him sure,

I'll find some cunning practice out of hand,

To scatter and disperse the giddy Goths,

Or, at the least, make them his enemies.

See ! here he comes, and I must ply² my theme.

Enter TITUS, below.

Tit. Long have I been forlorn, and all for thee.

Welcome, dread fury, to my woeful house.—

Rapine, and Murder, you are welcome too.—

How like the empress and her sons you are !

Well are you fitted, had you but a Moor :—

Could not all hell afford you such a devil ?

For, well I wot, the empress never wags,

But in her company there is a Moor ;

And would you represent our queen aright,

It were convenient you had such a devil.

But welcome as you are. What shall we do ?

Tam. What wouldst thou have us do, Andronicus ?

Dem. Show me a murderer, I'll deal with him.

Chi. Show me a villain that hath done a rape,

And I am sent to be reveng'd on him.

Tam. Show me a thousand that have done thee wrong

And I will be revenged on them all.

Tit. Look round about the wicked streets of Rome.

And when thou find'st a man that's like thyself,

Good Murder, stab him ; he's a murderer.—

Go thou with him ; and when it is thy hap

To find another that is like to thee,

Good Rapine, stab him : he is a ravisher.—

Go thou with them ; and in the emperor's court

There is a queen, attended by a Moor :

Well may'st thou know her by thine own proportion,

For up and down she doth resemble thee.

I pray thee, do on them some violent death ;

They have been violent to me and mine.

Tam. Well hast thou lesson'd us : this shall we do

But would it please thee, good Andronicus,

To send for Lucius, thy thrice valiant son,

Who leads towards Rome a band of warlike Goths,

And bid him come and banquet at thy house,

When he is here, even at thy solemn feast,

I will bring in the empress and her sons,

The emperor himself, and all thy foes,

And at thy mercy shall they stoop and kneel,

And on them shalt thou ease thy angry heart.

What says Andronicus to this device ?

Tit. Marcus, my brother !—'t is sad Titus calls.

Enter MARCUS.

Go, gentle Marcus, to thy nephew Lucius ;

Thou shalt inquire him out among the Goths :

Bid him repair to me, and bring with him

Some of the chiefest princes of the Goths ;

Bid him encamp his soldiers where they are.

Tell him, the emperor, and the empress too,

Feast at my house, and he shall feast with them.

This do thou for my love, and so let him,

As he regards his aged father's life.

Mar. This will I do, and soon return again. [Exit

Tam. Now will I hence about thy business,

And take my ministers along with me.

Tit. Nay, nay, let Rape and Murder stay with me,

Or else I'll call my brother back again,

And cleave to no revenge but Lucius.

Tam. [Aside to them.] What say you, boys ? will you abide with him,

Whiles I go tell my lord the emperor,

How I have govern'd our determin'd jest ?

Yield to his humour, smooth and speak him fair,

And tarry with him, till I turn again.

Tit. [Aside.] I know them all, though they suppose me mad ;

And will o'er-reach them in their own devices,

A pair of cursed hell-hounds, and their dam.

Dem. Madam, depart at pleasure : leave us here.

Tam. Farewell, Andronicus : Revenge now goes

To lay a plot to betray thy foes. [Exit

Tit. I know thou dost ; and, sweet Revenge, farewell

Chi. Tell us, old man, how shall we be employ'd ?

Tit. Tut ! I have work enough for you to do —

Publius, come hither, Caius, and Valentine !

Enter PUBLIUS, and others.

Pub. What's your will ?

¹ murder : in old copies. Steevens made the change ² play : in folio.

Tit. Know you these two?

Pub. The empress' sons

I take them; Chiron, and Demetrius.

Tit. Fie, Publius, fie! thou art too much deceiv'd;

The one is Murder, Rape is the other's name:

And therefore bind them, gentle Publius;

Caius, and Valentine, lay hands on them.

Oft have you heard me wish for such an hour,

And now I find it: therefore, bind them sure,

And stop their mouths, if they begin to cry.¹

[Exit TITUS.—PUBLIUS, &c. seize CHIRON, and DEMETRIUS.]

Chl. Villains, forbear! we are the empress' sons.

Pub. And therefore do we what we are commanded.

Caius. Stop close their mouths; let them not speak a word.

Is he sure bound? look, that you bind them fast.

Re-enter TITUS ANDRONICUS, with LAVINIA; she bearing a Bason, and he a Knife.

Tit. Come, come, Lavinia; look, thy foes are bound.—

Sirs, stop their mouths; let them not speak to me,

But let them hear what fearful words I utter.—

O villains! Chiron and Demetrius,

Here stands the spring whom you have stain'd with mud:

This goodly summer with your winter mix'd.

You kill'd her husband, and for that vile fault

Two of her brothers were condemn'd to death,

My hand cut off, and made a merry jest:

Both her sweet hands, her tongue, and that more dear

Than hands or tongue, her spotless chastity,

Inhuman traitors, you constrain'd and forc'd.

What would you say, if I should let you speak?

Villains, for shame you could not beg for grace.

Hark, wretches, how I mean to martyr you.

This one hand yet is left to cut your throats,

Whilst that Lavinia 'tween her stumps doth hold

The bason, that receives your guilty blood.

You know, your mother means to feast with me,

And calls herself Revenge, and thinks me mad.

Hark, villains! I will grind your bones to dust,

And with your blood and it, I'll make a paste;

And of the paste a coffin² I will rear,

And make two pasties of your shameful heads;

And bid that strumpet, your unhallow'd dam,

Like to the earth, swallow her own³ increase.

This is the feast that I have bid her to,

And this the banquet she shall surfeit on;

For worse than Philomel you us'd my daughter,

And worse than Progne I will be reveng'd.

And now prepare your throats.—Lavinia come,

[He cuts their Throats, and she catches the Blood.]

Receive the blood: and when that they are dead,

Let me go grind their bones to powder small,

And with this hateful liquor temper it:

And in that paste let their vile heads be bak'd.—

Come, come, be every one officious

To make this banquet: which I wish may prove

More stern and bloody than the Centaurs' feast.

So, now bring them in, for I will play the cook,

And see them ready 'gainst their mother comes.

[Exit, bearing the dead Bodies.]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Pavilion, with Tables, &c.

Enter LUCIUS, MARCUS, and Goths; with AARON, Prisoner.

Luc. Uncle Marcus, since 'tis my father's mind,

That I repair to Rome, I am content.

I Goth. And ours, with thine, befall what fortune will.

Luc. Good uncle, take you in this barbarous Moor.

This ravenous tiger, this accursed devil.

Let him receive no sustenance; fetter him,

Till he be brought unto the empress' face,

For testimony of her foul proceedings.

And see the ambush of our friends be strong:

I fear the emperor means no good to us.

Aar. Some devil whisper curses in mine ear,

And prompt me, that my tongue may utter forth

The venomous malice of my swelling heart!

Luc. Away, inhuman dog! unhallow'd slave!—

Sirs, help our uncle to convey him in.—

[Exit Goths with AARON. Trumpets sound.]

The trumpets show the emperor is at hand.

Enter SATURNINUS and TAMORA, with Tribunes, Senators, and others.

Sat. What! hath the firmament more suns than one?

Luc. What boots it thee to call thyself a sun?

Mar. Rome's emperor, and nephew, break the parle;

These quarrels must be quietly debated.

The feast is ready, which the careful Titus

Hath ordain'd to an honourable end,

For peace, for love, for league, and good to Rome

Please you, therefore, draw nigh, and take your places.

Sat. Marcus, we will.

[Hautboys sound. The Company sit down at table.]

Enter TITUS, dressed like a Cook, LAVINIA, veiled, young LUCIUS, and others. TITUS places the dishes on the table.

Tit. Welcome, my gracious lord; welcome, dread queen:

Welcome, ye warlike Goths; and welcome, Lucius;

And welcome, all. Although the cheer be poor,

'T will fill your stomachs: please you eat of it.

Sat. Why art thou thus attir'd, Andronicus?

Tit. Because I would be sure to have all well,

To entertain your highness, and your empress.

Tam. We are beholding to you, good Andronicus.

Tit. An if your highness knew my heart, you were.

My lord the emperor, resolve me this:

Was it well done of rash Virginius,

To slay his daughter with his own right hand,

Because she was enforc'd, stain'd, and deflow'd?

Sat. It was, Andronicus.

Tit. Your reason, mighty lord!

Sat. Because the girl should not survive her shame,

And by her presence still renew his sorrows.

Tit. A reason mighty, strong, and effectual;

A pattern, precedent, and lively warrant,

For me, most wretched, to perform the like.—

Die, die, Lavinia, and thy shame with thee;

[He kills LAVINIA.]

And with thy shame thy father's sorrow flee.

Sat. What hast thou done? unnatural and unkind!

Tit. Kill'd her, for whom my tears have made me blind

I am as woful as Virginius was,

And have a thousand times more cause than he

To do this outrage:—and it is now done.⁴

Sat. What! was she ravish'd? tell who did the deed.

Tit. Will 't please you eat? will 't please your highness feed?

Tam. Why hast thou slain thine only daughter thus?

Tit. Not I: 'twas Chiron, and Demetrius:

They ravish'd her, and cut away her tongue,

And they, 'twas they, that did her all this wrong.

Sat. Go, fetch them hither to us presently.

Tit. Why, there they are both, bak'd in that pie;

Whereof their mother daintily hath fed,

¹ This line is not in the folio. ² The crust of a pie, was often called a coffin. ³ Not in folio. ⁴ The rest of this direction is not in f.

⁵ This line is not in the folio.

Eating the flesh that she herself hath bred
'T is true, 't is true; witness my knife's sharp point.

[Killing TAMORA.]

Sat. Die, frantic wretch, for this accursed deed.

[Killing TITUS.]

Luc. Can the son's eye behold his father bleed?
There's need for meed, death for a deadly deed.

[Killing SATURNINUS. A great Tumult. The People in confusion disperse. MARCUS LUCIUS, and their Partisans, ascend the Steps before TITUS's House.]

Mar. You sad-fac'd men, people and sons of Rome,
By uproar sever'd, like a flight of fowl
Scatter'd by winds and high tempestuous gusts,
O! let me teach you how to knit again
This scatter'd corn into one mutual sheaf,
These broken limbs again into one body.¹
Lest Rome herself be bane unto herself,
And she, who mighty kingdoms court'sy to,
Like a forlorn and desperate cast-away,
Do shameful execution on herself.

But if my frosty signs and chaps of age,
Grave witnesses of true experience,
Cannot induce you to attend my words,
Speak, Rome's dear friend; as erst our ancestor,
When with his solemn tongue he did discourse,
To love-sick Dido's sad attending ear,
The story of that baleful burning night,
When subtle Greeks surpris'd king Priam's Troy.
Tell us, what Sinon hath bewitch'd our ears,
Or who hath brought the fatal engine in.

That gives our Troy, our Rome, the civil wound.
My heart is not compact of flint, nor steel,
Nor can I utter all our bitter grief;
But floods of tears w^old drown my oratory,
And break my very utterance, even iⁿ the time
When it should move you to attend me most,
Lending your kind commiseration.

Here is a captain, let him tell the tale;
Your hearts will throb and weep to hear him speak.

Luc. Then, noble auditory, be it known to you,
That curs'd Chiron and Demetrius
Were they that murdered our emperor's brother;
And they it was that ravish'd our sister.
For their fell faults our brothers were beheaded,
Our father's tears despis'd, and basely cozen'd
Of that true hand, that fought Rome's quarrel out,
And sent her enemies unto the grave.

Lastly, myself unkindly banish'd,
The gates shut on me, and turn'd weeping out,
To beg relief among Rome's enemies;
Who drown'd their enmity in my true tears,
And op'd their arms to embrace me as a friend:
And I am the² turn'd-forth, be it known to you,
That have preserv'd her welfare in my blood;
And from her bosom took the enemy's point,
Sheathing the steel in my adventurous body.
Alas! you know, I am no vaunter, I;
My scars can witness, dumb although they are,
That my report is just, and full of truth.
But, soft! methinks, I do digress too much,
Citing my worthless praise. O! pardon me:
For when no friends are by men praise themselves.

Mar. Now is my turn to speak. Behold this child;
Of this was Tamora delivered;
The issue of an irreligious Moor,
Chief architect and plotter of these woes.
The villain is alive in Titus' house,
And, as he is, to witness this is true.

Now judge what cause had Titus to revenge

These wrongs, unspeakable, past patience,
Or more than any living man could bear.

Now you have heard the truth, what say you, Romans?
Have we done aught amiss? Show us wherein,
And from the place where you behold us now,
The poor remainder of Andronici

Will, hand in hand, all headlong cast us down,
And on the ragged stones beat forth our brains,
And make a mutual closure of our house.

Speak, Romans, speak! and, if you say, we shall,
Lo! hand in hand, Lucius and I will fall.

Emil. Come, come, thou reverend man of Rome,
And bring our emperor gently in thy hand,
Lucius our emperor; for, well I know,
The common voice doth cry, it shall be so.

Mar. Lucius, all hail! Rome's royal emperor.—

LUCIUS, &c. descend.

Go, go into old Titus' sorrowful house. [To an Attendant]

And hither hale that misbelieving Moor,
To be adjudg'd some direful lingering death,
As punishment for his most wicked life.—

Lucius, all hail! Rome's gracious governor.

Luc. Thanks, gentle Romans: may I govern so,
To heal Rome's harms, and wipe away her woe:

But, gentle people, give me aim awhile,
For nature puts me to a heavy style.—

Stand all aloof;—but, uncle, draw you rear,
To shed obsequious tears upon this bier.—

O! take this warm kiss on thy pale cold lips,

[Kisses TITUS]

These sorrowful drops upon thy blood-stain'd face.

The last true duties of thy noble son!

Mar. Tear for tear, and loving kiss for kiss,
Thy brother Marcus tenders on thy lips:

O! were the sum of these that I should pay
Countless and infinite, yet would I pay them.

Luc. Come hither, boy: come, come, and learn of us

To melt in showers. Thy grandsire lov'd thee well:

Many a time he danc'd thee on his knee,
Sung thee asleep, his loving breast thy pillow;

Many a matter hath he told to thee,
Meet and agreeing with thine infancy:

In that respect, then, like a loving child.

Shed yet some small drops from thy tender spring,
Because kind nature doth require it so:

Friends should associate friends in grief and woe.

Bid him farewell; commit him to the grave;

Do him that kindness, all that he can have.³

Boy. O grandsire, grandsire! even with all my heart
Would I were dead, so you did live again.—

O lord! I cannot speak to him for weeping;

My tears will choke me, if I ope my mouth.

Enter Attendants, with AARON.

1 Rom. You sad Andronici, have done with woe—
Give sentence on this execrable wretch,
That hath been breeder of these dire events.

Luc. Set him breast-deep in earth, and famish him
There let him stand, and rave and cry for food:
If any one relieves, or pities him,

For the offence he dies. This is our doom:
Some stay to see him fasten'd in the earth.

Aar. O! why should wrath be mute, and fury dumb?
I am no baby, I, that with base prayers

I should repent the evils I have done.

Ten thousand worse than ever yet I did

Would I perform, if I might have my will:

If one good deed in all my life I did,

¹ The rest of this speech is usually given to a Roman lord. ² Not in the folio. ³ and take leave of him: 12 f. 8.

I do repent it from my very soul.

Luc. Some loving friends convey the emperor hence,

And give him burial in his father's grave.

My father, and Lavinia, shall forthwith be closed in our household's monument.

As for that ravenous tiger, Tamora,

No funeral rite, nor man in mournful weeds

No mournful bell shall wring her burial:

But throw her forth to beasts, and birds of prey

Her life was beast-like, and devoid of pity;

And, being so, shall have like want of pity.

See justice done on Aaron, that damn'd Moor,

By whom our heavy haps had their beginning:

Then, afterwards, to order well the state,

That like events may ne'er it ruinate.

[Exeunt]

 JULIET, Daughter to Capulet.
 Nurse to Juliet.

Citizens of Verona; male and female Relations to both Houses; Maskers, Guards, Watchmen, and Attendants.

SCENE, during the greater Part of the Play, in Verona: once, in the fifth Act, at Mantua.

PROLOGUE.

CHORUS.

Two households, both alike in dignity,
 In fair Verona, where we lay our scene,
 From ancient grudge break to new mutiny,
 Where civil blood makes civil hands unclean.
 From forth the fatal loins of these two foes
 A pair of star-cross'd lovers take their life;

Whose misadventur'd piteous overthrows
 Do, with their death, bury their parents' strife.
 The fearful passage of their death-mark'd love,
 And the continuance of their parents' rage,
 Which, but their children's end, nought could remove
 Is now the two hours' traffic of our stage;
 The which if you with patient ears attend,
 What here shall miss, our toil shall strive to mend.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A public Place.

Enter SAMPSON and GREGORY, armed with Swords and Bucklers.

Sam. Gregory, on my word, we'll not carry coals.¹

Gre. No, for then we should be colliers.

Sam. I mean, an we be in choler, we'll draw,

Gre. Ay, while you live, draw your neck out of the collar.

Sam. I strike quickly, being moved.

Gre. But thou art not quickly moved to strike.

Sam. A dog of the house of Montague moves me.

Gre. To move is to stir, and to be valiant is to stand;² therefore, if thou art moved, thou run'st away.

Sam. A dog of that house shall move me to stand. I will take the wall of any man or maid of Montague's.

Gre. That shows thee a weak slave; for the weakest goes to the wall.

Sam. 'T is true; and therefore women, being the weaker vessels, are ever thrust to the wall:—therefore,

I will push Montague's men from the wall, and thrust his maids to the wall.

Gre. The quarrel is between our masters, and us their men.

Sam. 'T is all one, I will show myself a tyrant: when I have fought with the men, I will be cruel³ with the maids; I will cut off their heads.

Gre. The heads of the maids?

Sam. Ay, the heads of the maids, or their maiden-heads; take it in what sense thou wilt.

Gre. They must take it in⁴ sense, that feel it.

Sam. Me they shall feel, while I am able to stand; and, 't is known, I am a pretty piece of flesh.

Gre. 'T is well, thou art not fish: if thou hadst, thou hadst been poor John.⁵ Draw thy tool; here come two⁶ of the house of the Montagues.

Enter ABRAM and BALTHASAR.

Sam. My naked weapon is out: quarrel, I will back thee.

Gre. How! turn thy back, and run?

¹ This was regarded as a low, degrading office. ² stand to it; therefore (of my word) if thou be moved, thou 'lt run away: in quarto 1567 ³ civil: in f. ⁴ Only in quarto, 1597. ⁵ Salted and dried fish. ⁶ Only in the quarto, 1597.

Sam. Fear me not.

Gre. No marry: I fear thee!

Sam. Let us take the law of our sides; let them begin.

Gre. I will frown as I pass by, and let them take it as they list.

Sam. Nay, as they dare I will bite my thumb at them; which is a disgrace to them, if they bear it.¹

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?

Sam. I do bite my thumb, sir.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?

Sam. Is the law of our side, if I say—ay?

Gre. No.

Sam. No, sir. I do not bite my thumb at you, sir; at I bite my thumb, sir.

Gre. Do you quarrel, sir?

Abr. Quarrel, sir? no, sir.

Sam. If you do, sir, I am for you: I serve as good a man as you.

Abr. No better.

Sam. Well, sir.

Enter BENVOLIO, at a Distance.

Gre. Say—better: here comes one of my master's kinsmen.

Sam. Yes, better, sir.

Abr. You lie.

Sam. Draw, if you be men.—Gregory, remember thy swashing! blow. [They fight.]

Ben. Part, fools! put up your swords; you know not what you do. [Beats down their swords with his.]

Enter TYBALT.

Tyb. What! art thou drawn among these heartless hinds? [Draws.]

Turn thee, Benvolio; look upon thy death.

Ben. I do but keep the peace: put up thy sword, Or manage it to part these men with me.

Tyb. What! drawn,* and talk of peace? I hate the word,

As I hate hell, all Montagues, and thee.

Have at thee, coward. [They fight.]

Enter several persons of both Houses, who join the Fight; then enter Citizens, with Clubs or Partisans.

1 Cit. Clubs, bills,* and partisans! strike! beat them down!

Down with the Capulets! down with the Montagues!

Enter CAPULET, in his Gown; and Lady CAPULET.

Cap. What noise is this?—Give me my long sword, ho!

La. Cap. A crutch, a crutch!—Why call you for a sword?

Cap. My sword. I say!—Old Montague is come, And flourishes his blade in spite of me.

Enter MONTAGUE and Lady MONTAGUE.

Mon. Thou villain Capulet!—Hold me not; let me go.

La. Mon. Thou shalt not stir one's foot to seek a foe.

Enter the Prince, with his Train.

Prin. Rebellious subjects, enemies to peace, Profaners of this neighbour-stained steel!—

Will they not hear?—what ho! you men, you beasts,

That quench the fire of your pernicious rage

With purple fountains issuing from your veins,⁷

On pain of torture, from those bloody hands

Throw your mistemper'd weapons to the ground,

And hear the sentence of your moved prince—

Three civil brawls,* bred of an angry word,

By thee, old Capulet, and Montague,

Have thrice disturb'd the quiet of our streets;

And made Verona's ancient citizens

Cast by their grave beseeching ornaments,

To wield old partisans, in hands as old,

Canker'd with peace, to part your canker'd hate.¹⁰

If ever you disturb our streets again,

Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace:¹¹

For this time all the rest depart away.¹²

You, Capulet, shall go along with me;

And Montague, come you this afternoon,

To know our farther¹³ pleasure in this case,

To old Free-town, our common judgment-place.

Once more, on pain of death, all men¹⁴ depart.

[Exit the Prince, and Attendants; CAPULET

Lady CAPULET, TYBALT, Citizens, and Servants

Mon. Who set this ancient quarrel new abroad?—

Speak, nephew, were you by when it began?

Ben. Here were the servants of your adversary,

And yours, close fighting ere I did approach.¹⁵

I drew to part them: in the instant came

The fiery Tybalt, with his sword prepar'd;

Which, as he breath'd defiance to my ears,

He swung about his head, and cut the winds,

Who, nothing hurt withal, hiss'd him in scorn.

While we were interchanging thrusts and blows,

Came more and more, and fought on part and part,

Till the prince came, who parted either part.

La. Mon. O! where is Romeo? saw you him to-day?

Right glad I am he was not at this fray.

Ben. Madam, an hour before the worshipp'd sun

Peer'd forth¹⁶ the golden windows of the east,

A troubled¹⁷ mind drave me to walk abroad;

Where, underneath the grove of sycamore

That westward rooteth from the city's side,

So early walking did I see your son.

Towards him I made; but he was w¹⁸are of me,

And stole into the covert of the wood:

I, measuring¹⁹ his affections by my own,

Which then most sought where most might not be found,¹⁹

Being one too many by my weary self,²⁰

Pursu'd my humour, not pursuing his,

And gladly shunn'd who gladly fled from me.

Mon. Many a morning hath he there been seen,

With tears augmenting the fresh morning's dew,

Adding to clouds more clouds with his deep sighs:

But all so soon as the all-cheering sun

Should in the farthest east begin to draw

The shady curtains from Aurora's bed,

Away from light steals home my heavy son,

And private in his chamber pens himself;

Shuts up his windows, looks fair daylight out,

And makes himself an artificial night.

Black and portentous must this humour prove,

Unless good counsel may the cause remove.

Ben. My noble uncle, do you know the cause?

Mon. I neither know it, nor can learn of him.

Ben. Have you importun'd him by any means?²¹

Mon. Both by myself, and many other friends;

But he, his own affections' counsellor,

Is to himself—I will not say, how true—

But to himself so secret and so close,

So far from sounding and discovery,

As is the bud bit with the envious worm,

Or dedicate his beauty to the sun.¹
Could we but learn from whence his sorrows grow,
We would as willingly give cure, as know.

Enter ROMEO, at a distance.

Ben. See, where he comes : so please you, step aside ;
I'll know his grievance, or be much denied.

Mon. I would, thou wert so happy by thy stay,
To hear true shrift.—Come, madam, let's away.

[Exit MONTAGUE and Lady.]

Ben. Good morrow, cousin.

Rom. Is the day so young ?

Ben. But new struck nine.

Rom. Ah me ! sad hours² seem long.

Was that my father that went hence so fast ?

Ben. It was. What sadness lengthens Romeo's hours ?

Rom. Not having that, which, having, makes them short.

Ben. In love ?

Rom. Out.

Ben. Of love ?

Rom. Out of her favour where I am in love.

Ben. Alas, that love, so gentle in his view,
Should be so tyrannous and rough in proof !

Rom. Alas, that love, whose view is muffled still,
Should without eyes see pathways to his³ will !
Where shall we dine ?—O me !—What fray was here ?
Yet tell me not, for I have heard it all.

Here 's much to do with hate, but more with love :—

Why then, O brawling love ! O loving hate !

O any thing, of nothing first created⁴ !

O heavy lightness ! serious vanity !

Mis-shapen chaos of well-seeming forms⁵ !

Feather of lead, bright smoke, cold fire, sick health !

Still-waking sleep, that is not what it is !—

This love feel I, that feel no love in this.

Dost thou not laugh ?

Ben. No, coz ; I rather weep.

Rom. Good heart, at what ?

Ben. At thy good heart's oppression.

Rom. Why, such. Benvolio, is love's transgression.—

Griefs of mine own lie heavy in my breast ;

Which thou wilt propagate, to have it press'd

With more of thine : this love, that thou hast shown,

Doth add more grief to too much of mine own.

Love is a smoke, made⁶ with the fume of sighs ;

Being puff'd⁷, a fire sparkling in lovers' eyes ;

Being vex'd, a sea nourish'd with lovers' tears :

What is it else ? a madness most discreet,

A choking gall, and a preserving sweet.

Farewell, my coz.

Ben. Soft, I will go along :

An if you leave me so,⁸ you do me wrong.

Rom. Tut ! I have lost myself : I am not here :

'This is not Romeo ; he's some other where.

Ben. Tell me in sadness, who is 't that⁹ you love.

Rom. What ! shall I groan, and tell thee ?

Ben. Groan ! why, no ;

But sadly tell me, who.

Rom. Bid a sick man in sadness make his will !¹⁰

A word ill urg'd to one that is so ill.—

In sadness, cousin, I do love a woman.

Ben. I aim'd so near,¹¹ when I suppos'd you lov'd.

Rom. A right good mark-man !—and she's fair I love.

Ben. A right fair mark, fair coz, is soonest hit.

Rom. Well, in that hit you miss : she'll not be hit
With Cupid's arrow. She hath Dian's wit ;
And in strong proof of chastity well arm'd,
From love's weak childish bow she lives uncharm'd.¹²
She will not stay the siege of loving terms,
Nor bide th' encounter of assailing eyes,¹³
Nor ope her lap to saint-seducing gold :
O ! she is rich in beauty ; only poor,
That when she dies with beauty dies her store.¹⁴

Ben. Then she hath sworn, that she will still live chaste ?

Rom. She hath, and in that sparing makes huge waste
For beauty, starv'd with her severity,
Cuts beauty off from all pesterity.

She is too fair, too wise ; too wisely fair,

To merit bliss by making me despair :

She hath forsworn to love, and in that vow

Do I live dead, that live to tell it now.

Ben. Be rul'd by me ; forget to think of her.

Rom. O ! teach me how I should forget to think.

Ben. By giving liberty unto thine eyes :

Examine other beauties.

Rom. 'T is the way

To call hers, exquisite, in question more.

These happy masks, that kiss fair ladies' brows,

Being black, put us in mind they hide the fair :

He, that is stricken blind, cannot forget

The precious treasure of his eyesight lost.

Show me a mistress that is passing fair ;

What doth her beauty serve, but as a note

Where I may read who pass'd that passing fair ?

Farewell : thou canst not teach me to forget.

Ben. I'll pay that doctrine, or else die in debt.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Street.

Enter CAPULET, PARIS, and Servant.

Cap. But¹⁵ Montague is bound as well as I,

In penalty alike ; and 't is not hard, I think,

For men so old as we to keep the peace.

Par. Of honourable reckoning are you both ;

And pity 't is, you liv'd at odds so long.

But now, my lord, what say you to my suit ?

Cap. But saying o'er what I have said before.

My child is yet a stranger in the world.

She hath not seen the change of fourteen years :

Let two more summers wither in their pride,

Ere we may think her ripe to be a bride.

Par. Younger than she are happy mothers made

Cap. And too soon marr'd are those so early married.¹⁶

Earth up¹⁷ hath swallowed all my hopes but she,

She is the hopeful lady of my earth :¹⁸

But woo her, gentle Paris, get her heart,

My will to her consent is but a part ;

An she agree, within her scope of choice

Lies my consent and fair accord¹⁹ of voice.

This night I hold an old acoustom'd feast,

Whereto I have invited many a guest,

Such as I love ; and you, among the store,

One more most welcome makes my number more.

At my poor house look to behold this night

Earth-treading stars, that make dark heaven light

Such comfort, as do lusty young men feel,

When well-appear'd April on the heel

Of limping winter treads, even such delight

Among fresh female buds shall you this night inherit at my house : hear all, all see,
And like her most, whose merit most shall be :
Which, on more view¹ of many, mine being one,
May stand in number, though in reckoning none.
Come, go with me.—Go, sirrah, trudge about
Through fair Verona : find those persons out,
Whose names are written there, and to them say,

[Giving a Paper.

My house and welcome on their pleasure stay.

[Exit CAPULET and PARIS.

Serv. Find them out, whose names are written here ?
It is written, that the shoemaker should meddle with his yard, and the tailor with his last, the fisher with his pencil, and the painter with his nets : but I am sent to find those persons, whose names are here writ, and can never find what names the writing person hath here writ. I must to the learned :—in good time.

Enter BENVOLIO and ROMEO.

Ben. Tut, man ! one fire burns out another's burning,
One pain is lessen'd by another's anguish ;
Turn giddy, and be help by backward turning ;
One desperate grief cures with another's languish :
Take thou some new infection to thy eye,
And the rank poison of the old will die.

Rom. Your plantain leaf is excellent for that.

Ben. For what, I pray thee ?

Rom. For your broken shin.

Ben. Why, Romeo, art thou mad ?

Rom. Not mad, but bound more than a madman is :

Shut up in prison, kept without my food,

Whipp'd, and tormented, and—Good-den, good fellow.

Serv. God gi' good den.—I pray, sir, can you read ?

Rom. Ay, mine own fortune in my misery.

Serv. Perhaps you have learn'd it without book ; but,
I pray, can you read any thing you see ?

Rom. Ay, if I know the letters, and the language.

Serv. Ye say honestly. Rest you merry. [Going.]

Rom. Stay, fellow ; I can read.

[Reads.]
"Signior Martino, and his wife, and daughters ;
County Anselme, and his beauteous sisters ; the lady widow of Vitruvio ; Signior Placentio, and his lovely nieces ; Mercutio, and his brother Valentine ; mine uncle Capulet, his wife, and daughters ; my fair niece
Rosaline ; Liv a : Signior Valentino, and his cousin
Tybalt ; Lucio, and the lively Helena." 2

A fair assembly ; whither should they come ?

Serv. Up.

Rom. Whither ? to supper ?

Serv. To our house.

Rom. Whose house ?

Serv. My master's.

Rom. Indeed, I should have asked you that before.

Serv. Now, I'll tell you without asking. My master is the great rich Capulet ; and if you be not of the house of Montagues, I pray, come and crush³ a cup of wine.
Rest you merry. [Exit.]

Ben. At this same ancient feast of Capulet's
Supp the fair Rosaline, whom thou so lovest,
With all the admired beauties of Verona :
Go thither ; and, with unattainted eye,
Compare her face with some that I shall show,
And I will make thee think thy swan a crow.

Rom. When the devout religion of mine eye
Maintains such falsehood, then turn tears to fires ;
And these, who, often drown'd, could never die,
Transparent heretics, be burnt for liars.

One fairer than my love ! the all-seeing sun
Ne'er saw her match since first the world began.

Ben. Tut ! you saw her fair, none else being by,
Herself pois'd with herself in either eye ;
But in those⁴ crystal scales let there be weigh'd
Your lady's love⁵ against some other maid,
That I will show you shining at this feast,
And she shall scant show well, that now shows⁶ best.

Rom. I'll go along, no such sight to be shown.

But to rejoice in splendour of mine own. [Exit]

SCENE III.—A Room in CAPULET'S House.

Enter Lady CAPULET and Nurse.

La. Cap. Nurse, where's my daughter ? call her forth to me.

Nurse. Now, by my maiden-head at twelve year old,
I bade her come.—What, lamb ! what, lady-bird !—
God forbid !—where's this girl ?—what, Juliet !

Enter JULIET.

Jul. How now ! who calls ?

Nurse.

Your mother.

Jul. Madam, I am here.

What is your will ?

La. Cap. This is the matter.—Nurse, give leave awhile.
We must talk in secret.—Nurse, come back again :
I have remember'd me, thou shalt hear our counsel.
Thou know'st my daughter's of a pretty age.

Nurse. Faith, I can tell her age unto an hour.

La. Cap. She's not fourteen.

Nurse. I'll lay fourteen of my teeth,
And yet to my teen⁷ be it spoken I have but four,
She is not fourteen. How long is it now
To Lammas-tide ?

La. Cap. A fortnight, and odd days.

Nurse. Even or odd, of all days in the year,
Come Lammas-eve at night shall she be fourteen.

Susan and she.—God rest all Christian souls !—

Were of an age.—Well, Susan is with God ;

She was too good for me. But, as I said,

On Lammas-eve at night shall she be fourteen :

That shall she, marry : I remember it well.

'T is since the earthquake now eleven years ;

And she was wean'd,—I never shall forget it,—

Of all the days of the year, upon that day ;

For I had then laid wormwood to my dug,

Sitting in the sun under the dove-house wall :

My lord and you were then at Mantua.—

Nay, I do bear a brain.—but, as I said,

When it did taste the wormwood on the nipple

Of my dug, and felt it bitter, pretty fool,

To see it tetchy, and fall out with the dug !

Shake, quoth the dove-house : 't was no need, I trow,

To bid me trudge.

And since that time it is eleven years :

For then she could stand alone⁸ ; nay, by the rood,

She could have run and waddled all about,

For even the day before she broke her brow :

And then my husband—God be with his soul !

'A was a merry man⁹—took up the child :

" Yea," quoth he, " dost thou fall upon thy face ?

Thou wilt fall backward, when thou hast more wit

Wilt thou not, Jule¹⁰ and, by my holy-dam,

The pretty wretch left crying, and said—" Ay."

To see, now, how a jest shall come about !

I warrant, an I should live a thousand years,

I never should forget it : " Wilt thou not Jule¹¹ quoth he

And, pretty fool, it stinted,¹² and said—" Ay."

¹ Such amongst view : in quarto, 1597. ² Not 't is. ³ An expression often met with. ⁴ that : in old copies. ⁵ Dyce suggests : lady love. ⁶ seems : in quarto, 1597-9. ⁷ Sorrow. ⁸ high lone : in quarto, 1597. ⁹ The rest of this, and half of the next line, not in quarto, 1597. ¹⁰ Stopped.

*La. Cap.*¹ Enough of this: I pray thee, hold thy peace.

Nurse. Yes, madam. Yet I cannot choose but laugh, To think it should leave crying, and say—"Ay?"

And yet, I warrant, it had upon his brow
A bump as big as a young cockrel's stone,
A perilous knock; and it cried bitterly.

"Yea," quoth my husband, "fall'st upon thy face?
Thou wilt fall backward, when thou com'st to age;
Wilt thou not, Jule?" it stinted, and said—"Ay."

Jul. And stint thou too, I pray thee, nurse, say I.

Nurse. Peace! I have done.² God mark thee to his grace,

Thou wast the prettiest babe that e'er I nurs'd:
An I might live to see thee married once,
I have my wish.

La. Cap. Marry, that marry is the very theme
I came to talk of.—Tell me, daughter Juliet,
How stands your disposition to be married?

Jul. It is an honour that I dream not of.

Nurse. An honour! were not I thine only nurse,
I would say, thou hadst suck'd wisdom from thy teat.

La. Cap. Well, think of marriage now; younger than you,

Here in Verona, ladies of esteem,
Are made already mothers: by my count,
I was your mother, much upon these years
That you are now a maid. Thus, then, in brief:—
The valiant Paris seeks you for his love.

Nurse. A man, young lady! lady, such a man,
As all the world—Why, he's a man of wax.

La. Cap. Verona's summer hath not such a flower.

Nurse. Nay, he's a flower; in faith, a very flower.

La. Cap. What say you? can you love the gentleman?

This night you shall behold him at our feast:³

Read o'er the volume of young Paris' face,

And find delight writ there with beauty's pen.

Examine every married⁴ lineament,

And see how one of other lends content;

And what obscur'd in this fair volume lies,

Find written in the margin of his eyes.

This precious book of love, this unbound lover,

To beauty's him only lacks a cover:

The fish lives in the sea; and 't is much pride,

For fair without the fair within to hide.

That book in many's eyes doth share the glory,

That in gold clasps locks in the golden story;

So shall you share all that he doth possess

By having him, making yourself no less.

Nurse. No less? nay, bigger women grow by men.

La. Cap. Speak briefly, can you like of Paris' love?

Jul. I'll look to like, if looking liking move;

But no more deep will I endart⁵ mine eye.

Than your consent gives strength to make it fly.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Madam, the guests are come, supper served up, you called, my young lady asked for, the Nurse curs'd in the pantry, and every thing in extremity. I must hence to wait; I beseech you, follow straight.

La. Cap. We follow thee.—Juliet, the county stays.

Nurse. Go, girl, seek happy nights to happy days.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—A Street.

Enter ROMEO, MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO, with five or six Maskers, Torch-Bearers, and others,⁶ preceded by a Drum.

Rom. What, shall this speech be spoke for our excuse,

Or shall we on without apology?

Ben. The date is out of such prolixity:

We'll have no Cupid hood-wink'd with a scarf,

Bearing a Tartar's painted bow of lath,

Scaring the ladies like a crow-keeper⁷;

Nor no without-book prologue, faintly spoke

After the prompter, for our entrance:⁸

But, let them measure us by what they will,

We'll measure them a measure, and be gone.

Rom. Give me a torch: I am not for this ambling

Being but heavy, I will bear the light.

Mer. Nay, gentle Romeo, we must have you dance

Rom. Not I, believe me. You have dancing shoes,

With nimble soles: I have a soul of lead.

So stakes me to the ground, I cannot move.

Mer. You are a lover: borrow Cupid's wings,⁹

And soar with them above a common bound.

Rom. I am too sore pierc'd with his shaft,

To soar with his light feathers; and so¹⁰ bound,

I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe:

Under love's heavy burden do I sink.

Ben. And, to sink in it, should you burden love;

Too great oppression for a tender thing.

Rom. Is love a tender thing? it is too rough,

Too rude, too boisterous; and it pricks like thorn.

Mer. If love be rough with you, be rough with love:

Prick love for pricking, and you beat love down.—

Give me a case to put my visage in:

[Putting on a Mask.]

A visor for a visor!—what care I,

What curious eye doth quote¹¹ deformities?

Here are the beetle-brows shall blush for me.

Ben. Come, knock, and enter; and no sooner in,

But every man betake him to his legs.

Rom. A torch for me: let wantons light of heart,

Tickle the senseless rushes¹² with their heels;

For I am prov'd¹³ with a grandsire phrase,—

I'll be a candle-holder, and look on:

The game was ne'er so fair, and I am done.

Mer. Tut! dun's¹⁴ the mouse, the constable's own word.

If thou art dun, we'll draw thee from the mire¹⁵

Of this save-reverence¹⁶ love, wherein thou stick'st

Up to the ears.—Come, we burn day-light, ho!

Rom. Nay, that's not so.

Mer. I mean, sir, in delay

We waste our lights in vain,¹⁷ like lamps by day.

Take our good meaning, for our judgment hits

Five times in that, ere once in our five wits.

Rom. And we mean well in going to this mask,

But 't is no wit to go.

Mer. Why, may one ask?

Rom. I dreamt a dream to-night.

Mer. And so did I.

Rom. Well, what was yours?

Mer. That dreamers often lie

Rom. In bed asleep, while they do dream things true.

Mer. O! then, I see, queen Mab hath been with you. She is the fairies' midwife; and she comes In shape no bigger than an agate stone On the fore-finger of an alderman Drawn with a team of little atomies Over men's noses as they lie asleep: Her waggon-spokes made of long spinners' legs; The cover, of the wings of grasshoppers; The traces, of the smallest spider's web; The collars, of the moonshine's watery beams;¹ Her whip, of cricket's bone; the lash, of film; Her waggoner, a small grey-coated gnat, Not half so big as a round little worm Pick'd from the lazy finger of a milkmaid.² Her chariot is an empty hazel-nut, Made by the joiner squirrel, or old grub, Time out of mind the fairies' coach-makers.³ And in this state she gallops night by night⁴ Through lovers' brains, and then they dream of love: On courtiers' knees, that dream on court'sies straight: O'er lawyers' fingers, who straight dream on fees;⁵ O'er ladies' lips, who straight on kisses dream; Which oft the angry Mab with blisters plagues, Because their breaths with sweet-meats tainted are. Sometime she gallops o'er a counsellor's⁶ nose, And then dreams he of smelling out a snit: And sometime comes she with a tithe-pig's tail, Tickling a parson's nose as 'a lies asleep, Then he dreams of another benefice. Sometime she driveth o'er a soldier's neck,⁷ And then dreams he of cutting foreign throats, Of breaches, ambuscadoes, Spanish blades,⁸ Of healths five fathom deep; and then anon Drums in his ear, at which he starts, and wakes; And, being thus frighted,⁹ swears a prayer or two, And sleeps again. This is that very Mab, That plats the manes of horses in the night: And makes¹⁰ the elf-locks in foul sluttish hairs, Which, once untangled, much misfortune bodes.¹¹ This is the hag, when maids lie on their backs, That presses them, and learns them first to bear, Making them women of good carriage. This, is she—¹²

Rom. Peace, peace! Mercutio, peace! Thou talk'st of nothing.

Mer. True. I talk of dreams, Which are the children of an idle brain, Begot of nothing but vain fantasy: Which is as thin of substance as the air. And more inconstant than the wind, who woos Even now the frozen bosom of the north, And, being anger'd, puffs away from thence.¹³ Turning his tide¹⁴ to the dew-drop¹⁵ with.

Ben. 'Tis wind, you talk of, blow us from ourselves; Supper is done, and we shall come too late.

Rom. I fear, too early: for my mind misgives, Some consequence, yet hanging in the stars, Shall bitterly begin his fearful date With this night's revels: and expure the term Of a despised life, clos'd in my breath, By some vile forfeit of untimely¹⁷ death:

But he, that hath the steerage of my course, Direct my sail!¹⁸—On, lusty gentlemen.

Ben. Strike, drum.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—A Hall in CAPULET'S HOUSE.

Musicians waiting. Enter Servants.

1 Serv. Where's Potpan, that he helps not to take away? he shift a trencher! he scrape a trencher!

2 Serv. When good manners shall lie all¹⁹ in one or two men's hands, and they unwashed too; 'tis a foul thing.

1 Serv. Away with the joint-stools, remove the court cupboard,²⁰ look to the plate.—Good thou, save me a piece of marchpane;²¹ and, as thou lovest me, let the porter let in Susan Grindstone, and Nell.—Antony! and Potpan!

2 Serv. Ay, boy; ready.

1 Serv. You are looked for, and called for, asked for: and sought for, in the great chamber.

2 Serv. We cannot be here and there too.—Cheerly, boys; be brisk awhile, and the longer liver take all.

[They retire.]

Enter²² CAPULET, &c. with the Guests, and the Maskers

Cap. Welcome, gentlemen! ladies, that have their toes Unplagued with corns, will have a bout²³ with you!— Ah, ha, my mistresses! which of you all Will now deny to dance? she that makes dainty, she, I'll swear, hath corns. Am I come near you now? You are welcome, gentlemen! I have seen the day, That I have worn a visor, and could tell [To ROMEO, &c.]²⁴ A whispering tale in a fair lady's ear, Such as would please:—'tis gone, 'tis gone, 'tis gone. You are welcome, gentlemen!—Come, musicians, play. A hall! a hall! give room, and foot it, girls.²⁵

[Music plays, and they dance.]

More light, ye knaves, and turn the tables up, And quench the fire, the room is grown too hot.— Ah! sirrah, this unlook'd-for sport comes well. Nay, sit, nay, sit, good cousin Capulet, For you and I are past our dancing²⁶ days: How long is 't now, since last yourself and I Were in a mask?

2 Cap. By 'r lady, thirty years.

1 Cap. What, man! 'tis not so much, 'tis not so much. 'T is since the nuptial of Lucentio, Come pentecost as quickly as it will, Some five and twenty years; and then we mask'd.

2 Cap. 'T is more, 't is more: his son is elder, sir, His son is thirty.

1 Cap. Will you tell me that?²⁷

His son was but a ward two years ago.

Rom. What lady is that, which doth enrich the hand Of yonder knight? [Pointing to JULIET.]²⁸

Serv. I know not, sir.

Rom. O! she doth teach the torches to burn bright! It seems she²⁹ hangs upon the cheek of night Like a rich jewel in an Ethiope's ear; Beauty too rich for use, for earth too dear! So shows a snowy dove³⁰ trooping with crows, As yonder lady o'er her fellows shows.

The measure done, I'll watch her place of stand,

And, touching hers, make blessed¹ my rude hand.
Did my heart love till now? forswear it, sight!
never saw true beauty till this night.

Tyb. This, by his voice, should be a Montague.
Fetch me my rapier, boy.—[Exit Boy.] What! dares
the slave

Come hither, cover'd with an antic face,
To fleer and scorn at our solemnity?
Now, by the stock and honour of my kin,
To strike him dead I hold it not a sin.

1 Cap. Why, how now, kinsman? wherefore storm you so?

Tyb. Uncle, this is a Montague, our foe;
A villain, that is hither come in spite,
To scorn at our solemnity this night.

1 Cap. Young Romeo is it?

Tyb. 'T is he, that villain Romeo.

1 Cap. Content thee, gentle coz,² let him alone,
He bears him like a portly gentleman;
And, to say truth, Verona brags of him,
To be a virtuous and well-govern'd youth.
I would not for the wealth of all this town,
Here, in my house, do him disparagement;
Therefore, be patient, take no note of him:
It is my will; the which if thou respect,
Show a fair presence, and put off these frowns,
An ill-beseeming semblance for a feast.

Tyb. It fits, when such a villain is a guest.
I'll not endure him.

1 Cap. He shall be endur'd:

What, Goodman boy⁴!—I say, he shall;—go to;
Go to: am I the master here, or you?
You'll not endure him!—God shall mend my soul—
You'll make a mutiny among my guests.

You will set cock-a-hoop: you'll be the man.

Tyb. Why, uncle, 't is a shame.

1 Cap. Go to, go to, go to,

You are a saucy boy.—Is't so, indeed?
This trick may chance to scath you;—I know what.
You must contrary me! marry, 't is time⁵—
Well said, my hearts!—You are a princeling⁶; go:—
Be quiet, or—More light, more light!—for shame!
I'll make you quiet; What!—Cheerly, my hearts!

Tyb. Patience perforce with wilful choler meeting,
Makes my flesh tremble in their different greeting.
I will withdraw, but this intrusion shall,
Now seeming sweet, convert to bitter gall. [Exit.]

Rom. If I profane with my unworthiest hand
This holy shrine, the gentle fine⁷ is this,—
My lips, two blushing pilgrims, ready stand
To smooth that rough touch with a tender kiss.

Jul. Good pilgrim, you do wrong your hand too much,
Which mannerly devotion shows in this;
For saints have hands that pilgrims' hands do touch,⁸
And palm to palm is holy palmers' kiss.

Rom. Have not saints lips, and holy palmers too?

Jul. Ay, pilgrim, lips that they must use in prayer.
Rom. O! then, dear saint, let lips do what hands do;
They pray; grant thou, lest faith turn to despair.

Jul. Saints do not move, though grant for prayers' sake.

Rom. Then move not, while my prayer's effect I take.

Thus from my lips, by thine, my sin is purg'd.

[Kissing her.]

Jul. Then have my lips the sin that they have took.
Rom. Sin from my lips? O, trespass sweetly urg'd!
Give me my sin again.

Jul. You kiss by the book. [Kissing her again.]
Nurse. Madam, your mother craves a word with you. [JULIET retires.]

Rom. What is her mother?
Nurse. Marry, bachelor,

Her mother is the lady of the house,
And a good lady and a wise, and virtuous.
I nurs'd her daughter, that you talk'd withal;
I tell you—he that can lay hold of her
Shall have the chinks.

Rom. Is she a Capulet?

O, dear account! my life is my foe's debt.¹¹

Ben. Away, begone: the sport is at the best.

Rom. Ay, so I fear: the more is my unrest.¹² [Going.]

1 Cap. Nay, gentlemen, prepare not to be gone;

We have a trifling foolish banquet towards.—

Is it e'en so? Why then, I thank you all:

I thank you, honest gentlemen; good night.—

More torches here!—Come on, then let's to bed.

Ah, sirrah, by my fay, it waxes late;

I'll to my rest. [Exit.]

Jul. Come hither, nurse What is yond gentleman?

[The Guests retire severally.]

Nurse. The son and heir of old Tiberio.

Jul. What's he, that now is going out of door?

Nurse. Marry, that, I think, be young Petruccio.

Jul. What's he, that follows here, that would not dance?

Nurse. I know not.

Jul. Go, ask his name.—If he be married,
My grave is like to be my wedding-bed.

Nurse. His name is Romeo, and a Montague;

[Going and returning.]

The only son of your great enemy.

Jul. My only love sprung from my only hate!

Too early seen unknown, and known too late!

Prodigious birth of love it is to me,

That I must love a loathed enemy. [Exeunt all Guests.]

Nurse. What's this? what's this?

Jul. A rhyme I learn'd even now
Of one I danc'd withal. [One calls within, JULIET:]

Nurse. Anon, anon.—

Come, let's away: the strangers all are gone. [Exeunt]

*Enter CHORUS.*¹⁰

Now old desire doth in his death-bed lie.

And young affection gapes to be his heir:

That fair, for which love groan'd for, and would die,

With tender Juliet match'd, is now not fair.

Now Romeo is belov'd, and loves again.

Alike bewitched by the charm of looks;

But to his foe suppos'd he must complain,

And she seal love's sweet bait from fearful hooks:

Being held a foe, he may not have access

To breathe such vows as lovers use to swear;

And she as much in love, her means much less

To meet her new-belov'd any where:

But passion lends them power, time means to meet,

Tempering extremities with extreme sweet. [Exit]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—An open Place, adjoining CAPULET'S Garden.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Can I go forward, when my heart is here?
Turn back, dull earth, and find thy centre out.

[He climbs the Wall, and leaps down within it.

Enter BENVOLIO and MERCUTIO.

Ben. Romeo! my cousin Romeo! Romeo!

Mer. He is wise;¹

And, on my life, hath stolen him home to bed.

Ben. He ran this way, and leap'd this orchard wall.
Call, good Mercutio.

Mer. Nay, I'll conjure too.—

Romeo, humours, madman, passion, lover!

Appear thou in the likeness of a sigh:

Speak but one rhyme, and I am satisfied;

Cry but—Ah me! pronounce² but—love and dove;

Speak to my gossip Venus one fair word,

One nick-name for her purblind son and heir,

Young Adam³ Cupid, he that shot so true,⁴

When king Cophetua lov'd the beggar-maid.—

He heareth not,⁵ he stirreth not, he moveth not;

The ape is dead, and I must conjure him.—

I conjure thee by Rosaline's bright eyes,

By her high forehead, and her scarlet lip,

By her fine foot, straight leg, and quivering thigh,

And the demesnes that there adjacent lie,

That in thy likeness thou appear to us.

Ben. An if he hear thee, thou wilt anger him.

Mer. This cannot anger him: 't would anger him
To raise a spirit in his mistress' circle

Of some strange nature,⁶ letting it there stand

Till she had laid it, and conjur'd it down;

That were some spite. My invocation

Is fair and honest, and, in his mistress' name,

I conjure only but to raise up him.

Ben. Come, he hath hid himself among these trees,

To be conversed with the humorous⁷ night:

Blind is his love, and best befits the dark.

Mer. If love be blind, love cannot hit the mark.

Now will he sit under a medlar tree,

And wish his mistress were that kind of fruit,

As maids call medlars when they laugh alone.—

O Romeo! that she were. O! that she were

An open cataract, thou a poprin pear!

Romeo, good night!—I'll to my trundle-bed;

This field-bed is too cold for me to sleep.—

Come, shall we go?

Ben. Go, then; for 't is in vain

To seek him here, that means not to be found. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—CAPULET'S Garden.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. He jests at scars, that never felt a wound.—

[JULIET appears above, at a window.

But, soft! what light through yonder window breaks?

It is the east, and Juliet is the sun.—

Arise, fair sun, and kill the envious moon,

Who is already sick and pale with grief,

That thou, her maid, art far more fair than she:

Be not her maid, since she is envious;
Her vestal livery is but white⁸ and green,
And none but fools do wear it; cast it off.—
It is my lady; O! it is my love:

O, that she knew she were!⁹—

She speaks, yet she says nothing: what of that?

Her eye discourses, I will answer it.—

I am too bold, 't is not to me she speaks:

Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven,

Having some business, do entreat her eyes

To twinkle in their spheres till they return.

What if her eyes were there, they in her head?

The brightness of her cheek would shame those stars,

As daylight doth a lamp: her eyes¹⁰ in heaven

Would through the airy region stream so bright,

That birds would sing, and think it were not night

See, how she leans her cheek upon her hand!

O! that I were a glove upon that hand,

That I might touch¹¹ that cheek.

Jul. Ah me!

Rom. She speaks.

O, speak again, bright angel! for thou art

As glorious to this night, being o'er my head,

As is a winged messenger of heaven

Unto the white-upturned wond'ring eyes

Of mortals, that fall back to gaze on him,

When he bestrides the lazy-passing¹² clouds,

And sails upon the bosom of the air.

Jul. O Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou Romeo?

Deny thy father, and refuse thy name:

Or, if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love,

And I'll no longer be a Capulet.

Rom. Shall I hear more, or shall I speak at this?

Jul. 'T is but thy name that is my enemy:

Thou art thyself, although¹³ a Montague.

What's Montague? it is no hand, nor foot,

Nor arm, nor face, nor any other part

Belonging to a man. O! be some other name.

What's in a name? that which we call a rose,

By any other name¹⁴ would smell as sweet;

So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd,

Retain that dear¹⁵ perfection which he owes

Without that title—Romeo, doff¹⁶ thy name;

And for thy name, which is no part of thee,

Take all myself¹⁷

Rom. I take thee at thy word.

[Starting forward.]

Call me but love, and I'll be new baptiz'd;

Henceforth I never will be Romeo.

Jul. What man art thou, that, thus bescreen'd in night,

So stumblest on my counsel?

Rom. By a name

I know not how to tell thee who I am:

My name, dear saint, is hateful to myself,

Because it is an enemy to thee:

Had I it written, I would tear the word.

Jul. My ears have yet not drunk a hundred words

Of that tongue's utterance,¹⁸ yet I know the sound.

Art thou not Romeo, and a Montague?

Rom. Neither, fair saint, if either thee displease.

¹ Dost thou hear? He, &c.: in quarto, 1597. ² coupley: in folio (Couple). ³ Abraham: in old copies. The allusion is supposed to be to the ballad of King Cophetua and the Beggar-maid. Dyce says the word is "a corruption of Aaron," or "Aburn." ⁴ trim: in quarto, 1597. ⁵ He hears me not: in quarto, 1597; the rest of this and the next line, wanting. ⁶ fashion: in quarto, 1597. ⁷ Vapor, dewy. ⁸ sick: in f.e. ⁹ This and the previous line, are not in quarto, 1597. ¹⁰ eye: in later quartos and folio. ¹¹ kiss: in quarto, 1597. ¹² lazy-pacing: in f.e., punning: in folio. ¹³ though, not: in f.e. ¹⁴ word: in later quartos, and folio. ¹⁵ the divine: in quarto, 1597. ¹⁶ part: in quarto, 1597. ¹⁷ I have: in quarto, 1597. ¹⁸ Not in f.e. ¹⁹ thy tongue's uttering: in later quartos, and folio.

Jul. How cam'st thou hither, tell me? and wherefore?
The orchard walls are high, and hard to climb,
And the place death, considering who thou art,
If any of my kinsmen find thee here.

Rom. With love's light wings did I o'erperch these walls;

For stony limits cannot hold love out:
And what love can do, that dares love attempt;
Therefore, thy kinsmen are no let to me.

Jul. If they do see thee, they will murder thee.
Rom. Alack! there lies more peril in thine eye,
Than twenty of their swords: look thou but sweet,
And I am proof against their enmity.

Jul. I would not for the world they saw thee here.

Rom. I have night's cloak to hide me from their eyes;
And but thou love me, let them find me here:
My life were better ended by their hate,
Than death prorogued, wanting of thy love.

Jul. By whose direction found'st thou out this place?

Rom. By love, that first did prompt me to inquire;
He lent me⁴ counsel, and I lent him eyes.

I am no pilot; yet, wert thou as far
As that vast shore wash'd with the farthest sea,
I would adventure for such merchandise.

Jul. Thou know'st the mask of night is on my face;
Else would a maiden blush bepaint my cheek,
For that which thou hast heard me speak to-night.
Fain would I dwell on form, fain, fain deny
What I have spoke: but farewell compliment.
Dost thou love me? I know thou wilt say—Ay;
And I will take thy word; yet, if thou swear'st,
Thou may'st prove false: at lovers' perjuries,
They say, Jove laughs. O, gentle Romeo!
If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully:

Or if thou think'st I am too quickly won,
I'll frown, and be perverse, and say thee nay.
So thou wilt woo; but, else, not for the world.
In truth, fair Montague, I am too fond,
And therefore thou may'st think my haviour light;
But trust me, gentleman, I'll prove more true
Than those that have more cunning⁵ to be strange.
I should have been more strange, I must confess,
But that thou over-heard'st, ere I was ware,
My true love's passion: therefore, pardon me;
And not impute this yielding to light love,
Which the dark night hath so discovered.

Rom. Lady, by yonder blessed moon I swear⁶,
That tips with silver all these fruit-tree tops.—

Jul. O! swear not by the moon, th' inconstant moon,
That monthly changes in her circled orb,
Lest that thy love prove likewise variable.

Rom. What shall I swear by?

Jul. Do not swear at all;
Or, if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious⁷ self,
Which is the god of my idolatry,
And I'll believe thee.

Rom. If my heart's dear love⁸—

Jul. Well, do not swear. Although I joy in thee,
Have no joy of this contract to-night:

It is too rash, too unadvis'd, too sudden;
Too like the lightning, which doth cease to be.
Ere one can say it lightens. Sweet, good night.
This bud of love, by summer's ripening breath,
May prove a beauteous flower when next we meet.
Good night, good night! as sweet repose and rest
Come to thy heart, as that within my breast!

Rom. O! wilt thou leave me so unsatisfied?

Jul. What satisfaction canst thou have to-night?

Rom. Th' exchange of thy love's faithful vow for mine.

Jul. I gave thee mine before thou didst request it:
And yet I would it were to give again.

Rom. Wouldst thou withdraw it? for what purpose,
love?

Jul. But to be frank, and give it thee again;

And yet I wish but for the thing I have.

My bounty is as boundless as the sea,

My love as deep; the more I give to thee,

The more I have, for both are infinite. [Nurse calls within
I hear some noise within: dear love, adieu!—

Anon, good nurse!—Sweet Montague, be true.

Stay but a little, I will come again.

Rom. O blessed, blessed night! I am afeard,

Being in night, all this is but a dream.

Too flattering-sweet⁹ to be substantial.

Re-enter JULIET above.

Jul. Three words, dear Romeo, and good night.
indeed.

If that thy bent of love be honourable,

Thy purpose marriage, send me word to-morrow,

By one that I'll procure to come to thee,

Where, and what time, thou wilt perform the rite:

And all my fortunes at thy foot I'll lay,

And follow thee my lord throughout the world¹⁰.

Nurse. [Within.] Madam!

Jul. I come, anon.—But if thou mean'st not well,

I do beseech thee,—

Nurse. [Within.] Madam!

Jul. By and by: I come.—

To cease thy suit, and leave me to my grief:

To-morrow will I send.

Rom. So thrive my soul,—

Jul. A thousand times good night. [Exit

Rom. A thousand times the worse, to want thy light.—

Love goes toward love, as school-boys from their books:

But love from love, toward school with heavy loads.

[Going

Re-enter JULIET, above.

Jul. Hist! Romeo, hist!—O, for a falconer's voice.

To lure this treel¹¹ gentle back again!

Bondage is hoarse, and may not speak aloud:

Else would I tear the cave where echo lies,

And make her airy voice¹² more hoarse than mine

With repetition of my Romeo's name¹³.

Rom. It is my soul, that calls upon my name:

How silver-sweet sound lovers' tongues by night,

Like softest music to attending ears¹⁴.

Jul. Romeo!

Rom. My dear¹⁵—

Jul. At what o'clock to-morrow¹⁶

Shall I send to thee?

Rom. By the hour of nine.

Jul. I will not fail: 't is twenty years till then.

I have forgot why I did call thee back.

Rom. Let me stand here, till thou remember it.

Jul. I shall forget to have thee still stand there.

Remembering how I love thy company.

Rom. And I'll still stay, to have thee still forget.

Forgetting any other home but this.

Jul. 'T is almost morning: I would have thee gone

And yet no farther than a wanton's bird,

Who lets it hop a little from her hand.

¹ Hindrance. ² gave: in quarto, 1597. ³ coying: in later quartos, and folio. ⁴ yonder moon I vow: in folio. ⁵ glorious: in quarto. 1597. ⁶ my true heart's love: in quarto, 1597. ⁷ The quarto, 1597, omits all to the NURSE's call. ⁸ true: in quarto, 1597. ⁹ The quarto 1597, omits all to, "Love goes," &c. ¹⁰ Male-hawk. ¹¹ tongue: in later quartos, and folio; they also omit (12) "name" ¹² This line is not in quarto, 1597. ¹³ So the undated quarto; that of 1597: Madam; first folio: My niece; second folio: sweet

Like a poor prisoner in his twisted gyves,
And with a silk thread plucks it back again,
So loving-jealous of his liberty.

Rom. I would, I were thy bird.

Jul.

Sweet, so would I:

Yet I should kill thee with much cherishing.

Good night, good night: parting is such sweet sorrow,
That I shall say good night, till it be morrow. [Exit.]

Rom. Sleep dwell upon thine eyes, peace in thy breast!—

Would I were sleep and peace, so sweet to rest!

Hence will I to my ghostly father's¹ cell;

His help to crave, and my good hap to tell. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—Friar LAURENCE's Cell.

Enter Friar LAURENCE, with a basket.

Fri. The grey-eyed morn smiles on the frowning night,

Chequering the eastern clouds with streaks of light;

And flecked darkness like a drunkard reels

From forth day's path and Titan's fiery² wheels.

Now, ere the sun advance his burning eye

The day to cheer, and night's dank dew to dry,

I must up-fill this osier cage of ours,

With baleful weeds, and precious-juiced flowers.

The earth, that's nature's mother, is her tomb³:

What is her burying grave, that is her womb;

And from her womb children of divers kind

We sucking on her natural bosom find:

Many for many virtues excellent.

None but for some, and yet all different.

O! mickle is the powerful grace that lies

In herbs, plants, stones, and their true qualities:

For nought so vile that on the earth doth live

But to the earth some special good doth give;

Nor aught so good, but strain'd from that fair use,

Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse;⁴

Virtue itself turns vice, being misapplied,

And vice sometime's by action dignified.

Within the infant rind of this weak⁵ flower

Poison hath residence, and medicine power:

For this, being smelt, with that act cheers each part;

Being tasted, slays all senses with the heart.

Two such opposed kings⁶ encamp them still

In man as well as herbs, grace, and rude will;

And where the worse is predominant,

Full soon the canker death eats up that plant.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. Good morrow, father.

Fri.

Benedicite!

What early tongue so sweet salueth me?—

Young son, it argues a distemper'd head,

So soon to bid good morrow to thy bed:

Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye

And where care lodges, sleep will never lie;

But where unbusied⁷ youth, with unstuff'd brain,

Doth couch his limbs, there golden sleep doth reign.

Therefore, thy earliness doth me assure,

Thou art up-rous'd by some distemperature:

Or if not so, then here I hit it right—

Our Romeo hath not been in bed to-night.

Rom. That last is true: the sweeter rest was mine.

Fri. God pardon sin! wert thou with Rosaline?

Rom. With Rosaline, thy ghostly father? no;

I have forgot that name, and that name's woe.

Fri. That's my good son: but where hast thou been, then?

Rom. I'll tell thee, ere thou ask it me again

I have been feasting with mine enemy;

Where, on a sudden, one hath wounded me,

That's by me wounded: both our remedies

Within thy help and holy physic lies:

I bear no hatred, blessed man; for, lo!

My intercession likewise steads my foe.

Fri. Be plain, good son, and homely⁸ in thy drift;

Riddling confession finds but riddling shift.

Rom. Then plainly know, my heart's dear love is set

On the fair daughter of rich Capulet:

As mine on hers, so hers is set on mine;

And all combin'd, save what thou must combine

By holy marriage. When, and where, and how,

We met, we woo'd, and made exchange of vow,

I'll tell thee as we pass; but this I pray,

That thou consent to marry us to-day.

Fri. Holy Saint Francis! what a change is here!

Is Rosaline, whom thou didst love so dear,

So soon forsaken? young men's love, then, lies

Not truly in their hearts, but in their eyes.

Jesu Maria! what a deal of brine

Hath wash'd thy shallow cheeks for Rosaline!

How much salt water thrown away in waste

To season love, that of it doth not taste!

The sun not yet thy sighs from heaven clears,

Thy old groans ring yet in my ancient ears;

Lo! here upon thy cheek the stain doth sit

Of an old tear that is not wash'd off yet.

If e'er thou wast thyself, and these woes thine,

Thou and these woes were all for Rosaline:

And art thou chang'd? pronounce this sentence, then—

Women may fall, when there's no strength in men.

Rom. Thou chidd'st me oft for loving Rosaline.

Fri. For doting, not for loving, pupil mine.

Rom. And bad'st me bury love.

Fri. Not in a grave,

To lay one in, another out to have.

Rom. I pray thee, chide not: she, whom⁹ I love now

Doth grace for grace, and love for love allow:

The other did not so.

Fri. O! she knew well,

Thy love did read by rote, and could not spell.

But come, young waverer, come, go with me,

In one respect I'll thy assistant be,

For this alliance may so happy prove,

To turn your households' rancour to pure love.

Rom. O! let us hence: I stand on sudden haste.

Fri. Wisely, and slow:¹⁰ they stumble that run fast.

[Exeunt]

SCENE IV.—A Street.

Enter BENVOLIO AND MERCUTIO.

Mer. Where the devil should this Romeo be?¹¹—

Came he not home to-night?

Ben. Not to his father's: I spoke with his man.

Mer. Why, that same pale hard-hearted wench, that

Rosaline,

Torments him so, that he will sure run mad.

Ben. Tybalt, the kinsman to old Capulet,

Hath sent a challenge to his father's house.

Mer. A challenge, on my life

Ben. Romeo will answer it.

Mer. Any man that can write may answer a letter.

Ben. Nay, he will answer the letter's master, how he dares, being dared.¹²

Mer. Alas, poor Romeo! he is already dead! stabbed with a white wench's black eye; run thorough the ear with a love-song; the very pin¹ of his heart cleft with the blind bow-boy's butt-shaft; and is he a man to encounter Tybalt?

Ben. Why, what is Tybalt?

Mer. More than prince of cats,² I can tell you. O! he is a courageous captain of compliments. He fights as you sing prick-song,³ keeps time, distance, and proportion; rests me his minim rest, one, two, and the third in your bosom: the very butcher of a silk button, a duellist, a duellist; a gentleman of the very first house, of the first and second cause. Ah, the immortal passado! the punto reverso! the hay!—

Ben. The what?

Mer. The pox of such antic, lisping, affecting fantasticoes, these new tuners of accents!—"By Jesu, a very good blade!—a very tall man!—a very good whore!"—Why, is not this a lamentable thing, grand-sire, that we should be thus afflicted with these strange flies, these fashion-mongers, these pardonnez-mois,⁴ who stand so much on the new form, that they cannot sit at ease on the old bench? O, their bons, their bons!

Enter ROMEO.

Ben. Here comes Romeo, here comes Romeo.

Mer. Without his roe, like a dried herring.—O flesh, flesh, how art thou fishified!—Now is he for the numbers that Petrarch flow'd in: Laura, to his lady, was a kitchen-wench;—marry, she had a better love to be-rhyme her: Dido, a dowdy; Cleopatra, a gipsy; Helen and Hero, holdings⁵ and harlots; Thisbe, a grey⁶ eye or so, but not to the purpose.—Signior Romeo, bon jour! there's a French salutation to your French slop.⁷ You gave us the counterfeit fairly last night.

Rom. Good morrow to you both. What counterfeit did I give you?

Mer. The slip, sir, the slip;⁸ can you not conceive?

Rom. Pardon, good Mercutio, my business was great; and in such a case as mine, a man may strain courtesy.

Mer. That's as much as to say—such a case as yours constrains a man to bow in the hams.

Rom. Meaning—to courtesy.

Mer. Thou hast most kindly hit it.⁹

Rom. A most courteous exposition.

Mer. Nay, I am the very pink of courtesy.

Rom. Pink for flower.

Mer. Right.

Rom. Why, then is my pump well flowered.¹⁰

Mer. Well said!¹¹ follow me this jest now, till thou hast worn out thy pump; that, when the single sole of it is worn, the jest may remain, after the wearing, solely singular.

Rom. O single-soled jest! solely singular for the singleness.

Mer. Come between us, good Benvolio, for my wits fail.¹²

Rom. Switch and spurs, switch and spurs; or I'll cry a match.

Mer. Nay, if our wits run the wild-goose chase, I have done; for thou hast more of the wild-goose in one of thy wits, than, I am sure, I have in my whole five. Was I with you there for the goose?

Rom. Thou wast never with me for any thing, when thou wast not there for the goose.

Mer. I will bite thee by the ear for that jest.

Rom. Nay, good goose, bite not.

Mer. Thy wit is a very bitter sweeting;¹³ it is a most sharp sauce.

Rom. And is it not well served in to a sweet goose?

Mer. O! here's a wit of cheverel,¹⁴ that stretches from an inch narrow to an ell broad.

Rom. I stretch it out for that word—broad: which added to the goose, proves thee far and wide abroad—goose.¹⁵

Mer. Why, is not this better now than groaning for love? now art thou sociable, now art thou Romeo:¹⁶ now art thou what thou art, by art as well as by nature: for this driving love is like a great natural, that runs lolling up and down to hide his bauble in a hole.

Ben. Stop there, stop there.

Mer. Thou desirest me to stop in my tale against the hair.

Ben. Thou wouldst else have made thy tale large.

Mer. O! thou art deceived. I would have made it short; for I was come to the whole depth of my tale, and meant, indeed, to occupy the argument no longer.

Rom. Here's thy goodly geer!

Enter Nurse and PETER.

Mer. A sail, a sail!

Ben. Two, two; a shirt, and a smock.

Nurse. Peter, prythee give me my fan.

Mer. Prythee, do, good Peter, to hide her face; for her fan's the fairer of the two.¹⁷

Nurse. God ye good morrow, gentlemen.

Mer. God ye good den, fair gentlewoman.

Nurse. Is it good den?

Mer. 'T is no less, I tell you; for the bawdy hand of the dial is now upon the prick of noon.

Nurse. Out upon you! what a man are you.

Rom. One, gentlewoman, that God hath made for himself to mar.

Nurse. By my troth, it is well said;—for himself to mar, quoth'a?—Gentlemen, can any of you tell me where I may find the young Romeo?

Rom. I can tell you; but young Romeo will be older when you have found him, than he was when you sought him. I am the youngest of that name, for fault of a worse.

Nurse. You say well.

Mer. Yea! is the worst well? very well took, i' faith; wisely, wisely.

Nurse. If you be he, sir, I desire some confidence¹⁸ with you.

Ben. She will invite him to some supper.

Mer. A bawd, a bawd, a bawd! So ho!

Rom. What hast thou found?

Mer. No hare, sir; unless a hare, sir, in a lenten pie, that is something stale and hoar ere it be spent.

*An old hare hoar, and an old hare hoar, [Singing.]*²²

Is very good meat in lent:

But a hare that is hoar, is too much for a score,

When it hoars ere it be spent.—

Romeo, will you come to your father's? we'll to dinner thither.

Rom. I will follow you.

Mer. Farewell, ancient lady;

*Farewell, lady, lady, lady.²¹ [Singing.]*²³

[Exit MERCUTIO and BENVOLIO]

Nurse. Marry, farewell!—I pray you, sir, what saucy merchant¹ was this, that was so full of his ropery²?

Rom. A gentleman, nurse, that loves to hear himself talk; and will speak more in a minute, than he will stand to in a month.

Nurse. An 'a speak any thing against me, I'll take him down, an 'a were lustier than he is, and twenty such Jacks; and if I cannot, I'll find those that shall. Scoury knave! I am none of his flirt-gills; I am none of his skains-mates.—And thou must stand by, too, and suffer every knave to use me at his pleasure?

Pet. I saw no man use you at his pleasure: if I had, my weapon should quickly have been out, I warrant you. I dare draw as soon as another man, if I see occasion in a good quarrel, and the law on my side.

Nurse. Now, afore God, I am so vexed, that every part about me quivers.—Scoury knave!—Pray you, sir, a word; and as I told you, my young lady bade me inquire you out: what she bid me say, I will keep to myself; but first let me tell ye, if ye should lead her in a fool's paradise, as they say, it were a very gross kind of behaviour, as they say, for the gentlewoman is young; and, therefore, if you should deal double with her, truly, it were an ill thing to be offered to any gentlewoman, and very wicked³ dealing.

Rom. Nurse, commend me to thy lady and mistress. I protest unto thee.—

Nurse. Good heart! and, i' faith, I will tell her as much. Lord, lord! she will be a joyful woman.

Rom. What wilt thou tell her, nurse? thou dost not mark me.

Nurse. I will tell her, sir,—that you do protest: which, as I take it, is a gentlemanlike offer.

Rom. Bid her devise some means to come to shift This afternoon;

And there she shall at friar Lawrence's cell Be shriv'd, and married. Here is for thy pains.⁴

Nurse. No, truly, sir; not a penny.

Rom. Go to; I say, you shall. [Giving her money.]

Nurse. This afternoon, sir? well, she shall be there.

Rom. And stay, good nurse, behind the abbey-wall: Within this hour my man shall be with thee.

And bring thee cords made like a tackled stair: Which to the high top-gallant of my joy

To say to me—that thou art out of breath? The excuse that thou dost make in this delay

Is longer than the tale thou dost excuse. Is thy news good, or bad? answer to that:

Say either, and I'll stay the circumstance. Let me be satisfied, is 't good or bad?

Nurse. Well, you have made a simple choice; you know not how to choose a man: Romeo! no, nor he: though his face be better than any man's, yet his leg excels all men's; and for a hand, and a foot, and a body,—though they be not to be talked on, yet they are past compare. He is not the flower of courtesy,—but, I'll warrant him, as gentle as a lamb.—Go thy ways, wench: serve God. What, have you dined at home?

Jul. No, no: but all this did I know before. What says he of our marriage? what of that?

Nurse. Lord, how my head aches! what a head have I:

Nurse. Ah, mocker! that's the dog's name. R is for thee? no.⁵ I know it begins with some other letter—and she hath the prettiest sententious of it, of you and rosemary, that it would do you good to hear it.

Rom. Commend me to thy lady. [Exit Nurse.]

Pet. Anon?

Nurse. Peter, take my fan, and go before. [Exit Pet.]

SCENE V.—CAPULET'S Garden.

Enter JULIET.

Jul. The clock struck nine, when I did send the nurse, In half an hour she promis'd to return.

Perchance, she cannot meet him: that's not so.— O! she is lame;⁶ love's heralds should be thoughts,⁷

Which ten times faster glide than the sun's beams Driving black shadows over lowering hills:

Therefore do nimble-pinion'd doves draw love, And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings

Now is the sun upon the highmost hill Of this day's journey; and from nine till twelve

Is three long hours.—yet she is not come. Had she affections, and warm youthful blood,

She'd be as swift in motion as a ball; My words would bandy her to my sweet love,

And his to me; but old folks, seem as dead: Unwieldy, slow, heavy, and dull as lead.

Enter Nurse and PETER.

O God! she comes.—O honey nurse! what news? Hast thou met with him?⁸ Send thy man away.

Nurse. Peter, stay at the gate. [Exit PETER.]

Jul. Now, good sweet nurse,—O lord! why look'st thou sad?

Though news be sad, yet tell them merrily; If good, thou shalt the music of sweet news

By playing it to me with so sour a face. Nurse. I am weary, give me leave awhile.—

Jul. I would, thou hadst my bones, and I thy news: Nay, come, I pray thee, speak.—good, good nurse, speak.

Nurse. Jesu, what haste! can you not stay awhile? Do you not see, that I am out of breath?

Jul. How art thou out of breath, when thou hast breath To say to me—that thou art out of breath?

The excuse that thou dost make in this delay Is longer than the tale thou dost excuse.

Is thy news good, or bad? answer to that: Say either, and I'll stay the circumstance.

¹ This word was often used as a contemptuous term, as distinguished from "gentleman." ² roperie: in quarto, 1597; both words mean, roguery. ³ weak: in l.e. ⁴ Tell her, I protest: in quarto, 1597. ⁵ The quarto, 1597, has in place of this speech:—

To come to shift at friar Lawrence's cell; The quarto, 1597, omits all to, "Commend me," &c. ⁶ R is the dog's letter and hirreth in old copies read: "R is for thee"; which Warburton changed to "thee." Some mod. eds. read, with Tyrwhitt: "R is for the dog." ⁷ lazy: in quarto, 1597. ⁸ The quarto, 1597, has in place of this and the next twelve lines:—

And run more swift, than hasty powder's fire, Both hurt from the fearful cannon's mouth

The quarto, 1597, omits all to, "I am weary"

It beats as it would fall in twenty pieces.

My back ! o' t' other side.—O, my back, my back !—
Beshrew your heart for sending me about,
To catch my death with jaunting up and down.

Jul. I' faith, I am sorry that thou art not well.
Sweet, sweet, sweet nurse, tell me, what says my love ?

Nurse. Your love says like an honest gentleman,
And a courteous, and a kind, and a handsome,
And, I warrant, a virtuous.—Where is your mother ?

Jul. Where is my mother ?—why, she is within :
Where should she be ? How oddly thou reply'st ;
"Your love says like an honest gentleman,—
Where is your mother ?"

Nurse. O, God's lady dear !
Are you so hot ? Marry, come up, I trow ;
Is this the poultrice for my aching bones ?
Henceforward do your messages yourself.

Jul. Here's such a coil—Come, what says Romeo ?

Nurse. Have you got leave to go to shrift to-day ?

Jul. I have.
Nurse. Then, hie you hence to friar Laurence' cell ;
There stays a husband to make you a wife ;
Now comes the wanton blood up in your cheeks ;
They'll be in scarlet straightway² at my³ news.

Hie you to church ; I must another way,
To fetch a ladder, by the which your love
Must climb a bird's nest soon, when it is dark :
I am the drudge, and toil in your delight,
But you shall bear the burden soon at night.
Go : I'll to dinner ; hie you to the cell.

Jul. Hie to high fortune !—Honest nurse, farewell.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—FRIAR LAURENCE'S CELL.

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE AND ROMEO.

Fri. So smile the heavens upon this holy act,
That after-hours with sorrow chide us not !

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Public Place.

Enter MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO, Page, and Servants.

Ben. I pray thee, good Mercutio, let's retire :
The day is hot, the Capulets abroad,
And if we meet we shall not 'scape a brawl ;
For now, these hot days, is the mad blood stirring.⁴

Mer. Thou art like one of those fellows that, when he enters the confines of a tavern, claps me his sword upon the table, and says, "God send me no need of thee !" and, by the operation of the second cup, draws him on the drawer, when, indeed, there is no need.

Ben. Am I like such a fellow ?

Mer. Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack, in thy mood, as any in Italy ; and as soon moved to be moody, and as soon moody to be moved.

Ben. And what to ?

Mer. Nay, an there were two such, we should have none shortly, for one would kill the other. Thou ! why thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more, or a hair less, in his beard, than thou hast. Thou wilt quarrel with a man for cracking nuts, having no other reason, but because thou hast hazel eyes : what eye,

Rom. Amen, amen ! but come what sorrow can,
It cannot countervail the exchange of joy
That one short minute gives me in her sight :
Do thou but close our hands with holy words,
Then love-devouring death do what he dare ;
It is enough I may but call her mine.

Fri. These violent delights have violent ends,
And in their triumph die : like fire and powder,
Which as they kiss consume. The sweetest honey
Is loathsome in his own deliciousness,
And in the taste confounds the appetite :
Therefore, love moderately ; long love doth so ;
Too swift arrives as tardy as too slow.

Enter JULIET.

Here comes the lady.—O ! so light a foot
Will ne'er wear out the everlasting flint :
A lover may bestride the gossamers
That idle in the wanton summer air,
And yet not fall ; so light is vanity.

Jul. Good even to my ghostly confessor.

Fri. Romeo shall thank thee, daughter, for us both
Jul. As much to him, else are his thanks too much

Rom. Ah, Juliet ! if the measure of thy joy
Be heap'd like mine, and that thy skill be more
To blazon it, then sweeten with thy breath
This neighbour air, and let rich music's tongue
Unfold the imagin'd happiness, that both
Receive in either by this dear encounter.

Jul. Conceit, more rich in matter than in words,
Brags of his substance, not of ornament :
They are but beggars that can count their worth ;
But my true love is grown to such excess,
I cannot sum the sum⁵ of half my wealth.

Fri. Come, come with me, and we will make short work ;

For, by your leaves, you shall not stay alone,
Till holy church incorporate two in one. [Exeunt.] but such an eye, would spy out such a quarrel ? Thy head is as full of quarrels, as an egg is full of meat ; and yet thy head hath been beaten as addle as an egg for quarrelling. Thou hast quarrelled with a man for coughing in the street, because he hath wakened thy dog that hath lain asleep in the sun. Didst thou not fall out with a tailor for wearing his new doublet before Easter ? with another, for tying his new shoes with old riband ? and yet thou wilt tutor me from quarrelling !

Ben. An I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, any man should buy the fee-simple of my life for an hour and a quarter.⁷

Mer. The fee-simple ? O simple !

Ben. By my head, here come the Capulets.

Enter TYBALT, and others.

Mer. By my heel, I care not.

Tyb. Follow me close, for I will speak to them—
Gentlemen, good den ! a word with one of you.

Mer. And but one word with one of us ? Couple it with something ; make it a word and a blow

Tyb. You will find me apt enough to that, sir, if you will give me occasion.

¹ In place of this question, the quarto, 1597, has :

Nay stay, sweet nurse ; I do entreat thee, now,

What says my love, my lord, my Romeo ?

² straight : in f. e. ³ any : in f. e. ⁴ This scene was entirely re-formed in the quarto, 1599. It may be found as it appears in the quarto, 1597, in the notes to Verplanck's edition. ⁵ sum up some : in folio. ⁶ Stevens made the charge. ⁷ This and the previous line, are not in the quarto, 1597. ⁸ This and the next speech, are not in the quarto, 1597.

Mer. Could you not take some occasion without giving?

Tyb. Mercutio, thou consort'st with Romeo.—

Mer. Consort! what! dost thou make us minstrels? an thou make minstrels of us, look to hear nothing but discords: here's my fiddlestick; here's that shall make you dance. 'Zounds, consort! [Striking his hilt.]

Ben. We talk here in the public haunt of men:

Either withdraw unto some private place,

And reason coldly of your grievances,

Or else depart; here all eyes gaze on us.¹

Mer. Men's eyes were made to look, and let them gaze:

I will not budge for no man's pleasure, I.

Enter ROMEO.

Tyb. Well, peace be with you, sir. Here comes my man.

Mer. But, I'll be hang'd, sir, if he wear your livery: Marry, go before to field, he'll be your follower; your worship, in that sense, may call him—man.

Tyb. Romeo, the hate I bear thee, can afford no better term than this—thou art a villain.

Rom. Tybalt, the reason that I have to love thee doth much exceed the appertaining rage

To such a greeting:—villain am I none;

Therefore farewell: I see, thou know'st me not.

Tyb. Boy, this shall not excuse the injuries that thou hast done me: therefore, turn and draw.

Rom. I do protest, I never injur'd thee; But love thee better than thou canst devise, Till thou shalt know the reason of my love: And so, good Capulet,—which name I tender As dearly as mine own,—be satisfied.

Mer. O calm, dishonourable, vile submission!

A la stoccata carries it away.

[Draws as TYBALT is going.]

Tybalt, you rat-catcher, will you walk?

Tyb. What wouldst thou have with me?

Mer. Good king of cats, nothing, but one of your nine lives; that I mean to make bold withal, and, as you shall use me hereafter, dry-beat the rest of the eight. Will you pluck your sword out of his pitcher by the ears? make haste, lest mine be about your ears ere it be out.

Tyb. I am for you.² [Drawing.]

Rom. Gentle Mercutio, put thy rapier up.

Mer. Come, sir, your passado. [They fight.]

Rom. Draw, Benvolio;

Beat down their weapons.—Gentlemen, for shame, Forbear this outrage!—Tybalt—Mercutio—The prince expressly hath forbid this bandying in Verona streets.—Hold, Tybalt!—good Mercutio!

[Exit TYBALT and his Partisans.]

Mer. I am hurt:— [ROMEO supports MERC.]

A plague o' both the houses!—I am sped:—

'Is he gone, and hath nothing?

Ben.

What! art thou hurt?

Mer. Ay, ay, a scratch, a scratch; marry, 'tis enough.—

Where is my page?—go, villain, fetch a surgeon.

[Exit Page.]

Rom. Courage, man; the hurt cannot be much.

Mer. No, 'tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church-door; but 'tis enough, 'twill serve: ask for me to-morrow, and you shall find me a grave man. I am peppered, I warrant, for this world:—a plague o' both your houses!—'Zounds! a dog, a rat, a mouse, a cat, to scratch a man to death! a braggart, a rogue, a villain, that fights by the book of arithmetic!—Why, the devil, came you between us? I was hurt under your arm.

Rom. I thought all for the best.

Mer. Help me into some house, Benvolio, Or I shall faint.—A plague o' both your houses:

They have made worms' meat of me:

I have it, and soundly too:—your houses!

[Exit MERCUTIO and BENVOLIO.]

Rom. This gentleman, the prince's near ally,

My very friend, hath got his mortal hurt

In my behalf; my reputation stain'd

With Tybalt's slander, Tybalt, that an hour

Hath been my cousin. O sweet Juliet!

Thy beauty hath made me effeminate,

And in my temper soft'n'd valour's steel.

Re-enter BENVOLIO.

Ben. O Romeo, Romeo! brave Mercutio's dead:

That gallant spirit hath aspir'd the clouds,

Which too untimely here did scorn the earth.

Rom. This day's black fate on more days doth depend;

This but begins the woe others must end.

Re-enter TYBALT.

Ben. Here comes the furious Tybalt back again.

Rom. Alive! in triumph! and Mercutio slain!

Away to heaven, respective lenity,

And fire-ey'd³ fury be my conduct now!—

Now, Tybalt, take the villain back again,

That late thou gav'st me; for Mercutio's soul

Is but a little way above our heads,

Staying for time to keep him company:

Either thou, or I, or both, must go with him.

Tyb. Thou, wretched boy, that didst consort him here,

Shalt with him hence.

Rom.

This shall determine that.

[They fight; TYBALT falls.]

Ben. Romeo, away! begone!

The citizens are up, and Tybalt slain:—

Stand not amaz'd:—the prince will doom thee death,

If thou art taken.—Hence!—be gone!—away!

Rom. O! I am fortune's fool.

Ben. Why dost thou stay? [Exit ROMEO]

Enter Citizens, &c.

1 Cit. Which way ran he that kill'd Mercutio?

Tybalt, that murderer, which way ran he?

Ben. There lies that Tybalt.

1 Cit. You, sir:—go with me.

I charge thee in the prince's name, obey.

Enter Prince, attended; MONTAGUE, CAPULET, their Wives, and others.

Prin. Where are the vile beginners of this fray?

Ben. O noble prince! I can discover all

The unlucky manage of this fatal brawl:

There lies the man, slain by young Romeo,

That slew thy kinsman, brave Mercutio.

La. Cap. Tybalt, my cousin!—O my brother's child!

O prince! O cousin! husband! O, the blood is spill'd

Of my dear kinsman!—Prince, as thou art true,

For blood of ours shed blood of Montague.

O cousin, cousin!

Prin. Who began this bloody fray?

Ben. Tybalt, here slain, whom Romeo's hand did slay:

Romeo, that spoke him fair, bad him bethink

How nice! the quarrel was; and urg'd withal
Your high displeasure:—all this, uttered
With gentle breath, calm look, knees humbly bow'd,
Could not take truce with the unruly spleen
Of Tybalt, deaf to peace, but that he tilts
With piercing steel at bold Mercutio's breast;
Who, all as hot, turns deadly point to point,
And, with a martial scorn, with one hand beats Cold death aside, and with the other sends it back to Tybalt, whose dexterity
Retorts it home.¹ Romeo he cries aloud,
"Hold, friends! friends, part!" and, swifter than his tongue,
His agile arm beats down their fatal points,
And 'twixt them rushes; underneath whose arm,
An envious thrust from Tybalt hit the life
Of stout Mercutio, and then Tybalt fled;
But by and by comes back to Romeo,
Who had but newly entertain'd revenge,
And to't they go like lightning: for ere I
Could draw to part them was stout Tybalt slain,
And as he fell did Romeo turn and fly.
This is the truth, or let Benvolio die.

La. Cap. He is a kinsman to the Montague:
Affection makes him false, he speaks not true:²
Some twenty of them fought in this black strife,
And all those twenty could but kill one life.
I beg for justice, which thou, prince, must give:
Romeo slew Tybalt, Romeo must not live.

*Prin.*³ Romeo slew him, he slew Mercutio;
Who now the price of his dear blood doth owe?
Mon. Not Romeo, prince, he was Mercutio's friend;
His fault concludes but what the law should end,
The life of Tybalt.

Prin. And for that offence,
Immediately we do exile him hence:
I have an interest in your hate's proceeding,
My blood for your rude brawls doth lie a bleeding;
But I'll amerce you with so strong a fine,
That you shall all repent the loss of mine.
I will be deaf to pleading and excuses,
Nor tears, nor prayers, shall purchase out abuses;
Therefore, use none: let Romeo hence in haste,
Else, when he's found, that hour is his last.
Bear hence this body, and attend our will:
Mercy but murders, pardoning those that kill. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in CAPULET'S House.

Enter JULIET.

Jul. Gallop apace, you fiery-footed steeds,
Towards Phoebus' mansion!⁴ such a waggoner
As Phaeton would whip you to the west,
And bring in cloudy night immediately.⁵
Spread thy close curtain, love-performing night,
That enemies' eyes may wink, and Romeo
Leap to these arms, untalk'd of, and unseen!⁶
Lovers can see to do their amorous rites
By their own beauties: or if love be blind,
It best agrees with night.—Come, civil night,
Thou sober-suited matron, all in black,
And learn me how to lose a winning match,
Play'd for a pair of stainless maidenhoods:
Hood my unmann'd blood, bating⁷ in my cheeks,
With thy black mantle; till strange love, grown bold,
Think true love acted simple modesty.
Come night, come Romeo, come thou day in night;
For thou wilt lie upon the wings of night

Whiter than new snow on a raven's back.—
Come, gentle night; come, loving, black-brow'd night,
Give me my Romeo: and, when he shall die,
Take him and cut him out in little stars,
And he will make the face of heaven so fine,
That all the world will be in love with night,
And pay no worship to the garish sun.—
O, I have bought the mansion of a love,
But not possess'd it; and though I am sold,
Not yet enjoy'd. So tedious is this day,
As is the night before some festival
To an impatient child that hath new robes,
And may not wear them. O! here comes my nurse.

Enter Nurse, with a Ladder of Cords.

And she brings news; and every tongue, that speaks
But Romeo's name, speaks heavenly eloquence.—
Now, nurse, what news? What hast thou there? the cords

That Romeo bade thee fetch?

Nurse. Ay, ay, the cords. [Throws them down.]

Jul. Ah me! what news? why dost thou wring thy hands?

Nurse. Ah well-a-day! he's dead, he's dead, he's dead!

We are undone, lady, we are undone!—
Alack the day!—he's gone, he's kill'd, he's dead!

Jul. Can heaven be so envious?

Nurse. Romeo can,
Though heaven cannot.—O Romeo, Romeo!—
Who ever would have thought it?—Romeo!

Jul. What devil art thou, that dost torment me thus?
This torture should be roar'd in dismal hell.
Hath Romeo slain himself? say thou but I,⁸
And that bare vowel, I, shall poison more
Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice:
I am not I, if there be such an I;
Or those eyes shut, that make thee thus answer, I.
If he be slain, say—I; or if not—no:
Brief sounds determine or my weal or woe.

Nurse. I saw the wound, I saw it with mine eyes,—
God save the mark!—here on his manly breast:
A piteous corse, a bloody piteous corse;
Pale, pale as ashes, all bedaub'd in blood,
All in gore blood;—I swoonded at the sight.

Jul. O break, my heart!—poor bankrupt, break at once!

To prison, eyes; ne'er look on liberty:
Vile earth, to earth resign; end motion here.
And thou, and Romeo, press one heavy bier!

Nurse. O Tybalt, Tybalt! the best friend I had!
O courteous Tybalt, honest gentleman!
That ever I should live to see thee dead!

Jul. What storm is this that blows so contrary?
Is Romeo slaughter'd? and is Tybalt dead?
My dear-lov'd⁹ cousin, and my dearer lord?¹⁰
Then, dreadful trumpet, sound the general doom:
For who is living, if those two are gone?

Nurse. Tybalt is gone, and Romeo banished:
Romeo, that kill'd him, he is banished.

Jul. O God!—did Romeo's hand shed Tybalt's blood?

Nurse. It did, it did; alas the day! it did.

Jul. O serpent heart,¹¹ hid with a flowering face!
Did ever dragon keep so fair a cave?
Beautiful tyrant! fiend angelical!
Dove-feather'd raven! volkish-ravensing lamb!¹²
Despised substance of divinity shown!

¹ Trifling. ² This word is not in f. e. ³ This line & not in quarto, 1597. ⁴ This and the next speech, are not in quarto, 1597. ⁵ So the quarto, 1597; other old copies: dwelling. ⁶ The rest of the soliloquy, is not in quarto, 1597. ⁷ Most f. e. runaways. Just opposite to what thou justly seem'st;
A damned¹ saint, an honourable villain!—
O, nature! what hadst thou to do in hell,
When thou didst pour² the spirit of a fiend
In mortal paradise of such sweet flesh?—
Was ever book containing such vile matter,
So fairly bound? O, that deceit should dwell
In such a gorgeous palace?

Nurse. There's no trust,
No faith, no honesty in men; all perjur'd,
All forsworn, all naught, all dissemblers.—
Ah! where's my man? give me some aqua vita :—
These griefs, these woes, these sorrows make me old.
Shame come to Romeo!

Jul. Blister'd be thy tongue,
For such a wish! he was not born to shame:
Upon his brow shame is ashamed to sit;
For 't is a throne where honour may be crown'd
Sole monarch of the universal earth.
O, what a beast was I to chide at him!

Nurse. Will you speak well of him that kill'd your cousin?

Jul. Shall I speak ill of him that is my husband?
Ah, poor my lord, what tongue shall smooth thy name,
When I, thy three-hours wife, have mangled it?—
But, wherefore, villain, didst thou kill my cousin?
That villain cousin would have kill'd my husband:
Back, foolish tears, back to your native spring;
Your tributary drops belong to woe,
Which you, mistaking, offer up to joy.
My husband lives, that Tybalt would have slain;
And Tybalt's dead, that would have slain my husband:
All this is comfort; wherefore weep I then?
Some word there was, worse than Tybalt's death,
That murder'd me. I would forget it fain;
But, O! it presses to my memory,
Like damned guilty deeds to sinners' minds:
Tybalt is dead, and Romeo—banished!
That—banished, that one word—banished,
Hath slain ten thousand Tybalts. Tybalt's death
Was woe enough, if it had ended there:
Or,—if sour woe delights in fellowship,
And needly will be rank'd with other griefs,—
Why follow'd not, when she said—Tybalt's dead,
Thy father, or thy mother, nay, or both,
Which modern³ lamentation might have mov'd?
But, with a rear-ward following Tybalt's death,
Romeo is banished!—to speak that word,
Is father, mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet,
All slain, all dead:—Romeo is banished!—
There is no end, no limit, measure, bound,
In that word's death: no words can that woe sound.—
Where is my father, and my mother, nurse?

Nurse. Weeping and wailing over Tybalt's corse:
Will you go to them? I will bring you thither.

Jul. Wash they his wounds with tears? mine shall be spent.

When theirs are dry, for Romeo's banishment.
Take up those cords.—Poor ropes, you are beguil'd.
Both you and I, for Romeo is exil'd: [Taking them up.
He made you for a highway to my bed,
But I, a maid, die maiden-widowed.
Come, cords; come, nurse: I'll to my wedding bed;
And death, not Romeo, take my maidenhead!

Nurse. Hie to your chamber: I'll find Romeo
To comfort you:—I wot well where he is.
Hark ye, your Romeo will be here at night:
I'll to him; he is hid at Laurence's cell.

Jul. O, find him! give this ring to my true knight,
And bid him come to take his last farewell. [Exit

SCENE III.—Friar LAURENCE'S Cell.

Enter Friar LAURENCE and ROMEO.

Fri. Romeo, come forth; come forth, thou fearful
Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts, [man:
And thou art wedded to calamity.

Rom. Father, what news? what is the prince's doom?
What sorrow craves acquaintance at my hand,
That I yet know not?

Fri. Too familiar
Is my dear son with such sour company:
I bring thee tidings of the prince's doom.

Rom. What less than dooms-day is the prince's doom?

Fri. A gentler judgment parted from his lips,
Not body's death, but body's banishment.

Rom. Ha! banishment? be merciful, say—death;
For exile hath more terror in his look,
Much more than death: do not say—banishment.

Fri. Hence from Verona art thou banished:
Be patient, for the world is broad and wide.

Rom. There is no world without Verona walls,
But purgatory, torture, hell itself.

Hence banished is banish'd from the world,
And world's exile is death:—then, banished
Is death mis-term'd: calling death banishment,
Thou cut'st my head off with a golden axe,
And smil'st upon the stroke that murders me.

Fri. O deadly sin! O rude unthankfulness!
Thy fault our law calls death; but the kind prince,
Taking thy part, hath brush'd aside the law,
And turn'd that black word death to banishment:
This is dear mercy, and thou seest it not.

Rom. 'T is torture, and not mercy: heaven is here.

Where Juliet lives; and every cat, and dog,
And little mouse, every unworthy thing,
Live here in heaven, and may look on her;
But Romeo may not.—More validity,
More honourable state, more courtship lives
In carrion flies, than Romeo: they may seize
On the white wonder of dear Juliet's hand,
And steal immortal blessing from her lips;
Who, even in pure and vestal modesty,
Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin;
This may flies do, when I from this must fly,
And say'st thou yet, that exile is not death?
But Romeo may not: he is banished.
Flies may do this, but I from this must fly:
They are free men, but I am banish'd.⁵

Hadst thou no poison mix'd, no sharp-ground knife,
No sudden mean of death, though ne'er so mean,
But—banished—to kill me; banished?
O friar! the damned used that word in hell;
Howling attends it: how hast thou the heart,
Being a divine, a ghostly confessor,
A sin-absolver, and my friend profess'd,
To mangle me with that word—banished?

Fri. Thou fond mad man, hear me but speak a word
Rome. O! thou wilt speak again of banishment.

Fri. I'll give thee armour to keep off that word;
Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy,
To comfort thee, though thou art banished.

Rom. Yet banished?—Hang up philosophy:
Unless philosophy can make a Juliet,
Displant a town, reverse a prince's doom,
It helps not, it prevails not. Talk no more.

¹ So the undated quarto; others and folio: dim ² So the undated quarto; other old copies: bower. ³ Common ⁴ Not in f e ⁵ Far and the previous line, are not in folio

Fri. O! then I see that madmen have no ears.

Rom. How should they, when that wise men have no eyes?

Fri. Let me dispute with thee of thy estate.

Rom. Thou canst not speak of that thou dost not feel.

Wert thou as young as I, Juliet thy love,

An hour but married, Tybalt murdered,

Doting like me, and like me banished,

Then mightst thou speak, then mightst thou tear thy hair,

And fall upon the ground, as I do now,

Faking the measure of an unmade grave. [Falling.]

Fri. Arise; one knocks: good Romeo, hide thyself.

[Knocking within.]

Rom. Not I: unless the breath of heart-sick groans.
Mist-like, infold me from the search of eyes. [Knocking.]

Fri. Hark, how they knock!—who's there?—

Romeo, arise;

Thou wilt be taken.—Stay a while.—Stand up:

[Knocking.]

Run to my study.—By and by.—God's will!

What wilfulness is this!—I come, I come. [Knocking.]
Who knocks so hard? whence come you? what's your will?

Nurse. [Within.] Let me come in and you shall know my errand:

I come from lady Juliet.

Fri. Welcome, then.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. O holy friar! O! tell me, holy friar,

Where is my lady's lord? where's Romeo?

Fri. There on the ground, with his own tears made drunk.

Nurse. O! he is even in my mistress' case;
Just in her case.

Fri. O woful sympathy!

Piteous predicament!

Nurse. Even so lies she,

Blubbing and weeping, weeping and blubbing.—

Stand up, stand up; stand, an you be a man:

For Juliet's sake, for her sake, rise and stand;

Why should you fall into so deep an O? [ROMEO groans.]

Rom. Nurse!

[Rising suddenly.]

Nurse. Ah sir! ah sir!—Death is the end of all.

Rom. Spak'st thou of Juliet? how is it with her?

Doth she not think me an old murderer,

Now I have stain'd the childhood of our joy

With blood remov'd but little from her own?

Where is she? and how doth she? and what says

My conceal'd lady to our cancell'd love?

Nurse. O, she says nothing, sir, but weeps and weeps;

And now falls on her bed; and then starts up,

And Tybalt calls; and then on Romeo cries,

And then down falls again.

Rom. As if that name,

Shot from the deadly level of a gun,

Did murder her; as that name's cursed hand

Murder'd her kinsman.—O! tell me, friar, tell me,

In what vile part of this anatomy

Doth my name lodge? tell me, that I may sack

The hateful mansion. [Drawing his sword.]

Fri. Hold thy desperate hand!

Art thou a man? thy form cries out, thou art;

Thy tears are womanish; thy wild acts denote

The unreasonable fury of a beast:

Unseemly woman, in a seeming man;

Or ill-beseeming beast, in seeming both!

Thou hast amaz'd me: by my holy order,

I thought thy disposition better temper'd.

Hast thou slain Tybalt? wilt thou slay thyself,

And slay thy lady, too, that lives in thee,

By doing damned hate upon thyself?*

Why rail'st thou on thy birth, the heaven, and earth

Since birth, and heaven, and earth, all three do meet

In thee at once, which thou at once wouldst lose.

Fie, fie! thou sham'st thy shape, thy love, thy wit,

Which, like an usurer, abound'st in all,

And usest none in that true use indeed

Which should bedeck thy shape, thy love, thy wit.

Thy noble shape is but a form of wax,

Digressing from the valour of a man:

Thy dear love, sworn, but hollow perjury,

Killing that love which thou hast vow'd to cherish,

Thy wit, that ornament to shape and love,

Mis-shapen in the conduct of them both,

Like powder in a skill-less soldier's flask,

Is set afire by thine own ignorance,

And thou dismember'd with thine own defence.

What! rouse thee, man: thy Juliet is alive,

For whose dear sake thou wast but lately dead;

There art thou happy: Tybalt would kill thee,

But thou slew'st Tybalt; there art thou happy too:

The law, that threaten'd death, becomes thy friend,¹

And turns it to exile; there art thou happy:

A pack of blessings lights upon thy back;

Happiness courts thee in her best array:

But, like a mis-behav'd and sullen wench,

Thou poust'st upon thy fortune and thy love.

Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable.

Go, get thee to thy love, as was agreed,

Ascend her chamber, hence and comfort her;

But, look, thou stay not till the watch be set,

For then thou canst not pass to Mantua;

Where thou shalt live, till we can find a time²

To blaze your marriage, reconcile your friends,

Beg pardon of the prince, and call thee back,

With twenty hundred thousand times more joy

Than thou went'st forth in lamentation.—

Go before, nurse: commend me to thy lady;

And bid her hasten all the house to bed,

Which heavy sorrow makes them apt unto:

Romeo is coming.

Nurse. O Lord! I could have stay'd here all the night,

To hear good counsel: O, what learning is!—

My lord, I'll tell my lady you will come.

Rom. Do so, and bid my sweet prepare to chide.

Nurse. Here is a ring she bid me give you, sir.

Hie you, make haste, for it grows very late. [Exit Nurse.]

Rom. How well my comfort is reviv'd by this!

Fri. Go hence. Good night: and here stands all

Either be gone before the watch be set, [your state:—

Or by the break of day disguis'd from hence.

Sojourn in Mantua; I'll find out your man,

And he shall signify from time to time

Every good hap to you that chances here.

Give me thy hand: 't is late; farewell: good night

Rom. But that a joy past joy calls out on me,

It were a grief so brief to part with thee:

Farewell. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—A Room in CAPULET'S House.

Enter CAPULET, Lady CAPULET, and PARIS.

Cap. Things have fallen out, sir, so unluckily.

That we have had no time to move our daughter.

Look you, she lov'd her kinsman Tybalt dearly,

And so did I:—well, we were born to die —

* This and the sixteen following lines, are not in quarto, 1597. ¹ This and the next line, are not in quarto 1597.
² This and the next four lines, are not in quarto, 1597.

'T is very late, she'll not come down to-night :
I promise you, but for your company,
I would have been a-bed an hour ago.

Par. These times of woe afford no time to woo.—
Ma'am, good night : commend me to your daughter.

La. Cap. I will, and know her mind early to-morrow ;
To night she's mew'd up in her heaviness.

Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a desperate tender
Of my child's love : I think, she will be rul'd
In all respects by me ; may more, I doubt it not.

Wife, go you to her ere you go to bed ;
Acquaint her here of my son Paris' love,
And bid her, mark you me, on Wednesday next—
But soft ! what day is this ?

Par. Monday, my lord.

Cap. Monday ? ha ! ha ! Well, Wednesday is too
O' Thursday let it be :—o' Thursday, tell her, [soon ;
She shall be married to this noble earl.—
Will you be ready ? do you like this haste ?
We'll keep no great ado :—a friend, or two ;—
For hark you, Tybalt being slain so late.

It may be thought we held him carelessly,
Being our kinsman, if we revel much.
Therefore, we'll have some half a dozen friends,
And there an end. But what say you to Thursday ?

Par. My lord, I would that Thursday were to-morrow.

Cap. Well, get you gone : o' Thursday be it then.—

Go you to Juliet, ere you go to bed,
Prepare her, wife, against this wedding-day.—
Farewell, my lord.—Light to my chamber, ho !
Afore me ! it is so very late, that we

May call it early by and by.—Good night. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—JULIET'S Chamber.

Enter ROMEO AND JULIET.

Jul. Wilt thou be gone ? it is not yet near day :
It was the nightingale, and not the lark,
That pierc'd the fearful hollow of thine ear
Nightly she sings on yon pomegranate tree
Believe me, love, it was the nightingale.

Rom. It was the lark, the herald of the morn.
No nightingale : look, love, what envious streaks
Do lace the severing clouds in yonder east.
Night's candles are burnt out, and jocund day
Stands tip-toe on the misty mountain tops :
I must be gone and live, or stay and die.

Jul. Yon light is not day-light : I know it, I :
It is some meteor that the sun exhales,
To be to thee this night a torch-bearing,
And light thee on thy way to Mantua :

Therefore, stay yet ; thou need'st not to be gone.
Rom. Let me be ta'en, let me be put to death ;
I am content, so thou wilt have it so.

I'll say, yon grey is not the morning's eye,
'T is but the pale reflex of Cynthia's bow ;
Nor that is not the lark, whose notes do beat
The vaulty heaven so high above our heads :
I have more care to stay, than will to go :—
Come, death, and welcome : Juliet wills it so —
How is't, my soul ? let's talk, it is not day.

Jul. It is, it is ; hie hence, be gone, away !
It is the lark that sings so out of tune,
Straining harsh discords, and unpleasant sharps.
Some say, the lark makes sweet division ;
This doth not so, for she divideth us :
Some say, the lark and loathed toad change eyes ;
O ! now I would they had chang'd voices too,

Since arm from arm that voice doth us affray.
Hunting thee hence with hunts-up¹ to the day.
O ! now be gone : more light and light it grows.
Rom. More light and light, more dark and dark our woes.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Madam !

Jul. Nurse.

Nurse. Your lady mother's coming to your chamber.
The day is broke ; be wary, look about. [Exit Nurse.

Jul. Then, window, let day in, and let life out.
Rom. Farewell, farewell ! one kiss, and I'll descend [Descending.

Jul. Art thou gone so ? love, lord ! ay, husband !
I must hear from thee every hour in the day, [friend !
For in a minute there are many days :
O ! by this count I shall be much in years,
Ere I again behold my Romeo.

Rom. Farewell ! I will omit no opportunity
That may convey my greetings, love, to thee.

Jul. O ! think'st thou, we shall ever meet again ?

Rom. I doubt it not ;² and all these woes shall serve
For sweet discourses in our time to come.

Jul. O God ! I have an ill-divining soul :
Methinks, I see thee, now thou art so low,
As one dead in the bottom of a tomb :

Either my eyesight fails, or thou look'st pale.

Rom. And trust me, love, in my eye so you do :
Dry sorrow drinks our blood. Adieu ! adieu !

[Exit ROMEO.

Jul. O fortune, fortune ! all men call thee fickle :
If thou art fickle, what dost thou with him
That is renoun'd for faith ? Be fickle, fortune ;
For, then, I hope thou wilt not keep him long,
But send him back.

La. Cap. [Within.] Ho ! daughter, are you up ?

Jul. Who is't that calls ? is it my lady mother ?
Is she not down so late, or up so early ?

What unaccustom'd cause procures her hither ?

Enter Lady CAPULET.

La. Cap. Why, how now, Juliet ?

Jul. Madam, I am not well.

La. Cap. Evermore weeping for your cousin's death
What ! wilt thou³ wash him from his grave with tears ?
An if thou wouldst, thou couldst not make him live ;
Therefore, have done. Some grief shows much of love
But much of grief shows still some want of wit.

Jul. Yet let me weep for such a feeling loss.

La. Cap. So shall you feel the loss, but not the friend
Which you weep for.

Jul. Feeling so the loss,

I cannot choose but ever weep the friend.

La. Cap. Well, girl, thou weep'st not so much for his death,

As that the villain lives which slaughter'd him.

Jul. What villain, madam ?

La. Cap. That same villain, Romeo

Jul. Villain and he are many miles asunder.

God pardon him ! I do, with all my heart ;

And yet no man, like him, could grieve my heart.

La. Cap. That is, because the traitor murderer⁴ lives

Jul. Ay, madam, from the reach of these my hands

Would none but I might venge my cousin's death⁵

La. Cap. We will have vengeance for it, fear thou not

Then, weep no more. I'll send to one in Mantua,—

Where that same banish'd rufianate doth live,—

Shall give him such an unaccustom'd dram⁶

¹ brow ; in f. ² The name of a tune to summon hunters. ³ No doubt, no doubt : in quarto, 1597. ⁴ This and the next two speeches, are wanting in the quarto, 1597. I think, thou'lt : in quarto, 1597. The scene was much altered subsequently. ⁵ Not in quartos. ⁶ That should bestow on him so rare a draught : quarto, 1597.

That he shall soon keep Tybalt company;
And then. I hope, thou wilt be satisfied.

Jul. Indeed, I never shall be satisfied
With Romeo, till I behold him—dead—
Is my poor heart so for a kinsman vex'd.—
Madam, if you could find out but a man
To bear a poison, I would temper it,
That Romeo should, upon receipt thereof,
Soon sleep in quiet.—O! how my heart abhors
To hear him nam'd,—and cannot come to him,—
To wreak the love I bore my cousin Tybalt
Upon his body that hath slaughter'd him!

La. Cap. Find thou the means, and I'll find such a man.

But now I'll tell thee joyful tidings, girl.

Jul. And joy comes well in such a needy time.

What are they, I beseech your ladyship?

La. Cap. Well, well, thou hast a careful father, child;
One who, to put thee from thy heaviness,
Hath sorted out a sudden day of joy,
That thou expect'st not, nor I look'd not for.

Jul. Madam, in happy time, what day is that?

La. Cap. Marry, my child, early next Thursday morn,
The gallant, young, and noble gentleman,
The county Paris, at Saint Peter's church
Shall happily make thee a joyful bride.

Jul. Now, by Saint Peter's church, and Peter too,
He shall not make me there a joyful bride.
I wonder at this haste; that I must wed
Ere he, that should be husband, comes to woo.
I pray you, tell my lord and father, madam,
I will not marry yet; and, when I do, I swear,
It shall be Romeo, whom you know I hate,
Rather than Paris.

La. Cap. These are news indeed!¹
Here comes your father; tell him so yourself.
And see how he will take it at your hands.

Enter CAPULET and Nurse.

Cap. When the sun sets, the earth doth drizzle dew;
But for the sunset of my brother's son
It rains downright.—

How now! a conduit, girl? what! still in tears?
Evermore showering? In one little body
Thou counterfeit'st a bark, a sea, a wind:
For still thy eyes, which I may call the sea,
Do ebb and flow with tears; the bark thy body is,
Sailing in this salt flood; the winds, thy sighs;
Who, raging with thy tears, and they with them,
Without a sudden calm, will overset
Thy tempest-tossed body.—How now, wife!
Have you deliver'd to her our decree?

La. Cap. Ay, sir; but she will none, she gives you thanks.

I would, the fool were married to her grave.

Cap. Soft, take me with you, take me with you, wife.
How! will she none? doth she not give us thanks?
Is she not proud? doth she not count her blessing,
Unworthy as she is, that we have wrought
So worthy a gentleman to be her bridegroom?

Jul. Not proud you have, but thankful that you have:
Proud can I never be of what I hate;
But thankful even for hate, that is meant love.

Cap. How now, how now, chop-logic! What is this?
Proud,—and, I thank you,—and, I thank you not;—
And yet not proud?—Mistress minion, you,²
Thank me no thankings, nor proud me no prouds,
But settle your fine joints 'gainst Thursday next

To go with Paris to Saint Peter's church,
Or I will drag thee on a hurdle thither
Out, you green-sickness carrion! out, you baggage!
You tallow face!

La. Cap. Fie, fie! what, are you mad?

Jul. Good father, I beseech you on my knees,
Hear me with patience but to speak a word.

Cap. Hang thee, young baggage! disobedient wretch!
I tell thee what,—get thee to church o' Thursday,
Or never after look me in the face.
Speak not, reply not, do not answer me;
My fingers itch.—Wife, we scarce thought us bless'd
That God had lent us but this only child;
But now I see this one is one too much,
And that we have a curse in having her.
Out on her, hilding!³

Nurse. God in heaven bless her!

You are to blame, my lord, to rate her so.

Cap. And why, my lady wisdom? hold your tongue
Good prudence: smatter with your gossips; go.

Nurse. I speak no treason.

Cap. O! God ye good den.⁴

Nurse. May not one speak?

Cap. Peace, you mumbling fool!
Utter your gravity o'er a gossip's bowl,
For here we need it not.

La. Cap. You are too hot.

Cap. God's bread! it makes me mad.⁵
Day, night, hour, tide, time, work, play,
Alone, in company, still my care hath been
To have her match'd; and having now provided
A gentleman of noble parentage,
Of fair demesnes, youthful, and nobly train'd,⁶
Stuff'd (as they say) with honourable parts,
Proportion'd as one's thought would wish a man,—
And then to have a wretched puling fool,
A whining mammet, in her fortune's tender,
To answer—"I'll not wed,"—"I cannot love,"
"I am too young,"—"I pray you, pardon me."—
But, an you will not wed, I'll pardon you;
Grazed where you will, you shall not house with me;
Look to't, think on't, I do not use to jest.
Thursday is near: lay hand on heart, advise.
An you be mine, I'll give you to my friend;
An you be not, hang, beg, starve, die i' the streets,
For, by my soul, I'll ne'er acknowledge thee,
Nor what is mine shall never do thee good.
Trust to't, bethink you; I'll not be forsworn. [Exit.]

Jul. Is there no pity sitting in the clouds,
That sees into the bottom of my grief?
O, sweet my mother, cast me not away!
Delay this marriage for a month, a week;
Or, if you do not, make the bridal bed
In that dim monument where Tybalt lies.

La. Cap. Talk not to me, for I'll not speak a word
Do as thou wilt, for I have done with thee. [Exit.]

Jul. O God!—O nurse! how shall this be prevented?
My husband is on earth, my faith in heaven;
How shall that faith return again to earth,
Unless that husband send it me from heaven
By leaving earth?—Comfort me, counsel me.—
Alack! that heaven should practise stratagems
Upon so soft a subject as myself!—
What say'st thou? hast thou not a word of joy?
Some comfort, nurse.

Nurse. Faith, here 'tis. Romeo
Is banished, and all the world to nothing,

- this: in quarto, 1597. ² f. e. give this line to JULIET. ³ Not in folio. ⁴ A low, disreputable person. ⁵ God give you good even'g day. ⁶ God's blessed mother, wife, it made me: in quarto, 1597. ⁷ Illid: in folio. ⁸ heart could: in quarto, 1597. ⁹ The quarto 1597 has but one line in place of this speech.

That he dares ne'er come back to challenge you ;
Or, if he do, it needs must be by stealth.
Then, since the case so stands as now it doth,
I think it best you married with the county.
O ! he's a lovely gentleman ;
Romeo's a dishclout to him : an eagle, madam,
Hath not so green, so quick, so fair an eye,
As Paris hath. Beshrew my very heart,
I think you are happy in this second match,
For it excels your first : or if it did not,
Your first is dead ; or it were as good he were,
As living here and you no use of him.

Jul. Speakest thou from thy heart ?

Nurse. And from my soul too ;
Or else beshrew them both.

Jul. Amen !

Nurse.

What ?

Jul. Well, thou hast comforted me marvellous much.
Go in ; and tell my lady I am gone,
Having displeas'd my father, to Laurence' cell,
To make confession, and to be absolv'd.

Nurse. Marry, I will ; and this is wisely done.

[Exi.

Jul. Ancient damnation ! O, most wicked fiend !

Is it more sin to wish me thus forsworn,
Or to dispraise my lord with that same tongue
Which she hath praised him with above compare
So many thousand times ?—Go, counsellor ;
Thou and my bosom henceforth shall be twain.—
I'll to the friar, to know his remedy ;
If all else fail, myself have power to die.

[Exi.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Friar LAURENCE'S Cell.

Enter Friar LAURENCE and PARIS.

Fri. On Thursday, sir ? the time is very short.

Par. My father Capulet will have it so ;
And I am nothing slow to slack¹ his haste.

Fri. You say, you do not know the lady's mind :
Uneven is the course ; I like it not.

Par. Immoderately she weeps for Tybalt's death,
And therefore, have I little talk'd of love ;
For Venus smiles not in a house of tears.
Now, sir, her father counts it dangerous,
That she doth give her sorrow so much way ;
And in his wisdom hastes our marriage,
To stop the inundation of her tears ;
Which, too much minded by herself alone,
May be put from her by society.
Now do you know the reason of this haste ?

Fri. I would I knew not why it should be slow'd.

[Aside.

Look, sir, here comes the lady towards my cell.

Enter JULIET.

Par. Happily met, my lady, and my wife.

Jul. That may be, sir, when I may be a wife.

Par. That may be, must be, love, on Thursday next.

Jul. What must be shall be.

Fri. That's a certain text.

Par. Come you to make confession to this father ?

Jul. To answer that, I should confess to you.

Par. Do not deny to him that you love me.

Jul. I will confess to you that I love him.

Par. So will you. I am sure, that you love me.

Jul. If I do so, it will be of more price.

Being spoke behind your back, than to your face.

Par. Poor soul, thy face is much abus'd with tears.

Jul. The tears have got small victory by that ;
For it was bad enough before their spite.

Par. Thou wrong'st it, more than tears, with that report.

Jul. That is no slander, sir, which is a truth,

And what I spake, I spake it to my face.

Par. Thy face is mine, and thou hast slander'd it.

Jul. It may be so, for it is not mine own.—

Are you at leisure, holy father, now.

Or shall I come to you at evening mass ?

Fri. My leisure serves me, pensive daughter, now.—
My lord, we must entreat the time alone.

Par. God shield, I should disturb devotion !—

Juliet, on Thursday early will I rouse you :

Till then, adieu ; and keep this holy kiss. [Exit PARIS.

Jul. O ! shut the door ; and when thou hast done so,
Come weep with me ; past hope, past cure,⁴ past help !

Fri. O Juliet ! I already know thy grief ;
It strains me past the compass of my wits :⁵
I hear thou must, and nothing must prorogue it.
On Thursday next be married to this Count.

Jul. Tell me not, friar, that thou hear'st of this,
Unless thou tell me how I may prevent it :
If in thy wisdom thou canst give no help,⁶
Do thou but call my resolution wise,
And with this knife I'll help it presently. [Showing it.
God join'd my heart and Romeo's, thou our hands ;
And ere this hand, by thee to Romeo seal'd,⁷
Shall be the label to another deed,

Or my true heart with treacherous revolt
Turn to another, this shall slay them both.

Therefore, out of thy long-experienc'd time,
Give me some present counsel ; or, behold,
Twixt my extremes and me this bloody knife
Shall play the umpire ; arbitrating that,
Which the commission of thy years and art
Could to no issue of true honour bring.

Be not so long to speak ; I long to die, [Offers to strike.
If what thou speak'st speak not of remedy.

Fri. Hold, daughter ! I do spy a kind of hope,
Which craves as desperate an execution
As that is desperate which we would prevent.

If, rather than to marry county Paris,
Thou hast the strength of will to slay thyself,
Then is it likely thou wilt undertake
A thing like death to chide away this shame,
That cop'st with death himself to scape from it,
And, if thou dar'st, I'll give thee remedy.

Jul. O ! bid me leap, rather than marry Paris,
From off the battlements of yonder⁸ tower ;
Or walk in thievish ways ; or bid me lurk
Where serpents are ; chain me with roaring bears,⁹
Or hide me nightly in a charnel-house,
O'er-cover'd quite with dead men's rattling bones,
With reeky shanks, and yellow chapless skulls ;

¹ slack to slow : in quarto, 1597. ² away : in f. e. ³ Welcome, my love : in quarto, 1597. ⁴ care : in folio. ⁵ This line is not in quarto 1597. ⁶ This and the eight following lines are not in quarto, 1597. ⁷ Not in f. e. ⁸ The seals of deeds were attached by ribands or labels. ⁹ Not in f. e. ¹⁰ any : in folio

¹¹ Or skain me to some steepy mountain's top. Where roaring bears and savage lions are : in quarto, 1597.

Or bid me go into a new-made grave,
And hide me with a dead man in his shroud;¹
Things that to hear them told have made me tremble;
And I will do it without fear or doubt,
To live an unstain'd wife to my sweet love.²
Fri. Hold, then: go home, be merry, give consent
To marry Paris. Wednesday is to-morrow;
To-morrow night look that thou lie alone,
Let not thy nurse lie with thee in thy chamber:
Take thou this phial, being then in bed,
And this distilled liquor drink thou off;
When presently, through all thy veins shall run
A cold and drowsy humour; for no pulse
Shall keep his native progress, but surcease:³
No warmth, no breath, shall testify thou livest;
The roses in thy lips and cheeks shall fade
To paly⁴ ashes; thy eyes' windows fall,
Like death when he shuts up the day of life;
Each part, depriv'd of supple government,
Shall stiff and stark and cold, appear like death:
And in this borrow'd likeness of shrunk death
Thou shalt continue two and forty hours,
And then awake as from a pleasant sleep.
Now, when the bridegroom in the morning comes
To rouse thee from thy bed, there art thou dead:
Then, as the manner of our country is,
In thy best robes uncover'd on the bier,
Be borne to burial in thy kindred's grave:
Thou shalt be borne to that same ancient vault,
Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie.
In the meantime, against thou shalt awake,
Shall Romeo by my letters know our drift;
And hither shall he come, and he and I
Will watch thy waking, and that very night
Shall Romeo bear thee hence to Mantua.
And thou shalt free thee from this present shame,
If no unconstant toy, nor womanish fear,
Abate thy valour in the acting it.

Jul. Give me, give me! O! tell me not of fear.

Fri. Hold; get you gone: be strong and prosperous
In this resolve. I'll send a friar with speed
To Mantua, with my letters to thy lord.

Jul. Love, give me strength, and strength shall help afford.

Farewell, dear father. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in CAPULET'S House.

Enter CAPULET, Lady CAPULET, Nurse, and Servants.

Cap. So many guests invite as here are writ.—

[Exit Servant.]

Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning cooks.

2 Serv. You shall have none ill, sir; for I'll try if they can lick their fingers.

Cap. How canst thou try them so?

2 Serv. Marry, sir, 't is an ill cook that cannot lick his own fingers; therefore he that cannot lick his fingers goes not with me.

Cap. Go, begone.— [Exit Servant.]

We shall be much unfurnish'd for this time.—

What, is my daughter gone to Friar Laurence?

Nurse. Ay, forsooth.

Cap. Well, he may chance to do some good on her:
A peevish self-will'd harlotry it is.

Enter JULIET.

Nurse. See, where she comes from shrift with merry look.

Cap. How now, my headstrong! where have you been gadding?

Jul. Where I have learn'd me to repent the sin
Of disobedient⁵ opposition
To you, and your behests; and am enjoin'd
By holy Laurence to fall prostrate here, [Kneeling.
And beg your pardon.—Pardon, I beseech you:
Henceforward I am ever rul'd by you.

Cap. Send for the County: go tell him of this.
I'll have this knot knit up to-morrow morning.

Jul. I met the youthful lord at Laurence's cell:
And gave him what becoming⁷ love I might,
Not stepping o'er the bounds of modesty.

Cap. Why, I am glad on 't; this is well.—stand up:
This is as 't should be.—Let me see the County:

Ay, marry, go. I say, and fetch him hither.—

Now, afore God, this reverend holy friar,

All our whole city is much bound to him.

Jul. Nurse, will you go with me into my closet,

To help me sort such needful ornaments

As you think fit to furnish me to-morrow?

La. Cap. No, not till Thursday: there is time enough.

Cap. Go, nurse, go with her.—We'll to church tomorrow. [Exeunt JULIET and Nurse]

La. Cap. We shall be short in our provision:
'T is now near night.

Cap. Tush! I will stir about,

And all things shall be well. I warrant thee, wife,
Go thou to Juliet; help to deck up her:

I'll not to bed to-night;—let me alone:

I'll play the housewife for this once.—What ho!—

They are all forth: well, I will walk myself

To county Paris, to prepare him up

Against to-morrow. My heart is wondrous light,

Since this same wayward girl is so reclaim'd. [Exeunt]

SCENE III.—JULIET'S Chamber.

Enter JULIET and Nurse.

Jul. Ay, those attires are best;—but, gentle nurse,

I pray thee leave me to myself to-night;

For I have need of many orisons

To move the heavens to smile upon my state,

Which, well thou know'st, is cross and full of sin.

Enter Lady CAPULET.

La. Cap. What, are you busy, ho? need you my help?

Jul. No, madam; we have cull'd forth such necessities

As are behoveful for our state to-morrow:

So please you, let me now be left alone,

And let the nurse this night sit up with you:

For, I am sure, you have your hands full all.

In this so sudden business.

La. Cap. Good night:

Get thee to bed, and rest; for thou hast need.

[Exeunt Lady CAPULET and Nurse]

Jul. Farewell!—God knows when we shall meet again.

¹ Or lay me in a tomb with one new dead: in quarto, 1597; the undated quarto has: shroud; the folio: grave.

² To keep myself a faithful, unstained wife. To my dear lord, my dearest Romeo: in quarto, 1597.

³ A dull and heavy slumber, which shall seize, Each vital spirit; for no pulse shall keep. His natural progress, but surcease to beat: in quarto, 1597. ⁴ So the undated quarto; others, and folio: many. ⁵ forward, wilful: in quarto, 1597. ⁶ Not in f. e. ⁷ become: in f. e.

⁸ In the quarto, 1597, this speech is thus given:

Farewell, God knows when we shall meet again.

Ah, I do take a fearful thing in hand—

What if this potion should not work at all,

Must I of force be married to the county?

This shall forbid it. Knife, lie thou there.

What if the friar should give me this drink

To poison me, for fear I should disclose

Our former marriage? Ah, I wrong him much.

He is a holy and religious man:

I will not entertain so if a thought.

What if I should be stifled in the tomb?

Awake an hour before the appointed time?

Ah! then I fear I shall be lunatic.

And playing with my dead forefather's bones.

Dash out my frantic brains. Methinks I see

My cousin Tybalt, weltering in his blood,

Seeking for Romeo: stay, Tybalt, stay,

Romeo. I come, this do I drink to thee.

have a faint cold fear thrills through my veins,
That almost freezes up the heat of life:
I'll call them back again to comfort me.—
Nurse!—What should she do here?
My dismal scene I needs must act alone.—
Come, plial.—

What if this mixture do not work at all,
Shall I be married, then, to-morrow morning?—
No, no:—this shall forbid it:—lie thou there.—

[Laying down a Dagger.]

What if it be a poison, which the friar
Subtly hath minister'd to have me dead,
Lest in this marriage he should be dishonour'd,
Because he married me before to Romeo?
I fear, it is; and yet, methinks, it should not,
For he hath still been tried a holy man:
I will not entertain so bad a thought.—
How if, when I am laid into the tomb,
I wake before the time that Romeo
Come to redeem me? there's a fearful point.
Shall I not, then, be stilled in the vault.

To whose foul mouth no healthsome air breathes in,
And there die strangled ere my Romeo comes?

Or, if I live, is it not very like,
The horrible conceit of death and night,
Together with the terror of the place,—
As in a vault, an ancient receptacle,
Where, for these many hundred years, the bones
Of all my buried ancestors are pack'd;
Where bloody Tybalt, yet but green in earth,
Lies festering in his shroud; where, as they say,
At some hours in the night spirits resort:—
Alack, alack! is it not like, that I,
So early waking,—what with loathsome smells,
And shrieks like mandrakes' torn out of the earth,
That living mortals, hearing them, run mad;—
O! if I wake, shall I not be distraught,
Environed with all these hideous fears,
And madly play with my forefathers' joints,
And pluck the mangled Tybalt from his shroud?
And, in this rage, with some great kinsman's bone,
As with a club, dash out my desperate brains?

O, look! methinks, I see my cousin's ghost
Seeking out Romeo, that did spit his body
Upon a rapier's point.—Stay, Tybalt, stay!
Romeo! Romeo! here's drink!—I drink to thee.

[She throws herself on the bed.]

SCENE IV.—CAPULET'S Hall.

Enter Lady CAPULET and Nurse.

La. Cap. Hold; take these keys, and fetch more spices, nurse.

Nurse. They call for dates and quinces in the pastry.

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. Come, stir, stir, stir! the second cock hath crow'd.

The curfew bell hath rung. 't is three o'clock.—
Look to the bak'd meats, good Angelica:
Spare not for cost.

Nurse. Go, go, you cot-quen,³ go.
Get you to bed: 'Faith, you'll be sick to-morrow
For this night's watching.

Cap. No, not a whit. What! I have watch'd ere now
All night for lesser cause, and ne'er been sick.

La. Cap. Ay, you have been a mouse-hunt⁴ in your
But I will watch you from such watching now. [Time;]
[Exeunt Lady CAPULET and Nurse.]

Cap. A jealous-hood, a jealous-hood!—Now, fellow
What's there?

Enter Servants, with Spits, Logs, and Baskets.

1 Serv. Things for the cook, sir; but I know not what.

Cap. Make haste, make haste. [Exit 1 Serv.—Sir-rah, fetch drier logs:

Call Peter, he will show thee where they are.

2 Serv. I have a head, sir, that will find out logs,
And never trouble Peter for the matter. [Exit?]

Cap. 'Mass, and well said; a merry whoreson, ha!
Thou shalt be logger-head.—Good faith! 't is day:
The County will be here with music straight,

[Music within]

For so he said he would.—I hear him near.—

Nurse!—Wife!—what, ho!—what, nurse, I say!

Enter Nurse.

Go, waken Juliet: go, and trim her up:

I'll go and chat with Paris.—Hie, make haste,

Make haste; the bridegroom he is come already.

Make haste, I say. [Exeunt]

SCENE V.—JULIET'S Chamber; JULIET on the Bed.

Enter Nurse.

Nurse. Mistress!—what, mistress!—Juliet!—fast,
I warrant:—

Why, lamb!—why, lady!—fie, you slug-a-bed!—

Why, love, I say!—madam! sweet-heart!—why, bride!—

What! not a word?—You take your pennyworths now:

Sleep for a week; for the next night, I warrant,

The county Paris hath set up his rest,

That you shall rest but little.—God forgive me,

Marry and amen, how sound is she asleep!

I needs must wake her.—Madam, madam, madam!

Ay, let the County take you in your bed:

He'll fright you up, i' faith.—Will it not be?

What, drest! and in your clothes! and down again!

I must needs wake you. Lady! lady, lady!

Alas! alas!—Help! help! my lady's dead!—

O, well-a-day, that ever I was born!—

Some aqua-vitæ, ho!—my lord! my lady!

Enter Lady CAPULET.

La. Cap. What noise is here?

Nurse. O lamentable day!

La. Cap. What is the matter?

Nurse. Look, look! O heavy day!

La. Cap. O me! O me!—my child, my only life,
Revive, look up, or I will die with thee!—

Help, help!—call help.

Enter CAPULET.

Cap. For shame! bring Juliet forth; her lord is come.

Nurse. She's dead, deceas'd: she's dead; alack the day!

La. Cap. Alack the day! she's dead, she's dead,
she's dead.

Cap. Ha! let me see her.—Out, alas! she's cold!

Her blood is settled, and her joints are stiff;

Life and these lips have long been separated:

Death lies on her, like an untimely frost

Upon the sweetest flower of all the field.

Nurse. O lamentable day!

La. Cap. O woful time!

Cap. Death, that hath ta'en her hence to make me wail,

Ties up my tongue, and will not let me speak.

Enter Friar LAURENCE and PARIS, with Musician.

Fri. Come, is the bride ready to go to church?

Some mod eds. Lady Cap 2 A man who interferes in women's business. 3 A stout. 4 In quarto, 1597, this speech stands:
Stay, let me see, all pale and wan,
Accured time, unfortunate old man.

Cap. Ready to go, but never to return.—
O son! the night before thy wedding day
Hath dealt unkindly with thy wife: there she lies,
Flower as she was, deflowered by him.
Death is my son-in-law, death is my heir;
My daughter he hath wedded. I will die,
And leave him all; life, living! all is death's!

Par. Have I thought long to see this morning's face?
And doth it give me such a sight as this?

La. Cap. Accurs'd, unhappy, wretched, hateful day!
Most miserable hour, that e'er time saw
In lasting labour of his pilgrimage!
But one, poor one, one poor and loving child,
But one thing to rejoice and solace in,
And cruel death hath catch'd it from my sight.

Nurse. O woe. O woful, woful, woful day!

Most lamentable day! most woful day,
That ever, ever, I did yet behold!
O day! O day! O day! O hateful day!
Never was seen so black a day as this:
O woful day, O woful day!

Par. Beguil'd, divorc'd, wrong'd, spited, slain!
Most detestable death, by thee beguil'd,
By cruel cruel thee quite overthrown!—
O love! O life!—not life, but love in death!

Cap. Despis'd, distressed, hated, martyr'd, kill'd!
Uncomfortable time, why canst thou now
To murder, murder our solemnity?—
O child! O child!—my soul, and not my child!—
Dead art thou!—alack! my child is dead;
And with my child my joys are buried.

Fri. Peace, ho! for shame! confusion's cure¹ lives not
In these confusions. Heaven and yourself
Hath part in this fair maid, now heaven hath all;
And all the better is it for the maid:
Your part in her you could not keep from death,
But heaven keeps his part in eternal life.
The most you sought was her promotion,
For 't was your heaven she should be advanc'd;
And weep ye now, seeing she is advanc'd
Above the clouds, as high as heaven itself?
O! in this love you love your child so ill,
That you run mad, seeing that she is well:
She's not well married that lives married long,
But she's best married that dies married young.
Dry up your tears, and stick your rosemary
On this fair corse: and, as the custom is,
In all² her best array bear her to church;
For though fond nature bids us all lament,
Yet nature's tears are reason's merriment.

Cap. All things, that we ordained festival,
Turn from their office to black funeral:
Our instruments to melancholy bells;
Our wedding cheer to a sad burial feast;
Our solemn hymns to sullen dirges change;
Our bridal flowers serve for a buried corse,
And all things change them to the contrary.

Fri. Sir, you go in,—and, madam, go with him;—

And go, sir Paris:—every one prepare
To follow this fair corse unto her grave.
The heavens do low'r upon you, for some ill;
Move them no more, by crossing their high will.

[Exeunt CAPULET, Lady CAPULET, PARIS, and FRIAR.]

1 Mus. 'Faith, we may put up our pipes, and be gone.

Nurse. Honest good fellows, ah! put up, put up, for, well you know, this is a pitiful case. [Exit Nurse.]

1 Mus. Ay, by my troth, the case may be amended.

Enter PETER.

Pet. Musicians. O, musicians! "Heart's ease," Heart's ease." O! an you will have me live, play—
"Heart's ease."

1 Mus. Why "Heart's ease?"

Pet. O, musicians! because my heart itself plays
"My heart is full of woe." O! play me some merry dump,³ to comfort me.

2 Mus. Not a dump we: 't is no time to play now.

Pet. You will not, then?

Mus. No.

Pet. I will, then, give it you soundly.

1 Mus. What will you give us?

Pet. No money, on my faith; but the gleek⁴: I will give you the minstrel.

1 Mus. Then, will I give you the serving-creature.

Pet. Then, will I lay the serving-creature's dagger on your pate. I will carry no crotchets: I'll re you,
I'll fa you. Do you note me? [Drawing his dagger.]

1 Mus. An you re us, and fa us, you note us.

2 Mus. Pray you, put up your dagger, and put out your wit.

Pet. Then have at you with my wit. I will dry-beat you with my iron wit, and put up my iron dagger.
—Answer me like men:

When gripping grief the heart doth wound,¹²

And doleful dumps the mind oppress,

Then music, with her silver sound;

Why, "silver sound?" why, "music with her silver sound?" What say you, Simon Catling?

1 Mus. Marry, sir, because silver hath a sweet sound.

Pet. Thou pratest¹³!—What say you, Hugh Rebeck?

2 Mus. I say "silver sound," because musicians sound for silver.

Pet. Thou pratest too!—What say you, James Soundpost?

3 Mus. 'Faith, I know not what to say.

Pet. O! I cry you mercy: you are the singer: I will say for you. It is "music with her silver sound," because musicians¹⁴ have seldom gold for sounding:—

Then music with her silver sound.

With speedily help doth lend redress.

[Exit.]

1 Mus. What a pestilent knave is this same.

2 Mus. Hang him, Jack! Come, we'll in here;
tarry for the mourners, and stay dinner. [Exeunt.]

And doth it now present such prodigies?

Accurs'd, unhappy, miserable man!

Forlorn, forsaken, destitute, I am;

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Mantua. A Street.

Enter ROMEO.

Rom. If I may trust the flattering death¹ of sleep,
My dreams presage some joyful news at hand.²
My bosom's lord sits lightly³ in his throne;
And, all this day, an unaccustom'd spirit
Lifts me above the ground with cheerful thoughts.
I dreamt, my lady came and found me dead;
Strange dream! that gives a dead man leave to think!
And breath'd such life with kisses in my lips,
That I reviv'd, and was an emperor.
Ah me! how sweet is love itself possess'd,⁴
When but love's shadows are so rich in joy?

Enter BALTHASAR.

News from Verona!—How now, Balthasar?
Dost thou not bring me letters from the friar?
How doth my lady? Is my father well?
How fares my⁵ Juliet? That I ask again;
For nothing can be ill if she be well.

Bal. Then she is well, and nothing can be ill:
Her body sleeps in Capulet's monument,
And her immortal part with angels lives.
I saw her laid low in her kindred's vault,
And presently took post to tell it you.
O pardon me for bringing these ill news,
Since you did leave it for my office, sir.

Rom. Is it e'en so? then, I defy⁶ you, stars!—
Thou know'st my lodging: get me ink and paper,
And hire post horses; I will hence to-night.

Bal. I do beseech you, sir, have patience:
Your looks are pale and wild, and do import
Some misadventure.

Rom. Tush! thou art deceiv'd
Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do.
Hast thou no letters to me from the friar?

Bal. No, my good lord.

Rom. No matter; get thee gone.
And hire those horses: I'll be with thee straight.

[Exit BALTHASAR.]

Well, Juliet, I will lie with thee to-night.
Let's see for means:—O, mischief! thou art swift⁷
To enter in the thoughts of desperate men.
I do remember an apothecary.

And hereabouts he dwells, which late I noted
In tatter'd weeds, with overwhelming brows,
Culling of simples: meagre were his looks,
Sharp misery had worn him to the bones;
And in his needy shop a tortoise hung,
An alligator stuff'd, and other skins
Of ill-shap'd fishes: and about his shelves
A beggarly account of empty boxes,
Green earthen pots, bladders, and musty seeds,
Remnants of packthread, and old cakes of roses,
Were thinly scatter'd to make up a show.
Noting this penury, to myself I said—
An if a man did need a poison now,

¹ truth: in f. e. eye: in quarto, 1597. ² good event to come: in quarto, 1597. ³ cheerful: in quarto, 1597. ⁴ This and the next line not in quarto, 1597. ⁵ This line not in quarto, 1597. ⁶ doth my lady: in later quartos, and folio. ⁷ deny: in later quartos, and folio. ⁸ The quarto, 1597, reads:

As I do remember.
Here dwells a potheary, whom oft I note!
As I pass by, whose needy shop is stuff'd
With beggarly accounts of empty boxes:
And in the same an alligator hangs,
Old ends of packthread, and cakes of roses.
Are thinly strew'd to make up a show.

next: twenty: in quarto, 1597. ¹⁰ poverty: in quarto, 1597. ¹¹ The quarto, 1597, has in place of this, and next line:
Upon thy back hangs ragged misery,
And starv'd famine dwelleth in thy cheeks.

Whose sale is present death in Mantua,
Here lives a caitiff wretch would sell it him.
O! this same thought did but forerun my need,
And this same needy man must sell it me.
As I remember, this should be the house:
Being holiday, the beggar's shop is shut.—
What, ho! apothecary!

Enter Apothecary.

Ap. Who calls so loud?

Rom. Come hither, man.—I see, that thou art poor:
Hold, there is forty⁹ ducats: let me have
A dram of poison; such soon-speeding geer
As will disperse itself through all the veins,
That the life-weary taker may fall dead;
And that the trunk may be discharg'd of breath
As violently, as hasty powder fir'd
Doth hurry from the fatal cannon's womb.

Ap. Such mortal drugs I have; but Mantua's law
Is death to any he that utters them.

Rom. Art thou so bare, and full of wretchedness,¹⁰
And fear'st to die? famine is in thy cheeks,
Need and oppression starveth in thy eyes,¹¹
Contempt and beggary hang on thy back,
The world is not thy friend, nor the world's law:
The world affords no law to make thee rich:
Then, be not poor, but break it, and take this.

Ap. My poverty, but not my will, consents.

[Exit and returns.¹²]

Rom. I pay thy poverty, and not thy will

Ap. Put this in any liquid thing you will,
And drink it off: and, if you had the strength
Of twenty men, it would dispatch you straight.

Rom. There is thy gold; worse poison to men's souls,

Doing more murders in this loathsome world,
Than these poor compounds that thou may'st not sell:
I sell thee poison, thou hast sold me none.
Farewell; buy food, and get thyself in flesh.—
Come, cordial, and not poison, go with me
To Juliet's grave, for there must I use thee. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Friar LAURENCE'S Cell.

Enter Friar JOHN.

John. Holy Franciscan friar! brother, ho!

Enter Friar LAURENCE.

Lau. This same should be the voice of friar John.—
Welcome from Mantua: what says Romeo?
Or, if his mind be writ, give me his letter.

John. Going to find a bare-foot brother out,
One of our order, to associate me,
Here in this city visiting the sick,
And finding him, the searchers of the town,
Suspecting that we both were in a house
Where the infectious pestilence did reign,
Seal'd up the doors, and would not let us forth;
So that my speed to Mantua there was stay'd.

Lau. Who bare my letter, then, to Romeo?

Him, as I noted, thus with myself I thought,
An if a man should need a poison now,
(Whose present sale is death in Mantua),
Here he might buy it. This thought of mine
Did but forerun my need; and hereabout he dwells.
Being holiday the beggar's shop is shut.
What, ho! apothecary! come forth, I say—

⁹ Not in f. e.

John. I could not send it,—here it is again,—

[Giving it.]

Nor get a messenger to bring it thee,
So fearful were they of infection.

Lau. Unhappy fortune! by my brotherhood,
The letter was not nice,¹ but full of charge
Of dear import; and the neglecting it
May do much danger. Friar John, go hence;
Get me an iron crow,² and bring it straight
Unto my cell.

John. Brother, I'll go and bring it.

[Exit.]

Lau. Now must I to the monument alone.
Within this three hours will fair Juliet wake;
She will beshrew me much, that Romeo
Hath had no notice of these accidents;
But I will write again to Mantua,
And keep her at my cell till Romeo come:
Poor living corse, clos'd in a dead man's tomb! [Exit.]

SCENE III.—A Churchyard, in it the Monument of the Capulets.

Enter PARIS, and his Page, bearing Flowers, and a Torch.

Par. Give me thy torch, boy: hence, and stand
Yet put it out, for I would not be seen. [aloof;—
Under yond' yew-trees lay thee all along,
Holding thine ear close to the hollow ground;
So shall no foot upon the churchyard tread,
Being loose, unfirm with digging up of graves,
But thou shalt hear it: whistle then to me,
As signal that thou hear'st something approach.
Give me those flowers. Do as I bid thee; go.

[Giving a basket.]

Page. I am almost afraid to stay³ alone
Here in the churchyard; yet I will adventure. [Retires.]

Par. Sweet flower, with flowers thy bridal bed I
O woe! thy canopy is dust and stones, [strew.
Which with sweet water nightly I will dew,
Or wanting that with tears distill'd by means:
The obsequies, that I for thee will keep,
Nightly shall be to strew thy grave and weep!⁴

[The Boy whistles.]

The boy gives warning something doth approach.
What cursed foot wanders this way to-night,
To cross my obsequies, and true love's rite?
What! with a torch?—muffle me, night, a while.

[Retires.]

Enter ROMEO and BALTHASAR, with a Torch, Mattock, &c.

Rom. Give me that mattock, and the wrenching iron.
Hold, take this letter: early in the morning
See thou deliver it to my lord and father.
Give me the light. Upon thy life I charge thee,
Whate'er thou hear'st or seest, stand all aloof,
And do not interrupt me in my course.
Why I descend into this bed of death
Is partly to behold my lady's face;
But chiefly to take thence from her dead finger
A precious ring, a ring that I must use
In dear employment. Therefore hence, be gone:
But if thou, jealous, dost return to pry
In what I farther shall intend to do,
By heaven, I will tear thee joint by joint,

And strew this hungry churchyard with thy limbs.
The time and my intents are savage, wild;⁵
More fierce, and more inexorable far,
Than empty tigers, or the roaring sea.

Bal. I will be gone, sir, and not trouble you.

Rom. So shalt thou show me friendship.—Take thou that:

[Giving his Purse.]

Live, and be prosperous; and farewell, good fellow

Bal. For all this same, I'll hide me here about:

His looks I fear, and his intents I doubt.

[Exit.]

Rom. Thou detestable maw, thou womb of death,
Gorg'd with the dearest morsel of the earth,
Thus I enforce thy rotten jaws to open,

[Breaking open the Monument]

And, in despite, I'll cram thee with more food!

Par. This is that banish'd haughty Montague,
That murder'd my love's cousin,—with which grief,⁶
It is supposed, the fair creature died,
And here is come to do some villainous shame
To the dead bodies: I will apprehend him:—

[Advancing]

Stop thy unhallow'd toil, vile Montague.

Can vengeance be pursu'd farther than death?

Condemned villain, I do apprehend thee:

Obeys, and go with me; for thou must die.

Rom. I must, indeed; and therefore came I hither.—

Good gentle youth, tempt not a desperate man;

Fly hence, and leave me:—think upon these gone;

Let them affright thee.—I beseech thee, youth,

Put¹¹ not another sin upon my head,

By urging me to fury!¹²—O! be gone.

By heaven, I love thee better than myself,

For I come hither arm'd against myself.

Stay not, be gone¹³—live, and hereafter say—¹⁴

A madman's mercy bade thee run away.

Par. I do defy commutation,¹⁵

And apprehend thee for a felon here.

Rom. Wilt thou provoke me? then, have at thee.
boy. [They fight]

Page. O Lord! they fight: I will go call the watch.

[Exit Page]

Par. O! I am slain. [Falls.—If thou be merciful,
Open the tomb, lay me with Juliet. [Dies.]

Rom. In faith, I will.—Let me peruse this face —

Mercutio's kinsman, noble county Paris! —

What said my man when my betossed soul

Did not attend him as we rode? I think,

He told me, Paris should have married Juliet.

Said he not so? or did I dream it so?

Or am I mad, hearing him talk of Juliet,¹⁶

To think it was so?—O! give me thy hand, [Taking it.]¹⁷

One writ with me in sour misfortune's book!

I'll bury thee in a triumphant grave,—

A grave? O, no! a lantern, slaughter'd youth,

For here lies Juliet; and her beauty makes

This vault a feasting presence full of light.

Death, lie thou there, by a dead man interr'd.

[Laying PARIS in the Monument.]

How oft, when men are at the point of death,

Have they been merry,¹⁸ which their keepers call

A lightning before death: O! how may I

Call this a lightning?—O, my love! my wife!

¹ Not in f. e. ² A trifling matter. ³ A spade and mattock: in quarto, 1597. ⁴ Not in f. e. ⁵ stand: in f. e. ⁶ Th. quarto, 1597 gives instead of these lines:

Sweet tomb, that in thy circuit dost contain,

The perfect model of eternity.

Fair Juliet, that with angels dost remain.

⁷ The next two lines, not in quarto, 1597. ⁸ Not in f. e. ⁹ Retires: in f. e. ¹⁰ This and the next three lines, are not in quarto, 1597.

¹¹ Heap: in quarto, 1597. ¹² By shedding of thy blood: in quarto, 1597. ¹³ This and the next line, not in quarto, 1597. ¹⁴ thy conjurers (entreaty): in quarto, 1597. ¹⁵ The quarto, 1597, has in place of this and the six following lines:

But I will satisfy thy last request.

For thou hast priz'd thy love above thy life

¹⁶ Not in f. e. ¹⁷ Been blith and pleasant: in quarto, 1597.

Death, that hath suck'd the honey of thy breath,
 Hath had no power yet upon thy beauty:
 Thou art not conquer'd; beauty's ensign yet
 Is crimson in thy lips, and in thy cheeks,
 And death's pale flag is not advanced there.—
 Tybalt, liest thou there in thy bloody sheet?
 O! what more favour can I do to thee,
 Than with that hand that cut thy youth in twain,
 To sunder his that was thine enemy?
 Forgive me, cousin!—Ah! dear Juliet,
 Why art thou yet so fair? I will believe
 That unsubstantial death is amorous;
 And that the lean abhorred monster keeps
 Thee here in dark to be his paramour.
 For fear of that I still will stay with thee,
 And never from this palace of dim night
 Depart again: here, here will I remain
 With worms that are thy chambermaids; O! here
 Will I set up my everlasting rest,
 And shake the yoke of inauspicious stars
 From this world-wearied flesh.—Eyes, look your last:
 Arms, take your last embrace; and lips, O! you,
 The doors of breath, seal with a righteous kiss
 A dateless bargain to engrossing death.—
 Come, bitter conduct, come, unsavoury guide!
 Thou desperate pilot, now at once run on
 The dashing rocks thy sea-sick weary bark.
 Here's to my love!—[Drinks.] O, true apothecary!
 Thy drugs are quick.—Thus with a kiss I die.

[Dies near JULIET.]

Enter, at the other End of the Churchyard, Friar LAURENCE, with a Lantern, Crow, and Spade; and BALTHASAR following.

Fri. Saint Francis be my speed! how oft to-night
 Have my old feet stumbled at graves?—Who's there?

Bal. Here's one, a friend, and one that knows you well.

Fri. Bliss be upon you! Tell me, good my friend,
 What torch is yond', that vainly lends his light
 To grubs and eyeless skulls? as I discern
 It burneth in the Capulets' monument.

Bal. It doth so, holy sir; and there's my master,
 One that you love.

Fri. Who is it?

Bal. Romeo.

Fri. How long hath he been there?

Bal. Full half an hour.

Fri. Go with me to the vault.

Bal. I dare not, sir.

My master knows not, but I am gone hence;
 And fearfully did menace me with death,
 If I did stay to look on his intents.

Fri. Stay, then, I'll go alone.—Fear comes upon me;
 O! much I fear some ill unthrifty thing.

Bal. As I did sleep under this yew-tree here,
 I dreamt my master and another fought,
 And that my master slew him.

[Exit.]

Fri. Romeo!—[Advancing.]
 Alack! alack! what blood is this, which stains
 The stony entrance of this sepulchre?
 What mean these masterless and gory swords
 To lie discoloured by this place of peace!

[Entering the Monument.]

Romeo! O, pale!—Who else? what, Paris too?

And steep'd in blood?—Ah! what an unkind hour
 Is guilty of this lamentable chance!—

The lady stirs.

[JULIET wakes]

Jul. O, comfortable friar! where is my lord?

I do remember well where I should be,

And there I am.—Where is my Romeo? [Noise within]

Fri. I hear some noise.—Lady, come from that nest
 Of death, contagion, and unnatural sleep.

A greater power than we can contradict

Hath thwarted our intents: come, come away.

Thy husband in thy bosom there lies dead;

And Paris too: come, I'll dispose of thee

Among a sisterhood of holy nuns.

Stay not to question, for the watch is coming;

Come, go, good Juliet.—[Noise again.] I dare no longer stay. [Exit]

Jul. Go, get thee hence, for I will not away.—

What's here? a cup, clos'd in my true love's hand?

Poison, I see, hath been his timeless end.—

O churl! drink all, and left no friendly drop,

To help me after?—I will kiss thy lips;¹⁰

Haply, some poison yet doth hang on them,

To make me die with a restorative. [Kisses him.]

Thy lips are warm!

1 Watch. [Within.] Lead, boy:—which way?

Jul. Yea, noise?—then I'll be brief.—O happy dagger! [Snatching Romeo's Dagger]

This is thy sheath: [Stabs herself;] there rest,¹¹ and let me die.¹² [Dies]

Enter Watch, with the Page of PARIS.

Page. This is the place; there, where the torch doth burn.

1 Watch. The ground is bloody, search about the churchyard.

Go, some of you; whoe'er you find, attach. [Exeunt some]

Private sight! here lies the County slain;

And Juliet bleeding; warm, and newly dead,

Who here hath lain these two days buried.—

Go, tell the Prince,—run to the Capulets,—

Raise up the Montagues, some others search.—

[Exeunt other Watchmen.]

We see the ground whereon these woes do lie,

But the true ground of all these piteous woes

We cannot without circumstance descry.

Enter some of the Watch, with BALTHASAR.

2 Watch. Here's Romeo's man; we found him in the churchyard.

1 Watch. Hold him in safety, till the Prince come hither.

Enter another Watchman, with Friar LAURENCE.

3 Watch. Here is a friar, that trembles, sighs, and weeps;

We took this mattock and this spade from him,

As he was coming from this churchyard side.

1 Watch. A great suspicion: stay the friar too.

Enter the Prince and Attendants.

Prince. What misadventure is so early up,

That calls our person from our morning rest?

Enter CAPULET, Lady CAPULET, and others

Cap. What should it be, that they so shriek abroad?

La. Cap. O! the people in the street cry Romeo,

Some Juliet, and some Paris; and all run

With open outcry toward our monument.

Prince. What fear is this which startles in your ears?

¹ This and the four previous lines, are not in quarto, 1597. ² Dies: in f. e. ³ The rest of this stage direction, is not in f. e. ⁴ Malone adds, from quarto, 1597, (which has the line after BALTHASAR's speech): Who is it that so late consorts the dead? ⁵ unclucky: is late, quarto, and folio. ⁶ Not in f. e. ⁷ In quarto, 1593:

what unclucky hour
 Is necessary to so foul a sin?
⁸ ⁹ ¹⁰ These lines and the rest of the speech, are not in quarto, 1597. ¹¹ rust: in all but quarto, 1597 ¹² In quarto, 1597:
 Ay, noise? then must I be resolute.
 O, happy dagger! thou shalt end my fear;
 Rest in my bosom! Thus I come to thee.

1 Watch. Sovereign, here lies the county Paris slain;
And Romeo dead; and Juliet, dead before,
Warm and new kill'd.

Prince. Search, seek and know how this foul murder comes.

1 Watch. Here is a friar, and slaughter'd Romeo's man,

With instruments upon them, fit to open
These dead men's tombs.

Cap. O, heaven!—O, wife! look how our daughter bleeds!

This dagger hath mista'en.—for, lo! his house¹
Is empty on the back of Montague,
And is mis-sheathed in my daughter's bosom.²

La. Cap. O me! this sight of death is as a bell,
That warns my old age to a sepulchre.

Enter MONTAGUE and others.

Prince. Come, Montague: for thou art early up,
To see thy son and heir more early down.

Mon. Alas, my liege, my wife is dead to-night;³
Grief of my son's exile has stopp'd her breath.
What farther woe conspires against mine age?

Prince. Look, and thou shalt see.

Mon. O thou untaught! what manners is in this,
To press before thy father to a grave?

Prince. Seal up the mouth of outcry⁴ for a while,
Till we can clear these ambiguities.

And know their spring, their head, their true descent;⁵
And then will I be general of your woes,

And lead you even to death. Mean time forbear,
And let mischance be slave to patience.—
Bring forth the parties of suspicion.

Fri. I am the greatest, able to do least,
Yet most suspected, as the time and place

Do make against me, of this direful murder;
And here I stand, both to impeach and purge
Myself condemned, and myself excus'd.

Prince. Then, say at once what thou dost know in this.

Fri. I will be brief, for my short date of breath
Is not so long as is a tedious tale.

Romeo, there dead, was husband to that Juliet;
And she, there dead, that Romeo's faithful wife:

I married them; and their stolen marriage-day
Was Tybalt's dooms-day, whose untimely death

Banish'd the new-made bridegroom from this city;
For whom, and not for Tybalt, Juliet pin'd.

You, to remove that siege of grief from her,
Betroth'd, and would have married her perforce,

To county Paris: then, comes she to me,
And, with wild looks, bid me devise some means

To rid her from this second marriage.
Or in my cell there would she kill herself.

Then gave I her, (so tutor'd by my art)
A sleeping potion; which so took effect

As I intended, for it wrought on her
The form of death. Meantime, I writ to Romeo,

That he should hither come, as this dire night,
To help to take her from her borrow'd grave,

Being the time the potion's force should cease:
But he which bore my letter, friar John,

Was stay'd by accident, and yesternight

Return'd my letter back. Then, all alone,
At the prefixed hour of her waking,
Came I to take her from her kindred's vault,
Meaning to keep her closely at my cell,

Till I conveniently could send to Romeo:
But, when I came, (some minute ere the time
Of her awakening) here untimely lay

The noble Paris, and true Romeo, dead.
She waked; and I entreated her come forth,
And bear this work of heaven with patience:

But then a noise did scare me from the tomb,
And she, too desperate, would not go with me,
But (as it seems) did violence on herself.

All this I know, and to the marriage
Her nurse is privy; and, if aught in this Miscarried by my fault, let my old life

Be sacrific'd some hour before the time,
Unto the rigour of severest law.

Prince. We still have known thee for a holy man—
Where's Romeo's man? what can he say in this?

Bal. I brought my master news of Juliet's death.
And then in post he came from Mantua,

To this same place, to this same monument.
This letter he early bid me give his father;

And threaten'd me with death, going in the vault,
If I departed not, and left him there.

Prince. Give me the letter, I will look on it.—
Where is the county's page, that rais'd the watch?

Sirrah. what made your master in this place?

Page. He came with flowers to strew his lady's grave
And bid me stand aloof, and so I did:

Anon, comes one with light to ope the tomb,
And, by and by, my master drew on him;

And then I ran away to call the watch.

Prince. This letter doth make good the friar's words.
Their course of love, the tidings of her death;

And here he writes, that he did buy a poison
Of a poor 'pothecary; and therewithal

Came to this vault to die, and lie with Juliet.—
Where be these enemies? Capulet! Montague!

See, what a scourge is laid upon your hate,
That heaven finds means to kill your joys with love;

And I, for winking at your discords too,
Have lost a brace of kinsmen—all are punish'd.

Cap. O, brother Montague! give me thy hand:
This is my daughter's jointure; for no more

Can I demand. [They shake hands.]

Mon. But I can give thee more;
For I will raise her statue in pure gold,

That, while Verona by that name is known,
There shall no figure at such rate be set,

As that of fair⁶ and faithful Juliet.⁷

Cap. As rich shall Romeo by his lady lie;
Poor sacrifices of our enmity.

Prince. A glooming⁸ peace this morning with it brings,
The sun for sorrow will not show his head.

Go hence, to have more talk of these sad things:
Some shall be pardon'd, and some punished:

For never was a story of more woe,
Than this of Juliet and her Romeo. [Exeunt]

¹ Sheath. ² And it is sheathed in our daughter's breast: in quarto, 1597. ³ The quarto, 1597, adds. And young Benvolio is deceased too. ⁴ outrage: in f. e. ⁵ In quarto, 1597:

And let us seek to find the authors out
Of such a heinous and self-sent mischance.

⁶ The quarto, 1597, has in place of this and the next four lines: Where are these enemies? See what hate hath done. ⁷ Not in f. e. ⁸ true: in f. e. ⁹ In quarto, 1597:

There shall no statue at such price be set,
As that of Romeo and loved Juliet.

¹⁰ gloomy: in quarto, 1597.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Athens. A Hall in TIMON'S House.

Enter Poet, Painter, Jeweller, Merchant, and others, at several Doors.

Poet. Good day, sir.

Pain. I am glad you're well.

Poet. I have not seen you long. How goes the world?

Pain. It wears, sir, as it grows.

Poet. Ay, that's well known;
But what particular rarity? what strange,
Which manifold record not matches? See,
Magic of bounty! all these spirits thy power
Hath conjur'd to attend. I know the merchant.

Pain. I know them both: th' other's a jeweller.

Mer. O! 't is a worthy lord.

Jew. Nay, that's most fix'd.

Mer. A most incomparable man; breath'd, as it were,
To an untriable and continuant goodness:
He passes.²

Jew. I have a jewel here— [Showing it.]

Mer. O! pray, let's see 't. For the lord Timon, sir?

Jew. If he will touch the estimate; but, for that—

Poet. "When we for recompense have prais'd the vile,

It stains the glory in that happy verse

Which aptly sings the good."³

Mer. 'T is a good form.

Jew. And rich: here is a water, look ye.

Pain. You are rapt, sir, in some work, some dedication.

To the great lord.

Poet. A thing slipp'd idly from me.

Our poetry is as a gum,⁴ which issues⁵
From whence 't is nourish'd: the fire i' the flint
Shows not, till it be struck; our gentle flame

Provokes itself, and, like the current, flies

Each bound it chafes. What have you there?

Pain. A picture, sir.—When comes your book forth?

Poet. Upon the heels of my presentment, sir.

Let's see your piece.

Pain. 'T is a good piece. [Showing it.]

Poet. So 't is: this comes off well, and excellent.

Pain. Indifferent.

Poet. Admirable! How this grace

Speaks his own standing; what a mental power

This eye shoots forth; how big imagination

Moves in this lip; to the dumbness of the gesture

One might interpret.

Pain. It is a pretty mocking of the life.

Here is a touch; is 't good?

Poet. I'll say of it,

It tutors nature: artificial strife

Lives in these touches, livelier than life.

Enter certain Senators, who pass over the Stage.

Pain. How this lord is follow'd!

Poet. The senators of Athens:—happy men!

Pain. Look, more!

Poet. You see this confluence, this great flood of visitors.

I have in this rough work shap'd out a man,

Whom this beneath world doth embrace and hug

With amplest entertainment: my free drift

Halts not particularly, but moves itself

In a wide sea of verse: 't no levell'd malice

Infects one comma in the course I hold,

But flies an eagle flight, bold, and forth on,

Leaving no tract behind.

Pain. How shall I understand you?

Poet. I will unbolt to you.

You see how all conditions, how all minds,
(As well of glib and slippery creatures, as

Of grave and austere quality) tender down
 Their services to lord Timon: his large fortune,
 Upon his good and gracious nature hanging,
 Subdues and properties to his love and tendance,
 All sorts of hearts; yea, from the glass-fac'd flatterer
 To Apemantus, that few things loves better
 Than to abhor himself: even he drops down
 The knee before him, and returns in peace
 Most rich in Timon's nod.

Pain. I saw them speak together.

Poet. Sir, I have upon a high and pleasant hill
 Feign'd Fortune to be thron'd: the base o' the mount
 Is rank'd with all deserts, all kind of natures,
 That labour on the bosom of this sphere
 To propagate their states: amongst them all,
 Whose eyes are on this sovereign lady fix'd,
 One do I personate of lord Timon's frame;
 Whom Fortune with her ivory hand wafts to her,
 Whose present grace to present slaves and servants
 Translates his rivals.

Pain. 'Tis conceiv'd to scope.
 This throne, this Fortune, and this hill, methinks,
 With one man beckon'd from the rest below,
 Bowing his head against the steepy mount,
 To climb his happiness, would be well express'd
 In our condition.

Poet. Nay, sir, but hear me on.
 All those which were his fellows but of late,
 (Some better than his value) on the moment
 Follow his strides; his lobbies fill with tendance,
 Rain sacrificial whisperings in his ear,
 Make sacred even his stirrup, and through him
 Drink the free air.

Pain. Ay, marry, what of these?

Poet. When Fortune, in her shift and change of mood,
 Spurns down her late belov'd, all his dependants,
 Which labour'd after him to the mountain's top,
 Even on their knees and hands, let him slip down,
 Not one accompanying his declining foot.

Pain. 'T is common:
 A thousand moral paintings I can show,
 That shall demonstrate these quick blows of Fortune's
 More pregnant than words. Yet you do well,
 To show lord Timon that: mean eyes have seen
 The foot above the head.

Trumpets sound. Enter TIMON, attended; the Servant of VENTIDIUS talking with him.

Tim. Imprison'd is he, say you?

Ven. Serv. Ay, my good lord: five talents is his debt;
 His means most short, his creditors most strait:
 Your honourable letter he desires
 To those have shut him up; which failing,
 Periods his comfort.

Tim. Noble Ventidius! Well;
 I am not of that feather, to shake off
 My friend when he most needs me. I do know him
 A gentleman that well deserves a help,
 Which he shall have. I'll pay the debt, and free him.

Ven. Serv. Your lordship ever binds him.

Tim. Commend me to him: I will send his ransom;
 And, being enfranchis'd, bid him come to me.—
 'T is not enough to help the feeble up.

But to support him after.—Fare you well.

Ven. Serv. All happiness to your honour! [Exit.

Enter an old Athenian.

Old Ath. Lord Timon, hear me speak.

Tim. Freely, good father.

Old Ath. Thou hast a servant nam'd Lucilius.

Tim. I have so: what of him?

Old Ath. Most noble Timon, call the man before thee.
Tim. Attends he here, or no?—Lucilius!

Enter LUCILIUS.

Luc. Here, at your lordship's service. [creature.

Old Ath. This fellow here, lord Timon, this thy
 By night frequents my house. I am a man
 That from my first have been inclin'd to thrift,
 And my estate deserves an heir, more rais'd
 Than one which holds a trencher.

Tim. Well; what farther?

Old Ath. One only daughter have I; no kin else,
 On whom I may confer what I have got:
 The maid is fair, o' the youngest for a bride,
 And I have bred her at my dearest cost
 In qualities of the best. This man of thine
 Attempts her love: I prythee, noble lord,
 Join with me to forbid him her resort;
 Myself have spoke in vain.

Tim. The man is honest.

Old Ath. Therefore he will be, Timon:
 His honesty rewards him in itself;
 It must not bear my daughter.

Tim. Does she love him?

Old Ath. She is young, and apt:
 Our own precedent passions do instruct us
 What levity's in youth.

Tim. [To LUCILIUS.] Love you the maid?

Luc. Ay, my good lord; and she accepts of it.

Old Ath. If in her marriage my consent be missing,
 I call the gods to witness, I will choose
 Mine heir from forth the beggars of the world,
 And dispossess her all.

Tim. How shall she be endow'd,
 If she be mated with an equal husband?

Old Ath. Three talents on the present; in future all

Tim. This gentleman of mine hath serv'd me long:
 To build his fortune I will strain a little,
 For 't is a bond in men. Give him thy daughter;
 What you bestow, in him I'll counterpoise,
 And make him weigh with her.

Old Ath. Most noble lord,

Pawn me to this your honour, she is his.
Tim. My hand to that: mine honour on my promise.
Luc. Humbly I thank your lordship. Never may
 That state or fortune be into my keeping,
 Which is not ow'd to you!

[Exeunt LUCILIUS and old Athenian]

Poet. You—my labour, and long live your lordship.

Tim. I thank you; you shall hear from me anon.
 Go not away.—What have you there, my friend?

Pain. A piece of painting, which I do beseech
 Your lordship to accept.

Tim. Painting is welcome.

The painting is almost the natural man;
 For since dishonour traffics with man's nature,
 He is but outside: these pencil'd figures are Even such as they give out. I like your work.
 And you shall find, I like it: wait attendance
 Till you hear farther from me.

Pain. The gods preserve you.

Tim. Well fare you, gentleman: give me your hand.
 We must needs dine together.—Sir, your jewel
 Hath suffer'd under praise.

Jew. What, my lord, dispraise?

Tim. A mere satiety of commendations.
 If I should pay you for 't as 't is extoll'd,
 It would unclaw me quite.

Jew. My lord, 't is rated

As those which sell would give: but you well know

Things of like value, differing in the owners,
Are prized by their masters. Believe 't, dear lord,
You mend the jewel by the wearing it.

Tim Well nook'd.
Mer. No, my good lord; he speaks the common
Which all men speak with him. [tongue,

Tim. Look, who comes here. Will you be chid?

Enter APEMANTUS.

Jew. We'll bear, with your lordship.

Mer. He'll spare none.

Tim. Good morrow to thee, gentle Apemantus.

Apem. Till I be gentle, stay thou for thy good morrow;
When thou art Timon's dog, and these knaves honest.

Tim. Why dost thou call them knaves? thou know'st them not.

Apem. Are they not Athenians?

Tim. Yes.

Apem. Then I repent not.

Jew. You know me, Apemantus.

Apem. Thou know'st I do; I call'd thee by thy name.

Tim. Thou art proud, Apemantus.

Apem. Of nothing so much, as that I am not like
Timon.

Tim. Whither art going?

Apem. To knock out an honest Athenian's brains.

Tim. That's a deed thou'lt die for.

Apem. Right, if doing nothing be death by the law.

Tim. How likest thou this picture, Apemantus?

Apem. The best, for the innocence.

Tim. Wrought he not well that painted it?

Apem. He wrought better that made the painter; and yet he's but a filthy piece of work.

Pain. Y' are a dog.

Apem. Thy mother's of my generation: what's she,
if I be a dog?

Tim. Wilt dine with me, Apemantus?

Apem. No: I eat not lords.

Tim. An thou should'st, thou'dst anger ladies.

Apem. O! they eat lords; so they come by great bellies.

Tim. That's a lascivious apprehension.

Apem. So thou'st apprehend'st it. Take it for thy labour.

Tim. How dost thou like this jewel, Apemantus?

Apem. Not so well as plain-dealing, which will not cost a man a doit.

Tim. What dost thou think 't is worth?

Apem. Not worth my thinking.—How now, poet!

Poet. How now, philosopher!

Apem. Thou liest.

Poet. Art not one?

Apem. Yes.

Poet. Then, I lie not.

Apem. Art not a poet?

Poet. Yes.

Apem. Then, thou liest: look in thy last work, where thou hast feign'd him a worthy fellow.

Poet. That's not feign'd; he is so.

Apem. Yes, he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labour: he that loves to be flattered is worthy of the flatterer. Heavens, that I were a lord!

Tim. What wouldst do then, Apemantus?

Apem. Even as Apemantus does now, hate a lord with my heart.

Tim. What, thyself?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. Wherefore?

Apem. That I had so hungry a wish^t to be a lord.—
Art not thou a merchant?

Mer. Ay, Apemantus.

^t That I had no angry wit in t o ^t Merit.

Apem. Traffic confound thee, if the gods will not!

Mer. If traffic do it, the gods do it.

Apem. Traffic's thy god; and thy god confound thee:
Trumpets sound. Enter a Servant.

Tim. What trumpet's that?

Serv. 'T is Alcibiades, and
Some twenty horse, all of companionship.

Tim. Pray, entertain them; give them guide to us.—
[Exeunt some Attendants.

You must needs dine with me.—Go not you hence,
Till I have thank'd you; and when dinner's done
Show me this piece.—I am joyful of your sights.—

Enter ALCIBIADES, with his Company.

Most welcome, sir!

Apem. So, so, there.—

Aches contract and starve your supple joints!—

That there should be small love 'mongst these sweet knaves,

And all this courtesy. The strain of man's bred out
Into baboon and monkey.

Alcib. Sir, you have sav'd my longing, and I feed
Most hungrily on your sight.

Tim. Right welcome, sir:
Ere we depart, we'll share a bounteous time
In different pleasures. Pray you, let us in.

[Exeunt all but APEMANTUS

Enter two Lords.

1 Lord. What time o' day is 't, Apemantus?

Apem. Time to be honest.

1 Lord. That time serves still.

Apem. The more accursed thou, that still omit'st it.

2 Lord. Thou art going to lord Timon's feast.

Apem. Ay; to see meat fill knaves, and wine heat fools.

2 Lord. Fare thee well; fare thee well.

Apem. Thou art a fool to bid me farewell twice.

2 Lord. Why, Apemantus?

Apem. Shouldst have kept one to thyself, for I mean to give thee none.

1 Lord. Hang thyself.

Apem. No, I will do nothing at thy bidding: make thy requests to thy friend.

2 Lord. Away, unappeasable dog, or I'll spurn thee
hence.

Apem. I will fly, like a dog, the heels of the ass. [Exit.

1 Lord. He's opposite to humanity. Come, shall we in,
And taste lord Timon's bounty? he outgoes
The very heart of kindness.

2 Lord. He pours it out; Plutus, the god of gold,
Is but his steward: no meed? but he repays
Sevenfold above itself: no gift to him,
But breeds the giver a return exceeding
All use of quittance.

1 Lord. The noblest mind he carries,

That ever govern'd man.

2 Lord. Long may he live in fortunes! Shall we in?

1 Lord. I'll keep you company. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room of State in TIMON'S House.

Hautboys playing loud Music. A great banquet served in; FLAVIUS and others attending: then, enter TIMON, ALCIBIADES, LUCIUS, LUCULLUS, SEMPRONIUS, and other Athenian Senators, with VENTIDIUS, whom TIMON redeemed from prison, and Attendants: then comes, dropping after all, APEMANTUS, discontentedly, like himself.

Ven. Most honour'd Timon, it hath pleas'd the gods to remember

My father's age, and call him to long peace.
He is gone happy, and hast left me rich :
Then, as in grateful virtue I am bound
To your free heart, I do return those talents,
Doubled with thanks and service, from whose help
I deriv'd liberty.

Tim. O! by no means,
Honest Ventidius : you mistake my love.
I gave it freely ever ; and there's none
Can truly say, he gives, if he receives.
If our betters play at that game, we must not dare
To imitate them : faults that are rich are fair.

Ven. A noble spirit !

Tim. Nay, my lords,
Ceremony was but devis'd at first,
To set a gloss on faint deeds, hollow welcomes,
Recanting goodness, sorry ere 't is shown ;
But where there is true friendship, there needs none.
Pray, sit : more welcome are ye to my fortunes,
Than my fortunes to me.

[They sit.]

1 Lord. My lord, we always have confessed it.

Apem. Ho, ho ! confess'd it ? hang'd it, have you not ?

Tim. O, Apemantus !—you are welcome.

Apem. No, you shall not make me welcome :

I come to have thee thrust me out of doors. [there

Tim. Fie ! thou 'rt a churl : you have got a humour

Does not become a man : 't is much to blame.—

They say, my lords, ira furor brevis est,

But yond' man is ever' angry.

Go, let him have a table by himself ;

For he does neither affect company,

Nor is he fit for 't, indeed.

Apem. Let me stay at thine apperil,^a Timon :

I come to observe : I give thee warning on 't.

Tim. I take no heed of thee ; thou art an Athenian, therefore, welcome. I myself would have no power ;
pr'ythee, let my meat make thee silent.

Apem. I scorn thy meat : 't would choke me, for I should ne'er flatter thee.—O you gods ! what a number of men eat Timon, and he sees them not ! It grieves me, to see so many dip their meat in one man's blood ;
and all the madness is, he cheers them up too.

I wonder, men dare trust themselves with men :

Methinks, they should invite them without knives,

Good for their meat, and safer for their lives.

There's much example for 't ; the fellow, that sits next him now, parts bread with him, and pledges the breath of him in a divided draught, is the readiest man to kill him : it has been proved. If I were a huge man, I should fear to drink at meals,

Lest they should spy my windpipe's dangerous notes :
Great men should drink with harness on their throats.

Tim. My lord, in heart ; and let the health go round.

2 Lord. Let it flow this way, my good lord.

Apem. Flow this way ? A brave fellow !—he keeps his tides well. Those healths will make thee and thy state look ill, Timon.

Here's that, which is too weak to be a fire,^b

Honest water, which ne'er left man i' the mire :

This and my food are equals, there's no odds ;

Feasts are too proud to give thanks to the gods.

APEMANTUS' GRACE.

Immortal gods, I crave no pelf ;

I pray for no man, but myself.

Grant I may never prove so fond,

To trust man on his oath or bond :

Or a harlot for her weeping ;

Or a dog that seems a sleeping ;

Or a keeper with my freedom ;

Or my friends, if I should need 'em.

Amen. So fall to 't :

Rich men sin, and I eat root.

[Eats and drinks]

Much good do 't thy good heart, Apemantus !

Tim. Captain Alcibiades, your heart's in the field now.

Alcib. My heart is ever at your service, my lord.

Tim. You had rather be at a breakfast of enemies than a dinner of friends.

Alcib. So they were bleeding new, my lord, there's no meat like 'em : I could wish my best friend at such a feast.

Apem. 'Would all those flatterers were thine enemies
then, that then thou mightst kill 'em, and bid me to 'em

1 Lord. Might we but have that happiness, my lord, that you would once use our hearts, whereby we might express some part of our zeals, we should think our selves for ever perfect.

Tim. O ! no doubt, my good friends ; but the gods themselves have provided that I shall have much help from you : how had you been my friends else ? why have you that charitable title from thousands, did you not chiefly belong to my heart ? I have told more of you to myself, than you can with modesty speak in your own behalf ; and thus far I confirm you. O, you gods ! think I, what need we have any friends, if we should ne'er have need of 'em ? they were the most needless creatures living, should we ne'er have use for 'em ; and would most resemble sweet instruments hung up in cases, that keep their sounds to themselves.
Why, I have often wished myself poorer, that I might come nearer to you. We are born to do benefits ; and what better or properer can we call our own, than the riches of our friends ? O ! what a precious comfort
't is, to have so many, like brothers, commanding one another's fortunes. O joy, e'en made away ere 't can be born ! Mine eyes cannot hold out water, methinks :
to forget their faults, I drink to you.

Apem. Thou weep'st to make them drink, Timon.

2 Lord. Joy had the like conception in our eyes,
And at that instant, like a babe, sprung up.

Apem. Ho, ho ! I laugh to think that babe a bastard.

3 Lord. I promise you, my lord, you mov'd me much.

Apem. Much ! [Tucket sounded.]

Tim. What means that trumpet ?—How now !

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Please you, my lord, there are certain ladies most desirous of admittance.

Tim. Ladies ! What are their wills ?

Serv. There comes with them a forerunner, my lord, which bears that office to signify their pleasures.

Tim. I pray, let them be admitted.

Enter CUPID.

Cup. Hail to thee, worthy Timon : and to all
That of his bounties taste !—The five best senses
Acknowledge thee their patron ; and come freely
To gratulate thy plenteous bosom. The ear,
Taste, touch, smell, pleas'd from thy table rise ;
They only now come but to feast thine eyes.

Tim. They're welcome all. Let them have kind admittance :

Music, make their welcome [Exit CUPID]

1 Lord. You see, my lord, how amply y' are belov'd

Music. Re-enter CUPID, with a masque of Ladies as Amazons, with Lutes in their Hands, dancing, and playing.

Apem. Hey day! what a sweep of vanity comes this way!

They dance: they are mad women.

Like madness is the glory of this life.

As this pomp shows to a little oil, and root.

We make ourselves fools, to disport ourselves;

And spend our flatteries, to drink those men,

Upon whose age we void it up again,

With poisonous spite, and envy.

Who lives, that's not depraved, or depraves?

Who dies, that bears not one spurn to their graves

Of their friends' gift?

I should fear, those, that dance before me now,

Would one day stamp upon me: 't has been done.

Men shut their doors against the setting sun.

The Lords rise from Table, with much adoring of TIMON;

and, to show their loves, each singles out an Amazon, and all dance. Men with Women, a lofty Strain or two to the Hautboys, and cease.

Tim. You have done our pleasures much grace, fair ladies.

Set a fair fashion on our entertainment.

Which was not half so beautiful and kind:

You have added worth unto 't, and lustre.

And entertain'd me with mine own device;

I am to thank you for it.

1 Lady. My lord, you take us ever at the best.

Apem. 'Faith, for the worst is filthy; and would not hold taking, I doubt me.

Tim. Ladies, there is an idle banquet

Attends you: please you to dispose yourselves.

All Lad. Most thankfully, my lord.

[Exeunt CUPID and Ladies.]

Tim. Flavius!

Flav. My lord.

Tim. The little casket bring me hither.

Flav. Yes, my lord. [Aside.] More jewels yet!

There is no crossing him in his humour:

Else I should tell him,—well,—'t faith, I should,

When all's spent he'd be cross'd then: and he could,

'T is pity bounty had not eyes behind,

That man might ne'er be wretched for his mind.

[Exit, and returns with the Casket.]

1 Lord. Where be our men?

Serv. Here, my lord, in readiness.

2 Lord. Our horses!

Tim. O, my friends!

I have one word to say to you. Look you, my good lord,

I must entreat you, honour me so much,

As to advance this jewel: accept it and wear it,

Kind my lord.

1 Lord. I am so far already in your gifts,—

All. So are we all.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord, there are certain nobles of the senate newly alighted, and come to visit you.

Tim. They are fairly welcome.

Flav. I beseech your honour.

Vouchsafe me a word: it does concern you near.

Tim. Near? why then another time I'll hear thee:

prythee, let's be provided to show them entertainment.

Flav. I scarce know how.

[Aside.]

Enter another Servant.

2 Serv. May it please your honour, lord Lucius,

Out of his free love, hath presented to you

Four milk-white horses, trapp'd in silver.

Tim. I shall accept them fairly: let the presents

Enter a third Servant.

Be worthily entertain'd.—How now! what news?

3 Serv. Please you, my lord, that honourable gentleman, lord Lucullus, entreats your company to-morrow to hunt with him; and has sent your honour two brace of greyhounds.

Tim. I'll hunt with him; and let them be receiv'd, Not without fair reward.

Flav. [Aside.] What will this come to?

He commands us to provide, and give great gifts,

And all out of an empty coffer:

Nor will he know his purse; or yield me this,

To show him what a beggar his heart is,

Being of no power to make his wishes good.

His promises fly so beyond his state,

That what he speaks is all in debt; he owes

For every word: he is so kind, that he now

Pays interest for 't; his land's put to their backs.

Well, would I were gently put out of office,

Before I were forc'd out!

Happier is he that has no friend to feed

Than such as do even enemies exceed.

I bleed inwardly for my lord.

[Exit.]

Tim. You do yourselves

Much wrong: you bate too much of your own merits.

Here, my lord, a trifle of our love.

2 Lord. With more than common thanks I will receive it.

3 Lord. O! he's the very soul of bounty.

Tim. And now I remember, my lord, you gave

Good words the other day of a bay courser

I rode on: it is yours, because you lik'd it.

2 Lord. O! I beseech you, pardon me! my lord, in that.

Tim. You may take my word, my lord: I know no man

Can justly praise, but what he does affect:

I weigh my friend's affection with mine own;

I'll tell you true. I'll call to you.

All Lords. O! none so welcome.

Tim. I take all, and your several visitations,

So kind to heart, 't is not enough to give:

Methinks, I could deal kingdoms to my friends,

And ne'er be weary.—Alcibiades,

Thou art a soldier, therefore seldom rich:

It comes in charity to thee: for all thy living

Is 'mongst the dead, and all the lands thou hast

Lie in a pitch'd field.

Alcib. Ay, deil'd land, my lord.

1 Lord. We are so virtuously bound,—

Tim. And so

Am I to you.

2 Lord. So infinitely endear'd,—

Tim. All to you.—Lights! more lights!

1 Lord. The best of happiness,

Honour, and fortunes, keep with you, lord Timon.

Tim. Ready for his friends.

[Exeunt ALCIBIADES, Lords, &c.]

Apem. What a coil's here

Serving of becks, and jutting out of bums!

I doubt whether their legs be worth the sums

That are given for 'em. Friendship's full of dregs.

Methinks, false hearts should never have sound legs.

Thus honest folks lay out their wealth on court'sies.

Tim. Now, Apemantus, if thou wert not sullen,

I'd be good to thee.

Apem. No, I'll nothing: for if I should be brib'd too, there would be none left to rail upon thee, and then thou wouldst sin the faster. Thou giv'st as long

Timon, I fear me, thou wilt give away thyself in paper

shortly: what need these feasts, pomps, and vain glories!

Tim. Nay, an you begin to rail on society once, I am sworn not to give regard to you. Farewell; and come with better music.
Apem. So;—thou wilt not hear me now;—

Thou shalt not then; I'll lock thy heaven from thee.
 O, that men's ears should be
 To counsel deaf, but not to flattery! [Exit]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The Same. A Room in a Senator's House.

Enter a Senator, with Papers in his Hand.

Sen. And late, five thousand to Varro; and to Isidore He owes nine thousand, besides my former sum, Which makes it five-and-twenty—Still in motion Of raging waste? It cannot hold; it will not. If I want gold, steal but a beggar's dog, And give it Timon, why, the dog coins gold: If I would sell my horse, and buy twenty more Better than he, why, give my horse to Timon; Ask nothing, give it him, it foals me straight A stable o' horses. No porter at his gate; But rather one that smiles, and still invites All that pass by. It cannot hold; no reason Can sound his state in safety. Caphis, ho! Caphis, I say!

Enter CAPHIS.

Caph. Here, sir: what is your pleasure?
Sen. Get on your cloak, and haste you to lord Timon: Importune him for my moneys; be not ceas'd With slight denial; nor then silenc'd, when—"Commend me to your master"—and the cap Plays in the right hand, thus;—but tell him, sirrah, My uses cry to me. I must serve my turn Out of mine own: his days and times are past, And my reliances on his fracted dates Have smit my credit. I love, and honour him, But must not break my back to heal his finger. Immediate are my needs; and my relief Must not be toss'd and turn'd to me in words, But find supply immediate. Get you gone: Put on a most importunate aspect, A visage of demand; for, I do fear, When every feather sticks in his own wing, Lord Timon will be left a naked gull, Which flashes now a phoenix. Get you gone.

Caph. I go, sir.

Sen. Ay, go, sir.—Take the bonds along with you, And have the dates in compt.¹

Caph.

I will, sir.

Sen.

Go. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Hall in TIMON'S House.

Enter FLAVIUS, with many Bills in his Hand.

Flavius. No care, no stop: so senseless of expense, That he will neither know how to maintain it, Nor cease his flow of riot; takes no account How things go from him; no reserve; no care² Of what is to continue. Never mind Was surely so unwise³, to be so kind. What shall be done? He will not hear, till feel. I must be round⁴ with him, now he comes from hunting. Fis, fie, fie, fie!

Enter CAPHIS, and the Servants of ISIDORE and VARRO.

Caph. Good even, Varro. What! You come for money?

Var. Serv.

Is't not your business too?

Caph. It is.—And yours too, Isidore?

Isid. Serv.

It is so.

Caph. Would we were all discharg'd!

Var. Serv.

I fear it.

Caph. Here comes the lord.

Enter TIMON, ALCIBIADES, and Lords, &c., as from hunting.

Tim. So soon as dinner's done, we'll forth again, My Alcibiades.—With me! what is your will?

Caph. My lord, here is a note of certain dues.

Tim. Dues! Whence are you?

Caph.

Of Athens here, my lord.

Tim. Go to my steward.

Caph. Please it your lordship, he hath put me off

To the succession of new days this month:

My master is awak'd by great occasion

To call upon his own, and humbly prays you,

That with your other noble parts you'll suit,

In giving him his right.

Tim.

Mine honest friend,

I prythee, but repair to me next morning.

Caph. Nay, my good lord.—

Tim.

Contain thyself, good friend.

Var. Serv. One Varro's servant, good my lord.—

Isid. Serv.

From Isidore:

He humbly prays your speedy payment.—

Caph. If you did know, my lord, my master's wants,—

Var. Serv. 'Twas due on forfeiture, my lord, six weeks,

And past,—

Isid. Serv. Your steward puts me off, my lord;

And I am sent expressly to your lordship.

Tim. Give me breath.—

I do beseech you, good my lords, keep on;

[Exeunt ALCIBIADES and Lords.]

I'll wait upon you in⁵ untly.—Come hither: pray you,

[To FLAVIUS.]

How goes the world, that I am thus encounter'd

With clamorous demands of debt, broken⁶ bonds,

And the detention of long-since-due debts,

Against my honour?

Flav.

Please you, gentlemen,

The time is unagreeable to this business:

Your importunacy cease till after dinner,

That I may make his lordship understand

Wherefore you are not paid.

Tim.

Do so, my friends.

See them well entertain'd

[Exit TIMON]

Flav.

Pray, draw near.

[Exit FLAVIUS]

Enter APEMANTUS and a Fool.

Caph. Stay, stay; here comes the fool with Apemantus: let's have some sport with 'em.

Var. Serv. Hang him, he'll abuse us.

Isid. Serv. A plague upon him, dog!

Var. Serv. How dost, fool?

Apem. Dost dialogue with thy shadow?

¹ Come: in folio. Theobald made the change. ² nor resumes no care, &c.: in f. e. ³ Was to be so unwise: in f. e. ⁴ Plain

The rest of this stage direction, is not in f. e. ⁵ Malone changes to "date-broken."

Var. Serv. I speak not to thee.

Apem. No; 'tis to thyself.—Come away. [To the Fool.

Isid. Serv. [To Var. Serv.] There's the fool hangs on your back already.

Apem. No, thou stand'st single; thou'rt not on him yet.

Caph. Where's the fool now?

Apem. He last asked the question.—Poor rogues, and usurers' men; bawds between gold and want.

All Serv. What are we, Apemantus?

Apem. Asses.

All Serv. Why?

Apem. That you ask me what you are, and do not know yourselves.—Speak to 'em, fool.

Fool. How do you, gentlemen?

All Serv. Gramercies, good fool. How does your mistress?

Fool. She's e'en setting on water to scald such chickens as you are. Would, we could see you at Corinth!

Apem. Good: gramercy.

Enter Page.

Fool. Look you, here comes my mistress' page.

Page. [To the Fool.] Why, how now, captain! what do you in this wise company?—How dost thou, Apemantus?

Apem. Would I had a rod in my mouth, that I might answer thee profitably.

Page. Pr'ythee, Apemantus, read me the superscription of these letters: I know not which is which.

Apem. Canst not read?

Page. No.

Apem. There will little learning die, then, that day thou art hanged. This is to lord Timon; this to Alcibiades. Go: thou wast born a bastard, and thou'lt die a bawd.

Page. Thou wast whelped a dog; and thou shalt famish, a dog's death. Answer not; I am gone.

[Exit Page.]

Apem. Even so thou out-run'st grace. Fool, I will go with you to lord Timon's.

Fool. Will you leave me there?

Apem. If Timon stav at home.—You three serve three usurers?

All Serv. I would they served us.

Apem. So would I,—as good a trick as ever hangman served thief.

Fool. Are you three usurers' men?

All Serv. Ay, fool.

Fool. I think, no usurer but has a fool to his servant: my mistress is one, and I am her fool. When men come to borrow of your masters, they approach sadly, and go away merrily; but they enter my mistress' house merrily, and go away sadly. The reason of this?

Var. Serv. I could render one.

Apem. Do it, then, that we may account thee a whoremaster, and a knave: which notwithstanding, thou shalt be no less esteemed.

Var. Serv. What is a whoremaster, fool?

Fool. A fool in good clothes, and something like thee. 'Tis a spirit: sometime, it appears like a lord; sometime like a lawyer; sometime like a philosopher, with two stones more than his artificial one. He is very often like a knight; and generally in all shapes, that man goes up and down in from fourscore to thirteen, this spirit walks in.

Var. Serv. Thou art not altogether a fool.

Fool. Nor thou altogether a wise man: as much foolery as I have, so much wit thou lackest.

Apem. That answer might have become Apemantus. All Serv. Aside, aside: here comes lord Timon.

Re-enter TIMON and FLAVIUS.

Apem. Come, with me, fool; come.

Fool. I do not always follow lover, elder brother, and woman; sometime, the philosopher.

[Exeunt APEMANTUS, and Fool after him.]

Flav. Pray you, walk near: I'll speak with you anon.

[Exeunt Serv.]

Tim. You make me marvel. Wherefore, ere this time, Had you not fully laid my state before me, That I might so have rated my expense As I had leave of means?

Flav. You would not hear me: At many leasures I propos'd.

Tim. Go to:

Perchance, some single vantages you took, When my indisposition put you back; And that unaptness made you minister, Thus to excuse yourself.

Flav. O, my good lord!

At many times I brought in my accounts. Laid them before you: you would throw them off, And say, you found them in mine honesty.

When for some trifling present you have bid me Return so much, I have shook my head, and wept; Yea, 'gainst the authority of manners, pray'd you To hold your hand more close: I did endure Not seldom, nor no slight checks, when I have Prompted you, in the ebb of your estate, And your great flow of debts. My loved lord, Though you hear now, yet now's a time too late, The greatest of your having lacks a half To pay your present debts.

Tim. Let all my land be sold.

Flav. 'Tis all engag'd, some forfeited and gone; And what remains will hardly stop the mouth Of present dues. The future comes apace; What shall defend the interim? and at length How goes our reckoning?

Tim. To Lacedæmon did my land extend.

Flav. O, my good lord! the world is but a word; Were it all yours to give it in a breath, How quickly were it gone?

Tim. You tell me true.

Flav. If you suspect my husbandry, or falsehood, Call me before th' exactest auditors, And set me on the proof. So the gods bless me, When all our offices have been oppress'd With riotous feeders; when our vaults have wept With drunken spilt of wine; when every room Hath blaz'd with lights, and bray'd with minstrelsy, I have retir'd me to a wasteful nook, And set mine eyes at flow.

Tim. Pr'ythee, no more.

Flav. Heavens, have I said, the bounty of this lord! How many prodigal bits have slaves, and peasants, This night engulth! Who is not Timon's?

What heart, head, sword, force, means, but is lord

Timon's,

Great Timon's, noble, worthy, royal Timon's?

Ah! when the means are gone that buy this praise, The breath is gone whereof this praise is made: Feast-won, fast-lost; one cloud of winter showers, These flies are cough'd.

Tim. Come, sermon me no farther.

No villainous bounty yet hath pass'd my heart; Unwisely, not ignobly, have I given. Why dost thou weep? Canst thou the conscience lack

To think I shall lack friends? Secure thy heart,
If I would broach the vessels of my love,
And try the argument of hearts by borrowing,
Men, and men's fortunes, could I frankly use,
As I can bid thee speak.

Flav. Assurance bless your thoughts!

Tim. And, in some sort, these wants of mine are crown'd,

That I account them blessings; for by these Shall I try friends. You shall perceive how you
Mistake my fortunes; I am wealthy in my friends.
Within there!—Flaminius! Servilius!

Enter FLAMINIUS, SERVILIUS, and other Servants.

Serv. My lord, my lord,—

Tim. I will despatch you severally.—You, to lord Lucius;—to lord Lucullus you; I hunted with his honour to-day;—you, to Sempronius. Commend me to their loves; and, I am proud, say, that my occasions have found time to use them toward a supply of money: let the request be fifty talents.

Flam. As you have said, my lord.

Flav. Lord Lucius, and Lucullus? humph!

Tim. Go you, sir, [To another Serv.] to the senators, (Of whom, even to the state's best health, I have Deserv'd this hearing) bid 'em send o' the instant A thousand talents to me.

Flav. I have been bold,
(For that I knew it the most general way)
To them to use your signet, and your name;
But they do shake their heads, and I am here
No richer in return.

Tim. Is't true? can't be?

Flav. They answer, in a joint and corporate voice,

That now they are at fall, want treasure, cannot Do what they would; are sorry—you are honourable,—
But yet they could have wish'd—they know not—
Something hath been amiss—a noble nature
May catch a wrench—would all were well—'t is pity.—
And so, intending other serious matters,
After distasteful looks, and these hard fractions,
With certain half-caps, and cold-moving nods,
They froze me into silence.

Tim. You gods, reward them —
Pr'ythee, man, look cheerly; these old fellows
Have their ingratitude in them hereditary:
Their blood is cak'd, 't is cold, it seldom flows;
'T is lack of kindly warmth they are not kind,
And nature, as it grows again toward earth,
Is fashion'd for the journey, dull and heavy.—
Go to Ventidius,—[To a Serv.] 'Pr'ythee, [To FLA-
VIUS,] be not sad;

Thou art true, and honest: ingeniously¹ I speak,
No blame belongs to thee.—[To Serv.] Ventidius lately
Buried his father; by whose death, he's stepp'd
Into a great estate: when he was poor,
Imprison'd, and in scarcity of friends,
I clear'd him with five talents: greet him from me;
Bid him suppose some good necessity
Touches his friend, which craves to be remember'd
With those five talents:—that had, [To FLAV.] give it these fellows

To whom 't is instant due. Ne'er speak, or think,
That Timon's fortunes 'mong his friends can sink.

Flav. I would, I could not think it; that thought is bounty's foe:

Being free itself, it thinks all others so. [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Same. A Room in LUCULLUS'S House.

FLAMINIUS waiting. Enter a Servant to him.

Serv. I have told my lord of you; he is coming down to you.

Flam. I thank you, sir.

Enter LUCULLUS.

Serv. Here's my lord.

Lucul. [Aside.] One of lord Timon's men? a gift, I warrant. Why, this hits right; I dreamt of a silver basin and ewer to-night.—Flaminius, honest Flaminius, you are very respectively welcome, sir.—Fill me some wine.—[Exit Servant.] And how does that honourable, complete, free-hearted gentleman of Athens, thy very bountiful good lord and master?

Flam. His health is well, sir.

Lucul. I am right glad that his health is well, sir. And what hast thou there under thy cloak, pretty laminius?

Flam. 'Faith, nothing but an empty box, sir, which, in my lord's behalf, I come to entreat your honour to supply; who, having great and instant occasion to use fifty talents, hath sent to your lordship to furnish him, nothing doubting your present assistance therein.

Lucul. La, la, la, la,—nothing doubting, says he? alas, good lord! a noble gentleman 't is, if he would not creep so good a house. Many a time and often I have dined with him, and told him on't; and come again to supper to him of purpose to have him spend less, and yet he would embrace no counsel, take no warning by my coming. Every man has his fault, and honesty is his: I have told him on't, but I could ne'er get him from it.

Re-enter Servant with Wine.

Serv. Please your lordship, here is the wine.

Lucul. Flaminius, I have noted thee always wise. Here's to thee.

Flam. Your lordship speaks your pleasure.

Lucul. I have observed thee always for a towardly prompt spirit,—give thee thy due,—and one that knows what belongs to reason; and canst use the time well, if the time use thee well: good parts in thee.—Get you gone, sirrah.—[To the Servant, who exit.]—Draw nearer, honest Flaminius. Thy lord's a bountiful gentleman; but thou art wise, and thou knowest well enough, although thou comest to me, that this is no time to lend money, especially upon bare friendship, without security. Here's three solidaires for thee: good boy, wink at me, and say, thou saw'st me not. Fare thee well. [Giving money.]

Flam. Is't possible, the world should so much differ, And we alive that liv'd? Fly, damned baseness, let him that worships thee. [Throwing the money away.]

Lucul. Ha! now I see thou art a fool, and fit for thy master. [Exit LUCULLUS.]

Flam. May these add to the number that may scold thee!

Let molten coin be thy damnation,
Thou disease of a friend, and not himself!

Has friendship such a faint and milky heart,
It turns in less than two nights? O you gods!
I feel my master's passion. This slave
Unto his humour has my lord's meat in him:
Why should it thrive, and turn to nutriment,
When he is turn'd to poison?
O! may diseases only work upon't,
And, when he's sick to death, let not that part of nature,
Which my lord paid for, be of any power
To expel sickness, but prolong his hour! [Exit.]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Public Place.

Enter LUCIUS, with three Strangers.

Luc. Who? the lord Timon? he is my very good friend, and an honourable gentleman.

1 Stran. We know him for no less, though we are but strangers to him. But I can tell you one thing, my lord, and which I hear from common rumours: now lord Timon's happy hours are done and past, and his estate shrinks from him.

Luc. Fie! no, do not believe it; he cannot want for money.

2 Stran. But believe you this, my lord, that not long ago one of his men was with the lord Lucullus, to borrow so many talents; nay, urged extremely for't, and showed what necessity belonged to't, and yet was denied.

Luc. How?

2 Stran. I tell you, denied, my lord.

Luc. What a strange case was that! now, before the gods, I am ashamed on't. Denied that honourable man? there was very little honour showed in't. For my own part, I must needs confess, I have received some small kindnesses from him, as money, plate, jewels, and such like trifles, nothing comparing to his; yet, had he mistook him, and sent to me, I should ne'er have denied his occasion so many talents.

Enter SERVILIUS.

Ser. See, by good hap, yonder's my lord; I have sweat to see his honour.—My honoured lord.— [To LUCIUS.]

Luc. Servilius! you are kindly met, sir. Fare thee well: commend me to thy honourable-virtuous lord, my very exquisite friend.

Ser. May it please your honour, my lord hath sent—

Luc. Ha! what has he sent? I am so much endeared to that lord, he's ever sending: how shall I thank him, thinkest thou? And what has he sent now?

Ser. He has only sent his present occasion now, my lord; requesting your lordship to supply his instant use with five hundred talents.¹

Luc. I know, his lordship is but merry with me: He cannot want five hundred talents.

Ser. But in the mean time he wants less, my lord. If his occasion were not virtuous, should not urge it half so faithfully.

Luc. Dost thou speak seriously, Servilius?

Ser. Upon my soul, 't is true, sir,

Luc. What a wicked beast was I, to disfigure myself against such a good time, when I might have shown myself honourable! how unluckily it happened, that I should purchase the day before for a little part, and undo a great deal of honour!—Servilius, now before the gods, I am not able to do: the more beast I, I say,—I was sending to use lord Timon myself, these gentlemen can witness; but I would not, for the wealth of Athens, I had done it now. Commend me countenantly to his good lordship; and I hope, his honour will conceive the fairest of me, because I have no power to be kind:—and tell him this from me, I count it one of my greatest afflictions, say, that I cannot pleasure such an honourable gentleman. Good Servilius, will you befriend me so far, as to use mine own words to him?

Ser. Yes, sir, I shall.

Luc. I'll look you out a good turn, Servilius.—

[Exit SERVILIUS]
True, as you said, Timon is shrunk indeed;
And he that's once denied will hardly speed.

[Exit LUCIUS]

1 Stran. Do you observe this, Hostilius?

2 Stran. Ay, too well.

1 Stran. Why this

Is the world's soul; and just of the same piece
Is every flatterer's port.² Who can call him
His friend, that dips in the same dish? for, in
My knowing, Timon has been this lord's father,
And kept his credit with his purse,
Supported his estate; nay, Timon's money
Has paid his men their wages: he ne'er drinks,
But Timon's silver treads upon his lip;
And yet, (O, see the monstrousness of man,
When he looks out in an ungrateful shape!)
He does deny him, in respect of his,
What charitable men afford to beggars.

3 Stran. Religion groans at it.

1 Stran.

For mine own part,

I never tasted Timon in my life,
Nor came any of his bounties over me,
To mark me for his friend; yet, I protest,
For his right noble mind, illustrious virtue,
And honourable carriage,
Had his necessity made use of me,
I would have put my wealth into donation,
And the best half should have return'd to him,
So much I love his heart. But I perceive,
Men must learn now with pity to dispense:
For policy sits above conscience. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same.—A Room in SEMPRONIUS'S House.

Enter SEMPRONIUS, and a Servant of TIMON'S.

Sem. Must he needs trouble me in't, humph!
'bove all others?

He might have tried Lord Lucius, or Lucullus;
And now Ventidius is wealthy too,
Whom he redeem'd from prison: all these
Owe their estates unto him.

Ser.

My lord,

They have all been touch'd, and found base metal;
For they have all denied him.

Sem.

How! have they denied him?

Have Ventidius and Lucullus denied him,
And does he send to me? Three? humph!
It shows but little love or judgment in him:
Must I be his last refuge? His friends, like physicians,
Thrice³ give him over: must I take the cure upon me?
He has much disgrac'd me in't: I am angry at him.
That might have known my place. I see no sense for't,
But his occasions might have woo'd me first;
For, in my conscience, I was the first man
That e'er received gift from him:
And does he think so backwardly of me now,
That I'll requite it last? No: so it may prove
An argument of laughter to the rest,
And amongst lords I be thought a fool.
I had rather than the worth of thrice the sum,
He had sent to me first, but for my mind's sake.

¹ with so many talents: in f. e. ² spirit: in f. e.; changed from "sport," of the folio. ³ Thrive: in folio. Johnson made the change

I'd such a courage to do him good. But now return,
And with their faint reply this answer join;
Who bates mine honour shall not know my coin. [Exit.
Serv. Excellent! Your lordship's a goodly villain.
The devil knew not what he did, when he made man politic: he crossed himself by't; and I cannot think, but, in the end, the villainies of man will set him clear.
How fairly this lord strives to appear foul? takes virtuous copies to be wicked; like those that, under hot ardent zeal, would set whole realms on fire. Of such a nature is his politic love.
This was my lord's best hope; now all are fled,
Save only the gods. Now his friends are dead,
Doors, that were ne'er acquainted with their wards
Many a bounteous year, must be employ'd
Now to guard sure their master:
And this is all a liberal course allows;
Who cannot keep his wealth must keep his house. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Hall in TIMON'S House.

Enter two Servants of VARRO, and the Servant of LUCIUS, meeting TITUS, HORTENSIVS, and other Servants to TIMON'S Creditors, waiting his coming out.

Var. Serv. Well met; good-morrow, Titus and Hortensius.

Tit. The like to you, kind Varro.

Hor. Lucius?

What, do we meet together?

Luc. Serv. Ay; and I think,
One business does command us all, for mine
Is money.

Tit. So is theirs, and ours.

Enter PHILOTUS.

Luc. Serv. And, sir,

Philotus too!

Phi. Good day at once.

Luc. Serv. Welcome, good brother.

What do you think the hour?

Phi. Labouring for nine.

Luc. Serv. So much?

Phi. Is not my lord seen yet?

Luc. Serv. Not yet.

Phi. I wonder on't: he was wont to shine at seven.

Luc. Serv. Ay, but the days are waxed shorter with
him:

You must consider, that a prodigal course
Is like the sun's; but not, like his, recoverable.
I fear 'tis deepest winter in Lord Timon's purse;
That is, one may reach deep enough, and yet
Find little.

Phi. I am of your fear for that.

Tit. I'll show you how t' observe a strange event.

Your lord sends now for money.

Hor. Most true, he does.

Tit. And he wears jewels now of Timon's gift,

For which I wait for money.

Hor. It is against my heart.

Luc. Serv. Mark, how strange it shows,

Timon in this should pay more than he owes:

And e'er as if your lord should wear rich jewels,

And send for money for 'em.

Hor. I'm weary of this charge, the gods can witness:

I know, my lord hath spent of Timon's wealth,

And now ingratitude makes it worse than stealth.

1 Var. Serv. Yes, mine's three thousand crowns;
what's yours?

Luc. Serv. Five thousand mine.

1 Var. Serv. 'T is much deep: and it should seem by the sum,

Your master's confidence was above mine;
Else, surely, his had equal'd.

Enter FLAMINIUS.

Tit. One of lord Timon's men.

Luc. Serv. Flaminius! Sir, a word. Pray, is my lord ready to come forth?

Flam. No, indeed, he is not.

Tit. We attend his lorship: pray, signify so much

Flam. I need not tell him that; he knows, you are too diligent. [Exit FLAMINIUS

Enter FLAVIUS in a Cloak, muffled.

Luc. Serv. Ha! is not that his Steward muffled so?
He goes away in a cloud: call him, call him.

Tit. Do you hear, sir?

1 Var. Serv. By your leave, sir,—

Flav. What do you ask of me, my friend?

Tit. We wait for certain money here, sir.

Flav.

Ay,

If money were as certain as your waiting,
'T were sure enough. Why then prefer'd'd you not
Your sums and bills, when your false masters ate
Of my lord's meat? Then, they could smile, and fawn
Upon his debts, and take down the interest
Into their gluttonous maws. You do yourselves but wrong,

To stir me up; let me pass quietly:

Believe't, my lord and I have made an end

I have no more to reckon, he to spend.

Luc. Serv. Ay, but this answer will not serve.

Flav. If 't will not serve,

'T is not so base as you; for you serve knaves. [Exit.

1 Var. Serv. How! what does his cashier'd worship mutter?

2 Var. Serv. No matter what: he's poor, and that's revenge enough. Who can speak broader than he that has no house to put his head in? such may rail against great buildings.

Enter SERVILIUS.

Tit. O! here's Servilius; now we shall know some answer.

Ser. If I might beseech you, gentlemen, to repair some other hour, I should derive much from't, for, take't of my soul, my lord leans wondrously to discontent. His comfortable temper has forsook him he's much out of health, and keeps his chamber.

Luc. Serv. Many do keep their chambers, are not sick
And if he be so far beyond his health,
Methinks, he should the sooner pay his debts,
And make a clear way to the gods.

Ser. Good gods!

Tit. We cannot take this for an answer, sir.

Flam. [Within.] Servilius, help!—my lord! my lord!

Enter TIMON, in a rage; FLAMINIUS, following.

Tim. What! are my doors oppos'd against my passage?

Have I been ever free, and must my house

Be my retentive enemy, my gaol?

The place which I have feasted, does it now,

Like all mankind, show me an iron heart?

Luc. Serv. Put in now, Titus.

Tit. My lord, here is my bill.

Luc. Serv. Here's mine.

Hor. Serv. And mine, my lord.

Both Var. Serv. And ours, my lord.

Phi. All our bills.

Tim. Knock me down with 'em; cleave me to the girdle.

Luc. Serv. Alas! my lord,—

Tim. Cut my heart in sums

Tit. Mine, fifty talents

Tim. Tell out my blood.

Luc. Serv. Five thousand crowns, my lord.

Tim. Five thousand drops pays that.—

What yours?—and yours?

1 Var. Serv. My lord,—

2 Var. Serv. My lord,—

Tim. Tear me, take me; and the gods fall upon you!

[Exit.]

Hor. Faith, I perceive our masters may throw their caps at their money: these debts may well be called desperate ones, for a madman owes 'em. [Exeunt.]

Re-enter TIMON and FLAVIUS.

Tim. They have e'en put my breath from me, the slaves:

Creditors?—devils!

Flav. My dear lord,—

Tim. What if it should be so?

Flav. My lord,—

Tim. I'll have it so.—My steward!

Flav. Here, my lord.

Tim. So filthy? Go, bid all my friends again.

Lucius, Lucullus, and Sempronius¹; all:

I'll once more feast the rascals.

Flav. O my lord!

You only speak from your distracted soul:

There is not so much left to furnish out

A moderate table.

Tim. Be't not in thy care: go,

I charge thee; invite them all: let in the tide

Of knaves once more; my cook and I'll provide.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The Same. The Senate-House.

The Senate sitting. Enter ALCIBIADES, attended.

1 Sen. My lord, you have my voice to't: the fault's bloody; 't is necessary he should die.

Nothing emboldens sin so much as mercy.

2 Sen. Most true: the law shall bruise him.

Alcib. Honour, health, and compassion to the senate!

1 Sen. Now, captain?

Alcib. I am an humble suitor to your virtues; For pity is the virtue of the law,

And none but tyrants use it cruelly.

It pleases time and fortune to lie heavy

Upon a friend of mine: who, in hot blood,

Hath stepp'd into the law, which is past death

To those that without heed do plunge into't.

He is a man, setting his fault aside,

Of comely virtues;

Nor did he soil the fact with cowardice:

(An honour in him which buys out his fault)

But, with a noble fury, and fair spirit,

Seeing his reputation touch'd to death,

He did oppose his foe:

And with such sober and unnoted passion

He did reprove² his anger, ere 't was spent,

As if he had but mov'd³ an argument.

1 Sen. You undergo too strict a paradox,

Striving to make an ugly deed look fair:

Your words have took such pains, as if they labour'd

To bring manslaughter into form, and set quarrelling

Upon the head of valour: which, indeed,

Is valour misbegot, and came into the world

When sects and factions were newly born.

He's truly valiant, that can wisely suffer

The worst that man can breathe, and make his wrongs

His outsoles: to wear them like his raiment, carelessly,

And ne'er prefer his injuries to his heart,

To bring it into danger.

If wrongs be evils, and enforce us kill,

What folly 't is to hazard life for ill?

Alcib. My lord,—

1 Sen. You cannot make gross sins look clear
To revenge is no valour, but to bear.

Alcib. My lords, then under favour, pardon me,

If I speak like a captain.

Why do fond men expose themselves to battle,

And not endure all threats? sleep upon't,

And let the foes quietly cut their throats,

Without repugnance? if there be

Such valour in the bearing, what make we

Abroad? why then, women are more valiant,

That stay at home, if bearing carry it,

And the ass more captain than the lion; the fellow,

Loaden with irons, wiser than the judge,

If wisdom be in suffering. O, my lords!

As you are great, be pitifully good:

Who cannot condemn rashness in cold blood?

To kill, I grant, is sin's extremest gust;

But in defence, by mercy, 't is most just.

To be in anger, is impiety;

But who is man, that is not angry?

Weigh but the crime with this.

2 Sen. You breathe in vain.

Alcib.

In vain? his service done

At Lacedæmon, and Byzantium,

Were a sufficient briber for his life.

Sen. What's that?

Alcib. Why, say⁴ my lords, he has done fair service,

And slain in fight many of your enemies.

How full of valour did he bear himself

In the last conflict, and made plentiful wounds?

2 Sen. He has made too much plenty with 'em,⁵

He's a sworn rioter: he has a sin, that often

Drowns him, and takes his valour prisoner.

Were there no foes, that were itself enough⁶

To overcome him: in that beastly fury

He has been known to commit outrages,

And cherish factions. 'T is inferr'd⁷ to us,

His days are foul, and his drink dangerous.

1 Sen. He dies.

Alcib. Hard fate! he might have died in war.

My lords, if not for any parts in him,

Though his right arm might purchase his own time.

He be in debt to none, yet, more to move you,

Take my deserts to his, and join them both:

And for, I know, your reverend ages love

Security, I'll pawn my victories, all

My honour to you, upon his good returns.

If by this crime he owes the law his life,

Why, let the war receive't in valiant gore;

For law is strict, and war is nothing more.

1 Sen. We are for law: he dies; urge it no more.

On height of our displeasure. Friend, or brother,

He forfeits his own blood that spills another.

Alcib. Must it be so? it must not be. My lords,

I do beseech you, know me.

2 Sen. How!

Alcib. Call me to your remembrances.

3 Sen.

What!

Alcib. I cannot think, but your age has forgot me.

It could not else be, I should prove so base,

To sue, and be denied such common grace.

My wounds ache at you.

1 Sen.

Do you dare our anger?

¹ First folio inserts: Ullorax. ² behave: in f. e. ³ prov'd: in f. e. ⁴ I say: in second folio. ⁵ him: in first folio. ⁶ If there were so few, that were enough: in f. e. ⁷ Brought

T is in few words, but specious in effect:
We banish thee for ever.

Alcib. Banish me!
Banish your dotage, banish usury,
That makes the senate ugly.

1 Sen. If, after two days' shine Athens contain thee, Attend our weightier judgment. And, not to swell our spirit,

He shall be executed presently. [Exeunt Senators.]
Alcib. Now the gods keep you old enough; that you may live

Only in bone, that none may look on you.
I am worse than mad: I have kept back their foes,
While they have told their money, and let out
Their coin upon large interest; I myself,
Rich only in large hurts:—all those, for this?
Is this the balsam that the usuring senate
Pours into captains' wounds? Banishment!
It comes not ill; I hate not to be banish'd:
It is a cause worthy my spleen and fury,
That I may strike at Athens. I'll cheer up
My discontented troops, and lay¹ for hearts.
²T is honour with most lands to be at odds;
Soldiers should brook as little wrongs as gods. [Exit.]

SCENE VI.—A Banquet-hall in TIMON'S House.

Mus. Tables set out: Servants attending. Enter divers Lords, at several Doors.

1 Lord. The good time of day to you, sir.

2 Lord. I also wish it to you. I think, this honourable lord did but try us this other day.

1 Lord. Upon that were my thoughts tiring,³ when we encountered. I hope, it is not so low with him, as he made it seem in the trial of his several friends.

2 Lord. It should not be, by the persuasion of his new feasting.

1 Lord. I should think so. He hath sent me an earnest inviting, which many my near occasions did urge me to put off; but he hath conjured me beyond them, and I must needs appear.

2 Lord. In like manner was I in debt to my importunate business, but he would not hear my excuse. I am sorry, when he sent to borrow of me, that my provision was out.

1 Lord. I am sick of that grief too, as I understand how all things go.

2 Lord. Every man here's so. What would he have borrowed of you?

1 Lord. A thousand pieces.

2 Lord. A thousand pieces!

1 Lord. What of you?

3 Lord. He sent to me, sir.—Here he comes.

Enter TIMON, and Attendants.

Tim. With all my heart, gentlemen both:—And how fare you?

1 Lord. Ever at the best, hearing well of your lordship.

2 Lord. The swallow follows not summer more willingly, than we your lordship.

Tim. [Aside.] Nor more willingly leaves winter;
such summer-birds are men. [To them.] Gentlemen,
our dinner will not recompense this long stay: feast your ears with the music awhile, if they will fare so harshly o' the trumpet's sound; we shall to't presently.

1 Lord. I hope, it remains not unkindly with your lordship, that I returned you an empty messenger.

Tim. O! sir, let it not trouble you.

2 Lord. My noble lord,—

Tim. Ah! my good friend, what cheer?

[The Banquet brought in]
2 Lord. My most honourable lord, I am e'en sick of shame that, when your lordship this other day sent to me, I was so unfortunate a beggar.

Tim. Think not on't, sir.

2 Lord. If you had sent but two hours before,—

Tim. Let it not cumber your better remembrance —Come, bring in all together. [To the Servants.]

2 Lord. All covered dishes!

1 Lord. Royal cheer, I warrant you.

3 Lord. Doubt not that, if money, and the season can yield it.

1 Lord. How do you? What's the news?

3 Lord. Alcibiades is banished: hear you of it?

1 & 2 Lords. Alcibiades banished!

3 Lord. 'T is so; be sure of it.

1 Lord. How? how?

2 Lord. I pray you, upon what?

Tim. My worthy friends, will you draw near?

3 Lord. I'll tell you more anon. Here's a noble feast toward.

2 Lord. This is the old man still.

3 Lord. Will 't hold? will 't hold?

2 Lord. It does; but time will show.

3 Lord. I do conceive.

Tim. Each man to his stool, with that spur as he would to the lip of his mistress: your diet shall be in all places alike. Make not a city feast of it, to let the meat cool ere we can agree upon the first place: sit, sit. The gods require our thanks.

"You great benefactors, sprinkle our society with thankfulness. For your own gifts make yourselves praised, but reserve still to give, lest your deities be despised. Lend to each man enough, that one need not lend to another; for, were your godheads to borrow of men, men would forsake the gods. Make the meat be beloved, more than the man that gives it.
Let no assembly of twenty be without a score of villains: if there sit twelve women at the table, let a dozen of them be—as they are.—The rest of your foes, O gods! the senators of Athens, together with the common tag⁴ of people,—what is amiss in them, you gods make suitable for destruction. For these, my present friends,—as they are to me nothing, so in nothing bless them, and to nothing are they welcome."
Uncover, dogs, and lap.

[The Dishes uncovered are full of warm water.]

Some speak. What does his lordship mean?

Some other. I know not.

Tim. May you a better feast never behold,
You knot of mouth-friends! smoke, and luke-warm water

Is your perfection. This is Timon's last;
Who stuck and spangled you with flatteries,
Washes it off, and sprinkles in your faces

[Throwing water in their faces]

Your reeking villainy. Live loath'd and long,
Most smiling, smooth, detested parasites.

Courteous destroyers, affable wolves, meek bears:

You tools of fortune, trencher-friends, time's flies,

Cap and knee slaves, vapours, and minute-jacks!

Of man, and beast, the infinite malady

Crust you quite o'er!—What! dost thou go?

Soft, take thy physic first!—thou too,—and thou!—

[Throws the Dishes at them, and drives them out]

Stay, I will lend thee money, borrow none—

What, all in motion? Henceforth be no feast,

¹ Lay out ² To tire on, is to fasten on, like a bird of prey on its victim. Z. Jackson reads: stirring. ³ Not in f. e. ⁴ Few: in f. e.
⁵ tag: in f. e. Altered from leg, in folio.

Whereat a villain's not a welcome guest.
Burn, house! sink, Athens! henceforth hated be
Of Timon, man, and all humanity! [Exit.]

Re-enter the Lords, with other Lords and Senators.

1 Lord. How now, my lords!

2 Lord. Know you the quality of lord Timon's fury?

3 Lord. Push! did you see my cap?

4 Lord. I have lost my gown.

3 Lord. He's but a mad lord, and nought but humour sways him. He gave me a jewel the other day, and now he has beat it out of my hat:—did you see my jewel?

4 Lord. Did you see my cap?

2 Lord. Here 't is.

4 Lord. Here lies my gown.

1 Lord. Let's make no stay.

2 Lord. Lord Timon's mad.

3 Lord.

I feel 't upon my bones
4 Lord. One day he gives us diamonds, next day stones. [Exeunt]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—Without the Walls of Athens.

Enter TIMON.

Tim. Let me look back upon thee, O thou wall,
That girdlest in those wolves! Dive in the earth,
And fence not Athens! Matrons, turn incontinent;
Obedience fail in children! slaves, and fools,
Pluck the grave wrinkled senate from the bench,
And minister in their steads! to general filth
Convert of the instant green virginity!
Do 't in your parents' eyes. Bankrupts, hold fast;
Rather than render back, out with your knives,
And cut your trusters' throats! bound servants, steal!
Large-handed robbers your grave masters are,
And pill by law. Maid, to thy master's bed;
Thy mistress is o' the brothel! son of sixteen,
Pluck the lin'd crutch from thy old limping sire,
With it beat out his brains! piety, and fear,
Religion to the gods, peace, justice, truth,
Domestic awe, night-rest, and neighbourhood,
Instruction, manners, mysteries, and trades,
Degrees, observances, customs, and laws,
Decline to your confounding contraries,
And let confusion live!—Plagues, incident to men,
Your potent and infectious fevers heap
On Athens, ripe for stroke! thou cold sciatica,
Cripple our senators, that their limbs may halt
As lamely as their manners! lust and liberty
Creep in the minds and marrows of our youth,
That 'gainst the stream of virtue they may strive,
And drown themselves in riot! itches, blains,
Sow all the Athenian bosoms, and their crop
Be general leprosy! breath infect breath,
That their society, as their friendship, may
Be merely poison! Nothing I'll bear from thee,
But nakedness, thou detestable town.

[Casting away his Clothes.]

Take thou that too, with multiplying bans.
Timon will to the woods: where he shall find
Th' unkindest beast more kinder than mankind.
The gods confound (hear me, you good gods all)
The Athenians, both within and out that wall!
And grant, as Timon grows, his hate may grow
To the whole race of mankind, high, and low!
Amen.

[Exit.]

SCENE II.—Athens. A Room in TIMON'S House.

Enter FLAVIUS, with two or three Servants.

1 Serv. Hear you, master steward! where's our master?
Are we undone? cast off? nothing remaining?

Flav. Alack! my fellows, what should I say to you?
Let me be recorded by the righteous gods,

I am as poor as you.

1 Serv. Such a house broke!
So noble a master fallen! All gone, and not
One friend to take his fortune by the arm,
And go along with him!

2 Serv. As we do turn our backs
From our companion, thrown into his grave,
So his familiars to his buried fortunes
Slink all away; leave their false vows with him,
Like empty purses pick'd; and his poor self,
A dedicated beggar to the air,
With his disease of all-shunn'd poverty,
Walks, like contempt, alone.—More of our fellows.

Enter other Servants.

Flav. All broken implements of a ruin'd house.

3 Serv. Yet do our hearts wear Timon's livery,
That see I by our faces: we are fellows still,
Serving alike in sorrow. Leak'd is our bark;
And we, poor mates, stand on the dying deck,
Hearing the surges threat: we must all part
Into this sea of air.

Flav. Good fellows all,
The latest of my wealth I'll share amongst you.
Wherever we shall meet, for Timon's sake,
Let's yet be fellows; let's shake our heads, and say,
As 't were a knell unto our master's fortunes,
"We have seen better days." Let each take some;
[Giving them money]
Nay, put out all your hands. Not one word more:
Thus part we rich in sorrow, parting poor.

[They embrace, and part several ways]

O, the fierce wretchedness that glory brings us!
Who would not wish to be from wealth exempt,
Since riches point to misery and contempt?
Who'd be so mock'd with glory as 't to live
But in a dream of friendship? and revive?
To have his pomp, and all state comprehends,*
But only painted, like his varnish'd friends?
Poor honest lord! brought low by his own heart;
Undone by goodness. Strange, unusual blood,
When man's worst sin is, he does too much good!
Who, then, dares to be half so kind again?
For bounty, that makes gods, does still mar men.
My dearest lord,—bless'd, to be most accurs'd,
Rich, only to be wretched,—thy great fortunes
Are made thy chief afflictions. Alas, kind lord!
He's flung in rage from this ingrateful seat
Of monstrous friends:
Nor hath he with him to supply his life,
Or that which can command it.
I'll follow, and inquire him out:
I'll ever serve his mind with my best will;
Whilst I have gold I'll be his steward still. [Exit]

* Not in f. e. † or: in f. e. ‡ The words, "and revive," are not in f. e. § all what state compounds: in f. e. ¶ Dispositio

SCENE III.—The Woods.

Enter TIMON, with a Spade.

Tim. O, blessed breeding sun! draw from the earth
 Rotten humidity; below thy sister's orb
 Infect the air. Twinn'd brothers of one womb,
 Whose procreation, residence, and birth,
 Scarce is dividant, touch them with several fortunes.
 The greater scorns the lesser: not nature,
 (To whom all sores lay siege) can bear great fortune,
 But by contempt of nature.
 Raise me this beggar, and decline¹ that lord;
 The senator shall bear contempt hereditary,
 The beggar native honour.
 It is the pasture lards the rother's² sides,
 The want that makes him lean. Who dares, who dares,
 In purity of manhood stand upright,
 And say, "This man's a flatterer?" If one be,
 So are they all; for every guise³ of fortune
 Is smooth'd by that below: the learned pate
 Ducks to the golden fool. All is oblique;
 There's nothing level in our cursed natures,
 But direct villainy. Therefore, be abhorrd
 All feasts, societies, and throngs of men!
 His semblable, yea, himself, Timon disdains:
 Destruction fang mankind!—Earth, yield me roots!

[Digging.]

Who seeks for better of thee, sauce his palate
 With thy most operant poison—What is here?

[Finding gold.]

Gold? yellow, glittering, precious gold? No, gods,
 I am no idol⁴ votarist. Roots, you clear heavens!
 Thus much of this will make black, white; foul, fair;
 Wrong, right; base, noble; old, young; coward, valiant.
 Ha! you gods, why this? What this? You gods!
 why, this

Will lug your priests and servants from your sides.
 Pluck stout⁵ men's pillows from below their heads⁶.

This yellow slave
 Will knit and break religions; bless th' accurs'd;
 Make the hoar leprosy adord⁷: place thieves,
 And give them title, knee, and approbation,
 With senators on the bench: this is it,
 That makes the wappen'd widow weep again:
 She, whom the spital-house, and ulcerous sores
 Would cast the gorge at, this embalms and spices
 To the April day again. Come, damned earth,
 Thou common whore of mankind, that put'st odds
 Among the rout of nations, I will make thee
 Do thy right nature.—[March afar off.]—Ha! a drum?—Thou'rt quick,

But yet I'll bury thee: thou'lt go, strong thief,
 When gouty keepers of thee cannot stand.—
 Nay, stay thou out for earnest. [Reserving some gold.]

Enter ALCIADAES, with Drum and Fife, in warlike manner; and PHRYNIA and TIMANDRA.

Alcib. What art thou there?
Speak.

Tim. A beast, as thou art. The canker gnaw thy heart,

For showing me again the eyes of man!

Alcib. What is thy name? Is man so hateful to thee
 That art thyself a man?

Tim. I am misanthropos, and hate mankind.

For thy part, I do wish thou wert a dog,

That I might love thee something.

Alcib. I know thee well;
 But in thy fortunes am unlearn'd and strange.

Tim. I know thee too; and more, than that I know thee.

I not desire to know. Follow thy drum;
 With man's blood paint the ground, gules, gules:
 Religious canons, civil laws are cruel:
 Then what should war be? This fell whore of thine
 Hath in her more destruction than thy sword,
 For all her cherubin lock.

Phry. Thy lips rot off!

Tim. I will not kiss thee; then, the rot returns
 To thine own lips again.

Alcib. How came the noble Timon to this change?

Tim. As the moon does, by wanting light to give
 But then, renew, I could not, like the moon;
 There were no suns to borrow of.

Alcib. Noble Timon,
 What friendship may I do thee?

Tim. None, but to Maintain my opinion.

Alcib. What is it, Timon?

Tim. Promise me friendship, but perform none. If thou wilt not promise, the gods plague thee. for thou art a man! if thou dost perform, confound thee, for thou art a man!

Alcib. I have heard in some sort of thy miseries.

Tim. Thou saw'st them, when I had prosperity.

Alcib. I see them now; then was a blessed time.

Tim. As thine is now, held with a brace of harlots

Timan. Is this th' Athenian minion, whom the world
 Void's so regardfully?

Tim. Art thou Timandra?

Timan. Yes.

Tim. Be a whore still! they love thee not, that use
 thee:

Give them diseases, leaving with thee their lust.
 Make use of thy salt hours; season the slaves
 For tubs, and baths; bring down rose-cheeked youth
 To the tub⁸-fast, and the diet.

Timan. Hang thee, monster!

Alcib. Pardon him, sweet Timandra, for his wife
 Are drown'd and lost in his calamities.—

I have had but little gold of late, brave Timon,
 The want whereof doth daily make revolt
 In my penurious band: I have heard and griev'd,
 How curs'd Athens, mindless of thy worth,
 Forgetting thy great deeds, when neighbour states,
 But for thy sword and fortune, trod upon them,—

Tim. I pry'thee, beat thy drum, and get thee gone.

Alcib. I am thy friend, and pity thee, dear Timon.

Tim. How dost thou pity him, whom thou dost trouble?

I had rather be alone.

Alcib. Why, fare thee well:

Here is some gold for thee.

Tim. Keep it. I cannot eat it

Alcib. When I have laid proud Athens on a heap,—

Tim. Warr'st thou 'gainst Athens?

Alcib. Ay Timon, and have cause.

Tim. The gods confound them all in thy conquest
 And thee after, when thou hast conquered:

Alcib. Why me, Timon?

Tim. That, by killing of villains

Thou wast born to conquer my country.

Put up thy gold: go on,—here's gold,—go on;

Be as a planetary plague, when Jove

Will o'er some high-vie'd city hang his poison

In the sick air: let not thy sword skip one.

[Pity not honour'd age for his white beard;

He is an usurer. Strike me the counterfeit matron ;
It is her habit only that is honest,
Herself 's a bawd. Let not the virgin's cheek
Make soft thy trenchant sword ; for those milk-paps,
That through the window-bars bore at men's eyes,
Are not within the leaf of pity writ,
But set them down horrible traitors. Spare not the babe,
Whose dimpled smiles from fools exhaust their mercy :
Think it a bastard, whom the oracle
Hath doubtfully pronounc'd thy throat shall cut,
And mince it sans remorse ; swear against abjects ;¹
Put armour on thine ears, and on thine eyes,
Whose proof, nor yells of mothers, maids, nor babes,
Nor sight of priests, in holy vestments bleeding,
Shall pierce a jot. There 's gold to pay thy soldiers :

[Throwing it.]

Make large confusion ; and thy fury spent,
Confounded be thyself ! Speak not ; be gone.

Alcib. Hast thou gold yet ? I 'll take the gold thou giv'st me,

Not all thy counsel.

Tim. Dost thou, or dost thou not, heaven's curse upon thee !

Phr. & Timon. Give us some gold, good Timon :
hast thou more ?

Tim. Enough to make a whore forswear her trade,
And to make whores abhorr'd². Hold up, you sluts,
Your aprons mountant ; you are not oathable.—
Although I know, you 'll swear, terribly swear,
Into strong shudders, and to heavenly agues,
The immortal gods that hear you,—spare your oaths,
I 'll trust to your conditions : be whores still ;
And he whose pious breath seeks to convert you,
Be strong in whore, allure him, burn him up ;
Let your close fire predominate his smoke.
And be no turncoats. Yet may your pains, six months,

Be quite contrary ; and thatch your poor thin roofs
With burdens of the dead :—some that were hang'd.
No matter :—wear them, betray with them : whore still ;
Paint till a horse may mire upon your face :
A pox of wrinkles !

Phry & Timon. Well, more gold.—What then ?—
Believe it, that we 'll do any thing for gold.

Tim. Consumptions sow
In hollow bones of man ; strike their sharp shins,
And mar men's spurring. Crack the lawyer's voice,
That he may never more false title plead.
Nor sound his quillets shrilly ; hoar the flamen,
That scolds against the quality of flesh.
And not believes himself : down with the nose,
Down with it flat ; take the bridge quite away
Of him, that his particular to foresee.
Smells from the general weal : make curl'd-pate
ruffians bald ;

And let the unsear'd braggarts of the war
Derive some pain from you. Plague all,
That your activity may defeat and quell
The source of all erection.—There 's more gold :

[Throwing it.]

Do you damn others, and let this damn you.

And ditches grave you all !

Phr & Timon. More counsel with more money, bounteous Timon.

Tim. More whore more mischief first : I have given you earnest.

Alcib. Strike up the drum towards Athens ! Farewell, Timon :

If I thrive well, I 'll visit thee again.

Tim. If I hope well, I 'll never see thee more.

Alcib. I never did thee harm.

Tim. Yes, thou spok'st well of me.

Alcib. Call'st thou that harm³

Tim. Men daily find it. Get thee away,

And take thy beagles with thee.

Alcib. We but offend him.—

Strike !

[Drum beats. Exeunt ALCIBIADES, PHRYNIA, and TIMANDRA.

Tim. That nature, being sick of man's unkindness,
Should yet be hungry !—Common mother, thou,

[Digging.

Whose womb unmeasurable, and infinite breast,
Teems and feeds all ; whose self-same nettle,
Whereof thy proud child, arrogant man, is puff'd,
Engenders the black toad, and adder blue,
The gilded newt, and eyeless venom'd worm,
With all the abhorred births below crisp heaven
Whereon Hyperion's quickening fire doth shine ;
Yield him, who all the human sons doth hate,
From forth thy plenteous bosom, one poor root !
Ensear thy fertile and conceptuous womb ;
Let it no more bring out ingrateful man !

Go great with tigers, dragons, wolves, and bears ;
Teem with new monsters, whom thy upward face
Hath to the marbled mansion all above
Never presented !—O ! a root !—dear thanks !
Dry up thy meadows⁴, vines, and plough-torn leas
Whereof ingrateful man, with liquorish drafts,
And morsels unctuous, greases his pure mind,
That from it all consideration slips.—

Enter APEMANTUS.

More man ? Plague ! plague !

Apem. I was directed hither : men report,
Thou dost affect my manners, and dost use them.

Tim. 'Tis, then, because thou dost not keep a dog
Whom I would imitate. Consumption catch thee !

Apem. This is in thee a nature but infected ;
A poor unmanly melancholy, sprung
From change of fortune.⁵ Why this spade ? this place !
This slave-like habit, and these looks of care ?
Thy flatterers yet wear silk, drink wine, lie soft,
Hug their diseas'd perfumes, and have forgot
That ever Timon was. Shame not these woods,
By putting on the cunning of a carper.
Be thou a flatterer now, and seek to thrive
By that which has undone thee : hinge thy knee,
And let his very breath, whom thou 'lt observe,
Blow off thy cap : praise his most vicious strain,
And call it excellent. Thou wast told thus ;
Thou gav'st thine ears, like tapsters that bade welcome,
To knaves, and all approachers : 't is most just,
That thou turn rascal : hadst thou wealth again,
Rascals should have 't. Do not assume my likeness

Tim. Were I like thee, I 'd throw away myself.

Apem. Thou hast cast away thyself, being like thyself ;

A madman so long, now a fool. What ! think'st
That the bleak air, thy boisterous chamberlain,
Will put thy shirt on warm ? Will these moist⁶ trees,
That have outliv'd the eagle, page thy heels,
And skip when thou point'st out ? Will the cold brook
Candied with ice, caudle thy morning taste,
To cure thy o'er-night's surfeit ? call the creatures,—
Whose naked natures live in all the spite
Of wreakful heaven, whose bare unhoused trunks,

¹ objects : in f. e. ² Not in f. e. ³ a bawd : in f. e. ⁴ Not in f. e. ⁵ narrows : in f. e. ⁶ future : in folio. Rowe made the change.
Hammer reads : moist'd

To the conflicting elements expos'd,
Answer mere nature,—bid them flatter thee;
O! thou shalt find—

Tim. A fool of thee. Depart.

Apem. I love thee better now than e'er I did.

Tim. I hate thee worse.

Apem. Why?

Tim. Thou flatter'st misery.

Apem. I flatter not, but say thou art a catiff.

Tim. Why dost thou seek me out?

Apem. To vex thee.

Tim. Always a villain's office, or a fool's.

Dost please thyself in 't?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. What! a knave too?

Apem. If thou didst put this sour cold habit on

To castigate thy pride, 't were well; but thou

Dost it enforcedly: thou 'dst courtier be again,

Wert thou not beggar. Willing misery

Outlives uncertain pomp, is crown'd before:

The one is filling still, never complete:

The other, at high wish, best state, contentless,

Hath a distracted and most wretched being,

Worse than the worst content.

Thou shouldst desire to die, being miserable.

Tim. Not by his breath, that is more miserable.

Thou art a slave, whom Fortune's tender arm

With favour never clasp'd, but bred a dog.

Hadst thou, like us, from our first swath, proceeded

The sweet degrees that this brief world affords

To such as may the passive dugs¹ of it

Freely command, thou wouldst have plung'd thyself

In general riot; melted down thy youth

In different beds of lust; and never learn'd

The icy precepts of respect, but follow'd

The sugar'd game before thee. But myself,

Who had the world as my confectionary;

The mouths, the tongues, the eyes, and hearts of men

At duty, more than I could frame employment;

That numberless upon me stuck, as leaves

Do on the oak, have with one winter's brush

Fell from their boughs, and left me open, bare

For every storm that blows;—I, to bear this,

That never knew but better, is some burden:

Thy nature did commence in sufferance, time

Hath made thee hard in 't. Why shouldst thou hate men?

They never flatter'd thee: what hast thou given?

If thou wilt curse, thy father, that poor rag,

Must be thy subject; who, in spite, put stuff

To some she beggar, and compounded thee

Poor rogue hereditary. Hence! be gone!—

If thou hadst not been born the worst of men,

Thou hadst been a knave, and flatterer.

Apem. Art thou proud yet?

Tim. Ay, that I am not thee.

Apem. I, that I was

No prodigal.

Tim. I, that I am one now:

Were all the wealth I have shut up in thee,

I'd give thee leave to hang it. Get thee gone.—

That the whole life of Athens were in this!

Thus would I eat it.

[Entering a root.]

Apem. Here; I will mend thy feast.

[Offering something]

Tim. First mend my² company, take away thyself.

Apem. So I shall mend mine own, by the lack of thine.

Tim. 'T is not well mended so, it is but botch'd; if not, I would it were.

Apem. What wouldst thou have to Athens?

Tim. Thee thither in a whirlwind. If thou wilt, Tell them there I have gold: look, so I have.

Apem. Here is no use for gold.

Tim. The best, and truest For here it sleeps, and does no hired harin.

Apem. Where ly'st o' nights, Timon?

Tim. Under that's above me

Where feed'st thou o' days, Apemantus?

Apem. Where. my stomach finds meat; or, rather, where I eat it.

Tim. Would poison were obedient, and knew my mind!

Apem. Where wouldst thou send it?

Tim. To sauee thy dishes.

Apem. The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends. When thou wast in thy gilt, and thy perfume, they mocked thee for too much curiosity: in thy rags thou knowest none, but art despised for the contrary. There's a medlar for thee; eat it.

Tim. On what I hate I feed not.

Apem. Dost hate a medlar?

Tim. Ay, though it look like thee.

Apem. An thou hadst hated meddlers sooner, thou shouldst have loved thyself better now. What man didst thou ever know unthrift, that was beloved after his means?

Tim. Who, without those means thou talkest of, didst thou ever know beloved?

Apem. Myself.

Tim. I understand thee: thou hadst some means to keep a dog.

Apem. What things in the world canst thou nearest compare to thy flatterers?

Tim. Women nearest; but men, men are the things themselves. What wouldst thou do with the world, Apemantus, if it lay in thy power?

Apem. Give it the beasts, to be rid of the men.

Tim. Wouldst thou have thyself fall in the confusion of men, and remain a beast with the beasts?

Apem. Ay, Timon.

Tim. A beastly ambition, which the gods grant thee to attain to. If thou wert the lion, the fox would beguile thee: if thou wert the lamb, the fox would eat thee: if thou wert the fox, the lion would suspect thee, when, peradventure, thou wert accused by the ass: if thou wert the ass, thy dulness would torment thee, and still thou livest but as a breakfast to the wolf: if thou wert the wolf, thy greediness would afflict thee, and oft thou shouldst hazard thy life for thy dinner: wert thou the unicorn, pride and wrath would confound thee, and make thine own self the conquest of thy fury: wert thou a bear, thou wouldst be killed by the horse: wert thou a horse, thou wouldst be seized by the leopard: wert thou a leopard, thou wert germane to the lion, and the spots of thy kindred were jurors on thy life; all thy safety were remotion, and thy defence, absence. What beast couldst thou be, that were not subject to a beast? and what a beast art thou already, that seest not thy loss in transformation.

Apem. If thou couldst please me with speaking to me, thou mightst have hit upon it here: the commonwealth of Athens is become a forest of beasts.

Tim. How has the ass broke the wall, that thou art out of the city?

Apem. Yonder comes a poet, and a painter. The plague of company light upon thee! I will fear to eaten it, and give way. When I know not what else to do, I'll see thee again.

¹ drugs: in f e ² thy: in folio Rowe made the change.

Tim. When there is nothing living but thee, thou shalt be welcome. I had rather be a beggar's dog, than Apemantus.

Apem. Thou art the cap of all the fools alive.

Tim. Would thou wert clean enough to spit upon.

Apem. A plague on thee, thou art too bad to curse.

Tim. All villains, that do stand by thee, are pure.

Apem. There is no leprosy but what thou speak'st.

Tim. If I name thee.—

'd beat thee, but I should infect my hands.

Apem. I would, my tongue could rot them off.

Tim. Away, thou issue of a mangy dog!

Choler does kill me, that thou art alive;

I swoon to see thee.

Apem. Would thou wouldst burst!

Tim. Away.

Thou tedious rogue! I am sorry, I shall lose

A stone by thee. [Throws a stone at him.]

Apem. Beast!

Tim. Slave!

Apem. Toad!

Tim. Rogue, rogue, rogue!

[Apemantus retreats backward, as going.]

I am sick of this false world, and will love nought

But even the mere necessities upon 't.

Then, Timon, presently prepare thy grave:

Lie where the light foam of the sea may beat

Thy grave-stone daily; make thee epitaph.

That death in me at others' lives may laugh.

O, thou sweet king-killer, and dear divorce

[Looking on the gold.]

Twixt natural son and sire! thou bright defiler

Of Hymen's purest bed! thou valiant Mars!

Thou ever young, fresh, lov'd, and delicate wooer,

Whose blush doth thaw the consecrated snow

That lies on Dian's lap! thou visible god,

That solder'st close impossibilities,

And mak'st them kiss! that speak'st with every tongue,

To every purpose! O thou touch'd of hearts!

Think, thy slave man rebels; and by thy virtue

Set them into confounding odds, that beasts

May have the world in empire!

Apem. Would 't were so;

But not till I am dead.—I'll say, thou'st gold:

Thou wilt be throng'd shortly.

Tim. Throng'd to?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. Thy back, I pr'ythee.

Apem. Live, and love thy misery!

Tim. Long live so, and so die!—I am quit—

[Erit Apemantus.]

More things like men?—Eat, Timon, and abhor them.

[Enter Banditti.]

1 Band. Where should he have this gold? It is some poor fragment, some slender ort of his remainder. The mere want of gold, and the falling from him² of his friends, drove him into this melancholy.

2 Band. It is noised, he hath a mass of treasure.

3 Band. Let us make the assay upon him: if he care not for't, he will supply us easily; if he covetously reserve it, how shall's get it?

2 Band. True, for he bears it not about him; 't is hid.

1 Band. Is not this he?

All Where?

2 Band. 'T is his description.

3 Band. He; I know him.

All. Save thee, Timon.

Tim. Now, thieves?

All. Soldiers, not thieves.

Tim. Both two; and women's sons.

All. We are not thieves, but men that much do want.

Tim. Your greatest want is, you want much of meat.

Why should you want? Behold, the earth hath roots

Within this mile break forth a hundred springs;

The oaks bear mast, the briars scarlet hips;

The bounteous housewife, nature, on each bush

Lays her full mess before you. Want! why want?

1 Band. We cannot live on grass, on berries, water

As beasts, and birds, and fishes.

Tim. Nor on the beasts themselves, the birds, and fishes;

You must eat men. Yet thanks I must you con,

That you are thieves profess'd, that you work not

In holier shapes; for there is boundless theft

In limited professions. Rascal thieves,

Here's gold. Go, suck the subtle blood o' the grape.

[Throwing gold.]

Till the high fever seethe your blood to froth,

And so 'scape hanging: trust not the physician;

His antidotes are poison, and he slays

More than you rob: take wealth and lives together;

Do villainy, do, since you protest to do 't.

Like workmen: I'll example you with thievery:

The sun's a thief, and with his great attraction

Robs the vast sea: the moon's an arrant thief,

And her pale fire she snatches from the sun:

The sea's a thief, whose liquid surge resolves

The moon into salt tears: the earth's a thief,

That feeds and breeds by a composture stolen

From general excrement: each thing's a thief.

The laws, your curb and whip, in their rough power

Have uncheek'd theft. Love not yourselves; away!

Rob one another. There's more gold: cut throats;

[Throwing it.]

All that you meet are thieves. To Athens, go:

Break open shops; nothing can you steal,

But thieves do lose it. Steal no' less for this

I give you; and gold confound you howsoever! Amen

[Timon retires to his Cave.]

3 Band. He has almost charmed me from my profession, by persuading me to it.

1 Band. 'T is in the malice of mankind, that he thus advises us; not to have us thrive in our mystery.

2 Band. I'll believe him as an enemy, and give over my trade.

1 Band. Let us first see peace in Athens: there is no time so miserable, but a man may be true.

[Exeunt Banditti.]

Enter FLAVIUS.

Flav. O you gods!

Is yond' despis'd and ruinous man my lord?

Full of decay and failing? O monument,

And wonder of good deeds evilly bestow'd!

What an alteration of honour has desperate want made

What viler thing upon the earth, than friend

Who can bring noblest minds to basest ends?

How rarely does it meet with this time's guise,

When man was wish'd to love his enemies:

Grant, I may ever love, and rather woo

Those that would mischief me, than those that do!

He has caught me in his eye: I will present

My honest grief unto him; and, as my lord,

Still serve him with my life.—My dearest master!

Timon comes forward from his Cave.

Tim. Away! what art thou?

Flav. Have you forgot me, sir?

Tim. Why dost ask that? I have forgot all men;
I 'ben, if thou grant'st¹ thou'rt a man, I have forgot thee.

Flav. An honest poor servant of yours.

Tim. Then, I know thee not:

I never had honest man about me, I;

All I kept were knaves to serve in meat to villains.

Flav. The gods are witness,

Ne'er did poor steward wear a truer grief

For his undone lord, than mine eyes for you.

Tim. What! dost thou weep?—Come nearer:—
then, I love thee,

Because thou art a woman, and disclaim'st

Flinty mankind; whose eyes do never give.

But thorough lust; and laughter. Pity's sleeping:

Strange times, that weep with laughing, not with weeping!

Flav. I beg of you to know me, good my lord,

T² accept my grief, and, whilst this poor wealth lasts,
To entertain me as your steward still.

Tim. Had I a steward

So true, so just, and now so comfortable?

It almost turns my dangerous nature mild.

Let me behold thy face. Surely, this man

Was born of woman.—

Forgive my general and exceptless rashness,

Y³ perpetual-sober gods! I do proclaim

One honest man,—mistake me not,—but one;

No more, I pray,—and he's a steward.—

How fain would I have hated all mankind,

And thou redeem'st thyself: but all, save thee,

I fell with curses.

Methinks, thou art more honest now, than wise;

For by oppressing and betraying me,

Thou might'st have sooner got another service,

For many so arrive at second masters,

Upon their first lord's neck. But tell me true,
(For I must ever doubt, though ne'er so sure)
Is not thy kindness subtle, covetous,
Is't not a usuring kindness as rich men deal gitts,
Expecting in return twenty for one?

Flav. No, my most worthy master; in whose breast
Doubt and suspect, alas! are plac'd too late.

You should have fear'd false times, when you did feast
Suspect still comes when an estate is least.

That which I show, heaven knows, is merely love,
Duty and zeal to your unmatched mind,
Care of your food and living: and, believe it,
My most honour'd lord,
For any benefit that points to me.

Either in hope, or present, I'd exchange
For this one wish,—that you had power and wealth

To requite me by making rich yourself.

Tim. Look thee, 't is so.—Thou singly honest man.
Here, take:—the gods out of my misery [Giving gold.]
Have sent thee treasure. Go, live rich, and happy;

But thus condition'd:—thou shalt build from men;

Hate all, curse all; show charity to none,

But let the famish'd flesh slide from the bone,

Ere thou relieve the beggar: give to dogs

What thou deny'st to men; let prisons swallow 'em,

Debts wither 'em to nothing. Be men like blasted woods,

And may diseases lick up their false bloods!

And so, farewell, and thrive.

Flav. O! let me stay,

And comfort you, my master.

Tim. If thou hat'st
Curses, stay not: fly, whilst thou'rt bless'd and free.
Ne'er see thou man, and let me ne'er see thee.

[Exit FLAVIUS; and TIMON into his Cave.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Same. Before TIMON's Cave.

Enter Poet and Painter.

Pain. As I took note of the place, it cannot be far where he abides.

Poet. What's to be thought of him? Does the rumour hold for true, that he is so full of gold?

Pain. Certain: Alcibiades reports it; Phrynia and Timandra had gold of him; he likewise enriched poor straggling soldiers with great quantity. 'T is said, he gave unto his steward a mighty sum.

Poet. Then this breaking of his has been but a try for his friends.

Pain. Nothing else; you shall see him a palm in Athens again, and flourish with the highest. Therefore, 't is not amiss we tender our loves to him in this supposed distress of his: it will show honestly in us, and is very likely to load our purses⁴ with what we⁵ travail for, if it be a just and true report that goes of his having.

Poet. What have you now to present unto him?

Pain. Nothing at this time but my visitation; only,
I will promise him an excellent piece.

Poet. I must serve him so too; tell him of an intent that's coming toward him.

Pain. Good as the best. Promising is the very air
o' the time: it opens the eyes of expectation: performance is ever the duller for his act; and, but in the plainer and simpler kind of people, the deed of saying is quite out of use. To promise is most courtly and fashionable: performance is a kind of will, or testament, which argues a great sickness in his judgment that makes it.

Enter TIMON, behind, from his Cave.

Tim. Excellent workman! Thou canst not paint a man so bad as is thyself.

Poet. I am thinking, what I shall say I have provided for him. It must be a personating of himself:
a satire against the softness of prosperity, with a discovery of the infinite flatteries that follow youth and opulency.

Tim. Must thou needs stand for a villain in thine own work? Wilt thou whip thine own faults in other men? Do so; I have gold for thee.

Poet. Nay, let's seek him:

Then do we sin against our own estate.

When we may profit meet, and come too late.

Pain. True;

When the day serves, before black-cover'd night,
Find what thou want'st by free and offer'd light.
Come.

Tim. I'll meet you at the turn. What a god's gold,
That he is worship'd in a baser temple,
Than where swine feed!

'T is thou that riggst⁶ the bark, and plough'st the foam;
Settlest admired reverence in a slave:
To thee be worship: and thy saints for aye
Be crown'd with plagues, that thee alone obey!

³ Present severally: in f. e. ⁴ purposes: in f. e. ⁵ they: in f. e.

Fit I meet them.

Poet. Hail, worthy Timon !

Pain. Our late noble master.

Tim. Have I once liv'd to see two honest men ?

Poet. Sir,

Having often of your open bounty tasted,
Hearing you were retir'd, your friend's fall'n off,
Whose thankless natures—O, abhorred spirits !
Not all the whips of heaven are large enough—
What ! to you,
Whose star-like nobleness gave life and influence
To their whole being ? I am rapt, and cannot cover
The monstrous bulk of this ingratitude
With any size of words.

Tim. Let it go naked, men may see 't the better :
You, that are honest, by being what you are,
Make them best seen, and known.

Pain. He, and myself,
Have travell'd in the great shower of your gifts,
And sweetly felt it.

Tim. Ay, you are honest men.

Pain. We are hither come to offer you our service.

Tim. Most honest men ! Why, how shall I requite you ?
Can you eat roots, and drink cold water ? no.

Both. What can we do, we 'll do, to do you service.

Tim. You are honest men. You have heard that I have gold ;

I am sure you have : speak truth ; you are honest men.

Pain. So it is said, my noble lord ; but therefore Came not my friend, nor I.

Tim. Good honest men !—Thou draw'st a counterfeit
Best in all Athens : thou art, indeed, the best ;
Thou counterfeit'st most lively.

Pain. So, so, my lord.

Tim. Even so, sir, as I say.—And for thy fiction,
Why, thy verse swells with stuff so fine and smooth,
That thou art even natural in thine art.—
But, for all this, my honest-natur'd friends,
I must needs say, you have a little fault :
Marry, 't is not monstrous in you ; neither wish I,
You take much pains to mend.

Both. Beseech your honour,
To make it known to us.

Tim. You 'll take it ill.

Both. Most thankfully, my lord.

Tim. Will you, indeed ?

Both. Doubt it not, worthy lord.

Tim. There's never a one of you but trusts a knave,
That mightily deceives you.

Both. Do we, my lord ?

Tim. Ay, and you hear him cog, see him dissemble,
Know his gross patchery, love him, feed him,
Keep in your bosom ; yet remain assur'd,
That he's a made-up villain.

Pain. I know none such, my lord.

Poet. Nor I.

Tim. Look you, I love you well : I'll give you gold,
Rid me these villains from your companies ;
Hang them, or stab them, drown them in a draught,
Confound them by some course, and come to me
'll give you gold enough.

Both. Name them, my lord ; let's know them.

Tim. You that way, and you this ; but two is a company :—
Each man apart, all single and alone.
Yet an arch-villain keeps him company.
If, where thou art, two villains shall not be.

{To the Painter.

Come not near him.—If thou wouldst not reside

{To the Poet.

{Advancing.

But where one villain is, then him abandon.—
Hence ! pack ! there's gold ; ye came for gold, ye slaves !
You have done work for me, there's payment : hence !
You are an alchymist, make gold of that.
Out, rascal dogs ! {Exit, beating them out

SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter FLAVIUS, and two Senators.

Flav. It is in vain that you would speak with Timon.
For he is set so only to himself,
That nothing but himself, which looks like man,
Is friendly with him.

1 Sen. Bring us to his cave :
It is our part, and promise to the Athenians,
To speak with Timon.

2 Sen. At all times alike
Men are not still the same. 'T was time, and griefs,
That fram'd him thus : time, with his fairer hand
Offering the fortunes of his former days,
The former man may make him. Bring us to him,
And chance it as it may.

Flav. Here is his cave.—
Peace and content be here ! Lord Timon ! Timon !
Look out, and speak to friends. Th' Athenians,
By two of their most reverend senate, greet thee :
Speak to them, noble Timon.

Enter TIMON.

Tim. Thou sun, that comfort'st, burn !—Speak, and be hang'd :

For each true word, a blister ; and each false
Be as a cankerizing to the root o' the tongue,
Consuming it with speaking :

1 Sen. Worthy Timon,—
Tim. Of none but such as you, and you of Timon.

2 Sen. The senators of Athens greet thee, Timon.
Tim. I thank them ; and would send them back the plague,

Could I but catch it for them.

1 Sen. O ! forget
What we are sorry for ourselves in thee.
The senators, with one consent of love,
Entreat thee back to Athens : who have thought
On special dignities, which vacant lie
For thy best use and wearing.

2 Sen. They confess
Toward thee forgetfulness, too general, gross ;
Which now the public body, which doth seldom
Play the recanter, feeling in itself
A lack of Timon's aid, hath sense withal
Of its own fall, restraining aid to Timon ;
And send forth us, to make their sorrowed render,
Together with a recompense, more fruitful
Than their offence can weigh down by the dram ;
Ay, even such heaps and sums of love and wealth,
As shall to thee blot out what wrongs were theirs,
And write in thee the figures of their love,
Ever to read them thine.

Tim. You witch me in it :
Surprise me to the very brink of tears :
Lend me a fool's heart, and a woman's eyes,
And I'll beweepe these comforts, worthy senators.

1 Sen. Therefore, so please thee to return with us,
And of our Athens, thine and ours, to take
The captainship, thou shalt be met with thanks,
Allow'd with absolute power, and thy good name
Live with authority :—so, soon we shall drive back
Of Alcibiades th' approaches wild ;
Who, like a boar too savage, doth root up
His country's peace.

2 Sen. And shakes his threat'ning sword
Against the walls of Athens.

1 Sen. Therefore, Timon,—
Tim. Well, sir, I will; therefore, I will, sir; thus,—
If Alcibiades kill my countrymen,
Let Alcibiades know this of Timon,
That Timon cares not. But if he sack fair Athens,
And take our goodly aged men by the beards,
Giving our holy virgins to the stain
Of contumelious, beastly, mad-brain'd war,
Then, let him know,—and tell him, Timon speaks it,
In pity of our aged, and our youth,
I cannot choose but tell him,—that I care not.
And let him take't at worst; for their knives care not,
While you have throats to answer: for myself,
There's not a whistle in th' unruly camp,
But I do prize it at my love, before
The reverend'st throat in Athens. So I leave you
To the protection of the prosperous gods,
As thieves to keepers.

Flav. Stay not: all's in vain.

Tim. Why, I was writing of my epitaph,
It will be seen to-morrow. My long sickness
Of health, and living, now begins to mend,
And nothing brings me all things. Go; live still Be Alcibiades your plague, you his,
And last so long enough!

1 Sen. We speak in vain.

Tim. But yet I love my country: and am not
One that rejoices in the common wreck,
As common bruit doth put it.

1 Sen. That's well spoke.

Tim. Commend me to my loving countrymen.—

1 Sen. These words become your lips as they pass through them.

2 Sen. And enter in our ears, like great triumphers
In their applauding gates.

Tim. Commend me to them;
And tell them, that to ease them of their griefs,
Their fears of hostile strokes, their aches, losses,
Their pangs of love, and other incident throes
That nature's fragile vessel doth sustain
In life's uncertain voyage, I will some kindness do them.
I'll teach them to prevent wild Alcibiades' wrath.

2 Sen. I like this well: he will return again.

Tim. I have a tree, which grows in my close,
That mine own use invites me to cut down,
And shortly must I fell it: tell my friends,
Tell Athens, in the sequence of degree,
From high to low throughout, that whose please
To stop affliction, let him take his halter,⁴
Come hither, ere my tree hath felt the axe.
And hang himself.—I pray you, do my greeting.

Flav. Trouble him no farther; thus you still shall find him.

Tim. Come not to me again; but say to Athens,
Timon hath made his everlasting mansion
Upon the beached verge of the salt flood;
Whom once a day with his embosht³ froth
The turbulent surge shall cover: thither come,
And let my grave-stone be your oracle.—
Lips, let sour words go by, and language end:
What is amiss, plague and infection mend:
Graves only be men's works, and death their gain.
Sun, hide thy beams: Timon hath done his reign.

[Exit TIMON.]

1 Sen. His discontents are unremovably coupled to nature.

2 Sen. Our hope in him is dead. Let us return,

And strain what other means is left unto us
In our dear² peril.

1 Sen. It requires swift foot. [Exeunt]

SCENE III.—The Walls of Athens.

Enter two Senators. and a Messenger.

1 Sen. Thou hast painfully discover'd: are his files
As full as they report?

Mess. I have spoke the least;
Besides, his expedition promises
Present approach.

2 Sen. We stand much hazard, if they bring not Timon.

Mess. I met a courier, one mine ancient friend,
Whom, though in general part we were oppos'd,
Yet our old love made a particular force.
And made us speak like friends: this man was riding
From Alcibiades to Timon's cave,
With letters of entreaty, which import
His fellowship i' the cause against your city,
In part for his sake mov'd.

Enter Senators from TIMON.

1 Sen. Here come our brothers

3 Sen. No talk of Timon: nothing of him expect.—
The enemies' drum is heard, and fearful scouring
Doth choke the air with dust. In, and prepare:
Ours is the fall, I fear, our foes the snare. [Exeunt]

SCENE IV.—The Woods. TIMON's Cave, and a Tomb-stone seen.

Enter a Soldier, seeking TIMON.

Sold. By all description this should be the place
Who's here? speak, ho!—No answer?—What is this?
Timon is dead, who hath outstretch'd his span.
Some beast rear'd² this: there does not live a man.
Dead, sure, and this his grave.—What's on this tomb
I cannot read; the character I'll take with wax:
Our captain hath in every figure kill;
An ag'd interpreter, though young in days
Before proud Athens he's set down by this,
Whose fall the mark of his ambition is. [Exit]

SCENE V.—Before the Walls of Athens.

Trumpets sound. Enter ALCIBIADES, and Forces

Alcib. Sound to this coward and lascivious town
Our terrible approach. [A Parley sounded]

Enter Senators, on the Walls.

Till now you have gone on, and fill'd the time
With all licentious measure, making your wills
The scope of justice: till now myself, and such
As slept within the shadow of your power,
Have wander'd with our travers'd arms, and breath'd
Our surfeance vainly. Now the time is flush,
When crouching marrow, in the bearer strong,
Cries of itself, "No more!" now breathless wrong
Shall sit and pant in your great chairs of ease;
And pury insolence shall break his wind
With fear, and horrid fight.

1 Sen. Noble, and young,
When thy first griefs were but a mere conceit,
Ere thou hadst power, or we had cause of fear,
We sent to thee, to give thy rages balm,
To wipe out our ingratitude with loves
Above their quantity.

2 Sen. So did we woo
Transformed Timon to our city's love,
By humble message, and by promis'd means:
We were not all unkind, nor all deserve
The common stroke of war.

embosht'd: in f. e. ² Dire. ³ read: in folio. Theobald made the change. ⁴ In former editions, "haste."

1 Sen. These walls of ours
Were not erected by their hands, from whom
You have receiv'd your grief: nor are they such,
That these great towers, trophies, and schools should fall
For private faults in them.

2 Sen. Nor are they living,
Who were the motives that you first went out:
Shame, that they wanted cunning! in excess
Hath broke their hearts. March, noble lord,
Into our city with thy banners spread:
By decimation, and a tithed death
(If thy revenges hunger for that food
Which nature loaths) take thou the destin'd tenth;
And by the hazard of the spotted die
Let die the spotted.

1 Sen. All have not offended;
For those that were, is 't not severe² to take,
On those that are, revenge? crimes, like lands,
Are not inherited. Then, dear countryman,
Bring in thy ranks, but leave without thy rage:
Spare thy Athenian cradle, and those kin,
Which in the bluster of thy wrath must fall
With those that have offended. Like a shepherd,
Approach the fold, and cull th' infected forth,
But kill not all together.

2 Sen. What thou wilt,
Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile,
Than hew to 't with thy sword.

1 Sen. Set but thy foot
Against our rampir'd gates, and they shall ope,
So thou wilt send thy gentle heart before,
To say, thou 'lt enter friendly.

2 Sen. Throw thy glove,
Or any token of thine honour else,
That thou wilt use the wars as thy redress,
And not as our confusion, all thy powers
Shall make their harbour in our town, till we Have seal'd thy full desire.

Alcib. Then, there's my glove
Descend, and open your uncharged ports.
Those enemies of Timon's, and mine own,
Whom you yourselves shall set out for reproof,
Fall, and no more; and,—to atone³ your fears
With my more noble meaning,—not a man
Shall pass his quarter, or offend the stream
Of regular justice in your city's bounds,
But shall be remedied by⁴ your public laws
At heaviest answer.

Both. 'T is most nobly spoken.

Alcib. Descend, and keep your words.

[The Senators descend, and open the Gates.]

Enter a Soldier.

Sold. My noble general, Timon is dead,
Entomb'd upon the very hem o' the sea;
And on his grave-stone this insculpture, which
With wax I brought away, whose soft impression
Interprets for my poor ignorance.

Alcib. [Reads.] "Here lies a wretched corse, of wretched soul bereft:

Seek not my name. A plague consume you wicked caitiffs left!

Here lie I Timon; who, alive, all living men did hate.
Pass by, and curse thy fill; but pass, and stay not here thy gait."

These well express in thee thy later spirits:
Though thou abhorr'dst in us our human griefs,
Scorn'dst our brain's flow, and those our droplets, which
From niggard nature fall, yet rich conceit
Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for aye
On thy low grave on faults forgiven. Dead
Is noble Timon; of whose memory
Hereafter more.—Bring me into your city,
And I will use the olive with my sword:
Make war breed peace; make peace stint war; make each
Prescribe to other, as each other's leech.—
Let our drums strike.

Exit

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Rome. A Street.

Enter FLAVIUS, MARULLUS, and a body of Citizens.

Flav. Hence! home, you idle creatures, get you home.

Is this a holiday? What! know you not,

Being mechanical, you ought not walk

Upon a labouring day without the sign.

Of your profession?—Speak, what trade art thou?

1 Cit. Why, sir, a carpenter.

Mar. Where is thy leather apron, and thy rule?

What dost thou with thy best apparel on?—

You, sir; what trade are you?

2 Cit. Truly, sir, in respect of a fine workman, I am but, as you would say, a cobbler.

Mar. But what trade art thou? Answer me directly.

2 Cit. A trade, sir, that, I hope, I may use with a safe conscience; which is, indeed, sir, a mender of bad soles.

Flav. What trade, thou knave? thou naughty knave, what trade?

2 Cit. Nay, I beseech you, sir, be not out with me: yet, if you be out, sir, I can mend you.

Mar. What mean'st thou by that? Mend me, thou saucy fellow?

2 Cit. Why, sir, cobble you.

Flav. Thou art a cobbler, art thou?

2 Cit. Truly, sir, all that I live by is, with the awl; I meddle with no tradesman's matters, nor women's matters, but with all. I am, indeed, sir, a surgeon to old shoes; when they are in great danger, I re-cover them. As proper men as ever trod upon neats-leather have gone upon my handywork.

Flav. But wherefore art not in thy shop to-day?

Why dost thou lead these men about the streets?

2 Cit. Truly, sir, to wear out their shoes, to get myself into more work. But, indeed, sir, we make holiday, to see Cæsar, and to rejoice in his triumph.

Mar. Wherefore rejoice? What conquest brings ne home?

What tributaries follow him to Rome,

To grace in captive bonds his chariot wheels?

You blocks, you stones, you worse than senseless things!

O! you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome,

Knew you not Pompey? Many a time and oft

Have you climb'd up to walls and battlements,

To towers and windows, yea, to chimney-tops,

Your infants in your arms, and there have sat

The live-long day, with patient expectation,

To see great Pompey pass the streets of Rome:

And when you saw his chariot but appear,

Have you not made an universal shout,

That Tyber trembled underneath her banks,

To hear the replication of your sounds

Made in her concave shores?

And do you now put on your best attire?

And do you now cull out a holiday?

And do you now strew flowers in his way,

That comes in triumph over Pompey's blood?

Be gone!

Run to your houses, fall upon your knees,

Pray to the gods to intermit the plague

That needs must light on this ingratitude.

Flav. Go, go, good countrymen: and for this fault

Assemble all the poor men of your sort:

Draw them to Tyber banks, and weep your tears

Into the channel, till the lowest stream

Do kiss the most exalted shores of all. [Exeunt Citizens]

See, where their basest metal be not mov'd;

They vanish tongue-tied in their guiltiness.

Go you down that way towards the Capitol;

This way will I. Disrobe the images,

If you do find them deck'd with ceremonies.

Mar. May we do so?

You know, it is the feast of Lupercal.

Flav. It is no matter; let no images

Be hung with Cæsar's trophies. I'll about,
And drive away the vulgar from the streets:
So do you too, where you perceive them thick.
These growing feathers pluck'd from Cæsar's wing,
Will make him fly an ordinary pitch,
Who else would soar above the view of men,
And keep us all in servile fearfulness. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Public Place.

Enter, in Procession, with Trumpets and other Music.
CÆSAR: ANTONY, for the course; CALPHURNIA, POR-
TIA, DECIUS, CICERO, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, and CASCA;
a Soothsayer, and a crowd following them.

Cæs. Calphurnia,—

Casca. Peace, ho! Cæsar speaks. [Music ceases.]

Cæs. Calphurnia,—

Cal. Here, my lord.

Cæs. Stand you directly in Antonius' way,
When he doth run his course.—Antonius.

Ant. Cæsar, my lord.

Cæs. Forget not, in your speed, Antonius,
To touch Calphurnia: for our elders say,
The barren, touch'd in this holy chase,
Shake off their sterility.

Ant. I shall remember:
When Cæsar says, "Do this," it is perform'd.

Cæs. Set on: and leave no ceremony out. [Music.]

Sooth. Cæsar!

Cæs. Ha! who calls?

Casca. Bid every noise be still.—Peace yet again!
[Music ceases.]

Cæs. Who is it in the press that calls on me?
I fear a tongue, shriller than all the music,
Cry, Cæsar! Speak: Cæsar is turn'd to hear.

Sooth. Beware the ides of March.

Cæs. What man is that?

Bru. A soothsayer bids you beware the ides of March.

Cæs. Set him before me; let me see his face.

Cæs. Fellow, come from the throng: look upon Cæsar.

Cæs. What say'st thou to me now? Speak once
again.

Sooth. Beware the ides of March.

Cæs. He is a dreamer; let us leave him.—Pass.

[Scaunt. Exeunt all but Bru. and Cæs.]

Cæs. Will you go to see the order of the course?

Bru. Not I.

Cæs. I pray you, do.

Bru. I am not gamesome: I do lack some part
Of that quick spirit that is in Antony.
Let me not hinder, Cassius, your desires;
I'll leave you.

Cæs. Brutus, I do observe you now of late;
I have not from your eyes that gentleness,
And show of love, as I was wont to have:
You bear too stubb'n and too strange a hand
Over your friend that loves you.

Bru. Cassius,
Be not deceiv'd: if I have veil'd my look,
I turn the trouble of my countenance
Merely upon myself. Vex'd I am
Of late with passions of some difference,
Conceptions only proper to myself,
Which give some soil, perhaps, to my behaviours;
But let not therefore my good friends be griev'd,
(Among which number, Cassius, be you one)
Nor construe any farther my neglect,
Than that poor Brutus, with himself at war,
Forgets the shows of love to other men.

Cæs. Then Brutus, I have much mistook your passion;
By means whereof, this breast of mine hath buried
Thoughts of great value, worthy cogitations.
Tell me, good Brutus, can you see your face?

Bru. No, Cassius; for the eye sees not itself,
But by reflection, by some other things.

Cæs. 'T is just;

And it is very much lamented, Brutus,
That you have no such mirrors, as will turn
Your hidden worthiness into your eye,
That you might see your shadow. I have heard,
Where many of the best respect in Rome,
(Except immortal Cæsar) speaking of Brutus,
And groaning underneath this age's yoke,
Have wish'd that noble Brutus had his eyes.

Bru. Into what dangers would you lead me, Cassius,
That you would have me seek into myself
For that which is not in me?

Cæs. Therefore, good Brutus, be prepar'd to hear.
And, since you know you cannot see yourself
So well as by reflection, I your glass,
Will modestly discover to yourself

That of yourself, which you yet know not of.
And be not jealous on me, gentle Brutus:
Were I a common laughers, or did use
To stale with ordinary oaths my love
To every new protester; if you know
That I do fawn on men, and hug them hard,
And after scandal them; or if you know
That I profess myself in banqueting,
To all the rout, then hold me dangerous.

[Flourish, and Shout]

Bru. What means this shouting? I do fear, the people

Choose Cæsar for their king.

Cæs. Ay, do you fear it?
Then, must I think you would not have it so.

Bru. I would not, Cassius; yet I love him well.

But wherefore do you hold me here so long?
What is it that you would impart to me?

If it be aught toward the general good,
Set honour in one eye, and death i' the other,
And I will look on both indifferently;
For, let the gods so speed me, as I love
The name of honour more than I fear death.

Cæs. I know that virtue to be in you, Brutus,
As well as I do know your outward favour.

Well, honour is the subject of my story.—

I cannot tell what you and other men

Think of this life; but for my single self

I had as lief not be, as live to be

In awe of such a thing as I myself.

I was born free as Cæsar, so were you;

We both have fed as well, and we can both

Endure the winter's cold as well as he:

For once, upon a raw and gusty day,

The troubled Tyber chafing with her shores,

Cæsar said to me, "Dar'st thou, Cassius, now

Leap in with me into this angry flood,

And swim to yonder point?"—Upon the word,

Accoutred as I was, I plunged in,

And bade him follow: so, indeed, he did.

The torrent roar'd, and we did buffet it

With lusty sinews, throwing it aside,

And stemming it, with hearts of controversy;

But ere we could arrive the point propos'd,

Cæsar cried, "Help me, Cassius, or I sink."

I, as Æneas, our great ancestor,

Did from the flames of Troy upon his shoulder

¹ laughter: in folio. Pope made the change.

The old Anchises bear, so from the waves of Tyber
 Did I the tired Cæsar. And this man
 Is now become a god; and Cassius is
 A wretched creature, and must bend his body,
 If Cæsar carelessly but nod on him.
 He had a fever when he was in Spain,
 And, when the fit was on him, I did mark
 How he did shake: 't is true, this god did shake:
 His coward lips did from their colour fly;
 And that same eye, whose bend doth awe the world,
 Did lose his lustre. I did hear him groan;
 Ay, and that tongue of his, that bade the Romans
 Mark him, and write his speeches in their books,
 Alas! it cried, "Give me some drink, Titinius,"
 As a sick girl. Ye gods, it doth amaze me,
 A man of such a feeble temper should
 So get the start of the majestic world,
 And bear the palm alone. [Shout. Flourish.]

Bru. Another general shout!

I do believe that these applauses are
 For some new honours that are heap'd on Cæsar.

Cas. Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world,
 Like a Colossus; and we petty men
 Walk under his huge legs, and peep about
 To find ourselves dishonourable graves.
 Men at some time are masters of their fates:
 The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,
 But in ourselves, that we are underlings.
 Brutus, and Cæsar: what should be in that Cæsar?
 Why should that name be sounded more than yours?
 Write them together, yours is as fair a name;
 Sound them, it doth become the mouth as well;
 Weigh them, it is as heavy; conjure with them,
 Brutus will start a spirit as soon as Cæsar.
 Now, in the names of all the gods at once,
 Upon what meat doth this our Cæsar feed,
 That he is grown so great? Age, thou art sham'd:
 Rome, thou hast lost the breed of noble bloods.
 When went there by an age, since the great flood,
 But it was fam'd with more than with one man?
 When could they say, till now, that talk'd of Rome,
 That her wide walls encompas'd but one man?
 Now is it Rome indeed, and room enough,
 When there is in it but one only man.
 O! you and I have heard our fathers say,
 There was a Brutus once, that would have brook'd
 Th' eternal devil to keep his state in Rome,
 As easily as a king.

Bru. That you do love me, I am nothing jealous;
 What you would work me to, I have some aim;
 How I have thought of this, and of these times,
 I shall recount hereafter: for this present,
 I would not, so with love I might entreat you,
 Be any farther mov'd. What you have said,
 I will consider: what you have to say,
 I will with patience hear, and find a time
 Both meet to hear, and answer, such high things.
 Till then, my noble friend, chew upon this:
 Brutus had rather be a villager,
 Than to repute himself a son of Rome
 Under such² hard conditions, as this time
 Is like to lay upon us.

Cas. I am glad, that my weak words
 Have struck but thus much show of fire from Brutus.

Bru. The games are done, and Cæsar is returning.

Re-enter CÆSAR, and his Train.

Cas. As they pass by pluck Casca by the sleeve;
 And he will, after his sour fashion, tell you
 What hath proceeded worthy note to-day.

Bru. I will do so.—But, look you, Cassius;
 The angry spot doth glow on Cæsar's brow,
 And all the rest look like a chidden train.
 Calphurnia's cheek is pale; and Cicero
 Looks with such ferret and such fiery eyes,
 As we have seen him in the Capitol,
 Being cross'd in conference by some senators.

Cas. Casca will tell us what the matter is.

Cas. Antonius!

Ant. Cæsar.

Cas. Let me have men about me that are fat;
 Sleek-headed men, and such as sleep o' nights.
 Yond¹ Cæsius has a lean and hungry look;
 He thinks too much: such men are dangerous.

Ant. Fear him not, Cæsar, he's not dangerous:
 He is a noble Roman, and well given.

Cas. 'Would he were fatter; but I fear him not.

Yet if my name were liable to fear,
 I do not know the man I should avoid
 So soon as that spare Cassius. He reads much,
 He is a great observer, and he looks
 Quite through the deeds of men: he loves no plays,
 As thou dost, Antony: he hears no music;
 Seldom he smiles, and smiles in such a sort,
 As if he mock'd himself, and scorn'd his spirit
 That could be mov'd to smile at any thing.
 Such men as he be never at heart's ease,
 Whiles they behold a greater than themselves,
 And therefore are they very dangerous.
 I rather tell thee what is to be fear'd,
 Than what I fear, for always I am Cæsar.
 Come on my right hand, for this ear is deaf,
 And tell me truly what thou think'st of him.

[Exeunt CÆSAR and his Train. CASCA stays behind.]

Casca. You pull'd me by the cloak: would you speak with me?

Bru. Ay, Casca; tell us what hath chanc'd to-day.
 That Cæsar looks so sad.

Casca. Why you were with him, were you not?

Bru. I should not, then, ask Casca what hath chanc'd.

Casca. Why, there was a crown offer'd him: and, being offer'd him, he put it by with the back of his hand, thus; and then the people fell a shouting.

Bru. What was the second noise for?

Casca. Why, for that too.

Cas. They shouted thrice: what was the last cry for?

Casca. Why, for that too.

Bru. Was the crown offer'd him thrice?

Casca. Ay, marry, was't, and he put it by thrice, every time gentler than other; and at every putting by mine honest neighbours shouted.

Cas. Who offer'd him the crown?

Casca. Why, Antony.

Bru. Tell us the manner of it, gentle Casca.

Casca. I can as well be hanged, as tell the manner of it: it was mere foolery, I did not mark it. I saw Mark Antony offer him a crown:—yet 't was not a crown neither, 't was one of these coronets:—and, as I told you, he put it by once; but, for all that, to my thinking, he would fain have had it. Then he offer'd it to him again; then he put it by again, but, to my thinking, he was very loath to lay his fingers off it.
 And then he offer'd it the third time: he put it the third time by; and still as he refus'd it, the rabble-men shouted, and clapped their chapped hands, and threw up their sweaty night-caps, and uttered such a deal of stinking breath, because Cæsar refus'd the crown, that it had almost choked Cæsar; for he swoon'd, and fell down at it. And for mine own part

I durst not laugh, for fear of opening my lips, and receiving the bad air.

Cas. But, soft, I pray you. What! did Cæsar swoon?

Casca. He fell down in the market-place, and foamed at mouth, and was speechless.

Bru. 'Tis very like he hath the falling-sickness.

Cas. No, Cæsar hath it not; but you, and I, And honest Casca, we have the falling-sickness.

Casca. I know not what you mean by that; but, I am sure, Cæsar fell down. If the tag-rag people did not elap him, and hiss him, according as he pleased, and displeased them, as they use to do the players in the theatre, I am no true man.

Bru. What said he, when he came unto himself?

Casca. Marry, before he fell down, when he perceiv'd the common herd was glad he refused the crown, he plucked me ope his doublet, and offered them his throat to cut.—An I had been a man of any occupation, if I would not have taken him at a word, I would I might go to hell among the rogues:—and so he fell. When he came to himself again, he said, if he had done or said any thing amiss, he desired their worship to think it was his infirmity. Three or four wenches, where I stood, cried, "Alas, good soul!"—and forgave him with all their hearts. But there's no heed to be taken of them: if Cæsar had stabbed their mothers, they would have done no less.

Bru. And after that he came thus sad away?

Casca. Ay.

Cas. Did Cicero say any thing?

Casca. Ay, he spoke Greek.

Cas. To what effect?

Casca. Nay, an I tell you that, I'll ne'er look you i' the face again; but those that understood him smiled at one another, and shook their heads; but, for mine own part, it was Greek to me. I could tell you more news, too: Marullus and Flavius, for pulling scarfs off Cæsar's images, are put to silence. Fare you well: there was more foolery yet, if I could remember it.

Cas. Will you sup with me to-night, Casca?

Casca. No, I am promised forth.

Cas. Will you dine with me to-morrow?

Casca. Ay, if I be alive, and your mind hold, and your dinner worth the eating.

Cas. Good; I will expect you.

Casca. Do so. Farewell, both. [Exit CASCA.]

Bru. What a blunt fellow is this grown to be. He was quick mettle when he went to school.

Cas. So is he now, in execution

Of any bold or noble enterprise,

However he puts on this tardy form.

This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit,

Which gives men stomach to digest his words

With better appetite.

Bru. And so it is. For this time I will leave you:

To-morrow, if you please to speak with me,

I will come home to you; or, if you will,

Come home to me, and I will wait for you.

Cas. I will do so:—till then, think of the world.

[Exit BRUTUS.]

Well, Brutus, thou art noble; yet, I see,

Thy honourable mettle may be wrought

From that it is dispos'd: therefore, 'tis meet

That noble minds keep ever with their likes;

For who so firm that cannot be seduc'd?

Cæsar doth bear me hard, but he loves Brutus:

If I were Brutus now, and he were Cassius,

He should not humour me. I will this night,

In several hands, in at his windows throw,

As if they came from several citizens, Writings, all tending to the great opinion That Rome holds of his name; wherein obscurely Cæsar's ambition shall be glanced at: And, after this, let Cæsar seat him sure, For we will shake him, or worse days endure. [Exit]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Street.

Thunder and Lightning. Enter, from opposite sides, Casca, with his Sword drawn, and CICERO.

Cic. Good even, Casca. Brought you Cæsar home? Why are you breathless, and why stare you so?

Casca. Are not you mov'd, when all the sway of earth Shakes like a thing unfirm? O, Cicero!

I have seen tempests, when the scolding winds

Have riv'd the knotty oaks; and I have seen

The ambitious ocean swell, and rage, and foam,

To be exalted with the threatening clouds;

But never till to-night, never till now,

Did I go through a tempest dropping fire.

Either there is a civil strife in heaven,

Or else the world, too saucy with the gods,

Inceases them to send destruction.

Cic. Why, saw you any thing more wonderful?

Casca. A common slave (you know him well by sight)

Held up his left hand, which did flame, and burn

Like twenty torches join'd; and yet his hand,

Not sensible of fire, remain'd unscorch'd.

Besides, (I have not since put up my sword)

Against the Capitol I met a lion,

Who glar'd^d upon me, and went surly by,

Without annoying me: and there were drawn

Upon a heap a hundred ghastly women,

Transformed with their fear, who swore they saw

Men, all in fire, walk up and down the streets.

And yesterday the bird of night did sit,

Even at noon-day, upon the market-place,

Hooting, and shrieking. When these prodigies

Do so conjointly meet, let not men say,

"These are their seasons,—they are natural;"

For, I believe, they are portentous things

Unto the climate that they point upon.

Cic. Indeed, it is a strange-disposed time:

But men may construe things after their fashion,

Clean from the purpose of the things themselves.

Comes Cæsar to the Capitol to-morrow?

Casca. He doth; for he did bid Antonius

Send word to you, he would be there to-morrow.

Cic. Good night then, Casca: this disturbed sky

Is not to walk in.

Casca. Farewell, Cicero. [Exit CICERO]

Enter CASSIUS.

Cas. Who's there?

Casca. A Roman.

Cas. Casca, by your voice

Casca. Your ear is good. Cassius, what night is this?

Cas. A very pleasing night to honest men.

Casca. Who ever knew the heavens menace so?

Cas. Those that have known the earth so full of faults

For my part, I have walk'd about the streets,

Submitting me unto the perilous night;

And, thus unbraced, Casca, as you see,

Have bar'd my bosom to the thunder-stone;

And, when the cross blue lightning seem'd to open

The breast of heaven, I did present myself

Even in the aim and very flash of it.

Casca. But wherefore did you so much tempt the heavens?

It is the part of men to fear and tremble,

^d glaz'd: in folio. Stevens made the change

When the most mighty gods by tokens send
Such dreadful heralds to astonish us.

Cas. You are dull, Casca; and those sparks of life,
That should be in a Roman, you do want,
Or else you use not. You look pale, and gaze,
And put on fear, and east yourself in wonder,
To see the strange impatience of the heavens;
But if you would consider the true cause,
Why all these fires, why all these gliding ghosts,
Why birds, and I beasts, from quality and kind;
Why old men, fools, and children calculate;
Why all these things change from their ordinance,
Their natures, and pre-formed faculties,
To monstrous quality: why, you shall find,
That heaven hath infused them with these spirits,
To make them instruments of fear, and warning,
Unto some monstrous state.

Now could I, Casca, name to thee a man
Most like this dreadful night;
That thunders, lightens, opens graves, and roars
As doth the lion in the Capitol:
A man no mightier than thyself, or me,
In personal action; yet prodigious grown,
And fearful, as these strange irrupsions are.

Casca. 'Tis Cæsar that you mean; is it not, Cassius?

Cas. Let it be who it is: for Romans now
Have thewes and limbs like to their ancestors,
But, woe the while! our fathers' minds are dead,
And we are govern'd with our mothers' spirits;
Our yoke and suzerance show us womanish.

Casca. Indeed, they say, the senators to-morrow
Mean to establish Cæsar as a king;
And he shall wear his crown by sea, and land,
In every place, save here in Italy.

Cas. I know where I will wear this dagger, then;
Cassius from bondage will deliver Cassius.
Therein, ye gods, you make the weak most strong;
Therein, ye gods, you tyrants do defeat:
Nor stony tower, nor walls of beaten brass,
Nor airless dungeon, nor strong links of iron,
Can be retentive to the strength of spirit;
But life, being weary of these worldly bars,
Never lacks power to dismiss itself.
If I know this, know all the world besides,
That part of tyranny, that I do bear,
I can shake off at pleasure. [Thunder still.

Casca. So can I:
So every bondman in his own hand bears
The power to cancel his captivity.

Cas. And why should Cæsar be a tyrant, then?
Poor man! I know, he would not be a wolf,
But that he sees the Romans are but sheep:
He were no lion, were not Romans hinds.
Those that with haste will make a mighty fire,
Begin it with weak straws: what trash is Rome,
What rubbish, and what offal, when it serves
For the base matter to illuminate
So vile a thing as Cæsar?—But, O grief!

Where hast thou led me? I, perhaps, speak this Before a willing bondman: then I know
My answer must be made; but I am arm'd,
And dangers are to me indifferent.

Casca. You speak to Casca; and to such a man,
That is no fleering tell-tale. Hold, my hand:
Be factious for redress of all these griefs,
And I will set this foot of mine as far,
As who goes farthest.

Cas. There's a bargain made.
Now know you, Casca, I have mov'd already
Some certain of the noblest-minded Romans,
To undergo with me an enterprise
Of honourable, dangerous consequence;
And I do know, by this, they stay for me
In Pompey's porch: for now, this fearful night,
There is no stir, or walking in the streets,
And the complexion of the element
In favour's like the work we have in hand,
Most bloody, fiery, and most terrible.

Enter CINNA.

Casca. Stand close awhile, for here comes one in haste
Cin. 'Tis Cinna, I do know him by his gait:
He is a friend.—Cinna, where haste you so?

Cin. To find out you. Who's that? Metellus Cimber?

Cas. No, it is Casca; one incorporate
To our attempts. Am I not stay'd for, Cinna?

Cin. I am glad on't. What a fearful night is this!
There's two or three of us have seen strange sights.

Cas. Am I not stay'd for? Tell me.

Cin. Yes, you are
O, Cassius! if you could but win the noble Brutus
To our party—

Cas. Be you content. Good Cinna, take this paper.
And look you lay it in the prætor's chair,
Where Brutus may but find it, and throw this
In at his window; set this up with wax
Upon old Brutus' statue: all this done.
Repair to Pompey's porch, where you shall find us.
Is Decius Brutus, and Trebonius, there?

Cin. All but Metellus Cimber, and he's gone
To seek you at your house. Well, I will hie,
And so bestow these papers as you bade me.
Cas. That done, repair to Pompey's theatre.

[Exit CINNA]

Come, Casca, you and I will yet, ere day,
See Brutus at his house: three parts of him
Is ours already: and the man entire,
Upon the next encounter, yields him ours.

Casca. O! he sits high in all the people's hearts;
And that which would appear offence in us,
His countenance, like richest alchemy,
Will change to virtue, and to worthiness.

Cas. Him, and his worth, and our great need of him
You have right well conceited. Let us go,
For it is after midnight; and, ere day,
We will awake him, and be sure of him. [Exit

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The Same. BRUTUS'S Orchard.

Enter BRUTUS.

Bru. What, Lucius! ho!—

I cannot, by the progress of the stars,
Give guess how near to day.—Lucius, I say!—

In facit's: in folio

I would it were my fault to sleep so soundly—
When, Lucius, when? Awake, I say: what, Lucius!

Enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Call'd you, my lord?

Bru. Get me a taper in my study, Lucius:
When it is lighted, come and call me here.

Luc. I will, my lord.

[Exit.

Bru. It must be by his death; and, for my part,
I know no personal cause to spurn at him,
But for the general. He would be crown'd:
How that might change his nature, there's the question.
It is the bright day that brings forth the adder,
And that craves wary walking. Crown him?—that;
And then, I grant, we put a sting in him,
That at his will he may do danger with.
Th' abuse of greatness is, when it disjoins
Remorse from power; and, to speak truth of Cæsar,
I have not known when his affections sway'd
More than his reason. But 'tis a common proof,
That lowliness is young ambition's ladder,
Whereto the climber-upward turns his face;
But when he once attains the utmost round,
He then unto the ladder turns his back,
Looks in the clouds, scornful the base degrees
By which he did ascend. So Cæsar may:
Then, lest he may, prevent; and, since the quarrel
Will bear no colour for the thing he is,
Fashion it thus: that what he is, augmented,
Would run to these, and these extremities;
And therefore think him as a serpent's egg,
Which, hatch'd, would, as his kind, grow mischievous,
And kill him in the shell.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. The taper burneth in your closet, sir.
Searching the window for a flint, I found
This paper, thus seal'd up; and, I am sure,
It did not lie there when I went to bed.

[Giving him the paper.

Bru. Get you to bed again: it is not day.
Is not to-morrow, boy, the ides¹ of March?

Luc. I know not, sir.

Bru. Look in the calendar, and bring me word.

Luc. I will, sir.

[Exit.

Bru. The exhalations, whizzing in the air,
Give so much light that I may read by them.

[Opens the paper, and reads.

"Brutus, thou sleep'st: awake, and see thyself.
Shall Rome, &c. Speak, strike, redress!
Brutus, thou sleep'st: awake!"—
Such insigations have been often dropp'd
Where I have took them up.
"Shall Rome, &c.?" Thus must I piece it out;
Shall Rome stand under one man's awe? What! Rome?
My ancestors did from the streets of Rome
The Tarquin drive, when he was call'd a king.
"Speak, strike, redress!"—Am I entreated
To speak, and strike? O Rome! I make thee promise,
If the redress will follow, thou receiv'st
Thy full petition at the hand of Brutus!

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Sir, March is wasted fourteen² days.

[Knocking within.

Bru. 'Tis good. Go to the gate: somebody knocks.

[Exit LUCIUS.

Since Cassius first did whet me against Cæsar,
I have not slept.

Between the acting of a dreadful thing,
And the first motion, all the interim is Like a phantasma, or a hideous dream:
The Genius, and the mortal instruments,
Are then in council; and the state of a³ man,
Like to a little kingdom, suffers then
The nature of an insurrection.

Re-enter LUCIUS.

Luc. Sir, 'tis your brother Cassius at the door,
Who doth desire to see you.

Bru.

Is he alone?

Luc. No, sir, there are more with him.

Bru.

Do you know them?

Luc. No, sir; their hats are pluck'd about their ears,
And half their faces buried in their cloaks,
That by no means I may discover them
By any mark of favour.

Bru.

Let them enter. [Exit LUCIUS.

They are the faction. O conspiracy!
Sham'st thou to show thy dangerous brow by night,
When evils are most free? O! then, by day
Where wilt thou find a cavern dark enough
To mask thy monstrous visage? Seek none, conspiracy!
Hide it in smiles, and affability:
For if thou path⁴ thy native semblance on,
Not Erebus itself were dim enough
To hide thee from prevention.

Enter CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIUS, CINNA, METELLUS CIMBER, and TREBONIUS.

Cas. I think we are too bold upon your rest:
Good morrow, Brutus; do we trouble you?

Bru. I have been up this hour; awake, all night.
Know I these men that come along with you?

Cas. Yes, every man of them: and no man here,
But honours you: and every one doth wish,
You had but that opinion of yourself,
Which every noble Roman bears of you.
This is Trebonius.

Bru.

He is welcome hither.

Cas. This Decius Brutus.

Bru.

He is welcome too.

Cas. This Casca; this Cinna;

And this Metellus Cimber.

Bru.

They are all welcome.

What watchful cares do interpose themselves
Betwixt your eyes and night?

Cas. Shall I entreat a word?

[They whisper.

Dec. Here lies the east: doth not the day break here?

Casca. No.

Cin. O! pardon, sir, it doth; and yond⁵ grey lines,
That fret the clouds, are messengers of day.

Casca. You shall confess that you are both deceiv'd
Here, as I point my sword, the sun arises;
Which is a great way growing on the south,
Weighing the youthful season of the year.
Some two months hence, up higher toward the north
He first presents his fire; and the high east
Stands, as the Capitol, directly here.

Bru. Give me your hands all over, one by one.⁶

[He takes their hands.

Cas. And let us swear our resolution.

Bru. No, not an oath: if not the face of men,
The sufferance of our souls, the time's abuse,
If these be motives weak, break off betimes,
And every man hence to his idle bed;
So let high-sighted tyranny range on,
Till each man drop by lottery. But if these,
As I am sure they do, bear fire enough
To kindle cowards, and to steel with valour
The melting spirits of women; then, countrymen,
What need we any spur, but our own cause,
To prick us to redress? what other ood,
Than secret Romans, that have spoke the word,
And will not palter? and what other oath,
Than honesty to honesty engag'd,
That this shall be, or we will fall for it?

¹ first: in folio. Theobald made the change. ² fifteen: in old copies. Theobald made the change. ³ Some mod. eds. omit: a. ⁴ Walk so used by Dryden. ⁵ Not in f. e.

Swear priests, and cowards; and men cautelous,
Old feeble carrions, and such suffering souls
That yelome wrongs : unto bad causes swear
Such creatures as men doubt ; but do not stain
The even virtue of our enterprise,
Nor th' insuppressive mettle of our spirits,
To think that, or our cause, or our performance,
Did need an oath, when every drop of blood,
That every Roman bears, and nobly bears,
Is guilty of a several bastardy,
If he do break the smallest particle
Of any promise that hath pass'd from him.

Cas. But what of Cicero ? Shall we sound him ?
I think he will stand very strong with us.

Casca. Let us not leave him out.

Cin. No, by no means

Met. O ! let us have him ; for his silver hairs
Will purchase us a good opinion,
And buy men's voices to commend our deeds :
It shall be said, his judgment rul'd our hands ;
Our youths, and wildness, shall no whit appear,
But all be buried in his gravity.

Bru. O ! name him not ; let us not break with him,
For he will never follow any thing
That other men begin.

Cas. Then, leave him out.

Casca. Indeed he is not fit.

Dec. Shall no man else be touch'd, but only Cæsar ?

Cas. Decius, well urg'd.—I think it is not meet,
Mark Antony, so well belov'd of Cæsar,
Should outlive Cæsar : we shall find of him
A shrewd contriver ; and, you know, his means,
If he improve them, may well stretch so far
As to annoy us all ; which to prevent,
Let Antony and Cæsar fall together.

Bru. Our course will seem too bloody, Caius Cassius,
To cut the head off, and then hack the limbs,
Like wrath in death, and envy¹ afterwards ;
For Antony is but a limb of Cæsar.
Let us be sacrificers, but not butchers, Caius.
We all stand up against the spirit of Cæsar,
And in the spirit of men there is no blood :
O, that we then could come by Cæsar's spirit,
And not dismember Cæsar ! But, alas !
Cæsar must bleed for it. And, gentle friends,
Let's kill him boldly, but not wrathfully ;
Let's carve him as a dish fit for the gods,
Not hew him as a carcass fit for hounds.
And let our hearts, as subtle masters do,
Stir up their servants to an act of rage,
And after seem to chide 'em. This shall mark²
Our purpose necessary, and not envious ;
Which so appearing to the common eyes,
We shall be call'd purgers, not murderers.
And for Mark Antony, think not of him,
For he can do no more than Cæsar's arm,
When Cæsar's head is off.

Cas. Yet I fear him :
For in the ingrafted love he bears to Cæsar——

Bru. Alas ! good Cassius, do not think of him.
If he love Cæsar, all that he can do
Is to himself ; take thought, and die for Cæsar :
And that were much he should ; for he is given
To sports, to wildness, and much company.

Treb. There is no fear in him ; let him not die,
For he will live, and laugh at this hereafter. [Clock strikes.]

Bru. Peace ! count the clock.

Cas. The clock hath stricken three.

Treb. 'T is time to part.

Cas.

But it is doubtful yet
Whether Cæsar will come forth to-day, or no ;
For he is superstitious grown of late,
Quite from the main opinion he held once
Of fantasy, of dreams, and ceremonies.
It may be, these apparent prodigies,
The unaccustom'd terror of this night,
And the persuasion of his augurers,
May hold him from the Capitol to-day.

Dec. Never fear that : if he be so resolv'd,
I can o'ersway him ; for he loves to hear.
That unicorns may be betrayed with trees,
And bears with glances, elephants with holes,
Lions with toils, and men with flatterers ;
But, when I tell him, he hates flatterers.
He says, he does, being then most flattered.
Let me work ;

For I can give him humour the true bent,
And I will bring him to the Capitol.

Cas. Nay, we will all of us be there to fetch him.

Bru. By the eighth hour : is that the uttermost ?

Cin. Be that the uttermost, and fail not then.

Met. Caius Ligarius doth bear Cæsar hard,
Who rated him for speaking well of Pompey :
I wonder, none of you have thought of him.

Bru. Now, good Metellus, go along by him.
He loves me well, and I have given him reasons,
Send him but hither, and I'll fashion him.

Cas. The morning comes upon 's : we'll leave you
Brutus.—

And, friends, disperse yourselves ; but all remember
What you have said, and show yourselves true Romans.
Bru. Good gentlemen, look fresh and merrily.
Let not our looks put on our purposes ;
But bear it as our Roman actors do,
With untir'd spirits, and formal constancy :
And so, good-morrow to you every one.

[Exeunt all but BRUTUS]
Boy ! Lucius !—Fast asleep. It is no matter ;
Enjoy the heavy honey-dew³ of slumber :
Thou hast no figures, nor no fantasies,
Which busy care draws in the brains of men ;
Therefore, thou sleep'st so sound.

Enter PORTIA.

Por. Brutus, my lord !
Bru. Portia, what mean you ? Wherefore rise you now ?
It is not for your health thus to commit
Your weak condition to the raw cold morning.

Por. Nor for yours neither. You have ungently, Brutus,
Stole from my bed ; and yesternight, at supper,
You suddenly arose, and walk'd about,
Musing and sighing with your arms across ;
And when I ask'd you what the matter was,
You star'd upon me with ungentle looks.
I urg'd you farther ; then, you scratch'd your head,
And too impatiently stamp'd with your foot :
Yet I insisted, yet you answer'd not ;
But, with an angry wafure of your hand,
Gave sign for me to leave you. So I did,
Fearing to strengthen that impatience,
Which seem'd too much enkindled : and, withal,
Hoping it was but an effect of humour,
Which sometime hath his hour with every man.
It will not let you eat, nor talk, nor sleep :
And, could it work so much upon your shape,
As it hath much prevail'd on your condition,
I should not know you, Brutus. Dear my lord,
Make me acquainted with your cause of grief.
Bru. I am not well in health, and that is all

¹ Used as often, in the sense of hated. ² make : in f. e. ³ honey-heavy dew : in f. e.

Por. Brutus is wise, and were he not in health,
He would embrace the means to come by it.

Br. Why, so I do.—Good Portia, go to bed.

Por. Is Brutus sick, and is it physical
To walk unbraced, and suck up the humours
Of the dank morning? What! is Brutus sick,
And will he steal out of his wholesome bed,
To dare the vile contagion of the night,
And tempt the rheumy and unpurged air
To add unto his sickness? No, my Brutus;
You have some sick offence within your mind,
Which, by the right and virtue of my place,
I ought to know of: and upon my knees [Kneeling.]
I charm you, by my once commended beauty,
By all your vows of love, and that great vow
Which did incorporate and make us one,
That you unfold to me, yourself, your half,
Why you are heavy, and what men to-night
Have had resort to you; for here have been
Some six or seven, who did hide their faces
Even from darkness.

Br. Kneel not, gentle Portia. [Raising her.]

Por. I should not need, if you were gentle Brutus.
Within the bond of marriage, tell me, Brutus,
Is it excepted, I should know no secrets
That appertain to you? Am I yourself
But, as it were, in sort, or limitation;
To keep with you at meals, comfort your bed,
And talk to you sometimes? Dwell I but in the suburbs
Of your good pleasure? If it be no more,
Portia is Brutus' harlot, not his wife.

Br. You are my true and honourable wife;
As dear to me, as are the ruddy drops
That visit my sad heart.

Por. If this were true, then should I know this secret.

I grant, I am a woman; but, withal,

A woman that lord Brutus took to wife:

I grant, I am a woman; but, withal,

A woman well-reputed, Cato's daughter.

Think you, I am no stronger than my sex,

Being so father'd, and so husbanded?

Tell me your counsels, I will not disclose them.

I have made strong proof of my constancy,

Giving myself a voluntary wound

Here, in the thigh: can I hear that with patience,

And not my husband's secrets?

Br. O ye gods!

Render me worthy of this noble wife. [Knocking within.]

Hark, hark! one knocks. Portia, go in a while;

And by and by thy bosom shall partake

The secrets of my heart.

All my engagements I will construe to thee,

All the character of my sad brows.

Leave me with haste. [Exit PORTIA.]

Enter LUCIUS and LIGARIUS.

Lucius, who is't that knocks?

Luc. Here is a sick man, that would speak with you.

Br. Caius Ligarius, that Metellus spake of.—

Boy, stand aside.—Caius Ligarius! how?

Lig. Vouchsafe good morrow from a feeble tongue.

Br. O! what a time have you chose out, brave Caius

To wear a kerchief. Would you were not sick!

Lig. I am not sick, if Brutus have in hand

Any exploit worthy the name of honour.

Br. Such an exploit have I in hand, Ligarius,

Had you a healthful ear to hear of it.

Lig. By all the gods that Romans bow before,

I here discard my sickness. Soul of Rome!

[Throwing away his bandage.]

Brave son, deriv'd from honourable loins,

Thou, like an exoreist, hast conjur'd up

My mortified spirit. Now bid me run,

And I will strive with things impossible;

Yea, get the better of them. What's to do?

Br. A piece of work that will make sick men whole

Lig. But are not some whole that we must make sick?

Br. That must we also. What it is, my Caius,

I shall unfold to thee, as we are going,

To whom it must be done.

Lig. Set on your foot,

And with a heart new-fir'd I follow you,

To do I know not what; but it sufficeeth,

That Brutus leads me on.

Br. Follow me, then. [Exeunt]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room in CÆSAR'S Palace

Thunder and Lightning. Enter CÆSAR, in his Night-gown.

Cæs. Nor heaven, nor earth, have been at peace to-night:

Thrice hath Calphurnia in her sleep cried out,
"Help, ho! They murder Cæsar!"—Who's within?

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord.

Cæs. Go bid the priests do present sacrifice,
And bring me their opinions of success.

Serv. I will, my lord. [Exit.]

Enter CALPHURNIA.

Cal. What mean you, Cæsar? Think you to walk forth?

You shall not stir out of your house to-day.

Cæs. Cæsar shall forth: the things that threaten'd me,
Ne'er look'd but on my back; when they shall see
The face of Cæsar, they are vanished.

Cal. Cæsar, I never stood on ceremonies;

Yet now they fright me. There is one within,

Besides the things that we have heard and seen,

Recounts most horrid sights seen by the watch.

A lioness hath whelped in the streets;

And graves have yawn'd, and yielded up their dead;

Fierce fiery warriors fight upon the clouds

In ranks, and squadrons, and right form of war,

Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol:

The noise of battle hurl'd in the air;

Horses did neigh, and dying men did groan;

And ghosts did shriek, and squeal about the streets.

O Cæsar! these things are beyond all use,

And I do fear them.

Cæs. What can be avoided,

Whose end is purpos'd by the mighty gods?

Yet Cæsar shall go forth; for these predictions

Are to the world in general, as to Cæsar.

Cal. When beggars die there are no comets seen
The heavens themselves blaze forth the death of princes

Cæs. Cowards die many times before their deaths,

The valiant never taste of death but once.

Of all the wonders that I yet have heard,

It seems to me most strange that men should fear,

Seeing that death, a necessary end,

Will come, when it will come.

Re-enter a Servant.

What say the augurers?

Serv. They would not have you to stir forth to-day

Plucking the entrails of an offering forth,

They could not find a heart within the beast.

Cæs. The gods do this in shame of cowardice:

Cæsar should be a beast without a heart,

If he should stay at home to-day for fear

No, Cæsar shall not: danger knows full well,
That Cæsar is more dangerous than he
We are two lions litter'd in one day,
And I the elder and more terrible;
And Cæsar shall go forth.

Cal. Alas! my lord,
Your wisdom is consum'd in confidence.
Do not go forth to-day: call it my fear
That keeps you in the house, and not your own.
We'll send Mark Antony to the senate-house,
And he shall say, you are not well to-day:
Let me, upon my knee, prevail in this. [Kneeling.]

Cæs. Mark Antony shall say, I am not well;
And, for thy humour, I will stay at home. [Raising her.]
Enter DECIVS.

Here's Decius Brutus, he shall tell them so.
Dec. Cæsar, all hail! Good morrow, worthy Cæsar:
I come to fetch you to the senate-house.

Cæs. And you are come in very happy time
To bear my greeting to the senators,
And tell them that I will not come to-day.
Cannot is false; and that I dare not, falser:
I will not come to-day. Tell them so, Decius.
Cal. Say, he is sick.

Cæs. Shall Cæsar send a lie?
Have I in conquest stretch'd mine arm so far,
To be afraid to tell grey-beards the truth?
Decius, go tell them, Cæsar will not come.

Dec. Most mighty Cæsar, let me know some cause,
Lest I be laugh'd at when I tell them so.

Cæs. The cause is in my will; I will not come:
That is enough to satisfy the senate;
But, for your private satisfaction,
Because I love you, I will let you know.
Calphurnia here, my wife, stays me at home:
She dream'd to-night she saw my statue,
Which, like a fountain with a hundred spouts,
Did run pure blood; and many lusty Romans
Came smiling, and did bathe their hands in it.
And these does she apply for warnings, and portents
Of evils imminent; and on her knee
Hath begg'd, that I will stay at home to-day.

Dec. This dream is all amiss interpreted:
It was a vision, fair and fortunate.
Your statue spouting blood in many pipes,
In which so many smiling Romans bath'd,
Signifies that from you great Rome shall suck
Reviving blood; and that great men shall press
For tinctures, stains, relics, and cognizance.
This by Calphurnia's dream is signified.

Cæs. And this way have you well expounded it.

Dec. I have, when you have heard what I can say:

And know it now. The senate have concluded
To give this day a crown to mighty Cæsar:
If you shall send them word you will not come,
Their minds may change. Besides, it were a mock
Apt to be render'd, for some one to say,
"Break up the senate till another time,
When Cæsar's wife shall meet with better dreams."
If Cæsar hide himself, shall they not whisper,
"Lo! Cæsar is afraid?"

Pardon me, Cæsar; for my dear, dear love
To your proceeding bids me tell you this,
And reason to my love is liable.

Cæs. How foolish do your fears seem now, Calphurnia!

I am ashamed I did yield to them.—
Give me my robe, for I will go:—

Enter PUBLIUS, BRUTUS, LIGARIUS, METELLUS, CASCA TREBONIUS, and CINNA.

And look where Publius is come to fetch me.

Pub. Good morrow, Cæsar.

Cæs. Welcome, Publius —
What, Brutus, are you stirr'd so early too? —
Good-morrow, Casca. — Caius Ligarius,
Cæsar was ne'er so much your enemy,
As that same ague which hath made you lean. —
What is 't o'clock?

Br. Cæsar, 't is stricken eight.

Cæs. I thank you for your pains and courtesy.

Enter ANTONY.
See! Antony, that revels long o' nights,
Is notwithstanding up. — Good morrow, Antony.

Ant. So to most noble Cæsar.
Cæs. Bid them prepare within
I am to blame to be thus waited for. —

Now, Cinna: — Now, Metellus: — What, Trebonius!
I have an hour's talk in store for you.
Remember that you call on me to-day:
Be near me, that I may remember you.

Treb. Cæsar, I will: — and so near will I be, [Aside
That your best friends shall wish I had been farther.

Cæs. Good friends, go in, and taste some wine with me,
And we, like friends, will straightway go together.

Br. That every like is not the same. O Cæsar! [Aside.]
The heart of Brutus yearns to think upon. [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Street near the Capitol

Enter ARTEMIDORUS, reading a Paper.

Art. "Cæsar, beware of Brutus; take heed of Cassius; come not near Casca; have an eye to Cinna, trust not Trebonius; mark well Metellus Cimber,
Decius Brutus loves thee not; thou hast wronged Caius Ligarius. There is but one mind in all these men, and it is bent against Cæsar. If thou be'st not immortal, look about you: security gives way to conspiracy.
The mighty gods defend thee! Thy lover,"
"ARTEMIDORUS."

Here will I stand till Cæsar pass along,
And as a suitor will I give him this,
My heart laments that virtue cannot live
Out of the teeth of emulation.
If thou read this, O Cæsar! thou may'st live;
If not, the fates with traitors do contrive. [Exit.

SCENE IV.—The Same. Another Part of the same
Street, before the House of BRUTUS.

Enter PORTIA and LUCIUS.

Por. I prythee, boy, run to the senate-house:
Stay not to answer me, but get thee gone.
Why dost thou stay?

Luc. To know my errand, madam.
Por. I would have had thee there, and here again,
Ere I can tell thee what thou shouldst do there. —
O constancy! be strong upon my side:

Set a huge mountain 'tween my heart and tongue!
I have a man's mind, but a woman's might.
How hard it is for women to keep counsel!
Art thou here yet?

Luc. Madam, what should I do?
Run to the Capitol, and nothing else.
And so return to you, and nothing else?

Por. Yes. bring me word, boy, if thy lord look well,
For he went sickly forth: and take good note,
What Cæsar doth, what suitors press to him.
Hark, boy! what noise is that?

Luc. I hear none, madam.

* were in f. e. Changed by Theobald from "heare": in folio.

* * * Not in f. e.

Por. Pr'ythee, listen well :
I heard a bustling rumour, like a fray,
And the wind brings it from the Capitol.
Luc. Sooth, madam, I hear nothing.

Enter the Soothsayer.

Por. Come hither, fellow.
Which way hast thou been ?
Sooth. At mine own house, good lady.
Por. What is't o'clock ?
Sooth. About the ninth hour, lady.
Por. Is Cæsar yet gone to the Capitol ?
Sooth. Madam, not yet : I go to take my stand,
To see him pass on to the Capitol.
Por. Thou hast some suit to Cæsar, hast thou not ?
Sooth. That I have, lady : if it will please Cæsar
To be so good to Cæsar, as to hear me,
I shall beseech him to befriend himself.

Por. Why, know'st thou any harm 's intended towards him ?
Sooth. None that I know will be, much that I fear may chance.
Good morrow to you. Here the street is narrow :
The throng that follows Cæsar at the heels,
Of senators, of prætors, common suitors,
Will crowd a feeble man almost to death :
I'll get me to a place more void, and there
Speak to great Cæsar as he comes along. [Exit]
Por. I must go in.—Ah me ! how weak a thing
The heart of woman is. O Brutus !
The heavens speed thee in thine enterprise !
Sure, the boy heard me :—Brutus hath a suit,
That Cæsar will not grant.—O ! I grow faint.—
Hun, Lucius, and commend me to my lord ;
Say, I am merry : come to me again,
And bring me word what he doth say to thee. [Exeunt]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—The Same. The Capitol ; the Senate sitting.

A crowd of People in the Street leading to the Capitol ; among them ARTEMIDORUS, and the Soothsayer. Flourish. Enter CÆSAR, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIVS, METELLUS, TREBONIUS, CINNA, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, POPILIUS, PUBLIUS, and others.

Cas. The ides of March are come.
Sooth. Ay, Cæsar ; but not gone.
Art. Hail, Cæsar ! Read this schedule.
Dec. Trebonius doth desire you to o'er-read,
At your best leisure, this his humble suit.
Art. O, Cæsar ! read mine first : for mine 's a suit
That touches Cæsar nearer. Read it, great Cæsar.
Cas. That touches us ? ourself shall be last serv'd.
Art. Delay not, Cæsar ; read it instantly.
Cas. What ! is the fellow mad ?
Pub. Sirrah, give place.
Cas. What ! urge you your petitions in the street ?
Come to the Capitol.

CÆSAR enters the Capitol, the rest following. All the Senators rise.

Pop. I wish, your enterprise to-day may thrive.
Cas. What enterprise, Popilius ?
Pop. Fare you well. [Advances to CÆSAR.]
Bru. What said Popilius Lena ?
Cas. He wish'd, to-day our enterprise might thrive.
I fear, our purpose is discovered.
Bru. Look, how he makes to Cæsar : mark him.
Cas. Casca, be sudden, for we fear prevention.—
Brutus, what shall be done ? If this be known,
Cassius or Cæsar never shall turn back,
For I will slay myself.

Bru. Cassius, be constant :
Popilius Lena speaks not of our purposes ;
For, look, he smiles, and Cæsar doth not change.
Cas. Trebonius knows his time ; for, look you,
Brutus,
He draws Mark Antony out of the way.

[Exeunt ANTONY and TREBONIUS. CÆSAR and the Senators take their Seats.]

Dec. Where is Metellus Cimber ? Let him go,
And presently prefer his suit to Cæsar.
Bru. He is address'd ; press near, and second him.
Cin. Casca, you are the first that rears your hand.

Casca. Are we all ready ?
Cas. What is now amiss,
That Cæsar and his senate must redress ?
Met. Most high, most mighty, and most puissant
Cæsar,
Metellus Cimber throws before thy seat
An humble heart.— [Kneeling]
Cas. I must prevent thee, Cimber
These crouchings,* and these lowly courtesies,
Might fire the blood of ordinary men,
And turn pre-ordinance, and first decree,
Into the law† of children. Be not fond,
To think that Cæsar bears such rebel blood,
That will be thaw'd from the true quality
With that which melteth fools ; I mean, sweet words
Low-crouched‡ curtesies, and base spaniel fawning.
Thy brother by decree is banished :
If thou dost bend, and pray, and fawn for him,
I spurn thee like a cur out of my way.
Know, Cæsar doth not wrong ; nor without cause
Will he be satisfied.

Met. Is there no voice, more worthy than my own,
To sound more sweetly in great Cæsar's ear,
For the repealing of my banish'd brother ?

Bru. I kiss thy hand, but not in flattery, Cæsar :
Desiring thee, that Publius Cimber may
Have an immediate freedom of repeal.

Cas. What, Brutus !
Cas. Pardon, Cæsar ; Cæsar, pardon ;
As low as to thy foot doth Cassius fall,
To beg enfranchisement for Publius Cimber.
Cas. I could be well mov'd, if I were as you ;
If I could pray to move, prayers would move me ;
But I am constant as the northern star,
Of whose true, fix'd, and resting quality,
There is no fellow in the firmament.
The skies are painted with unnumber'd sparks,
They are all fire, and every one doth shine ;
But there's but one in all doth hold his place.
So, in the world : 't is furnish'd well with men,
And men are flesh and blood, and apprehensive ;
Yet in the number I do know but one
That unassailable holds on his rank,
Unshak'd of motion ; and, that I am he,
Let me a little show it, even in this,
That I was constant Cimber should be banish'd,

* What touches us ourself, &c. : in f. e. † Ready. ‡ Cæsar : in f. e. * crouchings : in f. e. * lane : in folio. † Low-crouched : in f. e.

E. L. DAVENPORT.
as Brutus - Author, Lucius

And constant do remain to keep him so.

Cin. O Cæsar!—

Dec. Hence! Wilt thou lift up Olympus?

Dec. Great Cæsar,—

Cas. Doth not Brutus bootless kneel?

Casca. Speak, hands, for me.

[CASCA stabs CÆSAR in the Neck. CÆSAR catches hold of his Arm. He is then stabbed by several other Conspirators, and last by MARCUS BRUTUS.

Cas. Et tu, Brute?—Then fall, Cæsar.

[Dies. The Senators and People retire in confusion.

Cin. Liberty! Freedom! Tyranny is dead!—

Run hence, proclaim, cry it about the streets.

Cas. Some to the common pulpits, and cry out, "Liberty, freedom, and enfranchisement!"

Bru. People, and senators! be not affrighted.

Fly not; stand still:—ambition's debt is paid.

Casca. Go to the pulpit, Brutus.

Dec. And Cassius too.

Bru. Where's Publius?

Cin. Here, quite confounded with this mutiny.

Met. Stand fast together, lest some friend of Cæsar's should chance—

Bru. Talk not of standing.—Publius, good cheer: There is no harm intended to your person, Nor to no Roman else; so tell them, Publius.

Cas. And leave us, Publius; lest that the people, Rushing on us, should do your age some mischief.

Bru. Do so:—and let no man abide this deed, But we, the doers.

Re-enter TREBONIUS.

Cas. Where's Antony?

Tre. Fled to his house amaz'd.

Men, wives, and children, stare, cry out, and run, As it were doomsday.

Bru. Fates, we will know your pleasures.— That we shall die, we know; 't is but the time, And drawing days out, that men stand upon.

Casca. Why, he that cuts off twenty years of life, Cuts off so many years of fearing death.

Bru. Grant that, and then is death a benefit:

So are we Cæsar's friends, that have abridg'd His time of fearing death.—Stoop, Romans, stoop, And let us bathe our hands in Cæsar's blood Up to the elbows, and besmear our swords; Then walk we forth, even to the market-place, And, waving our red weapons o'er our heads, Let's all cry, Peace! Freedom! and Liberty!

Cas. Stoop then, and wash.—How many ages hence, Shall this our lofty scene be acted over, In states unborn, and accents yet unknown?

Bru. How many times shall Cæsar bleed in sport, That now on Pompey's basis lies along, No worthier than the dust?

Cas. So oft as that shall be, So often shall the knot of us be call'd

The men that gave their country liberty.

Dec. What! shall we forth?

Cas. Ay, every man away: Brutus shall lead; and we will grace his heels With the most boldest and best hearts of Rome.

Enter a Servant.

Bru. Soft! who comes here? A friend of Antony's.

Serv. Thus, Brutus, did my master bid me kneel;

[Kneeling.]

Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall down, And, being prostrate, thus he bade me say. Brutus is noble, wise, valiant, and honest; Cæsar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving:

Say, I love Brutus, and I honour him; Say, I fear'd Cæsar, honour'd him, and lov'd him. If Brutus will vouchsafe, that Antony May safely come to him, and be resolv'd How Cæsar hath deserv'd to lie in death, Mark Antony shall not love Cæsar dead. So well as Brutus living; but will follow The fortunes and affairs of noble Brutus, Thorough the hazards of this untrod state, With all true faith. So says my master Antony. [Rising

Bru. Thy master is a wise and valiant Roman: I never thought him worse.

Tell him, so please him come unto this place, He shall be satisfied; and, by my honour, Depart untouch'd.

Serv. I'll fetch him presently. [Exit Servant

Bru. I know, that we shall have him well to friend.

Cas. I wish, we may; but yet have I a mind, That fears him much, and my misgiving still Falls shrewdly to the purpose.

Enter ANTONY.

Bru. But here comes Antony.—Welcome, Mark Antony.

Ant. O mighty Cæsar! dost thou lie so low?

[Kneeling over the Body.]
Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils, Shrunk to this little measure? Fare thee well.—

I know not, gentlemen, what you intend, [Rising]
Who else must be let blood, who else is rank:

If I myself, there is no hour so fit
As Cæsar's death hour; nor no instrument
Of half that worth, as those your swords, made rich

With the most noble blood of all this world.
I do beseech ye, if you bear me hard,
Now, whilst your purpled hands do reek and smoke,
Fulfil your pleasure. Live a thousand years,
I shall not find myself so apt to die;
No place will please me so, no mean of death,
As here by Cæsar, and by you cut off,
The choice and master spirits of this age.

Bru. O Antony! beg not your death of us.
Though now we must appear bloody and cruel,
As, by our hands, and this our present act,
You see we do; yet see you but our hands,
And this the bleeding business they have done.
Our hearts you see not: they are pitiful;
And pity to the general wrong of Rome
(As fire drives out fire, so pity, pity)
Hath done this deed on Cæsar. For your part,
To you our swords have leaden points, Mark Antony
Our arms, in strength of welcome, and our hearts,
Of brothers' temper, do receive you in
With all kind love, good thoughts, and reverence.

Cas. Your voice shall be as strong as any man's,
In the disposing of new dignities.

Bru. Only be patient, till we have appeas'd
The multitude, beside themselves with fear,
And then we will deliver you the cause,
Why I, that did love Cæsar when I struck him,
Have thus proceeded.

Ant. I doubt not of your wisdom
Let each man render me his bloody hand:

[One after the other.

First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake with you;—
Next, Caius Cassius, do I take your hand:—
Now, Decius Brutus, yours;—now yours, Metellus;—
Yours, Cinna;—and, my valiant Casca, yours:—
Though last, not least in love, yours good Trebonius.
Gentlemen all,—alas! what shall I say?

My credit now stands on such slippery ground.
That one of two bad ways you must conceit me,
Either a coward, or a flatterer.—
That I did love thee, Cæsar! O, 'tis true:

[Turning to the Body, and bending over it.]

It, then, thy spirit look upon us now,
Shall it not grieve thee, dearer than thy death,
To see thy Antony making his peace,
Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes,
Most noble! in the presence of thy corpse?
Had I as many eyes as thou hast wounds,
Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy blood,
It would become me better, than to close
In terms of friendship with thine enemies.
Pardon me, Julius! Here wast thou bay'd, brave hart:

Here didst thou fall; and here thy hunters stand,
Sign'd in thy spoil, and crimson'd in thy death.
O world! thou wast the forest to this hart:
And this, indeed, O world! the heart of thee.—
How like a deer, stricken by many princes,
Dost thou here lie?

Cas. Mark Antony!

Ant. Pardon me, Caius Cassius:

The enemies of Cæsar shall say this;
Then, in a friend it is cold modesty.

Cas. I blame you not for praising Cæsar so,
But what compact mean you to have with us?
Will you be prick'd in number of our friends.
Or shall we on, and not depend on you?

Ant. Therefore I took your hands: but was, indeed,
Sway'd from the point by looking down on Cæsar.
Friends am I with you all, and love you all,
Upon this hope, that you shall give me reasons,
Why, and wherein, Cæsar was dangerous.

Bru. Or else were this a savage spectacle.
Our reasons are so full of good regard,
That were you, Antony, the son of Cæsar,
You should be satisfied.

Ant. That's all I seek:
And am moreover suitor, that I may
Produce his body to the market-place:
And in the pulpit, as becomes a friend,
Speak in the order of his funeral.

Bru. You shall, Mark Antony.

Cas. Brutus, a word with you.—
You know not what you do: do not consent. [Apart.
That Antony speak in his funeral.
Know you how much the people may be mov'd
By that which he will utter?

Bru. By your pardon;
I will myself into the pulpit first.
And show the reason of our Cæsar's death:
What Antony shall speak, I will protest
He speaks by leave and by permission,
And that we are contented, Cæsar shall
Have all due rites, and lawful ceremonies.
It shall advantage more, than do us wrong.

Cas. I know not what may tall: I like it not.

Bru. Mark Antony, here, take you Cæsar's body.
You shall not in your funeral speech blame us,
But speak all good you can devise of Cæsar;
And say, you do't by our permission,
Else shall you not have any hand at all
About his funeral: and you shall speak
In the same pulpit whereto I am going,
After my speech is ended.

Ant. Be it so;
I do desire no more.

Bru. Prepare the body, then, and follow us.

[Exeunt all but ANTONY.]

Ant. O! pardon me, thou bleeding piece of earth,
That I am meek and gentle with these butchers.
Thou art the ruins of the noblest man,
That ever lived in the tide of times.
Woe to the hand that shed this costly blood!
Over thy wounds now do I prophesy,
(Which, like dumb mouths, do ope their ruby lips,
To beg the voice and utterance of my tongue)
A curse shall light upon the loins of men;
Domestic fury, and fierce civil strife,
Shall cumber all the parts of Italy:
Blood and destruction shall be so in use,
And dreadful objects so familiar,
That mothers shall but smile, when they behold
Their infants quarter'd with the hands of war,
All pity chok'd with custom of fell deeds;
And Cæsar's spirit, ranging for revenge,
With Atë by his side, come hot from hell,
Shall in these confines, with a monarch's voice,
Cry "Havock!" and let slip the dogs of war,
That this foul deed shall smell above the earth
With carrion men, groaning for burial.

Enter a Servant.

You serve Octavius Cæsar, do you not?

Serv. I do, Mark Antony.

Ant. Cæsar did write for him to come to Rome.

Serv. He did receive his letters, and is coming,
And bid me say to you by word of mouth,—

O Cæsar! [Seeing the Body.]

Ant. Thy heart is big, get thee apart and weep.
Passion, I see, is catching; for mine eyes,
Seeing those beads of sorrow stand in thine,
Began to water. Is thy master coming?

Serv. He lies to-night within seven leagues of Rome.

Ant. Post back with speed, and tell him what hath chanc'd.

Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rome,
No Rome of safety for Octavius yet:
Hie hence, and tell him so. Yet, stay a while;
Thou shalt not back, till I have borne this corpse
Into the market-place: there shall I try,
In my oration, how the people take
The cruel issue of these bloody men;
According to the which, thou shalt discourse
To young Octavius of the state of things.
Lend me your hand. [Exeunt, with CÆSAR'S Body.]

SCENE II.—The Same. The Forum.

Enter BRUTUS and CASSIUS, and a throng of Citizens.

Cit. We will be satisfied: let us be satisfied.

Bru. Then follow me, and give me audience, friends—
Cassius, go you into the other street,
And part the numbers.—
Those that will hear me speak, let them stay here;
Those that will follow Cassius, go with him;
And public reasons shall be rendered
Of Cæsar's death.

1 Cit. I will hear Brutus speak.

2 Cit. I will hear Cassius; and compare their reasons,
When severally we hear them rendered.

[Exit CASSIUS, with some of the Citizens]

BRUTUS goes into the Rostrum.

3 Cit. The noble Brutus is ascended. Silence!

Bru. Be patient till the last.

Romans, countrymen, and lovers! hear me for my cause, and be silent that you may hear: believe me for mine honour, and have respect to mine honour, that you may believe. censure me in your wisdom, and awake your senses that you may the better judge. If there be any in this assembly, any dear friend of Cæsar's, to him I say, that Brutus' love to Cæsar was no less than his. If, then, that friend demand, why Brutus rose against Cæsar? this is my answer,—not that I loved Cæsar less, but that I loved Rome more. Had you rather Cæsar were living, and die all slaves, than that Cæsar were dead, to live all free men? As Cæsar loved me, I weep for him; as he was fortunate, I rejoice at it; as he was valiant, I honour him; but, as he was ambitious, I slew him. There is tears for his love; joy for his fortune; honour for his valour; and death for his ambition. Who is here so base, that would be a bondman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so rude, that would not be a Roman? If any, speak; for him have I offended. Who is here so vile, that will not love his country? If any, speak; for him have I offended. I pause for a reply.

All. None, Brutus, none.

Bru. Then, none have I offended. I have done no more to Cæsar, than you shall do to Brutus. The question of his death is enrolled in the Capitol; his glory not extenuated, wherein he was worthy, nor his offences enforced, for which he suffered death.

Enter ANTONY and others, with CÆSAR's Body.

Here comes his body, mourned by Mark Antony: who, though he had no hand in his death, shall receive the benefit of his dying, a place in the commonwealth; as which of you shall not? With this I depart; that, as I slew my best lover for the good of Rome, I have the same dagger for myself, when it shall please my country to need my death.

All. Live, Brutus! live! live!

1 Cit. Bring him with triumph home unto his house.

2 Cit. Give him a statue with his ancestors.

3 Cit. Let him be Cæsar.

4 Cit. Cæsar's better parts

Shall now be crown'd in Brutus.

1 Cit. We'll bring him to his house with shouts and clamours.

Bru. My countrymen,—

2 Cit. Peace! silence! Brutus speaks.

1 Cit. Peace, ho!

Bru. Good countrymen, let me depart alone;

And, for my sake, stay here with Antony:

Do grace to Cæsar's corpse, and grace his speech

Tending to Cæsar's glories, which Mark Antony,

By our permission, is allow'd to make.

I do entreat you, not a man depart,

Save I alone, till Antony have spoke. [Exit.]

1 Cit. Stay, ho! and let us hear Mark Antony.

3 Cit. Let him go up into the public chair:

We'll hear him.—Noble Antony, go up.

Ant. For Brutus' sake, I am beholding to you.

4 Cit. What does he say of Brutus?

3 Cit. He says, for Brutus' sake,

He finds himself beholding to us all.

4 Cit. 'T were best he speak no harm of Brutus here.

1 Cit. This Cæsar was a tyrant.

3 Cit. Nay, that's certain:

We are bless'd, that Rome is rid of him.

2 Cit. Peace! let us hear what Antony can say.

Ant. You gentle Romans.—

Cit. Peace, ho! let us hear him.

Ant. Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears:

I come to bury Cæsar, not to praise him.

The evil that men do lives after them,

The good is oft interred with their bones:
So let it be with Cæsar. The noble Brutus

Hath told you, Cæsar was ambitious:

If it were so, it was a grievous fault,

And grievously hath Cæsar answer'd it.

Here, under leave of Brutus and the rest,

(For Brutus is an honourable man,

So are they all, all honourable men)

Come I to speak in Cæsar's funeral.

He was my friend, faithful and just to me:

But Brutus says, he was ambitious;

And Brutus is an honourable man.

He hath brought many captives home to Rome,

Whose ransoms did the general coffers fill.

Did this in Cæsar seem ambitious?

When that the poor have cried, Cæsar hath wept;

Ambition should be made of sterner stuff:

Yet Brutus says, he was ambitious;

And Brutus is an honourable man.

You all did see, that on the Lupercal

I thrice presented him a kingly crown.

Which he did thrice refuse. Was this ambition?

Yet Brutus says, he was ambitious;

And, sure, he is an honourable man.

I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke,

But here I am to speak what I do know.

You all did love him once, not without cause:

What cause withholds you, then, to mourn for him?

O judgment! thou art fled to brutish beasts,

And men have lost their reason.—Bear with me;

My heart is in the coffin there with Cæsar,

And I must pause till it come back to me.

1 Cit. Methinks, there is much reason in his sayings

2 Cit. If thou consider rightly of the matter,

Cæsar has had great wrong.

3 Cit.

Has he, masters?

I fear, there will a worse come in his place.

4 Cit. Mark'd ye his words? He would not take the crown:

Therefore, 't is certain, he was not ambitious.

1 Cit. If it be found so, some will dear abide it.

2 Cit. Poor soul! his eyes are red as fire with weeping.

3 Cit. There's not a nobler man in Rome than Antony.

4 Cit. Now mark him; he begins again to speak.

Ant. But yesterday, the word of Cæsar might

Have stood against the world: now, lies he there,

And none so poor to do him reverence.

O masters! if I were dispos'd to stir

Your hearts and minds to mutiny and rage,

I should do Brutus wrong, and Cassius wrong,

Who, you all know, are honourable men.

I will not do them wrong: I rather choose

To wrong the dead, to wrong myself, and you,

Than I will wrong such honourable men.

But here's a parchment with the seal of Cæsar;

I found it in his closet; 't is his will:

Let but the commons hear this testament,

(Which, pardon me, I do not mean to read)

And they would go and kiss dead Cæsar's wounds,

And dip their napkins in his sacred blood;

Yea, beg a hair of him for memory,

And, dying, mention it within their wills,

Bequeathing it, as a rich legacy,

Unto their issue.

4 Cit. We'll hear the will. Read it, Mark Antony

All. The will, the will! we will hear Cæsar's will

Ant. Have patience, gentle friends; I must not read it:

It is not meet you know how Cæsar lov'd you.

You are not wood, you are not stones, but men,
And, being men, hearing the will of Cæsar,
It will inflame you, it will make you mad.

'T is good you know not that you are his heirs;
For if you should, O! what would come of it?

4 Cit. Read the will! we'll hear it, Antony;
You shall read us the will: Cæsar's will!

Ant. Will you be patient? Will you stay a while?
I have o'er-shot myself to tell you of it.

I fear, I wrong the honourable men,
Whose daggers have stabb'd Cæsar: I do fear it.

4 Cit. They were traitors: honourable men!

All. The will! the testament!

2 Cit. They were villains, murderers. The will!
read the will.

Ant. You will compel me, then, to read the will?

Then make a ring about the corpse of Cæsar,

And let me show you him that made the will.

Shall I descend? and will you give me leave?

All. Come down.

2 Cit. Descend.

[He comes down.]

3 Cit. You shall have leave.

4 Cit. A ring! stand round.

1 Cit. Stand from the hearse; stand from the body.

2 Cit. Room for Antony:—most noble Antony!

Ant. Nay, press not so upon me; stand far off.

All. Stand back! room! bear back!

Ant. If you have tears, prepare to shed them now.

You all do know this mantle: I remember

The first time ever Cæsar put it on;

'T was on a summer's evening, in his tent,

That day he overcame the Nervii.

Look! in this place, ran Cassius' dagger through:

See, what a rent the envious Casca made:

Through this the well-beloved Brutus stabb'd;

And as he pluck'd his cursed steel away,

Mark how the blood of Cæsar follow'd it,

As rushing out of doors, to be resolv'd

If Brutus so unkindly knock'd, or no;

For Brutus, as you know, was Cæsar's angel:

Judge, O you gods, how dearly Cæsar lov'd him!

This was the most unkindest cut of all;

For when the noble Cæsar saw him stab,

Ingratitude, more strong than traitors' arms,

Quite vanquish'd him: then burst his mighty heart;

And in his mantle muffled up his face,

Even at the base of Pompey's statue,

Which all the while ran blood, great Cæsar fell.

O, what a fall was there, my countrymen!

Then I, and you, and all of us fell down,

Whilst bloody treason flourish'd over us.

O! now you weep: and, I perceive, you feel

The dint of pity: these are gracious drops.

Kind souls! what! weep you, when you but behold

Our Cæsar's vesture wounded? Look you here,

Here is himself, marr'd, as you see, with traitors.

1 Cit. O piteous spectacle!

2 Cit. O noble Cæsar!

3 Cit. O woful day!

4 Cit. O traitors! villains!

1 Cit. O most bloody sight!

All. We will be revenged. Revenge! about,—seek,
—burn,—fire,—kill,—slay!—let not a traitor live.

Ant. Stay, countrymen. [They are rushing out.]

1 Cit. Peace there! hear the noble Antony.

2 Cit. We'll hear him, we'll follow him, we'll die
with him.

Ant. Good friends, sweet friends, let me not stia you up

To such a sudden flood of mutiny.

They that have done this deed are honourable:

What private griefs they have, alas! I know not,
That made them do it; they are wise and honourable,

And will, no doubt, with reasons answer you.

I come not, friends, to steal away your hearts:

I am no orator, as Brutus is,

But, as you know me all, a plain blunt man,

That love my friend; and that they know full well

That gave me public leave to speak of him.

For I have neither wit,² nor words, nor worth,

Action, nor utterance, nor the power of speech,

To stir men's blood: I only speak right on;

I tell you that, which you yourselves do know,

Show you sweet Cæsar's wounds, poor, poor dumb
mouths,

And bid them speak for me: but were I Brutus,

And Brutus Antony, there were an Antony

Would ruffle up your spirits, and put a tongue

In every wound of Cæsar, that should move

The stones of Rome to rise and mutiny.

All. We'll mutiny.

1 Cit. We'll burn the house of Brutus.

3 Cit. Away then! come, seek the conspirators.

Ant. Yet hear me, countrymen; yet hear me speak

All. Peace, ho! Hear Antony; most noble Antony

Ant. Why, friends, you go to do you know not what

Wherein hath Cæsar thus deserv'd your loves?

Alas! you know not:—I must tell you, then.

You have forgot the will I told you of.

All. Most true;—the will:—let's stay, and hear the will.

Ant. Here is the will, and under Cæsar's seal.

To every Roman citizen he gives,

To every several man, seventy-five drachmas.

2 Cit. Most noble Cæsar!—we'll revenge his death

3 Cit. O royal Cæsar!

Ant. Hear me with patience.

All. Peace, ho!

Ant. Moreover, he hath left you all his walks,

His private arbours, and new-planted orchards,

On this side Tyber: he hath left them you,

And to your heirs for ever; common pleasures,

To walk abroad, and recreate yourselves.

Here was a Cæsar: when comes such another?

1 Cit. Never, never!—Come, away, away!

We'll burn his body in the holy place.

And with the brands fire the traitors' houses.

Take up the body.

2 Cit. Go, fetch fire.

3 Cit. Pluck down benches.

4 Cit. Pluck down forms, windows, any thing.

[Exeunt Citizens, with the Body]

Ant. Now let it work. Mischief, thou art afoot,
Take thou what course thou wilt.—How now, fellow.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. Sir, Octavius is already come to Rome.

Ant. Where is he?

Serv. He and Lepidus are at Cæsar's house.

Ant. And thither will I straight to visit him.

He comes upon a wish: Fortune is merry,

And in this mood will give us any thing.

Serv. I heard them say, Brutus and Cassius

Are rid like madmen through the gates of Rome.

Ant. Belike, they had some notice of the people.

How I had mov'd them. Bring me to Octavius. [Exeunt]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Street.

Enter CINNA, the Poet.

Cin. I dreamt to-night, that I did feast with Cæsar,
And things unlikely¹ charge my fantasy.
[I have no will to wander forth of doors,
Yet something leads me forth.

*Enter Citizens.*1 Cit. What is your name?2 Cit. Whither are you going?3 Cit. Where do you dwell?4 Cit. Are you a married man, or a bachelor?2 Cit. Answer every man directly.1 Cit. Ay, and briefly.4 Cit. Ay, and wisely.3 Cit. Ay, and truly; you were best.

Cin. What is my name? Whither am I going?
Where do I dwell? Am I a married man, or a bachelor?
Then, to answer every man directly, and briefly, wisely, and truly, wisely I say, I am a bachelor.

2 Cit. That's as much as to say, they are fools that marry:—you'll bear me a bang for that, I fear. Proceed: directly.

Cin. Directly, I am going to Cæsar's funeral.1 Cit. As a friend, or an enemy?Cin. As a friend.2 Cit. That matter is answered directly.4 Cit. For your dwelling,—briefly.Cin. Briefly, I dwell by the Capitol.3 Cit. Your name, sir, truly.Cin. Truly, my name is Cinna.1 Cit. Tear him to pieces: he's a conspirator.Cin. I am Cinna, the poet; I am Cinna, the poet.4 Cit. Tear him for his bad verses; tear him for his bad verses.Cin. I am not Cinna the conspirator.2 Cit. It is no matter: his name's Cinna: pluck but his name out of his heart, and turn him going.

3 Cit. Tear him, tear him! Come: brands, ho! fire-brands! To Brutus, to Cassius; burn all. Some to Decius' house, and some to Casca's; some to Ligarius Away! go!

[Exeunt, forcing out CINNA

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Same. A Room in ANTONY's House.

ANTONY, OCTAVIUS, and LEPIDUS, seated at a Table.

Ant. These many, then, shall die; their names are prick'd.Oct. Your brother, too, must die: consent you, Lepidus?Lep. I do consent.Oct. Prick him down, Antony.

Lep. Upon condition Publius shall not live,
Who is your sister's son, Mark Antony.

Ant. He shall not live; look, with a spot I damn him.

But, Lepidus, go you to Cæsar's house;
Fetch the will hither, and we will determine
How to cut off some charge in legacies.

Lep. What, shall I find you here?Oct. Or here, or at the Capitol. [Exit LEPIDUS.]

Ant. This is a slight unmeritable man,
Meet to be sent on errands: is it fit,
The threefold world divided, he should stand
One of the three to share it?

Oct. So you thought him;
And took his voice who should be prick'd to die
In our black sentence and proscription.

Ant. Octavius, I have seen more days than you:
And though we lay these honours on this man,
To ease ourselves of divers slanderous loads,
He shall but bear them as the ass bears gold,
To groan and sweat under the business,
Either led or driven, as we point the way;
And having brought our treasure where we will,
Then take we down his load, and turn him off,
Like to the empty ass, to shake his ears,
And graze on commons.

Oct. You may do your will;
But he's a tried and valiant soldier.

Ant. So is my horse, Octavius; and for that I do appoint him store of provender;
It is a creature that I teach to fight,
To wind, to stop, to run directly on,
His corporal motion govern'd by my spirit:

And, in some taste, is Lepidus but so;
He must be taught, and train'd, and bid go forth.

A barren-spirited fellow; one that feeds

On objects, arts, and imitations,

Which, out of use and staled by other men,

Begin his fashion; do not talk of him,

But as a property. And now, Octavius,

Listen great things. Brutus and Cassius.

Are levying powers: we must straight make head;

Therefore, let our alliance be combin'd,

Our best friends made, and our best means stretch'd out;

And let us presently go sit in council,

How covert matters may be best disclos'd,

And open perils surest answered.

Oct. Let us do so, for we are at the stake,

And bayed about with many enemies;

And some, that smile, have in their hearts, I fear,

Millions of mischiefs. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Before BRUTUS' Tent, in the Camp near Sardis.

Drum. Enter BRUTUS, LUCILIUS, LUCIUS, and Soldiers
TITINIUS and PINDARUS meet them.

Bru. Stand, ho!Luc. Give the word, ho! and stand.Bru. What now, Lucilius? is Cassius near?

Luc. He is at hand; and Pindarus is come
To do you salutation from his master.

[PINDARUS gives a Letter to BRUTUS.]

Bru. He greets me well.—Your master, Pindarus,
In his own change, or by ill officers,
Hath given me some worthy cause to wish
Things done, undone; but, if he be at hand,
I shall be satisfied.

Pin. I do not doubt,

But that my noble master will appear
Such as he is, full of regard and honour.

Bru. He is not doubted.—A word, Lucilius:
How he receiv'd you let me be resolv'd.

Luc. With courtesy and with respect enough;

¹ unlikely: in f. e. ² The rest of this direction is not in f. e. ³ So the folio, 1632; first folio gives the line: "Our best friend is made, our means stretch'd."

But not with such familiar instances,
Nor with such free and friendly conference,
As he hath used of old.

Bru. Thou hast describ'd
A hot friend cooling. Ever note, Lucilius,
When love begins to sicken and decay,
It useth an enforced ceremony.

There are no tricks in plain and simple faith;
But hollow men, like horses hot at hand,
Make gallant show and promise of their mettle,
But when they should endure the bloody spur,
They fall their crests, and, like deceitful jades,
Sink in the trial. Comes his army on?

Luc. They mean this night in Sardis to be quarter'd:

The greater part, the horse in general,
Are come with Cassius. [March within.]

Bru. Hark! he is arriv'd.—
March gently on to meet him.

Enter Cassius and Soldiers.

Cas. Stand, ho!

Bru. Stand, ho! Speak the word along.

Within. Stand.

Within. Stand.

Within. Stand. [One after the other, and fainter.]

Cas. Most noble brother, you have done me wrong.

Bru. Judge me, you gods! Wrong I mine enemies?
And, if not so, how should I wrong a brother?

Cas. Brutus, this sober form of yours hides wrongs;
And when you do them——

Bru. Cassius, be content;
Speak your griefs softly: I do know you well.
Before the eyes of both our armies here,
Which should perceive nothing but love from us,
Let us not wrangle: bid them move away;
Then in my tent, Cassius, enlarge your griefs,
And I will give you audience.

Cas. Pindarus,
Bid our commanders lead their charges off
A little from this ground.

Bru. Lucilius, do you the like: and let no man
Come to our tent, till we have done our conference.
Let Lucius and Titinius guard our door. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Within the Tent of BRUTUS.

LUCIUS and TITINIUS at some distance from it.

Enter BRUTUS and CASSIUS.

Cas. That you have wrong'd me doth appear in this:
You have condemn'd and noted Lucius Pella
For taking bribes here of the Sardians;
Wherein my letters, praying on his side,
Because I knew the man, were slighted off.

Bru. You wrong'd yourself to write in such a case.
Cas. In such a time as this, it is not meet
That every nice² offence should bear his comment.

Bru. Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself
Are much condemn'd to have an itching palm;
To sell and mart your offices for gold
To undeservers.

Cas. I an itching palm?
You know that you are Brutus that speak this,
Or by the gods this speech were else your last.

Bru. The name of Cassius honours this corruption,
And chastisement³ doth therefore hide his head.

Cas. Chastisement!
Bru. Remember March, the ides of March remember.
Did not great Julius bleed for justice' sake?
What villain touch'd his body, that did stab,
And not for justice? What! shall one of us,

That struck the foremost man of all this world,
But, for supporting robbers, shall we now
Contaminate our fingers with base bribes,
And sell the mighty space of our large honours,
For so much trash as may be grasped thus?
I had rather be a dog, and bay the moon,
Than such a Roman.

Cas. Brutus, bay not me,
I'll not endure it: you forget yourself,
To hedge me in. I am a soldier, I,
Older in practice, abler than yourself
To make conditions.

Bru. Go to; you are not, Cassius

Cas. I am.

Bru. I say, you are not.

Cas. Urge me no more, I shall forget myself:
Have mind upon your health; tempt me no farther.

Bru. Away, slight man!

Cas. Is't possible?

Bru. Hear me, for I will speak.
Must I give way and room to your rash choler?
Shall I be frighted, when a madman stares?
Cas. O ye gods! ye gods! Must I endure all this?
Bru. All this? ay, more. Fret, till your proud heart break;

Go, show your slaves how choleric you are,
And make your bondmen tremble. Must I budge?
Must I observe you? Must I stand and crouch
Under your testy humour? By the gods,
You shall digest the venom of your spleen,
Though it do split you; for from this day forth,
I'll use you for my mirth, yea, for my laughter,
When you are waspish.

Cas. Is it come to this?

Bru. You say, you are a better soldier:
Let it appear so; make your vaunting true,
And it shall please me well. For mine own part,
I shall be glad to learn of abler³ men.

Cas. You wrong me every way; you wrong me.
Brutus;

I said, an older soldier, not a better:
Did I say, better?

Bru. If you did, I care not.

Cas. When Cæsar liv'd, he durst not thus have mov'd me.

Bru. Peace, peace! you durst not so have tempted him

Cas. I durst not?

Bru. No.

Cas. What! durst not tempt him?

Bru. For your life you durst not
Cas. Do not presume too much upon my love:
I may do that I shall be sorry for.

Bru. You have done that you should be sorry for.
There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats,
For I am arm'd so strong in honesty.
That they pass by me as the idle wind,
Which I respect not. I did send to you
For certain sums of gold, which you denied me;
For I can raise no money by vile means:
By heaven, I had rather coin my heart,
And drop my blood for drachmas, than to wring
From the hard hands of peasants their vile trash,
By any indirection. I did send
To you for gold to pay my legions,
Which you denied me: was that done like Cæsar?
Should I have answered Caius Cassius so?
When Marcus Brutus grows so covetous,
To lock such rascal counters from his friends,
Be ready, gods, with all your thunderbolts

Dash him to pieces !

Cas. I denied you not.

Bru. You did.

Cas. I did not : he was but a fool,
That brought my answer back.—Brutus hath riv'd my heart :

A friend should bear his friend's infirmities,
But Brutus makes mine greater than they are.

Bru. I do not, till you practise them on me.

Cas. You love me not.

Bru. I do not like your faults.

Cas. A friendly eye could never see such faults.

Bru. A flatterer's would not, though they did appear
As huge as high Olympus.

Cas. Come, Antony, and young Octavius, come,
Revenge yourselves alone on Cassius,

For Cassius is aware of the world :

Hated by one he loves ; brav'd by his brother ;

Check'd like a bondman ; all his faults observ'd,

Set in a note-book, learn'd, and could by rote,

To cast into my teeth. O ! I could weep

My spirit from mine eyes.—There is my dagger,

And here my naked breast ; within, a heart

Dearer than Plutus' mine, richer than gold :

If that thou be'st a Roman, take it forth ;

I, that denied thee gold will give my heart.

Strike, as thou didst at Cæsar ; for, I know,

When thou didst hate him worst, thou lov'dst him better

Than ever thou lov'dst Cassius.

Bru. Sheath your dagger.

Be angry when you will, it shall have scope ;

Do what you will, dishonour shall be humour.

O Cassius ! you are yoked with a lamb,

That carries anger as the flint bears fire,

Who, much enforced, shows a hasty spark,

And straight is cold again.

Cas. Hath Cassius liv'd

To be but mirth and laughter to his Brutus,

When grief, and blood ill-temper'd, vexeth him ?

Bru. When I spoke that, I was ill-temper'd too.

Cas. Do you confess so much ? Give me your hand.

Bru. And my heart, too.

Cas. O Brutus !—

Bru. What's the matter ?

Cas. Have you not love enough to bear with me,

When that rash humour, which my mother gave me,

Makes me forgetful ?

Bru. Yes, Cassius ; and, from henceforth,

When you are over-earnest with your Brutus,

He'll think your mother chides, and leave you so.

[Noise within.]

Poet. [Within.] Let me go in to see the generals.

There is some grudge between them ; 't is not meet

They be alone.

Luc. [Within.] You shall not come to them.

Poet. [Within.] Nothing but death shall stay me.

Enter Poet.

Cas. How now ! What's the matter ?

Poet. For shame, you generals ! What do you mean ?

Love, and be friends, as two such men should be,

For I have seen more years, I am sure, than ye.

Cas. Ha, ha ! how vilely doth this cynic rhyme.

Bru. Get you hence, sirrah : saucy fellow, hence.

Cas. Bear with him, Brutus ; 't is his fashion.

Bru. I'll know his humour, when he knows his time.

What should the wars do with these jiggling fools ?

Companion, hence.

Cas. Away, away ! be gone. [Exit Poet.]

* Fellow.

Enter LUCILIUS and TITINIUS.

Bru. Lucilius and Titinius, bid the commanders
Prepare to lodge their companies to-night.

Cas. And come yourselves, and bring Messala with you,

Immediately to us. [Exit LUCILIUS and TITINIUS.]

Bru. Lucius, a bowl of wine.

Cas. I did not think you could have been so angry.

Bru. O Cassius ! I am sick of many griefs.

Cas. Of your philosophy you make no use,
If you give place to accidental evils.

Bru. No man bears sorrow better.—Portia is dead.

Cas. Ha ! Portia ?

Bru. She is dead.

Cas. How scap'd I killing, when I cross'd you so ?—
O, insupportable and touching loss !—

Upon what sickness ?

Bru. Impatient of my absence,
And grief, that young Octavius with Mark Antony
Have made themselves so strong ;—for with her death
That tidings came.—With this she fell distract,
And, her attendants absent, swallow'd fire.

Cas. And died so ?

Bru. Even so.

Cas. O, ye immortal gods !

Enter LUCIUS, with Wine and Tapers.

Bru. Speak no more of her.—Give me a bowl of wine :
In this I bury all unkindness, Cassius. [Drinks.]

Cas. My heart is thirsty for that noble pledge.—
Fill, Lucius, till the wine o'erswell the cup ;
I cannot drink too much of Brutus' love. [Drinks.]

Re-enter TITINIUS, with MESSALA.

Bru. Come in, Titinius.—Welcome, good Messala.—
Now sit we close about this taper here,
And call in question our necessities.

Cas. Portia, art thou gone ?

Bru. No more, I pray you.—
Messala, I have here received letters,

That young Octavius, and Mark Antony,

Come down upon us with a mighty power,

Bending their expedition toward Philippi.

Mes. Myself have letters of the self-same tenour.

Bru. With what addition ?

Mes. That by proscription, and bills of outlawry,
Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus,

Have put to death an hundred senators.

Bru. Therein our letters do not well agree :

Mine speak of seventy senators, that died

By their proscriptions, Cicero being one.

Cas. Cicero one ?

Mes. Cicero is dead,

And by that order of proscription.—

Had you your letters from your wife, my lord ?

Bru. No, Messala.

Mes. Nor nothing in your letters writ of her ?

Bru. Nothing, Messala.

Mes. That, methinks, is strange

Bru. Why ask you ? Hear you aught of her in yours ?

Mes. No, my lord.

Bru. Now, as you are a Roman, tell me true.

Mes. Then like a Roman bear the truth I tell :

For certain she is dead, and by strange manner.

Bru. Why, farewell, Portia.—We must die, Messala
With meditating that she must die once,
I have the patience to endure it now.

Mes. Even so great men great losses should endure.

Cas. I have as much of this in art as you,

But yet my nature could not bear it so.

Bru. Well, to our work alive.—What do you think

Of marching to Philippi presently?

Cas. I do not think it good.

Bru. Your reason?

Cas. This it is.

'Tis better, that the enemy seek us:

So shall he waste his means, weary his soldiers,
Doing himself offence: whilst we, lying still,
Are full of rest, defence, and nimbleness.

Bru. Good reasons must, of force, give place to better.

The people, 'twixt Philippi and this ground,

Do stand but in a forc'd affection;

For they have grudg'd us contribution:

The enemy, marching along by them,

By them shall make a fuller number up,

Come on refresh'd, new-hearted¹, and encourag'd;

From which advantage shall we cut him off,

If at Philippi we do face him there,

These people at our back.

Cas. Hear me, good brother.

Bru. Under your pardon.—You must note beside,

That we have tried the utmost of our friends.

Our legions are brim-full, our cause is ripe:

The enemy increaseth every day;

We, at the height, are ready to decline.

There is a tide in the affairs of men,

Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune,

Omitted, all the voyage of their life

Is bound in shallows, and in miseries.

On such a full sea are we now afloat,

And we must take the current when it serves,

Or lose our ventures.

Cas. Then, with your will, go on:

We will along ourselves, and meet them at Philippi.

Bru. The deep of night has crept upon our talk,

And nature must obey necessity;

Which we will niggard with a little rest.

There is no more to say?

Cas. No more.—Good night:

Early to-morrow will we rise, and hence.

Bru. Lucius, my gown. [Exit Lucius.]—Farewell, good Messala:—

Good night, Titinius.—Noble, noble Cassius,

Good night, and good repose.

Cas. O! my dear brother,

This was an ill beginning of the night.

Never come such division 'tween our souls!

Let it not, Brutus.

Bru. Every thing is well.

Cas. Good night, my lord.

Bru. Good night, good brother.

Tit. Mes. Good night, lord Brutus.

Bru. Farewell, every one.

[Exit Cas. Tit. and Mes.]

Re-enter Lucius, with the Gown.

Give me the gown. Where is thy instrument?

Luc. Here in the tent

Bru. What! thou speak'st drowsily?

Poor knave, I blame thee not; thou art o'er-watch'd.

Call Claudius, and some other of my men;

I'll have them sleep on cushions in my tent.

Luc. Varro, and Claudius!

Enter Varro and Claudius.

Var. Calls my lord?

Bru. I pray you, sirs, lie in my tent, and sleep:

It may be, I shall raise you by and by

On business to my brother Cassius.

Var. No please you, we will stand, and watch your pleasure.

Bru. I will not have it so; lie down, good sirs:

It may be, I shall otherwise bethink me

Look, Lucius, here's the book I sought for so.

I put it in the pocket of my gown. [Servants lie down.]

Luc. I was sure, your lordship did not give it me.

Bru. Bear with me, good boy, I am much forgetful.

Canst thou hold up thy heavy eyes awhile,

And touch thy instrument a strain or two?

Luc. Ay, my lord, an't please you.

Bru.

It does, my boy

I trouble thee too much, but thou art willing.

Luc. It is my duty, sir.

Bru. I should not urge thy duty past thy night:

I know, young bloods look for a time of rest.

Luc. I have slept, my lord, already.

Bru. It was well done, and thou shalt sleep again;

I will not hold thee long; if I do live,

I will be good to thee.

[Music, and a Song.]

This is a sleepy tune.—O murderous slumber!

[Lucius falls asleep.]

Lay'st thou thy leaden mace upon my boy,

That plays thee music?—Gentle knave, good night;

I will not do thee so much wrong to wake thee;

If thou dost nod, thou break'st thy instrument:

I'll take it from thee; and, good boy, good night.—

Let me see, let me see: is not the leaf turn'd down,

Where I left reading? Here it is, I think.

[He sits down to read.]

Enter the Ghost of CÆSAR.

How ill this taper burns.—Ha! who comes here?

I think, it is the weakness of mine eyes

That shapes this monstrous apparition.

It comes upon me.—Art thou any thing?

Art thou some god, some angel, or some devil,

That mak'st my blood cold, and my hair to stare?

Speak to me, what thou art.

Ghost. Thy evil spirit, Brutus.

Bru.

Why com'st thou?

Ghost. To tell thee, thou shalt see me at Philippi.

Bru. Well; then I shall see thee again?

Ghost.

Ay, at Philippi

[Ghost vanishes.]

Bru. Why, I will see thee at Philippi then.—

Now I have taken heart, thou vanishest:

Ill spirit, I would hold more talk with thee.—

Boy! Lucius!—Varro! Claudius! Sirs, awake!—

Claudius!

Luc. The strings, my lord, are false.

Bru. He thinks, he still is at his instrument.—

Lucius, awake!

Luc. My lord.

Bru. Didst thou dream, Lucius, that thou so criest out?

Luc. My lord, I do not know that I did cry.

Bru. Yes, that thou didst. Didst thou see any thing?

Luc. Nothing, my lord.

Bru. Sleep again, Lucius.—Sirrah, Claudius!

Fellow thou: awake!

Var. My lord.

Clau. My lord.

Bru. Why did you so cry out, sirs, in your sleep?

Var. Clau. Did we, my lord?

Bru.

Ay: saw you any thing?

Var. No, my lord, I saw nothing.

Clau.

Nor I, my lord.

Bru. Go, and commend me to my brother Cassius:

Bid him set on his powers betimes before,

And we will follow.

Var. Clau. It shall be done, my lord. [Exit.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Plains of Philippi.

Enter OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, and their Army.Oct. Now, Antony, our hopes are answered.

You said, the enemy would not come down,
 But keep the hills and upper regions;
 It proves not so: their battles are at hand;
 They mean to warn¹ us at Philippi here,
 Answering before we do demand of them.

Ant. Tut! I am in their bosoms, and I know
 Wherefore they do it: they could be content
 To visit other places; and come down
 With fearful bravery, thinking by this face
 To fasten in our thoughts that they have courage;
 But 't is not so.

Enter a Messenger.Mess. Prepare you, generals;

The enemy comes on in gallant show:
 Their bloody sign of battle is hung out,
 And something to be done immediately.

Ant. Octavius, lead your battle softly on,
 Upon the left hand of the even field.

Oct. Upon the right hand I; keep thou the left.Ant. Why do you cross me in this exigent?Oct. I do not cross you; but I will do so. [March.]

Drum. Enter BRUTUS, CASSIUS, and their Army;
LUCILIUS, TITINIUS, MESSALA, and others.

Bru. They stand, and would have parley.Cas. Stand fast, Titinius: we must out and talk.Oct. Mark Antony, shall we give sign of battle?

Ant. No, Cæsar, we will answer on their charge.
 Make forth: the generals would have some words.

Oct. Stir not until the signal.Bru. Words before blows: is it so, countrymen?Oct. Not that we love words better, as you do.Bru. Good words are better than bad strokes, Octavius.Ant. In your bad strokes, Brutus, you give good words:

Witness the hole you made in Cæsar's heart,
 Crying, "Long live! hail, Cæsar!"

Cas. Antony,

The posture of your blows is yet unknown;
 But for your words, they rob the Hybla bees,
 And leave them honeyless.

Ant. Not stingless, too.Bru. O! yes, and soundless too;

For you have stol'n their buzzing, Antony,
 And very wisely threat before you sting.

Ant. Villains! you did not so when your vile daggers
 Hack'd one another in the sides of Cæsar:
 You show'd your teeth like apes, and fawn'd like hounds,
 And bow'd like bondmen, kissing Cæsar's feet;
 While damned Casca, like a cur, behind
 Struck Cæsar on the neck. O, you flatterers!

Cas. Flatterers!—Now, Brutus, thank yourself:
 This tongue had not offended so to-day,
 If Cassius might have rul'd.

Oct. Come, come, the cause: if arguing make us sweat,

The proof of it will turn to redder drops.
 Look; I draw sword against conspirators;—
 When think you that the sword goes up again?—
 Never, till Cæsar's three and thirty wounds²

Be well aveng'd; or till another Cæsar
 Have added slaughter to the word of traitor.³

Bru. Cæsar, thou canst not die by traitors' hands,
 Unless thou bring'st them with thee.

Oct. So I hope:

I was not born to die on Brutus' sword.

Bru. O! if thou wert the noblest of thy strain,
 Young man, thou couldst not die more honourable.

Cas. A peevish schoolboy, worthless of such honour
 Join'd with a masker and a reveller.

Ant. Old Cassius still.Oct. Come, Antony; away!—

Defiance, traitors, hurl we in your teeth.

If you dare fight to-day, come to the field;

If not, when you have stomachs.

[Exit OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, and their Army]

Cas. Why now, blow wind, swell billow, and swim bark!

The storm is up, and all is on the hazard.

Bru. Ho, Lucilius! hark, a word with you.Luc. My lord. [BRUTUS and LUCILIUS talk apart.]Cas. Messala!Mes. What says the general?Cas. Messala,

This is my birth-day: as this very day
 Was Cassius born. Give me thy hand, Messala:
 Be thou my witness, that against my will,
 As Pompey was, am I compell'd to set
 Upon one battle all our liberties.

You know, that I held Epicurus strong,
 And his opinion: now, I change my mind,
 And partly credit things that do presage.
 Coming from Sardis, on our forward⁴ ensign
 Two mighty eagles fell; and there they perch'd,
 Gorging and feeding from our soldiers' hands;
 Who to Philippi here consorted us:

This morning are they fled away, and gone,
 And in their steads do ravens, crows, and kites,
 Fly o'er our heads, and downward look on us,
 As we were sickly prey: their shadows seem
 A canopy most fatal, under which
 Our army lies ready to give up the ghost.

Mes. Believe not so.Cas. I but believe it partly,

For I am fresh of spirit, and resolv'd

To meet all perils very constantly.

Bru. Even so, Lucilius. [LUCILIUS stands back.]Cas. Now, most noble Brutus,

The gods to-day stand friendly! that we may,
 Lovers in peace, lead on our days to age:
 But since the affairs of men rest still incertain,
 Let's reason with the worst that may befall.
 If we do lose this battle, then is this
 The very last time we shall speak together:
 What are you then determined to do?

Bru. Even by the rule of that philosophy,
 By which I did blame Cato for the death
 Which he did give himself. I know not how,
 But I do find it cowardly and vile,
 For fear of what might fall, so to prevent
 The term⁵ of life.—arming myself with patience,
 To stay the providence of those⁶ high powers,
 That govern us below.

Cas. Then, if we lose this battle,

¹ Summon. ² So old copies. Theobald changed, to three and twenty, to correspond with the classic historians. ³ sword of traitors: in f. e. ⁴ Jurnet. in f. e. ⁵ Not in f. e. ⁶ time: in f. e. ⁷ some: in f. e.

You are contented to be led in triumph
Thorough the streets of Rome?

Brut. No, Cassius, no: think not, thou noble Roman,
That ever Brutus will go bound to Rome;
He bears too great a mind: but this same day
Must end that work the ides of March began.
And whether we shall meet again, I know not.
Therefore, our everlasting farewell take:—
For ever, and for ever, farewell, Cassius.
If we do meet again, why we shall smile;
If not, why then, this parting was well made.

Cas. For ever, and for ever, farewell, Brutus.

If we do meet again, we'll smile indeed;

If not, 't is true, this parting was well made.

Brut. Why then, lead on.—O, that a man might know
The end of this day's business, ere it come!

But it sufficeth, that the day will end,

And then the end is known.—Come, ho! away!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. The Field of Battle.

Alarum. Enter BRUTUS and MESSALA.

Brut. Ride, ride, Messala, ride, and give these bills
Unto the legions on the other side. [Loud Alarum.]

Let them set on at once: for I perceive

But cold demeanour in Octavius' wing,

And sudden push gives them the overthrow.

Ride, ride, Messala: let them all come down. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same. Another Part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter CASSIUS and TITINIUS.

Cas. O, look, Titinius, look! the villains fly.

Myself have to mine own turn'd enemy:

This ensign here of mine was turning back;

I slew the coward, and did take it from him.

Tit. O Cassius! Brutus gave the word too early;

Who having some advantage on Octavius,

Took it too eagerly: his soldiers fell to spoil,

Whilst we by Antony are all enclosed.

Enter PINDARUS.

Pin. Fly farther off, my lord, fly farther off;

Mark Antony is in your tents, my lord:

Fly, therefore, noble Cassius, fly far off.

Cas. This hill is far enough. Look, look, Titinius;

Are those my tents where I perceive the fire?

Tit. They are, my lord.

Cas. Titinius, if thou lov'st me,

Mount thou my horse, and hide thy spurs in him,

Till he have brought thee up to yonder troops,

And here again: that I may rest assur'd,

Whether yond' troops are friend or enemy.

Tit. I will be here again, even with a thought. [Exit.]

Cas. Go, Pindarus, get higher on that hill:

My sight was ever thick: regard Titinius,

And tell me what thou not'st about the field—

[Exit PINDARUS.]

This day I breathed first, time is come round,

And where I did begin, there shall I end:

My life is run his compass.—Sirrah, what news?

Pin. [Above.] O my lord!

Cas. What news?

Pin. Titinius is enclosed round about

With horsemen, that make to him on the spur:—

Yet he spurs on:—now they are almost on him.

Now, Titinius!—now some light:—O! he lights too:—

His 'a'en: and, hark! [Shout.] they shout for joy.

Cas. Come down; behold no more.—

O, coward that I am, to live so long,

To see my best friend ta'en before my face!

Enter PINDARUS.

Come hither, sirrah.

In Parthia did I take thee prisoner;

And then I swore thee, saving of thy life

That whatsoever I did bid thee do,

Thou shouldst attempt it. Come now, keep thine oath

Now be a freeman; and with this good sword,

That ran through Cæsar's bowels, search this bosom

Stand not to answer: here, take thou the hilts;

And when my face is cover'd, as 't is now

Guide thou the sword.—Cæsar, thou art reveng'd.

Even with the sword that kill'd thee. [Dies.]

Pin. So, I am free; yet would not so have been,

Durst I have done my will. O Cassius!

Far from this country Pindarus shall run,

Where never Roman shall take note of him. [Exit.]

Re-enter TITINIUS, with MESSALA.

Mes. It is but change, Titinius; for Octavius

Is overthrown by noble Brutus' power,

As Cassius' legions are by Antony.

Tit. These tidings will well comfort Cassius

Mes. Where did you leave him?

Tit. All disconsolate

With Pindarus, his bondman, on this hill.

Mes. Is not that he, that lies upon the ground?

Tit. He lies not like the living.—O my heart!

Mes. Is not that he?

Tit. No, this was he, Messala,

But Cassius is no more.—O setting sun!

As in thy red rays thou dost sink to-night,

So in his red blood Cassius' day is set:

The sun of Rome is set. Our day is gone;

Clouds, dews, and dangers come: our deeds are done.

Mistrust of my success hath done this deed.

Mes. Mistrust of good success hath done this deed

O hateful error! melancholy's child,

Why dost thou show to the apt thoughts of men

The things that are not? O error! soon conceiv'd,

Thou never com'st unto a happy birth,

But kill'st the mother that engender'd thee.

Tit. What, Pindarus! Where art thou, Pindarus?

Mes. Seek him, Titinius, whilst I go to meet

The noble Brutus, thrusting this report

Into his ears: I may say, thrusting it;

For piercing steel, and darts envenomed,

Shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus,

As tidings of this sight.

Tit. Hie you, Messala,

And I will seek for Pindarus the while. [Exit MESSALA.]

Why didst thou send me forth, brave Cassius?

Did I not meet thy friends? and did not they Put on my brows this wreath of victory,

And bid me give it thee? Didst not thou hear their shouts?

Alas! thou hast misconstrued every thing.

But hold thee; take this garland on thy brow:

Thy Brutus bid me give it thee, and I

Will do his bidding.—Brutus, come apace,

And see how I regarded Caius Cassius.—

By your leave, gods:—This is a Roman's part:

Come, Cassius' sword, and find Titinius' heart. [Dies.]

Alarum. Re-enter MESSALA, with BRUTUS, young CATO

STRATO, VOLUMNIUS, and LUCILIUS.

Brut. Where, where, Messala, doth his body lie?

Mes. Lo! yonder; and Titinius mourning it

Brut. Titinius' face is upward.

Cato. He is slain.

Brut. O Julius Cæsar! thou art mighty yet;

Thy spirit walks abroad, and turns our swords

In our own proper entrails. [Loud Alarums.]

Cato. Brave Titinius!
Look, wher' he have not crown'd dead Cassius!
Bru. Are yet two Romans living such as these?—
The last of all the Romans, fare thee well!
It is impossible that ever Rome
Should breed thy fellow.—Friends, I owe more tears
To this dead man, than you shall see me pay.—
I shall find time, Cassius, I shall find time.—
Come, therefore, and to Thassos send his body:
His funerals shall not be in our camp,
Lest it discomfort us.—Lucilius, come;—
And come, young Cato; let us to the field.—
Labeo, and Flavius, set our battles on!—
'T is three o'clock; and, Romans, yet ere night
We shall try fortune in a second fight. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Another Part of the Field.

Alarum. Enter, fighting, Soldiers of both Armies; then
BRUTUS, CATO, LUCILIUS, and others.

Bru. Yet, countrymen, O! yet hold up your heads.
Cato. What bastard doth not? Who will go with me?
I will proclaim my name about the field.—
I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!
A foe to tyrants, and my country's friend.
I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho! [Charges the Enemy.]
Bru. And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, I;
Brutus, my country's friend: know me for Brutus.
[Exit, charging the Enemy. CATO is overpowered, and falls.]

Luc. O, young and noble Cato! art thou down?
Why, now thou diest as bravely as Titinius,
And may'st be honour'd being Cato's son.

1 Sold. Yield, or thou diest.

Luc. Only I yield to die.
There is so much that thou wilt kill me straight.

[Offering money.]

Kill Brutus, and be honour'd in his death.

1 Sold. We must not.—A noble prisoner!

2 Sold. Room, ho! Tell Antony, Brutus is ta'en.

1 Sold. I'll tell the news:—Here comes the general.—

Enter ANTONY.

Brutus is ta'en, Brutus is ta'en, my lord.

Ant. Where is he?

Luc. Safe, Antony; Brutus is safe enough.

I dare assure thee, that no enemy

Shall ever take alive the noble Brutus:

The gods defend him from so great a shame!

When you do find him, or alive, or dead,

He will be found like Brutus, like himself.

Ant. This is not Brutus, friend; but, I assure you,

A prize no less in worth. Keep this man safe,

Give him all kindness: I had rather have Such men my friends, than enemies. Go on,

And see wher' Brutus be alive, or dead;

And bring us word unto Octavius' tent,

How every thing is chanc'd. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter BRUTUS, DARDANIUS, CLITUS, STRATO, and VOLUMNIUS.

Bru. Come, poor remains of friends, rest on this rock.

Cl. Statilius show'd the torch-light; but, my lord,

He came not back: he is or ta'en, or slain.

Bru. Sit thee down, Clitus; slaying is the word;

It is a deed in fashion. Hark thee, Clitus.—

[Whispering.]

Cl. What! I, my lord? No, not for all the world.

Bru. Peace then: no words.

Cl. I'll rather kill myself.

Bru. Hark thee, Dardanius! [Whispers him.]

Dar. Shall I do such a deed?

Cl. O, Dardanius!

Dar. O, Clitus!

Cl. What ill request did Brutus make to thee?

Dar. To kill him, Clitus. Look, he meditates.

Cl. Now is that noble vessel full of grief,
That it runs over even at his eyes.

Bru. Come hither, good Volumnius: list a word.

Vol. What says my lord?

Bru. Why, this, Volumnius

The ghost of Cæsar hath appear'd to me

Two several times by night: at Sardis once;

And, this last night, here in Philippi' fields.

I know my hour is come.

Vol.

Not so, my lord.

Bru. Nay, I am sure it is, Volumnius.

Thou seest the world, Volumnius, how it goes;

Our enemies have beat us to the pit: [Low Alarums]

It is more worthy to leap in ourselves.

Than tarry till they push us. Good Volumnius,

Thou know'st that we two went to school together;

Even for that our love of old, I pray thee,

Hold thou my sword-hilts whilst I run on it

Vol. That's not an office for a friend, my lord.

[Alarum still.]

Cl. Fly, fly, my lord! there is no tarrying here.

Bru. Farewell to you;—and you;—and you, Volumnius.—
[Shaking hands severally.]

Strato, thou hast been all this while asleep;

Farewell to thee too, Strato.—Countrymen,

My heart doth joy, that yet in all my life

I found no man, but he was true to me.

I shall have glory by this losing day,

More than Octavius, and Mark Antony,

By this vile conquest shall attain unto.

So, fare you well at once; for Brutus' tongue

Hath almost ended his life's history.

Night hangs upon mine eyes; my bones would rest

That have but labour'd to attain this hour.

[Alarum. Cry within; Fly, fly, fly!]

Cl. Fly, my lord, fly!

Bru. Hence: I will follow.

[Exeunt CLITUS, DARDANIUS, and VOLUMNIUS.]

I pry'thee, Strato, stay thou by thy lord.

Thou art a fellow of a good respect;

Thy life hath had some snatch of honour in it:

Hold, then, my sword, and turn away thy face,

While I do run upon it. Wilt thou, Strato?

Str. Give me your hand first: fare you well, my lord

Bru. Farewell, good Strato.—Cæsar, now be still:

I kill'd not thee with half so good a will.

[He runs on his Sword, and dies.]

Alarum. Retreat. Enter OCTAVIUS, ANTONY, MESSALA, LUCILIUS, and their Army.

Oct. What man is that?

Mes. My master's man.—Strato, where is thy master?

Str. Free from the bondage you are in, Messala:

The conquerors can but make a fire of him;

For Brutus only overcame himself,

And no man else hath honour by his death.

Luc. So Brutus should be found.—I thank thee

Brutus,

That thou hast prov'd Lucilius' saying true.

Oct. All that serv'd Brutus I will entertain them.

Fellow, wilt thou bestow thy time with me?

Str. Ay, if Messala will prefer me to you.

Oct. Do so, good Messala.

Mes. How died my master, Strato?

Str. I held the sword, and he did run on it.

Mes. Octavius, then take him to follow thee,
That did the latest service to my master.

Ant. This was the noblest Roman of them all:

All the conspirators, save only he,
Did that they did in envy of great Cæsar;
He, only, in a generous¹ honest thought
Of² common good to all, made one of them.

His life was gentle; and the elements
So mix'd in him, that Nature might stand up,
And say to all the world, "This was a man!"
¹*Oct.* According to his virtue let us use him,
With all respect, and rites of burial.

Within my tent his bones to-night shall lie,
Most like a soldier, order'd honourably.—
So, call the field to rest; and let's away,
To part the glories of this happy day.

[Exeunt.]

In thunder, lightning, or in rain?
2 Witch. When the hurlyburly's done,
When the battle's lost and won.
3 Witch. That will be ere the set of sun.

SCENE II.—A Camp near Fores.

Sennet within. Enter King DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, LENOX, with Attendants, meeting a bleeding Soldier.

Dun. What bloody man is that? He can report,
As seemeth by his plight, of the revolt
The newest state.

Mal. This is the sergeant,
Who, like a good and hardy soldier, fought
'Gainst my captivity.—Hail, brave friend!
Say to the king thy knowledge of the broil,
As thou didst leave it.

Sold. Doubtful it stood;
As two spent swimmers, that do cling together
And choke their art. The merciless Macdonwald (Worthy to be a rebel, for to that
The multiplying villainies of nature
Do swarm upon him) from the western isles

Of Kernes and Gallowglasses³ is supplied;
And fortune, on his damned quarrel⁴ smiling,
Show'd like a rebel's whore: but all's too weak;
For brave Macbeth (well he deserves that name)
Disdaining fortune, with his brandish'd steel,
Which smok'd with bloody execution,
Like valour's minion, carv'd out his passage,
Till he fac'd the slave;
Which ne'er shook hands, nor bade farewell to him,
'Till he unseam'd him from the nave to the chaps,
And fix'd his head upon our battlements.

Dun. O, valiant cousin! worthy gentleman!
Sold. As whence the sun 'gins his reflexion
Shipwrecking storms and direful thunders break,⁵
So from that spring, whence comfort seem'd to come,
Discomfort swells. Mark, king of Scotland, mark:
No sooner justice had, with valour arm'd,
Compell'd these skipping Kernes to trust their heels,
But the Norwegian lord, surveying vantage,
With furbish'd arms, and new supplies of men,
Began a fresh assault.

Dun. Dismay'd not this
Our captains, Macbeth and Banquo?

Sold. Yes,
As sparrows eagles, or the hare the lion.
If I say sooth, I must report they were
As cannons overcharg'd with double cracks;
So they doubly redoubled strokes upon the foe:
Except they meant to bathe in reeking wounds,
Or memorize another Golgotha,
I cannot tell.—

But I am faint, my gashes cry for help.

Dun. So well thy words become thee, as thy wounds:

¹ A name intimating the sound of that it signifieth, as hurly burly, for an uprore and tumultuous stirre.—Peachment's Garden of Eloquence, 1577. ² A toad. ³ Vide Second Part of Henry VI., Act. iv., Sc. ix. ⁴ quarry: in folio. Johnson made the change. ⁵ Not in first folio. Pope changed "breaking" of second, to "break."

They snack of honour both.—Go, get him surgeons.

[Exit Soldier, attended.

Enter Rosse and Angus.

Who comes here?

Mal. The worthy thane of Rosse.

Len. What haste looks through his eyes!

So should he look, that comes¹ to speak things strange.

Rosse. God save the king!

Dun. Whence cam'st thou, worthy thane?

Rosse. From Fife, great king:

Where the Norweyan banners flout the sky

And fan our people cold.

Norway himself, with terrible numbers,

Assisted by that most disloyal traitor,

The thane of Cawdor, began a dismal conflict,

'Till that Bellona's bridegroom, lapp'd in proof,

Confronted him with self-comparisons,

Point against point, rebellious arm 'gainst arm,

Curbing his lavish spirit: and, to conclude,

The victory fell on us;—

Dun. Great happiness!

Rosse. That now

Sveno, the Norway's king, craves composition;

Nor would we deign him burial of his men,

Till he disbursed at Saint Colmes' Inch

Ten thousand dollars to our general use.

Dun. No more that thane of Cawdor shall deceive

Our bosom interest.—Go, pronounce his present death,

And with his former title greet Macbeth.

Rosse. I'll see it done.

Dun. What he hath lost noble Macbeth hath won.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—A Heath.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

1 Witch. Where hast thou been, sister?

2 Witch. Killing swine.

3 Witch. Sister, where thou?

1 Witch. A sailor's wife had chesnuts in her lap,

And mounch'd, and mounch'd, and mounch'd: "Give me," quoth I:—

"Aroint thee, witch!" the rump-fed ronyon² cries.

Her husband's to Aleppo gone, master of the Tiger:

But in a sieve I'll thither sail,

And, like a rat without a tail,

I'll do, I'll do, and I'll do.

2 Witch. I'll give thee a wind.

1 Witch. Thou art kind.

3 Witch. And I another.

1 Witch. I myself have all the other;

And the very ports they blow,

All the quarters that they know

I'll the shipman's ear to show.³

I'll drain him dry as hay:

Sleep shall, neither night nor day,

Hang upon his pent-house lid;

He shall live a man forbid.

Weary sev'n-nights, nine times nine,

Shall he dwindle, peak, and pine:

Though his bark cannot be lost,

Yet it shall be tempest-toss'd.—

Look what I have.

2 Witch. Show me, show me.

1 Witch. Here I have a pilot's thumb,
Wreck'd as homeward he did come. [Drum within.

3 Witch. A drum! a drum!

Macbeth doth come.

All. The weird⁴ sisters, hand in hand,

Posters of the sea and land,

Thus do go about, about:

Thrice to thine, and thrice to mine,

And thrice again, to make up nine.

Peace!—the charm's wound up.

Enter MACBETH and BANQUO.

Macb. So foul and fair a day I have not seen.

Ban. How far is't called to Fores?—What are these,

So wither'd, and so wild in their attire,

That look not like th' inhabitants o' the earth,

And yet are on't? Live you? or are you aught

That man may question? You seem to understand me,

By each at once her chappy finger laying

Upon her skinny lips. You should be women,

And yet your beards forbid me to interpret

That you are so.

Macb. Speak, if you can.—What are you?

1 Witch. All hail! Macbeth! hail to thee, thane of Glamis!

2 Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee, thane of Cawdor!

3 Witch. All hail, Macbeth! that shalt be king hereafter.

Ban. Good sir, why do you start, and seem to fear

Things that do sound so fair?—I' the name of truth,

Are ye fantastical, or that indeed

Which outwardly ye show? My noble partner

You greet with present grace, and great prediction

Of noble having, and of royal hope,

That he seems rapt withal: to me you speak not.

If you can look into the seeds of time,

And say which grain will grow, and which will not,

Speak then to me, who neither beg, nor fear,

Your favours, nor your hate.

1 Witch. Hail!

2 Witch. Hail!

3 Witch. Hail!

1 Witch. Lesser than Macbeth, and greater.

2 Witch. Not so happy, yet much happier.

3 Witch. Thou shalt get kings, though thou be none.
So, all hail, Macbeth, and Banquo!

1 Witch. Banquo, and Macbeth, all hail!

Macb. Stay, you imperfect speakers, tell me more.

By Sinel's death, I know, I am thane of Glamis;

But how of Cawdor? the thane of Cawdor lives,

A prosperous gentleman; and to be king

Stands not within the prospect of belief,

No more than to be Cawdor. Say, from whence

You owe this strange intelligence? or why

Upon this blasted heath you stop our way

With such prophetic greeting?—Speak, I charge you.

[Witches vanish

Ban. The earth hath bubbles, as the water has,
And these are of them.—Whither have they vanish'd?

Macb. Into the air; and what seem'd corporal, melted
As breath into the wind.—'Would they had stay'd!

Ban. Were such things here, as we do speak about,

Or have we eaten on the insane root⁵,

That takes the reason prisoner?

Macb. Your children shall be kings.

Ban. You shall be king.

Macb. And thane of Cawdor too: went it not so?

Ban. To the self-same tune, and words. Who's here?

Enter Rosse and Angus.

Rosse. The king hath happily receiv'd, Macbeth,

The news of thy success; and when he reads

Thy personal venture in the rebel's fight,

His wonders and his praises do contend,

¹ seems: in f. e. ² Still used in the sense of driving away, or imprecation, in parts of England; "rvnt tree, is a phrase addressed to cows, by milkmaids, when milking. ³ Fr. rogneux, scurf. ⁴ The words "to show," are not in f. e. ⁵ Saxon, weyrd, fatal. ⁶ Hemlock

Which should be thine, or his. Silence'd with that,
In viewing o'er the rest o' the self-same day,
He finds thee in the stout Norwegian ranks,
Nothing a'head of what thyself didst make,
Strange images of death. As thick as tale,¹
Came² post with post; and every one did bear
Thy praises in his kingdom's great defence,
And pour'd them down before him.

Ang. We are sent,
To give thee from our royal master thanks;
Only to herald thee into his sight,
Not pay thee.

Rosse. And, for an earnest of a greater honour,
He bade me from him call thee thane of Cawdor:
In which addition, hail, most worthy thane,
For it is thine.

Ban. What! can the devil speak true?

Macb. The thane of Cawdor lives: why do you
In borrow'd robes? [dress me]

Ang. Who was the thane, lives yet;
But under heavy judgment bears that life
Which he deserves to lose. Whether he was combin'd
With those of Norway, or did line the rebel
With hidden help and vantage, or that with both
He labour'd in his country's wreck, I know not;
But treasons capital, confess'd and prov'd,
Have overthrow'n him.

Macb. Glamis, and thane of Cawdor:
The greatest is behind. [Aside.] Thanks for your pains.—
Do you not hope your children shall be kings,
When those that gave the thane of Cawdor to me,
Promis'd no less to them?

Ban. That, thrusted³ home,
Might yet enkindle you unto the crown,
Besides the thane of Cawdor. But 't is strange:
And oftentimes, to win us to our harm,
The instruments of darkness tell us truths;
Win us with honest trifles, to betray us
In deepest consequence.—
Cousins, a word, I pray you.

Macb. Two truths are told,
As happy prologues to the swelling act
Of the imperial theme. [Aside.] I thank you, gentle-
men.—

This supernatural soliciting
Cannot be ill; cannot be good:—if ill,
Why hath it given me earnest of success,
Commencing in a truth? I am thane of Cawdor:
If good, why do I yield to that suggestion,
Whose horrid image doth unfix my hair,
And make my seated heart knock at my ribs,
Against the use of nature? Present fears
Are less than horrible imaginings.
My thought, where murder yet is but fantastical,
Shakes so my single state of man, that function
Is smother'd in surmise, and nothing is.
But what is not.

Ban. Look, how our partner's rapt.

Macb. If chance will have me king, why, chance may crown me,
Without my stir.

Ban. New honours come upon him,
Like our strange garments, cleave not to their mould,
But with the aid of use.

Macb. Come what come may,
Time and the hour runs through the roughest day.

Ban. Worthy Macbeth, we stay upon your leisure.

Macb. Give me your favour: my dull brain was wrought

With things forgotten.—Kind gentlemen, your pains
Are register'd where every day I turn
The leaf to read them.—Let us toward the king.—
[To Banquo.] Think upon what hath chanc'd: and at more time,

The interim having weigh'd it, let us speak
Our free hearts each to other.

Ban. Very gladly.

Macb. Till then, enough.—Come, friends. [Exeunt]

SCENE IV.—Fores. A Room in the Palace.

Flourish. Enter DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONALBAIN,
LENOX, and Attendants.

Dun. Is execution done on Cawdor? Are not
Those in commission yet return'd?

Mal. My liege,
They are not yet come back: but I have spoke
With one that saw him die, who did report,
That very frankly he confess'd his treasons,
Implor'd your highness' pardon, and set forth
A deep repentance. Nothing in his life
Became him like the leaving it: he died
As one that had been studied in his death,
To throw away the dearest thing he ow'd,
As 't were a careless trifle.

Dun. There's no art
To find the mind's construction in the face:
He was a gentleman on whom I built
An absolute trust.—

Enter MACBETH, BANQUO, ROSSE, and ANGUS.
O worthiest cousin! [Embrace]

The sin of my ingratitude even now
Was heavy on me. Thou art so far before,
That swiftest wind⁴ of recompense is slow
To overtake thee: would thou hadst less deserv'd,
That the proportion both of thanks and payment
Might have been more⁵! only I have left to say,
More is thy due than more than all can pay.

Macb. The service and the loyalty I owe,
In doing it pays itself. Your highness' part
Is to receive our duties: and our duties
Are to your throne and state, children, and servants:
Which do but what they should, by doing every thing
Safe toward your love and honour.

Dun. Welcome hither:
I have begun to plant thee, and will labour
To make thee full of growing.—Noble Banquo,
That hast no less deserv'd, nor must be known
No less to have done so: let me infold thee,
And hold thee to my heart. [Embrace.]

Ban. There if I grow.
The harvest is your own.

Dun. My plenteous joys,
Wanton in fulness, seek to hide themselves
In drops of sorrow.—Sons, kinsmen, thanes,
And you whose places are the nearest, know,
We will establish our estate upon
Our eldest, Malcolm: whom we name hereafter
The prince of Cumberland: which honour must
Not, unaccompanied, invest him only.
But signs of nobleness, like stars, shall shine
On all deserv'ers.—From hence to Inverness.
And bind us farther to you.

Macb. The rest is labour, which is not us'd for you:
I'll be myself the harbinger, and make joyful
The hearing of my wife with your approach;
So, humbly take my leave.

Dun. My worthy Cawdor!

Macb. The prince of Cumberland!—That is a step

¹ Rowe reads: hail. ² Can: in folio. ³ thrusted: in f. e. ⁴ Not in f. e. ⁵ wing: in f. e. ⁶ more: in f. e. ⁷ Not in f. e.

On which I must fall down, or else o'er-leap, [Aside.
For in my way it lies. Stars, hide your fires
Let not light see my black and deep desires;
The eye wink at the hand; yet let that be,
Which the eye fears, when it is done, to see [Exit.

Dun. True, worthy Banquo: he is full so valiant,
And in his commendations I am fed:
It is a banquet to me. Let us after him,
Whose care is gone before to bid us welcome:
It is a peerless kinsman. [Flourish. Exeunt.

SCENE V.—Inverness. A Room in MACBETH'S Castle.

Enter Lady MACBETH. with a letter.

Lady M. [Reads.] "They met me in the day of success; and I have learned by the perfectest report, they have more in them than mortal knowledge. When I burned in desire to question them farther, they made themselves air, into which they vanished. Whiles I stood rapt in the wonder of it, came missives from the king, who all-hailed me, 'Thane of Cawdor;' by which title, before, these weird sisters saluted me, and referred me to the coming on of time, with, 'Hail, king that shalt be!' This have I thought good to deliver thee, my dearest partner of greatness, that thou mightest not lose the dues of rejoicing, by being ignorant of what greatness is promised thee. Lay it to thy heart, and farewell."

Glamis thou art, and Cawdor; and shalt be
What thou art promis'd—Yet I do fear thy nature:
It is too full of the milk of human kindness,
To catch the nearest way. Thou wouldst be great;
Art not without ambition; but without
The illness should attend it: what thou wouldst highly,
That wouldst thou holily; wouldst not play false,
And yet wouldst wrongly win: thou'dst have, great Glamis.

That which cries, "Thus thou must do, if thou have it;
And that which rather thou dost fear to do,
Than wishest should be undone." Hie thee hither,
That I may pour my spirits in thine ear,
And chastise with the valour of my tongue,
All that impedes thee from the golden round,
Which fate and metaphysical aid doth seem
To have thee crown'd withal.—

Enter an Attendant.

What is your tidings?

Atten. The king comes here to-night.

Lady M. Thou'rt mad to say it.
Is not thy master with him? who, were't so,
Would have inform'd for preparation.

Atten. So please you, it is true: our thane is coming.
One of my fellows had the speed of him:
Who, almost dead for breath, had scarcely more
Than would make up his message.

Lady M. Give him tending:
He brings great news. [Exit Attendant.] The raven himself is hoarse,

That croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan
Under my battlements. Come, you spirits
That tend on mortal thoughts, unsex me here,
And fill me from the crown to the toe, top-full
Of direst cruelty: make thick my blood
Stop up th' access and passage to remorse;
That no compunctious visitings of nature
Shake my fell purpose, nor keep peace between
Th' effect and it. Come to my woman's breasts,
And take my milk for gall, you murdering ministers,
Wherever in your sightless substances

You wait on nature's mischief. Come, thick night,
And pall thee in the dunest smoke of hell,
That my keen knife see not the wound it makes,
Nor heaven peep through the blankness of the dark
To cry, "Hold, hold!"—

Enter MACBETH.

Great Glamis! worthy Cawdor!
Greater than both, by the all-hail hereafter!

[They embrace.]
Thy letters have transported me beyond
This ignorant present, and I feel now
The future in the instant.

Macb. My dearest love,

Duncan comes here to-night.

Lady M. And when goes hence?

Macb. To-morrow, as he purposes.

Lady M. O! never Shall sun that morrow see.

Your face, my thane, is as a book, where men
May read strange matters: to beguile the time,
Look like the time; bear welcome in your eye,
Your hand, your tongue: look like the innocent flower
But be the serpent under it. He that's coming Must be provided for; and you shall put
This night's great business into my despatch,
Which shall to all our nights and days to come
Give solely sovereign sway and masterdom.

Macb. We will speak farther.

Lady M. Only look up clear:
To alter favour ever is to fear,
Leave all the rest to me. [Exeunt

SCENE VI.—The Same. Before the Castle.

Enter DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, BANQUO, LENOX, MACDUFF, ROSSE, ANGUS, and Attendants.

Dun. This castle hath a pleasant seat: the air
Nimble and sweetly recommends itself
Unto our gentle senses.

Ban. This guest of summer,
The temple-haunting martlet, does approve,
By his lov'd mansionry, that the heaven's breath
Smells wooingly here: no jutty, frieze,
Buttress, nor coigne of vantage, but this bird
Hath made his pendent bed, and procreant cradle:
Where they much' breed and haunt, I have observ'd.
The air is delicate.

Enter Lady MACBETH.

Dun. See, see! our honour'd hostess.—
The love that follows us sometime is our trouble,
Which still we thank as love: herein I teach you,
How you shall bid God yield us for your pains,
And thank us for your trouble.

Lady M. All our service,
In every point twice done, and then done double,
Were poor and single business to contend
Against those honours deep and broad, wherewith
Your majesty loads our house. For those of old,
And the late dignities heap'd up to them,
We rest your hermits.

Dun. Where's the thane of Cawdor?
We court's him at the heels, and had a purpose
To be his purveyor: but he rides well,
And his great love, sharp as his spur, hath hold him
To his home before us. Fair and noble hostess,
We are your guest to-night.

Lady M. Your servants ever
Have theirs, themselves, and what is theirs, in compt
To make their audit at your highness' pleasure,

¹ blanket: in f.e. ² Not in f.e. ³ most: in f.e.; altered by Rowe, from "must," of folio. ⁴ Breadsmen—bound to pray for a benefactor.

Still to return your own.

Dun. Give me your hand;
Conduct me to mine host: we love him highly,
And shall continue our graces towards him.
By your leave, hostess.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—The Same. A Room in the Castle.

Huntboys and torches. Enter, and pass over the stage, a Sewer,¹ and divers Servants with dishes and service.

Then, enter MACBETH.

Macb. If it were done, when 't is done, then 't were well

It were done quickly: if the assassination
Could trammel up the consequence, and catch
With his surcease success; that but this blow
Might be the be-all and the end-all here.
But here, upon this bank and shoal² of time,
We'd jump the life to come.—But in these cases,
We still have judgment here; that we but teach
Bloody instructions, which, being taught, return
To plague th' inventor: thus³ even-handed justice
Commends th' ingredients of our poison'd chalice
To our own lips. He's here in double trust:
First, as I am his kinsman and his subject;
Strong both against the deed: then, as his host,
Who should against his murderer shut the door,
Not bear the knife myself. Besides, this Duncan
Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been
So clear in his great office, that his virtues
Will plead, like angels trumpet-tongued, against
The deep damnation of his taking-off:
And pity, like a naked new-born babe,
Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubim, hors'd
Upon the sightless couriers of the air,
Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye,
That tears shall drown the wind.—I have no spur
To prick the sides of my intent, but only
Vaulting ambition, which o'er-leaps itself,
And falls on the other.—

Enter Lady MACBETH.

How now! what news?

Lady M. He has almost supp'd. Why have you left the chamber?

Macb. Hath he ask'd for me?

Lady M. Know you not, he has?

Macb. We will proceed no farther in this business: He hath honour'd me of late; and I have bought Golden opinions from all sorts of people, Which would be worn now in their newest gloss, Not cast aside so soon.

Lady M. Was the hope drunk, Wherein you dress'd yourself? hath it slept since, And wakes it now, to look so green and pale

At what it did so freely? From this time, Such I account thy love. Art thou afraid To be the same in thine own act and valour, As thou art in desire? Wouldst thou have that Which thou esteem'st the ornament of life And live a coward in thine own esteem. Letting I dare not wait upon I would, Like the poor cat i' the adage?⁴

Macb.

Pr'ythee, peace.

I dare do all that may become a man;

Who dares do⁵ more is none.

Lady M.

What boast⁶ was't, then,

That made you break this enterprise to me?

When you durst do it, then you were a man;
And, to be more than what you were, you would Be so much more the man. Nor time, nor place,
Did then adhere, and yet you would make both
They have made themselves, and that their fitness new Does unmake you. I have given suck, and know
How tender 't is to love the babe that milks me:
I would, while it was smiling in my face,
Have pluck'd my nipple from his boneless gums,
And dash'd the brains out, had I so sworn as you
Have done to this.

Macb.

If we should fail?

Lady M.

We fail?⁷

But screw your courage to the sticking-place,
And we'll not fail. When Duncan is asleep, (Whereeto the rather shall his day's hard journey Soundly invite him) his two chamberlains
Will I with wine and wassel so convince,⁸
That memory, the warder of the brain,
Shall be a fume, and the receipt of reason
A limbeck only: when in swinish sleep
Their drenched natures lie, as in a death,
What cannot you and I perform upon
Th' unguarded Duncan? what not put upon
His spongy officers, who shall bear the guilt
Of our great quell?⁹

Macb.

Bring forth men-children only!

For thy undaunted mettle should compose
Nothing but males. Will it not be receiv'd
When we have mark'd with blood those sleepy two
Of his own chamber, and us'd their very daggers,
That they have done it?

Lady M.

Who dares receive it other.

As we shall make our griefs and clamour roar
Upon his death?

Macb.

I am settled; and bend up

Each corporal agent to this terrible feat.

Away, and mock the time with fairest show:

False face must hide what the false heart doth know.

[Exeunt]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—The Same. Court within the Castle.

Enter BANQUO, and FLEANCE, with a torch before him.

Ban. How goes the night, boy?

Fle. The moon is down; I have not heard the clock.

Ban. And she goes down at twelve.

Fle. I take't, 't is later, sir.

Ban. Hold, take my sword.—There's husbandry in heaven;

Their candles are all out.—Take thee that too
A heavy summons lies like lead upon me.

And yet I would not sleep: merciful powers!

Restrain in me the cursed thoughts, that nature

Gives way to in repose!—Give me my sword.—

Enter MACBETH, and a Servant with a torch

Who's there?

Macb. A friend.

Ban. What, sir, not yet at rest? The king's a-bed

¹ An officer who placed and removed dishes. ² shoole: in folio. Theobald made the change. ³ this: in f. e. ⁴ "The cat loves fish, but dares not wet her feet." ⁵ no: in folio. ⁶ boast: in f. e. ⁷ Some eds. place an exclamation, or comma, in place of the interrogation point; such, Dyce informs us, was Mrs. Siddons' delivery of the passage—as if "we fail," was the conclusion of MACBETH'S remarks. ⁸ Overpower. ⁹ Murder

He hath been in unusual pleasure, and
Sent forth great largess to your offices.
This diamond he greets your wife withal,
By the name of most kind hostess, and shut up
In measureless content.

Macb. Being unprepar'd
Our will became the servant to defect,
Which else should free have wrought.

Ban. All's well.
I dreamt last night of the three weird sisters:
To you they have show'd some truth.

Macb. I think not of them:
Yet, when we can entreat an hour to serve,
We would spend it in some words upon that business,
If you would grant the time.

Ban. At your kind'st leisure.
Macb. If you shall cleave to my consent, when 't is,
It shall make honour for you.

Ban. So I lose none
In seeking to augment it, but still keep
My bosom franchis'd, and allegiance clear,
I shall be counsell'd.

Macb. Good repose, the while.
Ban. Thanks, sir: be the like to you.

[Exeunt BANQUO and FLEANCE.
Macb. Go: bid thy mistress, when my drink is ready,
She strike upon the bell. Get thee to bed.—
[Exit Servant.

Is this a dagger, which I see before me,
The handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch
thee:—

I have thee not, and yet I see thee still.
Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible
To feeling, as to sight? or art thou but
A dagger of the mind, a false creation,
Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain?
I see thee yet, in form as palpable
As this which now I draw.

Thou marshall'st me the way that I was going;
And such an instrument I was to use.—
Mine eyes are made the fools o' the other senses,
Or else worth all the rest: I see thee still;
And on thy blade, and dudgeon¹, gouts of blood,
Which was not so before.—There 's no such thing:
It is the bloody business, which informs
Thus to mine eyes.—Now o'er the one half world
Nature seems dead, and wicked dreams abuse
The curtain'd sleeper;² witchcraft celebrates
Pale Hecate's offerings; and wither'd murder,
Alarum'd by his sentinel the wolf,
Whose howl 's his watch, thus with his stealthy pace,
With Tarquin's ravishing strides,³ towards his design
Moves like a ghost.—Thou sure and firm-set earth,
Hear not my steps, which way they walk, for fear
The very stones prate of my where-about,
And take the present horror from the time,
Which now shows with it.—While I threat, he lives:
Words to the heat of deeds too cold breath gives.

[A bell rings.

I go, and it is done: the bell invites me.
Hear it not, Duncan: for it is a knell,
That summons thee to heaven or to hell.

[Exit.

SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter Lady MACBETH.

Lady M. That which hath made them drunk hath made me bold: [Peace!
What hath quench'd them hath given me fire.—Hark!—

It was the owl that shriek'd, the fatal bellman,
Which gives the stern'st good-night. He is about it.
The doors are open; and the surfeited grooms
Do mock their charge with snores: I have drugg'd them
possets,

That death and nature do contend about them,
Whether they live, or die.

Macb. [Within.] Who 's there?—what, ho!
Lady M. Alack! I am afraid they have awak'd,
And 't is not done:—the attempt, and not the deed,
Confounds us.—Hark!—I laid their daggers ready,
He could not miss them.—Had he not resembled
My father as he slept, I had done 't.—My husband?

Enter MACBETH.

Macb. I have done the deed.—Didst thou not hear a noise?

Lady M. I heard the owl scream, and the crickets cry.
Did not you speak?

Macb. When?
Lady M. Now.

Macb. As I descended?

Lady M. Ay.

Macb. Hark!—

Who lies i' the second chamber?

Lady M. Donalbain.

Lady M. A foolish thought to say a sorry sight.

Macb. There 's one did laugh in 's sleep, and one cried, "murder!"

That they did wake each other: I stood and heard them;
But they did say their prayers, and address'd them
Again to sleep.

Lady M. There are two lodg'd together.

Macb. One cried "God bless us!" and "Amen," the other,

As they had seen me with these hangman's hands.

Listening their fear, I could not say amen,

When they did say God bless us.

Lady M. Consider it not so deeply

Macb. But wherefore could not I pronounce amen?

I had most need of blessing, and amen

Stuck in my throat.

Lady M. These deeds must not be thought

After these ways: so, it will make us mad.

Macb. Methought, I heard a voice cry, "Sleep no more!

Macbeth does murder sleep,"—the innocent sleep;

Sleep, that knits up the ravell'd sleeve⁴ of care,

The death of each day's life, sore labour's bath,

Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second course,

Chief nourisher in life's feast.—

Lady M. What do you mean?

Macb. Still it cried, "Sleep no more!" to all the house:

"Glamis hath murder'd sleep, and therefore Cawdor Shall sleep no more: Macbeth shall sleep no more!"

Lady M. Who was it that thus cried? Why, worthy thane,

You do unbend your noble strength, to think
So brainsickly of things. Go, get some water,
And wash this filthy witness from your hand.—
Why did you bring these daggers from the place?
They must lie there: go, carry them, and smear
The sleepy grooms with blood.

Macb. I'll go no more:

I am afraid to think what I have done;

Look on't again, I dare not.

Lady M. Infirm of purpose!

¹ Root of box-wood, of which dagger handles were made. ² sleep: in f. e. ³ sides: in folio. Pope made the change. ⁴ Tawny

Give me the daggers. The sleeping, and the dead,
Are but as pictures: 't is the eye of childhood
That fears a painted devil. If he do bleed,
I'll gild the faces of the grooms withal,
For it must seem their guilt. [Exit.—Knocking within.
Macb. Whence is that knocking?—
How is 't with me, when every noise appals me?
What hands are here! Ha! they pluck out mine eyes.
Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this blood
Clean from my hand? No; this my hand will rather
The multitudinous seas incarnardine,
Making the green one red!

Re-enter Lady MACBETH.

Lady M. My hands are of your colour; but I shame
To wear a heart so white. [Knock.] I hear a knocking
At the south entry:—retire we to our chamber.
A little water clears us of this deed:—
How easy is it, then? Your constancy
Hath left you unattended.—[Knock.] Hark! more knocking.

Get on your nightgown, lest occasion call us,
And show us to be watchers.—Be not lost
So poorly in your thoughts.

Macb. To know my deed, 't were best not know myself. [Knock.]

Wake Duncan with thy knocking: I would thou couldst! [Exitunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same.

Enter a Porter. [Knocking within.]

Porter. Here's a knocking, indeed! If a man were porter of hell-gate, he should have old² turning the key.
[Knocking.] Knock, knock, knock. Who's there,
't the name of Beelzebub?—Here's a farmer, that hanged himself on the expectation of plenty: come in time; have napkins enough about you; here you'll sweat for 't. [Knocking.] Knock, knock. Who's there, in the other devil's name?—Faith, here's an equivocator, that could swear in both the scales against either scale; who committed treason enough for God's sake, yet could not equivocate to heaven: O! come in, equivocator.
[Knocking.] Knock, knock, knock. Who's there?—Faith, here's an English tailor come hither for stealing out of a French goose: come in, tailor;
here you may roast your goose. [Knocking.] Knock, knock. Never at quiet! What are you?—But this place is too cold for hell. I'll devil-porter it no farther:
I had thought to have let in some of all professions,
that go the primrose way to the everlasting bonfire.
[Knocking.] Anon, anon: I pray you, remember the porter. [Opens the gate.]

Enter MACDUFF and LENOX.

Macd. Was it so late, friend, ere you went to bed,
That you do lie so late?

Port. 'Faith, sir, we were carousing till the second cock; and drink, sir, is a great provoker of three things.

Macd. What three things does drink especially provoke?

Port. Marry, sir, nose-painting, sleep, and urine.
Lechery, sir, it provokes, and unprovokes: it provokes the desire, but it takes away the performance. Therefore, much drink may be said to be an equivocator with lechery: it makes him, and it mars him; it sets him on, and it takes him off; it persuades him, and disheartens him; makes him stand to, and not stand to: in conclusion, equivocates him a-sleep, and, giving him the lie, leaves him.

Macd. I believe, drink gave thee the lie last night.

Port. That it did, sir, i' the very throat on me: but I requited him for his lie; and, I think, being too strong for him, though he took up my legs sometime, yet I made a shift to cast him.

Macd. Is thy master stirring?—

Enter MACBETH, in his night-gown.

Our knocking has awak'd him; here he comes.

Len. Good-morrow, noble sir.

Macb.

Good-morrow, both

Macd. Is the king stirring, worthy thane?

Macb.

Not yet

Macd. He did command me to call timely on him:

I have almost slipp'd the hour.

Macb.

I'll bring you to him.

Macd. I know, this is a joyful trouble to you:

But yet, 't is one.

Macb. The labour we delight in physics pain.

This is the door.

Macd. I'll make so bold to call.

For 't is my limited service.

[Exit MACDUFF.]

Len. Goes the king hence to-day?

Macb.

He does:—he did appoint so

Len. The night has been unruly: where we lay,
Our chimneys were blown down; and, as they say,
Lamentings heard i' the air; strange screams of death
And prophesying with accents terrible
Of dire combustion, and confus'd events,
New hatch'd to the woeful time. The obscure bird
Clamour'd the livelong night: some say, the earth
Was feverous, and did shake.

Macb.

'T was a rough night.

Len. My young remembrance cannot parallel
A fellow to it.

Re-enter MACDUFF.

Macd. O horror! horror! horror! Tongue, nor heart,
Cannot conceive, nor name thee.

Macb.

Len. What 's the matter?

Macd. Confusion now hath made his master-piece.

Most sacrilegious murder hath broke ope
The Lord's anointed temple, and stole thence
The life of the building.

Macb. What is 't you say? the life?

Len. Mean you his majesty?

Macd. Approach the chamber, and destroy your sight
With a new Gorgon.—Do not bid me speak:
See, and then speak yourselves.—Awake! awake!

[Exit MACBETH and LENOX]

Ring the alarum-bell!—Murder, and treason!
Banquo, and Donalbain! Malcolm, awake!
Shake off this downy sleep, death's counterfeits,
And look on death itself: up, up, and see
The great doom's image!—Malcolm! Banquo!
As from your graves rise up, and walk like sprites
To countenance this horror. Ring the bell! [Bell rings]

Enter Lady MACBETH.

Lady M. What 's the business?

That such a hideous trumpet calls to parley
The sleepers of the house? speak, speak!

Macd.

O, gentle lady

'T is not for you to hear what I can speak:

The repetition, in a woman's ear,

*Enter BANQUO unready.

Would murder as it fell.—O Banquo! Banquo!

Our royal master's murder'd!

Lady M.

Woe, alas!

What! in our house?

Ban.

Too cruel, any where.

Dear Duff, I pry'thee, contradict thyself,

¹ So the old copies; some mss. eds. read: the green—one red.

² Used, as often, as an augmentative.

³ The rest of this direction is as in f. a. ⁴ This word is not in f. a.

And say, it is not so.

Re-enter MACBETH and LENOX.

Macb. Had I but died an hour before this chance,
I had liv'd a blessed time, for from this instant
There's nothing serious in mortality;
All is but toys: renown and grace are dead;
The wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees left this vault to brag of.

Enter MALCOLM and DONALBAIN.

Don. What is amiss?

Macb. You are, and do not know 't:
The spring, the head, the fountain of your blood is stopp'd; the very source of it is stopp'd.

Macd. Your royal father's murder'd.

Mal. O! by whom?

Len. Those of his chamber, as it seem'd, had done 't.
Their hands and faces were all badg'd with blood;
So were their daggers, which, unwip'd, we found
Upon their pillows: they star'd, and were distracted.
No man's life was to be trusted with them.

Macb. O! yet I do repent me of my fury,
That I did kill them.

Macd. Wherefore did you so?

Macb. Who can be wise, amaz'd, temperate and furious,

Loyal and neutral, in a moment? No man:

The expedition of my violent love

Out-run the pauser reason.—Here lay Duncan,

His silver skin lac'd with his golden blood;

And his gash'd stabs look'd like a breach in nature

For ruin's wasteful entrance: there, the murderers,

Steep'd in the colours of their trade, their daggers

Unmanly breech'd with gore. Who could refrain,

That had a heart to love, and in that heart

Courage to make 's love known?

Lady M. Help me hence, ho!

Macd. Look to the lady. [Lady MACBETH swoons.]

Mal. Why do we hold our tongues,

That most may claim this argument for ours?

Don. What should be spoken

Here, where our fate, hid in an auger-hole,

May rush, and seize us? Let's away: our tears

Are not yet brew'd.

Mal. Nor our strong sorrow

Upon the foot of motion.

Ban. Look to the lady.— [Lady MACB. is borne out.]

And when we have our naked frailties hid,

That suffer in exposure, let us meet,

And question this most bloody piece of work,

To know it farther. Fears and scruples shake us:

In the great hand of God I stand; and, thence,

Against the undivulg'd pretence? I fight

Of treasonous malice.

Macd. And so do I.

All. So all.

Macb. Let's briefly put on manly readiness, and meet i' the hall together.

All. Well contented.

[Exeunt all but MAL. and DON.]

Mal. What will you do? Let's not consort with them:
To show an unfelt sorrow is an office

Which the false man does easy. I'll to England.

Don. To Ireland, I: our separated fortune

Shall keep us both the safer, where we are,

There's daggers in men's smiles: the near in blood,

The nearer bloody.

Mal.

This murderous shaft that's shot
Hath not yet lighted, and our safest way
Is to avoid the aim: therefore, to horse;
And let us not be dainty of leave-taking,
But shift away. There's warrant in that theft
Which steals itself, when there's no mercy left.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Without the Castle.

Enter ROSSE and an Old Man.

Old M. Threescore and ten I can remember well;
Within the volume of which time I have seen
Hours dreadful, and things strange, but this sore night
Hath trifled former knowings.

Rosse. Ah! good father,
Thou seest, the heavens, as troubled with man's act,
Threaten his bloody stage: by the clock 't is day,
And yet dark night strangles the travelling lamp.
Is 't night's predominance, or the day's shame,
That darkness does the face of earth entomb,
When living light should kiss it?

Old M. 'T is unnatural,
Even like the deed that's done. On Tuesday last,
A falcon, towering in her pride of place,
Was by a mousing owl hawk'd at, and kill'd.

Rosse. And Duncan's horses (a thing most strange and certain)

Beauteous and swift, the minions of their race,
Turn'd wild in nature, broke their stalls, flung out,
Contending 'gainst obedience, as they would Make war with mankind.

Old M. 'T is said, they ate each other.

Rosse. They did so; to th' amazement of mine eyes.
That look'd upon 't. Here comes the good Macduff.—

Enter MACDUFF.

How goes the world, sir, now?

Macd. Why, see you not?

Rosse. Is 't known who did this more than bloody deed?

Macd. Those that Macbeth hath slain.

Rosse. Alas, the day!

What good could they pretend?

Macd. They were suborn'd.

Malcolm, and Donalbain, the king's two sons,
Are stol'n away and fled; which puts upon them
Suspicion of the deed.

Rosse. 'Gainst nature still:

Thrifless ambition, that will ravin up

Thine own life's means!—Then, 't is most like,

The sovereignty will fall upon Macbeth.

Macd. He is already nam'd, and gone to Scone
To be invested.

Rosse. Where is Duncan's body?

Macd. Carried to Colme-kill;

The sacred store-house of his predecessors,
And guardian of their bones.

Rosse. Will you to Scone?

Macd. No, cousin; I'll to Fife.

Rosse. Well, I will thither

Macd. Well, may you see things well done there:—
adieu—

Lest our old robes sit easier than our new!

Rosse. Farewell, father.

Old M. God's benison go with you; and with those,
That would make good of bad, and friends of foes!

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Fores. A Room in the Palace.

Enter Banquo.

Ban. Thou hast it now, king, Cawdor, Glamis, all,
As the weird women promis'd; and, I fear,
Thou play'st most foully for 't: yet it was said,
It should not stand in thy posterity;
But that myself should be the root, and father
Of many kings. If there come truth from them,
(As upon thee, Macbeth, their speeches show)
Why, by the verities on thee made good,
May they not be my oracles as well,
And set me up in hope? But, hush! no more.

Sennet. Enter MACBETH, as King; Lady MACBETH, as Queen; LENOX, ROSSE, Lords, Ladies, and Attendants.

Macb. Here's our chief guest.

Lady M. If he had been forgotten,
It had been as a gap in our great feast,
And all things unbecoming.

Macb. To-night we hold a solemn supper, sir,
And I'll request your presence.

Ban. Lay your highness¹
Command upon me, to the which my duties
Are with a most indissoluble tie
For ever knit.

Macb. Ride you this afternoon?

Ban. Ay, my good lord.

Macb. We should have else desir'd your good advice
(Which still hath been both grave and prosperous)
In this day's council; but we'll take to-morrow.
Is't far you ride?

Ban. As far, my lord, as will fill up the time
'Twixt this and supper: go not my horse the better,
I must become the borrower of the night
For a dark hour, or twain.

Macb. Fail not our feast.

Ban. My lord, I will not.

Macb. We hear, our bloody cousins are bestow'd
In England, and in Ireland; not confessing
Their cruel parricide, filling their hearers
With strange invention. But of that to-morrow;
When, therewithal, we shall have cause of state
Craving us jointly. Hie you to horse: adieu.
Till you return at night. Goes Fiancee with you?

Ban. Ay, my good lord, our time does call upon us.

Macb. I wish your horses swift, and sure of foot;
And so I do commend you to their backs.

Farewell.— [Exit Banquo.]

Let every man be master of his time
Till seven at night. To make society
The sweeter welcome, we will keep ourself
Till supper time alone: while then, God be with you.

[Exeunt Lady MACBETH, Lords, Ladies, &c.]
Sirrah, a word with you. Attend those men
Our pleasure?

Atten. They are, my lord, without the palace gate.

Macb. Bring them before us.— [Exit Atten.] To be thus is nothing,

But to be safely thus.—Our fears in Banquo
Stick deep, and in his royalty of nature
Reigns that which would be fear'd; 't is much he dares;
And to that dauntless temper of his mind,
He hath a wisdom that doth guide his valour
To act in safety. There is none but he Whose being I do fear, and under him

My genius is rebuk'd, as, it is said,
Mark Antony's was by Cæsar. He chid the sisters
When first they put the name of king upon me,
And bade them speak to him; then, prophet-like,
They hail'd him father to a line of kings.
Upon my head they plac'd a fruitless crown,
And put a barren sceptre in my gripe,
Thence to be wrench'd with an unlineal hand,
No son of mine succeeding. If't be so,
For Banquo's issue have I fil'd² my mind,
For them the gracious Duncan have I murder'd;
Put rancours in the vessel of my peace
Only for them: and mine eternal jewel
Given to the common enemy of man.
To make them kings, the seed of Banquo kings!
Rather than so, come, fate, into the list,
And champion me to the utterance³.—Who's there?

Re-enter Attendant, with two Murderers.

Now, go to the door, and stay there till we call.

[Exit Attendant]

Was it not yesterday we spoke together?

1 Mur. It was, so please your highness.

Macb. Well then, now
Have you consider'd of my speeches? Know,
That it was he, in the times past, which held you
So under fortune; which, you thought, had been
Our innocent self. This I made good to you
In our last conference; pass'd in probation with you.
How you were borne in hand; how cross'd; the instruments;

Who wrought with them; and all things else, that might,
To half a soul, and to a notion craz'd,
Say, "Thus did Banquo."

1 Mur. You made it known to us

Macb. I did so; and went farther, which is now

Our point of second meeting. Do you find
Your patience so predominant in your nature,
That you can let this go? Are you so gospell'd
To pray for this good man, and for his issue,
Whose heavy hand hath bow'd you to the grave,
And beggar'd yours for ever?

1 Mur. We are men, my liege

Macb. Ay, in the catalogue ye go for men.

As hounds, and greyhounds, mongrels, spaniels, curs,
Shoughs, water-rugs, and demi-wolves, are cleped
All by the name of dogs: the valued file
Distinguishes the swift, the slow, the subtle,
The house-keeper, the hunter, every one
According to the gift which bounteous nature
Hath in him clos'd, whereby he does receive
Particular addition from the quill
That writes them all alike; and so of men.
Now, if you have a station in the file
Not i' the worst rank of manhood, say it,
And I will put that business in your bosoms,
Whose execution takes your enemy off,
Grapples you to the heart and love of us,
Who wear our health but sickly in his life,
Which in his death were perfect.

2 Mur. I am one, my liege.

Whom the vile blows and buffets of the world
Have so incens'd, that I am reckless what
I do to spite the world.

1 Mur. And I another.
So wearied with disasters, tugg'd with fortune,
That I would set my life on any chance,

¹ Let your highness: in f. e. ² Defiled. ³ Fr. à l'outrance, extremity.

To mend it, or be rid on 't.

Macb. Both of you
Know Banquo was your enemy.

2 Mur. True, my lord.

Macb. So is he mine; and in such bloody distance,
That every minute of his being thrusts
Against my near'st of life. And though I could
With bare-fac'd power sweep him from my sight,
And bid my will avenge it, yet I must not,
For certain friends that are both his and mine,
Whose loves I may not drop, but wail his fall
Whom I myself struck down: and thence it is,
That I to your assistance do make love,
Masking the business from the common eye
For sundry weighty reasons.

2 Mur. We shall, my lord,
Perform what you command us.

1 Mur. Though our lives—

Macb. Your spirits shine through you. Within this hour, at most,

will advise you where to plant yourselves,
Acquaint you, with a perfect spy, o' the time,
The moment on 't; for 't must be done to-night,
And something from the palace; always thought,
That I require a clearness: and with him.
(To leave no rubs, nor botches, in the work)
Fleance his son, that keeps him company,
Whose absence is no less material to me
Than is his father's, must embrace the fate
Of that dark hour. Resolve yourselves apart:
I'll come to you anon.

2 Mur. We are resolv'd, my lord.

Macb. I'll call upon you straight: abide within.
[Exeunt Murderers.]

It is concluded: Banquo, thy soul's flight,
If it find heaven, must find it out to-night. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Room.

Enter Lady Macbeth and a Servant.

Lady M. Is Banquo gone from court?

Serv. Ay, madam, but returns again to-night.

Lady M. Say to the king, I would attend his leisure
For a few words.

Serv. Madam, I will. [Exit.]

Lady M. Nought's had, all's spent,
Where our desire is got without content:
T is safer to be that which we destroy,
Than by destruction dwell in doubtful joy.

Enter Macbeth.

How now, my lord! why do you keep alone,
Of sorriest fancies your companions making,
Using those thoughts, which should indeed have died
With them they think on? Things without remedy,
Should be without regard: what's done, is done.

Macb. We have scotch'd the snake, nor kill'd it:
She'll close, and be herself, whilst our poor malice
Remains in danger of her former tooth.

But let the eternal form of things disjoint,
Both the worlds suffer,

Ere we will eat our meal in fear, and sleep
In the affliction of these terrible dreams,

That shake us nightly. Better be with the dead,

Whom we to gain our peace have sent to peace,

Than on the torture of the mind to lie

In restless ecstasy. Duncan is in his grave;

After life's fitful fever, he sleeps well;

Treason has done his worst: nor steel, nor poison,

Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing

Can touch him farther!

Lady M.

Come on:

Gentle my lord, sleek o'er your rugged locks;

Be bright and jovial 'mong your guests to-night!

Macb. So shall I, love; and so, I pray, be you
Let your remembrance apply to Banquo:

Present him eminence, both with eye and tongue

Unsafe the while, that we must lave our honours

In these flattering streams, and make our faces

Vizards to our hearts, disguising what they are.

Lady M. You must leave this.

Macb. O! full of scorpions is my mind, dear wife
Thou know'st that Banquo and his Fleance live.

Lady M. But in their nature's copy 's not eterne.

Macb. There's comfort yet; they are adorable.

Then, be thou jocund. Ere the bat hath flown

His cloister'd flight; ere to black Hecate's summons

The shard-borne¹ beetle, with his drowsy hums,

Hath rung night's yawning peal, there shall be done

A deed of dreadful note.

Lady M.

What's to be done?

Macb. Be innocent of the knowledge, dearest chuck,

Till thou applaud the deed. Come, seeling² night,

Scarf up the tender eye of pitiful day,

And with thy bloody and invisible hand,

Cancel, and tear to pieces, that great bond

Which keeps me pale!—Light thickens; and the crow

Makes wing to the rooky wood:

Good things of day begin to droop and drowse,

Whiles night's black agents to their preys do rouse.

Thou marvell'st at my words; but hold thee still:

Things, bad begun, make strong themselves by ill.

So, pr'ythee, go with me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Park, with a road leading to the Palace.

Enter three Murderers.

1 Mur. But who did bid thee join with us?

3 Mur. Macbeth

2 Mur. He needs not our mistrust; since he delivers
Our offices, and what we have to do,
To thy direction just.

1 Mur. Then stand with us.

The west yet glimmers with some streaks of day.

Now spurs the lated traveller anace,

To gain the timely inn; and here³ approaches

The subject of our watch.

3 Mur. Hark! I hear horses.

Ban. [Within.] Give us a light there, ho!

2 Mur. Then, 't is he: the rest

That are within the note of expectation,

Already are i' the court.

1 Mur. His horses go about.

3 Mur. Almost a mile: but he does usually,

So all men do, from hence to the palace gate

Make it their walk.

Enter Banquo and Fleance, with a torch.

2 Mur. A light, a light!

3 Mur.

'T is he.

1 Mur. Stand t' t.

Ban. It will be rain to-night.

1 Mur. Let it come down. [Strikes Banquo

Ban. O, treachery! Fly, good Fleance, fly, fly, fly!

Thou may'st revenge.—O slave! [Dies. FLE. escapes

3 Mur. Who did strike out the light?

1 Mur. Was 't not the way?

3 Mur. There's but one down: the son is fled.

2 Mur. We have lost best half of our affair.

1 Mur. Well, let's away, and say how much is done

[Exeunt]

SCENE IV.—A Room of State in the Palace.

A Banquet prepared. Enter MACBETH, Lady MACBETH, ROSSE, LENOX, Lords, and Attendants.

Macb. You know your own degrees ; sit down : at first and last the hearty welcome.

Lords. Thanks to your majesty.

Macb. Ourself will mingle with society,
And play the humble host.
Our hostess keeps her state ; but in best time
We will require her welcome.

Lady M. Pronounce it for me, sir, to all our friends ;
For my heart speaks, they are welcome.

Macb. See, they encounter thee with their hearts' thanks.

Both sides are even : here I'll sit i' the midst.
Be large in mirth : anon, we'll drink a measure

Enter first Murderer, to the door.

The table round.—There's blood upon thy face.

Mur. 'T is Banquo's then.

Macb. 'T is better thee without, than him within.
as he despatch'd ?

Mur. My lord, his throat is cut ; that I did for him.

Macb. Thou art the best o' the cut-throats ;
Yet he is good, that did the like for France :
If thou didst it, thou art the nonpareil.

Mur. Most royal sir, Fleance is 'scap'd.

Macb. Then comes my fit again : I had else been Whole as the marble, founded as the rock, [perfect ;
As broad and general as the easing air ;
But now, I am cabin'd, cribb'd, confin'd, bound in
To saney doubts and fears.—But Banquo's safe ?

Mur. Ay, my good lord, safe in a ditch he bides,
With twenty trench'd gashes on his head,
The least a death to nature.

Macb. Thanks for that.—

There the grown serpent lies : the worm, that's fled,
Hath nature that in time will venom breed,
No teeth for the present.—Get thee gone : to-morrow
We'll hear ourselves again. [Exit Murderer.

Lady M. My royal lord,
You do not give the cheer : the feast is sold,
That is not often vouch'd the while 't is making ;
'T is given with welcome. To feed were best at home ;
From thence the sauce to meat is ceremony ;
Meeting were bare without it.

Macb. Sweet remembrancer !—
Now, good digestion wait on appetite,
And health on both !

Len. May it please your highness sit ?

[The Ghost of Banquo enters, and sits in MACBETH'S place.

Macb. Here had we now our country's honour roof'd,
Were the grac'd person of our Banquo present ;
Who may I rather challenge for unkindness,
Than pity for mischance !

Rosse. His absence, sir,
Lays blame upon his promise. Please it your highness
To grace us with your royal company ?

Macb. The table's full.

Len. Here is a place reserv'd, sir.
[Pointing to the Ghost.]

Macb. Where ?

Len. Here, my good lord. What is 't that moves your highness ?

Macb. Which of you have done this ?

Lords. What, my good lord ?

Macb. Thou canst not say, I did it : never shake
Thy gory locks at me.

Rosse. Gentlemen, rise ; his highness is not well.
Lady M. Sit, worthy friends. My lord is often thus
And hath been from his youth : pray you, keep seat.
The fit is momentary ; upon a thought

He will again be well. If much you note him
You shall offend him, and extend his passion ;
Feed, and regard him not.—Are you a man ?

[Coming to MACBETH : aside to him]

Macb. Ay, and a bold one, that dare look on that
Which might appal the devil.

Lady M. O, proper stuff !

This is the very painting of your fear :

This is the air-drawn dagger, which, you said,

Led you to Duncan. O ! these flaws, and starts,

(Impostors to true fear) would well become

A woman's story at a winter's fire,

Authoriz'd by her grandam. Shame itself !

Why do you make such faces ? When all's done,
You look but on a stool.

Macb. Pr'ythee, see there ! behold ! look ! lo ! how say you ?—

Why, what care I ? If thou canst nod, speak too.—

If charnel-houses, and our graves, must send

Those that we bury back, our monuments

Shall be the maws of kites. [Exit Ghost.

Lady M. What ! quite unmann'd in folly ?

Macb. If I stand here, I saw him.

Lady M. Fie ! for shame !

Macb. Blood hath been shed ere now, i' th' olden time,

Ere human statute purg'd the gentle weal ;

Ay, and since too, murders have been perform'd

Too terrible for the ear : the times have been.

That when the brains were out the man would die,

And there an end ; but now, they rise again

With twenty mortal murders on their crowns,

And push us from our stools. This is more strange

Than such a murder is.

Lady M. My worthy lord, [Going back to her state.]

Your noble friends do lack you.

Macb. I do forget.—

Do not muse at me, my most worthy friends ;
I have a strange infirmity, which is nothing

To those that know me. Come, love and health to all !

Then, I'll sit down.—Give me some wine : fill full.—

I drink to the general joy of the whole table.

And to our dear friend Banquo, whom we miss :

Re-enter Ghost.

Would he were here ! to all, and him, we thirst

And all to all.

Lords. Our duties, and the pledge.

Macb. Avaunt ! and quit my sight. Let the earth hide thee !

Thy bones are marrowless, thy blood is cold ;

Thou hast no speculation in those eyes,

Which thou dost glare with.

Lady M. Think of this, good peers,

But as a thing of custom : 't is no other ;

Only it spoils the pleasure of the time

Macb. What man dare, I dare :

Approach thou like the rugged Russian bear,

The arm'd rhinoceros, or the Hyrcan tiger ;

Take any shape but that, and my firm nerves

Shall never tremble : or, be alive again,

And dare me to the desert with thy sword ;

If trembling I exhibit, then protest me

The baby of a girl. Hence, horrible shadow !

[Exit Ghost]

Unreal mockery, hence !—Why, so —being gone,

I am a man again.—Pray you, sit still.

Lady M. You have displac'd the mirth, broke the good meeting.

With most admir'd disorder.

Macb. Can such things be,

And overcome us like a summer's cloud,
Without our special wonder? You make me strange,
Even to the disposition that I owe,
When now I think you can behold such sights,
And keep the natural ruby of your cheeks,
When mine are blanch'd with fear.

Rosse. What sights, my lord?

Lady M. I pray you, speak not: he grows worse and worse;

Question craves him. At once, good night:

Stand not upon the order of your going,

But go at once.

Len. Good night; and better health

Attend his majesty.

Lady M. A kind good night to all!

[Exeunt Lords and Attendants.]

Macb. It will have blood, they say; blood will have blood:

Stones have been known to move, and trees to speak;
Augurs, and understood relations, have
By magot-pies, and choughs, and rooks, brought forth
The secret'st man of blood.—What is the night?

Lady M. Almost at odds with morning, which is which.

Macb. How say'st thou, that Macduff denies his person.

At our great bidding?

Lady M. Did you send to him, sir?

Macb. I hear it by the way; but I will send.

There's not a one of them, but in his house

I'll keep a servant feed'd. I will to-morrow,

And betimes I will) to the weird sisters:

More shall they speak; for now I am bent to know,

By the worst means, the worst. For mine own good,

All causes shall give way: I am in blood

Stept in so far, that, should I wade no more,

Returning were as tedious as go o'er.

Strange things I have in head, that will to hand,

Which must be acted ere they may be seann'd.

Lady M. You lack the season of all natures, sleep.

Macb. Come, we'll to sleep. My strange and self-abuse

Is the intimate fear, that wants hard use:

We are yet but young in deed.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—The Heath.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches, meeting HECATE.

1 Witch. Why, how now, Hecate! you look angerly.

Hec. Have I not reason, beldams as you are,

Acquy and over-bold? How did you dare

To trade and traffic with Macbeth,

In riddles, and affairs of death;

And I, the mistress of your charms,

The close contriver of all harms,

Was never call'd to bear my part,

Or show the glory of our art?

And, which is worse, all you have done

Hath been but for a wayward son,

Spiteful and wrathful; who, as others do,

Loves for his own ends, not for you.

But make amends now: get you gone,

And at the pit of Acheron

Meet me i' the morning: thither he

Will come to know his destiny.

Your vessels, and your spells, provide,

Your charms, and every thing beside.

I am for the air; this night I'll spend

Unto a dismal and a fatal end:

Great business must be wrought ere noon.

Upon the corner of the moon

There hangs a vaporous drop profound;

I'll catch it ere it come to ground:

And that, distill'd by magic sleights,

Shall raise such artificial sprites,

As by the strength of their illusion,

Shall draw him on to his confusion.

He shall spurn fate, scorn death, and bear

His hopes 'bove wisdom, grace, and fear;

And, you all know, security

Is mortals' chiefest enemy.

Song. [Within.] Come away, come away, &c.

Hark! I am call'd: my little spirit, see.

Sits in a foggy cloud, and stays for me. [Exit HECATE.]

1 Witch. Come, let's make haste: she'll soon be back again. [Exeunt Witches]

SCENE VI.—Fores. A Room in the Palace.

Enter LENOX and another Lord.

Len. My former speeches have but hit your thoughts,
Which can interpret farther: only, I say,

Things have been strangely borne. The gracious
Duncan

Was pitied of Macbeth:—marry, he was dead;

And the right valiant Banquo walk'd too late;

Whom, you may say, if't please you, Fleance kill'd,

For Fleance fled. Men must not walk too late.

Who cannot want the thought, how monstrous

It was for Malcolm, and for Donalbain,

To kill their gracious father? damned fact!

How it did grieve Macbeth! did he not straight,

In pious rage the two delinquents tear,

That were the slaves of drink, and thralls of sleep?

Was not that nobly done? Ay, and wisely, too;

For 't would have anger'd any heart alive,

To hear the men deny't. So that, I say,

He has borne all things well; and I do think,

That had he Duncan's sons under his key,

(As, an't please heaven, he shall not) they should find

What 't were to kill a father; so should Fleance.

But, peace!—for from broad words, and 'cause he fail'd

His presence at the tyrant's feast, I hear,

Macduff lives in disgrace. Sir, can you tell

Where he bestows himself?

Lord.

The son of Duncan,

From whom this tyrant holds the due of birth,

Lives in the English court; and is receiv'd

Of the most pious Edward with such grace,

That the malevolence of fortune nothing

Takes from his high respect. Thither Macduff

Is gone, to pray the holy king upon his aid

To wake Northumberland, and warlike Siward;

That by the help of these, (with Him above

To ratify the work) we may again

Give to our tables meat, sleep to our nights,

Free from our feasts and banquets bloody knives,

Do faithful homage, and receive free honours,

All which we pine for now. And this report

Hath so exasperate the king, that he

Prepares for some attempt of war.

Len.

Sent he to Macduff?

Lord. He did: and with an absolute, "Sir, not I!"

The cloudy messenger turns me his back,

And hums, as who should say, "You'll rue the time

That clogs me with this answer."

Len. And that well might Advise him to a caution, to hold what distance
His wisdom can provide. Some holy angel
Fly to the court of England, and unfold

His message ere he come, that a swift blessing
May soon return to this our suffering country
Under a hand accurs'd!

Lord. I'll send my prayers with him! Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—A dark Cave. In the middle, a Cauldron.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

- 1 Witch. Thrice the brinded cat hath mew'd.
2 Witch. Thrice; and once the hedge-pig whin'd.
3 Witch. Harper¹ cries,—'T is time, 't is time.

1 Witch. Round about the cauldron go;

In the poison'd entrails throw.—

Toad, that under cold stone,

Day and nights has thirty-one

Sweeter'd venom sleeping got,

Boil thou first i' the charmed pot.

All. Double, double toil and trouble;

Fire burn, and cauldron bubble.

2 Witch. Fillet of a fenny snake,

In the cauldron boil and bake:

Eye of newt, and toe of frog,

Wool of bat, and tongue of dog,

Adder's fork, and blind-worm's sting,

Lizard's leg, and owlet's wing,

For a charm of powerful trouble,

Like a hell-broth boil and bubble.

All. Double, double toil and trouble,

Fire burn, and cauldron bubble.

3 Witch. Scale of dragon, tooth of wolf;

Witches' mummy; maw, and gulf

Of the ravin'd salt-sea shark;

Root of hemlock, digg'd i' the dark;

Liver of blaspheming Jew;

Gall of goat, and slips of yew

Sliver'd in the moon's eclipse;

Nose of Turk, and Tartar's lips;

Finger of birth-strangled babe,

Ditch-deliver'd by a drab,

Make the gruel thick and slab;

Add thereto a tiger's chauldron²,

For the ingredients of our cauldron,

All. Double, double toil and trouble;

Fire burn, and cauldron bubble.

2 Witch. Cool it with a baboon's blood;

Then the charm is firm and good.

Enter HECATE, and other Witches.

Hec. O, well done! I commend your pains,
And every one shall share i' the gains.

And now about the cauldron sing,

Like elves and fairies in a ring,

Enchanting all that you put in.

Music, and a Song. "Black spirits," &c.³ Exit HECATE.

2 Witch. By the pricking of my thumbs,
Something wicked this way comes.— [Knocking.

Open, locks, whoever knocks.

Enter MACBETH.

Macb. How now, you secret, black, and midnight hags!

What is't you do?

All. A deed without a name.

Macb. I conjure you, by that which you profess,

(Howe'er you come to know it) answer me:

Though you untie the winds, and let them fight

Against the churches; though the yesty waves

Confound and swallow navigation up;

Though bleaded⁴ corn be lodg'd, and trees blown down,

Though castles topple o'er⁵ their warders' heads;

Though palaces and pyramids do stoop⁶

Their heads to their foundations; though the treasure

Of nature's germins' tumble all together,

Even till destruction sicken, answer me

To what I ask you

1 Witch.

Speak.

2 Witch.

Demand.

3 Witch.

We'll answer

1 Witch. Say, if thou'dst rather hear it from our mouths,

Or from our masters'?

Macb.

Call 'em: let me see 'em.

1 Witch. Pour in sow's blood, that hath eaten

Her nine farrow; grease, that's sweaten

From the murderer's gibbet, throw

Into the flame.

All.

Come high, or low;

Thyself, and office, deftly show.

Thunder. 1 Apparition, an armed Head.

Macb. Tell me, thou unknown power,—

2 Witch.

He knows thy thought

Hear his speech, but say thou nought.

1 App. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth! beware

Macduff;

Beware the thane of Fife.—Dismiss me:—enough.

[Descends.]

Macb. Whate'er thou art, for thy good caution thanks:
Thou hast harp'd my fear aright.—But one word
more.—

1 Witch. He will not be commanded. Here's another,
More potent than the first.

Thunder. 2 Apparition, a bloody Child.

App.

Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!—

Macb. Had I three ears, I'd hear thee.

App. Be bloody, bold, and resolute: laugh to scorn

The power of man, for none of woman born

Shall harm Macbeth.

[Descends.]

Macb. Then live, Macduff: what need I fear of thee?

But yet I'll make assurance double sure.

And take a bond of fate: thou shalt not live,

That I may tell pale-hearted fear it lies,

And sleep in spite of thunder.—What is this,

Thunder. 3 Apparition, a Child crowned, with a Tree in his Hand.

That rises like the issue of a king:

And wears upon his baby brow the round

And top of sovereignty?

All.

Listen, but speak not to't.

App. Be lion-mettled, proud, and take no care

Who chafes, who frets, or where conspirers are:

Macbeth shall never vanquish'd be, until

¹ Harper: in f. e. ² Entrails. ³ The rest of this direction is not in f. e. The song is probably the same as that in Middleton's Witch
Black spirits and white, Mingle, mingle, mingle,
Red spirits and grey; You that mingle may.

⁴ bladed: in f. e. ⁵ on: in f. e. ⁶ slope: in f. e. ⁷ Germinating seeds. Folio reads: germinas.

Great Birnam wood to high Dunsinane hill
Shall come against him. [Descends.]

Macb. That will never be:
Who can impress the forest; bid the tree
Unfix his earth-bound root? sweet bodements! good!
Rebellion's! head, rise never, till the wood
Of Birnam rise; and our high-plac'd Macbeth
Shall have the lease of nature, pay his breath
To time and mortal custom.—Yet my heart
Throbs to know one thing: tell me, (if your art
Can tell so much) shall Banquo's issue ever
Reign in this kingdom?

All. Seek to know no more.

Macb. I will be satisfied: deny me this,
And an eternal curse fall on you! Let me know.—
Why sinks that cauldron? and what noise is this?

[The cauldron descends. 2 Hautboys sound.]

1 Witch. Show! 2 Witch. Show! 3 Witch. Show!

All. Show his eyes, and grieve his heart;
Come like shadows, so depart.

A show of eight Kings, and Banquo first and last, with a Glass in his Hand.

Macb. Thou art too like the spirit of Banquo: down!
Thy crown does sear mine eye-balls;—and thy hair
Thou other gold-bound brow art like the first:—
A third is like the former:—Filthy hags!

Why do you show me this?—A fourth?—Start, eyes!
What! will the line stretch out to the crack of doom?
Another yet?—A seventh? I'll see no more;
And yet the eighth appears, who bears a glass,
Which shows me many more; and some I see,
That two-fold balls and treble sceptres carry.
Horrible sight!—Now, I see, 't is true;
For the blood-bolter'd Banquo smiles upon me,
And points at them for his.—What! is this so?

1 Witch. Ay, sir, all this is so; but why
Stands Macbeth thus amazedly?—

Come, sisters, cheer us up his spirits,
And show the best of our delights.

I'll charm the air to give a sound,
While you perform your antic round;
That this great king may kindly say;
Our duties did his welcome pay.

[Music. The witches dance, and vanish.]

Macb. Where are they? Gone?—Let this pernicious hour

Stand eye-cursed in the calendar!—
Come in! without there!

Enter LENOX.

Len. What's your grace's will?

Macb. Saw you the weird sisters?

Len. No, my lord.

Macb. Came they not by you?

Len. No, indeed, my lord.

Macb. Infected be the air whereon they ride,
And damn'd all those that trust them!—I did hear

The galloping of horse: who was 't came by?

Len. 'T is two or three, my lord, that bring you word,
Macduff is fled to England.

Macb. Fled to England?

Len. Ay, my good lord.

Macb. Time, thou anticipat'st my dread exploits:

The flighty purpose never is o'ertook,

Unless the deed go with it. From this moment,

The very firstlings of my heart shall be

The firstlings of my hand. And even now,

To crow, my thoughts with acts, be it thought and done:

The castle of Macduff I will surprise;

Seize upon Fife; give to the edge o' the sword
His wife, his babes, and all unfortunate souls
That trace him in his line. No boasting like a fool;
This deed I'll do, before this purpose cool:
But no more flights!—Where are these gentlemen?
Come; bring me where they are. [Exeunt]

SCENE II.—Fife. A Room in MACDUFF'S Castle.

Enter Lady MACDUFF, her Son, and Rosse.

L. Macd. What had he done to make him fly the land?

Rosse. You must have patience, madam.

L. Macd. He had new
His flight was madness. When our actions do not,
Our fears do make us traitors.

Rosse. You know not,
Whether it was his wisdom, or his fear.

L. Macd. Wisdom! to leave his wife, to leave his
His mansion, and his titles, in a place [babes,
From whence himself does fly? He loves us not:
He wants the natural touch; for the poor wren,
The most diminutive of birds, will fight,
Her young ones in her nest, against the owl.
All is the fear, and nothing is the love:
As little is the wisdom, where the flight
So runs against all reason.

Rosse. My dearest coz',
I pray you, school yourself: but, for your husband,
He is noble, wise, judicious, and best knows
The fits o' the season. I dare not speak much farther
But cruel are the times, when we are traitors,
And do not know 't ourselves; when we hold rumour
From what we fear, yet know not what we fear,
But float upon a wild and violent sea,
Each way and move.—I take my leave of you:
'T shall not be long but I'll be here again.
Things at the worst will cease, or else climb upward
To what they were before.—My pretty cousin,
Blessing upon you!

L. Macd. Father'd he is, and yet he's fatherless.

Rosse. I am so much a fool, should I stay longer,
It would be my disgrace, and your discomfort.
I take my leave at once. [Exit Rosse]

L. Macd. Sirrah, your father's dead:
And what will you do now? How will you live?

Son. As birds do, mother.

L. Macd. What, with worms and flies?

Son. With what I get, I mean; and so do they.

L. Macd. Poor bird! thou'dst never fear the net,
nor lime,

The pit-fall, nor the gin.

Son. Why should I, mother? Poor birds they are not set for.

My father is not dead, for all your saying.

L. Macd. Yes, he is dead: how wilt thou do for a father?

Son. Nay, how will you do for a husband?

L. Macd. Why, I can buy me twenty at any market.

Son. Then you'll buy 'em to sell again.

L. Macd. Thou speak'st with all thy wit;

And yet i' faith, with wit enough for thee.

Son. Was my father a traitor, mother?

L. Macd. Ay, that he was.

Son. What is a traitor?

L. Macd. Why, one that swears and lies.

Son. And be all traitors that do so?

L. Macd. Every one that does so is a traitor, and must be hanged.

¹ Rebellious; in f. e. ² The first part of this direction is not in f. e. ³ Banquo last; in f. e. ⁴ Besmeared. ⁵ sights; in f. e. ⁶ know.
in f. e. ⁷ Shall; in f. e.

Son. And must they all be hanged that swear and lie?

L. Macd. Every one.

Son. Who must hang them?

L. Macd. Why, the honest men.

Son. Then the liars and swearers are fools; for there are liars and swearers enow to beat the honest men, and hang up them.

L. Macd. Now God help thee, poor monkey! But how wilt thou do for a father?

Son. If he were dead, you 'd weep for him: if you would not, it were a good sign that I should quickly have a new father.

L. Macd. Poor prattler, how thou talk'st!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Bless you, fair dame. I am not to you known, though in your state of honour I am perfect.

I doubt some danger does approach you nearly:

If you will take a homely man's advice,

Be not found here; hence, with your little ones.

To fright you thus, methinks. I am too savage,

To do worse to you were fell cruelty,

Which is too nigh your person. Heaven preserve you! I dare abide no longer. [Exit Messenger.]

L. Macd. Whither should I fly?

I have done no harm; but I remember now

I am in this earthly world, where to do harm

Is often laudable: to do good sometime

Accounted dangerous folly! why then, alas!

Do I put up that womanly defence.

To say, I have done no harm?—What are these faces?

Enter Murderers.

Mur. Where is your husband?

L. Macd. I hope, in no place so unsanctified, where such as thou may'st find him.

Mur. He's a traitor. He's a traitor.

Son. Thou liest, thou shag-eared^d villain.

Mur. What, you egg! [Stabbing him.]

Young fry of treachery.

Son. He has kill'd me, mother: Run away, I pray you. [Dies.]

[Exit Lady Macduff, crying murder, and pursued by the Murderers.]

SCENE III.—England. A Room in the King's Palace.

Enter MALCOLM and MACDUFF.

Mal. Let us seek out some desolate shade, and there Weep our sad bosoms empty.

Macd. Let us rather Hold fast the mortal sword, and like good men Bestride our down-fall'n birthdom. Each new morn New widows howl, new orphans cry; new sorrows Strike heaven on the face, that it resounds As if it felt with Scotland, and yell'd out Like syllable of doleour.

Mal. What I believe, I'll wail; What know, believe; and what I can redress, As I shall find the time to friend, I will: What you have spoke, it may be so, perchance. This tyrant, whose sole name blisters our tongues, Was once thought honest: you have lov'd him well; He hath not touch'd you yet. I am young; but something

You may deserve^a of him through me, and wisdom To offer up a weak, poor, innocent lamb To appease an angry god.

Macd. I am not treacherous.

Mal.

But Macbeth is.

A good and virtuous nature may recoil

In an imperial charge. But I shall crave your pardon That which you are my thoughts cannot transpose; Angels are bright still, though the brightest fall: Though all things foul would wear the brows of grace, Yet grace must still look so.

Macd.

I have lost my hopes.

Mal. Perchance, even there, where I did find my doubts.

Why in that rawness left you wife, and child. Those precious motives, those strong knots of love, Without leave-taking?—I pray you, Let not my jealousies be your dishonours, But mine own safeties: you may be rightly just, Whatever I shall think.

Macd.

Bleed, bleed, poor country.

Great tyranny, lay thou thy basis sure,

For goodness dares not check thee! wear thou thy wrongs;

Thy title is affeer'd^d!—Fare thee well, lord:

I would not be the villain that thou think'st,

For the whole space that's in the tyrant's grasp.

And the rich East to boot.

Mal.

Be not offended:

I speak not as in absolute fear of you.

I think our country sinks beneath the yoke;

It weeps, it bleeds; and each new day a gash

Is added to her wounds: I think, withal.

There would be hands uplifted in my right;

And here, from gracious England, have I offer

[Showing a Paper]

Of goodly thousands; but, for all this,

When I shall tread upon the tyrant's head,

Or wear it on my sword, yet my poor country

Shall have more vices than it had before,

More suffer, and more sundry ways than ever,

By him that shall succeed.

Macd.

What should he be?

Mal. It is myself I mean; in whom I know

All the particulars of vice so grafted,

That, when they shall be ripen'd^d, black Macbeth

Will seem as pure as snow: and the poor state

Esteem him as a lamb, being compar'd

With my confineless harms.

Macd.

Not in the legends

Of horrid hell can come a devil more damn'd

In evils to top Macbeth.

Mal.

I grant him bloody,

Luxurious, avaricious, false, deceitful,

Sudden, malicious, smacking of every sin

That has a name; but there's no bottom, none,

In my voluptuousness: your wives, your daughters

Your matrons, and your maids, could not fill up

The cistern of my lust; and my desire

All continent impediments would o'er-bear,

That did oppose my will. Better Macbeth,

Than such a one to reign.

Macd.

Bonndless intemperance

In nature is a tyranny: it hath been

Th' untimely emptying of the happy throne,

And fall of many kings. But fear not yet

To take upon you what is yours: you may

Enjoy^a your pleasures in a spacious plenty,

And yet seem cold, the time you may so hoodwink

We have willing dames enough: there cannot be

That vulture in you to devour so many

As will to greatness dedicate themselves,

Finding it so inclin'd.

¹ Probably a misprint for "hair'd." ² discern: in folio. Theobald made the change. ³ affear'd: in folio. To affect, is a law phrase. ⁴ confirm. ⁵ Not in folio. ⁶ open'd: in folio. ⁷ Convey: in folio.

Mal. With this, there grows
'n my most ill-compos'd affection such
A stanchless avarice, that, were I king,
I should cut off the nobles for their lands;
Desire his jewels, and this other's house:
And my more-having would be as a sauce
To make me hunger more; that I should forge
Quarrels unjust against the good and loyal,
Destroying them for wealth.

Mal. This avarice
Sticks deeper, grows with more pernicious root,
Than summer-seeming lust; and it hath been
The sword of our slain kings: yet do not fear;
Scotland hath foison¹ to fill up your will.
Of your mere own. All these are portable
With other graces weigh'd.

Mal. But I have none. The king-becoming graces,
As justice, verity, temperance, stablesness,
Bounty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness,
Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude,
I have no relish of them; but abound
In the division of each several crime,
Acting it many ways. Nay, had I power, I should Pour the sweet milk of concord into hell,
Uproar the universal peace, confound
All unity on earth.

Mal. O Scotland, Scotland!

Mal. If such a one be fit to govern, speak:
I am as I have spoken.

Mal. Fit to govern!
No, not to live.—O, nation miserable!
With an untitled tyrant, bloody-scepter'd,
When shalt thou see thy wholesome days again,
Since that the truest issue of thy throne
By his own interdiction stands accurs'd,
And does blaspheme his breed?—Thy royal father
Was a most sainted king: the queen, that bore thee,
Off'ner upon her knees than on her feet,
Died every day she lived. Fare thee well.
These evils thou repeat'st upon thyself
Have banish'd me from Scotland.—O, my breast!
Thy hope ends here.

Mal. Macduff, this noble passion,
Gild of integrity, hath from my soul
Wip'd the black scruples, reconcil'd my thoughts
To thy good truth and honour. Devilish Macbeth
By many of these trains hath sought to win me
Into his power, and modest wisdom plucks me
From over-credulous haste: but God above
Deal between thee and me, for even now
I put myself to thy direction, and Unspoke mine own detraction: here abjure
The taints and blames I laid upon myself,
For strangers to my nature. I am yet
Unknown to woman: never was forsworn;
Scarcely have covet'd what was mine own;
At no time broke my faith: would not betray
The devil to his fellow, and delight
No less in truth, than life: my first false speaking
Was this upon myself. What I am truly
Is thine, and my poor country's, to command:
Whither, indeed, before thy here-approach,
Old Siward, with ten thousand warlike men,
Already at a point, was setting forth.
Now, we'll together: and the chance of goodness
Be like our warranted quarrel. Why are you silent?

Mal. Such welcome and unwelcome things at once,

'T is hard to reconcile.

Enter a Doctor.

Mal. Well; more anon.—Comes the king forth, I pray you?

Doct. Ay, sir: there are a crew of wretched souls,
That stay his cure: their malady convinces?
The great assay of heart; but at his touch,
Such sanctity hath heaven given his hand,
They presently amend.

Mal. I thank you, doctor. [Exit Doctor.]

Macd. What's the disease he means?
Mal. 'T is call'd the evil:

A most miraculous work in this good king,
Which often, since my here remain in England,
I have seen him do. How he solicits heaven,
Himself best knows; but strangely-visited people,
All swoln and ulcerous, pitiful to the eye,
The mere despair of surgery, he cures;
Hanging a golden stamp about their necks,
Put on with holy prayers: and 't is spoken,
To the succeeding royalty he leaves
The healing benediction. With this strange virtue,
He hath a heavenly gift of prophecy,
And sundry blessings hang about his throne,
That speak him full of grace.

Enter Rosse.

Macd. See, who comes here?

Mal. My countryman: but yet I know him not.

Macd. My ever-gentle cousin, welcome hither.

Mal. I know him now. Good God, betimes remove
The means that make us strangers!

Rosse. Sir, amen.

Macd. Stands Scotland where it did?

Rosse. Alas, poor country!

Almost afraid to know itself. It cannot
Be call'd our mother, but our grave; where nothing,
But who knows nothing, is once seen to smile:
Where sighs, and groans, and shrieks that rend the air
Are made, not mark'd; where violent sorrow seems
A modern ecstasy: the dead man's knell
Is there scarce ask'd, for whom; and good men's lives
Expire before the flowers in their caps,
Dying or ere they sicken.

Macd. O, relation,

Too nice, and yet too true!
Mal. What is the newest grief?

Rosse. That of an hour's age doth hiss the speaker.
Each minute teems a new one.

Macd. How does my wife?

Rosse. Why, well.

Macd. And all my children?

Rosse. Well, too.

Macd. The tyrant has not batter'd at their peace?

Rosse. No: they were well, at peace, when I did leave them.

Macd. Be not a niggard of your speech: how goes it?

Rosse. When I came hither to transport the tidings,
Which I have heavily borne, there ran a rumour
Of many worthy fellows that were out;
Which was to my belief witness'd the rather,
For that I saw the tyrant's power a-foot.
Now is the time of help. Your eye in Scotland
Would create soldiers, make our women fight,
To doff their dire distresses.

Mal. Be it their comfort,
We are coming thither. Gracious England hath
Lent us good Siward, and ten thousand men:
An older, and a better soldier, none
That Christendom gives out.

Rosse. Would I could answer is comfort with the like ! But I have words, that would be howl'd out in the desert air
Where hearing should not latch' them.

Macd. What concern they ?
The general cause, or is it a fee-grief,
Due to some single breast ?

Rosse. No mind that 's honest
But in it shares some woe, though the main part
Pertains to you alone.

Macd. If it be mine,
Keep it not from me ; quickly let me have it.

Rosse. Let not your ears despise my tongue for ever,
Which shall possess them with the heaviest sound,
That ever yet they heard.

Macd. Humph ! I guess at it.
Rosse. Your castle is surpris'd ; your wife, and babes,
Savagely slaughter'd : to relate the manner
Were, on the quarry of these murder'd deer,
To add the death of you.

Mal. Merciful heaven !—
What, man ! ne'er pull your hat upon your brows :
Give sorrow words ; the grief, that does not speak,
Whispers the o'er-fraught heart, and bids it break.

Macd. My children too ?

Rosse. Wife, children, servants, all
That could be found.

Macd. And I must be from thence !

My wife kill'd too ?

Rosse. I have said.

Mal. Be comforted .
Let 's make us medicines of our great revenge,
To cure this deadly grief.

Macd. He has no children.—All my pretty ones ?
Did you say, all that ?—O, hell-kite !—All ?
What, all my pretty chickens, and their dam,
At one fell swoop ?

Mal. Dispute it like a man.

Macd. I shall do so ;
But I must also feel it like a man :
I cannot but remember such things were,
That were most precious to me.—Did heaven look on,
And would not take their part ? Sinful Macduff !
They were all struck for thee. Naught that I am,
Not for their own demerits, but for mine,
Fell slaughter on their souls. Heaven rest them now !

Mal. Be this the whetstone of your sword : let grief
Convert to anger ; blunt not the heart, enrage it.

Macd. O ! I could play the woman with mine eyes,
And braggart with my tongue.—But, gentle Heavens,
Cut short all intermission : front to front,
Bring thou this fiend of Scotland, and myself ;
Within my sword's length set him ; if he 'scape,
Heaven forgive him too !

Mal. This tune³ goes manly.
Come, go we to the king : our power is ready ;
Our lack is nothing but our leave. Macbeth
Is ripe for shaking, and the powers above [may ;
Put on their instruments. Receive what cheer you
The night is long that never finds the day. [Exeunt.

ACT V.

SCENE I.—Dunsinane. A Room in the Castle.

Enter a Doctor of Physic, and a waiting Gentlewoman.

Doct. I have two nights watched with you, but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it she last walked ?

Gent. Since his majesty went into the field, I have seen her rise from her bed, throw her night-gown upon her, unlock her closet, take forth paper, fold it, write upon it, read it, afterwards seal it, and again return to bed ; yet all this while in a most fast sleep.

Doct. A great perturbation in nature, to receive at once the benefit of sleep, and do the effects of watching. In this slumb'ry agitation, besides her walking and other actual performances, what at any time have you heard her say ?

Gent. That, sir, which I will not report after her.

Doct. You may, to me ; and 't is most meet you should.

Gent. Neither to you, nor any one, having no witness to confirm my speech.

Enter Lady Macbeth, with a Taper.

Lo you ! here she comes. This is her very guise, and upon my life fast asleep. Observe her : stand close.

Doct. How came she by that light ?

Gent. Why, it stood by her : she has light by her continually ; 't is her command.

Doct. You see, her eyes are open.

Gent. Ay, but their sense is shut.

Doct. What is it she does now ? Look, how she rubs her hands.

Gent. It is an accustomed action with her to seem thus washing her hands : I have known her continue in this a quarter of an hour.

Lady M. Yet here 's a spot.

Doct. Hark ! she speaks. I will set down what comes from her, to satisfy my remembrance the more strongly. [Taking out his Tables.*

Lady M. Out, damned spot ! out, I say !—One :
two : why, then 't is time to do 't.—Hell is murky !—
Fie, my lord, fie ! a soldier, and afeard ? What need we fear who knows it, when none can call our power to account ?—Yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him ?

Doct. Do you mark that ? [Writing.*

Lady M. The thane of Fife had a wife : where is she now ?—What, will these hands ne'er be clean ?—
No more o' that, my lord ; no more o' that ; you mar
all with this starting.

Doct. Go to, go to : you have known what you should not.

Gent. She has spoke what she should not, I am sure of that : Heaven knows what she has known.

Lady M. Here 's the smell of the blood still : all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand.
Oh ! oh ! oh !

Doct. What a sigh is there ! The heart is sorely charged.

Gent. I would not have such a heart in my bosom, for the dignity of the whole body.

Doct. Well, well, well,—

Gent. Pray God, it be, sir.

Doct. This disease is beyond my practice : yet I have known those which have walked in their sleep, who have died holily in their beds.

Lady M. Wash your hands, put on your night-gown, look not so pale.—I tell you yet again, Banquo 's buried : he cannot come out on 's grave.

* Catch. * Heap of dead game. 3 time : in folio. Rowe made the change. * * Not in f. *

Doct. Even so?

Lady M. To bed, to bed: there's knocking at the gate. Come, come, come, come, give me your hand. What's done, cannot be undone: to bed, to bed, to bed.

[Exit Lady MACBETH.]

Doct. Will she go now to bed?

Gent. Directly.

Doct. Foul whisperings are abroad. Unnatural deeds do breed unnatural troubles: infected minds To their deaf pillows will discharge their secrets. More needs she the divine, than the physician.—God, God, forgive us all! Look after her; Remove from her the means of all annoyance; And still keep eyes upon her.—So, good night: My mind she has mated¹, and amaz'd my sight. I think, but dare not speak.

Gent. Good night, good doctor. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Country near Dunsinane.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, MENTETH, CATHNESS, ANGUS, LENOX, and Soldiers.

Ment. The English power is near, led on by Malcolm, His uncle Siward, and the good Macduff. Revenges burn in them; for their dear causes Would, to the bleeding and the grim alarm, Excite the mortified man.

Ang. Near Birnam wood shall we well meet them: that way are they coming.

Cath. Who knows, if Donalbain be with his brother?

Len. For certain, sir, he is not. I have a file Of all the gentry: there is Siward's son, And many untouch'd youths, that even now Protest their first of manhood.

Ment. What does the tyrant?

Cath. Great Dunsinane he strongly fortifies. Some say, he's mad: others, that lesser hate him, Do call it valiant fury; but, for certain, He cannot buckle his distemper'd course² Within the belt of rule.

Ang. Now does he feel
His secret murders sticking on his hands;
Now minutely revolts upbraid his faith-breach:
Those he commands move only in command,
Nothing in love: now does he feel his title
Hang loose about him, like a giant's robe
Upon a dwarfish thief.

Ment. Who, then, shall blame
His pester'd senses to recoil and start.
When all that is within him does condemn
Itself, for being there?

Cath. Well; march we on,
To give obedience where 't is truly ow'd:
Meet we the medicine of the sickly weal;
And with him pour we, in our country's purge,
Each drop of us.

Ment. Or so much as it needs
To dew the sovereign flower, and drown the weeds.
Make us our march towards Birnam.

[Exeunt, marching.]

SCENE III.—Dunsinane. A Room in the Castle.

Enter MACBETH, Doctor, and Attendants.

Macb. Bring me no more reports: let them fly all:
Till Birnam wood remove to Dunsinane.
I cannot taint with fear. What's the boy Malcolm?
Was he not born of woman? The spirits that know
All mortal consequences have pronounced me thus:—
"Fear not, Macbeth; no man that's born of woman

Shall e'er have power upon thee."—Then fly, false
And mingle with the English epicures: [thanes.
The mind I sway by, and the heart I bear,
Shall never sag with doubt, nor shake with fear.

Enter a Servant.

The devil damn thee black, thou cream-fac'd loon!
Where got'st thou that goose look?

Serv. There is ten thousand—

Macb. Geese, villain?

Serv. Soldiers, sir.

Macb. Go, prick thy face, and over-red thy fear,
Thou lily-liver'd boy. What soldiers, patch?
Death of thy soul! those linen cheeks of thine
Are counsellors to fear. What soldiers, whey-face?

Serv. The English force, so please you.

Macb. Take thy face hence.—[*Exit Serv.] Seyton!—

I am sick at heart.

When I behold—Seyton, I say!—This push
Will chair³ me ever, or disseat me now.
I have liv'd long enough: my May⁴ of life
Is fall'n into the sear, the yellow leaf;
And that which should accompany old age,
As honour, love, obedience, troops of friends,
I must not look to have: but, in their stead,
Curses, not loud, but deep, mouth-honour, breath,
Which the poor heart would fain deny, and dare not.
Seyton!—

Enter SEYTON.

Sey. What is your gracious pleasure?

Macb. What news more?

Sey. All is confirm'd, my lord, which was reported.

Macb. I'll fight, till from my bones my flesh be hack'd.
Give me my armour.

Sey. 'T is not needed yet.

Macb. I'll put it on
Send out more horses, skirr⁵ the country round;
Hang those that talk of fear. Give me mine armour.—
How does your patient, doctor?

Doct. Not so sick, my lord,
As she is troubled with thick-coming fancies,
That keep her from her rest.

Macb. Cure her of that.

Canst thou not minister to a mind diseas'd,
Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow,
Raze out the written troubles of the brain,
And with some sweet oblivious antidote
Cleanse the stuff'd bosom of that perilous grief,⁶
Which weighs upon the heart?

Doct. Therein the patient

Must minister unto himself.

Macb. Throw physic to the dogs; I'll none of it.—
Come, put mine armour on: give me my staff.—
Seyton, send out.—Doctor, the thanes fly from me.—
Come, sir, despatch.—If thou couldst, doctor, cast
The water of my land, find her disease,
And purge it to a sound and pristine health,
I would applaud thee to the very echo,
That should applaud again.—Pull't off, I say.—
What rhubarb, senna⁷, or what purgative drug,
Would scour these English hence?—Hear'st thou of them?

Doct. Ay, my good lord: your royal preparation
Makes us hear something.

Macb. Bring it after me.—

I will not be afraid of death and baue,
Till Birnam forest come to Dunsinane. [Exi

Doct. Were I from Dunsinane away and clear,
Profit again should hardly draw me here. [Exi

SCENE IV.—Country near Dunsinane: a Wood in view.

Enter, with Drum and Colours, MALCOLM, old SIWARD, and his Son, MACDUFF, MENTETH, CATHNESS, ANGUS, LENOX, ROSSE, and Soldiers marching

Mal. Cousins, I hope, the days are near at hand, That chambers will be safe.

Ment. We doubt it nothing.

Siv. What wood is this before us?

Ment. The wood of Birnam.

Mal. Let every soldier hew him down a bough, And bear 't before him: thereby shall we shadow The numbers of our host, and make discovery Err in report of us.

Sold. It shall be done.

Siv. We learn no other but the confident tyrant Keeps still in Dunsinane, and will endure Our setting down before 't.

Mal. 'Tis his main hope; For where there is advantage to be gotten,¹ Both more² and less have given him the revolt, And none serve with him but constrained things, Whose hearts are absent too.

Macd. Let our just censures Attend the true event, and put we on Industrious soldiiership.

Siv. The time approaches, That will with due decision make us know What we shall say we have, and what we owe. Thoughts speculative their unsure hopes relate, But certain issue strokes must arbitrate; Towards which, advance the war. [Exeunt, marching.]

SCENE V.—Dunsinane. Within the Castle.

Enter, with Drums and Colours, MACBETH, SEYTON, and Soldiers.

Macb. Hang out our banners on the outward walls; The cry is still, "They come!" Our castle's strength Will laugh a siege to scorn: here let them lie, Till famine and the ague eat them up. Were they not farc'd³ with those that should be ours, We might have met them dareful, beard to beard,

[A cry within, of Women.]
And beat them backward home. What is that noise?

Sey. It is the cry of women, my good lord. [Exit.]

Macb. I have almost forgot the taste of fear. The time has been, my senses would have quail'd⁴ To hear a night-shriek; and my fell⁵ of hair Would at a dismal treatise rouse, and stir, As life were in 't. I have supp'd full with horrors: Direness, familiar to my slaughterous thoughts, Cannot once start me.—

Re-enter SEYTON.

Wherefore was that cry?

Sey. The queen, my lord, is dead.

Macb. She should have died hereafter: There would have been a time for such a word.— To-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow, Creeps in this petty pace from day to day, To the last syllable of recorded time; And all our yesterdays have lighted fools The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle! Life's but a walking shadow; a poor player, That struts and frets his hour upon the stage, And then is heard no more: it is a tale Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, Signifying nothing.

Enter a Messenger.

Thou com'st to say thy tongue; thy story, quickly.

Mess. Gracious my lord, I should report that which I say I saw, But know not how to do 't.

Macb.

Well, say, sir.

Mess. As I did stand my watch upon the hill, I look'd toward Birnam, and anon, methought, The wood began to move.

Macb.

Liar, and slave!

Mess. Let me endure your wrath, if 't be not so Within this three mile may you see it coming; I say, a moving grove.

Macb.

If thou speak'st false, Upon the next tree shalt thou hang alive, Till famine cling thee: if thy speech be sooth, I care not if thou dost for me as much.— I pull in resolution; and begin To doubt th' equivocation of the fiend, That lies like truth: "Fear not, till Birnam wood Do come to Dunsinane;"—and now a wood Comes toward Dunsinane.—Arm, arm, and out!— If this, which he avouches, does appear, There is nor flying hence, nor tarrying here. I 'gin to be a-weary of the sun, And wish th' estate o' the world were now undone— Ring the alarm bell!—Blow, wind! come, wrack! At least we'll die with harness on our back. [Exeunt]

SCENE VI.—The Same. A Plain before the Castle
Enter, with Drums and Colours, MALCOLM, old SIWARD, MACDUFF, &c., and their Army with Boughs.

Mal. Now near enough: your leafy screens throw down,

And show like those you are.—You, worthy uncle, Shall, with my cousin, your right-noble son, Lead our first battle: worthy Macduff, and we, Shall take upon 's what else remains to do, According to our order.

Siv. Fare you well.— Do we but find the tyrant's power to-night, Let us be beaten, if we cannot fight.

Macd. Make all our trumpets speak; give them all breath,

Those clamorous harbingers of blood and death.

[Exeunt. Alarums continued]

SCENE VII.—The Same. Another Part of the Plain

Enter MACBETH.

Macb. They have tied me to a stake: I cannot fly But, bear-like, I must fight the course.—What's he, That was not born of woman? Such a one Am I to fear, or none.

Enter young SIWARD.

Yo. Siv. What is thy name?

Macb. Thou 'lt be afraid to hear it.

Yo. Siv. No; though thou call'st thyself a hotter name.

Than any is in hell.

Macb. My name's Macbeth.

Yo. Siv. The devil himself could not pronounce a title More hateful to mine ear.

Macb.

No, nor more fearful.

Yo. Siv. Thou liest, abhorred tyrant, with my sword I'll prove the lie thou speak'st.

[They fight, and young SIWARD is slain.]

Macb.

Thou wast born of woman:— But swords I smile at, weapons laugh to scorn, Brandish'd by man that's of a woman born. [Exit Alarums. Enter MACDUFF.]

Macd. That way the noise is.—Tyrant, show thy face!

¹ given in f. e. ² Greater. ³ forc'd: in f. e. ⁴ Not in f. e. ⁵ cool'd: in f. e. * Skin. ⁷ Not in f. c.

It thou be slain, and with no stroke of mine,
My wife and children's ghosts will haunt me still.
I cannot strike at wretched kernes, whose arms
Are hir'd to bear their staves: either thou, Macbeth,
Or else my sword, with an unbatter'd edge,
I sheathe again undecided. There thou shouldst be:
By this great clatter, one of greatest note
Seems bruited. Let me find him, fortune,
And more I beg not. [Exit. Alarum.]

Enter MALCOLM and old SIWARD.

Sie. This way, my lord.—The castle's gently render'd:
The tyrant's people on both sides do fight;
The noble thanes do bravely in the war.
The day almost itself professes yours,
And little is to do.

Mal. We have met with foes
That strike beside us.

Sie. Enter, sir, the castle. [Exeunt. Alarum.]
Re-enter MACBETH.

Macb. Why should I play the Roman fool, and die
On mine own sword? whilst I see lives, the gashes
Do better upon them.

Re-enter MACDUFF.

Macd. Turn, hell-hound, turn.
Macb. Of all men else I have avoided thee:
But get thee back: my soul is too much charg'd
With blood of thine already.

Macd. I have no words;
My voice is in my sword: thou bloodier villain
Than terms can give thee out! [They fight.]

Macb. Thou lovest labour.
As easy may'st thou the intrenchant air
With thy keen sword impress, as make me bleed.
Let fall thy blade on vulnerable crests:
I bear a charmed life, which must not yield
To one of woman born.

Macd. Despair thy charm;
And let the angel, whom thou still hast serv'd,
Tell thee, Macduff was from his mother's womb
Untimely ripp'd.

Macb. Accurs'd be that tongue that tells me so,
For it hath cow'd my better part of man;
And be these juggling fiends no more believ'd,
That palter with us in a double sense;
That keep the word of promise to our ear,
And break it to our hope.—I'll not fight with thee.

Macd. Then, yield thee, coward.
And live to be the show and gaze o' the time:
We'll have thee, as our rarer monsters are,
Painted upon a pole, and underwrit,
"Here may you see the tyrant."

Macb. I will not yield,
To kiss the ground before young Malcolm's feet,
And to be baited with the rabble's curse.
Though Birnam wood be come to Dunsinane,
And thou oppos'd be of no woman born,
Yet I will try the last. Before my body

I throw my warlike shield: lay on, Macduff,
And damn'd be he that first cries, "Hold, enough!"

[Exeunt, fighting
Retreat. Flourish. Re-enter, with Drum and Colours.
MALCOLM, old SIWARD, ROSSE, Thanes, and Soldiers.]

Mal. I would, the friends we miss were safe arriv'd
Sie. Some must go off: and yet, by these I see,
So great a day as this is cheaply bought.

Mal. Macduff is missing, and your noble son.
Rosse. Your son, my lord, has paid a soldier's debt.

He only liv'd but till he was a man,
The which no sooner had his prowess confirm'd
In the unshrinking station where he fought,
But like a man he died.

Sie. Then he is dead?

Rosse. Ay, and brought off the field. Your cause of sorrow

Must not be measur'd by his worth, for then
It hath no end.

Sie. Had he his hurts before?

Rosse. Ay, on the front.

Sie. Why then, God's soldier be he,
Had I as many sons as I have hairs,
I would not wish them to a fairer death:
And so, his knell is knoll'd.

Mal. He's worth more sorrow,
And that I'll spend for him.

Sie. He's worth no more:

They say, he parted well, and paid his score,
And God be with him!—Here comes newer comfort.

Re-enter MACDUFF, with MACBETH'S Head, on a Pike Macd. Hail, king! for so thou art. Behold, where stands [Sticking the Pike in the ground]

The usurper's curs'd head: the time is free.
I see thee compass'd with thy kingdom's pearl,
That speak my salutation in their minds;
Whose voices I desire aloud with mine,—
Hail, king of Scotland!

All. Hail, king of Scotland! [Flourish]

Mal. We shall not spend a large expense of time,
Before we reckon with our several loves,
And make us even with you. My thanes and kinsmen,
Henceforth be earls; the first that ever Scotland
In such an honour nam'd. What's more to do,
Which would be plant'd newly with the time,—
As calling home our exil'd friends abroad,
That fled the snares of watchful tyranny;
Producing forth the cruel ministers
Of this dead butcher, and his fiend-like queen,
Who, as 't is thought, by self and violent hands
Took off her life;—this, and what needful else
That calls upon us, by the grace of Grace,
We will perform in measure, time, and place.
So, thanks to all at once, and to each one,
Whom we invite to see us crown'd at Seene.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Elsinore. A Platform before the Castle.
 FRANCISCO on his Post. Enter to him BERNARDO.

Ber. Who's there ?

Fran. Nay, answer me : stand, and unfold Yourself.

Ber. Long live the king !

Fran. Bernardo ?

Ber. He.

Fran. You come most carefully upon your hour.

Ber. 'T is new¹ struck twelve : get thee to bed, Francisco.

Fran. For this relief much thanks. 'T is bitter cold, And I am sick at heart.

Ber. Have you had quiet guard ?

Fran. Not a mouse stirring.

Ber. Well, good night.

If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus,
 The rivals² of my watch, bid them make haste.

Enter HORATIO and MARCELLUS.

Fran. I think I hear thee.—Stand, ho ! Who is there ?

Hor. Friends to this ground.

Mar. And liegemen to the Dane.

Fran. Give you good night.

Mar. O ! farewell, honest soldier :
 Who hath relief'd you ?

Fran. Bernardo has my place.

Give you good night. [Exit FRANCISCO.

Mar. Holla ! Bernardo !

Ber. Say.

What ! is Horatio there ?

Hor. A piece of him.

Ber. Welcome, Horatio : welcome, good Marcellus.

Hor.³ What has this thing appear'd again to-night ?

Ber. I have seen nothing.

Mar. Horatio says, 't is but our fantasy,

And will not let belief take hold of him,
 Touching this dreaded sight twice seen of us :
 Therefore, I have entreated him along
 With us, to watch the minutes of this night ;
 That, if again this apparition come,
 He may approve our eyes, and speak to it.
 Hor. Tush, tush ! 't will not appear.

Ber. Sit down awhile

And let us once again assail your ears,

That are so fortified against our story,

What we two nights have seen.

Hor. Well, sit we down.

And let us hear Bernardo speak of this.

Ber. Last night of all,

When yond⁴ same star, that's westward from the pole,

Had made his course t⁵ illumine that part of heaven

Where now it burns, Marcellus, and myself,

The bell then beating one,—

Mar. Peace ! break thee off : look, where it comes again !

Enter Ghost, armed.*

Ber. In the same figure, like the king that's dead.

Mar. Thou art a scholar ; speak to it, Horatio.

Ber. Looks it not like the king ? mark it, Horatio.

Hor. Most like :—it harrows me with fear, and wonder.

Ber. It would be spoke to.

Mar. Question it, Horatio.

Hor. What art thou, that usurp'st this time of night

Together with that fair and warlike form,

In which the majesty of buried Denmark

Did sometimes march ? by heaven I charge thee, speak !

Mar. It is offended.

Ber. See ! it stalks away.

Hor. Stay ! speak, speak ! I charge thee, speak !

[Exit Ghost]

Mar. 'T is gone, and will not answer.

Ber. How now, Horatio! you tremble, and look pale.
Is not this something more than fantasy?
What think you on 't?

Hor. Before my God, I might not this believe,
Without the sensible and true avouch
Of mine own eyes.

Mar. Is it not like the king?

Hor. As thou art to thyself.

Such was the very armour he had on,
When he th' ambitious Norway combated:
So frown'd he once, when, in an angry parle,
He smote the sledded Polacks¹ on the ice.
'T is strange.

Mar. Thus, twice before, and jump² at this dead hour,
With martial stalk hath he gone by our watch.

Hor. In what particular thought to work, I know not;
But in the gross and scope of mine opinion,
This bodes some strange eruption to our state.

Mar. Good now, sit down; and tell me, he that knows,

Why this same strict and most observant watch
So nightly toils the subject of the land?
And why such daily cast³ of brazen cannon,
And foreign mart for implements of war?
Why such impress of shipwrights, whose sore task
Does not divide the Sunday from the week?
What might be toward, that this sweaty haste
Doth make the night joint labourer with the day?
Who is 't, that can inform me?

Hor. That can I;
At least, the whisper goes so. Our last king,
Whose image even but now appear'd to us,
Was, as you know, by Fortinbras of Norway,
Thereto prick'd on by a most emulate pride,
Dar'd to the combat; in which our valiant Hamlet
(For so this side of our known world esteem'd him)
Did slay this Fortinbras; who, by a seal'd compact,
Well ratified by law and heraldry,
Did forfeit with his life all those his lands,
Which he stood seiz'd of, to the conqueror:
Against the which, a moiety competent
Was gaged by our king; which had return'd
To the inheritance of Fortinbras,
Had he been vanquisher; as, by the same co-mart,⁴
And carriage of the article design'd,
His fell to Hamlet. Now, sir, young Fortinbras,
Of unimprov'd⁵ mettle hot and full,
Hath in the skirts of Norway, here and there,
Shar'd up a list of lawless⁶ resolves,
For food and diet, to some enterprise
That hath a stomach in 't; which is no other
(As it doth well appear unto our state)
But to recover of us, by strong hand
And terms compulsative, those foresaid lands
So by his father lost. And this, I take it,
Is the main motive of our preparations,
The source of this our watch, and the chief head
Of this post-haste and ramage in the land.

Ber. I think, it be no other, but 'e'en so:⁷
Well may it sort,⁸ that this portentous figure
Comes armed through our watch: so like the king
That was, and is, the question of these wars.

Hor. A mote it is to trouble the mind's eye.
In the most high and palmy state of Rome,
A little ere the mightiest Julius fell,

The graves stood tenantless, and the sheeted dead
Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets:
As, stars with trains of fire and dews of blood,
Disasters in the sun; and the moist star,
Upon whose influence Neptune's empire stands,
Was sick almost to dooms-day with eclipse:
And even the like precursor of fierce events—
As harbingers preceding still the fates,
And prologue to the omen coming on—
Have heaven and earth, together demonstrated
Unto our climatures and countrymen.—

Re-enter Ghost.

But, soft! behold! lo, where it comes again!
I'll cross it, though it blast me.—Stay, illusion!

If thou hast any sound, or use of voice,
Speak to me:
If there be any good thing to be done,
That may to thee do ease, and grace to me,
Speak to me:

If thou art privy to thy country's fate,
Which happily foreknowing may avoid,
O, speak!
Or, if thou hast uphoarded in thy life
Extorted treasure in the womb of earth,
For which, they say, your spirits oft walk in death,

Speak of it: stay, and speak!—Stop it, Marcellus.
[Cock crows]

Mar. Shall I strike at⁹ it with my partisan?

Hor. Do, if it will not stand.

Ber. 'T is here!

Hor.

Mar. 'T is gone.

'T is here!

[Exit Ghost]

We do it wrong, being so majestic,
To offer it the show of violence;
For it is, as the air, invulnerable,
And our vain blows malicious mockery.

Ber. It was about to speak, when the cock crew.

Hor. And then it started, like a guilty thing
Upon a fearful summons. I have heard,
The cock, that is the trumpet to the morn,¹⁰
Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat
Awake the god of day; and at his warning,
Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air,
Th' extravagant and erring spirit hies
To his confine; and of the truth hereinafter
This present object made probation.

Mar. It faded on the crowing of the cock.
Some say, that ever 'gainst that season comes
Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated,
This bird of dawning singeth all night long:
And then, they say, no spirit dares stir¹¹ abroad;
The nights are wholesome; so then no planets strike,
No fairy takes,¹² nor witch hath power to charm,
So hallow'd and so gracious is that time.

Hor. So have I heard, and do in part believe it.
But, look, the morn, in russet mantle clad,
Walks o'er the dew of yond' high eastern hill.
Break we our watch up; and, by my advice,
Let us impart what we have seen to-night
Unto young Hamlet; for, upon my life,
This spirit, dumb to us, will speak to him.
Do you consent we shall acquaint him with it,
As needful in our loves, fitting our duty?

Mar. Let's do 't, I pray; and I this morning know
Where we shall find him most conveniently. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Room of State.

Sennet. Enter the King, Queen, HAMLET, POLONIUS, LAERTES, VOLTIMAND, CORNELIUS, Lords, and Attendants.¹ The King takes his Seat.

King. Though yet of Hamlet our dear brother's death
The memory be green, and that it us befitted
To bathe our hearts in grief, and our whole kingdom
To be contracted in one brow of woe;
Yet so far hath discretion fought with nature,
That we with wisest sorrow think on him,
Together with remembrance of ourselves.
Therefore, our sometime sister, now our queen,
Th' imperial jointress of² this warlike state,
Have we, as 't were with a defeated joy,—
With one auspicious, and one dropping eye,
With mirth in funeral, and with dirge in marriage,
In equal scale weighing delight and dole,—
Taken to wife: nor have we herein barr'd
Your better wisdoms, which have freely gone
With this affair along: for all, our thanks.
Now follows, that you know, young Fortinbras,
Holding a weak supposal of our worth,
Or thinking, by our late dear brother's death
Our state to be disjoint and out of frame,
Colleagu'd with the dream of his advantage,
He hath not fail'd to pester us with message,
Importing the surrender of those lands
Lost by his father, with all bands of law,
To our most valiant brother.—So much for him.
Now for myself, and for this time of meeting.
Thus much the business is: we have here writ
To Norway, uncle of young Fortinbras,—
Who, impotent and bed-ridden, scarcely hears
Of this his nephew's purpose,—to suppress
His farther gait herein, in that the levies,
The lists, and full proportions, are all made
Out of his subject: and we here despatch
You, good Cornelius, and you, Voltimand,
For bearers⁴ of this greeting to old Norway;
Giving to you no farther personal power
To business with the king, more than the scope
Of these dilated articles allow. [Giving them.]
Farewell; and let your haste commend your duty.

Cor. Vol. In that, and all things, will we show our duty.

King. We doubt it nothing: heartily farewell.

[Exeunt VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS.]

And now, Laertes, what's the news with you?
You told us of some suit; what is't, Laertes?
You cannot speak of reason to the Dane,
And lose your voice: what wouldst thou beg, Laertes,
That shall not be my offer, not thy asking?
The head is not more native to the heart,
The hand more instrumental to the month,
Than is the throne of Denmark to thy father.
What wouldst thou have, Laertes?

Laer. My dread lord.

Your leave and favour to return to France:
From whence though willingly I came to Denmark,
To show my duty to your coronation,
Yet now, I must confess, that duty done,
My thoughts and wishes bend again toward France,
And bow them to your gracious leave and pardon.

King. Have you your father's leave? What says
Polonius?

Pol. He hath, my lord, wrung from me my slow leave,⁶
By laboursome petition; and, at last,
Upon his will I seal'd my hard consent:

I do beseech you, give him leave to go.

King. Take thy fair hour, Laertes; time be thine,
And thy best graces: spend it at thy will.—
But now, my cousin Hamlet, and my son,—

Ham. A little more than kin, and less than kind.

[Aside.]

King. How is it that the clouds still hang on you?

Ham. Not so, my lord; I am too much i' the sun.

Queen. Good Hamlet, cast thy night-like colour off,
And let thine eye look like a friend on Denmark.

Do not, for ever, with thy veiled lids

Seek for thy noble father in the dust:

Thou know'st, 't is common; all that live must die,
Passing through nature to eternity.

Ham. Ay, madam, it is common.

Queen.

If it be,

Why seems it so particular with thee?

Ham. Seems, madam! nay, it is; I know not seems.

'T is not alone my inky cloak, good mother,

Nor customary suits of solemn black,

Nor windy suspiration of forc'd breath,

No, nor the fruitful river in the eye,

Nor the dejected haviour of the visage,

Together with all forms, moods, shows of grief,

That can denote me truly: these, indeed, seem,

For they are actions that a man might play;

But I have that within, which passeth show,

These but the trappings and the suits of woe.

King. 'T is sweet and commendable in your nature
Hamlet,

To give these mourning duties to your father:

But, you must know, your father lost a father;

That father lost, lost his; and the survivor bound

In filial obligation, for some term,

To do obsequious⁸ sorrow: but to persevere

In obstinate condolement is a course

Of impious stubbornness: 't is unmanly grief:

It shows a will most incorrect to heaven;

A heart unfortified, a mind impatient,

An understanding simple and unchool'd:

For what, we know, must be, and is as common

As any the most vulgar thing to sense,

Why should we, in our peevish opposition,

Take it to heart? Fie! 't is a fault to heaven,

A fault against the dead, a fault to nature,

To reason most absurd, whose common theme

Is death of fathers, and who still hath cried,

From the first corse till he that died to-day,

'This must be so.' We pray you, throw to earth

This unprevailing woe, and think of us

As of a father: for, let the world take note,

You are the most immediate to our throne;

And, with no less nobility of love

Than that which dearest father bears his son,

Do I impart toward you. For your intent

In going back to school in Wittenberg

Is most retrograde to our desire;

And, we beseech you, bend you to remain

Here, in the cheer and comfort of our eye,

Our chiefest courtier, cousin, and our son.

Queen. Let not thy mother lose her prayers, Hamlet

I pray thee, stay with us: go not to Wittenberg.

Ham. I shall in all my best obey you, madam.

King. Why, 't is a loving and a fair reply:

Be as ourself⁷ in Denmark.—Madam, come;

This gentle and unford⁸ accord of Hamlet

Sits smiling to my heart, in grace whereof,

No jocund health that Denmark drinks to-day,

And the king's rouse the heaven shall bruit again,
Re-speaking earthly thunder. Come away.

[Flourish. Enter King, Queen, Lords, &c.

POLONIUS, and LAERTES.

✓ Ham. O! that this too, too solid flesh would melt,
Thaw, and resolve itself into a dew;
Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd
His canon 'gainst self-slaughter. O God! O God!
How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable
Seem to me all the uses of this world.
Fie on't! O fie! 't is an unweeded garden,
That grows to seed; things rank, and gross in nature,
Possess it merely. That it should come to this!
But two months dead!—nay, not so much, not two:
So excellent a king; that was, to this,
Hyperion to a satyr: so loving to my mother,
That he might not betem² the winds of heaven
Visit her face too roughly. Heaven and earth!
Must I remember? why, she would hang on him,
As if increase of appetite had grown
By what it fed on: and yet, within a month,—
Let me not think on't.—Frailty, thy name is woman!—
A little month; or ere those shoes were old,
With which she follow'd my poor father's body,
Like Niobe, all tears;—why she, even she,
(O God! a beast, that wants discourse of reason,
Would have mourn'd longer)—married with my uncle,
My father's brother; but no more like my father,
Than I to Hercules: within a month;
Ere yet the salt of most unrighteous tears
Had left the flushing in her galled eyes,
She married.—O, most wicked speed, to post
With such dexterity to incestuous sheets!
It is not, nor it cannot come to, good;
But break, my heart, for I must hold my tongue!

Enter HORATIO, BERNARDO, and MARCELLUS.

Hor. Hail to your lordship!

Ham. I am glad to see you:
Horatio,—or I do forget myself.

Hor. The same, my lord, and your poor servant ever.

Ham. Sir, my good friend; I'll change that name with you.

And what make you from Wittenberg, Horatio?—
Marcellus?

Mar. My good lord.

Ham. I am very glad to see you; good even,
sir,—

But what, in faith, make you from Wittenberg?

Hor. A truant disposition, good my lord.

Ham. I would not hear³ your enemy say so;

Nor shall you do mine ear that violence,

To make it truster of your own report

Against yourself: I know, you are no truant.

But what is your affair in Elsinore?

✓ We'll teach you to drink deep, ere you depart.

Hor. My lord, I came to see your father's funeral.

Ham. I pray thee, do not mock me, fellow-student:

think, it was to see my mother's wedding.

Hor. Indeed, my lord, it follow'd hard upon.

Ham. Thrift, thrift, Horatio: the funeral bak'd meats

Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.

'Would I had met my dearest⁴ foe in heaven

Ere ever I had seen that day, Horatio!

My father,—methinks, I see my father.

Hor. O! where, my lord?

Ham. In my mind's eye, Horatio.

Hor. I saw him once: he was a goodly king.

Ham. He was a man, take him for all in all,
I shall not look upon his like again.

Hor. My lord, I think I saw him yesternight.

Ham. Saw whom?

Hor. My lord, the king your father.

Ham.

The king my father

Hor. Season your admiration for a while

With an attent ear, till I may deliver,

Upon the witness of these gentlemen,

This marvel to you.

Ham.

For God's love, let me hear.

Hor. Two nights together had these gentlemen,

Marcellus and Bernardo, on their watch,

In the dead vast⁵ and middle of the night,

Been thus encounter'd. A figure like your father,

Armed at point, exactly, cap-à-pié,

Appears before them, and with solemn march

Goes slow and stately by them: thrice he walk'd,

By their oppress'd and fear-surprised eyes,

Within his truncheon's length; whilst they, bechill'd⁶

Almost to jelly with the act of fear,

Stand dumb, and speak not to him. This to me

In dreadful secrecy impart they did,

And I with them the third night kept the watch;

Where, as they had deliver'd, both in time,

Form of the thing, each word made true and good,

The apparition comes. I knew your father;

These hands are not more like.

Ham.

But where was this?

Mar. My lord, upon the platform where we watch'd.

Ham. Did you not speak to it?

Hor.

My lord, I did,

But answer made it none; yet once, methought,

It lifted up its head, and did address

To motion, like as it would speak:

But, even then, the morning cock crew loud,

And at the sound it shrunk in haste away,

And vanish'd from our sight.

Ham.

'T is very strange.

Hor. As I do live, my honour'd lord, 't is true;

And we did think it writ down in our duty,

To let you know of it.

Ham. Indeed, indeed, sirs, but this troubles me.

Hold you the watch to-night?

All.

We do, my lord.

Ham. Arm'd, say you?

All.

Arm'd, my lord.

Ham.

From top to toe?

All. My lord, from head to foot.

Ham. Then, saw you not his face?

Hor. O! yes, my lord: he wore his beaver up.

Ham. What! look'd he frowningly?

Hor.

A countenance more

In sorrow than in anger.

Ham.

Pale, or red?

Hor. Nay, very pale.

Ham.

And fix'd his eyes upon you

Hor. Most constantly.

Ham.

I would I had been there!

Hor. It would have much amaz'd you.

Ham.

Very like,

Very like. Stay'd it long?

Hor. While one with moderate haste might tell a hundred.

Mar. Ber. Longer, longer.

Hor. Not when I saw it.

Ham.

His beard was grizzled? no?

Hor. It was, as I have seen it in his life,

Ham. I will watch to-night :
Perchance, 't will walk again.

Hor. I warrant 't will.

Ham. If it assume my noble father's person,
I'll speak to it, though hell itself should gape,
And bid me hold my peace. I pray you all,
If you have hitherto conceal'd this sight,
Let it be tenable in your silence still ;
And whatsoever else shall hap to-night,
Give it an understanding, but no tongue :
I will requite your loves. So, fare you well :
Upon the platform, 'twixt eleven and twelve,
I'll visit you.

All. Our duty to your honour.

Ham. Your loves, as mine to you. Farewell.

[Exeunt HORATIO, MARCELLUS, and BERNARDO.]

My father's spirit in arms ! all is not well ;
I doubt some foul play : would the night were come !
Till then, sit still, my soul. Foul deeds will rise,
Though all the earth o'erwhelm them, to men's eyes.

[Exit.]

SCENE III.—A Room in POLONIUS's House.

Enter LAERTES and OPHELIA.

Laer. My necessities are embark'd ; farewell :
And, sister, as the winds give benefit,
And convoy is assistant, do not sleep,
But let me hear from you.

Oph. Do you doubt that ?

Laer. For Hamlet, and the trifling of his favour,
Hold it a fashion, and a toy in blood ;
A violet in the youth of primy nature.
Forward, not permanent, sweet, not lasting,
The perfume and¹ suppli-ance of a minute ;
No more.

Oph. No more but so ?

Laer. Think it no more !
For nature, crescent, does not grow alone
In thews, and bulk : but, as this temple waxes,
The inward service of the mind and soul
Grows wide withal. Perhaps, he loves you now ;
And now no soil, nor cautel, doth besmirch
The virtue of his will ; but you must fear,
His greatness weigh'd, his will is not his own,
For he himself is subject to his birth :
He may not, as unvalued persons do,
Carve for himself ; for on his choice depends
The safety² and health of this whole state ;
And therefore must his choice be circumscrib'd
Unto the voice and yielding of that body,
Whereof he is the head. Then, if he says he loves you,
It fits your wisdom so far to believe it,
As he in his particular act and place³
May give his saying deed ; which is no farther,
Than the main voice of Denmark goes withal.
Then, weigh what loss your honour may sustain,
If with too credent ear you list his songs,
Or lose your heart, or your chaste treasure open
To his unmaster'd importunity.
Fear it, Ophelia, fear it, my dear sister ;
And keep you in the rear of your affection,
Out of the shot and danger of desire.
The chariest maid is prodigal enough,
If she unmask her beauty to the moon.
Virtue itself scapes not calumnious strokes :
The canker galls the infants of the spring,
Too oft before their buttons be disclos'd ;

And in the morn and liquid dew of youth
Contagious blastments are most imminent.
Be wary, then ; best safety lies in fear :
Youth to itself rebels, though none else near.

Oph. I shall th' effect of this good lesson keep,
As watchman to my heart. But, good my brother,
Do not, as some ungracious pastors do,
Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven,
Whilst, like a puff'd and reckless libertine,
Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads,
And recks not his own read.⁴

Laer. O ! fear me not.
I stay too long ;—but here my father comes.

Enter POLONIUS.

A double blessing is a double grace ;
Occasion smiles upon a second leave.

Pol. Yet here, Laertes ? aboard, aboard, for shame !
The wind sits in the shoulder of your sail,
And you are stay'd for. There,—my blessing with you ;

[Laying his Hand on LAERTES' Head]

And these few precepts in thy memory
Look thou character. Give thy thoughts no tongue,
Nor any unproportion'd thought his act.
Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar :
The friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel ;
But do not dull thy palm with entertainment
Of each new-hatch'd, unfledg'd comrade. Beware
Of entrance to a quarrel ; but, being in,
Bear 't, that th' opposer may beware of thee.
Give every man thine ear, but few thy voice ;
Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgment
Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not express'd in fancy ; rich, not gaudy :
For the apparel oft proclaims the man ;
And they in France, of the best rank and station,
Are of a most select and generous choice⁵ in that Neither a borrower, nor a lender be ;
For loan oft loses both itself and friend,
And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry
This above all,—to thine own self be true ;
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man.
Farewell : my blessing season this in thee !

Laer. Most humbly do I take my leave, my lord.

Pol. The time invites⁶ you : go ; your servants tend.

Laer. Farewell, Ophelia ; and remember well
What I have said to you.

Oph. 'T is in my memory lock'd
And you yourself shall keep the key of it.

Laer. Farewell. [Exit LAERTES]

Pol. What is't, Ophelia, he hath said to you ?

Oph. So please you, something touching the lord
Hamlet.

Pol. Marry, well bethought :

'T is told me, he hath very oft of late
Given private time to you ; and you yourself
Have of your audience been most free and bounteous
If it be so, (as so 't is put on me,

And that in way of caution) I must tell you,
You do not understand yourself so clearly.

As it behoves my daughter, and your honour.

What is between you ? give me up the truth.

Oph. He hath, my lord, of late made many tenders
Of his affection to me.

Pol. Affection ? pooh ! you speak like a green girl,
Unfitted in such frivolous circumstance.

Do you believe his tenders, as you call them ?

¹ These two words, not in folio. ² sanctity : in folio. ³ peculiar sect and force : in folio ⁴ Counsel. ⁵ ch'et : in t. o. ⁶ invites in quarto.

Oph. I do not know, my lord, what I should think.

Pol. Marry, I'll teach you: think yourself a baby; That you have ta'en these tenders for true pay, Which are not sterling. Tender yourself more dearly; Or, not to crack the wind of the poor phrase, Running¹ it thus, you'll tender me a fool.

Oph. My lord, he hath importun'd me with love, in honourable fashion.

Pol. Ay, fashion you may call it: go to, go to.

Oph. And hath given countenance to his speech, my lord,

With almost all the holy vows² of heaven.

Pol. Ay, springs to catch woodcocks. I do know,

When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul

sends³ the tongue vows: these blazes, daughter, giving more light than heat,—extinct in both,

Even in their promise, as it is a making.—

You must not take for fire. From this time,

Be somewhat searier of your maiden presence:

Set your entreatments at a higher rate,

Than a command to parley. For lord Hamlet,

Believe so much in him, that he is young;

And with a larger tether may he walk,

Than may be given you. In few, Ophelia,

Do not believe his vows, for they are brokers

Not of that die⁴ which their investments show;

But mere implorators of unholy suits,

Breathing like sanctified and pious bawds,⁵

The better to beguile. This is for all.—

I would not, in plain terms, from this time forth,

Have you so squander⁶ any moment's leisure,

As to give words or talk with the lord Hamlet.

Look to 't, I charge you; so now, come your ways.

Oph. I shall obey, my lord. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Platform.

Enter HAMLET, HORATIO, and MARCELLUS.

Ham. The air bites shrewdly; it is⁷ very cold.

Hor. It is a nipping, and an eager air.

Ham. What hour now?

Hor. I think, it lacks of twelve.

Mar. No, it is struck.

Hor. Indeed? I heard it not: it then draws near the season.

Wherein the spirit held his wont to walk.

[A Flourish of Trumpets, and Ordinance shot off, within.]

What does this mean, my lord?

Ham. The king doth wake to-night, and takes his rouse,

Keeps wassel, and the swaggering up-spring reels;

And as he drains his draughts of Rhenish down,

The kettle-drum and trumpet thus bray out

The triumph of his pledge.

Hor. Is it a custom?

Ham. Ay, marry, is 't:

But to my mind,—though I am native here,

And to the manner born,—it is a custom

More honour'd in the breach, than the observance.

This heavy-headed revel, east and west⁸

Makes us tradue'd and tax'd of other nations:

They clepe⁹ us drunkards, and with swinish phrase

Soil our addition; and, indeed, it takes

From our achievements, though perform'd at height,

The pith and marrow of our attribute.

So oft it chances in particular men,

That for some vicious mole of nature in them,

As, in their birth, (wherein they are not guilty,

Since nature cannot choose his origin)

By their o'ergrowth of some complexion,

Off breaking down the pales and forts of reason,

Or by some habit, that too much o'er-leavens

The form of plausive manners;—that these men,—

Carrying, I say, the stamp of one defect

Being nature's livery, or fortune's star,—

Their¹⁰ virtues else, be they as pure as grace,

As infinite as man may undergo,

Shall in the general censure take corruption

From that particular fault: the dram of ill¹²

Doth all the noble substance often dout¹³,

To his own scandal.

Enter Ghost,¹⁴ armed as before.

Hor. Look, my lord! it comes.

Ham. Angels and ministers of grace defend us!

[Pause.]

Be thou a spirit of health, or goblin damn'd,

Bring with thee airs from heaven, or blasts from hell,

Be thy intents¹⁵ wicked, or charitable,

Thou com'st in such a questionable shape,

That I will speak to thee. I'll call thee, Hamlet,

King, Father, Royal Dane: O! answer me:

Let me not burst in ignorance; but tell,

Why thy canoniz'd bones, hearsed in death,

Have burst their cerements? why the sepulchre,

Wherein we saw thee quietly inurn'd,¹⁷

Hath op'd his ponderous and marble jaws,

To cast thee up again? What may this mean,

That thou, dead corse, again, in complete steel,

Revisit'st thus the glimpses of the moon,

Making night hideous; and we fools of nature,

So horribly to shake our disposition,

With thoughts beyond the reaches of our souls?

Say, why is this? wherefore? what should we do?

[The Ghost beckons HAMLET.]

Hor. It beckons you to go away with it,

As if it some impartment did desire

To you alone.

Mar. Look, with what courteous action

It waves¹⁸ you to a more removed ground:

But do not go with it.

Hor. No, by no means.

Ham. It will not speak; then, will I follow it

Hor. Do not, my lord.

Ham. Why, what should be the fear?

I do not set my life at a pin's fee:

And, for my soul, what can it do to that,

Being a thing immortal as itself?—

It waves me forth again:—I'll follow it.

Hor. What, if it tempt you toward the flood, my lord,

Or to the dreadful summit of the cliff,

That beetles o'er his base into the sea,

And there assume some other horrible form,

Which might deprive your sovereignty of reason,

And draw you into madness? think of it:

The very place puts toys of desperation,¹⁹

Without more motive, into every brain

That looks so many fathoms to the sea,

And hears it roar beneath.

Ham. It waves me still.—Go on

I'll follow thee.

Mar. You shall not go, my lord.

Ham. Hold off your hands.

Hor. Be rul'd: you shall not go. [They struggle.]

Hor. He waxes desperate with imagination.

Hor. Have after.—To what issue will this come?

Mar. Something is rotten in the state of Denmark.

Hor. Heaven's will direct it!

Mar. Nay, let's follow him. [Exeunt.

SCENE V.—A more remote Part of the Platform.

Enter Ghost and HAMLET.

Ham. Whither wilt thou lead me? speak, I'll go no farther.

Ghost. Mark me.

Ham. I will.

Ghost. My hour is almost come,

When I to sulphurous and tormenting flames

Must render up myself.

Ham. Alas, poor ghost!

Ghost. Pity me not; but lend thy serious hearing
To what I shall unfold.

Ham. Speak; I am bound to hear.

Ghost. So art thou to revenge, when thou shalt hear.

Ham. What?

Ghost. I am thy father's spirit;

Doom'd for a certain term to walk the night,

And for the day confin'd to lasting fires,*

Till the foul crimes, done in my days of nature,

Are burnt and purg'd away. But that I am forbid

To tell the secrets of my prison-house,

I could a tale unfold, whose lightest word

Would harrow up thy soul, freeze thy young blood,

Make thy two eyes like stars start from their spheres,

Thy knotted³ and combined locks to part,

And each particular hair to stand an-end,

Like quills upon the fretful porcupine⁴:

But this eternal blazon must not be

To ears of flesh and blood.—List, list, O list!⁵—

If thou didst ever thy dear father love,—

Ham. O God!

Ghost. Revenge his foul and most unnatural murder.

Ham. Murder?

Ghost. Murder most foul, as in the best it is;

But this most foul, strange, and unnatural.

Ham. Haste me to know 't, that I, with wings as swift

As meditation, or the thoughts of love,

May sweep to my revenge.

Ghost. I find thee apt;

And duller shouldst thou be, than the fat weed

That roots⁶ itself in ease on Lethe wharf,

Wouldst thou not stir in this: now, Hamlet, hear.

'T is given out, that sleeping in mine orchard,

A serpent stung me: so the whole ear of Denmark

Is by a forged process of my death

Rankly abus'd; but know, thou noble youth,

The serpent that did sting thy father's life

Now wears his crown.

Ham. O, my prophetic soul! my uncle?

Ghost. Ay, that incestuous, that adulterate beast,

With witchcraft of his wit, with traitorous gifts,

O wicked wit, and gifts, that have the power

So to seduce!) won to his shameful lust

The will of my most seeming virtuous queen.

O, Hamlet, what a falling-off was there!

From me, whose love was of that dignity,

That it went hand in hand even with the vow

I made to her in marriage; and to decline

Upon a wretch, whose natural gifts were poor

To those of mine!

But virtue, as it never will be mov'd,

Though lewdness court it in a shape of heaven,

So lust, though to a radiant angel link'd,

Will sate itself in a celestial bed,

And prey on garbage.

But, soft! methinks, I scent the morning air:

Brief let me be.—Sleeping within mine orchard,

My custom always in the afternoon,

Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole,

With juice of cursed hebenon in a phial,

And in the porches of mine ears did pour

The leperous distilment; whose effect

Holds such an enmity with blood of man,

That, swift as quicksilver, it courses through

The natural gates and alleys of the body;

And with a sudden vigour it doth posset,

And curd, like eager⁷ droppings into milk,

The thin and wholesome blood: so did it mine:

And a most instant tetter bark'd⁸ about,

Most Lazar-like, with vile and loathsome crust

All my smooth body.

Thus was I, sleeping, by a brother's hand,

Of life, of crown, of queen, at once despoil'd⁹.

Cut off even in the blossom of my sin,

Unhouse'd¹⁰, disappointed, unaneal'd¹¹:

No reckoning made, but sent to my account

With all my imperfections on my head:

O, horrible! O, horrible! most horrible!

If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not;

Let not the royal bed of Denmark be

A couch for luxury and damned incest.

But, howsoever thou pursuest this act,

Taint not thy mind, nor let thy soul contrive

Against thy mother ought: leave her to heaven,

And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge,

To prick and sting her. Fare thee well at once!

The glow-worm shows the matin to be near,

And 'gins to pale his uneffectual fire:

Adieu, adieu! Hamlet,¹² remember me.

[Exit

Ham. O, all you host of heaven! O earth! What else?

And shall I couple hell?—O fie!—Hold, heart;

And you, my sinews, grow not instant old,

But bear me stiffly¹³ up.—Remember thee?

Ay, thou poor ghost, while memory holds a seat

In this distracted globe. Remember thee?

Yea, from the table of my memory

I'll wipe away all trivial fond records,

All saws of books, all forms, all pressures past,

That youth and observation copied there,

And thy commandment all alone shall live

Within the book and volume of my brain,

Unmix'd with baser matter: yes, by heaven!

O, most pernicious and perfidious woman!

O villain, villain, smiling, damned villain!

My tables,¹⁴—meet it is, I set it down.

That one may smile, and smile, and be a villain,—

At least, I am sure, it may be so in Denmark:—

So, uncle, there you are. Now to my word;

It is, "Adieu, adieu! remember me."

I have sworn't.

Hor. [Within.] My lord! my lord!

Mar. [Within.] Lord Hamlet!

Hor. [Within.] Heaven secure him!

Mar. [Within.] So be it!

Hor. [Within.] Illo, ho, ho, my lord!

Ham. Illo, ho, ho! come, bird, come.

Enter HORATIO and MARCELLUS.

Mar. How is't, my noble lord?

Hor. What news, my lord?

Ham. O, wonderful!

Hor. Good my lord, tell it.

Ham. No;

You'll reveal it.

Hor. Not I, my lord, by heaven.

Mar. Nor I, my lord.

Ham. How say you, then; would heart of man once think it?—

But you'll be secret.

Hor. Mar. Ay, by heaven, my lord.

Ham. There's ne'er a villain dwelling in all Denmark,

But he's an arrant knave.

Hor. There needs no ghost, my lord, come from the grave

To tell us this.

Ham. Why, right: you are i' the right;

And so, without more circumstance at all,

I hold it fit that we shake hands and part:

You, as your business and desire shall point you,

For every man hath business and desire,

Such as it is: and, for mine own poor part,

Look you, I'll go pray.

Hor. These are but wild and whirling words, my lord.

Ham. I am sorry they offend you, heartily; yes,

Faith, heartily.

Hor. There's no offence, my lord.

Ham. Yes, by Saint Patrick, but there is, Horatio,

And much offence too. Touching this vision here,

It is an honest ghost, that let me tell you:

For your desire to know what is between us,

Over-master't as you may. And now, good friends,

As you are friends, scholars, and soldiers,

Give me one poor request.

Hor. What is't, my lord?

Mar. We will.

Ham. Never make known what you have seen to-night.

Hor. Mar. My lord, we will not.

Ham. Nay, but swear't.

Hor. In faith,

My lord, not I.

Mar. Nor I, my lord, in faith.

Ham. Upon my sword.

Mar. We have sworn, my lord, already

Ham. Indeed, upon my sword, indeed.

Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.

Ham. Ha, ha, boy! say'st thou so? art thou there true-penny?

Come on,—you hear this fellow in the cellarage,—
Consent to swear.

Hor. Propose the oath, my lord

Ham. Never to speak of this that you have seen,
Swear by my sword.

Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.

Ham. Hic et ubique? then, we'll shift our ground.—
Come hither, gentlemen.

And lay your hands again upon my sword:

Never to speak of this that you have heard,

Swear by my sword.

Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.

Ham. Well said, old mole! canst work i' the earth so fast?

A worthy pioneer!—Once more remove, good friends.

Hor. O day and night, but this is wondrous strange!

Ham. And therefore as a stranger give it welcome.

There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio,

Than are dreamt of in your philosophy. But come;—

Here, as before, never, so help you mercy,

How strange or odd so'er I bear myself,—

As I, perchance, hereafter shall think meet

To put an antic disposition on,—

That you, at such times seeing me, never shall,

With arms encumber'd thus, or this head-shake,

Or by pronouncing of some doubtful phrase,

As, "Well, well, we know;"—or, "We could, an if we would;"—

Or, "If we list to speak;"—or, "There be, an if they might;"—

Or such ambiguous giving out, to note

That you know aught of me:—this not to do,

So grace and mercy at your most need help you,

Swear.

Ghost. [Beneath.] Swear.

Ham. Rest, rest, perturbed spirit!—So, gentlemen,

With all my love I do commend me to you:

And what so poor a man as Hamlet is

May do, I'll express his love and friending to you,

God willing, shall not lack. Let us go in together

And still your fingers on your lips. I pray.—

The time is out of joint; O cursed spite!

That ever I was born to set it right.—

Nay, come; let's go together.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Room in POLONIUS'S House.

Enter POLONIUS and REYNALDO.

Pol. Give him this money, and these notes, Reynaldo.

Rey. I will, my lord.

Pol. You shall do marvellous wisely, good Reynaldo,
Before you visit him, to make inquiry of his behaviour.

Rey. My lord, I did intend it.

Pol. Marry, well said: very well said. Look you, sir,
Inquire me first what Daneskers are in Paris;
And how, and who, what means, and where they keep,

What company, at what expense; and finding,
By this encompassment and drift of question,
That they do know my son, come you more nearer
Than your particular demands will touch it.

Take you, as't were, some distant knowledge of him
As thus.—"I know his father, and his friends,

And, in part, him;"—do you mark this, Reynaldo?

Rey. Ay, very well, my lord.

Pol. "And, in part, him; but," you may say, "not
well:

But, if't be he I mean, he's very wild,
Addicted so and so;"—and there put on him

What forgeries you please; marry, none so rank
As may dishonour him: take heed of that;
But, sir, such wanton, wild, and usual slips,
As are companions noted and most known
To youth and liberty.

Rey. As gaming, my lord.

Pol. Ay, or drinking, fencing, swearing, quarrelling,
Drabbing:—you may go so far.

Rey. My lord, that would dishonour him.

Pol. 'Faith, no: as you may season it in the charge.
You must not put another scandal on him,
That he is open to incontinency:
That's not my meaning; but breathe his faults so
quantly,

That they may seem the taints of liberty;

The flash and outbreak of a fiery mind;

A savageness in unreclaimed blood,

Of general assault.

Rey. But, my good lord,—

Pol. Wherefore should you do this?

Rey. Ay, my lord,
I would know that.

Pol. Marry, sir, here's my drift;

And, I believe, it is a fetch of warrant.¹

You laying these slight sullies on my son,

As 'twere a thing a little soil'd i' the working,

Mark you,

Your party in converse, him you would sound,

Having ever seen in the prenominate erimes

The youth you breathe of guilty, be assur'd,

He closes with you in this consequence:

"Good sir," or so; or "friend," or "gentleman,"—

According to the phrase, or the addition

Of man, and country.

Rey. Very good, my lord.

Pol. And then, sir, does he this,—he does—

What was I about to say?—By the mass, I was

About to say something:—where did I leave?

Rey. At closes in the consequence,

As "friend or so," and "gentleman."

Pol. At, closes in the consequence,—ay, marry;

He closes thus:—"I know the gentleman;

I saw him yesterday, or t' other day,

Or then, or then; with such, or such; and, as you say,

There was he gaming; there o'ertook in's rouse;

There falling out at tennis; or perchance,

I saw him enter such a house of sale,

Videlicet, a brothel" or so forth.—

See you now;

Your bait of falsehood takes this carp of truth:

And thus do we of wisdom and of reach,

With windlasses, and with assays of bias,

By indirects find directions out:

So, by my former lecture and advice,

Shall you my son. You have me, have you not?

Rey. My lord, I have.

Pol. God be wi' you; fare you well.

Rey. Good my lord.

Pol. Observe his inclination in yourself.

Rey. I shall, my lord.

Pol. And let him ply his music.

Rey. Well, my lord. [Exit.]

Enter OPHELIA.

Pol. Farewell!—How now, Ophelia? what's the matter?

Oph. Alas,* my lord! I have been so affrighted!

Pol. With what, in the name of God?

Oph. My lord, as I was sewing in my chamber,

Lord Hamlet,—with his doublet all unbrac'd;
No hat upon his head; his stockings foul'd,
Ungarter'd, and down-gyved to his ankle;
Pale as his shirt; his knees knocking each other
And with a look so piteous in purport,
As if he had been loosed out of hell,
To speak of horrors,—he comes before me.

Pol. Mad for thy love?

Oph.

My lord, I do not know;
But, truly, I do fear it.

Pol.

What said he?

Oph. He took me by the wrist, and held me hard,

Then goes he to the length of all his arm,

And, with his other hand thus o'er his brow,

He falls to such perusal of my face,

As he would draw it. Long stay'd he so:

At last,—a little shaking of mine arm,

And thrice his head thus waving up and down,—

He rais'd a sigh so piteous and profound,

That it did seem to shatter all his bulk,

And end his being. That done, he lets me go,

And, with his head over his shoulder turn'd,

He seem'd to find his way without his eyes;

For out o' doors he went without their help,

And to the last bended their light on me.

Pol. Come,* go with me: I will go seek the king

This is the very ecstasy of love;

Whose violent property fordoes itself,

And leads the will to desperate undertakings,

As oft as any passion under heaven,

That does afflict our natures. I am sorry,—

What! have you given him any hard words of late?

Oph. No, my good lord; but, as you did command,

I did repel his letters, and denied

His access to me.

Pol.

That hath made him mad.

I am sorry that with better heed and judgment

I had not quoted* him: I fear'd, he did but trifle,

And meant to wreck thee; but, beshrew my jealousy,

By heaven,* it is as proper to our age

To cast beyond ourselves in our opinions,

As it is common for the younger sort

To lack discretion. Come, go we to the king:

This must be known; which, being kept close, might move

More grief to hide, than hate to utter love. [Exeunt]

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter King, Queen, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and Attendants.

King. Welcome, dear Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern:

Moreover, that we did much long to see you,

The need we have to use you, did provoke

Our hasty sending. Something have you heard

Of Hamlet's transformation: so I call it,

Sith nor th' exterior nor the inward man

Remembers that it was. What it should be,

More than his father's death, that this hath put him

So much from the understanding of himself,

I cannot dream* of: I entreat you both,

That, being of so young days brought up with him,

And since so neighbour'd to his youth and humour,

That you vouchsafe your rest here in our court

Some little time; so by your companies

To draw him on to pleasures, and to gather,

So much as from occasion you may glean,

Whether aught, to us unknown, afflicts him thus,*

That, open'd, lies within our remedy.

¹ wit: in quarto, 1604. ² O my lord: in quartos. ³ Not in folio. ⁴ Obscured ⁵ It seems: in folio. ⁶ deem: in folio. ⁷ have you in qua tes. * This line is not in folio.

Queen. Good gentlemen, he hath much talk'd of you ; And, sure I am, two men there are not living, To whom he more adheres. If it will please you To show us so much gentry, and good will, As to expend your time with us a while, For the supply and profit of our hope, Your visitation shall receive such thanks As fits a king's remembrance.

Ros. Both your majesties Might, by the sovereign power you have of us, Put your dread pleasures more into command Than to entreaty.

Guil. But! we both obey ; And here give up ourselves, in the full bent, To lay our service freely at your feet, To be commanded.

King. Thanks, Rosencrantz, and gentle Guildenstern.

Queen. Thanks, Guildenstern, and gentle Rosen- And I beseech you instantly to visit [crantz : My too much changed son.—Go, some of you, And bring these gentlemen where Hamlet is.

Guil. Heavens make our presence, and our practices, Pleasant and helpful to him !

Queen. Ay :² amen !

[Exeunt ROSECRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and some Attendants.

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. Th' ambassadors from Norway, my good lord, Are joyfully return'd.

King. Thou still hast been the father of good news.

Pol. Have I, my lord ? Assure you, my good liege, I hold my duty, as I hold my soul, Both to my God, one³ to my gracious king : And I do think, (or else this brain of mine Hunts not the trail of policy so sure As it hath⁴ us'd to do) that I have found The very cause of Hamlet's lunacy.

King. O ! speak of that ; that do I long to hear.

Pol. Give first admittance to th' ambassadors ; My news shall be the fruit⁵ to that great feast.

King. Thyself do grace to them, and bring them in. [Exit POLONIUS.

Queen. He tells me, my dear Gertrude, he hath found The head and source of all your son's distemper.

Queen. I doubt, it is no other but the main ;

His father's death, and our o'erhasty marriage.

Re-enter POLONIUS, with VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS.

King. Well, we shall sift him.—Welcome, my good friends.

Say, Voltimand, what from our brother Norway ?

Volt. Most fair return of greetings, and desires.

Upon our first, he sent out to suppress

His nephew's levies ; which to him appear'd

To be a preparation 'gainst the Polack

But, better look'd into, he truly found

It was against your highness : whereat griev'd,—

That so his sickness, age, and impotence,

Was falsely borne in hand,—sends out arrests

On Fortinbras ; which he in brief obeys.

Receives rebuke from Norway, and, in fine,

Makes vow before his uncle, never more

To give th' assay of arms against your majesty.

Whereon old Norway, overcome with joy,

Gives him three thousand crowns in annual fee,

And his commission to employ those soldiers,

So levied as before, against the Polack :

With an entreaty, herein farther shown.

[Giving a Paper.

That it might please you to give quiet pass Through your dominions for this enterprise, On such regards of safety, and allowance, As therein are set down.

King. It likes us well ; And, at our more consider'd time, we'll read, Answer, and think upon this business : Mean time, we thank you for your well-took labour. Go to your rest ; at night we'll feast together : Most welcome home.

[Exeunt VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS.

Pol. This business is well ended.

My liege, and madam ; to expostulate What majesty should be, what duty is, Why day is day, night night, and time is time, Were nothing but to waste day, night, and time. Therefore, since' brevity is the soul of wit, And tediousness the limbs and outward flourishes I will be brief. Your noble son is mad : Mad call I it ; for, to define true madness, What is 't, but to be nothing else but mad : But let that go.

Queen. More matter, with less art.

Pol. Madam, I swear, I use no art at all. That he is mad, 't is true : 't is true, 't is pity, And pity 't is 't is true : a foolish figure ; But farewell it, for I will use no art. Mad let us grant him, then ; and now remains, That we find out the cause of this effect ; Or rather say, the cause of this defect, For this effect defective comes by cause : Thus it remains, and the remainder thus. Perpend.

I have a daughter ; have, while she is mine ; Who, in her duty and obedience, mark, Hath given me this. Now gather, and surmise.

[Reads

—“ To the celestial, and my soul's idol, the most beautified Ophelia,”—

That's an ill phrase, a vile phrase : “ beautified ” is a vile phrase ; but you shall hear.—Thus :

“ In her excellent white bosom, these,” &c.—

Queen. Came this from Hamlet to her ?

Pol. Good madam, stay awhile ; I will be faithful.—

“ Doubt thou the stars are fire, [Reads

Doubt, that the sun doth move ;

Doubt truth to be a liar, .

But never doubt I love.

“ O dear Ophelia ! I am ill at these numbers : I have not art to reckon my groans ; but that I love thee best, O ! most best, believe it. Adieu.

Thine evermore, most dear lady, whilst this machine is to him, Hamlet ”

This in obedience hath my daughter shown me ;

and more above, hath his solicitings,

As they fell out by time, by means, and place,

Allegiven to mine ear.

King. But how hath she Received his love ?

Pol.

What do you think of me ?

King. As of a man faithful, and honourable.

Pol. ' would fain prove so. But what might you think, When had seen this hot love on the wing, (As I perceiv'd it, I must tell you that, Before my laughter told me) what might you, Or my dearnest, your queen here, think, If I had plaid the desk, or table-book ; Or given my eart a winking⁶, mute and dumb .

¹ Not in folio. ² and : in quartos. ³ I have : in folio. ⁴ news : in folio. ⁵ my sweet queen : in folio. ⁶ Not in quartos. ⁷ work : in quartos.

Or look'd upon this love with idle sight;
What might you think? no, I went round to work,
And my young mistress thus I did bespeak:
"Lord Hamlet is a prince, out of thy star!¹
This must not be;"² and then I precepts gave her,
That she should lock herself from his resort,
Admit no messengers, receive no tokens.
Which done, she took the fruits of my advice;
And he, repulsed, a short tale to make,
Fell into sadness; then into a fast;
Thence to a watch; thence into a weakness;
Thence to a lightness; and by this declension,
Into the madness wherein now he raves,
And we all wail³ for.

King. Do you think 't is this?

Queen. It may be, very likely.

Pol. Hath there been such a time, I'd fain know that,
That I have positively said, "'T is so,"
When it prov'd otherwise?

King. Not that I know.

Pol. Take this from this, if this be otherwise.

[Pointing to his Head and Shoulder]

If circumstances lead me, I will find
Where truth is hid, though it were hid indeed
Within the centre.

King. How may we try it farther?

Pol. You know, sometimes he walks for hours together,

Here in the lobby.

Queen. So he doth, indeed.

Pol. At such a time I'll loose my daughter to him:
Be you and I behind an arras, then:

Mark the encounter; if he love her not,
And be not from his reason fallen thereon,
Let me be no assistant to a state,
But⁴ keep a farm and carters.

King. We will try it.

Enter HAMLET, reading.

Queen. But, look, where sadly the poor wretch comes reading.

Pol. Away! I do beseech you, both away.

I'll board him presently:—O! give me leave.—

[Exeunt King, Queen, and Attendants.]

How does my good lord Hamlet?

Ham. Well, god-a-mercy.

Pol. Do you know me, my lord?

Ham. Excellent well; you are a fishmonger.

Pol. Not I, my lord.

Ham. Then, I would you were so honest a man.

Pol. Honest, my lord?

Ham. Ay, sir: to be honest, as this world goes, is to be one man picked out of ten⁵ thousand.

Pol. That's very true, my lord.

Ham. For if the sun breed maggots in a dead dog, being a good⁶ kissing carrion,—Have you a daughter?

Pol. I have, my lord.

Ham. Let her not⁷ walk i' the sun: conception is a blessing: but not as your daughter may conceive:— friend, look to't.

Pol. [Aside.] How say you by that? Still harping on my daughter:—yet he knew me not at first; he said, I was a fishmonger.⁸ He is far gone, far gone;
and truly in my youth I suffered much extremity for love;
very near this. I'll speak to him again.—What do you read, my lord?

Ham. Words, words, words.

Pol. What is the matter, my lord?

Ham. Between whom?

Pol. I mean, the matter that you read,⁹ my lord.

Ham. Slanders, sir: for the satirical rogue says here, that old men have grey beards: that their faces are wrinkled; their eyes purging thick amber, and plum tree gum; and that they have a plentiful lack of wit, together with most weak hams: all of which, sir, though I most powerfully and potentially believe, yet I hold it not honesty to have it thus set down; for you yourself, sir, should be¹⁰ old as I am, if like a crab you could go backward.

Pol. Though this be madness, yet there is method in't. [Aside.] Will you walk out of the air, my lord?

Ham. Into my grave?

Pol. Indeed, that is out o' the air.—[Aside.¹¹] How pregnant sometimes his replies are! a happiness that often madness hits on, which reason and sanity could not so prosopically be delivered of. I will leave him, and suddenly contrive the means of meeting between him and my daughter.—[To him.¹²] My honourable lord, I will most humbly take my leave of you.

Ham. You cannot, sir, take from me any thing that I will more willingly part withal: except my life,¹³ except my life, except my life.

Pol. Fare you well, my lord.

Ham. These tedious old fools!

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Pol. You go to seek the lord Hamlet; there he is.

Ros. God save you, sir! [To POLONIUS]
[Exit POLONIUS]

Guil. Mine honour'd lord!—

Ros. My most dear lord!

Ham. My excellent good friends! How dost thou Guildenstern? Ah, Rosencrantz! Good lads, how do ye both?

Ros. As the indifferent children of the earth.

Guil. Happy, in that we are not overhappy;¹⁴

On fortune's cap we are not the very button.

Ham. Nor the soles of her shoe?

Ros. Neither, my lord.

Ham. Then you live about her waist, or in the middle of her favours?

Guil. Faith, her privates we.

Ham. In the secret parts of fortune? O! most true;
she is a strumpet. What news?

Ros. None, my lord, but that the world's grown honest.

Ham. Then is dooms-day near; but your news is not true. Let me question more in particular: what have you, my good friends, deserved at the hands of fortune, that she sends you to prison hither?

Guil. Prison, my lord!

Ham. Denmark's a prison.

Ros. Then, is the world one.

Ham. A goodly one; in which there are many confines, wards, and dungeons, Denmark being one of the worst.

Ros. We think not so, my lord.

Ham. Why, then 't is none to you; for there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so:
to me it is a prison.

Ros. Why then, your ambition makes it one: 't is too narrow for your mind.

Ham. O God! I could be bounded in a nut-shell, and count myself a king of infinite space, were it not that I have bad dreams.

Guil. Which dreams, indeed, are ambition; for the

¹ sphere: in folio. 1632. ² mourn: in quartos. ³ And: in folio. ⁴ two: in folio. ⁵ So old copies. Warburton reads: god. ⁶ 'I' Not very substance of the ambitious is merely the shadow of a dream.

Ham. A dream itself is but a shadow.

Ros. Truly, and I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality, that it is but a shadow's shadow.

Ham. Then are our beggars bodies, and our monarchs, and outstretched heroes, the beggars' shadows. Shall we to the court? for, by my fay, I cannot reason.

Ros. Guil. We'll wait upon you.

Ham. No such matter: I will not sort you with the rest of my servants: for, to speak to you like an honest man, I am most dreadfully attended. But, in the beaten way of friendship, what make you at Elsinore?

Ros. To visit you, my lord; no other occasion.

Ham. Beggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks; but I thank you: and sure, dear friends, my thanks are too dear a halfpenny. Were you not sent for? Is it your own inclining? Is it a free visitation? Come, come; deal justly with me: come, come; nay, speak.

Guil. What should we say, my lord?

Ham. Why any thing, but to the purpose. You were sent for; and there is a kind of confession in your looks, which your modesties have not craft enough to colour: I know, the good king and queen have sent for you.

Ros. To what end, my lord?

Ham. That you must teach me. But let me conjure you, by the rights of our fellowship, by the consonance of our youth, by the obligation of our ever-preserved love, and by what more dear a better proposer could charge you withal, be even and direct with me, whether you were sent for, or no?

Ros. What say you?

[To GUILDENSTERN.

Ham. Nay, then I have an eye of you. [Aside.]—If you love me, hold not off.

Guil. My lord, we were sent for.

Ham. I will tell you why: so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen moults no feather. I have of late (but wherefore I know not) lost all my mirth, foregone all custom of exercises: and, indeed, it goes so heavily with my disposition, that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy, the air, look you, this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fires, why, it appeareth nothing to me, but a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculties! in form, and moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust? man delights not me: [Ros. smiles.] no, nor woman neither, though by your smiling you seem to say so.

Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did you laugh, then, when I said, man delights not me?

Ros. To think, my lord, if you delight not in man, what lenten¹ entertainment the players shall receive from you: we coted² them on the way, and hither are they coming to offer you service.

Ham. He that plays the king, shall be welcome; his majesty shall have tribute of me: the adventurous knight shall use his foil and target: the lover shall not sigh gratis: the humorous man shall end his part in peace: the clown shall make those laugh, whose lungs are tickled o' the sere;³ and the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for't.—What players are they?

Ros. Even those you were wont to take such delight in, the tragedians of the city.

Ham. How chances it, they travel? their residence, both in reputation and profit, was better both ways.

Ros. I think, their inhibition comes by the means of the late innovation.⁴

Ham. Do they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the city? Are they so followed?

Ros. No, indeed, they are not.

Ham. How comes it? Do they grow rusty?

Ros. Nay, their endeavour keeps in the wonted pace; but there is, sir, an ery of children,⁵ little eyases, that cry out on the top of question, and are most tyrannically clapped for't: these are now the fashion; and so berattle the common stages, (so they call them) that many, wearing rapiers, are afraid of goose quills, and dare scarce come thither.

Ham. What! are they children? who maintains them? how are they escoted?⁶ Will they pursue the quality no longer than they can sing? will they not say afterwards, if they should grow themselves to common players, (as it is most like, if their means are not better) their writers do them wrong, to make them exclaim against their own succession?

Ros. 'Faith, there has been much to do on both sides; and the nation holds it no sin to tarre⁷ them to controversy: there was, for a while, no money bid for argument, unless the poet and the player went to cuffs in the question.

Ham. Is it possible?

Guil. O! there has been much throwing about of brains.

Ham. Do the boys carry it away?

Ros. Ay, that they do, my lord; Hercules, and his load too.

Ham. It is not very⁸ strange; for my uncle is king of Denmark, and those, that would make mowes⁹ at him while my father lived, give twenty, forty, fifty, an hundred ducats a-piece for his picture in little. 'Shlood! there is something in this more than natural, if philosophy could find it out.

[Trumpets within.]

Guil. There are the players.

Ham. Gentlemen, you are welcome to Elsinore. Your hands. Come, then: the appurtenances of welcome is fashion and ceremony: let me comply with you in this garb, lest my extent to the players (which, I tell you, must show fairly outward) should more appear like entertainment than yours. You are welcome; but my uncle-father, and aunt-mother, are deceived.

Guil. In what, my dear lord?

Ham. I am but mad north-north-west: when the wind is southerly, I know a hawk from a hand-saw.¹⁰

Enter POLOXIES.

Pol. Well be with you, gentlemen!

Ham. Hark you, Guildenstern!—and you too;—at each ear a hearer: that great baby, you see there, is not yet out of his swathing-clouts.

Ros. Haply, he's the second time come to them; for, they say, an old man is twice a child.

Ham. I will prophesy, he comes to tell me of the

Pol. My lord, I have news to tell you.

Ham. My lord, I have news to tell you. When Roscius was an actor in Rome,—

Pol. The actors are come hither, my lord.

Ham. Buz, buz!

Pol. Upon my honour,—

Ham. Then came each actor on his ass,—

Pol. The best actors in the world, either for tragedy, comedy, history, pastoral, pastoral-comical, historical-pastoral, tragical-historical, tragical-comical-historical-pastoral, scene indivisible, or poem unlimited: Seneca cannot be too heavy, nor Plautus too light. For the law of writ, and the liberty, these are the only men.

Ham. O Jephthah, Judge of Israel, what a treasure hadst thou!

Pol. What treasure had he, my lord?

Ham. Why—

“One fair daughter, and no more,
The which he loved passing well.”

Pol. Still on my daughter.

[Aside.

Ham. Am I not i' the right, old Jephthah?

Pol. If you call me Jephthah, my lord, I have a daughter that I love passing well.

Ham. Nay, that follows not.

Pol. What follows, then, my lord?

Ham. Why,

“As by lot, God wot,”

And then, you know,

“It came to pass, as most like it was.”

The first row of the pious chanson will show you more; for look, where my abridgment comes.

Enter Four or Five Players.

You are welcome, masters; welcome, all.—I am glad to see thee well:—welcome, good friends.—O, old friend! why, thy face is valenced³ since I saw thee last: com'st thou to beard me in Denmark?—What, my young lady and mistress! By'r-lady, your ladyship is nearer to heaven, than when I saw you last, by the altitude of a chopine.⁴ Pray God, your voice, like a piece of uncurrent gold, be not cracked within the ring.—Masters, you are all welcome. We'll e'en to't like French falconers, fly at any thing we see: we'll have a speech straight. Come, give us a taste of your quality; come, a passionate speech.

1 Play. What speech, my good⁵ lord?

Ham. I heard thee speak me a speech once,—but it was never acted; or, if it was, not above once, for the play, I remember, pleased not the million; 't was cavie to the general: but it was (as I received it, and others, whose judgments in such matters cried in the top of mine) an excellent play; well digested in the scenes, set down with as much modesty as cunning. I remember, one said, there was no salt⁶ in the lines to make the matter savoury, nor no matter in the phrase that might indict the author of affectation, but called 't an honest method, as' wholesome as sweet, and by very much more handsome than fine. One speech in it I chiefly loved: 't was Æneas' tale⁷ to Dido; and thereabout of it especially, where he speaks of Priam's slaughter. If it live in your memory, begin at this line:—let me see, let me see;—

“The rugged Pyrrhus, like the Hyrcanian beast,”

—'t is not so; it begins with Pyrrhus.

“The rugged Pyrrhus,—he, whose sable arms,

“Black as his purpose, did the night resemble

“When he lay couched in the ominous horse,
“Hath now this dread and black complexion smeard
“With heraldry more dismal; head to foot
“Now is he total gules; horribly trick'd
“With blood of fathers, mothers, daughters, sons;
“Bak'd and impasted with the parching streets,
“That lend a tyrannous and a damned light
“To their lord's murder;⁸ roasted in wrath, and fire,
“And thus o'er-siz'd with coagulate gore,
“With eyes like carbuncles, the hellish Pyrrhus
“Old grandsire Priam seeks;”—
So proceed you.

Pol. 'Fore God, my lord, well spoken; with good accent, and good discretion.

1 Play. “Anon he finds him

“Striking too short at Greeks: his antique sword,

“Rebellious to his arm, lies where it falls,

“Repugnant to command. Unequal match'd.⁹

“Pyrrhus at Priam drives; in rage strikes wide,

“But with the whiff and wind of his fell sword

“The unnerv'd father falls. Then senseless Æam.

“Seeming to feel this blow, with flaming top

“Stoops to his base; and with a hideous crash

“Takes prisoner Pyrrhus' ear: for, lo! his sword

“Which was declining on the milky head

“Of reverend Priam, seem'd i' the air to stick:

“So, as a painted tyrant, Pyrrhus stood:

“And, like a neutral to his will and matter,

“Did nothing.

“But, as we often see, against some storm,

“A silence in the heavens, the rack stand still,

“The bold winds speechless, and the orb below

“As hush as death, anon the dreadful thunder

“Doth rend the region; so, after Pyrrhus' pause,

“Aroused vengeance sets him new a-work,

“And never did the Cyclops' hammers fall

“On Mars's armour, forg'd for proof eterne,

“With less remorse than Pyrrhus' bleeding sword

“Now falls on Priam.—

“Out, out, thou strumpet. Fortune! All you gods,

“In general synod, take away her power;

“Break all the spokes and felloes from her wheel,

“And bowl the round nave down the hill of heaven,

“As low as to the fiends!”

Pol. This is too long.

Ham. It shall to the barber's, with your beard.—
Prythee, say on: he's for a jig,¹⁰ or a tale of bawdry, or he sleeps. Say on: come to Hecuba.

1 Play. “But who, O! who had seen the mobled¹¹ queen?”

Ham. The mobled queen?

Pol. That's good; mobled queen is good.

1 Play. “Run barefoot up and down threat'ning the flames

“With bisson¹² rheum; a clout upon that head,

“Where late the diadem stood: and for a robe

“About her lank and all o'er-teemed loins,

“A blanket, in th' alarm of fear caught up;

“Who this had seen, with tongue in venom steep'd,
“Gainst fortune's state would treason have pronounc'd

“But if the gods themselves did see her then,

“When she saw Pyrrhus make malicious sport

“In mincing with his sword her husband's limbs,

“The instant burst of clamour that she made,

“(Unless things mortal move them not at all)

“Would have made milch the burning eyes of heaven,

“And passionate¹³ the gods.”

Do you hear, let them be well used ; for they are the abstracts, and brief chronicles, of the time : after your death you were better have a bad epitaph, than their ill report while you live².

Pol. My lord, I will use them according to their desert.

Ham. God 's bodkin, man, much³ better : use every man after his desert, and who should 'scape whipping ? Use them after your own honour and dignity : the less they deserve, the more merit is in your bounty. Take them in.

Pol. Come, sirs.

[Exit Polonius, with some of the Players.]

Ham. Follow him, friends : we'll hear a play to-morrow.—Dost thou hear me, old friend ? can you play the murder of Gonzago ?

1 Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. We'll have it to-morrow night. You could, for a need, study a speech of some dozen or sixteen lines, which I would set down and insert in 't, could you not ?

1 Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Very well.—Follow that lord : and look you mock him not. [Exit Player.] My good friends, [To Ros. and GUIL.] I'll leave you till night : you are welcome to Elsinore.

Ros. Good my lord !

[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.]

Ham. Ay, so, good bye you⁴.—Now I am alone.—
O, what a rogue and peasant slave am I !
Is it not monstrous, that this player here,
But in a fiction, in a dream of passion,
Could force his soul so to his own⁵ conceit,
That from her working all his visage wann'd⁶ ;
Tears in his eyes, distraction in his aspect,
A broken voice, and his whole function suiting
With forms to his conceit ? and all for nothing :
For Hecuba !
What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba,
That he should weep for her ? What would he do,
Had he the motive and the cue for passion,
That I have ? He would drown the stage with tears,

And cleave the general ear with horrid speech ;
Make mad the guilty, and appal the free,
Confound the ignorant ; and amaze, indeed,
The very faculties of eyes and ears. Yet I,
A dull and muddy-mettled rascal, peak,
Like John a-dreams, unpregnant of my cause,
And can say nothing ; no, not for a king,
Upon whose property, and most dear life,
A damn'd defeat was made. Am I a coward ?
Who calls me villain ? breaks my pate across ?
Plucks off my beard, and blows it in my face ?
Tweaks me by the nose ? gives me the lie i' the throat
As deep as to the lungs ? Who does me this ? Ha !
'Swords ! I should take it ; for it cannot be,
But I am pigeon-liver'd, and lack gall
To make transgression⁷ bitter, or ere this
I should have fatted all the region kites
With this slave's offal. Bloody, bawdy villain !
Remorseless, treacherous, lecherous, kindless villain !
O, vengeance !
Why⁸ what an ass am I ! This is most brave ;
That I, the son of a dear father⁹ murder'd,
Prompted to my revenge by heaven and hell,
Must, like a whore, unpack my heart with words,
And fall a cursing, like a very drab,
A scullion !
Fie upon 't !—foh ! About my brain !—I have heard,
That guilty creatures, sitting at a play,
Have by the very cunning of the scene
Been struck so to the soul, that presently
They have proclaim'd their malefactions ;
For murder, though it have no tongue, will speak
With most miraculous organ. I'll have these players
Play something like the murder of my father,
Before mine uncle : I'll observe his looks ;
I'll tent¹¹ him to the quick : if he but blench¹²,
I know my course. The spirit, that I have seen,
May be the devil ; and the devil hath power
T' assume a pleasing shape ; yea, and, perhaps,
Out of my weakness, and my melancholy,
As he is very potent with such spirits,
Abuses me to damn me. I'll have grounds
More relative than this : the play 's the thing,
Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king. [Exit

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter King, Queen, POLONIUS, OPHELIA, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. And can you, by no drift of conference¹³,
Get from him why he puts on this confusion.
Grating so harshly all his days of quiet
With turbulent and dangerous lunacy ?

Ros. He does confess, he feels himself distracted :
But from what cause he will by no means speak.

GUIL. Nor do we find him forward to be sounded.
But with a crafty madness keeps aloof.
When we would bring him on to some confession
Of his true state.

Queen. Did he receive you well ?

Ros. Most like a gentleman.

GUIL. But with much forcing of his disposition.

Ros. Niggard of question ; but to our demands

Most free in his reply.

Queen.

Did you assay him

To any pastime ?

Ros. Madam, it so fell out, that certain players
We o'er-raught¹⁴ on the way : of these we told him,
And there did seem in him a kind of joy
To hear of it. They are about the court ;
And, as I think, they have already order
This night to play before him.

Pol.

'T is most true.

And he beseech'd me to entreat your majesties,
To hear and see the matter.

King. With all my heart ; and it doth much content me
To hear him so inclin'd.

Good gentlemen, give him a farther edge,
And drive his purpose on to these delights.

Ros. We shall, my lord.

King. Sweet Gertrude, leave us too;
For we have closely sent for Hamlet hither,
That he, as 't were by accident, may here
Affront¹ Ophelia: her father, and myself (lawful espials)
Will so bestow ourselves, that, seeing, unseen,
We may of their encounter frankly judge;
And gather by him, as he is behav'd,
If 't be th' affliction of his love, or no,
That thus he suffers for.

Queen. I shall obey you.—
And, for your part, Ophelia, I do wish,
That your good beauties be the happy cause
Of Hamlet's wildness; so shall I hope, your virtues
Will bring him to his wonted way again,
To both your honours.

Oph. Madam, I wish it may. [Exit Queen.]
Pol. Ophelia, walk you here.—Gracious, so please you,
We will bestow ourselves.—Read on this book,

[To Ophelia.]
That show of such an exercise may colour
Your loneliness.—We are oft to blame in this,—
'T is too much prov'd,—that, with devotion's visage,
And pious action, we do sugar² o'er
The devil himself.

King. O! 't is too true.—[Aside.] How smart
A lash that speech doth give my conscience!
The harlot's cheek, beautied with plastering art,
Is not more ugly to the thing that helps it,
Than is my deed to my most painted word.
O heavy burden!

Pol. I hear him coming: let's withdraw, my lord.
[Exeunt King and Polonius.]
Manet Ophelia behind, reading.

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. To be, or not to be; that is the question:—
Whether 't is nobler in the mind, to suffer
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune;
Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
And by opposing end them?—To die,—to sleep,—
No more;—and, by a sleep, to say we end
The heart-ache, and the thousand natural shocks
That flesh is heir to,—'t is a consummation
Devoutly to be wish'd. To die:—to sleep:—
To sleep! perchance to dream:—ay, there's the rub;
For in that sleep of death what dreams may come,
When we have shuffled off this mortal coil,
Must give us pause. There's the respect
That makes calamity of so long life:
For who would bear the whips and scorns of time,
The oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely,
The pangs of despis'd love, the law's delay,
The insolence of office, and the spurns
That patient merit of the unworthy takes,
When he himself might his quietus make
With a bare bodkin? who would fardels bear,
To grunt and sweat under a weary life,
But that the dread of something after death,—
The undiscover'd country, from whose bourn
No traveller returns,—puzzles the will,
And makes us rather bear those ills we have,
Than fly to others that we know not of?
Thus conscience does make cowards of us all;
And thus the native hue of resolution
Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought,
And enterprises of great pith³ and moment,
With this regard their currents turn awry,
And lose the name of action.—Soft you, now!

The fair Ophelia.—Nymph, in thy orisons,
Be all my sins remember'd.

Oph. [Coming forward.]
How does your honour for this many a day?

Ham. I humbly thank you; well, well, well.

Oph. My lord, I have remembrances of yours,
That I have longed long to re-deliver;
I pray you, now receive them.

Ham. No, not I;
I never gave you aught.

Oph. My honour'd lord, I know right well you did;
And with them words of so sweet breath compos'd
As made the things more rich: their perfume lost,
Take these again; for to the noble mind,
Rich gifts wax poor when givers prove unkind.

There, my lord.

Ham. Ha, ha! are you honest?

Oph. My lord!

Ham. Are you fair?

Oph. What means your lordship?

Ham. That if you be honest, and fair, your honesty should admit no discourse to your beauty.

Oph. Could beauty, my lord, have better commerce than with honesty?

Ham. Ay, truly; for the power of beauty will sooner transform honesty from what it is to a bawd, than the force of honesty can translate beauty into his likeness:
this was some time a paradox, but now the time gives it proof. I did love you once.

Oph. Indeed, my lord, you made me believe so.

Ham. You should not have believed me: for virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock, but we shall relish of it. I loved you not.

Oph. I was the more deceived.

Ham. Get thee to a nunnery: why wouldst thou be a breeder of sinners? I am myself indifferent honest; but yet I could accuse me of such things, that it were better, my mother had not borne me. I am very proud, revengful, ambitious; with more offences at my back⁴, than I have thoughts to put them in, imagination to give them shape, or time to act them in. What should such fellows as I do, crawling between heaven and earth? We are arrant knaves, all; believe none of us.
Go thy ways to a nunnery. Where's your father?

Oph. At home, my lord.

Ham. Let the doors be shut upon him, that he may play the fool no where⁵ but in his own house. Farewell.

Oph. O! help him, you sweet heavens!

Ham. If thou dost marry, I'll give thee this plague for thy dowry: be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny. Get thee to a nunnery; farewell⁶. Or, if thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool, for wise men know well enough what monsters you make of them. To a nunnery go; and quickly too. Farewell.

Oph. Heavenly powers, restore him!

Ham. I have heard of your paintings⁷ too, well enough: God hath given you one face⁸, and you make yourselves another: you jig, you amble, and you lisp, and nickname God's creatures, and make your wantonness your ignorance. Go to; I'll no more on't: it hath made me mad. I say, we will have no more marriages, those that are married already, all but one, shall live; the rest shall keep as they are. To a nunnery, go. [Exit HAMLET.]

Th' expectancy and rose of the fair state,
The glass of fashion, and the mould of form,
Th' observ'd of all observers, quite, quite down !
And I, of ladies most deject and wretched,
That suck'd the honey of his music vows,
Now see that noble and most sovereign reason,
Like sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh ;
That unmatch'd form and feature¹ of blown youth,
Blasted with ecstasy. O, woe is me !
To have seen what I have seen, see what I see !

Re-enter King and Polonius.

King. Love ! his affections do not that way tend ;
Nor what he spake, though it lack'd form a little,
Was not like madness. There's something in his soul,
O'er which his melancholy sits on brood ;
And, I do doubt, the hatch, and the disclose,
Will be some danger : which for to prevent,
I have, in quick determination,
Thus set it down. He shall with speed to England,
For the demand of our neglected tribute :
Haply, the seas, and countries different,
With variable objects, shall expel
This something settled matter in his heart,
Whereon his brain still beating puts him thus
From fashion of himself. What think you on't ?

Pol. It shall do well ; but yet do I believe,
The origin and commencement of his² grief
Sprung from neglected love.—How now, Ophelia !
You need not tell us what lord Hamlet said ;
We heard it all.—My lord, do as you please ;
But, if you hold it fit, after the play
Let his queen mother all alone entreat him
To show his griefs : let her be round³ with him ;
And I'll be plac'd, so please you, in the ear
Of all their conference. If she find him not,
To England send him ; or confine him where
Your wisdom best him think.

King. It shall be so :
Madness in great ones must not unwatch'd go. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Hall in the Same.

*Enter HAMLET, and certain Players, unready.

Ham. Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue ; but if you mouth it, as many of your players do, I had as lief the town-crier spoke my lines. Nor do not saw the air too much with your hand, thus ; but use all gently : for in the very torrent, tempest, and (as I may say) whirlwind of passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance, that may give it smoothness. O ! it offends me to the soul, to hear a robustious periwig-pated fellow tear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings ; who, for the most part, are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumb shows, and noise : I would have such a fellow whipped for o'er-doing Ter-mizant¹ ; it out-herods Herod² : pray you avoid it.

1 Player. I warrant your honour

Ham. Be not too tame neither but let your own discretion be your tutor : suit the action to the word,
the word to the action, with this special observance, that you o'erstep not the modesty of nature ; for any thing so overdone is from the purpose of playing, whose end, both at the first, and now, was, and is, to hold, as
't were, the mirror up to nature ; to show virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time, his form and pressure. Now, this overdone, or come tardy off, though it make the unskilful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve :

the censure of which³ one must, in your allowance, o'erweigh a whole theatre of others. O ! there be players, that I have seen play,—and heard others praise, and that highly,—not to speak it profanely, that, neither having the accent of Christians, nor the gait of Christian, pagan, nor man, have so strutted, and bellowed, that I have thought some of nature's journeymen had made men, and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably.

1 Player. I hope, we have reformed that indifferently with us.

Ham. O ! reform it altogether. And let those, that play your clowns, speak no more than is set down for them : for there be of them, that will themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren spectators to laugh too ; though in the mean time some necessary question of the play be then to be considered : that's villainous, and shows a most pitiful ambition in the fool that uses
it. Go, make you ready.— [Exeunt Players.]

Enter POLONIUS, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.
How now, my lord ! will the king hear this piece of

Pol. And the queen too, and that presently. [work ?]

Ham. Bid the players make haste.— [Exit POLONIUS]
Will you two help to hasten them ?

Both. We will, my lord

[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN]

Ham. What, ho ! Horatio !

Enter HORATIO !

Hor. Here, sweet lord, at your service.

Ham. Horatio, thou art e'en as just a man
As e'er my conversation could wishal.

Hor. O ! my dear lord,—

Ham. Nay, do not think I flatter
For what advancement may I hope from thee,
That no revenue hast, but thy good spirits,
To feed and clothe thee ? Why should the poor be flatter'd ?

No ; let the candied tongue lick absurd pomp,
And crook the pregnant hinges of the knee,
Where thrift may follow fawning. Dost thou hear ?
Since my dear soul was mistress of her choice,
And could of men distinguish, her election
Hath seal'd thee for herself : for thou hast been
As one, in suffering all, that suffers nothing ;
A man, that fortune's buffets and rewards
Hast ta'en with equal thanks : and bless'd are those,
Whose blood and judgment are so well com-mingled,
That they are not a pipe for fortune's finger
To sound what stop she please. Give me that man
That is not passion's slave, and I will wear him
In my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart,
As I do thee.—Something too much of this.—

There is a play to-night before the king :
One scene of it comes near the circumstance,
Which I have told thee, of my father's death :
I pr'ythee, when thou seest that act a-foot,
Even with the very comment of thy⁴ soul
Observe mine uncle : if his occulted guilt
Do not itself unkennel in one speech,
It is a damned ghost that we have seen,
And my imaginations are as foul
As Vulcan's stithy. Give him heedful note ;
For I mine eyes will rivet to his face,
And, after, we will both our judgments join
In censure of his seeming.

Hor. Well, my lord ;

If he steal aught the whilst this play is playing,
And 'scape detecting, I will pay the theft.

Ham. Excellent, i' faith; of the camelion's dish: I eat the air, promise-crammed. You cannot feed capons so.

King. I have nothing with this answer, Hamlet: these words are not mine.

Ham. No, nor mine now.—My lord, you played once in the university, you say? [To POLONIUS.]

Pol. That did I, my lord; and was accounted a good actor.

Ham. And what did you enact?

Pol. I did enact Julius Cæsar: I was killed i' the Capitol; Brutus killed me.

Ham. It was a brute part of him to kill so capital a calf there.—Re the players ready?

Ros. Ay, my lord; they stay upon your patience.

Queen. Come hither, my dear! Hamlet; sit by me.

Ham. No, good mother, here 's metal more attractive.

Ham. O God! your only jig-maker.¹ What should a man do, but be merry? for, look you, how cheerfully my mother looks, and my father died within these two hours.

Oph. Nay, 't is twice two months, my lord.

Ham. So long? Nay then, let the devil wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables. O heavens! die two months ago, and not forgotten yet? Then there 's hope, a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year; but, by 'r-lady, he must build churches then, or else shall he suffer not thinking on, with the hobby-horse²; whose epitaph is, "For, O! for, O! the hobby-horse is forgot."

Trumpets sound. The dumb Show enters.

Enter a King and Queen, very lovingly; the Queen embracing him. She kneels, and makes show of protestation unto him. He takes her up, and declines his head upon her neck; lays him down upon a bank of flowers; she, seeing him asleep, leaves him. Anon comes in a fellow, takes off his crown, kisses it, and pours poison in the King's ears, and exit. The Queen returns, finds the King dead, and makes passionate action. The poisoner, with some two or three Mutes, comes in again, seeming to lament with her. The dead body is carried away. The poisoner woos the Queen with gifts: she seems loath and unwilling awhile, but in the end accepts his love. [Exeunt.]

Oph. What means this, my lord?

Ham. Marry, this is miching mallecho³; it means mischief.

Oph. Belike, this show imports the argument of the play.

Enter Prologue.

Ham. We shall know by this fellow: the players cannot keep counsel; they 'll tell all.

Oph. Will he tell us what this show meant?

Ham. Ay, or any show that you will show him: he not you ashamed to show, he 'll not shame to tell you what it means.

Oph. You are naught, you are naught. I'll mark the play.

Pro. "For us, and for our tragedy,
Here stooping to your clemency,
We beg your hearing patiently."

Ham. Is this a prologue, or the pöesy of a ring?

Oph. 'T is brief, my lord.

Ham. As woman's love.

Enter the Player King and Player Queen.

P. King. Full thirty times has Phæbus' ear gone round

Neptune's salt wash, and Tellus' orb'd ground;

And thirty dozen moons, with borrow'd sheen,

About the world have times twelve thirties been;

Since love our hearts, and Hymen did our hands,

Unite commutual in most sacred bands.

P. Queen. So many journeys may the sun and moon
Make us again count o'er, ere love be done.

But, woe is me! you are so sick of late,

So far from cheer, and from your former state,

That I distrust you. Yet, though I distrust,

Discomfort you, my lord, it nothing must;

For women's fear and love hold quantity;⁴

In neither ought, or⁵ in extremity.

Now, what my love is proof hath made you know,

And as my love is siz'd, my fear is so.

Where love is great, the littlest doubts are fear;

Where little fears grow great, great love grows there

P. King. 'Faith, I must leave thee, love, and shortly too;

My operant powers their' functions leave to do:

And thou shalt live in this fair world behind,

Honour'd, below'd; and, haply, one as kind

For husband shalt thou—

P. Queen. O, confound the rest!

Such love must needs be treason in my breast:

In second husband let me be accurst:

None wed the second, but who kill'd the first.

Ham. [Aside.] Wormwood, wormwood.

P. Queen. The instances, that second marriage move
Are base respects of thrift, but none of love:

A second time I kill my husband dead,

When second husband kisses me in bed.

P. King. I do believe you think what now you speak,
But what we do determine oft we break.

Purpose is but the slave to memory,

Of violent birth, but poor validity;

Which now, like fruit unripe, sticks on the tree,

But fall, unshaken, when they mellow be.

Most necessary 't is, that we forget

To pay ourselves what to ourselves is debt:

What to ourselves in passion we propose,

The passion ending, doth the purpose lose.

The violence of either grief or joy

Their own enactors⁶ with themselves destroy:

Where joy most revels, grief doth most lament,

Grief joys, joy grieves, on slender accident.

This world is not for aye; nor 't is not strange,

¹ good: in folio. ² Entertainments performed by clowns. ³ The hobby-horse played an important part in the May games. ⁴ Thieving ascality. ⁵ The quarto, 1604, has the line: "For women fear too much, even as they love," preceding this. ⁶ Either none in neither: in quarto 1604. ⁷ my: in folio. ⁸ enactures: in quartos

That even our loves should with our fortunes change;
For 't is a question left us yet to prove,
Whether love lead fortune, or else fortune love.
The great man down, you mark his favourite flies;
The poor advanc'd makes friends of enemies:
And hitherto doth love on fortune tend,
For who not needs shall never lack a friend;
And who in want a hollow friend doth try,
Directly seasons him his enemy.

But, orderly to end where I begun,
Our wills and fates do so contrary run,
That our devices still are overthrown;
Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our own:
So think thou wilt no second husband wed,
But die thy thoughts, when thy first lord is dead.

P. Queen. Nor earth to me give food, nor heaven light!

Sport and repose lock from me, day and night!
To desperation turn my trust and hope!
An anchor's cheer in prison be my scope!
Each opposite, that blinks the face of joy,
Meet what I would have well, and it destroy!
Both here, and hence, pursue me lasting strife,
If, once a widow, ever I be wife!

Ham. If she should break her vow.—

P. King. 'T is deeply sworn. Sweet, leave me here a while:

My spirits grow dull, and fain I would beguile
The tedious day with sleep. [Sleeps.]

P. Queen. Sleep rock thy brain;

And never come mischance between us twain! [Exit.]

Ham. Madam, how like you this play?

Queen. The lady doth protest too much, methinks.

Ham. O! but she'll keep her word.

King. Have you heard the argument? Is there no offence in't?

Ham. No, no; they do but jest, poison in jest: no offence i' the world.

King. What do you call the play?

Ham. The mouse-trap. Marry, how? Tropically. This play is the image of a murder done in Vienna: Gonzago is the duke's name: his wife, Baptista. You shall see anon: 't is a knavish piece of work; but what of that? your majesty, and we that have free souls, it touches us not: let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung.

Enter LUCIANUS.

This is one Lucianus, nephew to the king.

Oph. You are as good as a chorus*, my lord.

Ham. I could interpret between you and your love, if I could see the puppets dallying.

Oph. You are keen, my lord, you are keen.

Ham. It would cost you a groaning to take off my edge.

Oph. Still better, and worse.

Ham. So you must take your husbands.—Begin, murderer: leave thy damnable faces, and begin. Come!—The croaking raven doth bellow for revenge.

Luc. Thoughts black, hands apt, drugs fit, and time agreeing;

Confederate season, else no creature seeing;

Thou mixture rank, of midnight weeds collected,

With Hecate's ban three blasted, three infected,

Thy natural magic and dire property,

On wholesome life usurp immediately.

[Pours the Poison into the Sleeper's Ears.]

Ham. He poisons him i' the garden for his estate.

His name's Gonzago: the story is extant, and written in very choice Italian. You shall see anon, how the murderer gets the love of Gonzago's wife.

Oph. The king rises.

Ham. What! frighted with false fire?

Queen. How fares my lord?

Pol. Give o'er the play.

King. Give me some light!—away!

All. Lights, lights, lights!

[Exeunt all but HAMLET and HORATIO]

Ham. Why, let the stricken deer go weep,

The hart ungalled play:

For some must watch, while some must sleep:

Thus runs the world away.—

Would not this, sir, and a forest of feathers, (if the rest of my fortunes turn Turk with me) with two Provincial roses on my raised shoes, get me a fellowship in a cry* of players, sir?

Hor. Half a share.*

Ham. A whole one, I.

For thou dost know, O Damon dear!

This realm dismantled was

Of Jove himself; and now reigns here

A very, very—peacock.

Hor. You might have rhymed.

Ham. O good Horatio! I'll take the ghost's word for a thousand pound. Didst perceive?

Hor. Very well, my lord.

Ham. Upon the talk of the poisoning,—

Hor. I did very well note him.

Ham. Ah, ha!—Come! some music! come; the recorders!

For if the king like not the comedy,

Why, then, belike,—he likes it not, perdy.—

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Come; some music!

Guil. Good my lord, vouchsafe me a word with you.

Ham. Sir, a whole history.

Guil. The king, sir,—

Ham. Ay, sir, what of him?

Guil. Is in his retirement marvellous distempered.

Ham. With drink, sir?

Guil. No, my lord,¹⁰ with choler.

Ham. Your wisdom should show itself more richer, to signify this to his doctor; for, for me to put him to his purgation would, perhaps, plunge him into¹¹ more choler.

Guil. Good my lord, put your discourse into some frame, and start not so wildly from the affair.

Ham. I am tame, sir: pronounce.

Guil. The queen your mother, in most great affliction of spirit, hath sent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome.

Guil. Nay, good my lord, this courtesy is not of the right breed. If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will do your mother's commandment; if not, your pardon and my return shall be the end of my business.

Ham. Sir, I cannot.

Guil. What, my lord?

Ham. Make you a wholesome answer; my wit's diseased: but, sir, such answer as I can make, you shall command; or, rather, as you say, my mother: therefore no more, but to the matter. My mother, you say,—

Ros. Then, thus she says. Your behaviour has struck her into amazement and admiration.

* to give me: in folio. * Anchorite's: this and the previous line, are not in folio. * mistake: in later quartos, and folio. * Not in folio. * razed: in f. o. * Company * The stock company were shareholders in the old theatres. ¹⁰ folio inserts: rather. ¹¹ far more: in folio.

Ham. O wonderful son, that can so astonish a mother!—But is there no sequel at the heels of this mother's admiration? impart.¹

Ros. She desires to speak with you in her closet, ere you go to bed.

Ham. We shall obey, were she ten times our mother. Have you any farther trade with us?

Ros. My lord, you once did love me.

Ham. And do still, by these pickers and stealers.

Ros. Good my lord, what is your cause of distemper? you do, surely², but bar the door upon your own liberty, if you deny your griefs to your friend.

Ham. Sir, I lack advancement.

Ros. How can that be, when you have the voice of the king himself for your succession in Denmark?

Ham. Ay, sir, but "while the grass grows,"³—the proverb is something musty.

Enter one with a Recorder.*

O! the recorder:—let me see one.—To withdraw with you:—why do you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a toil?

Guil. O, my lord! if my duty be too bold, my love is too unmanly.

Ham. I do not well understand that. Will you play upon this pipe?

Guil. My lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you.

Guil. Believe me, I cannot.

Ham. I do beseech you.

Guil. I know no touch of it, my lord.

Ham. It is as easy as lying: govern these ventages with your finger and thumb, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most eloquent⁴ music. Look you, these are the stops.

Guil. But these cannot I command to any utterance of harmony: I have not the skill.

Ham. Why, look you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me. You would play upon me; you would seem to know my stops; you would pluck out the heart of my mystery; you would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass; and there is much music, excellent voice, in this little organ, yet cannot you make it speak⁵. 'Sblood! do you think I am easier to be played on than a pipe? Call me what instrument you will, though you can fret me, you cannot play upon me.—

Enter POLONIUS.

God bless you, sir!

Pol. My lord, the queen would speak with you, and presently.

Ham. Do you see yonder cloud, that's almost in shape of⁷ a camel?

Pol. By the mass, and 't is like a camel, indeed.

Ham. Methinks, it is like a weasel.

Pol. It is backed like a weasel.

Ham. Or, like a whale?

Pol. Very like a whale.

Ham. Then, will I come to my mother by and by.—They fool me to the top of my bent.—I will come by and by.

Pol. I will say so. [Erit POLONIUS.]

Ham. By and by is easily said.—Leave me, friends.

[Exeunt ROS., GUIL., HOR., &c.]

'T is now the very witching time of night,

When churchyards yawn, and hell itself breathes⁸ out Contagion to this world: now could I drink hot blood, And do such bitter business as the⁹ day

Would quake to look on. Soft! now to my mother.—O, heart! lose not thy nature; let not ever The soul of Nero enter this firm bosom: Let me be cruel, not unnatural.

I will speak daggers to her, but use none;

My tongue and soul in this be hypocrites:

How in my words soever she be shent,¹⁰

To give them seals never, my soul, consent! [Erit]

SCENE III.—A Room in the Same.

Enter King, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. I like him not; nor stands it safe with us,

To let his madness range. Therefore, prepare you;

I your commission will forthwith despatch,

And he to England shall along with you.

The terms of our estate may not endure

Hazard so dangerous¹¹, as doth hourly grow

Out of his lunacies¹².

Guil. We will ourselves provide.

Most holy and religious fear it is,

To keep those very many bodies safe,

That live, and feed, upon your majesty.

Ros. The single and peculiar life is bound,

With all the strength and armour of the mind,

To keep itself from¹³ noyance; but much more

That spirit, upon whose weal¹⁴ depend and rest

The lives of many. The cease of majesty

Dies not alone; but like a gulf doth draw

What's near it with it: it is a massy wheel,

Fix'd on the summit of the highest mount,

To whose huge spokes ten thousand lesser things

Are mortis'd and adjoin'd; which, when it falls,

Each small annexment, petty consequence,

Attends the boisterous ruin. Never alone

Did the king sigh, but with a general groan.

King. Arise you, I pray you, to this speedy voyage.

For we will fetters put upon this fear,

Which now goes too free-footed.

Ros. and Guil.

We will haste us.

[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.]

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. My lord, he's going to his mother's closet.

Behind the arras I'll convey myself,

To hear the process: I'll warrant, she'll tax him home

And, as you said, and wisely was it said,

'T is meet that some more audience than a mother,

Since nature makes them partial, should o'erhear

The speech, of vantage. Fare you well, my liege:

I'll call upon you ere you go to bed,

And tell you what I know.

King.

Thanks, dear my lord.

[Erit POLONIUS.]

O! my offence is rank, it smells to heaven;

It hath the primal eldest curse upon't,

A brother's murder!—Pray can I not.

Though inclination be as sharp as will:

My stronger guilt defeats my strong intent;

And, like a man to double business bound,

I stand in pause where I shall first begin,

And both neglect. What if this cursed hand

Were thicker than itself with brother's blood,

Is there not rain enough in the sweet heavens,

To wash it white as snow? Whereto serves mercy,

But to confront the visage of offence?

And what's in prayer, but this two-fold force,—

To be forestalled, ere we come to fall,

Or pardon'd, being down? Then, I'll look up:

¹ Not in folio. ² freely: in folio; "but," is omitted. ³ "Whylst grass doth growe, oft sterves the seely steed."—Wharstone's "Promises and Cassindra," 1578. ⁴ Flageolet. ⁵ delicate: in quarto, 1603; excellent: in folio. ⁶ Not in folio. ⁷ like: in folio. ⁸ breaks: in quartos. ⁹ such business as the bitter: in quartos. Dyce reads: better day. ¹⁰ Rebuked. ¹¹ near us: in quarto. ¹² brows: in quarto. ¹³ swift: in folio.

My fault is past. But, O! what form of prayer
Can serve my turn? Forgive me my foul murder!—
That cannot be; since I am still possess'd
Of those effects for which I did the murder,
My crown, mine own ambition, and my queen.
May one be pardon'd, and retain th' offence?
In the corrupted currents of this world,
Offence's gilded hand may shove by justice,
And oft 'tis seen, the wicked pursue itself
Bays out the law; but 'tis not so above:
There is no shuffling, there the action lies
In his true nature; and we ourselves compell'd,
Even to the teeth and forehead of our faults,
To give in evidence. What then? what rests?
Try what repentance can: what can it not?
Yet what can it, when one can not repent?
O wretched state! O bosom, black as death!
O limed soul, that struggling to be free,
Art more engaged! Help, angels! make assay:
Bow, stubborn knees; and, heart, with strings of steel,
Be soft as sinews of the new-born babe.
All may be well. [Kneels.]

Enter HAMLET¹ behind, his Sword drawn.

Ham. Now might I do it, pat,² now he is praying;
And now I'll do it:—and so he goes to heaven,
And so am I reveng'd? That would be scann'd:
A villain kills my father; and for that,
I, his sole³ son, do this same villain send
To heaven.
Why, this is hire and salary,⁴ not revenge.
He took my father grossly, full of bread;
With all his crimes broad blown, as flush⁵ as May.
And how his audit stands, who knows, save heaven?
But, in our circumstance and course of thought,
'Tis heavy with him; and am I then reveng'd,
To take him in the purging of his soul,
When he is fit and season'd for his passage?
No.

Up, sword; and know thou a more horrid hent.⁶
When he is drunk, asleep, or in his rage;
Or in th' incestuous pleasures of his bed;
At gaming, swearing; or about some act,
That has no relish of salvation in't;
Then trip him, that his heels may kick at heaven,
And that his soul may be as damn'd, and black,
As hell, whereto it goes. My mother stays:
This physic but prolongs thy sickly days. [Exit.]

King. [Rising.] My words fly up, my thoughts remain below:

Words without thoughts never to heaven go. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—A Room in the Same.

Enter Queen and POLONIUS.

Pol. He will come straight. Look, you lay home to him:

Tell him, his pranks have been too broad to bear with,
And that your grace hath screen'd and stood between Much heat and him. I'll scence⁷ me even here.
I pray you, be round with him.

Ham. [Within.] Mother, mother, mother!⁸

Queen. I'll warrant you;
Fear me not:—withdraw, I hear him coming.

[Exit POLONIUS behind the Arras.]

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Now, mother: what's the matter?

Queen. Hamlet, thou hast thy father much offended.

Ham. Mother, you have my father much offended.

Queen. Come, come; you answer with an idle tongue

Ham. Go, go; you question with a wicked⁹ tongue

Queen. Why, how now, Hamlet!

Ham. What's the matter now?

Queen. Have you forgot me?

Ham. No, by the rood, not so.

You are the queen, your husband's brother's wife;

And,—would it¹⁰ were not so!—you are my mother.

Queen. Nay then, I'll send those to you that can speak.

Ham. Come, come, and sit you down; you shall not

You go not, till I set you up a glass [budge,

Where you may see the inmost part of you.

Queen. What wilt thou do? thou wilt not murder me.

Help, help, ho!

Pol. [Behind.] What, ho! help! help! help!

Ham. How now! a rat? [Draws.] Dead for a deuce, dead. [HAMLET makes a pass through the Arras.]

Pol. [Behind.] O! I am slain. [Falls and dies.]

Queen. O me! what hast thou done?

Ham. [Coming forward.]¹¹ Nay, I know not:

Is it the king?

[Lifts the Arras, and draws forth POLONIUS.]

Queen. O, what a rash and bloody deed is this!

Ham. A bloody deed; almost as bad, good mother,

As kill a king, and marry with his brother.

Queen. As kill a king!

Ham. Ay, lady, 't was my word.—

Thou wretched, rash, intruding fool, farewell.

[Seeing the body of POLONIUS]

I took thee for thy better; take thy fortune:

Thou find'st to be too busy is some danger.—

Leave wringing of your hands. Peace! sit you down,

And let me wring your heart: for so I shall,

If it be made of penetrable stuff:

If damned custom have not braz'd it so,

That it is¹² proof and bulwark against sense.

Queen. What have I done, that thou dar'st wag thy tongue

In noise so rude against me?

Ham. Such an act,

That blurs the grace and blush of modesty;

Calls virtue, hypocrite; takes off the rose

From the fair forehead of an innocent love.

And sets¹³ a blister there: makes marriage vows

As false as diers¹⁴ oaths: O! such a deed,

As from the body of contraction plucks

The very soul; and sweet religion makes

A rhapsody of words: Heaven's face doth glow,

Yea,¹⁵ this solidity and compound mass,

With tristful¹⁶ visage, as against the doom,

Is thought-sick at the act.

Queen. Ah me! what act,

That roars so loud, and thunders in the index?¹⁷

Ham. Look here, upon this picture, and on this;

The counterfeit presentment of two brothers.

See, what a grace was seated on this brow:

Hyperion's curls; the front of Jove himself;

An eye like Mars, to threaten and command;

A station¹⁸ like the herald Mercury,

New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill;

A combination, and a form, indeed,

Where every god did seem to set his seal,

To give the world assurance of a man.

This was your husband: look you now, what follows

Here is your husband: like a mildew'd ear,

Blasting his wholesome brother¹⁹. Have you eyes?

Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed,

And batten¹ on this moor? Ha! have you eyes?
 You cannot call it, love; for, at your age,
 The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble,
 And waits upon the judgment; and what judgment
 Would stoop² from this to this? Sense,³ sure, you have,
 Else, could you not have motion; but, sure, that sense
 Is apoplex'd; for madness would not err,
 Nor sense to ecstasy was ne'er so thrall'd,
 But it reserv'd some quantity of choice,
 To serve in such a difference. What devil was 't
 That thus hath cozen'd you at hoodman-blind?⁴
 Eyes⁵ without feeling, feeling without sight,
 Ears without hands or eyes, smelling sans all,
 Or but a sickly part of one true sense
 Could not so mope.
 O shame! where is thy blush? Rebellious hell,
 If thou canst mutine⁶ in a matron's bones,
 To flaming youth let virtue be as wax,
 And melt in her own fire: proclaim no shame,
 When the compulsive ardour gives the charge,
 Since frost itself as actively doth burn,
 And reason panders will.

Queen. O Hamlet! speak no more.
 Thou turn'st mine eyes into my very soul;⁷
 And there I see such black and grained spots,
 As will not leave their tinct.

Ham. Nay, but to live
 In the rank sweat of an enseamed bed;
 Stew'd in corruption; honeying, and making love
 Over the nasty sty;—

Queen. O, speak to me no more!
 These words, like daggers enter in mine ears:
 No more, sweet Hamlet.

Ham. A murderer, and a villain;
 A slave, that is not twentieth part the tithe
 Of your precedent lord:—a vice of kings!
 A cutpurse of the empire and the rule,
 That from a shelf the precious diadem stole,
 And put it in his pocket!

Queen. No more!

Enter Ghost, unarmed.⁸

Ham. A king of shreds and patches.—
 Save me, and hover o'er me with your wings,
 You heavenly guards!—What would you, gracious

Queen. Alas! he's mad. [figure?]

Ham. Do you not come your tardy son to chide,
 That, laps'd in fume⁹ and passion, lets go by
 Th' important acting of your dread command?
 O, say!

Ghost. Do not forget. This visitation
 Is but to whet thy almost blunted purpose.
 But, look! amazement on thy mother sits:
 O! step between her and her fighting soul;
 Conceit in weakest bodies strongest works.
 Speak to her, Hamlet.

Ham. How is it with you, lady?

Queen. Alas! how is 't with you,
 That you do bend your eye on vacancy,
 And with th' incorporal air do hold discourse?
 Forth at your eyes your spirits wildly peep;
 And, as the sleeping soldiers in th' alarm,
 Your bedded hair, like life in excrements,¹⁰
 Starts up, and stands on end. O gentle son!
 Upon the heat and flame of thy distemper
 Sprinkle cool patience. Whereon do you look?

Ham. On him, on him!—Look you, how pale he glares!

His form and cause conjoin'd, preaching to stones,
 Would make them capable.—Do not look upon me;
 Lest with this piteous action you convert
 My stern effects: then, what I have to do
 Will want true colour; tears, perchance, for blood.

Queen. To whom do you speak this?

Ham. Do you see nothing there?

Queen. Nothing at all; yet all, that is, I see.

Ham. Nor did you nothing hear?

Queen. No, nothing but ourselves

Ham. Why, look you there! look, how it steals away!

My father, in his habit as he liv'd!

Look, where he goes, even now, out at the portal!

[Exit Ghost]

Queen. This is the very coinage of your brain:

This bodiless creation ecstasy

Is very cunning in.

Ham. Ecstasy!

My pulse, as yours, doth temperately keep time,
 And makes as healthful music. It is not madness
 That I have utter'd: bring me to the test,
 And I the matter will re-word, which madness

Would gambol from. Mother, for love of grace,

Lay not that¹¹ flattering unction to your soul.

That not your trespass, but my madness speaks:

It will but skin and film the ulcerous place,

Whilst rank corruption, mining all within,

Infects unseen. Confess yourself to heaven;

Repent what's past: avoid what is to come,

And do not spread the compost on the weeds,

To make them ranker.¹² Forgive me this my virtue;

For in the fatness of these pursy times,

Virtue itself of vice must pardon beg,

Yea, curb¹³ and woo, for leave to do him good.

Queen. O Hamlet! thou hast cleft my heart in twa

Ham. O throw away the worse part of it,

And live the purer with the other half.

Good night; but go not to mine uncle's bed:

Assume a virtue, if you have it not.

That¹⁴ monster, custom, who all sense doth eat

Of habits, devil, is angel yet in this;

That to the use of actions fair and good

He likewise gives a frock, or livery,

That aptly is put on: refrain to night;

And that shall lend a kind of casiness

To the next abstinence: the¹⁵ next more easy;

For use almost can change the stamp of nature,

And master the devil, or throw him out

With wondrous potency. Once more, good night:

And when you are desirous to be bless'd.

I'll blessing beg of you.—For this same lord,

[Pointing to POISONERS]

I do repent: but heaven hath pleas'd it so,

To punish me with this, and this with me,

That I must be their scourge and minister.

I will bestow him, and will answer well

The death I gave him. So, again, good night.—

I must be cruel, only to be kind:

Thus bad begins, and worse remains behind.—

One word more, good lady.¹⁷

Queen.

What shall I do?

Ham. Not this, by no means, that I bid you do:

Let the bloat king tempt you again to bed;

Pinch wanton on your cheek; call you his mouse;

And let him, for a pair of reechy kisses,

Or paddling in your neck with his damn'd fingers,

Make you to ravel all this matter out,

That I essentially am not in madness,
But mad in craft. 'T were good, you let him know;
For who, that's but a queen, fair, sober, wise,
Would from a paddock, from a bat, a gib,²
Such dear concernings hide? who would do so?
No, in despite of sense and secrecy,
Unpeg the basket on the house's top,
Let the birds fly, and, like the famous ape,
To try conclusions in the basket creep,
And break your own neck down.

Queen. Be thou assur'd, if words be made of breath,
And breath of life, I have no life to breathe
What thou hast said to me.

Ham. I must to England; you know that.

Queen.

I had forgot: 't is so concluded on.

[Alack! *fellows,*³—

Ham. There's letters seal'd, and my two school-

Whom I will trust, as I will adders fang'd,—
They bear the mandate; they must sweep my way,
And marshal me to knavery. Let it work;
For 't is the sport, to have the engineer
Hoist with his own petar, and it shall go hard,
But I will delve one yard below their mines,
And blow them at the moon. O! 't is most sweet,
When in one line two crafts directly meet —
This man shall set me packing:
I'll lug the guts into the neighbour room.—
Mother, good night.—Indeed, this counsellor
Is now most still, most secret, and most grave,
Who was in life a foolish prating knave.—
Come, sir, to draw toward an end with you —
Good night, mother.

[Exeunt severally; HAMLET dragging in POLONIUS

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Same.

Enter King, Queen, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. There's matter in these sighs: these profound heaves

You must translate; 't is fit we understand them.

Where is your son?

Queen. Bestow this place on us a little while.—

[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Ah, my good lord, what have I seen to-night!

King. What, Gertrude? How does Hamlet?

Queen. Mad as the sea and wind, when both contend

Which is the mightier. In his lawless fit,

Behind the arras hearing something stir,

He whips his rapier out, and cries, "A rat! a rat!"

And in his brainish apprehension kills

The unseen good old man.

King. O heavy deed!

It had been so with us, had we been there.

His liberty is full of threats to all;

To you yourself, to us, to every one.

Alas! how shall this bloody deed be answer'd?

It will be laid to us, whose providence

Should have kept short, restrain'd, and out of haunt,

This mad young man; but so much was our love,

We would not understand what most was fit,

But, like the owner of a foul disease,

To keep it from divulging, let it feed

Even on the pith of life. Where is he gone?

Queen. To draw apart the body he hath kill'd;

O'er whom his very madness, like some ore

Among a mineral of metals base,

Shows itself pure: he weeps for what is done.

King. O, Gertrude! come away

The sun no sooner shall the mountains touch,

But we will ship him hence: and this vile deed

We must, with all our majesty and skill,

Both countenance and excuse—Ho! Guildenstern!

[Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Friends both, go join you with some farther aid.

Hamlet in madness hath Polonius slain,

And from his mother's closet hath he dragg'd him:

Go, seek him out: speak fair, and bring the body

Into the chapel. I pray you, haste in this.

[Exeunt Ros. and Guil.

Come, Gertrude, we'll call up our wisest friends;
And let them know, both what we mean to do,
And what's untimely done: so, haply, slander,⁴—
Whose whisper o'er the world's diameter,
As level as the cannon to his blank,
Transports his poison'd shot,—may miss our name,
And hit the woundless air.—O, come away!
My soul is full of discord, and dismay. [Exeunt

SCENE II.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Safely stowed.—[Ros. &c., within. Hamlet!
lord Hamlet!] But soft! what noise?—Who calls on Hamlet?—O! here they come.

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Ros. What have you done, my lord, with the dead body?

Ham. Compounded it with dust, whereto 't is kin.

Ros. Tell us where 't is; that we may take it thence,
And bear it to the chapel.

Ham. Do not believe it.

Ros. Believe what?

Ham. That I can keep your counsel, and not mine own. Besides, to be demanded of a sponge, what replication should be made by the son of a king?

Ros. Take you me for a sponge, my lord?

Ham. Ay, sir; that soaks up the king's countenance, his rewards, his authorities. But such officers do the king best service in the end; he keeps them, like an ape,⁶ in the corner of his jaw, first mouthed, to be last swallowed: when he needs what you have gleaned, it is but squeezing you, and, sponge, you shall be dry
again.

Ros. I understand you not, my lord.

Ham. I am glad of it: a knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear.

Ros. My lord, you must tell us where the body is,
and go with us to the king.

Ham. The body is with the king, but the king is not with the body. The king is a thing—

Guil. A thing, my lord!

Ham. Of nothing: bring me to him. Hide fox, and SCENE III.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter King, attended.

King. I have sent to seek him, and to loose the body. How dangerous is it, that this man goes loose! Yet must not we put the strong law on him: He's lov'd of the distracted multitude, Who like not in their judgment, but their eyes; And where 't is so, th' offender's scourge is weigh'd, But never the offence. To bear all smooth and even, This sudden sending him away must seem Deliberate pause: diseases, desperate grown, By desperate appliance are reliev'd,

Enter ROSENCRANTZ.

Or not at all.—How now! what hath befallen?

Ros. Where the dead body is bestow'd, my lord, We cannot get from him.

King. But where is he?

Ros. Without, my lord; guarded, to know your pleasure.

King. Bring him before us.

Ros. Ho, Guildenstern! bring in my lord.

Enter HAMLET and GUILDENSTERN.

King. Now, Hamlet, where's Polonius?

Ham. At supper.

King. At supper! Where?

Ham. Not where he eats, but where he is eaten; a certain convocation of palated worms are e'en at him. Your worm is your only emperor for diet: we fat all creatures else to fat us, and we fat ourselves for maggots. Your fat king, and your lean beggar, is but variable service; two dishes, but to one table: that's the end.

King. Alas, alas!

Ham. A man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king; and eat of the fish that hath fed of that worm.

King. What dost thou mean by this?

Ham. Nothing, but to show you how a king may go a progress through the guts of a beggar.

King. Where is Polonius?

Ham. In heaven: send thither to see; if your messenger find him not there, seek him i' the other place yourself. But, indeed, if you find him not within this month, you shall nose him as you go up the stairs into the lobby.

King. Go seek him there. [To some Attendants.

Ham. He will stay till you come. [Exeunt Attendants.

King. Hamlet, this deed,^a for thine especial safety,—Which we do tender, as we dearly grieve For that which thou hast done,—must send thee hence With fiery quickness: therefore, prepare thyself. The bark is ready, and the wind at help, Th' associates tend, and every thing is bent For England.

Ham. For England?

King. Ay, Hamlet.

Ham.

King. So is it, if thou knew'st our purposes.

Ham. I see a cherub that sees them.^b—But, come; for England!—Farewell, dear mother.

King. Thy loving father, Hamlet.

Ham. My mother: father and mother is man and wife, man and wife is one flesh; and so, my mother. Come, for England! [Exit.

King. Follow him at foot; tempt him with speed aboard:

Delay it not, I'll have him hence to-night.

Away, for every thing is seal'd and done,
That else leans on th' affair: pray you, make haste.

[Exeunt Ros. and Guild]

And, England, if my love thou hold'st at aught,
(As my great power thereof may give thee sense,
Since yet thy cicatrice looks raw and red
After the Danish sword, and thy free awe
Pays homage to us) thou may'st not coldly see
Our sovereign process, which imports at full,
By letters conjuring^c to that effect,
The present death of Hamlet. Do it, England;
For like the hectic in my blood he rages,
And thou must cure me. Till I know 't is done,
Howe'er my hopes, my joys were ne'er begun. [Exit

SCENE IV.—A Plain in Denmark.

Enter FORTINBRAS, and Forces, marching.

For. Go, captain; from me greet the Danish king:
Tell him, that by his license Fortinbras
Claims^d the conveyance of a promis'd march
Over his kingdom. You know the rendezvous.
If that his majesty would aught with us,
We shall express our duty in his eye;
And let him know so.

Cap. I will do 't, my lord.

For. Go safely^e on.

[Exeunt FORTINBRAS and Forces]

Enter^f HAMLET, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, &c.

Ham. Good sir, whose powers are these?

Cap. They are of Norway, sir.

Ham. How purpos'd, sir,

I pray you?

Cap. Against some part of Poland. Who Commands them, sir?

Cap. The nephew to old Norway, Fortinbras.

Ham. Goes it against the main of Poland, sir,
Or for some frontier?

Cap. Truly to speak, and with no addition,
We go to gain a little patch of ground,
That hath in it no profit but the name.

To pay five ducats, five, I would not farm it;
Nor will it yield to Norway, or the Pole,
A ranker rate, should it be sold in fee.

Ham. Why, then the Polack never will defend it.

Cap. Yes, 't is already garrison'd.

Ham. Two thousand souls, and twenty thousand ducats,

Will not debate the question of this straw:

This is th' impostume of much wealth and peace,
That inward breaks, and shows no cause without
Why the man dies.—I humbly thank you, sir.

Cap. God be wi' you, sir. [Exit Captain

Ros. Will 't please you go, my lord?

Ham. I'll be with you straight. Go a little before.

[Exeunt ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.]

How all occasions do inform against me,

And spur my dull revenge! What is a man,
If his chief good, and market of his time,

Be but to sleep, and feed? a beast, no more.

Sure, he, that made us with such large discourse,
Looking before and after, gave us not
That capability and godlike reason.

To fust in us unus'd. Now, whether it be

Bestial oblivion, or some craven scruple

Of thinking too precisely on th' event.—

A thought, which, quarter'd, hath but one part wisdom,
And ever three parts coward,—I do not know

^a polite: in f. e. ^b This and the next speech, are not in folio. ^c deed of thine: in folio. ^d him: in folio. ^e congruing: in quarto.
^f Craves: in quartos ^g softly: in quartos. ^h The rest of the scene is not in the folio, or quarto, 1603.

Why yet I live to say, "This thing 's to do;"
 Sith I have cause, and will, and strength, and means,
 To do 't. Examples, gross as earth, exhort me:
 Witness this army, of such mass and charge,
 Led by a delicate and tender prince,
 Whose spirit, with divine ambition puff'd,
 Makes mouths at the invisible event;
 Exposing what is mortal, and unsure,
 To all that fortune, death, and danger, dare,
 Even for an egg-shell. Rightly to be great,
 Is not to stir without great argument,
 But greatly to find quarrel in a straw,
 When honour 's at the stake. How stand I, then,
 That have a father kill'd, a mother stain'd,
 Excitements of my reason and my blood,
 And let all sleep? while, to my shame, I see
 The imminent death of twenty thousand men,
 That for a fantasy, and trick of fame,
 Go to their graves like beds: fight for a plot
 Whereon the numbers cannot try the cause;
 Which is not tomb enough, and continent,
 To hide the slain?—O! from this time forth,
 My thoughts be bloody, or be nothing worth! [Exit.]

SCENE V.—Elsinore. A Room in the Castle.

Enter Queen, HORATIO, and a Gentleman.¹

Queen. I will not speak with her.

Gent. She is importunate; indeed, distract:
 Her mood will needs be pitied.

Queen. What would she have?

Gent. She speaks much of her father; says, she hears,
 There 's tricks i' the world; and heims, and beats her heart;

Spurns enviously at straws: speaks things in doubt,
 That carry but half sense. Her speech is nothing,
 Yet the unshaped use of it doth move
 The hearers to collection; they aim² at it,
 And both the words up fit to their own thoughts;
 Which, as her winks, and nods, and gestures yield them,
 Indeed would make one think, there might be thought,
 Though nothing sure, yet much unhappily.

Hor.³ 'T were good she were spoken with, for she may strew

Dangerous conjectures in ill-breeding minds.

Queen. Let her come in.— [Exit HORATIO.]

To my sick soul, as sin's true nature is,
 Each toy seems prologue to some great amiss;
 So full of artless jealousy is guilt,
 It spills itself in fearing to be spilt.

Re-enter HORATIO, with OPHELIA, distracted.⁴

Oph. Where is the beauteous majesty of Denmark?

Queen. How now, Ophelia?

Oph. How should I your true love know [Singing.]

From another one?

By his cockle hat and staff,

And his sandal shoon.

Queen. Alas, sweet lady! what imports this song?

Oph. Say you? nay, pray you, mark.

He is dead and gone, lady, [Singing.]

He is dead and gone;

At his head a green grass turf,⁵

At his heels a stone.

O, ho!

Queen. Nay, but Ophelia,—

Oph.

Pray you, mark

While his shroud as the mountain snow, [Singing]

Enter King.

Queen. Alas! look here, my lord.

Oph. Larded with sweet flowers;
 Which bewept to the grave⁶ did go,
 With true-love showers.

King. How do you, pretty lady?

Oph. Well, God 'ild⁷ you! They say, the owl was a baker's daughter.⁸ Lord! I know what we are, but know not what we may be. God be at your table!

King. Conceit upon her father.

Oph. Pray you, let's have no words of this, but when they ask you what it means, say you this:

To-morrow is Saint Valentine's day,

All in the morning betime,

And I a maid at your window,

To be your Valentine:

Then, up he rose, and don'd his clothes,

And shupp'd the chamber door;

Let in the maid, that out a maid

Never departed more.

King. Pretty Ophelia!

Oph. Indeed, la! without an oath, I'll make an end
 on't:

By Gis and by Saint Charity,

Alack, and fie for shame!

Young men will do 't, if they come to 't;

By cock, they are to blame.

Quoth she, before you tumbled me,

You promis'd me to wed:

He answers.

So would I ha' done, by yonder sun,

An thou hadst not come to my bed.

King. How long hath she been thus?

Oph. I hope, all will be well. We must be patient, but I cannot choose but weep, to think, they would⁹ lay him i' the cold ground. My brother shall know of it, and so I thank you for your good counsel.—Come, my coach! Good night, ladies; good night, sweet ladies; good night, good night. [Exit]

King. Follow her close; give her good watch, I pray
 you. [Exit HORATIO]

O! this is the poison of deep grief: it springs
 All from her father's death.¹¹ And now, behold,
 O Gertrude, Gertrude!

When sorrows come, they come not single spies,
 But in battalions. First, her father slain;
 Next, your son gone; and he most violent author
 Of his own just remove: the people muddled,
 Thick and unwholesome in their thoughts and whispers
 For good Polonius' death, and we have done but greenly
 In hugger-mugger to inter him: poor Ophelia,
 Divided from herself, and her fair judgment;
 Without the which we are pictures, or mere beasts:
 Last, and as much containing as all these,
 Her brother is in secret come from France,
 Feeds on his wonder, keeps himself in clouds,
 And wants not buzzers to infect his ear
 With pestilent speeches of his father's death;
 Wherein necessity, of matter beggar'd,
 Will nothing stick our persons to arraign
 In ear and ear. O! my dear Gertrude, this,
 Like to a murdering piece, in many places
 Gives me superfluous death. [A noise within]

It immediately began to swell, and the daughter to cry 'heugh, heugh, heugh,' which owl-like noise probably induced our Saviour to change her into this: bi. d. An old tradition, quoted by Douce. ¹⁰ should: in folio. ¹¹ The rest of this line is not in folio.

King. Attend!

Gent.

Save yourself, my lord;

The ocean, overpeering of his list,
Eats not the flats with more impetuous³ haste,
Than young Laertes, in a riotous head,
O'erbears your officers! The rabble call him king;
And, as the world were now but to begin,
Antiquity forgot, custom not known,
The ratifiers and props of every word,
They cry, "Choose we; Laertes shall be king!"
Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds,
"Laertes shall be king, Laertes king!"

Queen. How cheerfully on the false trail they cry.
O! this is counter, you false Danish dogs.

King. The doors are broke.

Laer. Where is this king?—Sirs, stand you all without.

Dan. No, let's come in.

Laer. I pray you, give me leave.

Dan. We will, we will. [They retire without the Door.]

Laer. I thank you: keep the door.—O thou vile king!
Give me my father.

Queen. Calmly, good Laertes.

Laer. That drop of blood that's calm⁵ proclaims me

Even here, between the chaste unsmirched brow
Of my true mother.

King. What is the cause, Laertes,

Laer. Where is my father?

Queen. But not by him.

King. Let him demand his fill.

Laer. How came he dead? I'll not be juggled with.

Conscience, and grace, to the profoundest pit!

I dare damnation. To this point I stand,

That both the worlds I give to negligence,

Let come what comes, only I'll be reveng'd

Most thoroughly for my father.

King. Who shall stay you?

Laer. My will, not all the world's:

And, for my means, I'll husband them so well,

They shall go far with little.

King. Good Laertes,

if you desire to know the certainty

Of your dear father's death, it's writ in your revenge,

That, sweepstake, you will draw both friend and foe,

Winner and loser?

Laer. None but his enemies.

*Enter a Gentleman, in haste.*²

Gent.

Save yourself, my lord;

The ocean, overpeering of his list,
Eats not the flats with more impetuous³ haste,
Than young Laertes, in a riotous head,
O'erbears your officers! The rabble call him king;
And, as the world were now but to begin,
Antiquity forgot, custom not known,
The ratifiers and props of every word,
They cry, "Choose we; Laertes shall be king!"
Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds,
"Laertes shall be king, Laertes king!"

Queen. How cheerfully on the false trail they cry.
O! this is counter, you false Danish dogs.

King. The doors are broke.

[Noise within.]

*Enter LAERTES, with his sword drawn;*⁴ Danes following.

Laer. Where is this king?—Sirs, stand you all without.

Dan. No, let's come in.

Laer. I pray you, give me leave.

Dan. We will, we will. [They retire without the Door.]

Laer. I thank you: keep the door.—O thou vile king!
Give me my father.

Queen. Calmly, good Laertes.

Laer. That drop of blood that's calm⁵ proclaims me
bastard;

Cries, cuckold, to my father; brands the harlot
Even here, between the chaste unsmirched brow
Of my true mother.

King. What is the cause, Laertes,

That thy rebellion looks so giant-like?—

Let him go, Gertrude; do not fear our person:

There's such divinity doth hedge a king,

That treason can but peep to what it would,

Acts little of his will.—Tell me, Laertes,

Why thou art thus incens'd.—Let him go, Gertrude.—
Speak, man.

Laer. Where is my father?

King. Dead.

Queen. But not by him.

King. Let him demand his fill.

Laer. How came he dead? I'll not be juggled with.

To hell, allegiance! vows, to the blackest devil!

Conscience, and grace, to the profoundest pit!

I dare damnation. To this point I stand,

That both the worlds I give to negligence,

Let come what comes, only I'll be reveng'd

Most thoroughly for my father.

King. Who shall stay you?

Laer. My will, not all the world's:

And, for my means, I'll husband them so well,

They shall go far with little.

King. Good Laertes,

if you desire to know the certainty

Of your dear father's death, it's writ in your revenge,

That, sweepstake, you will draw both friend and foe,

Winner and loser?

Laer. None but his enemies.

King. Will you know them, then?

Laer. To his good friends thus wide I'll ope my arms;

And, like the kind life-rendering pelican,⁶

Repast them with my blood.

And we shall jointly labour with your soul
To give it due content.

Laer. Let this be so:
His means of death, his obscure funeral¹,
No trophy, sword, nor hatchment, o'er his bones
No noble rite, nor formal ostentation.
Cry to be heard, as 't were from heaven to earth,
That I must call 't in question.

King. So you shall;
And, where th' offence is, let the great axe fall.
I pray you, go with me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter HORATIO, and a Servant.

Hor. What are they, that would speak with me?

Serv. Sailors, sir: they say, they have letters for you.

Hor. Let them come in.— [Exit Servant.]
I do not know from what part of the world
I should be greeted, if not from lord Hamlet.

Enter Sailors.

1 Sail. God bless you, sir.

Hor. Let him bless thee too.

1 Sail. He shall, sir, an't please him. There's a letter for you, sir: it comes from the ambassador that was bound for England, if your name be Horatio, as I am let to know it is.

Hor. [Reads.] "Horatio, when thou shalt have overlooked this, give these fellows some means to the king: they have letters for him. Ere we were two days old at sea, a pirate of very warlike appointment gave us chase. Finding ourselves too slow of sail, we put on a compelled valour; and in the grapple I boarded them: on the instant they got clear of our ship, so I alone became their prisoner. They have dealt with me like thieves of mercy; but they knew what they did: I am to do a good turn for them. Let the king have the letters I have sent; and repair thou to me with as much haste as thou wouldst fly death. I have words to speak in thine ear will make thee dumb; yet are they much too light for the bore of the matter. These good fellows will bring thee where I am. Rosenkrantz and Guildenstern hold their course for England: of them I have much to tell thee. Farewell;

He that thou knowest thine, HAMLET."
Come, I will give you way for these your letters;
And do't the speedier, that you may direct me
To him from whom you brought them. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter King and LAERTES.

King. Now must your conscience my acquittance seal,
And you must put me in your heart for friend,
Sith you have heard, and with a knowing ear,
That he, which hath your noble father slain,
Pursu'd my life.

Laer. It well appears. But tell me,
Why you proceeded not against these feats,
So criminal² and so capital in nature,
As by your safety, greatness,³ wisdom, all things else,
You mainly were stirr'd up.

King. O! for two special reasons,
Which may to you, perhaps, seem much unsinew'd,
But yet to me they are strong. The queen, his mother,
Lives almost by his looks; and for myself
(My virtue, or my plague, be it either which)
She's so conjunctive to my life and soul,
That, as the star moves not but in his sphere,
I could not but by her. The other motive,

Why to a public count I might not go,
Is the great love the general gender bear him;
Who, dipping all his faults in their affection,
Work like the spring that turneth wood to stone,
Convert his gyves to graces; so that my arrows,
Too slightly timber'd for so loud a wind,
Would have reverted to my bow again,
And not where I had aim'd them.

Laer. And so have I a noble father lost,
A sister driven into desperate terms;
Who was, if praises may go back again,
Sole challenger on mount of all the age
For her perfections. But my revenge will come.

King. Break not your sleeps for that: you must not think,

That we are made of stuff so flat and dull,
That we can let our beard be shook with danger,
And think it pastime. You shortly shall hear more:
I loved your father, and we love ourself;
And that, I hope, will teach you to imagine,—
How now! what news?

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Letters, my lord, from Hamlet
This to your majesty: this to the queen.

King. From Hamlet! who brought them?

Mess. Sailors, my lord, they say; I saw them not:
They were given me by Claudio, he receiv'd them
Of him that brought them.⁴

King. Laertes, you shall hear them.—
Leave us. [Exit Messenger.]

[Reads.] "High and mighty, you shall know, I am set naked on your kingdom. To-morrow shall I beg leave to see your kindly eyes; when I shall, first asking your pardon thereunto, recount the occasions of my sudden and more strange return. HAMLET."

What should this mean? Are all the rest come back
Or is it some abuse, and no such thing?

Laer. Know you the hand?

King. 'T is Hamlet's character. "Naked,"—
And, in a postscript here, he says, "alone."
Can you advise me?

Laer. I'm lost in it, my lord. But let him come:
It warms the very sickness in my heart,
That I shall live and tell him to his teeth,
"Thus diddest thou."

King. If it be so. Laertes,
(As how should it be so? how otherwise?)
Will you be ruled by me?

Laer. Ay, my lord;⁵
So you will not o'er-rule me to a peace.

King. To thine own peace. If he be now return'd,—
As liking not⁶ his voyage, and that he means
No more to undertake it.—I will work him
To an exploit, now ripe in my device,
Under the which he shall not choose but fall;
And for his death no wind of blame shall breathe,
But even his mother shall uncharge the practice,
And call it accident.

Laer. My⁷ lord, I will be rul'd;
The rather, if you could devise it so,
That I might be the organ.

King. It falls right.

You have been talk'd of since your travel much,
And that in Hamlet's hearing, for a quality
Wherein, they say, you shine: your sum of parts
Did not together pluck such envy from him,
As did that one; and that, in my regard,
Of the unworthiest siege.

Laer.

What part is that, my lord?

King. A very riband in the cap of youth,
Yet needful too; for youth no less becomes
The light and careless livery that it wears,
Than settled age his sables, and his weeds,
Importing health and graveness.—Two months since,
Here was a gentleman of Normandy:
I have seen myself, and serv'd against the French,
And they can well on horseback; but this gallant
Had witchcraft in't; he grew unto his seat;
And to such wondrous doing brought his horse,
As he had been incorp'd and demi-natur'd
With the brave beast. So far he topp'd³ my thought,
That I, in forgery of shapes and tricks,
Came short of what he did.

Laer.

A Norman, was't?

King. A Norman.Laer. Upon my life, Lamord⁴.King.

The very same.

Laer. I know him well: he is the brooch, indeed,
And gem of all the nation.

King. He made confession of you;
And gave you such a masterly report,
For art and exercise in your defence,
And for your rapier most especially,
That he cried out, 't would be a sight indeed,
If one could match you: the scrimers⁵ of their nation,
He swore, had neither motion, guard, nor eye,
If you oppos'd them. This report of his
Did Hamlet so envenom with his envy,
That he could nothing do, but wish and beg
Your sudden coming o'er, to play with you.
Now, out of this,—

*Laer.*What⁶ out of this, my lord?

King. Laertes, was your father dear to you?
Or are you like the painting of a sorrow,
A face without a heart?

Laer.

Why ask you this?

King. Not that I think you did not love your father,
But that I know love is begun by time;
And that I see, in passages of proof,
Time qualifies the spark and fire of it.
There lives within the very flame of love⁷
A kind of wick, or snuff, that will abate it,
And nothing is at a like goodness still;
For goodness, growing to a pleurisy,⁸
Dies in his own too-much. That we would do,
We should do when we would; for this "would"
And hath abatements and delays as many. [changes,
As there are tongues, are hands, are accidents;
And then this "should" is like a spendthrift's sigh,
That hurts by easing. But, to the quick⁹ of the ulcer.
Hamlet comes back: what would you undertake,
To show yourself your father's son in deed,⁹
More than in words?

Laer.

To cut his throat i' the church.

King. No place, indeed, should murder sanctuarize;
Revenge should have no bounds. But, good Laertes,
Will you do this, keep close within your chamber.
Hamlet, return'd, shall know you are come home:
We'll put on those shall praise your excellence,
And set a double varnish on the fame
The Frenchman gave you; bring you in fine together,
And wager on your heads: he, being remiss,
Most generous, and free from all contriving,

Will not peruse the foils; so that with ease,
Or with a little shuffling, you may choose
A sword unbated¹⁰, and in a pass of practice
Requite him for your father.

Laer.

I will do't;

And, for that purpose, I'll anoint my sword.
I bought an unction of a mountebank,
So mortal, that but dip¹¹ a knife in it,
Where it draws blood no cataplasm so rare,
Collected from all simples that have virtue
Under the moon, can save the thing from death.
That is but scratch'd withal: I'll touch my point
With this contagion, that if I gall him slightly,
It may be death.

King.

Let's farther think of this;

Weigh, what convenience, both of time and means,
May fit us to our shape. If this should fail,
And that our drift look through our bad performance,
'T were better not assay'd: therefore, this project
Should have a back, or second, that might hold,
If this should blast in proof. Soft!—let me see:—
We'll make a solemn wager on your cunning¹²,—
I ha't:

When in your motion you are hot and dry,
(As make your bouts more violent to that end)
And that he calls for drink, I'll have prefr'd¹³ him
A chalice for the nonce, whereon but sipping.
If he by chance escape your venom'd stuck,¹⁴
Our purpose may hold there. But stay! what noise?

Enter Queen.

How now, sweet queen!

Queen. One woe doth tread upon another's heel,
So fast they follow.—Your sister's drown'd, Laertes.

Laer. Drown'd! O, where?

Queen. There is a willow grows aslant the brook,
That shows his hoar leaves in the glassy stream;
Therewith¹⁵ fantastic garlands did she make¹⁶
Of crow-flowers, nettles, daisies, and long purples,
That liberal shepherds give a grosser name,
But our cold maids do dead men's fingers call them.
There, on the pendent boughs her coronet weeds
Clambling to hang, an envious sliver broke;
When down her weedy trophies, and herself,
Fell in the weeping brook. Her clothes spread wide,
And, mermaid-like, a while they bore her up;
Which time she chanted snatches of old lands¹⁷;
As one incapable of her own distress,
Or like a creature native and reduc'd
Unto that element: but long it could not be.
Till that her garments, heavy with their drink,
Pull'd the poor wretch from her melodious lay
To muddy death.

Laer.

Alas! then, is she drown'd?

Queen. Drown'd, drown'd.

Laer. Too much of water hast thou, poor Ophelia,
And therefore I forbid my tears: but yet
It is our trick: nature her custom holds,
Let shame say what it will: when these are gone,
The woman will be out.—Adieu, my lord:
I have a speech of fire, that fain would blaze,
But that this folly drowns¹⁸ it. [Erit

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Church Yard.

Enter two Clowns, with Spades, &c

1 Clo. Is she to be buried in Christian burial, that wilfully seeks her own salvation?

2 Clo. I tell thee, she is; and therefore make her grave straight: the crowner hath set on her, and finds it Christian burial.

1 Clo. How can that be, unless she drowned herself in her own defence?

2 Clo. Why, 't is found so.

1 Clo. It must be se offendendo; it cannot be else. For here lies the point: if I drown myself wittingly, it argues an act, and an act hath three branches; it is, to act, to do, and to perform: argal, she drowned herself wittingly.

2 Clo. Nay, but hear you, goodman deliver.

1 Clo. Give me leave. Here lies the water; good: here stands the man; good: if the man go to this water, and drown himself, it is, will he, nill he, he goes, mark you that; but if the water come to him, and drown him, he drowns not himself: argal, he that is not guilty of his own death shortens not his own life.

2 Clo. But is this law?

1 Clo. Ay, marry, is 't: crowner's quest-law.

2 Clo. Will you ha' the truth on 't? If this had not been a gentlewoman, she should have been buried out of Christian burial.

1 Clo. Why, there thou say'st; and the more pity, that great folk shall have countenance in this world to drown or hang themselves, more than their even² Christian. Come, my spade. There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners, ditchers, and grave-makers; they hold up Adam's profession.

2 Clo. Was he a gentleman?

1 Clo. He was the first that ever bore arms.

2 Clo. Why, he had none.

1 Clo. What, art a heathen? How dost thou understand the Scripture? The Scripture says, Adam digged: could he dig without arms? I'll put another question to thee: if thou answerest me not to the purpose, confess thyself—

2 Clo. Go to.

1 Clo. What is he, that builds stronger than either the mason, the shipwright, or the carpenter?

2 Clo. The gallows-maker; for that frame³ outlives a thousand tenants.

1 Clo. I like thy wit well, in good faith: the gallows does well; but how does it well? it does well to those that do ill; now, thou dost ill to say the gallows is built stronger than the church: argal, the gallows may do well to thee. To 't again; come.

2 Clo. Who builds stronger than a mason, a shipwright, or a carpenter?

1 Clo. Ay, tell me that, and yonke.

2 Clo. Marry, now I can tell.

1 Clo. To 't.

2 Clo. Mass, I cannot tell.

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO, at a distance.

1 Clo. Cudgel thy brains no more about it, for your dull ass will not mend his pace with beating; and, when you are asked this question next, say, a grave-maker: the houses that he makes, last till doomsday. Go, get thee to you⁴; fetch me a stoop of liquor.

[Exit 2 Clowns]

1 Clown digs, and sings.

In youth, when I did love, did love,

Methought it was very sweet,

To contract, O! the time, for, ah! my behave

O! methought, there was nothing meet

Ham. Has this fellow no feeling of his business, that he sings at grave-making?

Hor. Custom hath made it in him a property of easiness.

Ham. 'T is e'en so: the hand of little employment hath the daintier sense

1 Clo. But age, with his stealing steps,

Hath claw'd me in his clutch,

And hath shipped me intill the land,

As if I had never been such.

[Throws up a skull.]

Ham. That skull had a tongue in it, and could sing once: how the knave jowls it to the ground, as if it were Cain's jaw-bone, that did the first murder! This might be the pate of a politician, which this ass now o'er-reaches,⁵ one that would circumvent God, might it not?

Hor. It might, my lord.

Ham. Or of a courtier, which could say, "Good-morrow, sweet lord! How dost thou, good lord?" This might be my lord such-a-one, that praised my lord such-a-one's horse, when he meant to beg it, might it not?

Hor. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Why, e'en so, and now my lady Worm's; chapless, and knocked about the mazzard⁶ with a sexton's spade. Here's fine revolution, an we had the trick to see 't. Did these bones cost no more the breeding, but to play at loggats⁷ with them? mine ache to think on 't.

1 Clo. A pick-axe, and a spade, a spade,

[Sings.]

For—and a shrouding sheet:

O! a pit of clay for to be made

For such a guest is meet.

[Throws up another skull.]

Ham. There's another: why may not that be the skull of a lawyer? Where be his quiddits now, his quilets, his cases, his tenures, and his tricks? why does he suffer this rude⁸ knave now to knock him about the sconce with a dirty shovel, and will not tell him of his action of battery? Humph! This fellow might be in 's time a great buyer of land, with his statutes, his recognizances, his fines, his double vouchers, his recoveries: is this the fine of his fines, and the recovery of his recoveries, to have his fine pate full of fine dirt? will his vouchers vouch him no more of his purchases, and double ones too, than the length and breadth of a pair of indentures? The very conveyances of his lands will hardly⁹ lie in this box, and must the inheritor himself have no more? ha?

Hor. Not a jot more, my lord.

Ham. Is not parchment made of sheep-skins?

Hor. Ay, my lord, and of calf-skins too.

Ham. They are sheep, and calves, which seek out assurance in that. I will speak to this fellow.—Whose grave's this, sir?

1 Clo. Mine, sir.—

O! a pit of clay for to be made

[Sings.]

EDWIN BOOTH.

1 Clo. You lie out on 't, sir, and therefore it is not yours: for my part, I do not lie in 't, and yet it is mine.

Ham. Thou dost lie in 't, to be in 't, and say it is thine: 't is for the dead, not for the quick; therefore, thou liest.

1 Clo. 'T is a quick lie, sir; 't will away again, from me to you.

Ham. What man dost thou dig it for?

1 Clo. For no man, sir.

Ham. What woman, then?

1 Clo. For none, neither.

Ham. Who is to be buried in 't?

1 Clo. One, that was a woman, sir; but, rest her soul, she's dead.

Ham. How absolute the knave is: we must speak by the card, or equivocation will undo us. By the lord! Horatio, these three years I have taken note of it; the age is grown so picked, that the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier, he galls his kibe.—How long hast thou been a grave-maker?

1 Clo. Of all the days i' the year, I came to 't that day that our last king Hamlet overcame Fortinbras.

Ham. How long is that since?

1 Clo. Cannot you tell that? every fool can tell that. It was the very day that young Hamlet was born; he that is mad, and sent into England.

Ham. Ay, marry; why was he sent into England?

1 Clo. Why, because he was mad: he shall recover his wits there; or, if he do not, 't is no great matter there.

Ham. Why?

1 Clo. 'T will not be seen in him there; there, the men are as mad as he.

Ham. How came he mad?

1 Clo. Very strangely, they say.

Ham. How strangely?

1 Clo. 'Faith, e'en with losing his wits.

Ham. Upon what ground?

1 Clo. Why, here in Denmark. I have been sexton here, man, and boy, thirty years.

Ham. How long will a man lie i' the earth ere he rot?

1 Clo. 'Faith, if he be not rotten before he die, (as we have many pocky corses now-a-days¹, that will scarce hold the laying in) he will last you some eight year, or nine year: a tanner will last you nine year.

Ham. Why he more than another?

1 Clo. Why, sir, his hide is so tanned with his trade, that he will keep out water a great while, and your water is a sore decayer of your whoreson dead body. Here's a skull now; this skull hath lain i' the earth three-and-twenty years.

Ham. Whose was it?

1 Clo. A whoreson mad fellow's it was: whose do you think it was?

Ham. Nay, I know not

1 Clo. A pestilence on him for a mad rogue! a² poured a flagon of Rhenish on my head once. This same skull, sir, this same skull, sir, was Yorick's skull, the king's jester.

Ham. This?

[Takes the Skull.]

1 Clo. E'en that.

Ham. Let me see.³ Alas, poor Yorick!—I knew him, Horatio: a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy: he hath borne me on his back a thousand times: and now, how abhorred in⁴ my imagination it is! my gorge rises at it. Here hung those lips, that I have kissed I know not how oft. Where be your gibes now? your gambols? your songs? your flashes of merriment, that were wont to set the table on a roar? Not one now, to mock your own grinning⁵? quite chap-fallen? Now, get you to my lady's chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour she must come; make her laugh at that.—Pr'ythee, Horatio, tell me one thing.

Hor. What's that, my lord?

Ham. Dost thou think, Alexander looked o' this fashion i' the earth?

Hor. E'en so.

Ham. And smelt so? pah! [Puts down the Skull.]

Hor. E'en so, my lord.

Ham. To what base uses we may return, Horatio. Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander, till he find it stopping a bung-hole?

Hor. 'T were to consider too curiously, to consider so.

Ham. No, faith, not a jot; but to follow him thither with modesty enough, and likelihood to lead it: as thus⁶; Alexander died, Alexander was buried, Alexander returned into dust; the dust is earth; of earth we make loam, and why of that loam, whereto he was converted, might they not stop a beer-barrel?

"Imperial" Caesar dead, and turn'd to clay,

Might stop a hole to keep the wind away:

O! that that earth, which kept the world in awe,

Should patch a wall t' expel the winter's flaw:

But soft! but soft! aside:—here comes the king.

Enter Priests, &c. in Procession; the Corps of OPHELIA, LAERTES and Mourners following; King, Queen, and their Trains.

The queen, the courtiers. Who is that they follow.

And with such maimed rites? This doth betoken,

The corse they follow did with desperate hand

Forso its own life: 't was of some estate.

Couch we awhile, and mark.

[Retiring on one side with HORATIO]

Laer. What ceremony else?

Ham.

That is Laertes,

A very noble youth: mark.

Laer. What ceremony else?

1 Priest. Her obsequies have been as far enlarg'd

As we have warranty: her death was doubtful;

And but that great command o'erswavs the order.

She should in ground unsanctified have lodg'd,

Till the last trumpet: for charitable prayers,

Shards⁹, flints, and pebbles, should be thrown on her,

Yet here she is allow'd her virgin errands.¹¹

Her maiden strewments, and the bringing home

Of bell and burial.

Laer. Must there no more be done?

1 Priest.

No more be done.

We should profane the service of the dead.

To sing sad¹² requiem, and such rest to her

As to peace-parted souls.

Laer.

Lay her i' the earth;

And from her fair and unpolluted flesh.

May violets spring!—I tell thee, churlish priest,

A ministering angel shall my sister be,

When thou liest howling.

Ham.

What! the fair Ophelia?

Queen. Sweets to the sweet: farewell.

[Strewing flowers]

I hop'd thou shouldst have been my Hamlet's wife:

¹ heels of our: in folio. ² Not in quarto. ³ These three words are not in quarto. ⁴ Not in folio. ⁵ jeering: in folio. ⁶ as thus, only in quarto, 1603. ⁷ Imperious: in quartos. ⁸ water's: in quartos. ⁹ Broken pots. ¹⁰ German. kranz, garlands; rites: in folio. ¹¹ e: in f. e.; from quarto, and folio: sage.

I thought thy bride-bed to have deck'd, sweet maid,
And not to have strew'd th' grave.

Laer. O! treble woe!¹
Fall ten times treble on that cursed head,
Whose wicked deed thy most ingenious sense
Depriv'd thee of!—Hold off the earth awhile,
Till I have caught her once more in mine arms.

[Leaping into the Grave.]

Now pile your dust upon the quick and dead,
Till of this flat a mountain you have made,
To o'er-top old Pelion, or the skyish head
Of blue Olympus.

Ham. [Advancing.] What is he, whose grief
Bears such an emphasis? whose phrase of sorrow
Conjures the wandering stars, and makes them stand,
Like wonder-wounded hearers? this is I,
Hamlet the Dane.

[Leaping into the Grave.]

Laer. The devil take thy soul. [Grappling with him.]

Ham. Thou pray'st not well.
I pry'thee, take thy fingers from my throat;
For though I am not splenetic² and rash,
Yet have I in me something dangerous,
Which let thy wisdom³ fear. Hold off⁴ thy hand.

King. Pluck them asunder. [They strive.]

Queen. Hamlet! Hamlet!

All. Gentlemen!—

Hor. Good my lord, be quiet.

[The attendants part them, and they come out of the grave.]

Ham. Why, I will fight with him upon this theme,
Until my eyelids will no longer wag.

Queen. O my son! what theme?

Ham. I lov'd Ophelia: forty thousand brothers

Could not, with all their quantity of love,

Make up my sum.—What wilt thou do for her?

King. O! he is mad, Laertes.

Queen. For love of God, forbear him.

Ham. 'Swounds! show me what thou 'lt do:

Woul't weep? woul't fight? woul't storm? woul't tear thyself?

Woul't drink up Esill?⁵ eat a crocodile?

I'll do't: I'll do't.—Dost thou come here to whine?

To outface me with leaping in her grave?

Be buried quick with her, and so will I;

And, if thou prate of mountains, let them throw

Millions of acres on us: till our ground,

Singeing his pate against the burning zone,

Make Ossa like a wart! Nay, an thou 'lt mouth,

I'll rant as well as thou.

King. This is mere madness:⁶

And thus a while the fit will work on him.

Queen. Anon, as patient as the female dove,

When that her golden complements are disclos'd,

His silence will sit drooping.

Ham. Hear you, sir:

What is the reason that you use me thus?

I lov'd you ever: but it is no matter;

Let Hercules himself do what he may,

The cat will mew, the dog 'll have his day.

[Exit.]

King. I pray you, good Horatio, wait upon him.

[Exit HORATIO.]

[To LAERTES.] Strengthen your patience in our last night's speech:

We'll put the matter to the present push.—

Good Gertrude, set some watch over your son.—

This grave shall have a living monument:

An hour of quiet thereby⁷ shall we see;
Till then, in patience our proceeding be.

[Exeunt]

SCENE II.—A Hall in the Castle.

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO.

Ham. So much for this, sir: now shall you¹¹ see the other.—

You do remember all the circumstance.

Hor. Remember it, my lord!

Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a kind of fighting,
That would not let me sleep: methought, I lay
Worse than the mutines¹² in the bilboes.¹³ Rashly,—
And prais'd be rashness for it,—let us own,
Our indiscretion sometimes serves us well,
When our deep¹⁴ plots do fail;¹⁵ and that should teach¹⁶ us,

There's a divinity that shapes our ends,

Rough-hew them how we will.

Hor.

That is most certain.

Ham. Up from my cabin,

My sea-gown scarf'd about me, in the dark

Grop'd I to find out them; had my desire;

Finger'd their packet; and, in fine, withdrew

To mine own room again: making so bold.

My fears forgetting manners, to unfold¹⁷

Their grand commission; where I found, Horatio,

O royal knavery! an exact command,—

Larded with many several sorts of reasons,

Importing Denmark's health, and England's too,

With, ho! such bugs and goblins in my life,—

That on the supervise, no leisure bated,

No, not to stay the grinding of the axe,

My head should be struck off.

Hor.

Is't possible!

Ham. Here's the commission: read it at more leisure. [Giving it.]

But wilt thou hear me¹⁹ how I did proceed?

Hor. I beseech you.

Ham. Being thus benetted round with villains,—

Ere I could make a prologue to my brains,

They had begun the play,—I sat me down,

Devis'd a new commission; wrote it fair.

I once did hold it, as our statists do,

A baseness to write fair, and labour'd much

How to forget that learning; but, sir, now

It did me yeoman's service. Wilt thou know

The effect of what I wrote?

Hor.

Ay, good my lord.

Ham. An earnest conjuration from the king,—

As England was his faithful tributary,

As love between them like the palm might flourish,

As peace should still her wheaten garland wear,

And stand a comma 'tween their amities,

And many such like as's of great charge,

That on the view and know²⁰ of these contents,

Without debatement farther, more or less,

He should the bearers put to sudden death,

Not shriving time allow'd.

Hor.

How was this seal'd?

Ham. Why, even in that was heaven ordinate²¹

I had my father's signet in my purse,

Which was the model of that Danish seal;

Folded the writ up in form of the other;

Subscrib'd it; gave'th' impression; plac'd it safely,

The changeling never known. Now, the next day

Was our sea-fight, and what to this was sequent

¹ terrible woe: in folio. ² Sir: in folio. ³ splenetic: in f. e. ⁴ wisdom: in folio. ⁵ Away: in folio. ⁶ Not in f. e. ⁷ Probably the river Yarell. ⁸ The words, "I'll do't," are not repeated in f. e. ⁹ This is the following line, are given to the Queen, in f. e. ¹⁰ shortly in folio. ¹¹ let me: in folio. ¹² Mutineers. ¹³ Bars of iron with fetters, so called from Bilboes, where they were made. ¹⁴ dear: in folio. ¹⁵ pall: in f. e. ¹⁶ learn: in quartos. ¹⁷ unusual: in folio. ¹⁸ Not in f. e. ¹⁹ now: in quartos. ²⁰ knowing: in quartos. ²¹ ordinant in folio.

Thou know'st already.

Hor. So Guildenstern and Rosencrantz go to't.

Ham. Why, man, they did make love to this employment!

They are not near my conscience; their defeat
Does by their own insinuation grow.

'Tis dangerous, when a baser nature comes

Of the pass and fell incensed points

Of mighty opposites.

Hor. Why, what a king is this!

Ham. Does it not, think thee, stand me now upon—
He that hath kill'd my king, and whor'd my mother;
opp'd in between th' election and my hopes;

His angle for my proper life thrown out,
And with such cozenage—is 't not perfect conscience,
To quit him with his own?—and is 't not to be damn'd,
To let this canker of our nature come
In farther evil?

Hor. It must be shortly known to him from England,
What is the issue of the business there.

Ham. It will be short: the interim is mine;

And a man's life no more than to say, one.

But I am very sorry, good Horatio,

That to Laertes I forgot myself,

For by the image of my cause I see

The portraiture of his: I'll court³ his favours:

But, sure, the bravery of his grief did put me
Into a towering passion.

Hor. Peace! who comes here?

Enter OSRICK.

Osr. Your lordship is right welcome back to Denmark.

Ham. I humbly thank you, sir.—Dost know this

Hor. No, my good lord. [water-fly?

Ham. Thy state is the more gracious, for 't is a vice to know him. He hath much land, and fertile: let a beast be lord of beasts, and his crib shall stand at the king's mess: 't is a clough⁴; but, as I say⁵, spacious in the possession of dirt.

Osr. Sweet lord, if your lordship were at leisure, I should impart a thing to you from his majesty.

Ham. I will receive it, sir, with all diligence of spirit. Your bonnet to his right use; 't is for the head.

Osr. I thank your lordship, 't is very hot.

Ham. No, believe me, 't is very cold: the wind is northerly.

Osr. It is indifferent cold, my lord, indeed.

Ham. But yet, methinks, it is very sultry, and hot for my complexion.

Osr. Exceedingly, my lord: it is very sultry, as
't were,—I cannot tell how.—But, my lord, his majesty bade me signify to you, that he has laid a great wager on your head. Sir, this is the matter.—

Ham. I beseech you, remember—

[HAMLET moves him to put on his Hat.

Osr. Nay, in good faith; for mine ease, in good faith.⁶ Sir, here is newly come to court, Laertes: believe me, an absolute gentleman, full of most excellent differences, of very soft society, and great showing:
indeed, to speak feelingly⁷ of him, he is the eard or calendar of gentry, for you shall find in him the continent of what part a gentleman would see.

Ham. Sir, his defilement suffers no perdition in you:
though, I know, to divide him inventorially, would dizzy
the arithmetic of memory: and yet but raw⁸ neither, in respect of his quick sail. But, in the verity of extolment,
I take him to be a soul of great article; and his infusion of such dearth and rareness, as, to make true diction of him, his semblable is his mirror; and who else would trace him, his umbrage, nothing more.

Osr. Your lordship speaks most infallibly of him.

Ham. The concernancy, sir? why do we wrap the gentleman in our more rawer breath?

Osr. Sir?

Hor. Is 't not possible to understand in another tongue? You will do 't, sir, really.

Ham. What imports the nomination of this gentleman?

Osr. Of Laertes?

Hor. His purse is empty already; all his golden words are spent.

Ham. Of him, sir.

Osr. I know, you are not ignorant—

Ham. I would, you did, sir; yet, in faith, if you did it would not much approve me.—Well, sir.

Osr. You are not ignorant of what excellence
Laertes is.

Ham. I dare not confess that, lest I should compare with him in excellence; but to know a man well were to know himself.⁹

Osr. I mean, sir, for his weapon; but in the imputation laid on him by them, in his need¹⁰ he's unfe-lowed.

Ham. What's his weapon?

Osr. Rapier and dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons: but, well.

Osr. The king, sir, hath wagered with him six Barbary horses: against the which he has imponed¹¹, as I take it, six French rapiers and poniards, with their assigns, as girdle, hangers, and so. Three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hilts, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.

Ham. What call you the carriages?

Hor. I knew, you must be edified by the margin, ere you had done.¹²

Osr. The carriages, sir, are the hangers.

Ham. The phrase would be more germane to the matter, if we could carry a cannon by our sides: I would, it might be hangers till then. But, on: six Barbary horses against six French swords, their assigns, and three liberal-conceited carriages; that's the French bet against the Danish. Why is this imponed, as you call it?

Osr. The king, sir, hath laid, sir, that in a dozen passes between yourself and him, he shall not exceed you three hits: he hath laid on twelve, for nine, and that would come to immediate trial, if your lordship would vouchsafe the answer.

Ham. How, if I answer, no?

Osr. I mean, my lord, the opposition of your person in trial.

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the hall: if it please his majesty, it is the breathing time of day with me:
let the foils be brought, the gentleman willing, and the king hold his purpose. I will win for him, if I can, if not, I will gain nothing but my shame, and the odd hits.

Osr. Shall I deliver you¹³ so?

Ham. To this effect, sir: after what flourish your nature will.

Osr. I commend my duty to your lordship. [Exit.

Ham. Yours, yours.—He does well to commend it himself: there are no tongues else for 's turn.¹⁴

Hor. This lapwing runs away with the shell on his head.

made the change. ⁵ A kind of jackdaw. ⁶ saw: in folio. ⁷ From this word, all that follows to, "What's his weapon?" is not in folio sellingly: in quarto, 1603. ⁸ yaw: in quarto, 1604. ⁹ Dyce reads it: but yaw. ¹⁰ This and the next speech, are not in folio. ¹¹ Mori- imponed: in quartos. ¹² This speech is not in folio. ¹³ Re-deliver you 'em: in folio. ¹⁴ tongue: in folio.

Ham. He did comply¹ with his dug before he sucked it. Thus has he (and many² more of the same breed³ that, I know, the drossy age dotes on) only got the tunc of the time, and outward habit of encounter, a kind of yesty collection, which carries them through and through the most foud⁴ and winnowed opinions; and do but blow them to their trial, the bubbles are out.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. My⁵ lord, his majesty commended him to you by young Osrick, who brings back to him, that you attend him in the hall: he sends to know, if your pleasure hold to play with Laertes, or that you will take longer time.

Ham. I am constant to my purposes; they follow the king's pleasure: if his fitness speaks, mine is ready; now, or whensoever, provided I be so able as now.

Lord. The king, and queen, and all are coming down.

Ham. In happy time.

Lord. The queen desires you to use some gentle entertainment to Laertes, before you fall to play.

Ham. She well instructs me. [Exit Lord.]

Hor. You will lose this wager,⁶ my lord.

Ham. I do not think so: since he went into France, I have been in continual practice: I shall win at the odds. Thou wouldst not think, how ill all is here about my heart; but it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my lord,—

Ham. It is but foolery; but it is such a kind of gain-giving,⁷ as would, perhaps, trouble a woman.

Hor. If your mind dislike any thing, obey it: I will forestall their repair hither, and say you are not fit.

Ham. Not a whit, we defy augury: there is a special providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 'tis not to come; if it be not to come, it will be now; if it be not now, yet it will come: the readiness is all. Since no man, of aught he leaves, knows, what is 't to leave betimes? Let be.⁸

Enter King, Queen, LAERTES, Lords, OSRICK, and Attendants with Foils, &c.

King. Come, Hamlet: come, and take this hand from me.

[The King puts the hand of LAERTES into that of HAMLET.]

Ham. Give me your pardon, sir: I've done you wrong;

But pardon 't, as you are a gentleman.

This presence knows,

And you must needs have heard, how I am punish'd

With sore distraction. What I have done,

That might your nature, honour, and exception,

Roughly awake, I here proclaim was madness.

Was't Hamlet wrong'd Laertes? Never, Hamlet:

If Hamlet from himself be ta'en away,

And when he's not himself does wrong Laertes,

Then Hamlet does it not: Hamlet denies it.

Who does it then? This madness. If't be so,

Hamlet is of the faction that is wrong'd:

His madness is poor Hamlet's enemy.

Sir, in this audience,⁹

Let my disclaiming from a purpos'd evil

Free me so far in your most generous thoughts,

That I have shot mine arrow o'er the house,

And hurt my brother.

Laer.

I am satisfied in nature,

Whose motive, in this case, should stir me most

To my revenge: but in my terms of honour,

I stand aloof, and will no reconciliation,

Till by some elder masters, of known honour,
I have a voice and precedent of peace,
To keep my name ungor'd. But till that time,
I do receive your offer'd love like love,
And will not wrong it.

Ham.

I embrace it freely;

And will this brother's wager frankly play.—

Give us the foils; come on!¹⁰ [Foils brought.]

Laer.

Come; one for me.

Ham. I'll be your foil, Laertes: in mine ignorance

Your skill shall like a star i' the darkest night,

Stick fiery off indeed.

Laer.

You mock me, sir.

Ham. No, by this hand.

King. Give them the foils, young Osrick—
Consin Hamlet,

You know the wager?

Ham.

Very well, my lord;

Your grace hath laid the odds of the weaker side.

King. I do not fear it: I have seen, on both;

But since he is better, we have therefore odds.

Laer.

This is too heavy; let me see another.

Ham. This likes me well. These foils have all a length?¹¹ [They prepare to play.]

Os. Ay, my good lord.

King. Set me the stoops of wine upon that table.—

If Hamlet give the first or second hit,

Or quit in answer of the third exchange,

Let all the battlements their ordnance fire;

The king shall drink to Hamlet's better breath:

And in the cup an union¹² shall he throw,

Richer than that which four successive kings

In Denmark's crown have worn. Give me the cups,

And let the kettle to the trumpet speak,

The trumpet to the cannoneer without,

The cannons to the heavens, the heavens to earth,

“Now the king drinks to Hamlet!”—Come, begin;—

And you, the judges, bear a wary eye.

Ham. Come on, sir.

Laer.

Come, my lord. [They play.]

Ham.

One

Laer.

No.

Ham.

Judgment

Os. A hit, a very palpable hit.

Laer.

Well:—again.

King. Stay; give me drink. Hamlet, this pearl is thine;

Here's to thy health.—Give him the cup.

[Trumpets sound; and Cannon shot off within.]

Ham. I'll play this bout first; set it by awhile.—

Come.—Another hit; what say you? [They play.]

Laer.

A touch; a touch, I do confess.

King.

Our son shall win.

Queen.

He's fat, and scant of breath.—

Here is a napkin, rub thy brows, my son!¹³

The queen carouses to thy fortune, Hamlet.

Ham. Good madam,—

King.

Gertrude, do not drink.

Queen.

I will, my lord: I pray you, pardon me.

[She drinks.]

King. It is the poison'd cup! it is too late. [Aside.]

Ham. I dare not drink yet, madam; by and by.

Queen. Come, let me wipe thy face.

Laer.

My lord, I'll hit him now.

King.

I do not think it

Laer. And yet it is almost against my conscience. [Aside.]

¹ Compliment. ² mine. in folio. ³ heavy: in folio. ⁴ Warburton reads: fand (fenned). ⁵ This and the following speeches to, “⁶ Lord,” are in folio. ⁶ “this wager” is not in quarto. ⁷ Misgiving. ⁸ So the quarto, 1604. Since no man has aught of what he leaves what is 't to leave betimes: in folio. ⁹ This line is not in quarto. ¹⁰ “come on”: not in quarto. ¹¹ Not in f. e. ¹² A rich pearl; only in quarto, except that of 1604. ¹³ Here Hamlet, take my napkin, rub thy brows: in f. e.

Ham. Come, for the third, Laertes. You but dally:
I pray you, pass with your best violence.

I am afeard¹, you make a wanton of me.

Laer. Say you so? come on.

[They play.]

Osr. Nothing, neither way.

Laer. Have at you now.

[LAERTES wounds HAMLET: then, in scuffling they change Rapiers, and HAMLET wounds LAERTES.]

King. Part them! they are incens'd.

Ham. Nay, come again. [The Queen falls.]

Osr. Look to the queen there, ho?

Hor. They bleed on both sides.—How is it, my lord?

Osr. How is't, Laertes?

Laer. Why, as a woodcock to mine own² springe, Osrick;

I am justly kill'd with mine own treachery.

Ham. How does the Queen?

King. She swoons to see them bleed.

Queen. No, no, the drink, the drink.—O my dear
Hamlet!—

The drink, the drink: I am poison'd. [Dies.]

Ham. O villainy!—How? let the door be lock'd:

Treachery! seek it out. [LAERTES falls.]

Laer. It is here, Hamlet. Hamlet, thou art slain;

No medicine in the world can do thee good:

In thee there is not half an hour³ of life;

The treacherous instrument is in thy hand,

Unbated, and envenom'd. The foul practice

Hath turn'd itself on me: lo! here I lie,

Never to rise again. Thy mother's poison'd:

I can no more. The king, the king's to blame.

Ham. The point

Envenom'd too!—Then, venom, to thy work.

[Stabs the King.]

All. Treason! treason!

King. O! yet defend me, friends: I am but hurt.

Ham. Here, thou incestuous, murderous, damned

Dane,

Drink off this potion:—is thy union here?

Follow my mother. [King dies.]

Laer. He is justly serv'd:

It is a poison temper'd by himself.—

Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet:

Mine and my father's death come not upon thee,

Nor thine on me! [Dies.]

Ham. Heaven make thee free of it! I follow thee.—

I am dead, Horatio.—Wretched queen, adieu!

You that look pale and tremble at this chance,

That are but mutes or audience to this act,

Had I but time, (as this fell sergeant, death,

Is strict in his arrest) O! I could tell you,—

But let it be.—Horatio, I am dead;

Thou liv'st: report me and my cause aright⁴

To the unsatisfied.

Hor. Never believe it: [Taking the Cup.]

I am more an antique Roman than a Dane:

Ham. As thou'rt a man,

Give me the cup: let go; by heaven I'll have it.—

[Struggling: Hamlet gets the Cup.]

O God!—Horatio, what a wounded name,

Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind me!

If thou didst ever hold me in thy heart,

Absent thee from felicity awhile,

And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain,

To tell my story.— [March afar off, and Shot within.]

What warlike noise is this?

Osr. Young Fortinbras, with conquest come from Poland,

To the ambassadors of England gives
This warlike volley.

Ham. O! I die, Horatio;

The potent poison quite o'er-crows⁵ my spirit:

I cannot live to hear the news from England:

But I do prophesy the election lights

On Fortinbras: he has my dying voice;

So tell him, with the occurrents, more and less,

Which have solicited.—The rest is silence. [Dies.]

Hor. Now cracks a noble heart.—Good night sweet prince:

And flights of angels sing thee to thy rest!

Why does the drum come hither? [March within.]

Enter FORTINBRAS, the English Ambassadors, and others.

Fort. Where is this sight?

Hor. What is it ye would see?

If aught of woe, or wonder, cease your search.

Fort. This quarry cries on havoc.—O proud death!

What feast is toward in thine eternal cell,

That thou so many princes at a shot

So bloodily hast struck?

1 Ambr. The sight is dismal,

And our affairs from England come too late:

The ears are senseless that should give us hearing.

To tell him his commandment is fulfill'd,

That Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are dead.

Where should we have our thanks?

Hor. Not from his mouth,

Had it th' ability of life to thank you:

He never gave commandment for their death.

But since, so jump upon this bloody question,

You from the Polack wars, and you from England,

Are here arriv'd, give order that these bodies

High on a stage be placed to the view;

And let me speak to the yet unknowing world.

How these things came about; so shall you hear

Of carnal, bloody, and unnatural acts.

Of accidental judgments, casual slaughters,

Of deaths put on by cunning, and forc'd⁶ cause.

And, in this upshot, purposes mistook

Fall'n on the inventors' heads. All this can I

Truly deliver.

Fort. Let us haste to hear it,

And call the noblest to the audience.

For me, with sorrow I embrace my fortune:

I have some rights of memory in this kingdom,

Which now to claim my vantage doth invite me.

Hor. Of that I shall have also cause to speak,

And from his mouth whose voice will draw on more

But let this scene be presently perform'd,

Even while men's minds are wild, lest more mischance

On plots and errors, happen.

Fort. Let four captains

Bear Hamlet, like a soldier, to the stage;

For he was likely, had he been put on,

To have prov'd most royally: and for his passage,

The soldiers' music, and the rites of war,

Speak loudly for him.—

Take up the body.—Such a sight as this

Becomes the field, but here shows much amiss.

Go, bid the soldiers shoot. [A dead March.]

[Exeunt marching: after which, a peal of Ordinance is shot off.]

ACT I.

SCENE I.—A Room of State in King LEAR's Palace.

Enter KENT, GLOSTER, and EDMUND.

Kent. I thought, the king had more affected the duke of Albany, than Cornwall.

Glo. It did always seem so to us: but now, in the division of the kingdoms, it appears not which of the dukes he values most: for equalities¹ are so weighed, that curiosity in neither can make choice of either's moiety.

Kent. Is not this your son, my lord?

Glo. His breeding, sir, hath been at my charge: I have so often blushed to acknowledge him, that now I am brazed to it.

Kent. I cannot conceive you.

Glo. Sir, this young fellow's mother could; whereupon she grew round-wombed, and had, indeed, sir, a son for her cradle ere she had a husband for her bed. Do you smell a fault?

Kent. I cannot wish the fault undone, the issue of it being so proper.

Glo. But I have a son, sir, by order of law, some year elder than this, who yet is no dearer in my account: though this knave came somewhat saucily into² the world, before he was sent for, yet was his mother fair, there was good sport at his making, and the whoreson must be acknowledged—Do you know this noble gentleman, Edmund?

Edm. No, my lord.

Glo. My lord of Kent: remember him hereafter as my honourable friend.

Edm. My services to your lordship.

Kent. I must love you, and sue to know you better.

Edm. Sir, I shall study deserving.

Glo. He hath been out nine years, and away he shall again.—The king is coming. [Sennet within.]

Enter LEAR, CORNWALL, ALBANY, GONERIL, REGAN, CORDELIA, and Attendants.

Lear. Attend the lords of France and Burgundy Gloster.

Glo. I shall, my liege.*[Exeunt GLOSTER and EDMUND]

Lear. Mean-time, we shall express our darker purpose.

Give me the map there.—Know, that we have divided, In three, our kingdom: and 'tis our fast intent To shake all cares and business from our age,⁴ Conferring⁵ them on younger strengths,⁶ while we Unburden'd crawl toward death.—Our son of Cornwall, And you, our no less loving son of Albany, We have this hour a constant will to publish Our daughters' several dowers, that future strife May be prevented now. The princes, France and Burgundy,

Great rivals in our youngest daughter's love, Long in our court have made their amorous sojourn, And here are to be answer'd.—Tell me, my daughters. (Since now we will divest us, both of rule,⁷ Interest of territory, cares of state)

Which of you, shall we say, doth love us most?

That we our largest bounty may extend

Where nature doth with merit challenge.*—Goneril.

Our eldest-born, speak first.

Gon. I love⁹ you more than words can wield the matter;

Dearer than eye-sight, space, and liberty;

Beyond what can be valued, rich or rare:

No less than life, with grace, health, beauty, honour:

As much as child e'er lov'd, or father found;

A love that makes breath poor, and speech unable,

Beyond all manner of so much I love you.

Cor. What shall Cordelia speak?¹⁰ Love, and be silent. [Aside]

Lear. Of all these bounds, even from this line to this,
With shadowy¹ forests, and with champains rich'd,
With plenteous rivers and wide-skirted meads,
We make thee lady : to thine and Albany's issue
Be this perpetual.—What says our second daughter,
Our dearest Regan, wife of Cornwall? Speak.

Reg. I am made of that self metal as my sister,
And prize me at her worth. In my true heart
I find, she names my very deed of love;
Only she comes too short, that I profess
Myself an enemy to all other joys,
Which the most precious sphere² of sense possesses,³
And find, I am alone felicitate
In your dear highness' love.

Cor. Then, poor Cordelia!
[Aside.

And yet not so; since, I am sure, my love's
More plenteous⁴ than my tongue.

Lear. To thee, and thine, hereditary ever,
Remain this ample third of our fair kingdom;
No less in space, validity, and pleasure,
Than that conferr'd on Goneril.—Now, our joy,
Although our last, not least : to whose young love
The vines of France, and milk of Burgundy,
Strive to be interest'd; what can you say, to draw
A third more opulent than your sisters? Speak.

Cor. Nothing, my lord.

Lear. Nothing?

Cor. Nothing.

Lear. Nothing will come of nothing : speak again.

Cor. Unhappy that I am, I cannot heave
My heart into my mouth : I love your majesty
According to my bond ; nor more, nor less.

Lear. How? how, Cordelia? mend your speech a little,

Lest you may mar your fortunes.

Cor. Good my lord,

You have begot me, bred me, lov'd me : I
Return those duties back as are right fit,
Obey you, love you, and most honour you.
Why have my sisters husbands, if they say,
They love you all? Haply, when I shall wed,
That lord, whose hand must take my plight, shall carry
Half my love with him, half my care, and duty :
Sure, I shall never marry like my sisters,
To love my father all.⁵

Lear. But goes this with thy heart?

Cor. Ay, my good lord.

Lear. So young, and so untender?

Cor. So young, my lord, and true.

Lear. Let it be so : thy truth, then, be thy dower;
For, by the sacred radiance of the sun,
The mysteries of Hecate, and the night,
By all the operation of the orbs,
From whom we do exist, and cease to be,
Here I disclaim all my paternal care,
Propinquity and property of blood,
And as a stranger to my heart and me,
Hold thee from this for ever. The barbarous Scythian,
Or he that makes his generation messes
To gorge his appetite, shall to my bosom
Be as well neighbour'd, pitied, and reliev'd,
As thou, my sometime daughter.

Kent. Good my liege,—

Lear. Peace, Kent!
Come not between the dragon and his wrath.
I lov'd her most, and thought to set my rest

On her kind nursery.—Hence, and avoid my sight !—

[To Cordelia

So be my grave my peace, as here I give
Her father's heart from her !—Call France.—Who stirs ?
Call Burgundy.—Cornwall, and Albany.
With my two daughters' dowers digest the third :
Let pride, which she calls plainness, marry her.
I do invest you jointly with my power,
Pre-eminence, and all the large effects
That troop with majesty.—Ourselves, by monthly course
With reservation of an hundred knights,
By you to be sustain'd, shall our abode
Make with you by due turns. Only, we still retain
The name, and all th' additions to a king ;
The sway, revenue, execution of the rest,
Beloved sons, be yours : which to confirm.
This coronet part between you. [Giving the Crown.

Kent. Royal Lear,
Whom I have ever honour'd as my king.

Lov'd as my father, as my master follow'd.

And as my patron⁶ thought on in my prayers.—

Lear. The bow is bent and drawn, make from the shaft.

Kent. Let it fall rather, though the fork invade
The region of my heart : be Kent unmannerly.
When Lear is mad.—What wouldst thou do, old man ?
Think'st thou, that duty shall have dread to speak,
When power to flattery bows ? To plainness honour's bound,

When majesty stoops⁷ to folly. Reverse thy doom!⁸
And in thy best consideration check
This hideous rashness : answer my life my judgment,
Thy youngest daughter does not love thee least ;
Nor are those empty-hearted whose low sound
Reverbs no hollowness.

Lear. Kent, on thy life, no more.

Kent. My life I never held but as a pawn
To wage against thine enemies ; nor⁹ fear to lose it,
Thy safety being the motive.

Lear. Out of my sight !

Kent. See better, Lear ; and let me still remain
The true blank of thine eye.

Lear. Now, by Apollo,—

Kent. Now, by Apollo, king.

Thou swear'st thy gods in vain.

Lear. O, vassal ! recreant!¹⁰
[Laying his hand upon his sword

Alb. Corn. Dear sir, forbear.¹¹

Kent. Do ;

Kill thy physician, and the fee bestow
Upon the foul disease. Revoke thy gift!¹²
Or, whilst I can vent clamour from my throat,
I'll tell thee, thou dost evil.

Lear. Hear me, recreant !

On thee allegiance hear me.
Since thou hast sought to make us break our vow,
(Which we durst never yet) and, with strain'd¹³ pride,
To come betwixt our sentence and our power,
(Which nor our nature nor our place can bear)
Our potency made good, take thy reward.
Five days we do allot thee for provision
To shield thee from diseases of the world,
And on the sixth to turn thy hated back
Upon our kingdom : if the seventh¹⁴ day following,
Thy banish'd trunk be found in our dominions,
The moment is thy death. Away ! By Jupiter,
This shall not be revok'd.

And your large speeches may your deeds approve,

[To REGAN and GONERIL.]

That good effects may spring from words of love.—

Thus Kent, C. princes! bids you all adieu:

He'll shape his old course in a country new. [Exit.]

Flourish. Re-enter GLOSTER, with FRANCE, BURGUNDY, and Attendants.

Glo. Here's France and Burgundy, my noble lord.

Lear. My lord of Burgundy,

We first address toward you, who with this king
Hath rival'd for our daughter: what, in the least,
Will you require in present dower with her,
Or ease your quest of love?

Bur. Most royal majesty,
I crave no more than hath³ your highness offer'd,
Nor will you tender less.

Lear. Right noble Burgundy,

When she was dear to us, we did hold her so;

But now her price is fall'n. Sir, there she stands:

If aught within that little seeming substance,

Or all of it, with our displeasure piec'd,

And nothing more, may fity like your grace,

She's there, and she is yours.

Bur. I know no answer.

Lear. Will you, with those infirmities she owes,

Unfriended, new-adapted to our hate,

Dower'd⁴ with our curse, and stranger'd with our oath,

Take her, or leave her?

Bur. Pardon me, royal sir;

Election makes not up on such conditions.

Lear. Then leave her, sir; for, by the power that made me,

I tell you all her wealth.—For you, great king,

[To FRANCE.]

I would not from your love make such a stray,

To match you where I hate: therefore, beseech you

T' avert your liking a more worthier way,

Than on a wretch whom nature is ashamed

Almost t' acknowledge hers.

France. This is most strange,

That she, that even but now was your blest object,

The argument of your praise, balm of your age,

Most⁵ best, most⁶ dearest, should in this trice of time

Commit a thing so monstrous, to dismantle

So many folds of favour. Sure, her offence

Must be of such unnatural degree,

That monsters it, or your fore-vouch'd affection

Fall'n into taint: which to believe of her,

Must be a faith that reason, without miracle,

Could⁷ never plant in me.

Cor. I yet beseech your majesty,
If for I want that glib and oily art,

To speak and purpose not, since what I well intend,

I'll do before I speak that you make known

Is no vicious blot, nor other foulness,⁸

No unchaste⁹ action, or dishonour'd stoop¹⁰,

That hath depriv'd me of your grace and favour;

But even for want of that for which I am richer,

A still-soliciting eye, and such a tongue

That I am glad I have not, though not to have it,

Hath lost me in your liking.

Lear. Better thou

Hadst not been born, than not to have pleas'd me better

France. Is it¹¹ but this? a tardiness in nature,

Which often leaves the history unspoke,

That it intends to do?—My lord of Burgundy,

What say you to the lady? Love is not love,

When it is mingled with respects, that stand

Aloof from the entire point. Will you have her?

She is herself a dowry.¹²

Bur.

Royal Lear,¹³

Give but that portion which yourself propos'd,

And here I take Cordelia by the hand,

Duchess of Burgundy.

Lear. Nothing: I have sworn; I am firm.

Bur. I am sorry, then, you have so lost a father,

That you must lose a husband.

Cor.

Peace be with Burgundy:

Since that respects of¹⁴ fortune are his love,

I shall not be his wife.

France. Fairest Cordelia, that art most rich, being poor,

Most choice, forsaken, and most lov'd, despis'd,

Thee and thy virtues here I seize upon:

Be it lawful, I take up what's cast away.

Gods, gods! 't is strange, that from their cold'st neglect

My love should kindle to inflam'd respect.—

Thy dowerless daughter, king, thrown to my chance,

Is queen of us, of ours, and our fair France:

Not all the dukes of waterish Burgundy

Shall¹⁵ buy this unpriz'd precious maid of me.—

Bid them farewell, Cordelia, though unkind:

Thou lovest here, a better where¹⁶ to find.

Lear. Thou hast her, France: let her be thine, for we Have no such daughter, nor shall ever see

That face of hers again:—Therefore, be gone

Without our grace, our love, our benison.—

Come, noble Burgundy.

[Flourish. Exeunt LEAR, BURGUNDY, CORNWALL, ALBANY, GLOSTER, and Attendants.]

France. Bid farewell to your sisters.

Cor. Ye jewels of our father, with wash'd eyes

Cordelia leaves you: I know you what you are;

And, like a sister, am most loath to call

Your faults as they are nam'd. Love¹⁷ well our

To your professed bosoms I commit him; [father:]

But yet, alas! stood I within his grace,

I would prefer him to a better place.

So, farewell to you both.

Gon. Prescribe not us our duty.

Reg.

Let your study

Be to content your lord, who hath receiv'd you

As fortune's alms: you have obedience scanted,

And well are worth the want that you have wanted.

Cor. Time shall unfold what plighted cunning hides;

Who cover faults, at last shame them¹⁸ derides.

Well may you prosper!

France.

Come, my fair Cordelia.

[Exeunt FRANCE and CORDELIA.]

Gon. Sister, it is not little I have to say of what most nearly appertains to us both. I think, our father will hence to-night.

Reg. That's most certain, and with you; next month

with us.

Gon. You see how full of changes his age is; the observation we have made of it hath not¹⁹ been little:

he always loved our sister most, and with what poor judgment he hath now cast her off appears too grossly.

Reg. Such unconstant starts are we like to have from him, as this of Kent's banishment.

Gon. There is farther compliment of leave-taking between France and him. Pray you, let us hit¹ together: if our father carry authority with such dispositions as he bears, this last surrender of his will but offend us.

Reg. We shall farther think of it.

Gon. We must do something, and i' the heat.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Hall in the Earl of GLOSTER'S Castle.

Enter EDMUND, the Bastard, with a Letter.

Edm. Thou, nature, art my goddess: to thy law My services are bound. Wherefore should I Stand on the plague of custom, and permit The curiosity² of nations to deprive me, For that I am some twelve or fourteen moon-shines Lag of a brother? Why bastard? wherefore base, When my dimensions are as well compact, My mind as generous, and my shape as true, As honest madam's issue? Why brand they us With base? with baseness? bastardy? base, base? Who in the lusty stealth of nature take More composition and fierce quality, Than doth within a dull, stale, tired bed, Go to the creating a whole tribe of fops, Got 'tween asleep and wake?—Well then, Legitimate Edgar, I must have your land: Our father's love is to the bastard Edmund, As to the legitimate. Fine word,—legitimate!³ Well, my legitimate, if this letter speed, And my invention thrive, Edmund the base Shall top the legitimate. I grow; I prosper:—Now, gods, stand up for bastards! [Reads the Letter.]

Enter GLOSTER.

Glo. Kent banish'd thus! And France in choler parted!

And the king gone to-night! subscrib'd⁴ his power! Confin'd to exhibition⁵! All this done Upon the gad!—Edmund? How now! what news?

Edm. So please your lordship, none.

[Hiding the Letter.]

Glo. Why so earnestly seek you to put up that letter?

Edm. I know no news, my lord.

Glo. What paper were you reading?

Edm. Nothing, my lord.

Glo. No! What needed, then, that terrible despatch of it into your pocket? the quality of nothing hath not such need to hide itself. Let's see. come; if it be nothing, I shall not need spectacles.

Edm. I beseech you, sir, pardon me: 't is a letter from my brother, that I have not all o'er-read; and for so much as I have perused, I find it not fit for your o'erlooking⁷.

Glo. Give me the letter, sir.

Edm. I shall offend, either to detain or give it. The contents, as in part I understand them, Are to blame.

Glo. Let's see, let's see.

Edm. I hope, for my brother's justification, he wrote this but as an essay or taste of my virtue.

Glo. [Reads.] "This policy, and reverence⁸ of age, makes the world bitter to the best of our times; keeps our fortunes from us, till our oldness cannot relish them. I begin to find an idle and fond bondage in the oppression of aged tyranny, who sways, not as it hath power, but as it is suffered. Come to me, that of this I may speak more. If our father would sleep till I waked him, you should enjoy half his revenue for ever, and live the beloved of your brother, EDGAR."—Humph!—Conspiracy!—"Sleep till I waked him,—you should enjoy half his revenue."—My son Edgar! Had he a hand to write this? a heart and brain to breed it in?—When came this to you? Who brought it?

Edm. It was not brought me, my lord; there 's the cunning of it: I found it thrown in at the casement of my closet.

Glo. You know the character to be your brother's?

Edm. If the matter were good, my lord, I durst swear it were his; but, in respect of that, I would fain think it were not.

Glo. It is his.

Edm. It is his hand, my lord; but, I hope, his heart is not in the contents.

Glo. Hath he never heretofore sounded you in this business?

Edm. Never, my lord; but I have often heard him maintain it to be fit, that sons at perfect age, and fathers declined, the father should be as ward to the son, and the son manage his revenue.

Glo. O villain, villain!—His very opinion in the letter!—Abhorred villain! Unnatural, detested, brutish villain! worse than brutish!—Go, sirrah, seek him; I'll¹⁰ apprehend him. Abominable villain!—Where is he?

Edm. I do not well know, my lord. If it shall please you to suspend your indignation against my brother, till you can derive from him better testimony of his intent, you shall run a certain course: where, if you violently proceed against him, mistaking his purpose, it would make a great gap in your own honour, and shake in pieces the heart of his obedience. I dare pawn down my life for him, that he hath writ this to feel my affection to your honour, and to no other¹¹ pretence¹² of danger.

Glo. Think you so?

Edm. If your honour judge it meet, I will place you where you shall hear us confer of this, and by an auricular assurance have your satisfaction: and that without any farther delay than this very evening.

Glo. He cannot be such a monster.

Edm. Nor is not, sure.¹³

Glo. To his father, that so tenderly and entirely loves him.—Heaven and earth!—Edmund, seek him out; wind me into him, I pray you: frame the business after your own wisdom. I would unstate myself to be in a due resolution.

Edm. I will seek him, sir, presently, convey the business as I shall find¹⁴ means, and acquaint you withal.

Glo. These late eclipses in the sun and moon portend no good to us: though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus, yet nature finds itself scourged by the sequent effects. Love cools, friendship falls off,

¹ sit in folio. ² Scrupulousness. ³ These three words are not in quarto. ⁴ Not in f. o. ⁵ Signed away. ⁶ Maintenance. ⁷ liking in quartos. ⁸ Not in quartos. ⁹ you to this; in folio. ¹⁰ I: in quartos. ¹¹ farther: in quartos. ¹² Intention. ¹³ This speech, and the reply to EDMUND, are not in folio. ¹⁴ see: in quartos.

brother's divide: in cities, mutinies; in countries, discord; in palaces, treason, and the bond cracked between son and father.¹ This villain of mine comes under the prediction; there's son against father: the king falls from bias of nature; there's father against child. We have seen the best of our time: machinations, hollow-ness, treachery, and all ruinous disorders, follow us disquietly to our graves.—Find out this villain. Edmund: it shall lose thee nothing: do it carefully.—And the noble and true-hearted Kent banished! his offence, honesty.—'T is strange. [Exit.]

Edm. This is the excellent foppery of the world, that, when we are sick in fortune, (often the surfeit of our own behaviour) we make guilty of our disasters, the sun, the moon, and the stars: as if we were villains by necessity; fools, by heavenly compulsion; knaves, thieves, and treachers, by spherical predominance; drunkards, liars, and adulterers, by an enforced obedience of planetary influence, and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrusting on. An admirable evasion of whore-master man, to lay his goatish disposition to the charge of stars!² My father compounded with my mother under the dragon's tail, and my nativity was under ursa major; so that, it follows, I am rough and lecherous.—Tut! I should have been that I am, had the maidenliest star in the firmament twinkled on my bastardizing.³ Edgar— and pat he comes, like the catastrophe of the old comedy; my eye is villainous melancholy, with a sigh like Tom o' Bedlam.—O! these eclipses do portend these divisions. Fa, sol, la, mi.

Enter EDGAR.

Edg. How now, brother Edmund! What serious contemplation are you in?

Edm. I am thinking, brother, of a prediction I read this other day, what should follow these eclipses.

Edg. Do you busy yourself with that?

Edm. I promise you, the effects he writes of succeed unhappily;⁴ as of unnaturalness between the child and the parent: death, dearth, dissolution of ancient amities; divisions in state; menaces and maledictions against king and nobles; needless diffidences, banishment of friends, dissipation of cohorts, nuptial breaches, and I know not what.

Edg. How long have you been a sectary astronomical?

Edm. Come, come; when saw you my father last?

Edg. The night gone by.

Edm. Spake you with him?

Edg. Ay, two hours together.

Edm. Parted you in good terms? Found you no displeasure in him, by word, or countenance?

Edg. None at all.

Edm. Bethink yourself, wherein you may have offended him: and at my entreaty forbear his presence, till some little time hath qualified the heat of his displeasure, which at this instant so rageth in him, that with the mischief of your person it would scarcely allay.

Edg. Some villain hath done me wrong.

Edm. That's my fear.⁵ I pray you, have a continent forbearance, till the speed of his rage goes slower; and, as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fitly bring you to hear my lord speak. Pray you, go: there's my key. If you do stir abroad, go armed.

Edg. Armed, brother?

Edm. Brother, I advise you to the best; I am no honest man, if there be any good meaning towards you: I have told you what I have seen and heard, but faintly; nothing like the image and horror of it. Pray you, away.

Edg. Shall I hear from you anon?

Edm. I do serve you in this business.—

[Exit EDGAR]

A credulous father, and a brother noble,
Whose nature is so far from doing harms,
That he suspects none, on whose foolish honesty
My practices ride easy.—I see the business.—
Let me, if not by birth, have lands by wit:
All with me's meet, that I can fashion fit. [Exit]

SCENE III.—A Room in the Duke of ALBANY'S Palace.

Enter GONERIL, and OSWALD her Steward.

Gon. Did my father strike my gentleman for chiding of his fool?

Osw. Ay, madam.

Gon. By day and night he wrongs me: every hour He flashes into one gross crime or other.

That sets us all at odds: I'll not endure it.

His knights grow riotous, and himself upbraids us

On every trifle.—When he returns from hunting,

I will not speak with him; say, I am sick.

If you come slack of former services.

You shall do well; the fault of it I'll answer.

Osw. He's coming, madam; I hear him.

[Horns within.]

Gon. Put on what weary negligence you please, You and your fellows: I'd have it come to question:

If he distaste⁶ it, let him to my sister,

Whose mind and mine, I know, in that are one,

Not to be over-ruled. Idle old man,⁷

That still would manage those authorities.

That he hath given away!—Now, by my life,

Old fools are babes again; and must be us'd

With cheeks as flatteries; when they are seen abus'd. Remember what I have said.

Osw.

Well, madam.

Gon. And let his knights have colder looks among you.

What grows of it, no matter; advise your fellows so:

I would breed from hence occasions, and I shall.⁸

That I may speak.—I'll write straight to my sister,

To hold my course.—Prepare for dinner. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—A Hall in the Same.

Enter KENT, disguised.

Kent. If but as well I other accents borrow,
That can my speech diffuse,⁹ my good intent
May carry through itself to that full issue
For which I raz'd¹⁰ my likeness.—Now, banish'd Kent,
If thou canst serve where thou dost stand condemn'd,
(So may it come!¹¹) thy master, whom thou lov'st,
Shall find thee full of labours.

Horns within. Enter LEAR, Knights, and Attendants.

Lear. Let me not stay a jot for dinner: go, get it ready. [Exit an Attendant.] How now! what art thou?

Kent. A man, sir.

Lear. What dost thou profess? What wouldst thou with us?

Kent. I do profess to be no less than I seem: to serve him truly that will put me in trust; to love him that is honest; to converse with him that is wise, and says little; to fear judgment; to fight when I cannot choose, and to eat no fish.

Lear. What art thou?

¹ The passage from this to "Find," is not in quartos. ² on the charge of a star: in folio. ³ on my bastardy: in quartos. ⁴ The rest of this and the next speech, are not in folio. ⁵ The rest of this and the next speech, are not in quartos. ⁶ dislike: in quartos. ⁷ This and the next four lines, are not in the folio. ⁸ This and the next line, to "I'll," not in folio. ⁹ Disguise, disguise. ¹⁰ These lines are not in quartos.

Kent. A very honest-hearted fellow, and as poor as the king.

Lear. If thou be as poor for a subject, as he is for a king, thou art poor enough. What wouldst thou?

Kent. Service.

Lear. Whom wouldst thou serve?

Kent. You.

Lear. Dost thou know me, fellow?

Kent. No, sir; but you have that in your countenance which I would fain call master.

Lear. What 's that?

Kent. Authority.

Lear. What services canst thou do?

Kent. I can keep honest counsel, ride, run, mar a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plain message bluntly: that which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualified in; and the best of me is diligence.

Lear. How old art thou?

Kent. Not so young, sir, to love a woman for singing; nor so old, to dote on her for any thing: I have years on my back forty-eight.

Lear. Follow me; thou shalt serve me: if I like thee no worse after dinner, I will not part from thee yet.—Dinner, ho! dinner!—Where 's my knave? my fool? Go you, and call my fool hither.

Enter OSWALD.

You, you, sirrah, where 's my daughter?

Osw. So please you,—

[Exit.

Lear. What says the fellow there? Call the clodpole back. [Exit Knight.]—Where 's my fool, ho?—I think the world 's asleep.—[Re-enter Knight.] How now, where 's that mongrel?

*Knight.*¹ He says, my lord, your daughter is not well.

Lear. Why came not the slave back to me, when I called him?

*Knight.*² Sir, he answered me in the roundest manner, he would not.

Lear. He would not!

Knight. My lord, I know not what the matter is; but, to my judgment, your highness is not entertained with that ceremonious affection as you were wont: there 's a great abatement of kindness* appears, as well in the general dependants, as in the duke himself also, and your daughter.

Lear. Ha! sayest thou so?

Knight. I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, if I be mistaken; for my duty cannot be silent, when I think your highness wronged.

Lear. Thou but rememberest me of mine own conception. I have perceived a most faint neglect of late; which I have rather blamed as mine own jealous curiosity, than as a very pretence and purpose of unkindness: I will look farther into 't.—But where 's my fool? I have not seen him this two days.

Knight. Since my young lady's going into France, sir, the fool hath much pined away.

Lear. No more of that: I have noted it well.—Go you, and tell my daughter I would speak with her.—Go you, call hither my fool.—

Re-enter OSWALD.

O! you sir, you sir, come you hither. Who am I, sir? Osw. My lady's father.

Lear. My lady's father? my lord's knave: you whoreson dog! you slave! you cur!

Osw. I am none of these, my lord: I beseech your pardon.

Lear. Do you bandy looks with me, you rascal?

[Striking him.]

Osw. I 'll not be stricken, my lord.

Kent. Not tripped neither, you base foot-ball player
[Tripping up his heels.]

Lear. I thank thee, fellow; thou servest me, and I 'll love thee.

Kent. Come, sir, arise; away! I 'll teach you differences: away, away! If you will measure your lubber's length again, tarry; but away! Go to: have you wisdom? so.

Lear. Now, my friendly knave, I thank thee: there 's earnest in thy service.
[Giving KENT money.]

Enter Fool.

Fool. Let me hire him too:—here 's my coxcomb.

[Giving KENT his Cap.]

Lear. How now, my pretty knave! how dost thou?

Fool. Sirrah, you were best take my coxcomb.

Lear. Why, my boy?

Fool. Why? For taking one's part that 's out of favour.—Nay, an thou canst not smile as the wind sits, thou 'lt catch cold shortly: there, take my coxcomb. Why, this fellow has banished two on 's daughters, and did the third a blessing against his will: if thou follow him, thou must needs wear my coxcomb.—How now, nuncle! Would I had two coxcombs, and two daughters!

Lear. Why, my boy?

Fool. If I gave them all my living, I 'd keep my coxcomb myself. There 's mine; beg another of thy daughters.

Lear. Take heed, sirrah; the whip.

Fool. Truth 's a dog must to kennel: he must be whipped out, when the lady brach³ may stand by the fire and stink.

Lear. A pestilent gall to me.

Fool. Sirrah, I 'll teach thee a speech.

Lear. Do.

Fool. Mark it, nuncle.—

Have more than thou showest,
Speak less than thou knowest,
Lend less than thou owest,
Ride more than thou goest,
Learn more than thou trowest,
Set less than thou throwest;
Leave thy drink and thy whore,
And keep in-a-door,
And thou shalt have more
Than two tens to a score.

*Lear.*⁴ This is nothing, fool.

Fool. Then, 't is like the breath of an unfeeling lawyer: you gave me nothing for 't. Can you make no use of nothing, nuncle?

Lear. Why, no, boy; nothing can be made out of nothing.

Fool. Pr'ythee, tell him, so much the rent of his land comes to: he will not believe a fool.

Lear. A bitter fool!

Fool. Dost thou know the difference, my boy, between a bitter fool and a sweet one?

Lear. No, lad; teach me.

*Fool.*⁵ That lord, that counsellor⁶ thee

To give away thy land,
Come place him here by me;
Do thou for him stand:
The sweet and bitter fool
Will presently appear;
The one in motley here,
The other found out there.

Lear. Dost thou call me fool, boy?

Fool. All thy other titles thou hast given away, that thou wast born with.

Kent. This is not altogether fool, my lord.

Fool. No, 'faith: lords and great men will not let me, if I had a monopoly out, they would have part on't, and loads too: they will not let me have all fool to myself, they 'll be snatching.—Give me an egg, nuncle, and I'll give thee two crowns.

Lear. What two crowns shall they be?

Fool. Why, after I have cut the egg 't the middle, and eat up the meat, the two crowns of the egg. When thou clovest thy crown 't the middle, and gavest away both parts, thou borest thine ass on thy back o'er the dirt: thou hadst little wit in thy bald crown, when thou gavest thy golden one away. If I speak like myself in this, let him be whipped that first finds it so.

Fools had ne'er less grace¹ in a year; [Singing.

For wise men are grown foppish;

And well may fear² their wits to wear,

Their manners are so apish.

Lear. When were you wont to be so full of songs, sirrah?

Fool. I have used it, nuncle, ever since thou madest thy daughters thy mothers: for, when thou gavest them the rod and putt'st down thine own breeches,

Then they for sudden joy did weep, [Singing.

And I for sorrow sung,

That such a king should play bo-peep,

And go the fools among.

Pr'ythee, nuncle, keep a school-master that can teach thy fool to lie: I would fain learn to lie.

Lear. An you lie, sirrah, we'll have you whipped.

Fool. I marvel what kin thou and thy daughters are: they 'll have me whipped for speaking true, thou 'lt have me whipped for lying; and sometimes I am whipped for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind o' thing than a fool: and yet I would not be thee, nuncle: thou hast pared thy wit o' both sides, and left nothing 't the middle. Here comes one o' the parings.

Enter GONERIL.

Lear. How now, daughter! what makes that frontlet on?

Methodies,³ you are too much of late i' the frown.

Fool. Thou wast a pretty fellow, when thou hadst no need to cure for her frowning; now thou art an O without a figure. I am better than thou art now: I am a fool: thou art nothing.—Yes, forsooth, I will hold my tongue! so your face [To GON.] bids me, though you say nothing. Mum, mum:

He that keeps nor crust nor crum, [Singing.

Weary of all, shall want some.

That's a shealed peacock.

Gon. Not only, sir, this your all-licens'd fool, But other of your insolent retinue Do hourly carp and quarrel: breaking forth In rank, and not to be endured, riots. Sir, I had thought, by making this well known unto you, To have found a safe redress, but now grow fearful, By what yourself too late have spoke and done, That you protect this course, and put it on. By your allowance: which if you should, the fault Would not scape censure, nor the redresses sleep, Which, in the tender of a wholesome weal, Might in their working do you that offence, Which else were shame, that then necessity Will⁴ call discreet proceeding.

Fool. For you know, nuncle,

The hedge-sparrow fed the cuckoo so long,

That it had its head bit off by its young.

So, out went the candle, and we were left darkling

Lear. Are you our daughter?

Gon. I would, you would make use of your good wisdom,

Whereof I know you are fraught, and put away These dispositions, which of late transform you From what you rightly are.

Fool. May not an ass know when the cart draws the horse?—Whoop, Jug! I love thee.

Lear. Does any here know me?—Why this is not Lear: does Lear walk thus? speak thus? Where are his eyes? Either his notion weakens, or his discernings are lethargied.—Sleeping or waking?—Ha! sure 't is not so.—Who is it that can tell me who I am?—Lear's shadow?—I would learn that; for by the marks of sovereignty, knowledge, and reason, I should be false persuaded I had daughters.

Fool. Which they will make an obedient father.

Lear. Your name, fair gentlewoman?

Gon. 'This admiration, sir, is much o' the favour Of other your new pranks. I do beseech you To understand my purposes aright,

As you are old and reverend, should be wise.

Here do you keep a hundred knights and squires;

Men so disorder'd, so debauch'd and bold,

That this our court, infected with their manners,

Shows like a riotous inn: epicurism and lust

Make it more like a tavern, or a brothel,

Than a grac'd⁵ palace. The shame itself doth speak

For instant remedy: be, then, desir'd

By her, that else will take the thing she begs,

A little to disquantity your train;

And the remainder, that shall still depend,

To be such men as may besort your age,

Which know themselves and you.

Lear. Darkness and devils!—

Saddle my horses: call my train together.—

Degenerate bastard! I'll not trouble thee:

Yet have I left a daughter.

Gon. You strike my people; and your disorder'd rabble

Make servants of their betters.

Enter ALBANY.

Lear. Woe, that too late repents,⁶—O, sir! [To

ALB.] are you come?

Is it your will?⁷ Speak, sir.—Prepare my horses!—

Ingratitude, thou marble-hearted fiend,

More hideous, when thou show'st thee in a child,

Than the sea-monster!

Alb. Pray, sir, be patient.¹¹

Lear. Detested kite! thou liest: [To GONERIL.

My train are men of choice and rarest parts,

That all particulars of duty know,

And in the most exact regard support

The worship of their name.—O, most small fault!

How ugly didst thou in Cordelia show,

Which, like an engine, wrench'd my frame of nature

From the fix'd place, drew from my heart all love,

And added to the gall. O Lear, Lear!

Beat at this gate, that let thy folly in, [Striking his head.

And thy dear judgment out!—Go, go, my people.

Alb. My lord, I am guiltless, as I am ignorant Of what hath mov'd you.¹²

Lear.

It may be so, my lord.—

Hear, nature, hear ! dear goddess, hear !
Suspend thy purpose, if thou didst intend
To make this creature fruitful !
Into her womb convey sterility !
Dry up in her the organs of increase ;
And from her derogate body never spring
A babe to honour her ! If she must teem,
Create her child of spleen ; that it may live,
And be a thwart disnatur'd torment to her !
Let it stamp wrinkles in her brow of youth ;
With cadent tears fret channels in her cheeks ;
Turn all her mother's pains, and benefits,
To laughter and contempt ; that she may feel
How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is To have a thankless child !—Away ! [Exit.]
Alb. Now, gods that we adore, whereof comes this ?
Gon. Never afflict yourself to know the cause ;
But let his disposition have that scope
That dotage gives it.

Re-enter LEAR.

Lear. What ! fifty of my followers, at a clap,
Within a fortnight ?
Alb. What 's the matter, sir ?
Lear. I'll tell thee.—Life and death ! [To GONERIL.]
I am asham'd,
That thou hast power to shake my manhood thus :
That these hot tears, which break from me perforce,
Should make thee worth them. Blasts and fogs upon thee !
Th' untented woundings of a father's curse
Pierce every sense about thee !—Old fond eyes,
Bewep this cause again. I'll pluck you out,
And cast you, with the waters that you lose,
To temper clay.—Ha !
Let it be so :—I have another daughter,
Who, I am sure, is kind and comfortable ;
When she shall hear this of thee, with her nails
She'll flay thy wolfish visage. Thou shalt find
That I'll resume the shape, which thou dost think
I have cast off for ever.¹

[Exit LEAR in fury, KENT, and Attendants.]*

Gon. Do you mark that, my lord ?
Alb. I cannot be so partial, Goneril,
To the great love I bear you,—
Gon. Pray you, content.—What, Oswald, ho !
You, sir, more knave than fool, after your master.

[To the Fool.]

Fool Nuncle Lear, nuncle Lear ! tarry, and take the fool with thee.

A fox, when one has caught her,
And such a daughter,
Should sure to the slaughter,
If my cap would buy a halter ;
So the fool follows after. [Exit.]

Gon. This² man hath had good counsel.—A hundred knights !

'T is politic, and safe, to let him keep
At point a hundred knights : yes, that on every dream,
Each buz, each fancy, each complaint, dislike,
He may enguard his dotage with their powers,
And hold our lives in mercy.—Oswald, I say !—

Alb. Well, you may fear too far.

Gon. Safer than trust too far.
Let me still take away the harms I fear,
Not fear still to be taken : I know his heart.
What he hath utter'd I have writ my sister :
If she sustain him and his hundred knights,

When I have show'd th' unfitness,—how now, Oswald !³

Re-enter OSWALD.

What, have you writ that letter to my sister ?

Osw. Ay, madam.

Gon. Take you some company, and away to horse :
Inform her full of my particular fear ;
And thereto add such reasons of your own,
As may compact it more. Get you gone,
And hasten your return. [Exit Osw.] No, no, my lord,
This milky gentleness, and course of yours,
Though I condemn it not, yet, under pardon,
You are much more attack'd⁴ for want of wisdom,
Than prais'd for harmful mildness.

Alb. How far your eyes may pierce, I cannot tell.
Striving to better, oft we mar what's well.

Gon. Nay, then—

Alb. Well, well ; the event.

[Exit.]

SCENE V.—Court before the Same.

Enter LEAR, KENT, and Fool.

Lear. Go you before to Gloster with these letters.
Acquaint my daughter no farther with any thing you know, than comes from her demand out of the letter.
If your diligence be not speedy, I shall be there before
you.

Kent. I will not sleep, my lord, till I have delivered your letter. [Exit.]

Fool. If a man's brains were in 's heels, were 't not in danger of kibes ?

Lear. Ay, boy.

Fool. Then, I pr'ythee, be merry ; thy wit shall not go slipshod.

Lear. Ha, ha, ha !

Fool. Shalt see, thy other daughter will use thee kindly ; for though she's as like this, as a crab is like an apple, yet I can tell what⁵ I can tell.

Lear. What canst tell, boy ?

Fool. She will taste as like this, as a crab does to a crab. Canst thou tell why one's nose stands i' the middle on 's face ?

Lear. No.

Fool. Why, to keep one's eyes of either side 's nose ; that what a man cannot smell out, he may spy into.

Lear. I did her wrong.—

Fool. Canst tell how an oyster makes his shell ?

Lear. No.

Fool. Nor I neither ; but I can tell why a snail has a house.

Lear. Why ?

Fool. Why, to put his head in ; not to give it away to his daughters, and leave his horns without a case.

Lear. I will forget my nature.—So kind a father !—
Be my horses ready ?

Fool. Thy asses are gone about 'em. The reason why the seven stars are no more than seven is a pretty reason.

Lear. Because they are not eight ?

Fool. Yes, indeed. Thou wouldst make a good fool.

Lear. To take it again perforce !—Monster ingratitude !

Fool. If thou wert my fool, nuncle, I'd have thee beaten for being old before thy time.

Lear. How 's that ?

Fool. Thou shouldst not have been old before thou hadst been wise.

Lear. O, let me not be mad, not mad, sweet heaven !
Keep me in temper : I would not be mad !—

How now! Are the horses ready?

Gent. Ready, my lord.

Lear. Come, boy.

Fool. She that's a maid now, and laughs at my departure,
Shall not be a maid long, unless things be cut shorter.

ACT II.

CENE I.—A Court within the Castle of the Earl of GLOSTER.

Enter EDMUND and CURAN, meeting.

Edm. Save thee, Curan.

Cur. And you, sir. I have been with your father, and given him notice, that the duke of Cornwall, and Regan his duchess, will be here with him to-night.

Edm. How comes that?

Cur. Nay I know not. You have heard of the news abroad: I mean, the whispered ones, for they are yet but ear-bussing arguments.

Edm. Not I: pray you, what are they?

Cur. Have you heard of no likely wars toward, 'twixt the dukes of Cornwall and Albany?

Edm. Not a word.

Cur. You may do, then, in time. Fare you well, sir. [Exit.]

Edm. The duke be here to-night? The better! Best!

This weaves itself perforce into my business.

My father hath set guard to take my brother;

And I have one thing, of a queazy question,

Which I must act.—Briefness, and fortune, work!¹—

Brother, a word:—descend:—brother, I say!

Enter EDGAR.

My father watches.—O sir! fly this place;

Intelligence is given where you are hid:

You have now the good advantage of the night.—

Have you not spoken 'gainst the duke of Cornwall?

He's coming hither: now, if the night, in haste,

And Regan with him: have you nothing said

'Upon his party 'gainst the duke of Albany?

Advise yourself.²

Edg. I am sure on't, not a word.

Edm. I hear my father coming.—Pardon me;

In cunning, I must draw my sword upon you:

Draw: seem to defend yourself. Now 'quit you well.

Yield:—come before my father;—Light, ho! here!

Fly, brother;—Torches! torches!—So, farewell.

[Exit EDGAR.]

Some blood drawn on me would beget opinion

[Wounds his arm.]

Of my more fierce endeavour: I have seen drunkards

Do more than this in sport.—Father! father!

Stop, stop! No help?

Enter GLOSTER, and Servants with Torches.

Glo. Now, Edmund, where's the villain?

Edm. Here stood he in the dark, his sharp sword out,

Mumbling³ of wicked charms, conjuring the moon

To stand auspicious mistress.

Glo. But where is he?

Edm. Look, sir, I bleed.

Glo. Where is the villain, Edmund?

Edm. Fled this way, sir. When by no means he could—

Glo. Pursue him, ho!—Go after.—[Exit Serv.] By no means,—what?

Edm. Persuade me to the murder of your lordship. But that I told him, the revenging gods 'Gainst paricides did all their thunders⁴ bend; Spoke, with how manifold and strong a bond The child was bound to the father:—sir, in fine Seeing how loathly opposite I stood To his unnatural purpose, in fell motion, With his prepared sword he charges home My unprovided body, lanc'd mine arm. But whether he saw my best alarm'd spirits, Bold in the quarrel's right, rous'd to th' encounter, Or whether gasted by the noise I made, Full suddenly he fled.

Glo. Let him fly far:

Not in this land shall he remain uncaught; And found, dispatch'd.⁵—The noble duke my master My worthy arch⁶ and patron, comes to-night: By his authority I will proclaim it, That he, which finds him, shall deserve our thanks, Bringing the murderous coward⁷ to the stake; He, that conceals him, death.

Edm. When I dissuaded him from his intent, And found him pight⁸ to do it, with court speech I threaten'd to discover him: he replied, "Thou unpossessing bastard! dost thou think, If I would stand against thee, would the reposal⁹ Of any trust, virtue, or worth, in thee Make thy words faith'd? No: what I should deny, (As this I would; although thou didst produce My very character) I'd turn it all To thy suggestion, plot, and damned practice!¹⁰ And thou must make a dullard of the world, If they not thought the profits of my death Were very pregnant and potential spurs!¹¹ To make thee seek it."¹²

Glo. Strong¹³ and fasten'd villain! Would he deny his letter?¹⁴—I never got him.

[Tucket within.]

Hark! the duke's trumpets. I know not why he comes.—

All ports I'll bar: the villain shall not 'scape; The duke must grant me that: besides, his picture I will send far and near, that all the kingdom May have due note of him; and of my land, Loyal and natural boy, I'll work the means To make thee capable.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, and Attendants.

Corn. How now, my noble friend! since I came hither,

(Which I can call but now) I have heard strange news!¹⁵

Reg. If it be true, all vengeance comes too short, Which can pursue th' offender. How dost, my lord?

Glo. O, madam! my old heart is crack'd, it's crack'd.

Reg. What! did my father's godson seek your life?

He whom my father nam'd? your heir,¹⁶ your Edgar?

Glo. O, lady, lady! shame would have it hid.

Reg. Was he¹⁷ companion with the riotous knights That tend upon my father?

Glo. I know not, madam: 't is too bad, too bad.—

Edm. Yes, madam, yes; ' he was of that consort.

Reg. No marvel, then, though he were ill-affected:

'T is they have put him on the old man's death,
To have th' expense and waste of his revenues.

I have this present evening from my sister
Been well inform'd of them; and with such cautions,
That if they come to sojourn at my house,
I 'll not be there.

Corn. Nor I, assure thee, Regan.—
Edmund, I hear that you have shown your father
A child-like office.

Edm. 'T was my duty, sir.

Glo. He did bewray² his practice; and receiv'd
'T his hurt you see, striving to apprehend him.

Corn. Is he pursued?

Glo. Ay, my good lord, he is.

Corn. If he be taken, he shall never more
Be fear'd of doing harm: make your own purpose.
How in my strength you please.—As for you, Edmund,
Whose virtue and obedience doth this instant
So much commend itself, you shall be ours:
Natures of such deep trust we shall much need;
You we first seize on.

Edm. I shall serve you, sir,
Truly, however else.

Glo. For him I thank your grace.

Corn. You know not why we came to visit you.

Reg. Thus out of season, threading dark-ey'd night.
Occasions, noble Gloster, of some poize,²
Wherein we must have use of your advice.
Our father he hath writ, so hath our sister,
Of differences, which I best thought fit
To answer from our home: the several messengers
From hence attend despatch. Our good old friend,
Lay comforts to our bosom, and bestow
Your needful counsel to our business,⁴
Which craves the instant use.

Glo. I serve you, madam.

Your graces are right welcome. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Before GLOSTER's Castle.

Enter KENT and OSWALD, severally.

Osw. Good dawning⁵ to thee, friend: art of this⁶ house?

Kent. Ay.

Osw. Where may we set our horses?

Kent. I' the mire.

Osw. Pr'ythee, if thou love me, tell me.

Kent. I love thee not.

Osw. Why, then I care not for thee.

Kent. If I had thee in Finsbury⁷ pinfold, I would make thee care for me.

Osw. Why dost thou use me thus? I know thee not.

Kent. Fellow, I know thee.

Osw. What dost thou know me for?

Kent. A knave, a rascal, an eater of broken meats:
a base, proud, shallow, beggarly, three-suited, hundred-pound, filthy, worsted-stocking knave; a lily-liver'd, action-taking knave, a whoreson, glass-gazing, super-serviceable, finical rogue; one-trunk-inheriting slave:
one that wouldst be a bawd, in way of good service,
and art nothing but the composition of a knave, beggar, coward, pandar, and the son and heir of a mongrel bitch: one whom I will beat into clamorous whining, if thou deniest the least syllable of thy addition.

Osw. Why, what a monstrous fellow art thou, thus to rail on one, that is neither known of thee, nor knowns thee.

Kent. What a brazen-faced varlet art thou, to deny thou knowest me. Is it two days since I tripp'd up thy heels, and beat thee, before the king? Draw, you rogue; for, though it be night, yet the moon shines:
I 'll make a sop o' the moonshine of you [Drawing his sword.] Draw, you whoreson cullionly barber-monger, draw.

Osw. Away! I have nothing to do with thee.

Kent. Draw, you rascal: you come with letters against the king, and take Vanity, the puppet's⁸, part, against the royalty of her father. Draw, you rogue, or
I 'll so carbonado your shanks:—draw, you rascal, come your ways.

Osw. Help, ho! murder! help!

Kent. Strike, you slave: stand, rogue, stand: you neat slave, strike. [Beating him.]

Osw. Help, ho! murder! murder!

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GLOSTER, EDMUND, and Servants.

Edm. How now! What's the matter? Part.⁹

Kent. With you, Goodman boy, if you please: come,
I 'll flesh you: come on, young master.

Glo. Weapons! arms! What's the matter here?

Corn. Keep peace, upon your lives:

He dies that strikes again. What is the matter?

Reg. The messengers from our sister and the king.

Corn. What is your difference? speak.

Osw. I am scarce in breath, my lord.

Kent. No marvel, you have so bestirred your valour.
You cowardly rascal, nature disclaims in thee: a tailor made thee.

Corn. Thou art a strange fellow: a tailor make a man?

Kent. Ay, a tailor, sir: a stone-cutter, or a painter, could not have made him so ill, though they had been but two hours!¹⁰ at the trade.

Corn. Speak yet, how grew your quarrel?

Osw. This ancient ruffian, sir, whose life I have
At suit of his grey beard,— [spat]

Kent. Thou, whoreson zed? thou, unnecessary letter?
—My lord, if you will give me leave, I will tread this unbolted villain into mortar, and daub the wall of a jakes with him.—Spare my grey beard, you wagtail?

Corn. Peace, sirrah!

You beastly knave, know you no reverence?

Kent. Yes, sir: but anger hath a privilege.

Corn. Why art thou angry?

Kent. That such a slave as this should wear a sword
Who wears no honesty. Such smiling rogues as these Like rats, oft bite the holy cords atwain
Which are too intrinse¹¹ t' unloose: smooth every passion
That in the natures of their lords rebels:

Bring oil to fire, snow to their colder moods:
Renege¹², affirm, and turn their halcyon¹³ beaks
With every gale and vary of their masters,

And knowing nought, like dogs, but following.—
A plague upon your epileptic visage!

Smile at my speeches, as I were a fool?

Goose, if I had you upon Sarum plain,

I'd drive ye cackling home to Camelot!¹⁴

Corn. What art thou mad, old fellow?

Glo. How fell you out? say that.

Kent. No contraries hold more antipathy,

Than I and such a knave.

Corn. Why dost thou call him knave? What's his offence?

Kent. His countenance likes me not.

Corn. No more, perchance, does mine, nor his, nor hers.

Kent. Sir, 't is my occupation to be plain : I have seen better faces in my time, Than stand on any shoulders that I see Before me at this instant.

Corn. This is some fellow, Who, having been prais'd for bluntness, doth affect A saucy roughness, and constrains the garb Quite from his nature : he cannot flatter, he : An honest mind and plain :—he must speak truth : An they will take it, so : if not, he's plain. These kind of knaves I know, which in this plainness Harbour more craft, and more corrupter ends, Than twenty silly ducking observants, That stretch their duties nicely.

Kent. Sir, in good sooth, in sincere verity, Under th' allowance of your grand aspect, Whose influence, like the wreath of radiant fire, On flickering Phœbus' front,—

Corn. What mean'st by this ?

Kent. To go out of my dialect, which you discomend so much. I know, sir, I am no flatterer : he that beguiled you in a plain accent was a plain knave ; which, for my part, I will not be, though I should win your displeasure to entreat me to 't.

Corn. What was the offence you gave him ?

Osw. I never gave him any.

It pleas'd the king, his master, very late, To strike at me upon his misconstruction ; When he, compact², and flattering his displeasure, Tripp'd me behind ; being down, insulted, rail'd, And put upon him such a deal of man. That worshied him, got praises of the king For him attempting who was self-subdu'd : And, in the fleshment of this dread exploit, Drew on me here again.

Kent. None of these rogues, and cowards, But Ajax is their fool.

Corn. Fetch forth the stocks !

You³ stubborn ancient knave, you reverend braggart, We'll teach you—

Kent. Sir, I am too old to learn. Call not your stocks for me ; I serve the king, On whose employment I was sent to you : You shall do small respect, show too bold malice Against the grace and person of my master, Stocking his messenger.

Corn. Fetch forth the stocks !

As I have life and honour, there shall he sit till noon.

Reg. Till noon ! till night, my lord ; and all night too.

Kent. Why, madam, if I were your father's dog, You should not use me so.

Reg. Sir, being his knave, I will. [Stocks brought out.]

Corn. This is a fellow of the self-same colour Our sister speaks of.—Come, bring away the stocks.

Glo. Let me beseech your grace not to do so.

His fault is much, and the good king his master⁴ Will check him for 't : your purpos'd low correction Is such, as basest and contemn'd⁵ wretches,

For pilferings and most common trespasses, Are punish'd with. The king must take it ill, That he, so slightly valued in his messenger, Should have him thus restrain'd.

Corn.

I'll answer that.

Reg. My sister may receive it much more worse, To have her gentleman abus'd, assaulted, For following her affairs.—Put in his legs.—⁶

[KENT is set in the Stocks]

Come, my lord, away.

[Exeunt REGAN and CORNWALL]

Glo. I am sorry for thee, friend ; 't is the duke's pleasure,

Whose disposition, all the world well knows, Will not be rubb'd, nor stopp'd : I'll entreat for thee

Kent. Pray, do not, sir. I have watch'd, and travell'd hard

Some time I shall sleep out, the rest I'll whistle

A good man's fortune may grow out at heels. Give you good morrow !

Glo. The duke's to blame in this : 't will be ill taken.

[Exit.]

Kent. Good king, that must approve the common saw :—

Thou out of heaven's benediction com'st To the warm sun.

Approach, thou beacon to this under globe, That by thy comfortable beams I may Peruse this letter.—Nothing almost sees miracles,⁷ But misery :—I know, 't is from Cordelia ; Who hath most fortunately been inform'd Of my obscured course ; and shall find time From this enormous state,—seeking to give Losses their remedies.—All weary and o'er-watch'd, Take vantage, heavy eyes, not to behold This shameful lodging. Fortune, good night ; Smile once more ; turn thy wheel ! [He sleeps]

SCENE III.—A Part of the Heath.

Enter EDGAR.

Edg. I heard myself proclaim'd ; And by the happy hollow of a tree Escap'd the hunt. No port is free ; no place, That guard, and most unusual vigilance, Does not attend my taking. While I may 'scape, I will preserve myself ; and am bethought To take the basest and most poorest shape, That ever penury, in contempt of man, Brought near to beast : my face I'll grime with filth, Blanket my loins, elf all my hair in knots, And with presented nakedness out-face The winds, and persecutions of the sky. The country gives me proof and precedent Of Bedlam beggars,⁸ who, with roaring voices, Strike in their numb'd and mortified bare arms Pins, wooden pricks, nails, sprigs of rosemary, And with this horrible object, from low farms,⁹ Poor pelting¹⁰ villages, sheep-cotes and mills, Sometime with lunatic bans, sometime with prayers, Enforce their charity.—Poor Turlygood¹¹ poor Tom ! That's something yet :—Edgar I nothing am. [Exit.]

They could not get it off : they wore about their necks a great horn of an ox, in a string or hawdick, which, when they came to a house, they did wind, and they put the drink given to them into this horn, whereto they put a stopple.—Aubrey's MSS. ; quoted by D'Israeli. SCENE IV.—Before GLOSTER's Castle.

Enter LEAR, Fool, and a Gentleman.Lear. 'T is strange that they should so depart from home,

And not send back my messenger.

Gent. As I learn'd,The night before there was no purpose in them
Of this remove*Kent.* Hail to thee, noble master! [Waking.]Lear. Ha!
Mak'st thou this shame thy pastime?Kent. No, my lord.Fool. Ha, ha! look; he wears cruel garters. Horses are tied by the head; dogs, and bears, by the neck; monkeys by the loins, and men by the legs. When a man is over-lusty at legs, then he wears wooden netherstocks.Lear. What's he, that hath so much thy place mistook,

To set thee here?

Kent. It is both he and she,
Your son and daughter.Lear. No.Kent. Yes.Lear. No, I say.Kent. I say, yea.Lear. No, no; they would not.²*Kent.* Yes, they have.Lear. By Jupiter, I swear no.Kent. By Juno, I swear, ay.³*Lear.* They durst not do't;
They could not, would not do't: 't is worse than murder,

To do upon respect such violent outrage.

Resolve me with all modest haste which way
Thou mightst deserve, or they impose, this usage,
Coming from us.Kent. My lord, when at their home
I did commend your highness' letters to them,
Ere I was risen from the place that show'd
My duty kneeling, came there a reeking post.
Stew'd in his haste, half-breathless, panting forth
From Goneril, his mistress, salutation:
Deliver'd letters, spite of intermission.
Which presently they read: on whose contents,
They summon'd up their meiny⁴, straight took horse;
Commanded me to follow, and attend
The leisure of their answer; gave me cold looks:
And meeting here the other messenger,
Whose welcome, I perceiv'd, had poison'd mine,
(Being the very fellow which of late Display'd so saucily against your highness)
Having more man than wit about me, drew:
He rais'd the house with loud and coward cries.
Your son and daughter found this trespass worth
The shame which here it suffers.*Fool.*⁵ Winter's not gone yet, if the wild geese fly that way.

Fathers, that wear rags,

Do make their children blind;

But fathers, that bear bags,

Shall see their children kind.

Fortune, that arrant whore,

Ne'er turns the key to the poor.—

But, for all this, it follows,

Thou shalt have as many dolours

For thy daughters dear,

As thou canst tell in a year.⁶*Lear.* O, how this mother swells up toward my heart!
Hysterica passio! down, thou climbing sorrow,
Thy element's below.—Where is this daughter?Kent. With the earl, sir; here, within.Lear.

Follow me not

Stay here.

Gent. Made you no more offence than what you speak of?Kent. None.

How chance the king comes with so small a train?

Fool. An thou hadst been set i' the stocks for that question, thou hadst well deserv'd it.Kent. Why, fool?Fool. We'll set thee to school to an ant, to teach thee there's no labouring i' the winter. All that follow their noses are led by their eyes, but blind men: and there's not a nose among twenty but can smell him that's stinking. Let go thy hold, when a great wheel runs down a hill, lest it break thy neck with following it; but the great one that goes up the hill,⁷ let him draw thee after. When a wise man gives thee better counsel, give me mine again: I would have none but knaves follow it, since a fool gives it.

That sir, which serves and seeks for gain.

And follows but for form,

Will pack when it begins to rain,

And leave thee in the storm.

But I will tarry; the fool will stay,

And let the wise man fly:

The fool turns knave⁸ that runs away,The knave no fool,⁹ perdy.Kent. Where learn'd you this, fool?Fool. Not i' the stocks, fool.Re-enter LEAR, with GLOSTER.Lear. Deny to speak with me? They are sick? they are weary?They have travell'd hard to-night!¹⁰ Mere fetches,
The images of revolt and flying off.
Fetch me a better answer.Glo. My dear lord,

You know the fiery quality of the duke;

How unremovable and fix'd he is

In his own course.

Lear. Vengeance! plague! death! confusion!Fiery? what¹¹ quality? Why, Gloster, Gloster, I'd speak with the duke of Cornwall and his wife.

Glo. Well, my good lord, I have inform'd them so.¹²*Lear.* Inform'd them! Dost thou understand me, man?Glo. Ay, my good lord.Lear. The king would speak with Cornwall; the dear father

Would with his daughter speak, commands her service:

Are they inform'd of this? My breath and blood!—

Fiery¹³? the fiery duke?—Tell the hot duke, that—

No, but not yet;—may be, he is not well:

Infirmary doth still neglect all office,

Whereto our health is bound: we are not ourselves,

When nature, being oppress'd, commands the mind

To suffer with the body: I'll forbear;

And am fallen out with my more headier will,

To take the indispos'd and sickly fit

For the sound man.—Death on my state! wherefore

Go, tell the duke and 's wife, I'd speak with them,
Now, presently: bid them come forth and hear me,
Or at their chamber door I'll beat the drum,
Till it cry—"Sleep to death!"

Glo. I would have all well betwixt you. [Exit.]

Lear. O me! my heart, my rising heart!—but, down.

Fool. Cry to it, nuncle, as the cockney did to the eels, when she put them i' the paste alive; she knapp'd em of the coxcombs with a stick, and cried, "Down, wantons, down!" 't was her brother, that in pure kindness to his horse butter'd his hay.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GLOSTER, and Servants.

Lear. Good morrow to you both.

Corn. Hail to your grace! [KENT is set at liberty.]

Reg. I am glad to see your highness.

Lear. Regan, I think you are; I know what reason
I have to think so: if thou shouldst not be glad,
I would divorce thee from thy mother's tomb.

Sepulchring an adulteress.—O! are you free? [To KENT.]
Some other time for that.—Beloved Regan.

Thy sister 's naught: O Regan! she hath tied Sharp'd-tooth'd unkindness, like a vulture, here.—

[Points to his heart.]

I can scarce speak to thee: thou 'lt not believe,
With how deprav'd a quality—O Regan!—

Reg. I pray you, sir, take patience. I have hope.
You less know how to value her desert,
Than she to scant her duty.

Lear. Say, how is that?

Reg. I cannot think, my sister in the least,
Would fail her obligation: if, sir, perchance,
She have restrain'd the riots of your followers,
'T is on such ground, and to such wholesome end,
As clears her from all blame.

Lear. My curses on her!

Reg. O, sir! you are old:
Nature in you stands on the very verge
Of her confine: you should be rul'd, and led
By some discretion, that discerns your state
Better than you yourself. Therefore, I pray you,
That to our sister you do make return:
Say, you have wrong'd her, sir.

Lear. Ask her forgiveness?

Do you but mark how this becomes the mouth:¹

"Dear daughter, I confess that I am old;
Age is unnecessary: on my knees I beg," [Kneeling.]
That you 'll vouchsafe me raiment, bed, and food."

Reg. Good sir, no more: these are unsightly tricks.
Return you to my sister.

Lear. Never, Regan. [Rising.]

She hath abated me of half my train:
Look'd black upon me; struck me with her tongue.
Most serpent-like, upon the very heart—
All the stor'd vengeance of heaven fall
On her ungrateful top! Strike her young bones,
You taking airs, with lameness!

Corn. Fie, sir, fie!

Lear. You nimble lightnings, dart your blinding flames

Into her scornful eyes! Infect her beauty,
You fen-suck'd fogs, drawn by the powerful sun,
To fall and blast her pride!

Reg. O the blest gods!

So will you wish on me, when the rash mood is on.

Lear. No, Regan; thou shalt never have my curse:

Thy tender-hearted² nature shall not give
Thee o'er to harshness: her eyes are fierce; but thine
Do comfort, and not burn. 'T is not in thee
To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my train,
To bandy hasty words, to scant my sizes,³
And, in conclusion, to oppose the bolt
Against my coming in: thou better know'st
The offices of nature, bond of childhood,
Effects of courtesy, dues of gratitude;
Thy half o' the kingdom thou hast not forgot,
Wherein I thee endow'd.

Reg. Good sir, to the purpose.

Lear. Who put my man i' the stocks? [Tucket⁴ within.] Corn. What trumpet 's that?

Enter OSWALD.

Reg. I know 't; my sister's: this approves her letter,
That she would soon be here.—Is your lady come?

Lear. This is a slave, whose easy borrow'd pride
Dwells in the fickle grace of her he follows.—
Out, varlet, from my sight!

Corn. What means your grace?

Lear. Who stock'd my servant? Regan, I have good hope
Thou didst not know on 't.—Who comes here? O heavens!

Enter GONERIL.

If you do love old men, if your sweet sway
Allow obedience, if yourselves are old,
Make it your cause; send down, and take my part!—
Art not asham'd to look upon this beard?—

[To GONERIL.]

O Regan! wilt thou take her by the hand?
Gon. Why not by the hand, sir? How have I offended?

All 's not offence, that indiscretion finds,
And dotage terms so.

Lear. O sides! you are too tough:
Will you yet hold? How came my man i' the stocks?

Corn. I set him there, sir; but his own disorders
Deserv'd much less advancement.

Reg. You! did you?

Lear. I pray you, father, being weak, seem so.
If, till the expiration of your month,
You will return and sojourn with my sister,
Dismissing half your train, come then to me:
I am now from home, and out of that provision
Which shall be needful for your entertainment.

Lear. Return to her, and fifty men dismiss'd?

No, rather I abjure all roofs, and choose
To wage against the enmity o' the air;
To be a comrade with the wolf and howl⁵
Necessity's sharp pinch!—Return with her?
Why, the hot-blooded France, that dowerless took
Our youngest born, I could as well be brought To kneel his throne, and, squire-like, pension beg
To keep base life afoot.—Return with her?
Persuade me rather to be slave and sumpter
To this detested groom. [Looking at OSWALD.]

Gon. At your choice, sir.

Lear. I prythee, daughter, do not make me mad
I will not trouble thee, my child: farewell.
We'll no more meet, no more see one another;
But yet thou art my flesh, my blood, my daughter;
Or, rather, a disease that 's i' my flesh,
Which I must needs call mine: thou art a boil,
A plague-sore, an embossed carbuncle,
In my corrupted blood. But I'll not chide thee;

Nor tell tales of thee to high-judging Jove.
Mend, when thou canst ; be better, at thy leisure :
I can be patient ; I can stay with Regan,
I, and my hundred knights.

Reg. Not altogether so :
I look'd not for you yet, nor am provided
For your fit welcome. Give ear, sir, to my sister ;
For those that mingle reason with their passion,
Must be content to think you old, and so—
But she knows what she does.

Lear. Is this well spoken ?
Reg. I dare avouch it, sir. What ! fifty followers ?
Is it not well ? What should you need of more ?
Yea, or so many, sith that both charge and danger
Speak 'gainst so great a number ? How, in one house,
Should many people, under two commands,
Hold amity ? 'T is hard : almost impossible. [ance]

Gon. Why might not you, my lord, receive attend-
From those that she calls servants, or from mine ?

Reg. Why not, my lord ? If then they chanc'd to slack you,

We could control them. If you will come to me,
(For now I spy a danger) I entreat you
To bring but five and twenty : to no more
Will I give place, or notice.

Lear. I gave you all.

Reg. And in good time you gave it.

Lear. Made you my guardians, my depositaries,
But kept a reservation to be follow'd
With such a number. What ! must I come to you
With five and twenty ? Regan, said you so ?

Reg. And speak't again, my lord ; no more with me.

Lear. Those wicked creatures yet do look wellfavour'd,

When others are more wicked ; not being the worst
Stands in some rank of praise.—I'll go with thee :

[To GONERIL.]

Thy fifty yet doth double five and twenty,
And thou art twice her love.

Gon. Hear me, my lord.

What need you five and twenty, ten, or five,
To follow in a house, where twice so many
Have a command to tend you ?

Reg. What needs one ?

Lear. O ! reason not the need ; your basest beggars
Are in the poorest thing superfluous :
Allow not nature more than nature needs,
Man's life is cheap as beast's. Thou art a lady ;

If only to go warm were gorgeous,
Why, nature needs not that thou gorgeous wear'st,
Which scarcely keeps thee warm. But, for true need,
You heavens, give me but patience, patience I need !
You see me here, you gods, a poor old man,
As full of grief as age ; wretched in both :
If it be you that stir these daughters' hearts
Against their father, fool me not so much
To bear it tamely ; touch me with noble anger.
O ! let not women's weapons, water-drops,
Stain my man's cheeks.—No, you unnatural hags,
I will have such revenges on you both,
That all the world shall—I will do such things :—
What they are, yet I know not ; but they shall be
The terrors of the earth. You think, I'll weep,
No, I'll not weep :—
I have full cause of weeping ; but this heart

[Storm heard at a distance
Shall break into a hundred thousand flaws,
Or ere I'll weep.—O, fool ! I shall go mad.

[Exit LEAR, GLOSTER, and Fool.]

Corn. Let us withdraw, 't will be a storm.

Reg. This house is little : the old man and 's people
Cannot be well bestow'd.

Gon. 'T is his own blame hath put himself from rest :
He must needs taste his folly.

Reg. For his particular, I'll receive him gladly,
But not one follower.

Gon. So am I purpos'd.
Where is my lord of Gloster ?

Re-enter GLOSTER.

Corn. Follow'd the old man forth.—He is return'd,
Glo. The king is in high rage.

Corn. Whither is he going ?
Glo. He calls to horse ; but will I know not whither.

Corn. 'T is best to give him way ; he leads himself.

Gon. My lord, entreat him by no means to stay.

Glo. Alack ! the night comes on, and the bleak winds
Do sorely ruffle : for many miles about
There's scarce¹ a bush.

Reg. O sir ! to wilful men,
The injuries that they themselves procure
Must be their schoolmasters. Shut up your doors :
He is attended with a desperate train,
And what they may incense him to, being apt
To have his ear abus'd, wisdom bids fear.

Corn. Shut up your doors, my lord ; 't is a wild night
My Regan counsels well.—Come out o' the storm.

[Exit]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Heath.

A Storm, with Thunder and Lightning. Enter KENT, and a Gentleman, meeting.

Kent. Who's here, beside foul weather ?

Gent. One minded, like the weather, most unquietly.

Kent. I know you. Where's the king ?

Gent. Contending with the fretful elements ;

Bids the wind blow the earth into the sea,
Or swell the curled waters 'bove the main,
That things might change or cease : tears his white hair,
Which the impetuous blasts, with eyeless rage,
Catch in their fury, and make nothing of :

Strives in his little world of man to out-scorn
The to-and-fro-conflicting wind and rain.
This night, wherein the cub-drawn bear would couch
The lion and the belly-pinched wolf
Keep their fur dry, unbattered he runs,
And bids what will take all.

Kent. But who is with him ?

Gent. None but the fool, who labours to outjest
His heart-struck injuries.

Kent. Sir, I do know you,
And dare, upon the warrant o' my note,
Commend a dear thing to you. There is division,
Although as yet the face of it be cover'd

¹ fellow : in quartos. ² This and the next speech, to "horse," are not in quartos. ³ not : in quartos. ⁴ The rest of this speech is not in folio.

With mutual cunning, 'twixt Albany and Cornwall;¹
 Who have (as who have not, that their great stars Thron'd and set high?) servants, who seem no less,
 Which are to France the spies and spectators²
 Intelligent of our state; what hath been seen,
 Either in snuffs³ and packings of the dukes,
 Or the hard rein which both of them have borne
 Against the old kind king; or something deeper,
 Whereof, perchance, these are but flourishings:⁴
 But, true it is, from France there comes a power
 Into this scatter'd kingdom; who already,
 Wise in our negligence, have secret feet
 In some of our best ports, and are at point
 To show their open banner.—Now to you:
 If on my credit you dare build so far
 To make you speed to Dover, you shall find
 Some that will thank you, making just report
 Of how unnatural and benadding sorrow
 The king hath cause to plain.
 I am a gentleman of blood and breeding,
 And from some knowledge and assurance offer
 This office to you.

Gent. I will talk farther with you.

Kent.

No, do not.

For confirmation that I am much more
 Than my out wall, open this purse, and take
 What it contains. If you shall see Cordelia,
 (As fear not but you shall) show her this ring,
 And she will tell you who that fellow is
 That yet you do not know. [Thunder.] Fie on this storm!
 I will go seek the king.

Gent. Give me your hand. Have you no more to say?

Kent. Few words, but, to effect, more than all yet;
 That, when we have found the king, in which your pain
 That way, I'll this, he that first lights on him,
 Holla the other.

[Exeunt severally.]

SCENE II.—Another Part of the Heath. Storm continues.

Enter LEAR and Fool.

Lear. Blow, winds, and crack your cheeks! rage! blow!
 You cataracts and hurricanoes spout,
 Till you have drench'd our steeples, drown'd the cocks!
 You sulphurous and thought-executing fires,
 Vauit-couriers to oak-cleaving thunder-bolts,
 Singe my white head! And thou, all-shaking thunder,
 Strike flat the thick rotundity of the world:
 Crack nature's moulds, all germins spill at once,
 That make ingrateful man!

Fool. O nuncle, count holy-water¹ in a dry house is better than this rain-water out o' door. Good nuncle, in, and ask thy daughter's blessing: here's a night
 pities neither wise men nor fools. [Thunder.]

Lear. Rumble thy bellyfull! Spit, fire! spout, rain!
 Nor rain, wind, thunder, fire, are my daughters:
 I tax not you, you elements, with unkindness;
 I never gave you kingdom, call'd you children,
 You owe me no subscription: then, let fall
 Your horrible pleasure; here I stand, your slave,
 A poor, infirm, weak, and despis'd old man.
 But yet I call you servile ministers,
 That will² with two pernicious daughters join³
 Your high-engender'd battles 'gainst a head
 So old and white as this. O! O! 't is foul!

Fool. He that has a house to put 's head in has a good head-piece.

The cod-piece that will house,

Before the head has any,

The head and he shall louse,—

So beggars marry many.

The man that makes his toe

What he his heart should make,

Shall o' a corn ery woe,

And turn his sleep to wake.

—for there was never yet fair woman, but she made mouths in a glass.

Enter KENT.

Lear. No, I will be the pattern of all patience; I will say nothing.

Kent. Who's there?

Fool. Marry, here's grace, and a cod-piece; that's a wise man, and a fool.

Kent. Alas, sir! are you here? Things that love night,
 Love not such nights as these; the wrathful skies
 Gallow¹ the very wanderers of the dark,
 And make them keep their caves. Since I was man,
 Such sheets of fire, such bursts of horrid thunder,
 Such groans of roaring wind and rain, I never Remember to have heard: man's nature cannot carry
 Th' affliction, nor the fear.¹²

Lear.

Let the great gods,

That keep this dreadful pother¹³ o'er our heads,
 Find out their enemies now. Tremble, thou wretch,
 That hast within thee undivulged crimes,
 Unwhipp'd of justice: hide thee, thou bloody man;
 Thou perjure, and thou simular¹⁴ of virtue
 That art incestuous: caitiff, to pieces shake,
 That under covert and convenient seeming
 Hast practis'd on man's life: close pent-up guits,
 Rive your concealing continents,¹⁵ and cry
 These dreadful summoners grace.—I am a man,
 More sinn'd against, than sinning.

Kent.

Alack! bare-headed

Gracians my lord, hard by here is a hovel;
 Some friendship will it lend you 'gainst the tempest.
 Repose you there, while I to this hard house,
 (More hard¹⁶ than is the stone whereof 't is rais'd,
 Which even but now, demanding after you,
 Denied me to come in) return, and force
 Their scant courtesy.

Lear.

My wits begin to turn.—

Come on, my boy. How dost, my boy? Art cold?
 I am cold myself.—Where is this straw my fellow?
 The art of our necessities is strange,
 That can make vile things precious. Come, your hovel.
 Poor fool and knave, I have one part in my heart
 That 's sorry yet for thee.

Fool. He that has a little tiny wit,— [Sings

With heigh, ho, the wind and the rain,—

Must make content with his fortunes fit;

For the rain it raineth every day.

Lear. True, my good boy.—Come, bring us to their hovel.

[Exeunt LEAR and KENT

*Fool.*¹⁷ This is a brave night to cool a courtesan.
 I'll speak a prophecy ere I go:

When priests are more in word than matter;
 When brewers mar their malt with water;
 When nobles are their tailors' tutors;
 No heretics burn'd, but venches suitors;
 When every case in law is right;
 No squire in debt, nor no poor knight;
 When slanders do not live in tongues;

LAWRENCE BARRETT.

1840. Dec. 1. 1841

Nor outpurses come not to throngs;
 When usurers tell their gold i' the field,
 And bawds and whores do churches build;
 Then shall the realm of Albion¹
 Come to great confusion:
 Then comes the time, who lives to see 't,
 That going shall be us'd with feet.
 This prophecy Merlin shall make; for I live before his time.

SCENE III.—A Room in GLOSTER'S Castle

Enter GLOSTER and EDMUND.

Glo. Alack, alack! Edmund, I like not this unnatural dealing. When I desired their leave that I might pity him, they took from me the use of mine own house; charged me, on pain of their perpetual displeasure, neither to speak of him, entreat for him, nor any way sustain him.

Edm. Most savage, and unnatural!

Glo. Go to; say you nothing. There is division between the dukes, and a worse matter than that. I have received a letter this night;—'t is dangerous to be spoken:—I have locked the letter in my closet. These injuries the king now bears will be revenged home; there is part of a power already footed: we must incline to the king. I will seek him, and privily relieve him; go you, and maintain talk with the duke, that my charity be not of him perceived. If he ask for me, I am ill, and gone to bed. If I die for it, as no less is threatened me, the king, my old master, must be relieved. There is some strange thing toward, Edmund; pray you, be careful.

[Exit.]

Edm. This courtesy, forbid thee, shall the duke instantly know; and of that letter too. This seems a fair deserving, and must draw me That which my father loses; no less than all: The younger rises, when the old doth fall.

[Exit.]

SCENE IV.—A Part of the Heath, with a Hovel.

Enter LEAR, KENT, and Fool.

Kent. Here is the place, my lord; good my lord, enter: The tyranny of the open night 's too rough For nature to endure.

[Storm still.]

Lear. Let me alone.

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

Lear. Wilt break my heart?

Kent. I'd rather break mine own. Good my lord, enter.

Lear. Thou think'st 't is much, that this contentious storm

Invades us to the skin: so 't is to thee;
 But where the greater malady is fix'd,
 The lesser is scarce felt. Thou 'dst shun a bear;
 But if thy flight lay toward the roaring sea,
 Thou 'dst meet the bear i' the mouth. When the mind 's free,

The body 's delicate: the tempest in my mind
 Doth from my senses take all feeling else,
 Save what beats there:—Filial ingratitude!
 Is it not as this mouth should tear this hand,
 For lifting food to 't?—But I will punish home,²—
 No, I will weep no more.—In such a night
 To shut me out!—Pour on!—I will endure:³—
 'In such a night as this! O Regan! Goneril!
 Your old kind father, whose frank heart gave all.⁴—
 O! that way madness lies; let me shun that;
 No more of that.

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

Lear. Pr'ythee, go in thyself; seek thine own ease: This tempest will not give me leave to ponder On things would hurt me more.—But I'll go in: In, boy; go first.—[To the Fool.] You houseless poverty,—

Nay, get thee in. I'll pray, and then I'll sleep.—

[Fool goes in.]

Poor naked wretches, wheresoe'er you are,
 That have the pelting of this pitiless storm,⁵
 How shall your houseless heads, and unfed sides,
 Your loop'd and window'd raggedness, defend you
 From seasons such as these? O! I have 'ta'en
 Too little care of this. Take physic, pomp;
 Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel,
 That thou may'st shake the superflux to them,
 And show the heavens more just.

Edg. [Within.] Fathom and half, fathom and half!

Poor Tom! [The Fool runs out from the Hovel.]

Fool. Come not in here, nuncle; here 's a spirit.

Help me! help me!

Kent. Give me thy hand.—Who 's there?

Fool. A spirit, a spirit: he says his name 's poor Tom.

Kent. What art thou that dost grumble there i' the Come forth. [straw?]

Enter EDGAR, disguised as a Madman.

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!—

“Through the sharp hawthorn blows the cold wind.”—
 Humph! go to thy cold bed, and warm thee.

Lear. Hast thou given all to thy two daughters?
 And art thou come to this?

Edg. Who gives any thing to poor Tom? whom the foul fiend hath led through fire and through flame, through swamp⁶ and whirlpool, over bog and quagmire;
 and hath laid knives under his pillow, and halters in his pew; set ratsbane by his porridge; made him proud of heart, to ride on a bay trotting-horse over four-inched bridges, to course his own shadow for a traitor.—Bless thy five wits!⁷ Tom 's a-cold.—O! do de, do de, do de.
 —Bless thee from whirlwinds, star-blasting, and taking!⁸ Do poor Tom some charity, whom the foul fiend vexes.—There could I have him now,—and there,
 —and there,—and there again, and there.

[Strikes.⁹ Storm continues.]

Lear. What! have his daughters brought him to this pass?—

Couldst thou save nothing? Didst thou give them all?
Fool. Nay, he reserved a blanket, else we had been all shamed.

Lear. Now, all the plagues, that in the pendulous air
 Hang fatèd o'er men's faults, light on thy daughters!

Kent. He hath no daughters, sir.

Lear. Death, traitor! nothing could have subdued nature

To such a lowliness, but his unkind daughters.—
 Is it the fashion, that discarded fathers
 Should have thus little mercy of their flesh?
 Judicious punishment! 't was this flesh begot
 Those pelican daughters.

Edg. Pillicock sat on Pillicock-hill:—¹⁴
 Halloo, halloo, loo, loo!

Fool. This cold night will turn us all to fools and madmen.

Edg. Take heed o' the foul fiend. Obey thy parents, keep thy word; do justice;—¹⁵ swear not; commit not with man's sworn spouse; set not thy sweet heart on proud array Tom 's a-cold.

Lear. What hast thou been?

Edg. A serving¹-man, proud in heart and mind; that curled my hair, wore gloves in my cap, served the lust of my mistress's heart, and did the act of darkness with her; swore as many oaths as I spake words, and broke them in the sweet face of heaven: one, that slept in the contriving of lust, and waked to do it. Wine loved I deeply; dice dearly; and in woman, out-paramoured the Turk: false of heart, light of ear, bloody of hand; hog in sloth, fox in stealth, wolf in greediness, dog in madness, lion in prey. Let not the creaking of shoes, nor the rustling of silks, betray thy poor heart to woman: keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of plackets, thy pen from lenders' books, and defy the foul fiend.—"Still through the hawthorn blows the cold wind;" says suum. mun, ha no nonny. Dolphin my boy, my boy; sessa!² let him troj by.

[Storm still continues.]

Lear. Why, thou wert better in thy grave, than to answer with thy uncovered body this extremity of the skies.—Is man no more than this? Consider him well. Thou owest the worm no silk, the beast no hide, the sheep no wool, the cat no perfume.—Ha! here's three on's are sophisticated: thou art the thing itself: unaccommodated man is no more but such a poor, bare, forked animal as thou art.—Off, off, you lendings.—Come: unbutton here.—

[Tearing his clothes.]

Fool. Pr'ythee, nuncle, be contented; 't is a naughty night to swim in.—Now, a little fire in a wide field were like an old lecher's heart; a small spark, all the rest on's body cold.—Look! here comes a walking fire.

Edg. This is the foul fiend Flibbertigibbet: he begins at curfew, and walks till the first cock; he gives the web and pin³, squints the eye, and makes the hare-lip; mildews the white wheat, and hurts the poor creature of earth.

Saint Withold⁴ footed thrice the wold;
He met the night-mare, and her nine-fold;
Bid her alight,
And her troth plight,

And, aroint⁵ thee, witch, aroint thee!

Kent. How fares your grace?

Enter GLOSTER, with a Torch.

Lear. What's he?

Kent. Who's there? What is't you seek?

Glo. What are you there? Your names?

Edg. Poor Tom; that eats the swimming frog, the toad, the tadpole, the wall-newt, and the water⁶; that in the fury of his heart, when the foul fiend rages, eats cow-dung for sallies; swallows the old rat, and the ditch-dog; drinks the green mantle of the standing pool: who is whipped from tithing to tithing, and stocked, punished, and imprisoned;⁷ who hath had three suits to his back, six shirts to his body, horse to ride, and weapon to wear,—

*But mice, and rats, and such small deer,
Have been Tom's food for seven long year.*

Beware my follower.—Peace, Simulkin!⁸ peace, thou fiend!

Glo. What! hath your grace no better company?

Edg. The prince of darkness is a gentleman;

Modo⁹ he's call'd, and Mahu.¹⁰

Glo. Our flesh and blood, my lord, is grown so vile, That it doth hate what gets it.

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.

Glo. Go in with me. My duty cannot suffer To obey in all your daughters' hard commands:

Though their injunction be to bar my doors,
And let this tyrannous night take hold upon you,
Yet I have ventur'd to come seek you out,
And bring you where both fire and food is ready.

Lear. First let me talk with this philosopher.—
What is the cause of thunder?

Kent. Good my lord, take his offer: go into the house.

Lear. I'll talk a word with this same¹¹ learned Theban.—

What is your study?

Edg. How to prevent the fiend, and to kill vermin.

Lear. Let me ask you one word in private.

[They talk apart.]

Kent. Importune him once more to go, my lord,
His wits begin t' unsettle.

Glo.

Canst thou blame him?

His daughters seek his death.—Ah, that good Kent!—
He said it would be thus, poor banish'd man!—
Thou say'st, the king grows mad: I'll tell thee, friend,
I am almost mad myself. I had a son,
Now outlaw'd from my blood; he sought my life,
But lately, very late: I lov'd him, friend,
No father his son dearer: true to tell thee,
The grief hath craz'd my wits. What a night's this!

[Storm continues.]

I do beseech your grace,—

Lear.

O! cry you mercy, sir.—

Noble philosopher, your company.

Edg. Tom's a-cold.

Glo. In fellow, there, into the hovel: keep thee warm.

Lear. Come, let's in all.

Kent.

This way, my lord

Lear.

With him:

I will keep still with my philosopher.

Kent. Good my lord, soothe him; let him take the fellow.

Glo. Take him you on.

Kent. Sirrah, come on; go along with us.

Lear. Come, good Athenian.

Glo.

No words, no words.

Hush!

Edg. "Child Rowland to the dark tower came,

His word was still,—Fie, foh, and fum,

I smell the blood of a British man." [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—A Room in GLOSTER'S Castle.

Enter CORNWALL and EDMUND.

Corn. I will have my revenge, ere I depart his house.

Edm. How, my lord, I may be censured, that nature thus gives way to loyalty, something fears me to think of.

Corn. I now perceive, it was not altogether your brother's evil disposition made him seek his death; but a provoking merit, set a-work by a reprovable badness in himself.

Edm. How malicious is my fortune, that I must repent to be just! This is the letter which he spoke of, which approves him an intelligent party to the advantages of France. O heavens! that this treason were not, or not I the detector!

Corn. Go with me to the duchess.

Edm. If the matter of this paper be certain, you have mighty business in hand.

Corn. True, or false, it hath made thee earl of Gloster. Seek out where thy father is, that he may be ready for our apprehension.

Edm. [Aside.] If I find him comforting the king, it will stuff his suspicion more fully.—[To him.] I will persevere in my course of loyalty, though the conflict be sore between that and my blood.

SCENE VI.—A Chamber in a Farm-House, adjoining the Castle.

Enter GLOSTER, LEAR, KENT, Fool, and EDGAR.

Glo. Here is better than the open air; take it thankfully. I will piece out the comfort with what addition I can: I will not be long from you.

Kent. All the power of his wits has given way to his impatience.—The gods reward your kindness!

[Exit GLOSTER.]

Edg. Frateretto calls me, and tells me, Nero is an angler in the lake of darkness. Pray innocent, and beware the foul fiend.

Fool. Pr'ythee, nuncle, tell me, whether a madman be a gentleman, or a yeoman?

Lear. A king, a king!

Fool. No: 'he's a yeoman, that has a gentleman to his son; for he is a mad yeoman, that sees his son a gentleman before him.

Lear. To have a thousand with red burning spits Come whizzing in upon them.—

*Edg.*³ The foul fiend bites my back.

Fool. He's mad, that trusts in the tameness of a wolf, a horse's health, a boy's love, or a whore's oath.

Lear. It shall be done; I will arraign them straight.—Come, sit thou here, most learned justicer;

[To EDGAR.]

Thou, sapient sir, sit here. Now, you she foxes!—

Edg. Look, where he stands and glares!—

Wantest thou eyes at trial, madam?

Come o'er the bourne, Bessy, to me:—

Fool. Her boat hath a leak,

And she must not speak

Why she dares not come over to thee.

Edg. The foul fiend haunts poor Tom in the voice of a nightingale. Hopdance cries in Tom's belly for two white herring. Croak not, black angel; I have no food for thee.

Kent. How do you, sir? Stand you not so amaz'd: Will you lie down and rest upon the cushions?

Lear. I'll see their trial first.—Bring in the evidence.—

Thou robbed man of justice, take thy place;—[To EDGAR.] And thou, his yoke-fellow of equity, [To the Fool.]

Bench by his side.—You are o' the commission, Sit you too. [To KENT.]

Edg. Let us deal justly.

Sleepest, or wakest thou, jolly shepherd?

Thy sheep be in the corn;

And for one blast of thy minikin mouth,

Thy sheep shall take no harm.

Pur! the cat is grey.

Lear. Arraign her first; 't is Goneril. I here take my oath before this honourable assembly, she kicked the poor king her father.

Fool. Come hither, mistress. Is your name Goneril?

Lear. She cannot deny it.

Fool. Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint-stool.

Lear. And here 's another, whose warp'd looks proclaim

What store her heart is made on.—Stop her there!

Arms, arms, sword, fire!—Corruption in the place!

False justicer, why hast thou let her 'scape?

Edg. Bless thy five wits!

Kent. O pity!—Sir, where is the patience now, That you so oft have boasted to retain?

Edg. [Aside.] My tears begin to take his part so much. They'll mar my counterfeiting.

Lear. The little dogs and all,

Tray, Blanch, and Sweet-heart, see, they bark at me.

Edg. Tom will throw his head at them.—Avant you curs!

Be thy mouth or black or white,

Tooth that poisons if it bite;

Mastiff, greyhound, mongrel, grim,

Hound, or spaniel, brach³, or lym⁴;

Or bobtail tike⁵, or trundle-tail,

Tom will inake them⁶ weep and wail:

For with throwing thus my head,

Dogs leap the hatch, and all are fled.

Do, de, de, de. See, see! Come, march to wakes and fairs, and market towns.—Poor Tom, thy horn is dry.⁷

Lear. Then, let them anatomize Regan, see what breeds about her heart. Is there any cause in nature that makes these hard hearts?⁸—You, sir, [To EDGAR.] I entertain you for one of my hundred; only, I do not like the fashion of your garments: you will say, they are Persian attire;⁹ but let them be changed.

Kent. Now, good my lord, lie here, and rest awhile.

Lear. Make no noise, make no noise: draw the curtains. So, so, so: we'll go to supper i' the morning: so, so, so.

Fool. And I'll go¹⁰ to bed at noon.

Re-enter GLOSTER.

Glo. Come hither, friend: where is the king my master?

Kent. Here, sir: but trouble him not; his wits are gone.

Glo. Good friend, I pr'ythee take him in thy arms; I have o'er-heard a plot of death upon him. There is a litter ready; lay him in 't, And drive toward Dover, friend, where thou shalt meet Both welcome and protection. Take up thy master: If thou shouldst dally half an hour, his life, With thine, and all that offer to defend him, Stand in assured loss. Take up, take up; And follow me, that will to some provision Give thee quick conduct.

Kent. Oppress'd nature sleeps:¹¹—

This rest might yet have balm'd thy broken senses,¹² Which, if convenience will not allow.

Stand in hard cure.—Come, help to bear thy master; Thou must not stay behind. [To the Fool.]

Glo. Come, come, away.

[Exeunt KENT, GLOSTER, and the Fool, bearing off the King.]

Edg. When we our betters see bearing our woes, We scarcely think our miseries our foes.

Who alone suffers, suffers most i' the mind,

Leaving free things and happy shows behind;

But then the mind much sufferance doth o'erskip,

When grief hath mates, and bearing fellowship.

How light and portable my pain seems now,

When that which makes me bend, makes the king bow!

He childed, as I father'd!—Tom, away!

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GONERIL, EDMUND, and Servants.

Corn. Post speedily to my lord your husband: show him this letter:—the army of France is landed.—Seek out the traitor¹ Gloster. [Exit some of the Servants.]

Reg. Hang him instantly.

Gon. Pluck out his eyes.

Corn. Leave him to my dispose.—Edmund, keep you our sister company: the revenges we are bound to take upon your traitorous father are not fit for your beholding. Advise the duke, where you are going, to a most festinate preparation: we are bound to the like. Our posts shall be swift and intelligent betwixt us. Farewell, dear sister:—farewell, my lord of Gloster.

Enter OSWALD.

How now! Where's the king?

Osw. My lord of Gloster hath convey'd him hence: Some five or six and thirty of his knights, Hot questrits after him, met him at gate: Who, with some other of the lord's dependants, Are gone with him towards Dover, where they boast To have well-armed friends.

Corn. Get horses for your mistress.

Gon. Farewell, sweet lord, and sister.

[Exit GONERIL, EDMUND, and OSWALD.]

Corn. Edmund, farewell.—Go, seek the traitor Gloster, Pinion him like a thief, bring him before us.

[Exit other Servants.]

Though well we may not pass upon his life Without the form of justice, yet our power Shall do a courtesy to our wrath, which men May blame, but not control. Who's there? The traitor?

Re-enter Servants, with GLOSTER.

Reg. Ingrateful fox! 't is he.

Corn. Bind fast his corky² arms.

Glo. What mean your graces?—Good my friends, consider

You are my guests: do me no foul play, friends.

Corn. Bind him, I say. [Servants bind him.]

Reg. Hard, hard.—O filthy traitor!

Glo. Unmerciful lady as you are, I am none.³

Corn. To this chair bind him.—Villain, thou shalt find— [They bind him: REGAN plucks his beard.]

Glo. By the kind gods, 't is most ignobly done

For pluck me by the beard.

Reg. So white, and such a traitor!

Glo. Naughty lady.

These hairs, which thou dost ravish from my chin,

Will quicken, and accuse thee. I am your host:

With robbers' hands my hospitable favours

You should not ruffle thus. What will you do?

Corn. Come, sir, what letters had you late from France?

Reg. Be simple-answer'd, for we know the truth.

Corn. And what confederacy have you with the Late footed in the kingdom? [traitors

Reg. To whose hands

Have you sent the lunatic king? Speak.

Glo. I have a letter guessingly set down,

Which came from one that's of a neutral heart,
 And not from one oppos'd.

Corn.

Cunning.

And false.

Reg.

Corn. Where hast thou sent the king?

Glo.

To Dover.

Reg.

Wherefore

To Dover? Wast thou not charg'd at peril—

Glo. I am tied to the stake, and I must stand the course.

Reg. Wherefore to Dover?

Glo. Because I would not see thy cruel nails

Pluck out his poor old eyes; nor thy fierce sister

In his anointed flesh rash⁴ boarish fangs.

The sea, with such a storm as his bare⁵ head

In hell-black night endur'd, would have buoy'd up,

And quench'd the stelled fires;

Yet, poor old heart, he help the heavens to rain.⁶

If wolves had at thy gate howl'd that stern⁷ time,
 Thou shouldst have said, "Good porter, turn the key."

All cruels else subscrib'd⁸: but I shall see

The winged vengeance overtake such children.

Corn. See it shalt thou never.—Fellows, hold the chair.—

Upon these eyes of thine I'll set my foot.

Glo. He, that will think to live till he be old,

Give me some help!—O cruel! O ye gods!

[They tear out one eye.]

Reg. One side will mock another; the other too.

Corn. If you see, vengeance.—

Serv.

Hold your hand, my lord.

I have serv'd you ever since I was a child,

But better service have I never done you,

Than now to bid you hold.

Reg. How now, you dog!

Serv. If you did wear a beard upon your chin,

I'd shake it on this quarrel! What do you mean?

Corn. My villain! [Draws and runs at him.]

Serv. Nay then, come on, and take the chance of anger. [Draws. CORNWALL is wounded.]

Reg. Give me thy sword. A peasant stand up thus!

Serv. O, I am slain!—My lord, you have one eye left

To see some mischief on him!—O! [Dies.]

Corn. Lest it see more, prevent it.—Out, vile jelly!

Where is thy lustre now? [Tearing out his other eye.]

Glo. All dark and comfortless.—Where's my son

Edmund?

Edmund, enkindle all the sparks of nature,

To quit this horrid act.

Reg.

Out, treacherous villain!

Thou call'st on him that hates thee: it was he

That made the overture of thy treasons to us,

Who is too good to pity thee.

Glo. O my follies! Then Edgar was abus'd.—

Kind gods, forgive me that, and prosper him!

Reg. Go, thrust him out at gates, and let him smel

His way to Dover.—How is't, my lord? How look you?

Corn. I have receiv'd a hurt. Follow me, lady.—

Turn out that eyeless villain: throw this slave

Upon the dunghill.—Regan, I bleed apace:

Untimely comes this hurt. Give me your arm.

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Heath.

Enter EDGAR.

Edg. Yes,¹ better thus, unknown² to be condemn'd,
Than still condemn'd and flatter'd. To be worst,
The lowest and most dejected thing of fortune,
Stands still in esperance, lives not in fear:
The lamentable change is from the best;
The worst returns to laughter.³ Welcome, then,
Thou unsubstantial air that I embrace:
The wretch, that thou hast blown unto the worst,
Owes nothing to thy blasts.—But who comes here?—

Enter GLOSTER, led by an old Man.

My father, poorly led?—World, world, O world!
But that thy strange mutations make us hate thee,
Life would not yield to age.

Old Man. O my good lord! I have been your tenant, and your father's tenant, these fourscore years.

Glo. Away, get thee away; good friend, be gone:
Thy comforts can do me no good at all;
Thee they may hurt.

Old Man. Alack, sir!⁴ you cannot see your way.

Glo. I have no way, and therefore want no eyes:
I stumbled when I saw. Full oft 't is seen,
Our wants⁵ secure us; and our mere defects
Prove our commodities.—Ah! dear son Edgar,
The food of thy abused father's wrath,
Might I but live to see thee in my touch,
I'd say I had eyes again!

Old Man. How now! Who's there?

Edg. [Aside.] O gods! Who is't can say, "I am at the worst?"⁶
I am worse than e'er I was.

Old Man. 'T is poor mad Tom.

Edg. [Aside.] And worse I may be yet: the worst is not

So long as we can say, "This is the worst."

Old Man. Fellow, where goest?

Glo. Is it a beggar-man?

Old Man. Madman, and beggar too.

Glo. He has some reason, else he could not beg.
I' the last night's storm I such a fellow saw,
Which made me think a man a worm: my son
Came then into my mind; and yet my mind
Was then scarce friends with him: I have heard more
As flies to wanton boys, as we to the gods; [since.]
They kill us for their sport.

Edg. [Aside.] How should this be?—
Bad is the trade that must play fool to sorrow,
Angering itself and others. [To him.] Bless thee, master!

Glo. Is that the naked fellow?

Old Man. Ay, my lord.

Glo. Then, prythee, get thee gone. If, for my sake,⁷
Thou wilt undertake us, hence a mile or twain,
I' the way toward Dover, do it for ancient love;
And bring some covering for this naked soul,
Whom I'll entreat to lead me.

Old Man.

Alack, sir! he is mad.

Glo. 'T is the times' plague, when madmen lead the blind.

Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure;

Above the rest, be gone.

Old Man. I'll bring him the best 'parel that I have,
Come on 't what will. [Exit.]

Glo. Sirrah; naked fellow.

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.—[Aside.] I cannot daub it farther.

Glo. Come hither, fellow.

Edg. [Aside.] And yet I must.—[To him.] Bless thy sweet eyes, they bleed.

Glo. Know'st thou the way to Dover?

Edg. Both stile and gate, horse-way and foot-path.
Poor Tom hath been scared out of his good wits: please thee, good man's son, from the foul fiend! Five fiends have been in poor Tom at once; of lust, as Obidicut;
Hobbidance, prince of dumbness; Mahu, of stealing;
Modo, of murder; and Flibbertigibbet, of mopping and mowing, who since possesses chamber-maids and waiting-women. So, bless thee, master!

Glo. Here, take this purse, thou whom the heaven's plagues

Have humbled to all strokes: that I am wretched,

Makes thee the happier:—Heavens, deal so still!

Let the superfluous, and lust-dieted man,

That braves⁸ your ordinance, that will not see

Because he doth not feel, feel your power quickly;

So distribution should undo excess,

And each man have enough.—Dost thou know Dover?

Edg. Ay, master.

Glo. There is a cliff, whose high and bending head

Looks fearfully in the confined deep:

Bring me but to the very brim of it,

And I'll repair the misery thou dost bear,

With something rich about me; from that place

I shall no leading need.

Edg.

Give me thy arm:

Poor Tom shall lead thee. [Exeunt]

SCENE II.—Before the Duke of ALBANY's Palace.

Enter GONERIL and EDMUND; OSWALD meeting them

Gon. Welcome, my lord: I marvel, our mild hu-
band

Not met us on the way.—Now, where's your master?

Osw. Madam, within: but never man so chang'd

I told him of the army that was lauded;

He smil'd at it: I told him, you were coming;

His answer was, "The worse:" of Gloster's treachery.

And of the loyal service of his son,

When I inform'd him, then he call'd me sot,

And told me I had turn'd the wrong side out.

What most he should dislike⁹ seems pleasant to him;

What like, offensive.

Gon. Then, shall you go no farther. [To EDMUND]

It is the cowish terror of his spirit,

That dares not undertake: he'll not feel wrongs,

¹ Yet: in f. e. ² and known: in f. e. ³ From this word to "But who" is not in folios. ⁴ Alack, sir!: not in quartos. ⁵ means: in f. e. ⁶ Get thee away. If, &c.: in folio ⁷ The rest of this speech is not in folio. ⁸ braves: in f. e. ⁹ desire: in quartos

Which tie him to an answer. Our wishes on the way
May prove effects. Back, Edmund, to my brother;
Hasten his musters, and conduct his powers:
I must change arms¹ at home, and give the distaff
Into my husband's hands. This trusty servant
Shall pass between us: ere long you are like to hear,
If you dare venture in your own behalf,
A mistress's command. Wear this; spare speech;
[Giving a chain.]

Decline your head: this kiss, if it durst speak,
Would stretch thy spirits up into the air.—
Conceive, and fare thee well.

Edm. Yours in the ranks of death.

Gon. My most dear Gloucester! [Exit EDMUND.]

O, the difference of man, and man!²
To thee a woman's services are due:

My fool usurps my body.³

Osw. Madam, here comes my lord. [Exit OSWALD.]

Enter ALBANY.

Gon. I have been worth the whistle.

Alb. O Goneril!

You are not worth the dust, which the rude wind
Blows in your face—I fear your disposition:
That nature, which contemns its origin,
Cannot be border'd certain in itself;
She that herself will sliver and disbranch
From her material sap, perforce must wither,
And come to deadly use.

Gon. No more: the text is foolish.

Alb. Wisdom and goodness to the vile seem vile;
Filth's savour but themselves. What have you done?
Tigers, not daughters, what have you perform'd?

A father, and a gracious aged man,
Whose reverence the head-lugg'd bear would lick,
Most barbarous, most degenerate! have you maddened.
Could my good brother suffer you to do it?
A man, a prince, by him so benefited?
If that the heavens do not their visible spirits
Send quickly down to tame these vile offences,
It will come,
Humanity must perforce prey on itself,
Like monsters of the deep.

Gon. Milk-liver'd man!

That bear'st a cheek for blows, a head for wrongs;
Who hast not in thy brows an eye discerning
Thine honour from thy suffering; that not know'st,
Fools do those villains pity, who are punish'd
Ere they have done their mischief. Where's thy drum?
France spreads his banners in our noiseless land;
With plumed helm thy slayer begins threats;
Whilst thou, a moral fool, sit'st still, and criest,
"Alack! why does he so?"⁴

Alb. See thyself, devil!
Proper deformity seems not in the fiend
So horrid, as in woman.

Gon. O vain fool!

Alb.⁵ Thou changed and self-cover'd thing, for shame,
Be-monster not thy feature. Were it my fitness
To let these hands obey my blood,
They are apt enough to dislocate and tear
Thy flesh and bones: how'er thou art a fiend,
A woman's shape doth shield thee.

Gon. Marry, your manhood now!—

Enter a Messenger.

Alb. What news?

Mess. O, my good lord! the duke of Cornwall's dead,

Slain by his servant, going to put out
The other eye of Gloucester.

Alb. Gloucester's eyes!

Mess. A servant that he bred, thrill'd with remorse
Oppos'd against the act, bending his sword
To his great master; who, thereat enrag'd,
Flew on him, and amongst them fell'd him dead,
But not without that harmful stroke, which since
Hath pluck'd him after.

Alb. This shows you are above,
You justicers, that these our nether crimes
So speedily can venge!—But, O poor Gloucester!
Lost he his other eye?

Mess. Both, both, my lord.

This letter, madam, craves a speedy answer;
[Giving it.]

'T is from your sister.

Gon. [Aside.] One way I like this well:

But being widow, and my Gloucester with her,
May all the building in⁶ my fancy pluck
Upon my hateful life. Another way,

The news is not so tart. [To him.] I'll read, and answer. [Exit.]

Alb. Where was his son, when they did take his eyes?

Mess. Come with my lady hither.

Alb. He is not here.

Mess. No, my good lord; I met him back again.

Alb. Knows he the wickedness?

Mess. Ay, my good lord; 't was he inform'd against him,

And quit the house, on purpose that their punishment
Might have the freer course.

Alb. Gloucester, I live
To thank thee for the love thou show'st the king,
And to revenge thine eyes.—Come hither, friend:
Tell me what more thou knowest. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.⁷—The French Camp near Dover.

Enter KENT, and a Gentleman.

Kent. Why the king of France is so suddenly gone back, know you the reason?

Gent. Something he left imperfect in the state,
Which since his coming forth is thought of; which Imports to the kingdom so much fear and danger,
That his personal return was most requir'd,
And necessary.

Kent. Whom hath he left behind him general?

Gent. The Mareschal of France, Monsieur le Fer.

Kent. Did your letters pierce the queen to any demonstration of grief?

Gent. Ay, sir; she took them, read them in my presence;

And now and then an ample tear trill'd down
Her delicate cheek: it seem'd, she was a queen
Over her passion, who, rebel-like,
Sought to be king o'er her.

Kent. O! then it mov'd her.

Gent. Not to a rage: patience and sorrow strove⁸
Who should express her goodliest. You have seen
Sunshine and rain at once: her smiles and tears
Were like a better May:⁹ those happy smilets,
That play'd on her ripe lip, seem'd not to know
What guests were in her eyes; which parted thence,
As pearls from diamonds dropp'd.—In brief, sorrow
Would be a rarity most belov'd, if all
Could so become it.

Kent. Made she no verbal question?

Mess. My foot usurps my head; another has: My fool usurps my bed.

¹ names: in folio. ² This line not in quartos. ³ One quarto has: My fool usurps my head; another has: My fool usurps my bed.
⁴ The rest of this and the following speeches, to "Milk-liver'd man" are not in folio. ⁵ The rest of the speech is not in folio. ⁶ This and the next speech, are not in the folio. ⁷ Not in f. e. ⁸ on: in quartos ⁹ This scene is not in the folio. ¹⁰ strome: in quartos. Pope made the change ¹¹ way: in quartos; some mod. eds.: day.

Gent. 'Faith, once, or twice, she heav'd the name of "father."

Pantingly forth, as if it press'd her heart:
Cried, "Sisters! sisters!—Shame of ladies! sisters!
Kent! father! sisters! What? i' the storm? i' the night?
Let pity not be believed!"—There she shook
The holy water from her heavenly eyes,
And clamour moisten'd: then, away she started
To deal with grief alone.

Kent. It is the stars,
The stars above us, govern our conditions;
Else one self mate and mate could not beget
Such different issues. You spoke not with her since?

Gent. No.

Kent. Was this before the king return'd?

Gent. No, since.

Kent. Well, sir, the poor distress'd Lear's i' the town,
Who sometime, in his better tune, remembers
What we are come about, and by no means
Will yield to see his daughter.

Gent. Why, good sir?

Kent. A sovereign shame so elbows him; his own unkindness,

That stripp'd her from his benediction, turn'd her
To foreign casualties, gave her dear rights
To his dog-hearted daughters; these things sting
His mind so venomously, that burning shame
Detains him from Cordelia.

Gent. Alack, poor gentleman!

Kent. Of Albany's and Cornwall's powers you heard
not?

Gent. 'T is so they are afoot.

Kent. Well, sir, I'll bring you to our master Lear,
And leave you to attend him. Some dear cause
Will in concealment wrap me up awhile:
When I am known aright, you shall not grieve
Lending me this acquaintance. I pray you, go Along with me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Tent.

Enter CORDELIA, Physician, and French Soldiers.

Cor. Alack! 't is he: why, he was met even now
As mad as the vex'd sea: singing aloud;
Crown'd with rank fumiter, and furrow weeds,
With hoar-docks, hemlock, nettles, cuckoo-flowers,
Darnel, and all the idle weeds that grow
In our sustaining corn.—A century send forth;
Search every acre in the high-grown field,
And bring him to our eye. [Exit on Officer.]—What can man's wisdom,
In the restoring his bereaved sense?
He, that helps him, take all my outward worth.

Phy. There is means, madam:
Our foster-nurse of nature is repose,
The which he lacks; that to provoke in him
Are many simples operative, whose power
Will close the eye of anguish.

Cor. All bless'd secrets,
All you unpublish'd virtues of the earth,
Spring with my tears! be aidant, and remediate,
In the good man's distress!—Seek, seek for him;
Lest his ungonern'd rage dissolve the life
That wants the means to lead it.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. News, madam:
The British powers are marching hitherward.

Cor. 'T is known before; our preparation stands
In expectation of them.—O dear father!
It is thy business that I go about,

Therefore great France

My mourning, and important¹ tears, hath pitied,
No blown ambition doth our arms incite,
But love, dear love, and our ag'd father's right
Soon may I hear, and see him! [Exeunt]

SCENE V.—A Room in GLOSTER's Castle.

Enter REGAN and OSWALD.

Reg. But are my brother's powers set forth?

Osw. Ay, madam.

Reg. Himself in person there?

Osw. Madam, with much ado

Your sister is the better soldier.

Reg. Lord Edmund spake not with your lord at home?

Osw. No, madam.

Reg. What might import my sister's letter to him?

Osw. I know not, lady.

Reg. 'Faith, he is posted hence on serious matter.

It was great ignorance, Gloster's eyes being out,

To let him live: where he arrives he moves

All hearts against us. Edmund, I think, is gone,

In pity of his misery, to despatch

His nighted life; moreover, to desery

The strength o' the enemy.

Osw. I must needs after him, madam, with my letter.

Reg. Our troops set forth to-morrow: stay with us
The ways are dangerous.

Osw. I may not, madam;

My lady charg'd my duty in this business.

Reg. Why should she write to Edmund? Might not you

Transport her purposes by word? Belike,

Something—I know not what,—I'll love thee much;
Let me unseal the letter.

Osw.

Madam, I had rather—

Reg. I know your lady does not love her husband,
I am sure of that; and, at her late being here,
She gave strange ciliads, and most speaking looks
To noble Edmund. I know, you are of her bosom.

Osw. I, madam?

Reg. I speak in understanding: y' are, I know it;
Therefore, I do advise you, take this note:

My lord is dead: Edmund and I have talk'd,

And more convenient is he for my hand,

Than for your lady's.—You may gather more.

If you do find him, pray you, give him this;

And when your mistress hears thus much from you,

I pray, desire her call her wisdom to her:

So, fare you well.

If you do chance to hear of that blind traitor,

Preferment falls on him that cuts him off.

Osw. Would I could meet him, madam: I would show

What party do I follow.

Reg. Fare thee well, [Exeunt]

SCENE VI.—The Country near Dover.

Enter GLOSTER, and EDGAR dressed like a Peasant.

Glo. When shall I come to the top of that same hill?

Edg. You do climb up it now: look, how we labour

Glo. Methinks, the ground is even.

Edg.

Horribly steep

Hark! do you hear the sea?

Glo.

No, truly.

Edg. Why, then your other senses grow imperfect
By your eyes' anguish.

Glo.

So may it be, indeed.

Methinks, thy voice is alter'd; and thou speak'st

In better phrase, and matter, than thou didst.

Edg. Y' are much deceiv'd: in nothing am I chang'd, But in my garments.

Glo. Methinks, y' are better spoken.

Edg. Come on, sir; here 's the place: stand still.—How fearful,

And dizzy 't is to cast one's eyes so low!

The crows, and choughs, that wing the midway air,

Show scarce so gross as beetles: half way down

Hangs one that gathers samphire: dreadful trade!

Methinks, he seems no bigger than his head.

The fishermen, that walk upon the beach,

Appear like mice; and yond' tall anchoring bark,

Diminish'd to her cock! her cock, a buoy

Almost too small for sight. The murmuring surge,

That on th' unnumber'd idle pebbles chafes,

Cannot be heard so high.—I'll look no more;

Lest my brain turn, and the deficient sight

Topple down headlong.

Glo. Set me where you stand.

Edg. Give me your hand; you are now within a foot Of th' extreme verge: for all beneath the moon

Would I not leap upright.

Glo. Let go my hand.

Here, friend, is another purse; in it, a jewel

Well worth a poor man's taking: fairies, and gods,

Prosper it with thee! Go thou farther off:

Bid me farewell, and let me hear thee going.

Edg. Now fare you well, good sir.

Glo. With all my heart.

Edg. Why I do trifle thus with his despair, Is done to cure it.

Glo. O, you mighty gods!

This world I do renounce, and in your sights

Shake patiently my great affliction off:

If I could bear it longer, and not fall

To quarrel with your great opposeless wills,

My snuff, and loathed part of nature, should

Burn itself out. If Edgar live, O, bless him!

Now, fellow, fare thee well. [He leaps, and falls along.]

Edg. Gone, sir: farewell.

And yet I know not how conceit may rob

The treasury of life, when life itself

Yields to the theft: had he been where he thought,

By this had thought been past.—Alive, or dead?

Ho, you sir! friend!—Hear you, sir?—speak!

Thus might he pass indeed;—yet he revives.

What are you, sir?

Glo. Away, and let me die.

Edg. Hadst thou been aught but gossamer, feathers, air,

So many fathom down precipitating,

Thou'dst shiver'd like an egg: but thou dost breathe;

Hast heavy substance; bleed'st not; speak'st; art sound.

Ten masts at each make not the altitude,

Which thou hast perpendicularly fell:

Thy life 's a miracle. Speak yet again.

Glo. But have I fallen, or no?

Edg. From the dread summit of this chalky bourn.

Look up a height: the shrill-gorg'd lark so far

Cannot be seen or heard: do but look up.

Glo. Alack! I have no eyes.—

Is wretchedness depriv'd that benefit,

To end itself by death? 'T was yet some comfort,

When misery could beguile the tyrant's rage,

And frustrate his proud will.

Edg. Give me your arm: [Helping him up.]

Up:—so;—how is 't? Feel you your legs? You stand.

Glo. Too well, too well.

Edg. This is above all strangeness

Upon the crown o' the cliff, what thing was that

Which parted from you?

Glo. A poor unfortunate beggar

Edg. As I stood here below, methought, his eyes

Were too full moons; he had a thousand noses,

Horns whelk'd, and wav'd like the enridged sea:

It was some fiend; therefore, thou happy father,

Think that the clearest gods, who make them honours

Of men's impossibilities, have preserv'd thee.

Glo. I do remember now: henceforth I'll bear

Affliction, till it do cry out itself

"Enough, enough!" and die. That thing you speak of,

I took it for a man; often 't would say,

"The fiend, the fiend!" he led me to that place.

Edg. Bear free and patient thoughts.—But who comes here?

Enter LEAR, fantastically dressed with Straws and Flowers.

The safer sense will ne'er accommodate

His master thus.

Lear. No, they cannot touch me for coining;* I am the king himself.

Edg. O, thou side-piercing sight!

Lear. Nature 's above art in that respect.—There 's your press-money. That fellow handles his bow like a crow-keeper¹: draw me a clothier's yard.—Look, look! a mouse. Peace, peace!—this piece of toasted cheese will do 't.—There 's my gauntlet; I'll prove it on a giant.—Bring up the brown bills.²—O, well-flown, bird!—i' the clout, i' the clout³: hewgh!—Give the word.

Edg. Sweet marjoram.

Lear. Pass.

Glo. I know that voice.

Lear. Ha! Goneril!⁴—with a white beard!—They flatter'd me like a dog; and told me, I had white hairs in my beard, ere the black ones were there. To say "ay," and "no," to every thing I said!—"Ay" and "no" too was no good divinity. When the rain came to wet me once, and the wind to make me chatter, when the thunder would not peace at my bidding, there I found 'em, there I smelt 'em out. Go to, they are not men o' their words: they told me I was every thing; 't is a lie, I am not ague-proof.

Glo. The trick of that voice I do well remember: Is 't not the king?

Lear. Ay, every inch a king:

When I do stare, see how the subject quakes.

I pardon that man's life: what was thy cause?—

Adultery.—

Thou shalt not die: die for adultery? No:

The wren goes to 't, and the small gilded fly

Does lechen in my sight.

Let copulation thrive; for Gloucester's bastard son

Was kinder to his father, than my daughters

Got 'tween the lawful sheets.

To 't, luxury, pell-mell, for I lack soldiers.—

Behold yond' simpering dame,

Whose face between her forks presageth snow;

That mimics⁵ virtue, and does shake the head

To hear of pleasure's name;

The fithew, nor the soiled horse, goes to 't

With a more riotous appetite.

Down from the waist they are centaurs,

Though women all above:

But to the girdle do the gods inherit,

Beneath is all the fiends: there 's hell, there 's dark ness, there is the sulphurous pit, burning, scalding, stench, consumption;¹—fie, fie, fie: pah; pah! Give me an ounce of civet, good apothecary, to sweeten my imagination: there's money for thee.

Glo. O, let me kiss that hand!

Lear. Let me wipe it first: it smells of mortality.

Glo. O ruin'd piece of nature! This great world Shall so wear out to nought.—Dost thou know me?

Lear. I remember thine eyes well enough. Dost thou squiny at me? No, do thy worst, blind Cupid; I'll not love.—Read thou this challenge: mark but the penning of it.

Glo. Were all the letters suns, I could not see one.

Edg. I would not take this from report; it is, And my heart breaks at it.

Lear. Read.

Glo. What! with the case of eyes?

Lear. O, ho! are you there with me? No eyes in your head, nor no money in your purse? Your eyes are in a heavy case, your purse in a light: yet you see how this world goes.

Glo. I see it feelingly.

Lear. What, art mad? A man may see how this world goes with no eyes. Look with thine ears: see how yond' justice rails upon yond' simple thief. Hark, in thine ear: change places; and, handy-dandy, which is the justice, which is the thief?—Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar?

Glo. Ay, sir.

Lear. And the creature run from the cur? There thou might'st behold the great image of authority: a dog's obey'd in office.—

Thou rascal beadle, hold thy bloody hand!

Why dost thou lash that where? Strip thine own back; Thou hotly lust'st to use her in that kind For which thou whipp'st her. The usurer hangs the cozener.

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear; Robes, and furr'd gowns, hide all.² Plate sin with gold,

And the strong lance of justice hurtless breaks:

Arm it in rags, a pigmy's straw doth pierce it.

None does offend, none, I say, none; I'll able 'em:

Take that of me, my friend, who have the power

To seal th' accuser's lips. Get thee glass eyes;

And, like a scurvy politician, seem

To see the things thou dost not.—Now, now, now, now!

Pull off my boots: harder, harder; so.

Edg. O, matter and impertinency mix'd;

Reason in madness!

Lear. If thou wilt weep my fortunes, take my eyes.

I know thee well enough; thy name is Gloucester:

Thou must be patient. We came crying hither:

Thou know'st, the first time that we smell the air

We wawl, and cry. I will preach to thee: mark me.

Glo. Alack! alack the day!

Lear. When we are born, we cry that we are come

To this great stage of fools.—'Tis a good plot.³

It were a delicate stratagem, to shoe

A troop of horse with felt. I'll put it in proof;

And when I have stolen upon these sons-in-law,

Then, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill.

Enter a Gentleman with Attendants.

Gent. O! here he is. lay hand upon him.—Sir,

Your most dear daughter—

Lear. No rescue? What! a prisoner? I am even

The natural fool of fortune.—Use me well,

You shall have ransom. Let me have a surgeon, I am cut to the brains.

Gent.

You shall have any thing
Lear. No seconds? All myself?

Why, this would make a man, a man of salt,

To use his eyes for garden water-pots,

Ay, and for laying autumn's dust.⁴

Gent.

Good sir,—

Lear. I will die bravely,

Like a smug⁵ bridegroom. What! I will be jovial.

Come, come; I am a king, my masters, know you that?

Gent.

You are a royal one, and we obey you.

Lear. Then there's life in it. Nay, an you get it, you shall get it by running. Sa. sa. sa. sa.

[Exit: Attendants follow.]

Gent. A sight most pitiful in the meanest wretch,

Past speaking in a king!—Thou hast one daughter,

Who redeems nature from the general curse

Which twain have brought her to.

Edg. Hail, gentle sir.

Gent.

Sir, speed you: what's your will?

Edg.

Do you hear aught, sir, of a battle toward?

Gent. Most sure, and vulgar: every one hears that,

Which can distinguish sound.

Edg.

But, by your favour,

How near's the other army?

Gent. Near, and on speedy foot; the main descry Stands on the hourly thought.

Edg.

I thank you, sir: that's all.

Gent. Though that the queen on special cause is here,

Her army is mov'd on.

Edg.

I thank you, sir. [Exit Gent.]

Glo. You ever-gentle gods, take my breath from me:

Let not my worse spirit tempt me again

To die before you please!

Edg.

Well pray you, father.

Glo.

Now, good sir, what are you?

Edg.

A most poor man, made tame to fortune's blows;

Who, by the art of known and feeling sorrows,

Am pregnant to good pity. Give me your hand,

I'll lead you to some biding.

Glo.

Hearty thanks;

The bounty and the benison of heaven

To boot, and boot!

Enter OSWALD.

Osw.

A proclaim'd prize! Most happy!

That eyeless head of thine was first fram'd flesh

To raise my fortunes.—Thou old unhappy traitor,

Briefly thyself remember:—the sword is out [Drawing]

That must destroy thee.

Glo.

Now let thy friendly hand

Put strength enough to it. [EDGAR interposes]

Osw.

Wherefore, bold peasant,

Dar'st thou support a publish'd traitor? Hence:

Lest that th' infection of his fortune take

Like hold on thee. Let go his arm.

Edg.

Ch'ill not let go, zir, without vurther 'easion.

Osw.

Let go, slave, or thou diest.

Edg.

Good gentleman, go your gait, and let poor folk pass. And ch'ud ha' been zwagger'd out of my life, 't would not ha' been so long as 'tis by a vort-night. Nay, come not near the old man: keep out, che vor'y, or Ise try whether your costard or my ballow⁶ be the harder. Ch'ill be plain with you.

Osw.

Out, dunghill!

Edg. Ch'ill pick your teeth, zir. Come; no matter vor your foms.

[They fight; and EDGAR strikes him down.]

Osw. Slave, thou hast slain me.—Villain, take my purse.

If ever thou wilt thrive, bury my body;
And give the letters, which thou find'st about me,
To Edmund earl of Gloster: seek him out
Upon the British¹ party.—O, untimely death! [Dies.]

Edg. I know thee well: a serviceable villain;
As duteous to the vices of thy mistress,
As badness would desire.

Glo. What! is he dead?

Edg. Sit you down, father; rest you.—

Let's see his pockets: these letters, that he speaks of,
May be my friends.—He's dead; I am only sorry
He had no other death's-man.—Let us see:—
Leave, gentle wax; and, manners, blame us not:
To know our enemies' minds we rip their hearts,
Their papers is more lawful.

[Reads.] "Let our reciprocal vows be remembered.
You have many opportunities to cut him off: if your will want not, time and place will be fruitfully offered.
There is nothing done, if he return the conqueror; then, am I the prisoner, and his bed my gaol, from the loathed warmth whereof deliver me, and supply the place for your labour."

"Your (wife, so I would say)

"affectionate servant,

"GONERIL."

O, unextinguish'd blaze² of woman's will!

A plot upon her virtuous husband's life;
And the exchange, my brother!—Here, in the sands,
Thee I'll rake up, the post unsanctified
Of murderous lechers; and in the mature time,
With this ungracious paper strike the sight
Of the death-practis'd duke. For him 't is well,
That of thy death and business I can tell.

Glo. The king is mad: how stiff is my vile sense,
That I stand up, and have ingenious feeling
Of my huge sorrows! Better I were distract;
So should my thoughts be sever'd from my griefs,
And woes, by wrong imaginations, lose
The knowledge of themselves. [Drum afar off.]

Edg. Give me your hand:
Far off, methinks, I hear the beaten drum.
Come, father; I'll bestow you with a friend.]Exeunt.

SCENE VII.—A Tent in the French Camp. LEAR on a Bed, asleep; Doctor, Gentleman, and others, attending: Enter CORDELLIA and KENT.

Cor. O thou good Kent! how shall I live, and work,
To match thy goodness? My life will be too short,
And every measure fail me.

Kent. To be acknowledg'd, madam, is o'er-paid.
All my reports go with the modest truth;
Nor more, nor clipp'd, but so.

Cor. Be better suited:
These weeds are memories of those worse hours.
I prithee, put them off.

Kent. Pardon me, dear madam:
Yet to be known shortens my main³ intent:
My boon I make it, that you know me not,
Till time and I think meet.

Cor. Then be't so, my good lord.—How does the king? [To the Physician.]

Doct. Madam, sleeps still.

Cor. O, you kind gods,
Cure this great breach in his abused nature!
Th' untun'd and jarring⁴ senses, O, wind up
Of this child-changed father!

Doct. So please your most
That we may wake the king? he hath slept long.

Cor. Be govern'd by your knowledge, and proceed
I' the way of your own will. Is he array'd?

Doct. Ay, madam; in the heaviness of his sleep,
We put fresh garments on him.

Kent. Good madam, be by when we do awake him!
I doubt not of his temperance.

Cor. Very well. [*Musi-
Doct.* Please you, draw near.—Louder the music
there.

Cor. O my dear father! Restoration, hang
Thy medicine on my lips; and let this kiss
Repair those violent harms, that my two sisters
Have in thy reverence made!

Kent. Kind and dear princess!
Cor. Had you not been their father, these white flakes

Had challeng'd pity of them. Was this a face
To be expos'd against the warring⁵ winds?
To stand against the deep dread-bolted thunder?
In the most terrible and nimble stroke
Of quick, cross lightning? to watch (poor perdu!)
With this thin helm? Mine enemy's dog,
Though he had bit me, should have stood that night
Against my fire; and wast thou fain, poor father,
To hovel thee with swine, and rogues forlorn,
In short and musty straw? Alack, alack!
'T is wonder, that thy life and wits at once
Had not concluded all.—He wakes; speak to him.

Doct. Madam, do you; 't is fittest.
Cor. How does my royal lord? How fares your majesty?

Lear. You do me wrong, to take me out o' the grave.—

Thou art a soul in bliss, but I am bound
Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears
Do scald like molten lead.

Cor. Sir, do you know me?

Lear. You are a spirit, I know. Where⁶ did you die?

Cor. Still, still, far wide.

Doct. He's scarce awake: let him alone awhile.

Lear. Where have I been? Where am I?—Fair day-light?

I am mightily abus'd.—I should even die with pity
To see another thus.—I know not what to say.—
I will not swear, these are my hands:—let's see;
I feel this pin prick. Would I were assur'd
Of my condition!

Cor. O! look upon me, sir,
And hold your hands in benediction o'er me.—
No, sir, you must not kneel.

Lear. Pray, do not mock me:
I am a very foolish fond old man,
Fourscore and upward,⁷ not an hour more nor less;
And, to deal plainly,
I fear, I am not in my perfect mind.
Methinks, I should know you, and know this man;
Yet I am doubtful, for I am mainly ignorant
What place this is; and all the skill I have Remembers not these garments; nor I know not Where I did lodge last night. Do not laugh at me,
For, as I am a man, I think this lady

Cor. And so I am, I am.

Lear. Be your tears wet? Yes, faith. I pray, weep not: If you have poison for me, I will drink it.

I know, you do not love me; for your sisters

Have, as I do remember, done me wrong:

You have some cause, they have not.

Cor. No cause, no cause.

Lear. Am I in France?

Kent. In your own kingdom, sir.

Lear. Do not abuse me.

Doct. Be comforted, good madam: the great rage,

You see, is cur'd¹ in him; and yet it is danger

To make him even o'er the time he has lost.

Desire him to go in: trouble him no more,

Till farther settling.

Cor. Will't please your highness walk?

Lear.

You must bear with me:

Pray you now, forget and forgive: I am old, and foolish.

[Exeunt LEAR, CORDELIA, Doctor, and Attendants.]

Gent. Holds it true, sir, that the duke of Cornwall was so slain?

Kent. Most certain, sir.

Gent. Who is conductor of his people?

Kent. As 't is said, the bastard son of Gloster.

Gent. They say, Edgar, his banished son, is with the earl of Kent in Germany.

Kent. Report is changeable. 'T is time to look about; the powers o' the kingdom approach apace.

Gent. The arbitrement is like to be bloody. Fare you well, sir. [Exit.]

Kent. My point and period will be thoroughly wrought,

Or well or ill, as this day's battle 's fought. [Exit]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—The Camp of the British Forces, near Dover.

Enter, with Drums and Colours, EDMUND, REGAN, Officers, Soldiers, and others.

Edm. Know of the duke, if his last purpose hold;

Or whether since he is advis'd by aught

To change the course. He 's full of alteration,

And self-reproving:—bring his constant pleasure.

[To an Officer, who exits.]

Reg. Our sister's man is certainly miscarried.

Edm. 'T is to be doubted, madam.

Reg. Now, sweet lord,

You know the goodness I intend upon you:

Tell me, but truly, but then speak the truth,

Do you not love my sister?

Edm. In honour'd love.

Reg. But have you never found my brother's way To the forefended place?

Edm. That thought abuses you.

Reg. I am doubtful that you have been conjunct, And bosom'd with her, as far as we call hers.

Edm. No, by mine honour, madam.

Reg. I never shall endure her. Dear my lord, Be not familiar with her.

Edm. Fear me* not.—

She, and the duke her husband,—

Enter ALBANY, GONERIL, and Soldiers.

Gon. I had rather lose the battle, than that sister Should loosen him and me. [Aside.]

Alb. Our very loving sister, well be-met.—

Sir, this I hear,—the king is come to his daughter,

With others, whom the rigour of our state

Forc'd to cry out.¹ Where I could not be honest,

I never yet was valiant: for this business,

It toucheth us, as France invades our land,

Not bids the king, with others, whom, I fear,

Most just and heavy causes make oppose.

Edm. Sir, you speak nobly.

Reg. Why is this reason'd?

Gon. Combine together 'gainst the enemy;

For these domestic and particular broils

Are not the question here.

Alb. Let us, then, determine

With the ancient of war on our proceedings.

Edm. I shall attend you presently at your tent.

Reg. Sister, you 'll go with us?

Gon. No.

Reg. 'T is most convenient; pray you, go with us.

Gon. O, ho! I know the riddle. [Aside.—I will go.

Enter EDGAR, disguised.

Edg. If e'er your grace had speech with man so poor, Hear me one word.

Alb. I 'll overtake you.—Speak.

[Exeunt EDMUND, REGAN, GONERIL, Officers, Soldiers, and Attendants.]

Edg. Before you fight the battle, ope this letter.

If you have victory, let the trumpet sound

For him that brought it: wretched though I seem,

I can produce a champion, that will prove

What is avouched there. If you miscarry,

Your business of the world hath so an end,

And machination ceases. Fortune love you! [*Going.]

Alb. Stay, till I have read the letter.

Edg. I was forbid it.

When time shall serve, let but the herald cry,

And I 'll appear again. [Exit.]

Alb. Why, fare thee well: I will o'erlook thy paper.

Re-enter EDMUND.

Edm. The enemy 's in view; draw up your powers.

Here' is the guess of their true² strength and forces

By diligent discovery; [Showing a Paper.] but your haste

Is now urg'd on you.

Alb. We will greet the time. [Exit.]

Edm. To both these sisters have I sworn my love;

Each jealous of the other, as the stung

Are of the adder. Which of them shall I take?

Both? one? or neither? Neither can be enjoy'd,

If both remain alive: to take the widow

Exasperates, makes mad, her sister Goneril;

And hardly shall I carry out my side,

Her husband being alive. Now then, we 'll use

His countenance for the battle: which being done,

Let her who would be rid of him devise

His speedy taking off. As for the mercy

Which he intends to Lear, and to Cordelia,

The battle done, and they within our power,

Shall never see his pardon; for my state

Stands on me to defend, not to debate. [Exit]

SCENE II.—A Field between the two Camps.

Alarum within. Enter, with Drum and Colours, LEAR, CORDELIA, and their Forces; and exeunt.

Enter EDGAR and GLOSTER.

Edg. Here, father, take the shadow of this tree!
For your good host; pray that the right may thrive.
If I ever I return to you again,
I'll bring you comfort.

Glo. Grace go with you, sir! [Exit EDGAR.
Alarum; afterwards a Retreat. Re-enter EDGAR.
Edg. Away, old man! give me thy hand; away!
King Lear hath lost, he and his daughter ta'en.
Give me thy hand; come on.

Glo. No farther, sir: a man may rot even here.
Edg. What! in ill thoughts again? Men must endure

Their going hence, even as their coming hither:
Ripeness is all. Come on.

Glo. And that's true too.² [Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The British Camp near Dover.

Enter, in conquest, with Drum and Colours, EDMUND; LEAR and CORDELIA, as Prisoners; Captain, Officers, Soldiers, &c.

Edm. Some officers take them away: good guard,
Until their greater pleasures first³ be known,
That are to ensue them.

Cor. We are not the first,
Who, with best meaning, have incur'd the worst.
For thee, oppressed king, am I cast down;
Myself could see out-trown false fortune's frown.
Shall we not see these daughters, and these sisters?

Lear. No, no, no, no! Come, let's away to prison:
We two alone will sing like birds i' the cage:
When thou dost ask me blessing, I'll kneel down,
And ask of thee forgiveness. So we'll live,
And pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh
At gilded butterflies, and hear poor rogues
Talk of court news; and we'll talk with them too,
Who loses, and who wins; who's in, who's out;
And take upon's the mystery of things,
As if we were God's spies; and we'll wear out,
In a wall'd prison, packs and seats of great ones,
That ebb and flow by the moon.

Edm. Take them away.

Lear. Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia,
The gods themselves throw incense. Have I caught thee?⁴ [Embracing her.
He that parts us shall bring a brand from heaven,
And fire us hence like foxes. Wipe thine eyes;
The gouteers⁵ shall devour them, flesh and fell,
Ere they shall make us weep: we'll see them starve first.

Come. [Exeunt LEAR and CORDELIA, guarded.

Edm. Come hither, captain; hark.
Take thou this note; [Giving a Paper.] go, follow them to prison.

One step I have advanc'd thee; if thou dost
As this instructs thee, thou dost make thy way
To noble fortunes. Know thou this, that men
Are as the time is; to be tender-minded
Does not become a sword. Thy great employment
Will not bear question: either say, thou'lt do't,
Or thrive by other means.

Capt. I'll do't, my lord. [done
Edm. About it: and write happy, when thou hast

Mark,—I say, instantly; and carry it so,
As I have set it down.

*Capt.*⁶ I cannot draw a cart, nor eat dried oats;
If it be man's work, I will do it. [Exit Captain.
Flourish. Enter ALBANY, GONERIL, REGAN, Officers and Attendants.

Alb. Sir, you have shown to-day your valiant strain.
And fortune led you well. You have the captives,
Who were the opposites of this day's strife:
We do require them of you, so to use them,
As we shall find their merits, and our safety,
May equally determine.

Edm. Sir, I thought it fit
To send the old and miserable king
To some retention, and appointed guard;⁷
Whose age has charms in it, whose title more,
To pluck the common bosom on his side,
And turn our impress'd lances in our eyes,
Which do command them. With him I sent the queen.
My reason all the same; and they are ready
To-morrow, or at farther space, t' appear
Where you shall hold your session.⁸ At this time,
We sweat, and bleed: the friend hath lost his friend
And the best quarrels, in the heat, are curs'd
By those that feel their sharpness.—
The question of Cordelia, and her father,
Requires a fitter place.

Alb. Sir, by your patience,
I hold you but a subject of this war,
Not as a brother.

Reg. That's as we list to grace him:
Methinks, our pleasure might⁹ have been demanded,
Ere you had spoke so far. He led our powers,
Bore the commission of my place and person;
To which immediacy¹⁰ may well stand up,
And call itself your brother.

Gon. Not so hot:
In his own grace he doth exalt himself,
More than in your addition.¹¹

Reg. In my rights,
By me invested, he compeers the best.

Gon. That were the most, if he should husband you
Reg. Jesters do oft prove prophets.

Gon. Holla! holla!
That eye that told you so look'd but a-squint.

Reg. Lady, I am not well; else I should answer
From a full-flowing stomach.—General,
Take thou my soldiers, prisoners, patrimony:
Dispose of them, of me; the walls are thine.
Witness the world, that I create thee here
My lord and master.

Gon. Mean you to enjoy him?

Alb. The let-alone lies not in your good will.

Edm. Nor in thine, lord.

Alb. Half-blooded fellow, yes.
Reg. Let the drum strike, and prove my title thine.¹²

[To EDMUND.

Alb. Stay yet; hear reason.—Edmund, I arrest thee
On capital treason; and, in thy¹³ arrest,
This gilded serpent. [Pointing to Gon.—For your claim, fair sister,

I bar it in the interest of my wife;
'Tis she is sub-contracted to this lord,
And I, her husband, contradict your bans.
If you will marry, make your love to me,
My lady is bespoke.

Gon. An interlude!¹⁴

Alb. Thou art arm'd, Gloster.—Let the trumpet sound:

If none appear to prove upon thy person,
Thy heinous, manifest, and many treasons.
There is my pledge. [Throwing down a Glove.] I'll prove it on thy heart,
Ere I taste bread, thou art in lesson less
Than I have here proclaim'd thee.

Reg. Sick! O, sick!

Gon. [Aside.] If not, I'll ne'er trust poison.¹

Edm. There's my exchange: [Throwing down a Glove.] what in the world he is

That names me traitor, villain-like he lies.

Call by thy trumpet: he that dares approach,

On him, on you, who not? I will maintain

My truth and honour firmly.

Alb. A herald, ho!

Edm. A herald, ho! a herald!

Alb. Trust to thy single virtue; for thy soldiers,
All levied in my name, have in my name
Took their discharge.

Reg. My sickness grows upon me.

Alb. She is not well; convey her to my tent.

[Exit REGAN, led.]

Enter a Herald.

Come hither, herald.—Let the trumpet sound,

And read out this.

Capt. Sound, trumpet. [A Trumpet sounds.]

Herald reads.

"If any man of quality, or degree, within the lists² of the army, will maintain upon Edmund, supposed earl of Gloster, that he is a manifold traitor, let him appear at the third sound of the trumpet. He is bold in his defence."³

Edm. Sound!

Her. Again.

Her. Again.

[1 Trumpet.]

[2 Trumpet.]

[3 Trumpet.]

[Trumpet answers within.]

Enter EDGAR, armed, preceded by a Trumpet.

Alb. Ask him his purposes, why he appears

Upon this call o' the trumpet.

Her. What are you?

Your name? your quality? and why you answer
This present summons?

Edg. Know, my name is lost;

By treason's tooth bare-gnawn, and canker-bit:

Yet am I noble, as the adversary

I come to cope withal.

Alb. Which is that adversary?

Edg. What's he, that speaks for Edmund earl of Gloster?

Edm. Himself: what say'st thou to him?

Edg. Draw thy sword,

That if my speech offend a noble heart,

Thy arm may do thee justice: here is mine:

[Drawing.]

Behold, it is⁴ the privilege of mine honours,
My oath, and my profession. I protest,
Maugre thy strength, skill, youth,⁵ and eminence,

Despite thy victor sword, and fire-new fortune,

Thy valour, and thy heart, thou art a traitor:

False to thy gods, thy brother, and thy father;

Conspirant 'gainst this high illustrious prince;

And, from th' extremest upward of thy head,

To the descent and dust below thy foot,⁶

A most toad-spotted traitor. Say thou, "No,"

This sword, this arm, and my best spirits, are bent

To prove upon thy heart, whereto I speak,
Thou liest.

Edm. In wisdom, I should ask thy name;

But since thy outside looks so fair and warlike,

And that thy tongue some say of breeding breathes,

What safe and nicely I might well delay

By rule⁷ of knighthood, I disdain and spurn.

Back do I toss these treasons to thy head;

With the bell-hated lie o'erwhelm thy heart;

Which, for they yet glance by, and scarcely bruise,

This sword of mine shall give them instant way,

Where they shall rest for ever.—Trumpets, speak!

[Alarums. They fight. EDMUND fal

Alb. O, save him! save him!

Gon.

This is mere⁸ practice, Gloster

By the laws of arms⁹ thou wast not bound to answer

An unknown opposite; thou art not vanquish'd,

But cozen'd and beguil'd.

Alb.

Shut your mouth, dame;

Or with this paper shall I stop it?—Hold, sir!—¹⁰

Thou worse than any name,¹¹ read thine own evil.

[She snatches at the Letter.]

No tearing, lady; I perceive, you know it.

[Gives the Letter to EDMUND

Gon. Say, if I do, the laws are mine, not thine:

Who can¹² arraign me for't?¹³

Alb.

Most monstrous!

Know'st thou this paper?

*Gon.*¹⁴ Ask me not what I know. [Exit GONERIL

Alb. Go after her: she's desperate; govern her.

[Exit an Officer

Edm. What you have charg'd me with, that have

I done,

And more, much more; the time will bring it out:

'T is past, and so am I. But what art thou,

That hast this fortune on me? If thou'rt noble,

I do forgive thee.

Edg.

Let's exchange charity.

I am no less in blood than thou art, Edmund;

If more, the more thou hast wrong'd me.

[Taking off his Helmet.]

My name is Edgar, and thy father's son.

The gods are just, and of our pleasant vices¹⁵

Make instruments to plague¹⁶ us:

The dark and vicious place where thee he got

Cost him his eyes.

Edm.

Thou hast spoken right, 't is true;

The wheel is come full circle: I am here.

Alb. Methought, thy very gait did prophesy

A royal nobleness. I must embrace thee:

Let sorrow split my heart, if ever I

Did hate thee, or thy father.

Edg.

Worthy prince, I know 't.

Alb. Where have you hid yourself?

How have you known the miseries of your father?

Edg. By nursing them, my lord.—List a brief tale;

And when 't is told, O, that my heart would burst!—

The bloody proclamation to escape,

That follow'd me so near. (O, our lives' sweetness!

That with¹⁷ the pain of death we'd hourly die,

Rather than die at once!) taught me to shift

Into a madman's rags, t' assume a semblance

That very dogs disdain'd; and in this habit

Met I my father with his bleeding rings.

Their precious stones new lost; became his guide,

Led him, begg'd for him, sav'd him from despair;

Never (O fault!) reveal'd myself unto him,

Not sure, though hoping, of this good success,
I ask'd his blessing, and from first to last
Told him my pilgrimage: but his flaw'd heart,
(Alack! too weak the conflict to support)
'Twixt two extremes of passion, joy and grief,
Burst smilingly.

Edm. This speech of yours hath mov'd me,
And shall, perchance, do good; but speak you on:
You look as you had something more to say.

Alb. If there be more more woful, hold it in,
For I am almost ready to dissolve,
Hearing of this.¹

Edg. This would have seem'd a period
To such as love not sorrow; but another,
To amplify too-much, would make much more,
And top extremity.

Whilst I was big in clamour, came there a man,
Who, having seen me in my worst estate,
Shunn'd my abhor'd society; but then, finding
Who 't was that so endur'd, with his strong arms
He fasten'd on my neck, and bellow'd out
As he'd burst heaven; threw him² on my father;
Told the most piteous tale of Lear and him,
That ever ear receiv'd; which in recounting,
His grief grew puissant, and the strings of life
Began to crack; twice, then, the trumpets sounded,
And there I left him tranç'd.

Alb. But who was this?
Edg. Kent, sir, the banish'd Kent; who in disguise
Follow'd his enemy king, and did him service
Improper for a slave.

Enter a Gentleman hastily, with a bloody Knife.
Gent. Help, help! O help!

Edg. What kind of help?
Alb. Speak, man.

Edg. What means that bloody knife?
Gent. 'T is hot, it smokes;

It came even from the heart of—O! she's dead:

Alb. Who dead? speak, man.

Gent. Your lady, sir, your lady: and her sister
By her is poisoned: she hath confess'd it.

Edm. I was contract'd to them both: all three
Now marry in an instant.

Alb. Produce the bodies, be they alive or dead!—
This judgment³ of the heavens, that makes us tremble,
Touches us not with pity. [Exit Gentleman.]

Enter KENT.
Edg. Here comes Kent.

Alb. O! it is⁴ he.
The time will not allow the compliment,
Which every manners urges.

Kent. I am come
To bid my king and master aye good night:
Is he not here?

Alb. Great thing of us forgot!—
Speak, Edmund, where's the king? and where's Corsest thou this object, Kent? [Edelia?—

[The Bodies of GONERIL and REGAN are brought in.]
Kent. Alack! why thus?

Edm. Yet Edmund was belov'd:
The one the other poison'd for my sake,
And after slew herself.

Alb. Even so—Cover their faces.

Edm. I pant for life:—some good I mean to do,
Despite of mine own nature. Quickly send,—
Be brief in it,—to the castle; for my writ
Is on the life of Lear, and on Cordelia.—

Nay, send in time.

Alb. Run, run! O, run!

Edg. To whom, my lord?—Who has the office? send Thy token of reprieve.

Edm. Well thought on: take my sword,
Give it the captain.

Alb. Haste thee, for thy life. [Exit EDGAR]

Edm. He hath commission from thy wife and me

To hang Cordelia in the prison, and

To lay the blame upon her own despair,

That she fordid herself.

Alb. The gods defend her! Bear him hence awhile!

[EDMUND is borne off.]
Enter LEAR with CORDELIA dead in his Arms; EDGAR,
Officer, and others.

Lear. Howl, howl, howl!—O! you are men of stones;

Had I your tongues and eyes, I'd use them so That heaven's vault should crack.—She's gone for ever.—

I know when one is dead, and when one lives;
She's dead as earth.—Lend me a looking-glass:
If that her breath will mist or stain the shine,⁵
Why, then she lives.

Kent. Is this the promis'd end?

Edg. Or image of that horror?

Alb. Fall, and cease!

Lear. This feather stirs; she lives! if it be so,

It is a chance which does redeem all sorrows

That ever I have felt.

Kent. O, my good master!

[Kneeling]

Lear. Pr'ythee, away.

Edg. 'T is noble Kent, your friend

Lear. A plague upon you, murderers,⁶ traitors all!

I might have sav'd her: now, she's gone for ever.—

Cordelia, Cordelia! stay a little. Ha!

What is 't thou say'st?—Her voice was ever soft,

Gentle, and low—an excellent thing in woman.—

I kill'd the slave that was a hanging thee.

Off. 'T is true, my lords, he did.

Lear. Did I not, fellow?

I have seen the day, with my good biting faulchion

I would have made them⁷ skip: I am old now,

And these same crosses spoil me.—Who are you?

Mine eyes are not o' the best: I'll tell you straight.

Kent. If fortune brag of two she lov'd and hated,

One of them we behold.

Lear. This is a dull light:⁸—are you not Kent?

Kent. The same

Your servant Kent. Where is your servant Caius?

Lear. He's a good fellow, I can tell you that;

He'll strike, and quickly too.—He's dead and rotten.

Kent. No, my good lord; I am the very man—

Lear. I'll see that straight.

Kent. That from your first of difference and decay,

Have follow'd your sad steps.

Lear. You are welcome hither.

Kent. Nor no man else. All's cheerless, dark, and deadly:

Your eldest daughters have fordone themselves,

And desperately are dead.

Lear. Ay, so I think.

Alb. He knows not what he says;⁹ and vain is it,

That we present us to him.

Edg. Very bootless.

Enter an Officer.

Off. Edmund is dead, my lord.

Alb. That 's but a trifle here—
 You lords, and noble friends, know our intent.
 What comfort to this great¹ decay may come,
 Shall be applied : for us, we will resign,
 During the life of this old majesty,
 To him our absolute power.—To you your rights,

[To EDGAR and KENT.]

With boot, and such addition, as your honours
 Have more than merited.—All friends shall taste
 The wages of their virtue, and all foes
 The cup of their deservings.—O ! see, see !

Lear. And my poor fool is hang'd ! No, no, no life :
 Why should a dog, a horse, a rat, have life,
 And thou no breath at all ? Thou 'lt come no more,
 Never, never, never, never, never !—

Pray you, undo this button : thank you, sir.²—

Do you see this ? Look on her,—look,—her lips.—

Look there, look there !— [He dies.]

Edg. He faints.—My lord, my lord !—

Kent. Break heart ; I pr'ythee, break !

Edg.

Kent. Vex not his ghost : O ! let him pass : he hates
 him,

That would upon the rack of this tough³ world
 Stretch him out longer.

Edg.

He is gone, indeed.

Kent. The wonder is, he hath endur'd so long :
 He but usurp'd his life.

Alb. Bear them from hence. Our present business
 Is general woe.—Friends of my soul, you twain

[To KENT and EDGAR.]

Rule in this realm, and the gor'd state sustain.

Kent. I have a journey, sir, shortly to go :

My master calls me ;⁴ I must not say, no.

*Alb.*⁵ The weight of this sad time we must obey,
 Speak what we feel, not what we ought to say.

The oldest hath borne most : we, that are young,

Shall never see so much, nor live so long.

OTHELLO, THE MOOR OF VENICE.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

Duke of Venice.
BRABANTIO, a Senator.
Two other Senators.
GRATIANO, Brother to Brabantio.
LODOVICO, Kinsman to Brabantio.
OTHELLO, the Moor.
CASSIO, his Lieutenant.
IAGO, his Ancient.
RODERIGO, a Venetian Gentleman.

MONTANO, Governor of Cyprus.
Clown, Servant to Othello.
Herald.

DESDEMONA, Daughter to Brabantio, and Wife to Othello.
EMILIA, Wife to Iago.
BIANCA, a Courtesan of Venice.

Officers, Gentlemen, Messengers Musicians, Sailors, Attendants, &c.

SCENE, for the first Act, in Venice; during the rest of the Play, at a Sea-Port in Cyprus.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Venice. A Street.

Enter RODERIGO in choler, and IAGO.*

Rod. Tush! never tell me, I take it much unkindly,
That thou, Iago, who hast had my purse,
As if the strings were thine, shouldst know of this.

Iago. 'Sblood! but you will not hear me:
If ever I did dream of such a matter, abhor me.

Rod. Thou told'st me thou didst hold him in thy hate.

Iago. Despise me, if I do not. Three great ones of the city,

In personal suit to make me his lieutenant,
Off-capp'd to him; and, by the faith of man,
I know my price: I am worth no worse a place;
But he, as loving his own pride and purposes,
Evades them, with a bombast circumstance,
Horribly stuff'd with epithets of war;
And, in conclusion,

Nonsuits my mediators; "For certes," says he,
"I have already chose my officer." And what was he?

Forsooth, a great arithmetician,
One Michael Cassio, a Florentine,
A fellow almost damn'd in a fair wife;
That never set a squadron in the field,
Nor the division of a battle knows
More than a spinster; unless the bookish theorist,
Wherein the toged[†] consuls can propose
As masterly as he: mere prattle, without practice
Is all his soldiership. But he, sir, had th' election,
And I,—of whom his eyes had seen the proof,
At Rhodes, at Cyprus, and on other grounds,
Christian and heathen,—must be be-liev'd and calm'd
By debitor and creditor, this counter-caster:
He, in good time, must his lieutenant be,
And I, God bless the mark! his Moor-ship's ancient.

Rod. By heaven, I rather would have been his haughtman.

Iago. But there's no remedy: 'tis the curse of service,

Preferment goes by favour and affection,
Not by the old gradation, where each second
Stood heir t' the first. Now, sir, be judge yourself,
Whether I in any just terms am affini'd
To love the Moor.

Rod. I would not follow him, then.

Iago. O, sir! content you;
I follow him to serve my turn upon him:
We cannot all be masters, nor all masters
Cannot be truly follow'd. You shall mark
Many a duteous and knee-crooking knave,
That, dotting on his own obsequious bondage,
Wears out his time, much like his master's ass.
For nought but provender; and when he's old, cashier'd:
Whip me such honest knaves. Others there are,
Who, learn'd[‡] in forms and usages[§] of duty,
Keep yet their hearts attending on themselves,
And, throwing but shows of service on their lords,
Do well thrive by them; and when they have liv'd their coats,

Do themselves homage: these fellows have some soul
And such a one do I profess myself. For, sir,
It is as sure as you are Roderigo,
Were I the Moor, I would not be Iago:
In following him, I follow but myself;
Heaven is my judge, not I for love and duty,
But seeming so, for my peculiar end:
For when my outward action doth demonstrate
The native act and figure of my heart
In complement extern, 'tis not long after
But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve
For daws[¶] to peck at: I am not what I am.

Rod. What a full[•] fortune does the thick-lips owe,
If he can carry 't thus!

Iago. Call up her father;
Rouse him: make after him, poison his delight,
Proclaim him in the streets: incense her kinsmen;
And though he in a fertile climate dwell,
Plague him with flies: though that his joy be joy,

Yet throw such changes¹ of vexation on 't,
As it may lose some colour.

Rod. Here is her father's house : I'll call aloud.

Iago. Do ; with like clamorous² accent, and dire yell,
As when, by night and negligence, the fire
Is spied in populous cities.

Rod. What ho ! Brabantio ! signior Brabantio, ho !

Iago. Awake ! what, ho ! Brabantio ! thieves ! thieves !
thieves !

Look to your house, your daughter, and your bags !
Thieves ! thieves !

Enter BRABANTIO, above, at a Window.

Bra. What is the reason of this terrible summons ?

What is the matter there ?

Rod. Signior, is all your family within ?

Iago. Are your doors lock'd ?

Bra. Why ? wherefore ask you this ?

Iago. 'Zounds ! sir, you are robb'd ; for shame, put on your gown :

Your heart is burst, you have lost half your soul :

Even now, now, very now, an old black ram

Is tupping your white ewe. Arise, arise !

Awake the snorting citizens with the bell,

Or else the devil will make a grandsire of you.

Arise, I say.

Bra. What, have you lost your wits ?

Rod. Most reverend signior, do you know my voice ?

Bra. Not I : what are you ?

Rod. My name is Roderigo.

Bra. The worse³ welcome :
I have charg'd thee not to haunt about my doors.

In honest plainness thou hast heard me say,

My daughter is not for thee ; and now, in madness,

Being full of supper and distempering draughts,

Upon malicious bravery⁴ dost thou come

To start my quiet.

Rod. Sir, sir, sir,—

Bra. But thou must needs be sure,
My spirit and my place have in them power
To make this bitter to thee.

Rod. Patience, good sir.

Bra. What tell'st thou me of robbing ? this is Venice ;

My house is not a grange.

Rod. Most grave Brabantio,
In simple and pure soul I come to you.

Iago. 'Zounds ! sir, you are one of those, that will not serve God, if the devil bid you. Because we come to you service, and you think we are ruffians, you'll have your daughter covered with a Barbary horse :
you'll have your nephews neigh to you ; you'll have coursers for cousins, and gennets for germans.

Bra. What profane wretch art thou ?

Iago. I am one, sir, that comes to tell you, your laughter and the Moor are now making the beast with two backs.

Bra. Thou art a villain.

Iago. You are—a senator.

Bra. This thou shalt answer : I know thee, Roderigo. [you,⁵

Rod. Sir, I will answer any thing. But I beseech
If 't be your pleasure, and most wise consent,
(As partly I find, it is) that your fair daughter,
At this odd-even and dull watch o' the night,
Transported with no worse nor better guard,
But with a knave of common hire, a gondolier,
To the gross clasps of a lascivious Moor,

If this be known to you, and your allowance,
We then have done you bold and saucy wrongs ;
But if you know not this, my manners tell me,
We have your wrong rebuke. Do not believe
That from the sense of all civility,
I thus would play and trifle with your reverence :
Your daughter, if you have not given her leave,
I say again, hath made a gross revolt,
Laying⁶ her duty, beauty, wit, and fortunes,
On⁷ an extravagant and wheeling⁸ stranger,
Of here and every where. Straight satisfy yourself
If she be in her chamber, or your house,
Let loose on me the justice of the state
For thus deluding you.

Bra. Strike on the tinder, ho !

Give me a taper !—call up all my people !—

This accident is not unlike my dream ;

Belief of it oppresses me already.—

Light, I say ! light !

[Exit from above

Iago. Farewell, for I must leave you

It seems not meet, nor wholesome to my place,

To be produc'd (as if I stay I shall)

Against the Moor : for, I do know, the state,—

However this may gall him with some check,—

Cannot with safety cast him ; for he's embark'd

With such loud reason to the Cyprus wars

(Which even now stand in act) that, for their souls,

Another of his fathom they have none,

To lead their business : in which regard,

Though I do hate him as I do hell pains,

Yet for necessity of present life,

I must show out a flag and sign of love,

Which is indeed but sign. That you shall surely find
him,

Lead to the sagittary⁹ the raised search ;

And there will I be with him. So, farewell. [Exit.

Enter BRABANTIO, and Servants with Torches.

Bra. It is too true an evil : gone she is ;

And what's to come of my despised time

Is nought but bitterness.—Now, Roderigo,

Where didst thou see her ?—O, unhappy girl !—

With the Moor, say'st thou ?—Who would be a father ?—

How didst thou know 't was she ?—O ! thou deceiv'st¹⁰
me

Past thought.—What said she to you ?—Get more tapers !

Raise all my kindred !—Are they married, think you ?

Rod. Truly, I think, they are.

Bra. O heaven !—How got she out ?—O, treason of my blood !—

Fathers, from hence trust not your daughters' minds

By what you see them act.—Are there not charms,

By which the property of youth and maidhood

May be abus'd ? Have you not read, Roderigo,

Of some such thing ?

Rod. Yes, sir ; I have, indeed.¹¹

Bra. Call up my brother.—O, that you had ha
her !—

Some one way, some another.—Do you know

Where we may apprehend her and the Moor ?

Rod. I think, I can discover him, if you please

To get good guard, and go along with me.

Bra. Pray you, lead on.¹² At every house I'll call ;

I may command at most.—Get weapons, ho !

And raise some special officers of night.—

On, good Roderigo !—I'll deserve your pains. [Exeunt

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Street.

Enter OTHELLO, IAGO, and Attendants, with Torches.

Iago. Though in the trade of war I have slain men,
Yet do I hold it very stuff o' the conscience
To do no contriv'd murder: I lack iniquity
Sometimes, to do me service. Nine or ten times
I had thought to have yerkd him here, under the ribs.
Oth. 'Tis better as it is.

Iago. Nay, but he prated,
And spoke such scurvy and provoking terms
Against your honour.

That, with the little godliness I have,
I did full hard forbear him. But, I pray, sir,
Are you fast married? for, be sure¹ of this,
That the magnifico is much beloved;
And hath, in his effect, a voice potential,
As double as the duke's: he will divorce you;
Or put upon you what restraint, or² grievance,
The law (with all his might t' enforce it on)
Will give him cable.

Oth. Let him do his spite:
My services, which I have done the signiory,
Shall out-tongue his complaints. 'Tis yet to know,
Which, when I know that boasting is an honour,
I shall promulgate, I fetch my life and being
From men of royal siege:³ and my demerits⁴
May speak, unbanned, to as proud a fortune
As this that I have reach'd: for know, Iago,
But that I love the gentle Desdemona,
I would not my unhousew'd free condition
Put into circumscription and confine
For the sea's worth. But, look! what lights come yonder?

Iago. These are the raised father, and his friends:
You were best go in.

Oth. Not I: I must be found:
My parts, my title, and my perfect soul,
Shall manifest me rightly. Is it they?

Iago. By Janus, I think no.

Enter CASSIO, and certain Officers with Torches.

Oth. The servants of the duke, and my lieutenant.
The goodness of the night upon you, friends.
What is the news?

Cas. The duke does greet you, general;
And he requires your haste, post-haste appearance,
Even on the instant.

Oth. What is the matter, think you?

Cas. Something from Cyprus, as I may divine.
It is a business of some heat: the galleys
Have sent a dozen sequent⁵ messengers,
This very night, at one another's heels;
And many of the consuls, rais'd and met,
Are at the duke's already. You have been hotly call'd
When, being not at your lodging to be found, [for;
The senate sent above⁶ three several quests,
To search you out.

Oth. 'Tis well I am found by you.
will but spend a word here in the house,
and go with you. [Exit.

Cas. Ancient, what makes he here?

Iago. 'Faith, he to-night hath boarded a land carack:⁷
if it prove lawful prize, he's made for ever.

Cas. I do not understand.

Iago. He's married.

Cas. To whom?

Re-enter OTHELLO.

Iago. Marry, to—Come, captain, will you go?

Oth. Have with you.

Cas. Here comes another troop to seek for you.

Iago. It is Brabantio.—General, be advis'd:
He comes to bad intent.

Enter BRABANTIO, RODERIGO, and Officers, with Torches and Weapons.

Oth. Holla! stand there!

Rod. Signior, it is the Moor.

Bra. Down with him, thief!
[They draw on both sides.]

Iago. You, Roderigo! come, sir, I am for you.

Oth. Keep up your bright swords, for the dew will rust them.—

Good signior, you shall more command with years.

Than with your weapons.

Bra. O, thou foul thief! where hast thou stow'd my daughter?

Damn'd as thou art, thou hast enchanted her,
For I'll refer me to all things of sense,
If she in chains of magic were not bound,*
Whether a maid so tender, fair, and happy,
So opposite to marriage, that she shunn'd
The wealthy curled darlings' of our nation,
Would ever have, to incur a general mock,
Run from her guardage to the sooty bosom
Of such a thing as thou; to fear, not to delight.
Judge me the world, if 't is not gross in sense,¹⁰
That thou hast practis'd on her with foul charms;
Abus'd her delicate youth with drugs, or minerals,
That weaken motion.—I'll have 't disputed on;
'T is probable, and palpable to thinking.

I, therefore, apprehend, and do attach thee
For an abuser of the world, a practiser
Of arts inhibited, and out of warrant.—

Lay hold upon him! if he do resist,

Subdue him at his peril.

Oth. Hold your hands!

Both you of my inclining, and the rest:
Were it my cue to fight, I should have known it
Without a prompter.—Where will you that I go,
To answer this your charge?

Bra. To prison; till fit time
Of law, and course of direct session,
Call thee to answer.

Oth. What if I do obey?
How may the duke be therewith satisfied,
Whose messengers are here about my side,
Upon some present business of the state,
To bear¹¹ me to him?

Off. 'T is true, most worthy signior
The duke's in council, and your noble self,
I am sure, is sent for.

Bra. How! the duke in council,
In this time of the night!—Bring him away.
Mine's not an idle cause: the duke himself,
Or any of my brothers of the state,
Cannot but feel this wrong, as 't were their own;
For if such actions may have passage free,
Bond-slaves and pagans shall our statesmen be. [Exeunt

SCENE III.—The Same. A Council-Chamber.

The DUKE, and Senators, sitting in state; Officers attending.

Duke. There is no composition in these news,
That gives them credit.

1 Sen. Indeed, they are disproportion'd
My letters say, a hundred and seven galleys.

¹ be assured: in folio. ² and: in quarto. ³ height: in quartos. ⁴ Merits. ⁵ frequent: in quartos. ⁶ about: in folio. ⁷ Freight ship. ⁸ This line is not in quarto, 1622. ⁹ dearing: in folio. ¹⁰ This and the five following words, are not in quarto, 1622. ¹¹ bring in folio.

Duke. And mine, a hundred and forty.

2 Sen. And mine, two hundred :

But though they jump not on a just account,
[As in these cases, with the same] reports,
'T is oft with difference) yet do they all confirm
A Turkish fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus.

Duke. Nay, it is possible enough to judgment.

I do not so secure me in the error,
But the main article I do approve
In fearful sense.

Sailor. [Within.] What ho ! what ho ! what ho !

Enter an Officer, with a Sailor.

Off. A messenger from the galleys.

Duke. Now, the business ?

Sail. The Turkish preparation makes for Rhodes :

So was I bid report here to the state,

By signior Angelo.*

Duke. How say you by this change ?

1 Sen. This cannot be,

By no assay of reason : 't is a pageant,
To keep us in false gaze. When we consider
The importancy of Cyprus to the Turk ;
And let ourselves again but understand,
That, as it more concerns the Turk than Rhodes,
So may he with more facile question bear it,²
For that it stands not in such warlike brace,
But altogether lacks th' abilities
That Rhodes is dress'd in :—if we make thought of this,
We must not think the Turk is so unskilful,
To leave that latest which concerns him first,
Neglecting an attempt of ease and gain,
To wake, and wage, a danger profitless.

Duke. Nay, in all confidence, he's not for Rhodes.

Off. Here is more news.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The Ottomites, reverend and gracious,
Steering with due course toward the isle of Rhodes,
Have there enjoined them* with an after fleet.

1 Sen. Ay, so I thought.—How many, as you guess ?

Mess. Of thirty sail ; and now do they re-stern
Their backward course, bearing with frank appearance
Their purposes toward Cyprus.—Signior Montano,
Your trusty and most valiant servitor,
With his free duty recommends you thus,
And prays you to believe him.

Duke. 'T is certain, then, for Cyprus.—
Marcus Luccicos, is not he in town ?

1 Sen. He's now in Florence.

Duke. Write from us to him ; post, post-haste dispatch.

1 Sen. Here comes Brabantio, and the valiant Moor.
Enter BRABANTIO, OTHELLO, IAGO, RODERIGO, and Officers.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must straight employ you
Against the general enemy Ottoman.—

I did not see you ; welcome, gentle signior ;

[To BRABANTIO.]

We lack'd your counsel and your help to-night.

Bra. So did I yours. Good your grace, pardon me ;
Neither my place, nor aught I heard of business,
Hath rais'd me from my bed ; nor doth the general care
Take hold* of me, for my particular grief
Is of so blood-gate and o'er-bearing nature,
That it engulfs and swallows other sorrows,
And it is still itself.

Duke. Why, what's the matter ?

Bra. My daughter ! O, my daughter !

Sen. Dead ?

Bra. Ay, to me

She is abus'd, stol'n from me, and corrupted
By spells and medicines bought of mountebanks ;
For nature so preposterously to err,
(Being not deficient, blind, or lame of sense*)
Sans witchcraft could not.

Duke. Whoe'er he be that, in this foul proceeding,
Hath thus beguil'd your daughter of herself,
And you of her, the bloody book of law
You shall yourself read in the bitter letter,
After its' own sense ; yea, though our proper son
Stood in your action.

Bra. Humbly I thank your grace.

Here is the man, this Moor : whom now, it seems,
Your special mandate, for the state affairs,
Hath hither brought.

Duke and Sen. We are very sorry for it.

Duke. What, in your own part, can you say to this ?

[To OTHELLO]

Bra. Nothing, but this is so.

Oth. Most potent, grave, and reverend signiors,
My very noble and approv'd good masters,
That I have ta'en away this old man's daughter,
It is most true ; true. I have married her ;
The very head and front of my offending
Hath this extent, no more. Rude am I in my speech,
And little bless'd with the set* phrase of peace ;
For since these arms of mine had seven years' pith,
Till now, some nine moons wasted, they have us'd
Their dearest action in the tented field :
And little of this great world can I speak,
More than pertains to feats of broil and battle ;
And, therefore, little shall I grace my cause,
In speaking for myself. Yet, by your gracious patience,
I will a round unvarnish'd tale deliver
Of my whole course of love : what drugs, what charms,
What conjuration, and what mighty magic,
(For such proceeding I am charg'd withal)
I won his daughter with.

Bra. A maiden never bold ;
Of spirit so still and quiet, that her motion
Blush'd at herself ; and she,—in spite of nature,
Of years, of country, credit, every thing.—
To fall in love with what she fear'd to look on ?
It is a judgment maim'd, and most imperfect,
That will confess perfection so could err
Against all rules of nature ; and must be driven
To find out practices of cunning hell,
Why this should be. I, therefore, vouch again,
That with some mixtures powerful o'er the blood,
Or with some dram conjur'd to this effect,
He wrought upon her.

Duke. To vouch this is no proof
Without more evidence and overt test.*
These are thin habits, and poor likelihoods
Of modern seeming, you prefer against him.

1 Sen. But, Othello, speak :

Did you by indirect and forced courses
Subdue and poison this young maid's affections,
Or came it by request, and such fair question
As soul to soul affordeth.

Oth. I do beseech you,
Send for the lady to the Sagittary,
And let her speak of me before her father :
If you do find me foul in her report,
The trust, the office, I do hold of you,¹⁰

Duke. Fetch Desdemona hither.
Oth. Ancient, conduct them; you best know the place.— [Exeunt Iago and Attendants.]

And, till she come, as truly¹ as to heaven
I do confess the vices of my blood,
So justly to your grave ears I'll present
How I did thrive in this fair lady's love,
And she in mine.

Duke. Say it, Othello.

Oth. Her father lov'd me; oft invited me;
Still question'd me the story of my life,
From year to year; the battles, sieges, fortunes,
That I had pass'd.
I ran it through, even from my boyish days,
To the very moment that he bade me tell it:
Wherein I spoke of most disastrous chances,
Of moving accidents, by flood, and field;
Of hair-breadth scapes i' th' imminent deadly breach;
Of being taken by the insolent foe,
And sold to slavery; of my redemption thence,
And portance in my travel's² history:
Wherein of antres vast, and deserts idle,³ Rough quarries, rocks, and hills whose heads touch heaven,

It was my hint to speak, such was the process;
And of the Cannibals that each other eat.
The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads
Do grow beneath their shoulders. This⁴ to hear,
Would Desdemona seriously incline:
But still the house affairs would draw her thence;⁵
Which ever as she could with haste despatch,
She'd come again, and with a greedy ear
Devour up my discourse. Which I observing,
Took once a pliant hour; and found good means
To draw from her a prayer of earnest heart,
That I would all my pilgrimage dilate,
Whereof by parcels she had something heard,
But not intently: I did consent;
And often did beguile her of her tears,
When I did speak of some distressful stroke,
That my youth suffer'd. My story being done,
She gave me for my pains a world of sighs:⁶
She swore.—in faith, 't was strange, 't was passing strange;

'T was pitiful, 't was wondrous pitiful:
She wish'd she had not heard it; yet she wish'd
That heaven had made her such a man: she thank'd me;
And bade me, if I had a friend that lov'd her,
I should but teach him how to tell my story,
And that would woo her.—On this hint⁷ I spake;
She lov'd me for the dangers I had pass'd,
And I lov'd her, that she did pity them.
This only is the witchcraft I have us'd:
Here comes the lady; let her witness it.

Enter DESDEMONA, IAGO, and Attendants.

Duke. I think, this tale would win my daughter too.
Good Brabantio,
Take up this mangled matter at the best:
Men do their broken weapons rather use,
Than their bare hands.

Bra. I pray you, hear her speak:
If she confess that she was half the wooer,
Destruction on my head,⁸ if my bad blame
Light on the man.—Come hither, gentle mistress:
Do you perceive in all this noble company,

Where most you owe obedience?

Des.

My noble father,

I do perceive here a divided duty.

To you, I am bound for life, and education:
My life and education both do learn me
How to respect you; you are the lord⁹ of duty;
I am hitherto your daughter: but here's my husband,
And so much duty as my mother show'd
To you, preferring you before her father,
So much I challenge that I may profess
Due to the Moor, my lord.

Bra.

God be with you!—I have done —.

Please it your grace, on to the state affairs:

I had rather to adopt a child, than get it.—

Come hither, Moor:

I here do give thee that with all my heart,
Which, but thou hast already, with all my heart¹⁰
I would keep from thee.—For your sake, jewel,
I am glad at soul I have no other child,
For thy escape would teach me tyranny,
To hang clogs on them.—I have done, my lord.

Duke. Let me speak like yourself; and say a sentence,
Which, as a grise, or step, may help these lovers
Into your favour.¹¹

When remedies are past, the griefs are ended
By seeing the worst, which late on hopes depended.
To mourn a mischief that is past and gone
Is the next way to draw new¹² mischief on.
What cannot be preserv'd when fortune takes,
Patience her injury a mockery makes.
The robb'd, that smiles, steals something from the thief
He robs himself, that spends a bootless grief.

Bra.

So let the Turk of Cyprus us beguile:

We lose it not, so long as we can smile.

He bears the sentence well, that nothing bears
But the free comfort which from thence he hears,
But he bears both the sentence and the sorrow,
That, to pay grief, must of poor patience borrow.
These sentences, to sugar, or to gall,
Being strong on both sides, are equivocal:
But words are words: I never yet did hear,
That the bruis'd heart was pieced through the ear.
Beseech you, now to the affairs of state.

Duke. The Turk with a most mighty preparation, makes for Cyprus.—Othello, the fortitude of the place is best known to you; and though we have there a substitute of most allowed sufficiency, yet opinion, a most¹⁴ sovereign mistress of effects, throws a more safer voice on you: you must, therefore, be content to slubber the gloss of your new fortunes with this mere stubborn and boisterous expedition.

Oth. The tyrant custom, most grave senators,
Hath made the flinty and steel couch¹⁵ of war
My thrice-driven bed of down: I do agnize
A natural and prompt alacrity,
I find in hardness: and do¹⁶ undertake
These present wars against the Ottomites.
Most humbly, therefore, bending to your state,
I crave fit disposition for my wife;
Due reference of place, and exhibition,
With such accommodation, and besort,
As levels with her breeding.

Duke.

If you please

Be 't at her father's.¹⁷

Bra.

I'll not have it so.

Oth. Nor I.

To my unfolding lend a prosperous¹ ear:
And let me find a charter in your voice,
T' assist my simpleness.

Duke. What would you, Desdemona?²

Des. That I did love the Moor to live with him,
My downright violence and storm³ of fortunes
May trumpet to the world: my heart's subdued
Even to the very quality⁴ of my lord:
I saw Othello's visage in his mind;
And to his honours, and his valiant parts,
Did I my soul and fortunes consecrate.
So that, dear lords, if I be left behind,
A moth of peace, and he go to the war,
The rites for which⁵ I love him are bereft me,
And I a heavy interim shall support
By his dear absence. Let me go with him.

Oth. Your voices, lords: 'beseech you, let her will Have a free way.

Vouch with me, heaven, I therefore beg it not,
To please the palate of my appetite;
Nor to comply wi' the young affects of heat,⁷
(In me defunct) and⁸ proper satisfaction;
But to be free and bounteous to her mind:
And heaven defend your counsels,⁹ that you think
I will your serious and great business scant,
When¹⁰ she is with me. No, when light-wing'd toys
Of feather'd Cupid foil¹¹ with wanton dulness
My speculative and active¹² instruments,
That my disports corrupt and taint my business,
Let housewives make a skillet of my helm,
And all indign and base adversities
Make head against my reputation!¹³

Duke. Be it as you shall privately determine,
Either for her stay, or going. Th' affair cries haste,
And speed must answer it: you must hence to-night.

Des. To-night, my lord?¹⁴

Duke. This night.

Oth. With all my heart.

Duke. At nine i' the morning here we'll meet again.
Othello, leave some officer behind,
And he shall our commission bring to you:
With such things else of quality and respect,
As do import you.

Oth. Please your grace, my ancient;
A man he is of honesty, and trust:
To his conveyance I assign my wife,
With what else needful your good grace shall think
To be sent after me.

Duke. Let it be so.—
Good night to every one.—And, noble signior,
[To BRABANTIO.]

If virtue no delighted beauty lack,
Your son-in-law is far more fair than black.

1 Sen. Adieu, brave Moor! use Desdemona well.

Bra. Look to her, Moor, if thou hast eyes¹⁶ to see:
She has deceiv'd her father, and may thee.

[Exeunt DUKE, Senators, Officers, &c.]

Oth. My life upon her faith.—Honest Iago,
My Desdemona must I leave to thee:
I prythee, let thy wife attend on her,
And bring her¹⁸ after in the best advantage.—
Come, Desdemona; I have but an hour
Of love, of worldly matters and direction,
To spend with thee: we must obey the time.

[Exeunt OTHELLO and DESDEMONA.]

Rod. Iago.

Iago. What say'st thou, noble heart?

Rod. What will I do, thinkest thou?

Iago. Why, go to bed, and sleep.

Rod. I will incontinently drown myself.

Iago. Well, if thou dost, I shall never love thee after it. Why, thou silly gentleman!

Rod. It is silliness to live, when to live is a torment and then have we a prescription to die, when death is our physician.

Iago. O villainous! I have looked upon the world for four times seven years, and since I could distinguish betwixt a benefit and an injury, I never found a man that knew how to love himself. Ere I would say, I would drown myself for the love of a Guinea-hen, I would change my humanity with a baboon.

Rod. What should I do? I confess, it is my shame to be so fond: but it is not in my virtue to amend it.

Iago. Virtue? a fig! 't is in ourselves that we are thus, or thus. Our bodies are¹⁷ gardens, to the which our wills are gardeners; so that if we will plant nettles, or sow lettuce; set hyssop, and weed up thyme, supply it with one gender of herbs, or distract it with many; either to have it steril with idleness, or manured with industry; why, the power and corrigible authority of this lies in our wills. If the balance¹⁸ of our lives had not one scale of reason to poise another of sensuality, the blood and baseness of our natures would conduct us to most preposterous conclusions: but we have reason to cool our raging motions, our carnal stings, our unbitted lusts, whereof I take this, that you call—love, to be a seet, or seion.

Rod. It cannot be.

Iago. It is merely a lust of the blood, and a permission of the will. Come, be a man: drown thyself?
drown cats, and blind puppies. I profess¹⁹ me thy friend, and I confess me knit to thy deserving with cables of perdurable toughness; I could never better stead thee than now. Put money in thy purse: follow these wars; defeat thy favour²⁰ with an usurped beard;
I say, put money in thy purse. It cannot be, that Desdemona should long continue her love to the Moor, —put money in thy purse;—nor he his to her: it was a violent commencement, and thou shalt see an answerable sequestration:—put but money in thy purse.—
These Moors are changeable in their wills;—fill thy purse with money: the food that to him now is as luscious as locusts, shall be to him shortly as bitter²¹ as coloquintida. She must change for youth: when she is sated with his body, she will find the error of her choice.—She must have change, she must: therefore, put money in thy purse.—If thou wilt needs damn thyself, do it a more delicate way than drowning.
Make all the money thou canst. If sanctimony and a frail vow, betwixt an erring barbarian and a super-supple²² Venetian, be not too hard for my wits, and all the tribe of hell, thou shalt enjoy her; therefore make money. A pox of drowning thyself! it is clean out of the way: seek thou rather to be hanged in com-passing thy joy, than to be drowned and go without her.

Rod. Will thou be fast to my hopes,²³ if I depend on the issue?

Iago. Thou art sure of me.—Go, make money.—I have told thee often, and I re-tell thee again and again,
I hate the Moor: my cause is hearted; thine hath no less reason. Let us be conjunctive in our revenge against him: if thou canst cuckold him, thou dost

Iago. At my lodging.

Rod. I'll be with thee betimes.

Iago. Go to; farewell. Do you hear, Roderigo?

Rod. What say you?

Iago. No more of drowning, do you hear?

Rod. I am changed. I'll sell all my land.

Iago. Go to; farewell: put money enough in your purse.² [Exit RODERIGO.]

Thus do I ever make my fool my purse;
or I mine own gain'd knowledge should profane,
If I would time expend with such a snipe,
But for my sport and profit. I hate the Moor;
And it is thought abroad that 'twixt my sheets

He has done my office: I know not if 't be true.
Yet I, for mere suspicion in that kind,
Will do as if for surety. He holds me well;
The better shall my purpose work on him.
Cassio's a proper man: let me see now;
To get his place, and to plume⁴ up my will
In double knavery,—How, how?—Let's see:—
After some time, to abuse Othello's ear
That he is too familiar with his wife:
He hath a person, and a smooth dispose,
To be suspected; fram'd to make women false.
The Moor is of a free and open nature,
That thinks men honest, that but seem to be so,
And will as tenderly be led by the nose,
As asses are.—
I have't,—it is engender'd:—hell and night
Must bring this monstrous birth to the world's light.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—A Sea-port Town in Cyprus. A Platform.

Enter MONTANO and Two Gentlemen.

Mon. What from the cape can you discern at sea?

1 Gent. Nothing at all: it is a high-wrought flood;
I cannot, 'twixt the heaven⁵ and the main,
Desery a sail.

Mon. Methinks, the wind hath spoke aloud at land;
A fuller blast ne'er shook our battlements:
If it hath ruffian'd so upon the sea,
What ribs of oak, when⁶ mountains melt on them,
Can hold the mortise? what shall we hear of this?

2 Gent. A segregation of the Turkish fleet:
For do but stand upon the foaming shore,
The chidden billow seems to pelt the clouds,
The wind-shak'd surge, with high and monstrous mane,
Seems to cast water on the burning bear,
And quench the guards of th' ever-fixed pole.
I never did like molestation view
On the enchafed flood.

Mon. If that the Turkish fleet
Be not in shelter'd and embay'd, they are drown'd;
It is impossible to' bear it out.

Enter a Third Gentleman.

3 Gent. News, lads!⁷ our wars are done.
The desperate tempest hath so bang'd the Turks,
That their designation halts: a noble⁸ ship of Venice
Hath seen a grievous wreck and sufferance
On most part of their fleet.

Mon. How! is this true?

3 Gent. The ship is here put in:
A Florentine,⁹ Michael Cassio,
Lieutenant to the warlike Moor, Othello,
Is come on shore: the Moor himself's at sea,
And is in full commission here for Cyprus.

Mon. I am glad on't; 't is a worthy governor.

3 Gent. But this same Cassio, though he speak of comfort,

Touching the Turkish loss, yet he looks sadly,
And prays the Moor be safe; for they were parted
With foul and violent tempest.

Mon. Pray heaven he be;
For I have serv'd him, and the man commands

Like a full soldier. Let's to the sea-side, ho!
As well to see the vessel that's come in,
As to throw out our eyes for brave Othello,¹⁰
Even till we make the main, and th' aerial blue,
An indistinct regard.

3 Gent. Come, let's do so;
For every minute is expectancy
Of more arrival.

Enter Cassio,¹¹ and several Islanders.

Cas. Thanks you, the valiant of the warlike isle,
That so approve the Moor.—O! let the heavens
Give him defence against the elements,
For I have lost him on a dangerous sea.

Mon. Is he well shipp'd?

Cas. His bark is stoutly timber'd, and his pilot
Of very expert and approv'd allowance;
Therefore my hopes, not surfeited to death,
Stand in bold cure.

[Within.] A sail, a sail, a sail!

Enter a Messenger.

Cas. What noise?

Mess. The town is empty; on the brow o' the sea
Stand ranks of people, and they cry, "a sail."

Cas. My hopes do shape him for the governor.

[Guns heard.]

2 Gent. They do discharge their shot of courtesy:
Our friends, at least.

Cas. I pay you, sir, go forth,
And give us truth who 't is arriv'd.

2 Gent. I shall.

[Exit.]

Mon. But, good lieutenant, is your general wiv'd?

Cas. Most fortunately: he hath achiev'd a maid,
That paragons description, and wild fame;
One that excels the quirks of¹² blazoning pens,
And in th' essential vesture of creation,
Does bear all excellency.¹³—How now! who has put in?

Re-enter Second Gentleman.

2 Gent. 'T is one Iago, ancient to the general.

Cas. He has had most favourable and happy speed:
Tempests themselves, high seas, and howling winds,
The gutter'd rocks, and congregated sands,
Traitors ensteep'd to clog the guiltless keel,
As having sense of beauty, do omit

Their mortal natures, letting go safely by
The divine Desdemona.

Mon. What is she?

Cas. She that I spake of, our great captain's captain,
Left in the conduct of the bold Iago;

Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts,
A se'nnight's speed.—Great Jove! Othello guard,
And swell his sail with thine own powerful breath,
That he may bless this bay with his tall ship,
Make love's quick pants in Desdemona's arms,
Give renew'd fire to our extincted spirits,
And bring all Cyprus comfort.—O, behold!

Enter DESDEMONA, EMILIA, IAGO, RODERIGO, and Attendants.

The riches of the ship is come on shore.
Ye men of Cyprus, let her have your knees.—

[They kneel.]

Hail to thee, lady! and the grace of heaven,
Before, behind thee, and on every hand,
Enwheel thee round.

Des. I thank you, valiant Cassio.

What tidings can you tell me of my lord?

Cas. He is not yet arriv'd; nor know I aught
But that he's well, and will be shortly here.

Des. O! but I fear.—How lost you company?

Cas. The great contention of the sea and skies
Parted our fellowship.

[Within.] A sail, a sail!

But, hark! a sail.

[Guns heard.]

2 Gent. They give their greeting to the citadel:
This likewise is a friend.

Cas. See for the news.¹

[Exit Gentleman.]

Good ancient, you are welcome.—Welcome, mistress.—

[To EMILIA.]

Let it not gall your patience, good Iago,

That I extend my manners: 't is my breeding

That gives me this bold show of courtesy. [Kissing her.]

Iago. Sir, would she give you so much of her lips,
As of her tongue she oft bestows on me,
You'd have enough.

Des. Alas! she has no speech.

Iago. In faith,* too much;

I find it still, when I have lust* to sleep:

Marry, before your ladyship, I grant,

She puts her tongue a little in her heart,

And chides with thinking.

Emil. You have little cause to say so.

Iago. Come on, come on; you are pictures out of doors,

Bells in your parlours, wild cats in your kitchens,

Saints in your injuries, devils being offended,

Players in your housewifery, and housewives in your beds.

Des. O, fie upon thee, slanderer!

Iago. Nay, it is true, or else I am a Turk:

You rise to play, and go to bed to work.

Emil. You shall not write my praise.

Iago. No, let me not.

Des. What wouldst thou write of me, if thou shouldst praise me?

Iago. O gentle lady, do not put me to 't,

For I am nothing, if not critical.

Des. Come on; assay.—There's one gone to the harbour?

Cas. Ay, madam.

Des. I am not merry; but I do beguile

The thing I am, by seeming otherwise.—

Come; how wouldst thou praise me?

Iago. I am about it, but, indeed, my invention
Comes from my pate, as birdlime does from frize,
It plucks out brains and all; but my muse labours,
And thus she is deliver'd.

If she be fair and wise,—fairness, and wit,
The one's for use, the other useth it.

Des. Well prais'd!—How, if she be black and witty?

Iago. If she be black, and thereto have a wit,
She'll find a white that shall her blackness fit.²

Des. Worse and worse.

Emil. How, if fair and foolish?

Iago. She never yet was foolish that was fair;
For even her folly helps her to an heir.

Des. These are old fond³ paradoxes, to make fools laugh i' the alehouse. What miserable praise hast thou for her that's foul and foolish?

Iago. There's none so foul, and foolish thereunto,
But does foul pranks which fair and wise ones do.

Des. O heavy ignorance! thou praisest the worst best. But what praise couldst thou bestow on a deserving woman indeed? one that, in the authority of her merit, did justly put on the vouch of very malice itself?

Iago. She that was ever fair, and never proud;

Had tongue at will, and yet was never loud;

Never lack'd gold, and yet went never gay;

Fled from her wish, and yet said,—"now I may;"⁴

She that, being anger'd, her revenge being nigh,

Bade her wrong stay, and her displeasure fly;

She that in wisdom never was so frail,

To change the cod's head for the salmon's tail;

She that could think, and ne'er disclose her mind,

See suitors following, and not look behind;⁵

She was a wight,—if ever such wight were,—

Des. To do what?

Iago. To suckle fools, and chronicle small beer.

Des. O, most lame and impotent conclusion!—Do not learn of him. Emilia, though he be thy husband.—

How say you, Cassio? is he not a most profane and liberal censurer?

Cas. He speaks home, madam; you may relish him more in the soldier, than in the scholar.

[Talks apart with DESD.]

Iago. [Aside.] He takes her by the palm: ay, well said, whisper: with as little a web as this, will I ensnare as great a fly as Cassio. Ay, smile upon her, do; I will gyve thee in thine own courtship. You say true; 't is so, indeed: if such tricks as these strip you out of your lieutenantship, it had been better you had not kissed your three fingers so oft, which now again you are most apt to play the sir in. Very good; well kissed! an excellent courtesy! 't is so indeed. Yet again your fingers to your lips? would, they were cylinder-pipes for your sake.—[A Trumpet heard.] The Moor! I know his trumpet.

Cas. 'T is truly so.

Des. Let's meet him, and receive him.

Cas. Lo, where he comes!

Enter OTHELLO, and Attendants.

Oth. O, my fair warrior!

Des. My dear Othello!

Oth. It gives me wonder great as my content,

To see you here before me. O, my soul's joy!

If after every tempest come such calms.⁶

May the winds blow, till they have waken'd death,

And let the labouring bark climb hills of seas,

Olympus-high, and duck again as low

My soul hath her content so absolute,
That not another comfort like to this
Succeeds in unknown fate.

Des. The heavens forbid,
But that our loves and comforts should increase,
Even as our days do grow!

Oth. Amen to that, sweet powers!—
I cannot speak enough of this content:
It stops me here; it is too much of joy:
And this, and this, the greatest discords be,

[Kissing her.

That e'er our hearts shall make!

Iago. [Aside.] O! you are well tun'd now;
But I'll set down the pegs that makes this music,
As honest as I am.

Oth. Come, let us to the castle.—
News, friends; our wars are done, the Turks are drown'd.

How does my old acquaintance of this isle?—

Honey, you shall be well desir'd in Cyprus,
I have found great love amongst them. O my sweet,
I prattle out of fashion, and I dote
In mine own comforts.—I prythee, good Iago,
Go to the bay, and disembark my coffers.

Bring thou the master to the citadel:

He is a good one, and his worthiness
Does challenge much respect.—Come, Desdemona,
Once more well met at Cyprus.

[Exeunt OTHELLO, DESDEMONA, and Attendants.

Iago. Do thou meet me presently at the harbour.—
Come hither.—If thou be'st valiant—as they say base men, being in love, have then a nobility in their natures more than is native to them,—list me. The lieutenant to-night watches on the court of guard.—First, I must tell thee this:—Desdemona is directly in love with him.

Rod. With him! why, 'tis not possible.

Iago. Lay thy finger—thus, and let thy soul be instructed. Mark me with what violence she first loved the Moor, but for bragging, and telling her fantastical lies; and will she love him still for prating? let not thy discreet heart think it. Her eye must be fed; and what delight shall she have to look on the devil? When the blood is made dull with the act of sport, there should be,—again² to inflame it, and to give satiety a fresh appetite, loveliness in favour, sympathy in years, manners, and beauties: all which the Moor is defective in. Now, for want of these required conveniences, her delicate tenderness will find itself abused, begin to heave the gorge, disrelish and abhor the Moor; very nature will instruct her in it, and compel her to some second choice. Now, sir, this granted, (as it is a most pregnant and unforced position) who stands so eminently in the degree of this fortune, as Cassio does? a knave very voluble: no farther conscionable, than in putting on the more form of civil and humane seeming, for the better compassing of his salt and most hidden loose affection? why, none; why, none:⁴ a subtle slippery knave: a finder out of occasions; that has an eye can stamp and counterfeit advantages, though true advantage never present itself: a devilish knave!
besides, the knave is handsome, young, and hath all those requisites in him, that folly and green minds look after; a pestilent complete knave, and the woman hath found him already.

Rod. I cannot believe that in her: she is full of most blessed condition.

Iago. Blessed fig's end! the wine she drinks is made of grapes: if she had been blessed, she would never have loved the Moor: bless'd pudding!⁵ Didst thou not see her paddle with the palm of his hand? didst not mark that?

Rod. Yes, that I did; but that was but courtesy.

Iago. Lechery, by this hand; an index,⁶ and obscure prologue to the history of lust and foul thoughts.
They met so near with their lips, that their breaths embraced together. Villainous thoughts, Roderigo!
when these mutualities so marshal the way, hard at hand comes the master and main exercise, the incorporate conclusion. Pish! But, sir, be you ruled by me: I have brought you from Venice. Watch you to-night; for the command, I'll lay 't upon you. Cassio knows you not:—I'll not be far from you: do you find some occasion to anger Cassio, either by speaking too loud, or tainting his discipline; or from what other cause you please, which the time shall more favourably minister.

Rod. Well.

Iago. Sir, he is rash, and very sudden in choler, and, happily, with his truncheon may strike at you: provoke him, that he may; for even out of that will I cause these of Cyprus to mutiny, whose qualification shall come into no true taste again, but by the displanting of Cassio. So shall you have a shorter journey to your desires, by the means I shall then have to prefer them; and the impediment most profitably removed, without the which there were no expectation of our prosperity.

Rod. I will do this, if I can bring it to any opportunity.

Iago. I warrant thee. Meet me by and by at the citadel: I must fetch his necessities ashore. Farewell.

Rod. Adieu.

[Exit

Iago. That Cassio loves her, I do well believe it,
That she loves him, 'tis apt, and of great credit:
The Moor—howbeit that I endure him not,—

Is of a constant, loving, noble nature,
And, I dare think, he'll prove to Desdemona
A most dear husband. Now, I do love her too,
Not out of absolute lust, (though, peradventure,
I stand accountant for as great a sin)

But partly led to diet my revenge.

For that I do suspect the lustful Moor

Hath leap'd into my seat; the thought whereof

Doth like a poisonous mineral gnaw my inwards,

And nothing can, or shall, content my soul,

Till I am even'd⁸ with him, wife for wife;

Or, failing so, yet that I put the Moor

At least into a jealousy so strong

That judgment cannot cure. Which thing to do,—

If this poor trash⁹ of Venice, whom I trash,¹⁰

For his quick hunting, stand the putting on,—

I'll have our Michael Cassio on the hip;

Abuse him to the Moor in the rank¹¹ garb,—

For I fear Cassio with my night-cap too;

Make the Moor thank me, love me, and reward me,

For making him egregiously an ass.

And practising upon his peace and quiet,

Even to madness. 'T is here, but yet confus'd:

Knavery's plain face is never seen, till us'd.

[Exit.

SCENE II. A Street.

Enter a Herald, with a Proclamation; People following

Hec. It is Othello's pleasure, our noble and valiant general, that upon certain tidings now arrived, importing the mere perdition of the Turkish fleet, every man put himself into triumph; some to dance, some to

All offices are open: and there is full liberty of feasting.² from this present hour of five, till the bell hath told eleven. Heaven bless the isle of Cyprus, and our noble general, Othello!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. A Hall in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO, DESDEMONA, CASSIO, and Attendants.

Oth. Good Michael, look you to the guard to-night: Let's teach ourselves that honourable stop, Not to out-sport discretion.

Cas. Iago hath direction what to do; But, notwithstanding, with my personal eye Will I look to't.

Oth. Iago is most honest. Michael, good night: to-morrow, with your earliest, Let me have speech with you. Come, my dear love: The purchase made, the fruits are to ensue;

[To DESDEMONA.]

That profit's yet to come 'twixt me and you.— Good night.

[Exeunt OTHELLO, DES., attended.]

Enter IAGO.

Cas. Welcome, Iago: we must to the watch.

Iago. Not this hour, lieutenant; 't is not yet ten o'clock. Our general east us thus early for the love of his Desdemona, whom let us not therefore blame: he hath not yet made wanton the night with her, and she is sport for Jove.

Cas. She's a most exquisite lady.

Iago. And I'll warrant her, full of game.

Cas. Indeed, she's a most fresh and delicate creature.

Iago. What an eye she has! methinks it sounds a parley of³ provocation.

Cas. An inviting eye; and yet methinks right modest.

Iago. And, when she speaks, is it not an alarum to love?

Cas. She is, indeed, perfection.

Iago. Well, happiness to their sheets! Come, lieutenant, I have a stoop of wine; and here without are a brace of Cyprus gallants, that would fain have a measure to the health of the black Othello.

Cas. Not to-night, good Iago. I have very poor and unhappy brains for drinking: I could well wish courtesy would invent some other custom of entertainment.

Iago. O! they are our friends; but one cup: I'll drink for you.

Cas. I have drunk but one cup to-night, and that was craftily qualified too, and behold, what innovation it makes here. I am unfortunate in the infirmity, and dare not task my weakness with any more.

Iago. What, man! 't is a night of revels; the gallants desire it.

Cas. Where are they?

Iago. Here at the door; I pray you, call them in.

Cas. I'll do't, but it dislikes me. [Exit CASSIO.]

Iago. If I can fasten but one cup upon him, With that which he hath drunk to-night already, He'll be as full of quarrel and offence

As my young mistress' dog. Now, my sick fool, Roderigo,

Whom love has turn'd almost the wrong side outward, To Desdemona hath to-night carous'd Potations pottle deep; and he's to watch.

Three elves⁴ of Cyprus,—noble, swelling spirits, That hold their honours in a wary distance, The very elements of this warlike isle,— Have I to-night fluster'd with flowing cups. And they watch too. Now, 'mongst this flock of drunkards,

Am I to put our Cassio in some action That may offend the isle.—But here they come. If consequence do but approve my dream.

My boat sails freely, both with wind and stream.

Re-enter CASSIO, with him MONTANO, and Gentlemen.

Cas. 'Fore heaven, they have given me a rouse⁵ already.

Mon. Good faith, a little one; not past a pint, as I am a soldier.

Iago. Some wine, ho!

And let me the canakin clink, clink; [Sings

And let me the canakin clink;

A soldier's a man;

A life's⁶ but a span;

Why then let a soldier drink.

Some wine, boys! [Wine brought.]

Cas. 'Fore heaven, an excellent song.

Iago. I learned it in England, where (indeed) they are most potent in potting; your Dane, your German, and your swag-bellied Hollander,—Drink, ho!—are nothing to your Englishman.

Cas. Is your Englishman so exquisite⁷ in his drinking?

Iago. Why, he drinks you, with facility, your Dane dead drunk; he sweats not to overthrow your Almain; he gives your Hollander a vomit, ere the next pottle can be filled.

Cas. To the health of our general.

Mon. I am for it, lieutenant; and I'll do you justice

Iago. O sweet England!

King Stephen was a worthy peer,⁸

His breeches cost him but a crown;

He held them sixpence all too dear;

With that he call'd the tailor—lowen.

He was a wight of high renown.

And thou art but of low degree;

'T is pride that pulls the country down,

Then take thine auld cloak about thee.

Some wine, ho!

Cas. Why, this is a more exquisite song than the other.

Iago. Will you hear it again?

Cas. No; for I hold him to be unworthy of his place that does those things.—Well, heaven's above all; and there be souls must be saved, and there be souls must not be saved.

Iago. It is true, good lieutenant.

Cas. For mine own part,—no offence to the general nor any man of quality,—I hope to be saved.

Iago. And so do I too, lieutenant.

Cas. Ay; but, by your leave, not before me. The lieutenant is to be saved before the ancient—Let's have no more of this; let's to our affairs.—Forgive us our sins!⁹—Gentlemen, let's look to our business. Do not think, gentlemen, I am drunk: this is my ancient—this is my right hand, and this is my left hand.—I am not drunk now; I can stand well enough, and speak well enough.

All. Excellent well.

Cas. Why, very well, then; you must not think, then, that I am drunk. [Exit.]

Mon. To the platform, masters, come. let's set the watch.

Iago. You see this fellow, that is gone before :
He is a soldier, fit to stand by Cæsar
And give direction ; and do but see his vice.
'T is to his virtue a just equinox,
The one as long as th' other : 't is pity of him.
I fear, the trust Othello puts in him,
On some odd time of his infirmity,
Will shake this island.

Mon. But is he often thus ?

Iago. 'T is evermore the prologue to his sleep :
He'll watch the horologe a double set,
If drink rock not his cradle.

Mon. It were well,
The general were put in mind of it.
Perhaps, he sees it not ; or his good nature
Prizes¹ the virtue that appears in Cassio,
And looks not on his evils. Is not this true ?

Enter RODERIGO.

Iago. How now, Roderigo ? [Aside to him.
I pray you, after the lieutenant ; go. [Exit RODERIGO.

Mon. And 't is great pity, that the noble Moor
Should hazard such a place as his own second,
With one of an ingraft infirmity :
It were an honest action to say
So to the Moor.

Iago. Not I, for this fair island :
'I do love Cassio well, and would do much
To cure him of this evil. But hark ! what noise ?
[Cry within,—Help ! Help !

Re-enter CASSIO, pursuing RODERIGO.

Cas. You rogue ! you rascal !

Mon. What 's the matter, lieutenant ?

Cas. A knave !—teach me my duty ?
I'll beat the knave into a wicker² bottle.

Rod. Beat me !

Cas. Dost thou prate, rogue ? [Striking RODERIGO.

Mon. Nay, good lieutenant ; [Staying him.
I pray you, sir, hold your hand.

Cas. Let me go, sir,
Or I'll knock you o'er the mazzard.

Mon. Come, come ; you 're drunk.

Cas. Drunk ! [They fight.

Iago. Away, I say ! [Aside to Rod.] go out, and cry a mutiny. [Exit Ron.

Nay, good lieutenant,—alas, gentlemen !—
Help, ho !—Lieutenant,—sir,—Montano,—sir ;—
Help, masters !—Here 's a goodly watch, indeed !
[Bell rings.

Who 's that that rings the bell ?—Diablo, ho !
The town will rise : God 's will ! lieutenant, hold !
You will be sham'd for ever.

Enter OTHELLO, and Attendants.

Oth. What is the matter here ?

Mon. 'Zounds ! I bleed still : I am hurt to the death.
[He faints.

Oth. Hold, for your lives !

Iago. Hold, hold, lieutenant !—sir, Montano,—gentlemen !—

Have you forgot all sense of place and duty ?
Hold, hold ! the general speaks to you : hold, for shame !

Oth. Why, how now, ho ! from whence ariseth this ?
Are we turn'd Turks, and to ourselves do that,
Which heaven hath forbid the Ottomites ?

For Christian shame, put by this barbarous brawl :
He that stirs next to carve for his own rage,
Holds his soul light : he dies upon his motion.—
Silence that dreadful bell ! it frights the isle
From her propriety.—What is the matter, masters ?—
Honest Iago, that look'st dead with grieving,

Speak, who began this ? on thy love, I charge thee.

Iago. I do not know :—friends all but now, even now
In quarter, and in terms like bride and groom
Divesting them for bed ; and then, but now,
(As if some planet had unwitting them)
Swords out, and tilting one at other's breast,
In opposition bloody. I cannot speak
Any beginning to this peevish odds :
And would in action glorious I had lost
Those legs, that brought me to a part of it.

Oth. How came 't it, Michael, you were thus forgot.

Cas. I pray you, pardon me ; I cannot speak.

Oth. Worthy Montano, you were wont be civil,
The gravity and stillness of your youth
The world hath noted, and your name is great
In mouths of wisest censure : what 's the matter,
That you unlace your reputation thus,
And spend your rich opinion, for the name
Of a night-brawler ? give me answer to it.

Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger :
Your officer, Iago, can inform you.

While I spare speech, which something now offends me.
Of all that I do know ; nor know I aught
By me that 's said or done amiss this night,
Unless self-charity be sometime a vice,
And to defend ourselves it be a sin,
When violence assails us.

Oth. Now, by heaven,
My blood begins my safer guides to rule ;
And passion, having my best judgment quelled,*
Assays to lead the way. If I once stir,
Or do but lift this arm, the best of you
Shall sink in my rebuke. Give me to know
How this foul rout began, who set it on ;
And he that is approv'd in this offence,
Though he had twinn'd with me, both at a birth,
Shall lose me.—What ! in a town of war,
Yet wild, the people's hearts brimful of fear,
To manage private and domestic quarrel,
In night, and on the court of guard and safety ?
'T is monstrous.—Iago, who began it ?

Mon. If partially affin'd, or leagu'd in office,
Thou dost deliver more or less than truth,
Thou art no soldier.

Iago. Touch me not so near.
I had rather have this tongue cut from my mouth,
Than it should do offence to Michael Cassio ;
Yet, I persuade myself, to speak the truth
Shall nothing wrong him.—Thus it is, general.
Montano and myself being in speech,
There comes a fellow crying out for help,
And Cassio following him with determin'd sword
To execute upon him. Sir, this gentleman
Steps in to Cassio, and entreats his pause :
Myself the crying fellow did pursue,
Lest by his clamour (as it so fell out)
The town might fall in fright : he, swift of foot,
Outran my purpose : and I return'd, the rather
For that I heard the clink and fall of swords,
And Cassio high in oath, which, till to-night,
I ne'er might say before. When I came back,
(For this was brief) I found them close together
At blow and thrust, even as again they were,
When you yourself did part them.

More of this matter can I not report :—
But men are men ; the best sometimes forget :—
Though Cassio did some little wrong to him,
As men in rage strike those that wish them best,
Yet, surely, Cassio, I believe, received

* collid : in f. a.

From him that fled some strange indignity,
Which patience could not pass.

Oth. I know, Iago,
Thy honesty and love doth mince this matter;
Making it light to Cassio.—Cassio, I love thee;
But never more be officer of mine.—

Enter Desdemona, attended.

Look, if my gentle love be not rais'd up!—
I'll make thee an example.

Des. What's the matter?¹
Oth. All's well now, sweeting; come away to bed.—
Sir, for your hurts, myself will be your surgeon.—
Lead him off.

[MONTANO is led off.
Iago, look with care about the town,
And silence those whom this vile brawl distracted.—
Come, Desdemona; 't is the soldier's life,
To have their balmy slumbers wak'd with strife.

[Exeunt all but Iago and Cassio.

Iago. What, are you hurt, lieutenant?

Cas. Ay, past all surgery.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!

Cas. Reputation, reputation! O! I have lost my reputation. I have lost the immortal part of myself, and what remains is bestial.—My reputation,
Iago, my reputation!

Iago. As I am an honest man, I thought you had received some bodily wound; there is more offence² in that, than in reputation. Reputation is an idle and most false imposition; oft got without merit, and lost without deserving: you have lost no reputation at all, unless you repute yourself such a loser. What, man!
there are ways to recover the general again: you are but now cast in his mood, a punishment more in policy than in malice; even so as one would beat his offence-less dog, to affright an imperious lion. Sue to him again, and he's yours.

Cas. I will rather sue to be despised, than to deceive so good a commander, with so light,³ so drunken, and so indiscreet an officer. Drunk?⁴ and speak parrot?
and squabble? swagger? swear? and discourse fustian with one's own shadow?⁵ O thou invisible spirit of wine! if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee—devil.

Iago. What was he that you follow'd with your sword? What had he done to you?

Cas. I know not.

Iago. Is't possible?

Cas. I remember a mass of things, but nothing distinctly; a quarrel, but nothing wherefore.—O God!
that men should put an enemy in their mouths, to steal away their brains! that we should, with joy, revel, pleasure,⁶ and applause, transform ourselves into beasts!

Iago. Why, but you are now well enough: how came you thus recovered.

Cas. It hath pleased the devil, drunkenness, to give place to the devil, wrath: one unperfectness shows me another, to make me frankly despise myself.

Iago. Come, you are too severe a moraler. As the time, the place, and the condition of this country stands, it could heartily wish this had not befallen; but, since it is as it is, mend it for your own good.

Cas. I will ask him for my place again: he shall tell me, I am a drunkard. Had I as many mouths as Hydra, such an answer would stop them all. To be now a sensible man by and by a fool, and presently a beast!
O strange!—Every inordinate cup is unblessed, and the ingredient is a devil.

Iago. Come, come; good wine is a good familiar creature, if it be well used: exclaim no more against it.
And, good lieutenant, I think, you think I love you.

Cas. I have well approved it, sir.—I drunk!

Iago. You, or any man living, may be drunk at some time, man. I'll tell you what you shall do. Our general's wife is now the general:—I may say so in this respect, for that he hath devoted and given up himself to the contemplation, mark, and devotion⁷ of her parts and graces:—confess yourself freely to her; importune her; she'll help to put you in your place again. She is of so free, so kind, so apt, so blessed a disposition, that she holds it a vice in her goodness, not to do more than she is requested. This broken joint⁸ between you and her husband entreat her to splinter, and my fortunes against any lay worth naming, this crack of your love shall grow stronger than it was before.

Cas. You advise me well.

Iago. I protest, in the sincerity of love, and honest kindness,

Cas. I think it freely; and, betimes in the morning,
I will beseech the virtuous Desdemona to undertake for me. I am desperate of my fortunes, if they check me here.

Iago. You are in the right. Good night, lieutenant;
I must to the watch.

Cas. Good night, honest Iago. [Exit Cassio.

Iago. And what's he, then, that says I play the villain.

When this advice is free I give, and honest,
Probable⁹ to thinking, and, indeed, the course
To win the Moor again? For 't is most easy
The inclining Desdemona to subdue
In any honest suit: she's fram'd as fruitful
As the free elements. And, then, for her
To win the Moor,—were't to renounce his baptism,
All seals and symbols of redeemed sin.—
His soul is so enfetter'd to her love,
That she may make, unmake, do what she list,
Even as her appetite shall play the god
With his weak function. How am I, then, a villain.
To counsel Cassio to this parallel course,
Directly to his good?—Divinity of hell!
When devils will their blackest sins put on,
They do suggest at first with heavenly shows,
As I do now; for whiles this honest fool
Plies Desdemona to repair his fortunes,
And she for him pleads strongly to the Moor,
I'll pour this pestilence into his ear.—
That she repeats¹⁰ him for her body's lust:
And, by how much she strives to do him good,
She shall undo her credit with the Moor:
So will I turn her virtue into pitch.
And out of her own goodness make the net,
That shall enmesh them all.—How now, Roderigo?

Enter Roderigo, angrily.¹⁰

Rod. I do follow here in the chase, not like a hound that hunts, but one that fills up the cry. My money is almost spent: I have been to-night exceedingly well cuckolded; and, I think, the issue will be—I shall have so much experience for my pains, and so with no money at all, and a little more wit, return again to Venice.

Iago. How poor are they, that have not patience!
What wound did ever heal, but by degrees?
Thou know'st, we work by wit, and not by witchcraft;
And wit depends on dilatory time.

Does't not go well? Cassio hath beaten thee,
And thou by that small hurt hast cashier'd Cassio.
Though other things grow fair against the sun,
Yet fruits that blossom first will first be ripe :
Content thyself a while.—By the mass, 't is morning ;
Pleasure and action make the hours seem short.
Retire thee ; go where thou art billeted :
Away, I say ; thou shalt know more hereafter :

Nay, get thee gone. [Exit Rod.] Two things are to be done.
My wife must move for Cassio to her mistress.
I'll set her on :
Myself, the while, to draw the Moor apart,
And bring him jump where he may Cassio find
Soliciting his wife.—Ay, that's the way :
Dull not device by coldness and delay. [Exit]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Before the Castle.

Enter Cassio, and some Musicians.

Cas. Masters, play here, I will content your pains :
Something that's brief ; and bid good-morrow to the general. [Music.]

Enter Clown.

Clo. Why, masters, have your instruments been in Naples, that they squeak¹ i' the nose thus ?

1 Mus. How, sir, how ?

Clo. Are these, I pray you, call'd² wind instruments ?

1 Mus. Ay, marry, are they, sir.

Clo. O ! thereby hangs a tail.

1 Mus. Whereby hangs a tale, sir ?

Clo. Marry, sir, by many a wind instrument that I know. But, masters, here's money for you ; and the general so likes your music, that he desires you, for love's sake,³ to make no more noise with it.

1 Mus. Well, sir, we will not.

Clo. If you have any music that may not be heard, to't again ; but, as they say, to hear music the general
does not greatly care.

1 Mus. We have none such, sir.

Clo. Then put up your pipes in your bag, for I'll away.

Go ; vanish into air ; away ! [Exeunt Musicians.]

Cas. Dost thou hear, mine honest friend ?

Clo. No, I hear not your honest friend ; I hear you.

Cas. Prythee, keep up thy quilllets. There's a poor piece of gold for thee. If the gentlewoman that attends the general's wife be stirring, tell her there's one Cassio entreats her a little favour of speech : wilt thou do this ?

Clo. She is stirring, sir ; if she will stir hither, I shall seem so⁴ to notify her. [Exit.]

Enter Iago.

Cas. Do, good my friend,⁵—In happy time, Iago.

Iago. You have not been a-bed, then ?

Cas. Why, no ; the day had broke
Before we parted. I have made bold, Iago,
To send in to your wife : my suit to her
Is, that she will to virtuous Desdemona
Procure me some access.

Iago. I'll send her to you presently ;
And I'll devise a mean to draw the Moor
Out of the way, that your converse and business
May be more free. [Exit.]

Cas. I humbly thank you for't. I never knew
A Florentine more kind and honest.

Enter Emilia.

Emil. Good-morrow, good lieutenant. I am sorry
For your displeasure ; but all will soon⁶ be well.
The general and his wife are talking of it,
And she speaks for you stoutly : the Moor replies,

That he you hurt is of great fame in Cyprus,
And great affinity, and that in wholesome wisdom
He might not but refuse you ; but, he protests, he loves
you,

And needs no other suitor but his likings,
To take the safest occasion by the front,⁷
To bring you in again.

Cas. Yes, I beseech you,—
If you think fit, or that it may be done,—
Give me advantage of some brief discourse
With Desdemona alone.

Emil. Pray you, come in :
I will bestow you where you shall have time
To speak your bosom freely.

Cas. I am much bound to you.⁸ [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—A Room in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO, IAGO, and Gentlemen

Oth. These letters give, Iago, to the pilot,
And by him do my duties to the state.⁹
That done, I will be walking on the works ;
Repair there to me.

Iago. Well, my good lord ; I'll do't.

Oth. This fortification, gentlemen,—shall we see't ?

Gent. We wait upon your lordship. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Before the Castle.

Enter DESDEMONA, CASSIO, and EMILIA.

Des. Be thou assur'd, good Cassio, I will do
All my abilities in thy behalf.

Emil. Good madam, do : I know¹⁰ it grieves my husband,
As if the case¹¹ were his.

Des. O ! that's an honest fellow.—Do not doubt,
Cassio,

But I will have my lord and you again
As friendly as you were.

Cas. Bounteous madam,
Whatever shall become of Michael Cassio,
He's never any thing but your true servant.

Des. O, sir ! I thank you. You do love my lord ;
You have known him long, and be you well assur'd,
He shall in strangeness stand no farther off
Than in a politic distance.

Cas. Ay, but, lady,
That policy may either last so long,

Or feed upon such nice and waterish diet,
Or breed itself so out of circumstance,
That, I being absent, and my place supplied,
My general will forget my love and service.

Des. Do not doubt that : before Emilia here,
I give thee warrant of thy place. Assure thee.
If I do vow a friendship, I'll perform it
To the last article : my lord shall never rest ;

¹ speak : in f. e. ² Not in folio. ³ of all loves : in quarto, 1622. ⁴ This word is not in f. e. ⁵ These four words are not in folio. ⁶ sure :

I'll watch him tame, and talk him out of patience;
His bed shall seem a school, his board a shrift;
I'll intermingle every thing he does
With Cassio's suit. Therefore, be merry, Cassio;
For thy solicitor shall rather die,
Than give thy cause away.

Enter OTHELLO and IAGO, at a distance.

Emil. Madam, here comes my lord.

Cas. Madam, I'll take my leave.

Des. Why, stay, and hear me speak.

Cas. Madam, not now: I am very ill at ease;

Unfit for mine own purpose.

Des. Well, do your discretion.

[Exit Cassio.]

Iago. Ha! I like not that.

Oth. What dost thou say?

Iago. Nothing, my lord: or if—I know not what.

Oth. Was not that Cassio parted from my wife?

Iago. Cassio, my lord? No, sure, I cannot think it.
That he would steal¹ away so guilty-like,
Seeing you coming.

Oth. I do believe 't was he.

Des. How, now, my lord!

I have been talking with a suitor here,
A man that languishes in your displeasure.

Oth. Who is 't you mean?

Des. Why, your lieutenant, Cassio. Good, my lord.

If I have any grace, or power to move you,
His present reconciliation take;

For if he be not one that truly loves you,
That errs in ignorance, and not in cunning,
I have no judgment in an honest face.

I prythee, call him back.

Oth. Went he hence now?

Des. Ay, sooth; so humbled,

That he hath left part of his grief with me,
To² suffer with him. Good love, call him back.

Oth. Not now, sweet Desdemona; some other time.

Des. But shall 't be shortly?

Oth. The sooner, sweet, for you.

Des. Shall 't be to-night at supper?

Oth. No, not to-night.

Des. To-morrow dinner then?

Oth. I shall not dine at home:

I meet the captains at the citadel.

Des. Why then, to-morrow night; or Tuesday morn;

On Tuesday noon, or night; on Wednesday morn:

I prythee, name the time, but let it not Exceed three days: in faith, he's penitent;

And yet his trespass, in our common reason,

(Save that they say, the wars must make examples

Out of our³ best) is not almost a fault

T' incur a private check. When shall he come?

Tell me, Othello: I wonder in my soul.

What you could ask me that I should deny,

Or stand so mammering⁴ on. What! Michael Cassio,

That came a wooing with you, and so many a time,

When I have spoke of you dispraisingly,

Hath ta'en your part, to have so much to do

To bring him in! Trust me,⁵ I could do much.—

Oth. Prythee, no more: let him come when he will,

I will deny thee nothing.

Des. Why, this is not a boon;

'T is as I should entreat you wear your gloves,

Or feed on nourishing dishes, or keep you warm,

Or sue to you to do a peculiar profit

To your own person: nay, when I have a suit

Wherein I mean to touch your love indeed,

It shall be full of poize and difficult weight,⁶
And fearful to be granted.

Oth. I will deny thee nothing.

Whereon, I do beseech thee, grant me this,

To leave me but a little to myself.

Des. Shall I deny you? no. Farewell, my lord.

Oth. Farewell, my Desdemona: I'll come to thee straight.

Des. Emilia, come.—Be it as your fancies teach you;

Whate'er you be, I am obedient. [Exit with EMILIA.]

Oth. Excellent wretch! Perdition catch my soul,

But I do love thee, and when I love thee not,

Chaos is come again.

Iago. My noble lord,—

Oth. What dost thou say, Iago?

Iago. Did Michael Cassio, when you woo'd my lady,

Know of your love?

Oth. He did, from first to last: why dost thou ask?

Iago. But for a satisfaction of my thought;

No farther harm.

Oth. Why of thy thought, Iago?

Iago. I did not think, he had been acquainted with it.

Oth. O, yes; and went between us very oft.

Iago. Indeed?

Oth. Indeed! ay, indeed:—discern'st thou aught in that?

Is he not honest?

Iago. Honest, my lord?

Oth. Honest? ay, honest.

Iago. My lord, for aught I know.

Oth. What dost thou think?

Iago. Think, my lord?

Oth. Think, my lord!

By heaven, he echoes⁷ me,

As if there were some monster in his thought

Too hideous to be shown.—Thou dost mean something.

I heard thee say but now,—thou lik'd'st not that,

When Cassio left my wife: what didst not like?

And, when I told thee, he was of my counsel

In my whole course of wooing, thou criest, "Indeed!"

And didst contract and purse thy brow together,

As if thou then hadst shut up in thy brain

Some horrible conceit.⁸ If thou dost love me,

Show me thy thought.

Iago. My lord, you know I love you.

Oth. I think, thou dost;

And,—for I know thou art full of love and honesty.

And weigh'st thy words before thou giv'st them breath,—

Therefore, these stops of thine fright me the more;

For such things, in a false disloyal knave,

Are tricks of custom: but in a man that's just,

They are close delations,⁹ working from the heart,

That passion cannot rule.

Iago. For Michael Cassio.

I dare be sworn,¹⁰ I think that he is honest.

Oth. I think so too.

Iago. Men should be what they seem

Or, those that be not, would they might seem none!

Oth. Certain, men should be what they seem.

Iago. Why, then, I think Cassio's an honest man.

Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this.

I pray thee, speak to me as to thy thinkings,

As thou dost ruminate; and give thy worst of thoughts

The worst of words.

Iago. Good my lord, pardon me:

Though I am bound to every act of duty,

Utter my thoughts? Why, say, they are vile and false,—

As where's that palace, whereinto foul things
Sometimes intrude not? who has a breast so pure,
But sometimes uncleanly apprehensions
Keep leets,¹ and law-days, and in session sit
With meditations lawful?

Oth. Thou dost conspire against thy friend, Iago,
If thou but think'st him wrong'd, and mak'st his ear
A stranger to thy thoughts.

Iago. I do beseech you,—
Though I, perchance, am vicious in my guess,
(As, I confess, it is my nature's plague
To spy into abuses, and oft² my jealousy
Shapes faults that are not)—that your wisdom yet,³
From one that so imperfectly conceits,
Would take no notice; nor build yourself a trouble
Out of his scattering and unsure observance.
It were not for your quiet, nor your good,
Nor for my manhood,⁴ honesty, or⁵ wisdom,
To let you know my thoughts.

Oth. What dost thou mean?
Iago. Good name, in man, and woman, dear my lord,
Is the immediate jewel of their souls:
Who steals my purse, steals trash; 't is something,
nothing;

'T was mine, 't is his, and has been slave to thousands;
But he, that filches from me my good name,
Robs me of that, which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed.

Oth. By heaven, I'll know thy thoughts.
Iago. You cannot, if my heart were in your hand;
Nor shall not, whilst 't is in my custody.

Oth. Ha!
Iago. O! beware, my lord, of jealousy;
It is the green-eyed monster, which doth make⁶
The meat it feeds on: that cuckold lives in bliss,
Who, certain of his fate, loves not his wronger;
But, O! what damned minutes tells he o'er,
Who dotes, yet doubts; suspects, yet fondly⁷ loves!

Oth. O misery!
Iago. Poor and content is rich, and rich enough;
But riches fineless is as poor as winter,
To him that ever fears he shall be poor.—
Good heaven, the souls of all my tribe defend
From jealousy!

Oth. Why? why is this?
Think'st thou, I'd make a life of jealousy,
To follow still the changes of the moon
With fresh suspicions? No: to be once in doubt,
Is once⁸ to be resolv'd. Exchange me for a goat,
When I shall turn the business of my soul
To such exsufflicate and blown surmises,
Matching thy inference. 'T is not to make me jealous,
To say—my wife is fair, feeds well, loves company,
Is free of speech, sings, plays, and dances well;⁹
From virtue is, these are more virtuous;
Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw
The smallest fear, or doubt of her revolt:
For she had eyes, and chose me: no, Iago;
I'll see, before I doubt; when I doubt, prove;
And, on the proof, there is no more but this,
Away at once with love, or jealousy.

Iago. I am glad it is¹⁰ for now I shall have reason
To show the love and duty that I bear you
With franker spirit: therefore, as I am bound,

Receive it from me. I speak not yet of proof.
Look to your wife; observe her well with Cassio:
Wear your eye—thus, not jealous, nor secure:
I would not have your free and noble nature,
Out of self-bounty, be abus'd; look to 't.
I know our country disposition well:
In Venice they do let heaven see the pranks
They dare not show their husbands; their best conscience

Is, not to leave 't undone, but keep 't unknown.

Oth. Dost thou say so?

Iago. She did deceive her father, marrying you,
And, when she seem'd to shake, and fear your looks,
She lov'd them most.

Oth. And so she did.

Iago. Why, go to, then;
She that, so young, could give out such a secking,
To seal her father's eyes up, close as oak,—
He thought, 't was witchcraft.—But I am much to blame;

I humbly do beseech you of your pardon,
For too much loving you.

Oth. I am bound to thee for ever.

Iago. I see, this hath a little dash'd your spirits.

Oth. Not a jot, not a jot.

Iago. Trust me, I fear it has.

I hope, you will consider what is spoke
Comes from my love.—But, I do see you are mov'd:—
I am to pray you, not to strain my speech
To grosser issues, nor to larger reach,
Than to suspicion.

Oth. I will not.

Iago. Should you do so, my lord,
My speech should fall into such vile success,
As my thoughts aim not at.¹¹ Cassio's my worthy¹² friend.

My lord, I see you are mov'd.

Oth. No, not much mov'd.—
I do not think but Desdemona's honest.

Iago. Long live she so; and long live you to think so

Oth. And yet, how nature erring from itself,

Iago. A v. there's the point:—as,—to be bold with
you,—

Not to affect many proposed matches,
Of her own elime, complexion, and degree,
Whereto, we see, in all things nature tends.
Foh! one may smell in such a will most rank,
Foul disproportion, thoughts unnatural.—
But pardon me; I do not in suspicion¹³
Distinctly speak of her, though I may fear,
Her will, recoiling to her better judgment,
May fall to match you with her country forms,
And happily repent.

Oth. Farewell, farewell.

If more thou dost perceive, let me know more;

Set on thy wife to observe. Leave me, Iago.

Oth. This fellow's of exceeding honesty,
And knows all qualities with a learned spirit
Of human dealings: if I do prove her haggard,¹
Though that her jesses² were my dear heart-strings,
I'd whistle her off, and let her down the wind.³
To prey at fortune. Haply, for I am black.
And have not those soft parts of conversation
That chamberers have; or, for I am declin'd
Into the vale of years;—yet that's not much
She's gone; I am abus'd; and my relief
Must be to loath her. O, curse of marriage!
That we can call these delicate creatures ours,
And not their appetites. I had rather be a toad,
And live upon the vapour of a dungeon,
Than keep a corner in the thing I love
For others' uses. Yet, 't is the plague of great ones;
Prerogativ'd are they less than the base:
'T is destiny unshunnable, like death:
Even then this forked plague is fated to us,
When we do quicken. Desdemona⁴ comes.

Enter DESDEMONA and EMILIA.

If she be false, O! then heaven mocks itself.⁵—
I'll not believe it.

Des. How now, my dear Othello!

Your dinner and the generous islanders,

By you invited, do attend your presence.

Oth. I am to blame.

Des. Why is your speech so faint?⁶ are you not well?

Oth. I have a pain upon my forehead here.

Des. Faith, that's with watching; 't will away again:
Let me but bind it hard, within this hour
It will be well. [Offers to bind his Head.]

Oth. Your napkin is too little; [Lets fall her Napkin.]
Let it alone. Come, I'll go in with you.

Des. I am very sorry that you are not well.

[Exit Oth. and Des.]

Emil. I am glad I have found this napkin.
This was her first remembrance from the Moor:
My wayward husband hath a hundred times
Wood'd me to steal it; but she so loves the token,
(For he conjur'd her she should ever keep it)
That she reserves it evermore about her.
To kiss, and talk to. I'll have the work ta'en out.⁷
And give 't Iago: what he will do with it,
Heaven knows, not I;
nothing, but to please his fantasy.⁸

Enter Iago.

Iago. How now! what do you here alone?

Emil. Do not you chide, I have a thing for you.

Iago. A thing for me?—it is a common thing.

Emil. Ha?

Iago. To have a foolish wife.

Emil. O, is that all? What will you give me now or that same handkerchief?

Iago. What handkerchief?

Emil. What handkerchief!

Why, that the Moor first gave to Desdemona;

That which so often you did bid me steal.

Iago. Hast stolen it from her?

Emil. No, 'faith: she let it drop by negligence,
And, to th' advantage, I, being here, took 't up.

Look, here it is.

Iago. A good wench: give it me.

Emil. What will you do with 't, that you have been so earnest

To have me filch it?

Iago. Why, what's that to you? [Snatching it]

Emil. If it be not some purpose of import,
Give 't me again: poor lady! she'll run mad,
When she shall lack it.

Iago. Be not acknowledg'd 't; I have use for it.
Go: leave me.

[Exit EMILIA.]

I will in Cassio's lodging lose this napkin.

And let him find it: trifles, light as air,
Are to the jealous confirmations strong
As proofs of holy writ. This may do something.
The Moor already changes with my poison:⁹
Dangerous conceits are in their natures poisons,
Which at the first are scarce found to distaste:
But with a little act upon the blood.

Burn like the mines of sulphur.—I did say so:—

Enter OTHELLO.

Look, where he comes! Not poppy, nor mandragora,
Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world,

Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep,

Which thou ow'st yesterday.

Oth. Ha! ha! false to me? to me?

Iago. Why, how now, general! no more of that.

Oth. Avaunt! be gone! thou hast set me on the rack.—

I swear, 't is better to be much abus'd,

Than but to know 't a little.

Iago. How now, my lord!

Oth. What sense had I of¹⁰ her stolen hours of lust?

I saw it not, thought it not, it harm'd not me:
I slept the next night well,¹¹ was warm and merry;
I found not Cassio's kisses on her lips:

He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stolen,
Let him not know 't, and he's not robb'd at all.

Iago. I am sorry to hear this.

Oth. I had been happy, if the general camp,
Pioneers and all, had tasted her sweet body,
So I had nothing known.—O! now, for ever,
Farewell the tranquil mind: farewell content:
Farewell the plumed troop, and the big wars,
That make ambition virtue: O, farewell!
Farewell the neighing steed, and the shrill trump,
The spirit-stirring drum, the ear-piercing fife,
The royal banner, and all quality,

Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious war!
And O! you mortal engines, whose rude¹² throats
Th' immortal Jove's dread clamours counterfeit,
Farewell! Othello's occupation's gone.

Iago. Is it possible?—My lord.—

Oth. Villain, be sure thou prove my love a whore,
Be sure of it: give me the ocular proof,

[Taking him by the Throat]

Or, by the worth of mine¹³ eternal soul,

Thou hadst been better have been born a dog.

Than answer my wak'd wrath.

Iago.

Is it come to this?

Oth. Make me to see 't; or, at the least, so prove it

Or horror's head horrors accumulate;
Do deeds to make heaven weep, all earth amaz'd,

Iago. O grace! O heaven defend me!

Are you a man? have you a soul, or sense?—
God be liv'! you: take mine office.—O wretched fool,
That liv'st³ to make thine honesty a vice!
O monstrous world! Take note, take note, O world!
To be direct and honest, is not safe.—

I thank you for this profit: and, from hence,
I'll love no friend, since love breeds such offence.

Oth. Nay, stay.—Thou shouldst be honest.

Iago. I should be wise; for honesty's a fool,
And loses that it works for.

Oth. By the world,

I think my wife be honest, and think she is not;
I think that thou art just, and think thou art not.
[I'll have some proof: her⁴ name, that was as fresh
As Dian's visage, is now begrim'd and black
As mine own face. If there be cords, or knives,
Poison, or fire, or suffocating streams,
I'll not endure it.—Would I were satisfied!

Iago. I see, sir, you are eaten up with passion:
I do repent me that I put it to you.
You would be satisfied?

Oth. Would! nay, I will.

Iago. And may; but how? how satisfied, my lord?
Would you the supervision⁵! grossly gape on?
Behold her topp'd?

Oth. Death and damnation! O!

Iago. It were a tedious difficulty, I think,
To bring it⁶ to that prospect. Damn them then,
If ever mortal eyes do see them bolster,
More than their own! What then? how then?
What shall I say? Where's satisfaction?
It is impossible you should see this,
Were they as prime as goats, as hot as monkeys,
As salt as wolves in pride, and fools as gross
As ignorance made drunk: but yet, I say,
If inputation, and strong circumstances,
Which lead directly to the door of truth,
Will give you satisfaction, you may⁷ have it.

Oth. Give me a living reason she's disloyal.

Iago. I do not like the office;

But, sith I am enter'd in this cause so far,
Prick'd to't by foolish honesty and love,
I will go on. I lay with Cassio lately,
And being troubled with a raging tooth,
I could not sleep.

There are a kind of men, so loose of soul,
That in their sleeps will mutter their affairs:
One of this kind is Cassio.

In sleep I heard him say:—"Sweet Desdemona,
Let us be wary, let us hide our loves!"⁸
And then, sir, would he gripe, and wring my hand,
Cry,—"⁹O, sweet creature!"¹⁰ and then kiss me hard,
As if he pluck'd up kisses by the roots.

That grew upon my lips: then, laid his leg
Over my thigh, and sigh'd, and kiss'd: and then,
Cried,—"¹¹Cursed fate, that gave thee to the Moor!"¹²

Oth. O monstrous! monstrous!

Iago.

Nay, this was but his dream

Oth. But this denoted a foregone conclusion:

'T is a shrewd doubt, though it be but a dream.

Iago. And this may help to thicken other proofs.
That do demonstrate thinly.

Oth.

I'll tear her all to pieces.

Iago. Nay, but be wise: yet we see nothing done
She may be honest yet. Tell me but this:
Have you not sometimes seen a handkerchief,
Spotted with strawberries, in your wife's hand?

Oth. I gave her such a one: 't was my first gift.

Iago. I know not that; but such a handkerchief,
(I am sure it was your wife's) did I to-day
See Cassio wipe his beard with.

Oth.

If it be that,—

Iago. If it be that, or any that¹³ was hers,
It speaks against her with the other proofs.

Oth. O, that the slave had forty thousand lives!

One is too poor, too weak for my revenge.

Now do I see 't is true.—Look here, Iago;

All my fond love thus do I blow to heaven: 't is gone.—

Arise, black vengeance, from thy hollow cell!¹⁴

Yield up, O Love! thy crown, and hearted throne,
To tyrannous hate! swell, bosom, with thy fraught.
For 't is of aspics' tongues!

Iago. Pray,¹⁵ be content.

Oth.

O, blood, Iago, blood!

Iago. Patience, I say: your mind, perhaps, may change.

*Oth.*¹¹ Never, Iago. Like to the Pontick sea,

Whose icy current and compulsive course

Ne'er knows¹² retiring ebb, but keeps due on

To the Propontick, and the Hellespont;

Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace,

Shall ne'er look back, ne'er ebb to humble love,

Till that a capable and wide revenge

Swallow them up.—Now, by yond¹³ marble heaven.

Clo. To tell you where he lodges, is to tell you where I lie.¹

Des. Can any thing be made of this?

Clo. I know not where he lodges; and for me to devise a lodging, and say, he lies here, or he lies there, were to lie in mine own throat.

Des. Can you inquire him out, and be edified to report?

Clo. I will catechize the world for him; that is, make questions, and by them answer.

Des. Seek him; bid him come hither: tell him, I have moved my lord in his behalf, and hope all will be well.

Clo. To do this is within the compass of man's wit: and therefore I will attempt the doing it. [Exit.]

Des. Where should I lose that handkerchief, Emilia?

Emil. I know not, madam.

Des. Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse full of cruzadoes²; and but my noble Moor is true of mind, and made of no such baseness as jealous creatures are, it were enough to put him to ill thinking.

Emil. Is he not jealous?

Des. Who? he! I think the sun, where he was born, drew all such humours from him.

Emil. Look, where he comes.

Enter OTHELLO.

Des. I will not leave him now, till Cassio be call'd to him.—How is 't with you, my lord?

Oth. Well, my good lady.—[Aside.] O. hardness to dissemble!—

How do you, Desdemona?

Des. Well, my good lord.

Oth. Give me your hand. This hand is moist, my lady.

Des. It yet³ hath felt no age, nor known no sorrow.

Oth. This argues fruitfulness, and liberal heart.

Hot, hot and moist: this hand of yours requires

A sequester from liberty, fasting and praying,⁴

Much castigation, exercise devout:

For here 's a young and sweating devil here,

That commonly rebels. 'T is a good hand;

A frank one.

Des. You may, indeed, say so: For 't was that hand that gave away my heart.

Oth. A liberal hand: the hearts of old gave hands. But our new heraldry is—hands, not hearts.

Des. I cannot speak of this. Come now, your promise.

Oth. What promise, chuck?

Des. I have sent to bid Cassio come speak with you.

Oth. I have a salt and sudden⁵ rheum offends me. Lend me thy handkerchief.

Des. Here, my lord. [Offering it.]

Oth. That which I gave you.

Des. I have it not about me.

Oth. Not?

Des. No, indeed, my lord.

Oth. That is a fault.

That handkerchief

Did an Egyptian to my mother give;

She was a charmer, and could almost read

The thoughts of people: she told her, while she kept it,

'T would make her amiable and subdue my father

Entirely to her love; but if she lost it,

Or made a gift of it, my father's eye

Should hold her loathed, and his spirits should hunt

After new fancies. She, dying, gave it me;

And bid me, when my fate would have me wive,⁶

To give it her. I did so; and take heed on 't:

Make it a darling like your precious eye:

To lose or give 't away were such perdition.

As nothing else could match.

Des. Is 't possible?

Oth. 'T is true: there's magic in the web of it.

A sibyl, that had number'd in the world

The sun to course⁷ two hundred compasses,

In her prophetic fury sew'd the work;

The worms were hollow'd that did breed the silk,

And it was dyed in mummy, which the skilful

Conserv'd⁸ of maidens' hearts.

Des. Indeed! is 't true?

Oth. Most veritable; therefore look to 't well.

Des. Then, would to heaven that I had never seen it!

Oth. Ha! wherefore?

Des. Why do you speak so startingly and rash?

Oth. Is 't lost? is 't gone? speak, is it out of the way?

Des. Heaven bless us!

Oth. Say you?

Des. It is not lost; but what an if it were?

Oth. How?

Des. I say, it is not lost.

Oth. Fetch 't, let me see 't.

Des. Why, so I can, sir;⁹ but I will not now.

This is a trick to put me from my suit:

I pray, let Cassio be receiv'd again.

Oth. Fetch me that¹⁰ handkerchief: my mind mis-

Des. Come, come; [gives.]

You'll never meet a more sufficient man.

Oth. The handkerchief,—

Des. I pray, talk me of Cassio.¹¹

Oth. The handkerchief,—

Des. A man that, all his time,

Hath founded his good fortunes on your love;

Shar'd dangers with you:—

Oth. The handkerchief,—

Des. In sooth, you are to blame.

Oth. Away!¹²

[Exit OTHELLO.]

Emil. Is not this man jealous?

Des. I ne'er saw this before.

Sure, there's some wonder in this handkerchief:

I am most unhappy in the loss of it.

Emil. 'T is not a year or two shows us a man:

They are all but stomachs, and we all but food;

They eat us hungrily, and when they are full,

They belch us.

Enter IAGO and CASSIO.

Look you! Cassio, and my husband

Iago. There is no other way: 't is she must do 't:

And, lo, the happiness! go, and importune her.

Des. How now, good Cassio! what's the news with you?

Cas. Madam, my former suit. I do beseech you,

That by your virtuous means I may again

Exist, and be a member of his love.

Whom I, with all the office¹³ of my heart,

Entirely honour: I would not be delay'd.

If my offence be of such mortal kind.

That nor my service past, nor present sorrows,

Nor purpos'd merit in futurity,

Can ransom me into his love again,

My advocacy is not now in tune;
My lord is not my lord: nor should I know him,
Were he in favour, as in humour, alter'd.
So help me every spirit sanctified,
As I have spoken for you all my best,

For my free speech. You must a while be patient:

Than for myself I dare: let that suffice you.

Iago. Is my lord angry?

Emil. He went hence but now;
And, certainly, in strange unquietness.

Iago. Can he^a be angry? I have seen the cannon,
When it hath blown his ranks into the air,
And, like the devil, from his very arm
Puff'd his own brother:—and can he be angry?
Something of moment, then: I will go meet him.
There's matter in't, indeed, if he be angry.

Des. I prythee, do so. [Exit Iago.—Something, sure, of state.—

Either from Venice, or some unhatch'd practice,
Made demonstrable here in Cyprus to him.—
Hath puddled his clear spirit; and, in such cases,
Men's natures wrangle with inferior things,
Though great ones are their object. 'T is even so;
For let our finger ache, and it induces
Our other healthful members ev'n to that sense
Of pain: nay, we must think, men are not gods;
Nor of them look for such observances^a
As fit the bridal.—Beshrew me much, Emilia,
I was (unhandsome warrior as I am)
Arraigning his unkindness with my soul;
But now I find, I had suborn'd the witness,
And he's indicted falsely.

Emil. Pray heaven, it be state matters, as you think,
And no conception, nor no jealous toy,
Concerning you.

Des. Alas, the day! I never gave him cause.

Emil. But jealous souls will not be answer'd so;
They are not ever jealous for a cause,
But jealous for they are jealous: 't is a monster,
Regot upon itself, born on itself.

Des. Heaven keep that monster from Othello's mind!

Emil. Lady, amen.

Des. I will go seek him.—Cassio, walk hereabout.
If I do find him fit, I'll move your suit,
And seek to effect it to my uttermost.

Cas. I humbly thank your ladyship.

[Exeunt DESDEMONA and EMILIA
Enter BIANCA.

Bian. Save you, friend Cassio!

Cas. What make you from home?

How is it with you, my most fair Bianca?

I' faith, sweet love, I was coming to your house.

Bian. And I was going to your lodging, Cassio.
What, keep a week away? seven days and nights?
Eight score eight hours? and lovers' absent hours
More tedious than the dial eight score times?
O weary reckoning!

Cas. Pardon me, Bianca;

I have this while with leaden thoughts been press'd;
But I shall, in a more convenient^a time,
Strike off this score of absence. Sweet Bianca,

[Giving her DESDEMONA's Handkerchief.

Take me this work out.

Bian. O, Cassio! whence came this?

This is some token from a newer friend:

To the felt absence, now, I feel a cause.

Is it come to this? Well, well.

Cas. Go to, woman!

Throw your vile guesses in the devil's teeth,
From whence you have them. You are jealous, now,
That this is from some mistress some remembrance:
No, in good troth, Bianca.

Bian. Why, whose is it?

Cas. I know not, sweet.^a I found it in my chamber.
I like the work well; ere it be demanded.

(As like enough it will) I'd have it copied:

Take it, and do't; and leave me for this time.

Bian. Leave you! wherefore?

Cas. I do attend here on the general,

And think it no addition, nor my wish,

To have him see me woman'd.

Bian. Why, I pray you?^b

Cas. Not that I love you not.

Bian. But that you do not love me

I pray you, bring me on the way a little;

And say, if I shall see you soon at night.

Cas. 'T is but a little way, that I can bring you,

For I attend here; but I'll see you soon.

Bian. 'T is very good: I must be circumstanc'd.

[Exeunt

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Same.

Enter OTHELLO and IAGO.

Iago. Will you think so?

Oth. Think so, Iago?

Iago. What,

To kiss in private?

Oth. An unauthoriz'd kiss.

Iago. Or to be naked with her friend abed,

An hour, or more, not meaning any harm?

Oth. Naked abed, Iago, and not mean harm?

It is hypocrisy against the devil:

They that mean virtuously, and yet do so,

The devil their virtue tempts, and they tempt heaven.

Iago. If they do nothing, 't is a venial slip

But if I give my wife a handkerchief,—

Oth. What then?

Iago. Why, then 't is hers, my lord: and, being hers
She may, I think, bestow 't on any man.

Oth. She is protectress of her honour too:

May she give that?

Iago. Her honour is an essence that's not seen;

They have it very oft, that have it not:

But, for the handkerchief,—

Oth. By heaven, I would most gladly have forgot it

Thou saidst,—O! it comes o'er my memory,

As doth the raven o'er the infected^c house,

Boding to all,—he had my handkerchief.

the next speech are not in quarto, 1622. ^h infectious: in folio.

Iago Ay, what of that?

Oth. That's not so good, now.

Iago What, if I had said, I had seen him do you wrong?

Or heard him say,—as knaves be such abroad,

Who having, by their own importunate suit,

Or voluntary dotage of some mistress,

Convinced or supplied them, cannot choose

But they must blab—

Oth. Hath he said any thing?

Iago He hath, my lord; but by you well assur'd,
No more than he'll unswear.

Oth. What hath he said?

Iago 'Faith, that he did,—I know not what he did.

Oth. What? what?

Iago Lie—

Oth. With her?

Iago With her, on her; what you will.

Oth. Lie with her! lie on her!—We say, lie on her,

when they belie her. Lie with her! that's fulsome.—

Handkerchief,—confessions,—handkerchief!—To confess,

and be hanged for his labour.—First, to be hanged, and then to confess!—I tremble at it. Nature would not invest herself in such shuddering² passion without some instruction. It is not words, that shake me thus:

—Pish!—Noses, ears, and lips.—Is it possible?—Confess!

—Handkerchief!—O devil!—[Falls in a Trance.]

Iago Work on,

My medicine, work! Thus credulous fools are caught;

And many worthy and chaste dames, even thus,

All guiltless, meet reproach.—What, ho! my lord!

Enter Cassio.

My lord, I say! Othello!—How now, Cassio!

Cas. What's the matter?

Iago My lord is fallen into an epilepsy:

This is his second fit; he had one yesterday.

Cas. Rub him about the temples.

Iago No, forbear.³

The lethargy must have his quiet course,

If not, he foams at mouth; and, by and by,

Breaks out to savage madness. Look, he stirs:

Do you withdraw yourself a little while,

He will recover straight: when he is gone,

I would on great occasion speak with you.—

[Exit Cassio.]

How is it, general? have you not hurt your head?

Oth. Dost thou mock me?

Iago I mock you! no, by heaven.

Would you would bear your fortunes like a man.

Oth. A horned man's a monster, and a beast.

Iago There's many a beast, then, in a populous city,

And many a civil monster.

Oth. Did he confess it?

Iago Good sir, be a man;

Think, every bearded fellow, that's but yok'd,

May draw with you: there's millions now alive,

That nightly lie in those unproper beds,

Which they dare swear peculiar: your case is better.

O! 'tis the spite of hell, the fiend's arch-mock,

To lip a wanton in a secure couch,

And to suppose her chaste. No, let me know:

And, knowing what I am, I know what she shall be.

Oth. O! thou art wise; 'tis certain.

Iago Stand you awhile apart;

Confine yourself but in a patient list,⁴

Whilst you were here, o'erwhelm'd⁵ with your grief,

(A passion most unfitting⁶ such a man)

Cassio came hither: I shifted him away,

And laid good 'scuse upon your ecstasy:

Bade him anon return, and here speak with me;

The which he promis'd. But enuave yourself,

And mark the fliers, the gibes, and notable scorns,

That dwell in every region of his face;

For I will make him tell the tale anew.

Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when

He hath, and is again to cope your wife:

I say, but mark his gesture.—Marry, patience,

Or I shall say, you are all-in-all in spleen,

And nothing of a man.

Oth. Dost thou hear, Iago?

I will be found most cunning in my patience;

But (dost thou hear?) most bloody.

Iago That's not amiss,

But yet keep time in all. Will you withdraw?

[OTHELLO retires]

Now will I question Cassio of Bianca.

A housewife, that by selling her desires,

Boys herself bread and clothes: it is a creature.

That dotes on Cassio, as 'tis the strumpet's plague.

To beguile many, and be beguil'd by one.

He, when he hears of her, cannot refrain⁷

From the excess of laughter—here he comes.—

Re-enter Cassio.

As he shall smile, Othello shall go mad;

And his unbookish jealousy must construe

Poor Cassio's smiles, gestures, and light behaviour,

Quite in the wrong.—How do you now, lieutenant?

Cas. The worse, that you give me the addition,

Whose want even kills me.

Iago Ply Desdemona well, and you are sure on't.

Now, if this suit lay in Bianca's power, [Speaking lower]

How quickly should you speed?

Cas. Alas, poor cattif!

Oth. Look, how he laughs already! [Aside]

Iago I never knew woman love man so.

Cas. Alas, poor rogue! I think, 't'faith, she loves me.

Oth. Now he denies it faintly, and laughs it out. [Aside]

Iago Do you hear, Cassio?

Oth. Now he importunes him

To tell it o'er. Go to; well said, well said. [Aside]

Iago She gives it out, that you shall marry her:

Do you intend it?

Cas. Ha, ha, ha!

Oth. Do you triumph o'er me?⁸ do you triumph?

[Aside]

Cas. I marry her!—what, a customer? I pry yllie.

bear some charity to my wit; do not think it is so unwholesome. Ha, ha, ha!

Oth. So, so, so. They laugh that win. [Aside]

Iago 'Faith, the cry goes, that you shall marry her.

Cas. Pr'ythee, say true.

Iago I am a very villain else.

Oth. Have you scored me? Well. [Aside]

Cas. This is the monkey's own giving out: she's persuaded I will marry her, out of her own love and flattery, not out of my promise.

Oth. Iago beckons me: now he begins the story.

[Aside]

Cas. She was here even now: she haunts me in every place. I was, the other day, talking on the sea-bank with certain Venetians, and thither comes this bauble; and, by this hand, she falls me thus about my neck;—

Oth. Crying, O dear Cassio ! as it were : his gesture imports it. [Aside.]

Cas. So hangs¹, and lolls, and weeps upon me ; so haies, and pulls me ; ha, ha, ha !—

Oth. Now he tells, how she plucked him to my chamber. O ! I see that nose of yours, but not that dog I shall throw it to. [Aside.]

Cas. Well, I must leave her company.
Iago. Before me ! look where she comes.

Enter Bianca.

Cas. 'T is such another fitchew ! marry, a perfumed one.—What do you mean by this haunting of me ?

Bian. Let the devil and his dam haunt you ! What did you mean by that same handkerchief, you gave me even now ? I was a fine fool to take it. I must take out the work !—A likely piece of work, that you should find it in your chamber, and know not who left it there. This is some minx's token, and I must take out the work ? There, give it your hobby-horse : where-soever you had it, I'll take out no work on't.

Cas. How now, my sweet Bianca ! how now, how now !

Oth. By heaven, that should be my handkerchief ! [Aside.]

Bian. An you'll come to supper to-night, you may ; an you will not, come when you are next prepared for. [Exit.]

Iago. After her, after her.

Cas. Faith, I must : she'll rail in the street else.

Iago. Will you sup there ?

Cas. Faith, I intend so.

Iago. Well, I may chance to see you, for I would very fain speak with you.

Cas. Pr'ythee, come ; will you ?

Iago. Go to ; say no more. [Exit Cassio.]

Oth. [Advancing.] How shall I murder him, Iago ?

Iago. Did you perceive how he laughed at his vice ?

Oth. O, Iago !

Iago. And did you see the handkerchief ?

Oth. Was that mine ?

Iago. Yours, by this hand : and to see how he prizes the foolish woman your wife ! she gave it him, and he hath given it his whore.

Oth. I would have him nine years a killing.—A fine woman ! a fair woman ! a sweet woman !

Iago. Nay, you must forget that.

Oth. Ay, let her rot, and perish, and be damned to-night, for she shall not live. No, my heart is turned to stone ; I strike it, and it hurts my hand. O ! the world hath not a sweeter creature : she might lie by an emperor's side, and command him tasks.

Iago. Nay, that's not your way.

Oth. Hang her ! I do but say what she is.—So delicate with her needle !—An admirable musician ! O ! she will sing the savageness out of a bear.—Of so high and plentiful wit and invention !—

Iago. She's the worse for all this.

Oth. O ! a thousand² thousand times. And then, of gentle a condition.

Iago. Ay, too gentle.

Oth. Hang her ! that's certain ;—but yet the pity of it, Iago !—O, Iago ! the pity of it, Iago !

Iago. If you are so fond over her iniquity, give her patent to offend ; for if it touch not you, it comes near nobody.

Oth. I will chop her into messes.—Cuckold me !

Iago. O ! 't is foul in her.

Oth. With mine officer !

Iago. That's fouler.

Oth. Get me some poison, Iago ; this night :—I'll not expostulate with her, lest her body and beauty unprovide my mind again. This night, Iago.

Iago. Do it not with poison, strangle her in her bed even the bed she hath contaminated.

Oth. Good, good ; the justice of it pleases ; very good.

Iago. And for Cassio, let me be his undertaker. You shall hear more by midnight. [A Trumpet within.]

Oth. Excellent good.—What trumpet is that same ?

Iago. Something from Venice, sure. 'T is Lodovico, Come from the duke ; and, see, your wife is with him.

Enter Lodovico, Desdemona, and Attendants.

Lod. 'Save you, worthy general !

Oth. With all my heart, sir.

Lod. The duke and senators of Venice greet you.

[Giving him a Packet.]

Oth. I kiss the instrument of their pleasures.

[Opens the Packet, and reads.]

Des. And what's the news, good cousin Lodovico ?

Iago. I am very glad to see you, signior : Welcome to Cyprus.

Lod. I thank you. How does lieutenant Cassio ?

Iago. Lives, sir.

Des. Cousin, there's fallen between him and my lord An unkind breach, but you shall make all well.

Oth. Are you sure of that ?

Des. My lord ?

Oth. "This fail you not to do, as you will"—[Reading]

Lod. He did not call ; he's busy in the paper.

Is there division 'twixt my lord and Cassio ?

Des. A most unhappy one : I would do much To atone⁴ them, for the love I bear to Cassio.

Oth. Fire and brimstone !

Des. My lord ?

Oth. Are you wise ?

Des. What ! is he angry ?

Lod. May be, the letter mov'd him ;

For, as I think, they do command him home, Deputing Cassio in his government.

Des. By my troth, I am glad on't.

Oth. Indeed.

Des. My lord ?

Oth. I am glad to see you mad.

Des. How, sweet Othello ?

Oth. Devil ! [Striking her]

Des. I have not deserv'd this.

Lod. My lord, this would not be believ'd in Venice. Though I should swear I saw it. 'T is very much, Make her amends, she weeps.

Oth. O devil, devil !

If that the earth could teem with woman's tears, Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile.— Out of my sight !

Des. I will not stay to offend you. [Gong]

Lod. Truly an obedient lady.—

I do beseech your lordship, call her back.

Oth. Mistress !

Des. My lord ?

Oth. What would you with her, sir ?

Lod. Who, I, my lord ?

Oth. Ay ; you did wish, that I would make her turn, Sir, she can turn, and turn, and yet go on, And turn again ; and she can weep, sir, weep ; And she's obedient, as you say,—obedient,— Very obedient.—Proceed you in your tears.— Concerning this, sir,—O well-painted passion ! I am commanded home.—Get you away ; I'll send for you anon.—Sir, I obey the mandate

And will return to Venice.—Hence! I avaunt!

[Exit DESDEMONA.]

Cassio shall have my place. And,—sir, to-night,
I do intreat that we may sup together:
You are welcome, sir, to Cyprus.—Goats and monkeys!

[Exit.]

Lod. Is this the noble Moor whom our full senate
Call all-in-all sufficient?—This the noble¹ nature
Whom passion could not shake? whose solid virtue
The shot of accident, nor dart of chance,
Could neither graze, nor pierce?

lago. He is much chang'd.

Lod. Are his wits safe? is he not light of brain?

lago. He's that he is: I may not breathe my censure.
What he might be,—if, what he might, he is not,
I would to heaven, he were.

Lod. What! strike his wife?

lago. 'Faith, that was not so well; yet would I knew,
That stroke would prove the worst.

Lod. Is it his use?

Or did the letters work upon his blood,
And new-create this fault?

lago. Alas, alas!

It is not honesty in me, to speak
What I have seen and known. You shall observe him;
And his own courses will denote him so,
That I may save my speech. Do but go after,
And mark how he continues.

Lod. I am sorry, that I am deceiv'd in him. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. A Room in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO and EMILIA.

Oth. You have seen nothing then?

Emil. Nor ever heard; nor ever did suspect.

Oth. Yes, you have seen Cassio and her together.

Emil. But then I saw no harm; and then I heard
Each syllable that breath made up between them.

Oth. What! did they never whisper?

Emil. Never, my lord.

Oth. Nor send you out of the way?

Emil. Never.

Oth. To fetch her fan, her gloves, her mask, nor nothing?

Emil. Never, my lord.

Oth. That's strange.

Emil. I durst, my lord, to wager she is honest,
Lay down my soul at stake: if you think other,
Remove your thought; it doth abuse your bosom.
If any wretch have put this in your head,
Let heaven requite it with the serpent's curse,
For if she be not honest, chaste, and true,
There's no man happy; the purest of their wives²
Is foul as slander.

Oth. Bid her come hither:—go,—[Exit EMILIA.]
She says enough;—yet she's a simple bawd,
That cannot say as much.—This is a subtle whore.
A closet-lock-and-key of villainous secrets:
And yet she'll kneel, and pray: I have seen her do't.

Re-enter EMILIA, with DESDEMONA.

Des. My lord, what is your will?

Oth. Pray, chuck, come hither.

Des. What is your pleasure?

Oth. Let me see your eyes:
Look in my face.

Des. What horrible fancy is this?

Oth. Some of your function, mistress; [To EMILIA.]
Leave procreants alone, and shut the door;

Cough, or cry hem, if any body come:

Your mystery, your mystery;—nay, despatch.

[Exit EMILIA.]

Des. Upon my knee,³ what doth your speech import?
I understand a fury in your words,

But not the words.⁴

Oth. Why, what art thou?

Des. Your wife, my lord; your true
And loyal wife.

[Rises.]

Oth. Come, swear it, damn thyself;
Lest, being like one of heaven, the devils themselves
Should fear to seize thee: therefore, be double-damn'd
Swear thou art honest.

Des. Heaven doth truly know it.

Oth. Heaven truly knows, that thou art false as hell.

Des. To whom, my lord? with whom? How am I false?

Oth. O Desdemona!—away, away, away!

Des. Alas, the heavy day!—Why do you weep?

Am I the occasion⁵ of these tears, my lord?

If, haply, you my father do suspect

An instrument of this your calling back,

Lay not your blame on me: if you have lost him,

Why, I have lost him too.

Oth. Had it pleas'd heaven

To try me with affliction; had he rain'd

All kinds of sorcs, and shames, on my bare head:

Steep'd me in poverty to the very lips;

Given to captivity me and my utmost⁶ hopes;

I should have found in some part of my soul

A drop of patience: but, alas! to make me

A fixed figure, for the hand⁷ of scorn

To point his slowly moving⁸ finger at;

Yet could I bear that too; well, very well:

But there, where I have garner'd up my heart,

Where either I must live, or bear no life,

The fountain from the which my current runs

Or else dries up; to be discarded thence,

Or keep it as a cistern, for foul toads

To knot and gender in!—turn thy complexion there,

Patience, thou young and rose-lipp'd cherubin;

Ay, there,⁹ look grin as hell!

Des. I hope, my noble lord esteems me honest.

Oth. O! ay; as summer flies are in the shambles,

That quicken even with blowing. O thou!¹⁰ weed!

Who's¹¹ art so lovely fair, and smell'st so sweet,

That the sense aches at thee, would thou hadst ne'er been born!

Des. Alas! what ignorant sin have I committed?

Oth. Was this fair paper, this most goodly book,

Made to write whore upon? What committed?

Committed?—O thou public commoner!¹²

I should make very forges of my cheeks,

That would to cinders burn up modesty,

Did I but speak thy deeds.—What committed?

Heaven stops the nose at it, and the moon winks.

The bawdy wind, that kisses all it meets,

Is hush'd within the hollow mine of earth,

And will not hear it. What committed?

Impudent strumpet!¹³

Des. By heaven you do me wrong.

Oth. Are not you a strumpet?

Des. No, as I am a Christian

If to preserve this vessel for my lord,

From any other,¹⁴ foul, unlawful touch,

Be not to be a strumpet, I am none.

Oth. What, not a whore?

Des. No, as I shall be saved.

Oth. I cry you mercy, then?

I took you for that cunning whore of Venice,
That married with Othello.—You, mistress,

Re-enter EMILIA.

That have the office opposite to Saint Peter,
And keep the gate of hell; you, you, ay, you:
We have done our course: there's money for your pains.
Pray you, turn the key, and keep our counsel. [Exit.]

Emil. Alas! what does this gentleman conceive?
How do you, madam? how do you, my good lady?

Des. 'Faith, half asleep. [Rising.]

Emil. Good madam, what's the matter with my lord?

Des. With whom?

Emil. Why, with my lord, madam.

Des. Who is thy lord?

Emil. He that is yours, sweet lady.

Des. I have none: do not talk to me, Emilia;
I cannot weep; nor answer have I none,
But what should go by water. Pr'ythee, to-night
Lay on my bed my wedding sheets,—remember!—
And call thy husband hither.

Emil. Here is a change, indeed! [Exit.]

Des. 'Tis meet I should be us'd so, very meet.
How have I been behav'd, that he might stick
The small'st opinion on my least misdeed?

Re-enter EMILIA, with IAGO.

Iago. What is your pleasure, madam? How is it with you?

Des. I cannot tell. Those, that do teach young babes,
Do it with gentle means, and easy tasks:
He might have chid me so; for, in good faith,
I am a child to chiding.

Iago. What's the matter, lady?

Emil. Alas! Iago, my lord hath so bewor'd her,
Thrown such despite and heavy terms upon her,
As true hearts cannot bear.

Des. Am I that name, Iago?

Iago. What name, fair lady?

Des. Such as, she says, my lord did say I was.

Emil. He call'd her whore: a beggar in his drink,
Could not have laid such terms upon his callat.*

Iago. Why did he so?

Des. I do not know; I am sure, I am none such.

Iago. Do not weep, do not weep. Alas the day!

Emil. Has she forsook so many noble matches,
Her father, and her country, and her friends,
To be call'd whore? would it not make one weep?

Des. It is my wretched fortune.

Iago. Beshrew him for it!

How comes this trick upon him?

Des. Nay, heaven doth know.

Emil. I will be hang'd, if some eternal villain,
Some busy and insinuating rogue.

Some cogging, cozening slave, to get some office.

Have not devis'd this slander; I'll be hang'd else.

Iago. Fie! there is no such man: it is impossible.

Des. If any such there be, heaven pardon him!

Emil. A halter pardon him, and hell gnaw his bones!
Why should he call her, whore? who keeps her company?

What place? what time? what form? what likelihood?

The Moor's abus'd by some most villainous* knave,

Some base notorious knave, some scurvy fellow.—

O, heaven! hat such companions' thou'dst unfold,

And put in every honest hand a whip,

To lash the rascals naked through the world,
Even from the east to the west!

Iago.

Speak within door

Emil. O, fie upon them! some such squire he was.
That turn'd your wit the seamy side without.

And made you to suspect me with the Moor.

Iago. You are a fool; go to.

Des.

O good! Iago!

What shall I do to win my lord again?

Good friend, go to him; for, by this light of heaven,

I know not how I lost him.* Here I kneel:

If e'er my will did trespass 'gainst his love,

Either in discourse of thought, or actual deed;

Or that mine eyes, mine ears, or any sense,

Delighted them in any other form;

Or that I do not yet, and ever did,

And ever will,—though he do shake me off

To beggarly divorcement,—love him dearly,

Comfort forswear me! Unkindness may do much;

And his unkindness may defeat my life,

But never taint my love. I cannot say whore;

It does abhor me now I speak the word;

To do the act that might the addition earn,

Not the world's mass of vanity could make me.

Iago. I pray you, be content; 't is but his humour:

The business of the state does him offence,

And he does chide with you.¹⁰

Des.

If 't were no other,—

Iago. 'T is but so, I warrant. [Music.]

Hark, how these instruments summon to supper!

The messengers of Venice stay the meat.

Go in, and weep not; all things shall be well.

[Exeunt DESDEMONA and EMILIA]

Enter RODERIGO.

How now, Roderigo!

Rod. I do not find that thou deal'st justly with me

Iago. What in the contrary?

Rod. Every day thou dost set me with some device, Iago; and rather, as it seems to me now, keep'st from me all convenience, that suppliest me with the least advantage of hope. I will, indeed, no longer endure it; nor am I yet persuaded, to put up in peace what already I have foolishly suffered.

Iago. Will you hear me, Roderigo?

Rod. 'Faith, I have heard too much; for your words,
and performances, are no kin together.

Iago. You charge me most unjustly.

Rod. With nought but truth. I have wasted myself out of my means: the jewels you have had from me, to deliver to Desdemona, would half have corrupted a votist: you have told me, she has received them, and returned me expectations and comforts of sudden respect and acquaintance¹²; but I find none.

Iago. Well; go to; very well.

Rod. Very well! go to! I cannot go to, man; nor
't is not very well; by this hand, I say, it is very scurvy; and begin to find myself fobbed in it.

Iago. Very well.

Rod. I tell you, 't is not very well. I will make myself known to Desdemona: if she will return me my jewels, I will give over my suit, and repent my unlawful solicitation; if not, assure yourself, I will seek satisfaction of you.

Iago. You have said now.

Rod. Ay, and I have said nothing, but what I protest intendment of doing.

Iago. Why, now I see there's mettle in thee; and even, from this instant, do build on thee a better opinion than ever before. Give me thy hand, Roderigo: thou hast taken against me a most just exception; but, yet, I protest, I have dealt most directly in thy affair.

Rod. It hath not appeared.

Iago. I grant, indeed, it hath not appeared, and your suspicion is not without wit and judgment. But, Roderigo, if thou hast that within thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now than ever,—I mean, purpose, courage, and valour,—this night show it: if thou the next night following enjoyest not Desdemona, take me from this world with treachery, and devise engines for my life.

Rod. Well, what is it? is it within reason, and compass?

Iago. Sir, there is especial commission come from Venice, to depute Cassio in Othello's place.

Rod. Is that true? why, then Othello and Desdemona return again to Venice.

Iago. O, no! he goes into Mauritania, and takes away with him the fair Desdemona, unless his abode be lingered here by some accident; wherein none can be so determinate as the removing of Cassio.

Rod. How do you mean removing of him?

Iago. Why, by making him incapable of Othello's place; knocking out his brains.

Rod. And that you would have me do?

Iago. Ay; if you dare do yourself a profit, and a right. He sups to-night with a harlotry¹, and thither will I go to him: he knows not yet of his honourable fortune. If you will watch his going thence, (which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one) you may take him at your pleasure: I will be near to second your attempt, and he shall fall between us. Come, stand not amazed at it, but go along with me; I will show you such a necessity in his death, that you shall think yourself bound to put it on him. It is now high supper-time, and the night grows to waste: about it.

Rod. I will hear farther reason for this.

Iago. And you shall be satisfied. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Another Room in the Castle.

Enter OTHELLO, LODOVICO, DESDEMONA, EMILIA, and Attendants.

Lod. I do beseech you, sir, trouble yourself no farther.

Oth. O! pardon me; 't will do me good to walk.

Lod. Madam, good-night; I humbly thank your ladyship.

Des. Your honour is most welcome.

Oth. Will you walk, sir?—

O!—Desdemona,—

Des. My lord?

Oth. Get you to bed on the instant; I will be returned forthwith. Dismiss your attendant there: look, it be done.

Des. I will, my lord.

[Exeunt OTHELLO, LODOVICO, and Attendants.]

Emil. How goes it now? he looks gentler than he did.

Des. He says, he will return incontinent.

He hath commanded me to go to bed, and bade me to dismiss you.

Emil. Dismiss me!

Des. It was his bidding; therefore, good Emilia, Give me my nightly wearing, and adieu: We must not now displease him.

Emil. I would you had never seen him.

Des. So would not I: my love doth so approve him,

That even his stubbornness, his checks, and frowns,—Pr'ythee, unpun me,—have grace and favour in them.

Emil. I have laid those sheets you bade me on the bed.

Des. All's one.—Good faith², how foolish are our minds!—

If I do die before thee, pr'ythee, shroud me
In one of those same sheets.

Emil. Come, come, you talk.

Des. My mother had a maid call'd Barbara: She was in love; and he she lov'd prov'd mad And did forsake her: she had a song of—willow, An old thing 't was, but it express'd her fortune, And she died singing it: that song, to-night, Will not go from my mind;³ I have much to do, Not to go hang my head all at one side, And sing it like poor Barbara. Pr'ythee, despatch.

Emil. Shall I go fetch your night-gown?

Des. No, unpun me here.—
This Lodovico is a proper man.

Emil. A very handsome man.

Des. He speaks well.

Emil. I know a lady in Venice would have walked barefoot to Palestine for a touch of his nether lip.

Des. A poor soul sat sighing by a sycamore tree,
[Singing.]

Sing all a green willow;

Her hand on her bosom, her head on her knee,

Sing willow, willow, willow:

The fresh streams ran by her and murmur'd her moans;

Sing willow, willow, willow:

Her salt tears fell from her, and soften'd the stones;

Lay by these.—

Sing willow, willow, willow.

Pr'ythee, hie thee; he'll come anon.—

Sing all a green willow must be my garland.

Let nobody blame him, his scorn I approve,—

Nay, that's not next.—Hark! who is it that knocks?

Emil. It is the wind.

Des. I call'd my love false love; but what said he then?

Sing willow, willow, willow:

If I court no women, you'll couch with no men

So, get thee gone; good night. Mine eyes do itch;

Doth that bode weeping?

Emil.

'T is neither here nor there.

*Des.*⁴ I have heard it said so.—O, these men, these men!—

Dost thou in conscience think,—tell me, Emilia,—

That there be women do abuse their husbands

In such gross kind?

Emil.

There be some such, no question.

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the world?

Emil. Why, would not you?

Des.

No, by this heavenly light

Emil. Nor I neither by this heavenly light:

I might do't as well 't the dark.

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the world?

Emil. The world is a huge thing: 't is a great price For a small vice.

Des.

In troth, I think thou wouldst not

Emil. In troth, I think I should, and undo't, when I had done. Marry, I would not do such a thing for a joint-ring, nor for measures of lawn, nor for gowns, petticoats, nor caps, nor any petty exhibition, but, for the whole world,—why, who would not make her husband a cuckold, to make him a monarch? I should venture purgatory for 't.

Des. Beshrew me, if I would do such a wrong for the whole world.

Emil. Why, the wrong is but a wrong i' the world; and, having the world for your labour, 't is a wrong in your own world, and you might quickly make it right.

Des. I do not think there is any such woman.

Emil. Yes, a dozen; and as many

To the vantage, as would store the world they play'd for.¹

But, I do think, it is their husbands' faults, If wives do fall. Say, that they slack their duties, And pour our treasures into foreign laps; Or else break out in peevish jealousies, Throwing restraint upon us; or, say, they strike us,

Or scant our former having in despite, Why, we have galls; and, though we have some grace, Yet have we some revenge. Let husbands know, Their wives have sense like them: they see, and smelt, And have their palates, both for sweet and sour, As husbands have. What is it that they do, When they change us for others? Is it sport? I think, it is; and doth affection breed it? I think, it doth. Is't frailty, that thus errs? It is so too: and have not we affections, Desires for sport, and frailty, as men have? Then, let them use us well; else, let them know, The ills we do, their ills instruct us to.

Des. Good-night, good-night: heaven me such uses send,
Not to pick bad from bad, but by bad mend. [Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Street.

Enter IAGO and RODERIGO.

Iago. Here, stand behind this bulk; straight will he come:

Wear thy good rapier bare, and put it home. Quick, quick; fear nothing: I'll be at thy elbow. It makes us, or it mars us: think on that, And fix most firm thy resolution.

Rod. Be near at hand; I may miscarry in 't.

Iago. Here, at thy hand: be bold, and take thy stand.²

Rod. I have no great devotion to the deed; And yet he has given me satisfying reasons.—T is but a man gone:—forth, my sword; he dies.

[Stands back.]

Iago. I have rubb'd this young quat³ almost to the sense,

And he grows angry. Now, whether he kill Cassio, Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other, Every way makes my game:⁴ live Roderigo, He calls me to a restitution large Of gold, and jewels, that I bobb'd from him, As gifts to Dездемона:⁵ It must not be: if Cassio do remain, He hath a daily beauty in his life, That makes me ugly: and, besides, the Moor May unfold me to him: there stand I in much peril. No, he must die:—be 't so; I hear⁶ him coming.

[*Retiring.]

Enter CASSIO.

Rod. I know his gait: 't is he.—Villain, thou diest.

[Rushing forward, and making a pass at CASSIO.]

Cas. That thrust had been mine enemy indeed, But that my coat is better than thou knowst: I will make proof of thee.

[Draws, and wounds RODERIGO.]

Rod. O! I am slain.

[IAGO starts forward, cuts CASSIO behind in the leg, and exit.]

Cas. I am maim'd for ever.—Light, ho! murder! murder!

Enter OTHELLO, at a distance.

Oth. The voice of Cassio.—Iago keeps his word.

Rod. O, villain that I am!

Oth. It is e'en so.

Cas. O, help! ho! light! a surgeon!

Oth. 'T is he.—O brave Iago! honest, and just, That hast such noble sense of thy friend's wrong; Thou teachest me.—Minion, your dear lies dead, And your unblest fate hies:⁷—strumpet, I come. Forth of my heart those charms, thine eyes, are blotted; Thy bed, lust-stain'd, shall with lust's blood be spotted.

[Exit OTHELLO.]

Enter LODOVICO and GRATIANO, at a distance.

Cas. What, ho! no watch? no passage? murder! murder!

Gra. 'T is some mischance; the cry is very direful. Cas. O, help!

Lod. Hark!

Rod. O, wretched villain!

Lod. Two or three groan.—It is a heavy night. These may be counterfeits: let's think 't unsafe To come in to the cry without more help.

Rod. No body come? then, shall I bleed to death.

Enter IAGO, unready,⁸ with a Light.

Lod. Hark!

Gra. Here's one comes in his shirt, with light and weapons.

Iago. Who's there? whose noise is this, that cries out murder thus?

Lod. We do not know.

Iago. Did not you hear a cry?

Cas. Here, here! for heaven's sake, help me.

Iago. What's the matter?

Gra. This is Othello's ancient, as I take it.

Lod. The same indeed; a very valiant fellow.

Iago. What are you here, that cry so grievously?

Cas. Iago? O! I am spoil'd; undone by villains: Give me some help.

Iago. O me, lieutenant! what villains have done this?

Cas. I think that one of them is hereabout, And cannot make away.

Iago. O treacherous villains!—

What are you there? come in, and give some help.

[To LODOVICO and GRATIANO.]

Rod. O, help me! here.

Cas. That's one of them.

Iago. O murderous slave! O villain!

[IAGO stabs RODERIGO]

Rod. O damn'd Iago! O inhuman dog!—

Iago. Kill men i' the dark!—Where be these bloody thieves?

How silent is this town!—Ho! murder! murder!

What may you be? are you of good, or evil?

Lod. As you shall prove us, praise us.

Iago. Signior Lodovico?

Lod. He, sir.

Iago. I cry you mercy. Here's Cassio hurt by villains.

Gra. Cassio?

Iago. How is it, brother?

Cas. My leg is cut in two.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!—

Light, gentlemen! I'll bind it with my shirt.

Enter BIANCA.

Bian. What is the matter, ho? who is't that cry'd?

Iago. Who is't that cry'd!

Bian. O my dear Cassio! my sweet Cassio!

Cassio. Cassio, Cassio!

Iago. O notable strumpet!—Cassio, may you suspect

Who they should be, that have thus mangled you?

Cas. No.

Gra. I am sorry, to find you thus: I have been to seek you.

Iago. Lend me a garter:—so—O, for a chair,

To bear him easily hence!¹

Bian. Alas! he faints.—O Cassio! Cassio! Cassio!

Iago. Gentlemen all, I do suspect this trash

To be a party² in this injury.—

Patience a while, good Cassio.—Come, come.

Lend me a light.—Know we this face, or no?

[Looking at Rod.]

Alas! my friend, and my dear countryman,

Roderigo? no:—yes, sure. O heaven! Roderigo.

Gra. What, of Venice?

Iago. Even he, sir; did you know him?

Gra. Know him? ay.

Iago. Signior Gratiano? I cry you gentle pardon:

These bloody accidents must excuse my manners,

That so neglected you.

Gra. I am glad to see you.

Iago. How do you, Cassio?—O, a chair, a chair!

Gra. Roderigo!

Iago. He, he, 't is he—O! that's well said:⁴—the chair.—[A chair brought.]

Some good man bear him carefully from hence;

I'll fetch the general's surgeon.—For you, mistress.

[To BIANCA.]

Save you your labour.—He that lies slain here, Cassio.

Was my dear friend. What malice was between you?

Cas. None in the world; nor do I know the man.

Iago. What, look you pale?—O, bear him out o' the air.—[CASSIO AND ROD. are borne off.]

Stay you, good gentlemen.—Look you pale, mistress?

Do you perceive the guestness⁵ of her eye?

Nay, an you stir:⁶—we shall hear more anon.—

Behold her well; I pray you, look upon her:

Do you see, gentlemen? nay, guiltiness will speak,

Though tongues were out of use.

Enter EMILIA.

Emil. Alas! what's the matter? what's the matter, husband?

Iago. Cassio hath here been set on in the dark

By Roderigo, and fellows that are scap'd:

He's almost slain, and Roderigo dead.⁷

Emil. Alas, good gentleman! alas, good Cassio!

Iago. This is the fruit of whoring.—Pr'ythee, Emilia,

Go know of Cassio where he supp'd to-night.—

What! do you shake at that?

Bian. He supp'd at my house; but I therefore shake not.

Iago. O! did he so? I charge you, go with me.

Emil. O, fie upon thee, strumpet!

Bian. I am no strumpet; but of life as honest,

As you that thus abuse me.

Emil. As I? fie upon thee!

Iago. Kind gentlemen, let's go see poor Cassio dress'd.—

Come, mistress, you must tell's another tale.—

Emilia, run you to the citadel,

And tell my lord and lady what hath happ'd.—

Will you go on, I pray?—This is the night, [Aside.]

That either makes me, or fordoes me quite. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Bedchamber.

DESDEMONA in Bed asleep. A Light burning.

*Enter OTHELLO,*⁸ locking the Door after him.

Oth. It is the cause, it is the cause, my soul,—

Let me not name it to you, you chaste stars!—

It is the cause.—Yet I'll not shed her blood;

Nor scar that whiter skin of hers than snow,

And smooth as monumental alabaster.

Yet she must die, else she'll betray more men.

Put out the light, and then—put out the light?

If I quench thee, thou flaming minister,

I can again thy former light restore,

Should I repent me; but once put out thy light,⁹

Thou cunning'st¹⁰ pattern of excell'ing nature,

I know not where is that Promethean heat,

That can thy light relume. When I have pluck'd the rose,

I cannot give it vital growth again,

It needs must wither:—I'll smell it¹¹ on the tree.—

[Kissing her.]

O balmy breath, that dost almost persuade

Justice to break her sword!—One more, one more.—

Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kill thee,

And love thee after.—One more, and this the last:

So sweet was ne'er so fatal. I must weep,

But they are cruel tears: this sorrow's heavenly;

It strikes, where it doth love.—She wakes—

Des. Who's there? Othello?

Oth.

Ay, Desdemona.

Des. Will you come to bed, my lord?

Oth. Have you pray'd to-night, Desdemona?

Des.

Ay, my lord

Oth. If you bethink yourself of any crime,

Unreconcil'd as yet to heaven and grace,

Solicit for it straight.

Des. Alas, my lord! what may you mean by that?

Oth. Well, do it, and be brief; I will walk by:

I would not kill thy unprepared spirit;

No, heaven forbid, I would not kill thy soul.

Des. Talk you of killing?

Oth.

Ay, I do.

Des. Then, heaven

Have mercy on me!

Oth.

Amen, with all my heart.

Des. If you say so, I hope you will not kill me.

Oth. Humph!

Des. And yet I fear you: for you are fatal then,

When your eyes roll so. Why I should fear, I know not Since guiltiness I know not; but yet, I feel I fear.

Oth. Think on thy sins.

Des.

They are loves I bear to you

Oth. Ay, and for that thou diest.

Des. That death's unnatural, that kills for loving.—

Alas! why gnaw you so your nether lip?

Some bloody passion shakes your very frame:

These are portents; but yet, I hope, I hope,

They do not point on me.

Oth. Peace, and be still!

Des. I will so. What's the matter?

Oth. That handkerchief, which I so lov'd, and gave thee,

Thou gav'st to Cassio.

Des. No, by my life and soul!

Send for the man, and ask him.

Oth. Sweet soul, take heed,
Take heed of perjury; thou'rt on thy death-bed.

Des. Ay, but not yet to die.

Oth. Yes, presently:

Therefore, confess thee freely of thy sin;

For to deny each article with oath,

Cannot remove, nor choke, the strong conception,

That I do groan withal. Thou art to die.

Des. Then, Lord, have mercy on me!

Oth. I say, amen.

Des. And have you mercy too!—I never did

Offend you in my life; never lov'd Cassio,

But with such general warranty of heaven

As I might love: I never gave him token.

Oth. By heaven, I saw my handkerchief in 's hand.

O perjur'd woman! thou dost stone my heart,

And mak'st me call, what I intend to do,

A murder, which I thought a sacrifice.

I saw the handkerchief.

Des. He found it then;

I never gave it him.—Send for him hither;

Let him confess a truth.

Oth. He hath confess'd.

Des. What, my lord?

Oth. That he hath—us'd thee.*

Des. How? unlawfully?

Oth. Ay.

Des. He will not say so.

Oth. No, his mouth is stopp'd;

Honest Iago hath ta'en order for 't.

Des. My fear interprets then.—What! is he dead?

Oth. Had all his hairs been lives, my great revenge
Had stomach for them all.

Des. Alas! he is betray'd, and I undone.

Oth. Out, strumpet! Weep'st thou for him to my face?

Des. O! banish me, my lord, but kill me not.

Oth. Down, strumpet!

Des. Kill me to-morrow; let me live to-night.

Oth. Nay, if you strive,—

Des. But half an hour.

Oth. Being done,

There is no pause.†

Des. But while I say one prayer.

Oth. It is too late.

Des. O Lord, Lord, Lord!‡ [He smothers her.

Emil. [Within.] My lord, my lord! what ho! my lord, my lord!

Oth. What noise is this?—Not dead—yet quite dead?

I. that am cruel, am yet merciful;

I would not have thee linger in thy pain—

So, so. [Stabs her.†

Emil. [Within.] What ho: my lord, my lord!

Oth. Who's there? If

Emil. [Within.] O, good my lord! I would speak a word with you.

Oth. Yes;—'t is Emilia.—By and by.—She's dead.

'T is like she comes to speak of Cassio's death;

The noise was high.—Ha! no more moving?

Still as the grave.—Shall she come in? Were 't good?

I think she stirs again:—no.—What's the best?

If she come in, she'll sure speak to my wife:

My wife! my wife! what wife?—I have no wife:

O insupportable, O heavy hour!

Methinks it should be now a huge eclipse

Of sun and moon, and that th' affrighted globe

Should 't yawm at alteration.

Emil. [Within.] I do beseech you, I may speak with
you.

O, good my lord!

Oth. I had forgot thee. O! come in, Emilia.—

Soft,—by and by:—let me the curtains draw.—

Where art thou? What's the matter with thee now?

[Unlocks the Door.

Enter EMILIA.

Emil. O, good my lord! yonder's foul murder done,

Oth. What! now?

Emil. But now, my lord!

Oth. It is the very error of the moon;

She comes more near the earth than she was wont

And makes men mad.

Emil. Cassio, my lord, has kill'd a young Venetian.
Call'd Roderigo.

Oth. Roderigo kill'd?

And Cassio kill'd?

Emil. No; Cassio is not kill'd.

Oth. Not Cassio kill'd? Then murder's out of tune,
And sweet revenge grows harsh.

Des. O, falsely, falsely murder'd!

Emil. Alas! what cry is that

Oth. That! what?

Emil. Out, and alas! that was* my lady's voice—
Help! Help, ho! help!—O lady, speak again!

[Going to the bed.†

Sweet Desdemona! O, sweet mistress, speak!

Des. A guiltless death I die.

Emil. O! who hath done
This deed?

Des. Nobody; I myself; farewell:

Commend me to my kind lord. O farewell! [Dies.

Oth. Why, how should she be murder'd?

Emil. Alas, who knows.

Oth. You heard¹⁰ her say herself, it was not I.

Emil. She said so; I must needs report a truth.

Oth. She's like a liar gone to burning hell:

'T was I that kill'd her.

Emil. O! the more angel she,

And you the blacker devil.

Oth. She turn'd to folly, and she was a whore.

Emil. Thou dost belie her, and thou art a devil

Oth. She was false as water.

Emil. Thou art rash as fire to say

That she was false: O! she was heavenly true.

Oth. Cassio did top her; ask thy husband else.—

O! I were damn'd beneath all depth in hell,

But that I did proceed upon just grounds

To this extremity.—Thy husband knew it all.

Emil. My husband?

Oth. Thy husband.

Emil. That she was false to wedlock?

Oth. Ay, with Cassio. Nay,¹¹ had she been true,

If heaven would make me such another world

Oth. Ay, 't was he that told me¹ first:
An honest man he is, and hates the slime
That sticks on filthy deeds.

Emil. My husband?

Oth. What needs this iteration,² woman? I say, thy husband.

Emil. O mistress! villainy hath made mocks with love,—

My husband say, that she was false?

Oth. He, woman;

I say, thy husband: dost understand the word?

My friend, thy husband, honest, honest Iago.

Emil. If he say so, may his pernicious soul

Rot half a grain a day! he lies to the heart:

She was too fond of her most filthy bargain.

Oth. Ha! [Threatening her.]

Emil. Do thy worst:

This deed of thine is no more worthy heaven,

Than thou wast worthy her.

Oth. Peace! you were best.

Emil. Thou hast not half the⁴ power to do me harm,

As I have to be hurt. O gull! O dolt!

As ignorant as dirt! thou hast done a deed,—

I care not for thy sword; I'll make thee known,

Though I lost twenty lives.—Help! help, ho! help!

The Moor has kill'd my mistress! Murder! murder!

Enter MONTANO, GRATIANO, and IAGO.

Mon. What is the matter?—How now, general!

Emil. O! are you come, Iago? you have done well,

That men must lay their murders on your neck.

Gra. What is the matter?

Emil. Disprove this villain, if thou be'st a man:

He says, thou told'st him that his wife was false.

I know, thou didst not, thou'rt not such a villain.

Speak, for my heart is full.

Iago. I told him what I thought; and told no more

Than what he found himself was apt and true.

Emil. But did you ever tell him, she was false?

Iago. I did.

Emil. You told a lie; an odious, damned lie;

Upon my soul, a lie; a wicked lie.—

She false with Cassio!—Did you say with Cassio?

Iago. With Cassio, mistress. Go to, charm your tongue.

Emil. I will not charm my tongue; I am bound to speak.

My mistress here lies murder'd in her bed.⁵

All. O, heaven forfend!

Emil. And your reports have set the murderer on.

Oth. Nay, stare not, masters: it is true, indeed.

Gra. 'T is a strange truth.

Mon. O monstrous act!

Emil. Villainy! villainy! villainy!

I think upon't,—I think,—I smell't:—O villainy!

I thought so then:—I'll kill myself for grief.—

O villainy, villainy!

Iago. What! are you mad? I charge you, get you home.

Emil. Good gentlemen, let me have leave to speak:

'T is proper I obey him, but not now.—

Perchance, Iago, I will ne'er go home.

Oth. O! O! O! [Falling on the ground.]

Emil. Nay, lay thee down and roar,

For thou hast kill'd the sweetest innocent,

That e'er did lift up eye.

Oth. O! she was foul!— [Starting:]

I scarce did know you, uncle: there lies your niece,
Whose breath, indeed, these hands have newly stopp'd;
I know, this act shows terrible⁷ and grim.

Gra. Poor Desdemona! I am glad thy father's dead

Thy match was mortal to him, and pure grief

Shore his old thread in twain: did he live now,

This sight would make him do a desperate turn,

Yea, curse his better angel from his side,

And fall to reprobation.⁸

Oth. 'T is pitiful; but yet Iago knows,

That she with Cassio hath the act of shame

A thousand times committed: Cassio confess'd it;

And she did gratify his amorous works

With that recognizance and pledge of love

Which I first gave her. I saw it in his hand;

It was a handkerchief, an antique token

My father gave my mother.

Emil. O heaven! O heavenly powers!

Iago. Come, hold your peace.

Emil. 'T will out, 't will out:—I hold my peace,
sir? no;

No, I will speak as liberal as the wind.⁹

Let heaven, and men, and devils, let them all,

All, all, cry shame against me, yet I'll speak.

Iago. Be wise, and get you home. [Drawing.]

Emil. I will not. [IAGO offers to stab EMIL.]

Gra. Fie!

Your sword upon a woman?

Emil. O thou dull Moor! that handkerchief thou speak'st of,

I found by fortune, and did give my husband:

For often, with a solemn earnestness,

More than, indeed, belong'd to such a trifle)

He begg'd of me to steal it.

Iago. Villainous whore! [They hold him.]

Emil. She give it Cassio! no, alas! I found it,

And I did give't my husband.

Iago. Filth, thou liest. [Stabs her, and exit instantly]

Emil. By heaven, I do not; I do not, gentlemen.

O murderous coxcomb! what should such a fool

Do with so good a wife?¹²

Oth. Are there no stones in heaven,

But what serve for the thunder?—Precious villain!

Gra. The woman falls: sure, he has kill'd his wife.

Emil. Ay, ay.—O, lay me by my mistress' side!

Gra. He's gone, but his wife's kill'd.

Mon. 'T is a notorious villain. Take you this weapon,

Which I have here¹³ recover'd from the Moor.

Come, guard the door without: let him not pass,

But kill him rather. I'll after that same villain,

For 't is a damned slave.

[Exit MONTANO and GRATIANO.]

Oth. I am not valiant neither,

But every puny whipster gets my sword.

But why should honour outlive honesty?

Let it go all.

*Emil.*¹⁴ What did thy song bode, lady?

Hark, canst thou hear me? I will play the swan,

And die in music:—Willow, willow, willow.—

Moor, she was chaste; she lov'd thee, cruel Moor:

So come my soul to bliss, as I speak true;

So speaking as I think, I die.—I die.

[Dies.]

Oth. I have another weapon in this chamber,

It is a sword of Spain, the ice-brook's temper.—

O! here it is.—Uncle, I must come forth.

Gra. [Within.] If thou attempt it, it will cost thee dear:

Thou hast no weapon, and perforce must suffer.

Oth. Look in upon me, then, and speak to¹ me, Or, naked as I am, I will assault thee.

Re-enter GRATIANO.

Gra. What is the matter?

Oth. Behold! I have a weapon;

A better never did itself sustain

Upon a soldier's thigh: I have seen the day,

That, with this little arm, and this good sword,

I have made my way through more impediments

Than twenty times your state.—But, O vain boast!

Who can control his fate? 'tis not so now.—

Be not afraid, though you do see me weapon'd;²

Here is my journey's end, here is my butt,

And very sea-mark of my utmost sail.

Do you go back dismay'd? 'tis a lost fear;

Man but a rush against Othello's breast,

And he retires.—Where should Othello go?—

Now, how dost thou look now? O ill-starr'd wench!

Pale as thy smock! when we shall meet at compt,

This look of thine will hurl my soul from heaven,

And fiends will snatch at it. Cold, cold, my girl;

Even like thy chastity.—O, curs'd³ slave!—

Whip me, ye devils,

From the possession of this heavenly sight!

Blow me about in winds! roast me in sulphur!

Wash me in steep-down gulfs of liquid fire!

O Desdemona! Desdemona! dead? O! O!⁴

Enter LOBOVICO and CASSIO.

Lod. Where is this rash and most unfortunate man?

Oth. That's he, that was Othello: here I am.

Lod. Where is that viper? bring the villain forth.

Enter MONTANO with IAGO, BOUIND, and OFFICERS.⁵

Oth. I look down towards his feet:—but that's a fable:

If that thou be'st a devil, I cannot kill thee.

[OTHELLO wounds IAGO.

Lod. Wrench his sword from him.

Iago. I bleed, sir; but not kill'd.

Oth. I am not sorry neither: I'd have thee live;

For, in my sense, 'tis happiness to die.

Lod. O thou Othello! that wert once so good,

Fall'n in the practice of a damned slave,

What shall be said to thee?

Oth. Why, any thing:

An honourable murderer, if you will;

For nought I did in hate, but all in honour.

Lod. This wretch hath part confess'd his villainy

Did you and he consent in Cassio's death?

Oth. Ay.

Cas. Dear general, I never gave you cause.

Oth. I do believe it, and I ask your pardon.

Will you, I pray, demand that demi-devil,

Why he hath thus ensnar'd my soul and body?

Iago. Demand me nothing: what you know, you know.

From this time forth I never will speak word.

Lod. What! not to pray?

Gra. Torments will ope your lips.

Oth. Well, thou dost best.

Lod. Sir, you shall understand what hath befall'n,

Which, as I think, you know not. Here is a letter,

Found in the pocket of the slain Roderigo; [Showing it.⁶

And here another: the one of them imports

The death of Cassio to be undertook

By Roderigo.

Oth. O villain!

Cas. Most heathenish, and most grosse

Lod. Now, here's another discontented paper,

[Producing it

Found in his pocket too: and this, it seems,

Roderigo meant to have sent this damned villain;

But that, belike, Iago in the interim⁷

Came in and satisfied him.

Oth. O, the pernicious caitiff!—

How came you, Cassio, by that handkerchief,

That was my wife's?

Cas. I found it in my chamber;

And he himself confess'd, but even now,

That there he dropp'd it, for a special purpose,

Which wrought to his desire.

Oth. O fool! fool! fool!

Cas. There is, besides, in Roderigo's letter,

How he upbraids Iago, that he made him

Brave me upon the watch; whereon it came

That I was cast: and even but now he spake,

After long seeming dead,—Iago hurt him,

Iago set him on.

Lod. You must forsake this room, and go with us

Your power and your command is taken off,

And Cassio rules in Cyprus. For this slave,

If there be any cunning cruelty

That can torment him much, and hold him long,

It shall be his. You shall close prisoner rest

Till that the nature of your fault be known

To the Venetian state.—Come: bring them⁸ away.

Oth. Soft you; a word or two, before you go.

I have done the state some service, and they know it;

No more of that.—I pray you, in your letters,

When you shall these unlucky deeds relate,

Speak of me as I am; nothing extenuate,

Nor set down aught in malice: then, must you speak

Of one that lov'd, not wisely, but too well;

Of one not easily jealous, but, being wrought⁹,

Perplex'd in the extreme; of one, whose hand,

Like the base Indian,¹⁰ threw a pearl away

Richer than all his tribe; of one, whose subdued eyes,

Albeit unused to the melting mood,

Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees

Their medicinal¹¹ gum. Set you down this;

And say, besides, that in Aleppo once,

When¹² a malignant and a turban'd Turk

Beat a Venetian, and traduc'd the state,

I took by the throat the circumcised dog,

And smote him—thus. [Stabs himself]

Lod. O bloody period!

Gra. All that's spoke is marr'd

Oth. I kiss'd thee, ere I kill'd thee:—no way but this,

Killing myself, to die upon a kiss. [Dies on the Bed]

Cas. This did I fear, but thought he had no weapon

For he was great of heart.

Lod. O Spartan dog!

More fell than anguish, hunger, or the sea,

Look on the tragic loading¹³ of this bed; [To IAGO

This is thy work: the object poisons sight;

Let it be hid.—Gratiano, keep the house,

And seize upon the fortunes of the Moor,

For they succeed on you.—To you, lord governor,

Remains the censure of this hellish villain;

The time, the place, the torture:—O, enforce it!

Myself will straight aboard, and to the state

This heavy act with heavy heart relate. [Exeunt]

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Alexandria. A Room in CLEOPATRA'S Palace.

Enter DEMETRIUS and PHILO.

Phi. Nay, but this dotage of our general's O'erflows the measure : those his goodly eyes,
 That o'er the files and musters of the war
 Have glow'd like plated Mars, now bend, now turn
 The office and devotion of their view
 Upon a tawny front : his captain's heart,
 Which in the scuffles of great fights hath burst
 The buckles on his breast, reneges¹ all temper,
 And is become the bellows, and the fan,
 To cool a gipsy's lust. Look, where they come.
Flourish. Enter ANTONY and CLEOPATRA, with their Trains ; Eunuchs fanning her.
 Take but good note, and you shall see in him
 The triple pillar of the world transform'd
 Into a strumpet's fool : behold and see.

Cleo. If it be love indeed, tell me how much.

Ant. There's beggary in the love that can be reckon'd.

Cleo. I'll set a bourn how far to be belov'd.

Ant. Then must thou needs find out new heaven, new earth.

Enter an Attendant.

Att. News, my good lord, from Rome.

Ant. Grates me :—the sum.

Cle. Nay, hear them, Antony :

Fulvia, perchance, is angry ; or, who knows
 If the scarce-bearded Cæsar have sent
 His powerful mandate to you, " Do this, or this ;

Take in that kingdom, and enfranchise that ;
 Perform't, or else we doom'd thee."

Ant. How, my love !

Cleo. Perchance,—nay, and most like.—

You must not stay here longer ; your dismission
 Is come from Cæsar ; therefore hear it, Antony.—
 Where's Fulvia's process ? Cæsar's, I would say —
 Both?—

Call in the messengers.—As I am Egypt's queen,
 Thou blushest, Antony, and that blood of thine
 Is Cæsar's homager ; else so thy cheek pays shame,
 When shrill-tongu'd Fulvia scolds.—The messengers

Ant. Let Rome in Tyber melt, and the wide arch
 Of the rang'd empire fall ! Here is my space.
 Kingdoms are clay : our dunghy earth alike
 Feeds beast as man : the nobleness of life
 Is to do thus : when such a mutual pair. [Embracing
 And such a twain can do't, in which I bind,
 On pain of punishment, the world to weet,²
 We stand up peerless.

Cleo. Excellent falsehood !
 Why did he marry Fulvia, and not love her?—
 I'll seen the fool I am not ; Antony
 Will be himself.

Ant. But stirr'd by Cleopatra.—
 Now, for the love of Love, and her soft hours,
 Let's not confound the time with conference harsh :
 There's not a minute of our lives should stretch
 Without some pleasure now. What sport to-night ?

Cleo. Hear the ambassadors.

Ant. Fie, wrangling queen
 Whom every thing becomes, to chide, to laugh,

¹ Thence ² damn : in f. e. ³ Known

To weep; whose every fashion fitly¹ strives
To make itself, in thee, fair and admir'd.
No messenger; but thine, and all alone,
To-night we'll wander through the streets, and note
The qualities of people. Come, my queen;
Last night you did desire it.—Speak not to us.

[Exeunt ANT. and CLEOP. with their Train.]

Dem. Is Cæsar with Antonius priz'd so slight?

Phi. Sir, sometimes, when he is not Antony,
He comes too short of that great property
Which still should go with Antony.

Dem. I am full sorry,
That he approves the common liar, who
Thus speaks of him at Rome; but I will hope
Of better deeds to-morrow. Rest you happy. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. Another Room.

Enter CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS, and a Soothsayer.

Char. Lord Alexas, most sweet Alexas, most any thing Alexas, almost most absolute Alexas, where's the soothsayer that you praised so to the queen? O!
that I knew this husband, which, you say, must charge² his horns with garlands!

Alex. Soothsayer!

Sooth. Your will?

Char. Is this the man?—Is't you, sir, that know things?

Sooth. In nature's infinite book of secrecy
A little I can read.

Alex. Show him your hand.

Enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. Bring in the banquet quickly; wine enough,
Cleopatra's health to drink.

Char. Good sir, give me good fortune.

Sooth. I make not, but foresee.

Char. Pray, then, foresee me one.

Sooth. You shall be yet far fairer than you are.

Char. He means, in flesh.

Irás. No, you shall part when you are old.

Char. Wrinkles forbid!

Alex. Vex not his prescience; be attentive.

Char. Hush!

Sooth. You shall be more loving, than belov'd.

Char. I had rather heat my liver with drinking.

Alex. Nay, hear him.

Char. Good now, some excellent fortune. Let me be married to three kings in a forenoon, and widow them all: let me have a child at fifty, to whom Herod of Jewry may do homage: find me to marry me with Octavius Cæsar, and companion me with my mistress.

Sooth. You shall outlive the lady whom you serve.

Char. O excellent! I love long life better than figs.

Sooth. You have seen, and proved a fairer former fortune,

Than that which is to approach.

Char. Then, belike, my children shall have no names. Pr'ythee, how many boys and wenches must I have?

Sooth. If every of your wishes had a womb,
And fruitful³ every wish, a million.

Char. Out, fool! I forgive thee for a witch.

Alex. You think, none but your sheets are privy to your wishes.

Char. Nay, come; tell Irás hers.

Alex. We'll know all our fortunes.

Eno. Mine, and most of our fortunes, to-night, shall be, drunk to bed.

Irás. There's a palm presages chastity, if nothing else.

Char. Even as the o'erflowing Nilus presageth famine.

Irás. Go, you wild bedfellow, you cannot soothsay.

Char. Nay, if an oily palm be not a fruitful prognostication, I cannot scratch mine ear.—Pr'ythee, tell her but a work-day fortune.

Sooth. Your fortunes are alike.

Irás. But how? but how? give me particulars.

Sooth. I have said.

Irás. Am I not an inch of fortune better than she?

Char. Well, if you were but an inch of fortune better than I, where would you choose it?

Irás. Not in my husband's nose.

Char. Our worse thoughts heavens mend! Alexas, —come, his fortune, his fortune.—O! let him marry a woman that cannot go, sweet Isis, I beseech thee:
and let her die too, and give him a worse; and let worse follow worse, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave, fifty-fold a cuckold. Good Isis, hear me this prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight, good Isis, I beseech thee!

Irás. Amen. Dear goddess, hear that prayer of the people; for, as it is a heart-breaking to see a handsome man loose-wived, so it is a deadly sorrow to behold a foul knave uncuckolded: therefore, dear Isis, keep decorum, and fortune him accordingly!

Char. Amen.

Alex. Lo, now! if it lay in their hands to make me a cuckold, they would make themselves whores, but they'd do't.

Eno. Hush! here comes Antony.

Char. Not he, the queen.

Enter CLEOPATRA.

Cleo. Saw you my lord?

Eno. No, lady.

Cleo. Was he not here?

Char. No, madam.

Cleo. He was dispos'd to mirth; but on the sudden,
A Roman thought hath struck him.—Enobarbus!—

Eno. Madam.

Cleo. Seek him, and bring him hither. Where's Alexas?

Alex. Here, at your service.—My lord approaches.

Enter ANTONY, with a Messenger and Attendants.

Cleo. We will not look upon him: go with us.

[Exeunt CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, ALEXAS, IRAS,
CHARMIAN, Soothsayer, and Attendants.]

Mess. Fulvia, thy wife, first came into the field.

Ant. Against my brother Lucius?

Mess. Ay:

But soon that war had end, and the time's state
Made friends of them, joining their force 'gainst Cæsar;
Whose better issue in the war, from Italy
Upon the first encounter drove them.

Ant. Well, what worst?

Mess. The nature of bad news infests the teller.

Ant. When it concerns the fool or coward.—On:
Things, that are past, are done, with me.—'T is thus;
Who tells me true, though in his tale lie death,
I hear him as he flatter'd.

Mess.

Labienus
(This is stiff news) hath with his Parthian force
Extended⁴ Asia from Euphrates;
His conquering banner shook from Syria
To Lydia, and to Ionia; whilst—

Ant. Antony, thou wouldst say,—

Mess. O, my lord!

Ant. Speak to me home, mince not the general's tongue;

¹ fully: in f. s. ² change: in folios. ³ fertile: in f. s. e.; foretell: in folio. ⁴ Seized.

Name Cleopatra as she is call'd in Rome;
 Rail thou in Fulvia's phrase, and taunt my faults
 With such full license, as both truth and malice
 Have power to utter. O! then we bring forth weeds,
 When our quick winds lie still; and our ills told us,
 Is as our earing.¹ Fare thee well awhile.

Mess. At your noble pleasure. [Exit.]

Ant. From Sicily now the news? Speak there.

1 Att. The man from Sicily!—Is there such an one?

2 Att. He stays upon your will.

Ant. Let him appear.—

These strong Egyptian fetters I must break,

Enter another Messenger.

Or lose myself in dotage.—What are you?

2 Mess. Fulvia thy wife is dead.

Ant. Where died she?

2 Mess. In Sicily:

Her length of sickness, with what else more serious
 Importeth thee to know, this bears. [Giving a Letter.]

Ant. Forbear me.—

[Exit Messenger.]

There's a great spirit gone. Thus did I desire it:

What our contempt do often hurl from us,

We wish it ours again; the present pleasure,

By repetition souring,² does become

The opposite of itself: she's good, being gone;

The hand would pluck her back, that shov'd her on.

I must from this enchanting queen break off;

Ten thousand harms, more than the ills I know,

My idleness doth hatch.—How now! Enobarbus!

Enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. What's your pleasure, sir?

Ant. I must with haste from hence.

Eno. Why, then, we kill all our women. We see how mortal an unkindness is to them: if they suffer our departure, death's the word.

Ant. I must be gone.

Eno. Under a compelling occasion, let women die:
 it were pity to cast them away for nothing; though, between them and a great cause, they should be esteemed nothing. Cleopatra, catching but the least noise of this, dies instantly: I have seen her die twenty times upon far poorer moment. I do think, there is mettle in death, which commits some loving act upon her. she hath such a celerity in dying.

Ant. She is cunning past man's thought.

Eno. Alack, sir! no: her passions are made of nothing but the finest part of pure love. We cannot call her winds and waters, sighs and tears; they are greater storms and tempests than almanacs can report:
 this cannot be cunning in her; if it be, she makes a shower of rain as well as Jove.

Ant. Would I have never seen her!

Eno. O, sir! you had then left unseen a wonderful piece of work, which not to have been blessed withal would have discredited your travel.

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Sir?

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Fulvia!

Ant. Dead.

Eno. Why, sir, give the gods a thankful sacrifice.
 When it pleaseth their deities to take the wife of a man from him, it shows to man the tailors of the earth:
 comforting therein, that when old robes are worn out, there are members to make new. If there were no more women but Fulvia, then had you indeed a cut, and the case to be lamented: this grief is crowned with consolation: your old smock brings forth a new petticoat; and, indeed, the tears live in an onion, that should water this sorrow.

Ant. The business she hath broached in the state
 Cannot endure my absence.

Eno. And the business you have broached here cannot be without you; especially that of Cleopatra's, which wholly depends on your abode.

Ant. No more light answers. Let our officers

Have notice what we purpose. I shall break

The cause of our expedience* to the queen,

And get her leave* to part: for not alone

The death of Fulvia, with more urgent touches,

Do strongly speak to us, but the letters, too,

Of many our contriving friends in Rome

Petition us at home. Sextus Pompeius

Hath given the dare to Cæsar, and commands

The empire of the sea: our slippery people

(Whose love is never link'd to the deserger,

Till his deserts are past) begin to throw

Pompey the great, and all his dignities,

Upon his son: who, high in name and power,

Higher than both in blood and life, stands up

For the main soldier; whose quality, going on,

The sides o' the world may danger. Much is breeding

Which, like the courser's hair, hath yet but life,

And not a serpent's poison.³ Say, our pleasure,

To such whose place is under us, requires

Our quick remove from hence.

Eno.

I shall do it. [Exeunt]

SCENE III.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.

Cleo. Where is he?

Char. I did not see him since.

Cleo. See where he is, who's with him, what he does.

I did not send you.—If you find him sad,

Say, I am dancing; if in mirth, report

That I am sudden sick: quick, and return. [Exit ALEXAS]

Char. Madam, methinks, if you did love him dearly,

You do not hold the method to enforce

The like from him.

Cleo. What should I do, I do not?

Char. In each thing give him way, cross him in nothing.

Cleo. Thou teachest, like a fool, the way to lose him.

Char. Tempt him not so too far; I wish, forbear.

In time we hate that which we once fear.

Enter ANTONY.

But here comes Antony.

Cleo. I am sick, and sullen.

Ant. I am sorry to give breathing to my purpose.—

Cleo. Help me away, dear Charmian, I shall fall:

It cannot be thus long; the sides of nature

Will not sustain it.

Ant. Now, my dearest queen,—

Cleo. Pray you, stand farther from me.

Ant.

What's the matter?

Cleo. I know, by that same eye, there's some good news.

What says the married woman?—You may go:

Would, she had never given you leave to come!

Let her not say, 't is I that keep you here,

I have no power upon you; hers you are.

Ant. The gods best know.—

Cleo.

O! never was there queen

So mightily betray'd; yet at the first

I saw the treasons planted.

¹ Ploughing our "quick winds" which dry the soil for the plough. ² By revolution lowering: in f. e. ³ Dyce reads: He' ⁴ Expedi- tion. ⁵ love: in folio. ⁶ A. allusion to the ancient belief, that a horse hair laid into water, turned into a snake.

Ant.

Cleopatra,—

Cleo. Why should I think, you can be mine, and true,
Though you in swearing shake the throned gods,
Who have been false to Fulvia? Riotous madness,
To be entangled with those mouth-made vows,
Which break themselves in swearing!

Ant.

Most sweet queen,—

Cleo. Nay, pray you, seek no colour for your going,
But bid farewell, and go: when you sued staying,
Then was the time for words; no going then:
Eternity was in our lips, and eyes;
Bliss in our brows bent; none our parts so poor,
But was a race of heaven: they are so still,
Or thou, the greatest soldier of the world,
Art turn'd the greatest liar.

Ant.

How now, lady!

Cleo. I would, I had thy inches; thou shouldst know
There were a heart in Egypt.

Ant.

Hear me, queen.

The strong necessity of time commands
Our services a while, but my full heart
Remains in use with you. Our Italy
Shines o'er with civil swords: Sextus Pompeius
Makes his approaches to the port of Rome:
Equality of two domestic powers
Breeds scrupulous faction. The hated, grown to strength,
Are newly grown to love: the condemn'd Pompey,
Rich in his father's honour, creeps apace
Into the hearts of such as have not thriv'd
Upon the present state, whose numbers threaten;
And quietness, grown sick of rest, would purge
By any desperate change. My more particular,
And that which most with you should save my going,
Is Fulvia's death.

Cleo. Though age from folly could not give me freedom,

It does from childishness.—Can Fulvia die?

Ant.

She's dead, my queen.
Look here, and, at thy sovereign leisure, read
The garbolls¹ she awak'd; at the last, best,
See, when, and where she died.

Cleo.

O, most false love!

Where be the sacred vials thou shouldst fill
With sorrowful water? Now I see, I see,
In Fulvia's death, how mine receiv'd shall be.

Ant.

Quarrel no more, but be prepar'd to know
The purposes I bear; which are, or cease,
As you shall give the advice: by the fire
That quickens Nilus' slime, I go from hence,
Thy soldier, servant; making peace, or war,
As thou affect'st.

Cleo.

Cut my lace, Charmian, come.—
But let it be.—I am quickly ill, and well,
So Antony loves.

Ant.

My precious queen, forbear;
And give true erendence² to his love, which stands
An honourable trial.

Cleo.

So Fulvia told me.
I prythee, turn aside, and weep for her;
Then bid adieu to me, and say, the tears
Belong to Egypt: good now, play one scene
Of excellent dissembling; and let it look
Like perfect honour.

Ant.

You'll heat my blood: no more.

Cleo.

You can do better yet, but this is meetly.

Ant.

Now, by my sword,—

Cleo.

And target.—Still he menas;
But this is not the best. Look, prythee, Charmian,
How this Herculean Roman does become

The carriage of his chafe.

Ant. I'll leave you, lady.

Cleo.

Courteous lord, one word
Sir, you and I must part,—but that 's not it:
Sir, you and I have lov'd,—but there 's not it,
That you know well: something it is I would,—
O! my oblivion is a very Antony,
And I am all forgotten.

Ant.

But that your royalty
Holds idleness your subject, I should take you
For idleness itself.

Cleo.

'T is sweating labour
To bear such idleness so near the heart,
As Cleopatra this. But, sir, forgive me;
Since my becomings kill me, when they do not
Eye well to you: your honour calls you hence;
Therefore, be deaf to my unpitied folly,
And all the gods go with you! upon your sword
Sit laurel'd victory, and smooth success
Be strew'd before your feet!

Ant.

Let us go. Come;
Our separation so abides, and flies,
That thou, residing here, go'st yet with me,
And I, hence fleeting, here remain with thee.
Away!

[Fewel.]

SCENE IV.—Rome. An Apartment in CÆSAR'S House.

Enter OCTAVIUS CÆSAR, LEPIDUS, and Attendants

Cæs. You may see, Lepidus, and henceforth know
It is not Cæsar's natural vice to hate
Our³ great competitor. From Alexandria
This is the news: he fishes, drinks, and wastes
The lamps of night in revel; is not more manlike
Than Cleopatra, nor the queen of Ptolemy,
More womanly than he: hardly gave audience, or Vouchsaf'd to think he had partners: you shall find
there

A man, who is the abstract of all faults
That all men follow.

Lep.

I must not think, there are
Evils enow to darken all his goodness:
His faults, in him, seem as the spots of heaven,
More fiery by night's blackness; hereditary,
Rather than purchas'd: what he cannot change,
Than what he chooses.

Cæs. You are too indulgent. Let us grant, it is no
Amis to tumble on the bed of Ptolemy,
To give a kingdom for a mirth; to sit
And keep the turn of tippling with a slave;
To reel the streets at noon, and stand the buffet
With knaves that smell of sweat: say, this becomes him.
(As his composure must be rare indeed,
Whom these things cannot blemish) yet must Antony
No way excuse his foils,⁴ when we do bear
So great weight in his lightness. If he fill'd
His vacancy with his voluptuousness,
Full surfeits, and the dryness of his bones,
Fall⁵ on him for 't; but, to confound such time,
That drums him from his sport, and speaks as loud
As his own state, and ours,—'t is to be chid
As we rate boys; who, being mature in knowledge,
Pawn their experience to their present pleasure,
And so rebel to judgment.

Enter a Messenger.

Lep.

Here's more news.
Mess. Thy biddings have been done; and every hour
Most noble Cæsar, shalt thou have report
How 't is abroad. Pompey is strong at sea,

And it appears, he is belov'd of those,
That only have fear'd Cæsar: to the fleets¹
The discontents repair, and men's reports
Give him much wrong'd.

Cæs. I should have known no less.
It hath been taught us from the primal state,
That he, which is, was wish'd, until he were:
And the ebb'd man ne'er lov'd, till ne'er worth love,
Comes lov'd by being lack'd. This common body,
Like to a vagabond flag upon the stream,
Goes to, and back, and lackeying² the varying tide,
To rot itself with motion.

Mess. Cæsar, I bring thee word,
Meneceates and Menas, famous pirates,
Make the sea serve them; which they ear³ and wound
With keels of every kind: many hot inroads
They make in Italy: the borders maritime
Lack blood to think on't, and flush youth revolt.
No vessel can peep forth, but 't is as soon
Taken as seen; for Pompey's name strikes more,
Than could his war resisted.

Cæs. Antony,
Leave thy lascivious wassels.⁴ When thou once
Wast beaten from Modena, where thou slew'st
Hirtius and Pansa, consuls, at thy heel
Did famine follow; whom thou fought'st against,
Though daintily brought up, with patience more
Than savages could suffer: thou didst drink
The stale of horses, and the gilded puddle,
Which beasts would cough at: thy palate then did deign
The roughest berry on the rudest hedge;
Yea, like the stag, when snow the pasture sheets,
The barks of trees thou brows'd'st: on the Alps
It is reported, thou didst eat strange flesh,
Which some did die to look on; and all this
[It wounds thine honour, that I speak it now]
Was borne so like a soldier, that thy cheek
So much as lank'd not.

Lep. 'T is pity of him.
Cæs. Let his shames quickly

Drive him to Rome. 'T is time we twain
Did show ourselves i' the field: and, to that end,
Assemble we⁵ immediate council: Pompey
Thrives in our idleness.

Lep. To-morrow, Cæsar,
I shall be furnish'd to inform you rightly
Both what by sea and land I can be able,
To front this present time.

Cæs. Till which encounter,
It is my business too. Farewell.

Lep. Farewell, my lord. What you shall know mean
time

Of stirs abroad, I shall beseech you, sir,
To let me be partaker.

Cæs. Doubt not, sir; I knew it for my bond.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and MARDIAN.

Cleo. Charmian!

Char. Madam.

Cleo. Ha, ha!—

Give me to drink mandragora.

Char. Why, madam?

Cleo. That I might sleep out this great gap of time,
My Antony is away.

Char. You think of him too much.

Cleo. O, 't is treason!

Char. Madam, I trust, not so.

Cleo. Thou, eunuch, Mardian—

Mar. What's your highness' pleasure?

Cleo. Not now to hear thee sing: I take no pleasure
In aught an eunuch has. 'T is well for thee,
That, being unseminar'd, thy freer thoughts
May not fly forth of Egypt. Hast thou affections?

Mar. Yes, gracious madam.

Cleo. Indeed?

Mar. Not in deed, madam; for I can do nothing.
But what in deed is honest to be done;
Yet have I fierce affections, and think
What Venus did with Mars.

Cleo. O, Charmian!

Where think'st thou he is now? Stands he, or sits he?
Or does he walk? or is he on his horse?

O, happy horse to bear the weight of Antony!

Do bravely, horse, for wot'st thou whom thou mov'st?

The demi-Atlas of this earth, the arm

And burgonet⁶ of men.—He's speaking now,

Or murmuring, "Where's my serpent of old Nile?"

For so he calls me. Now I feed myself

With most delicious poison:—think on me,

That am with Phæbus' amorous pinches black,

And wrinkled deep in time? Broad-fronted Cæsar,

When thou wast here above the ground, I was

A morsel for a monarch; and great Pompey

Would stand, and make his eyes grow in my brow:

There would he anchor his aspect, and die

With looking on his life.

Enter ALEXAS.

Alex. Sovereign of Egypt, hail!

Cleo. How much unlike art thou Mark Antony;

Yet, coming from him, that great medicine hath

With his tinct gilded thee.—

How goes it with my brave Mark Antony?

Alex. Last thing he did, dear queen,

He kiss'd,—the last of many doubled kisses,—

This orient pearl:—his speech sticks in my heart.

Cleo. Mine ear must pluck it thence.

Alex. Good friend, quoth he Say, "the firm Roman to great Egypt sends

This treasure of an oyster; at whose foot,

To mend the petty present, I will piece

Her opulent throne with kingdoms: all the east,"

Say thou, "shall call her mistress." So he nodded,

And soberly did mount an arm-girt⁷ steed,

Who neigh'd so high, that what I would have spoke

Was boastfully⁸ dumb'd by him.

Cleo. What! was he sad, or merry?

Alex. Like to the time o' the year between the extremes

Of hot and cold: he was nor sad, nor merry.

Cleo. O well-divided disposition!—Note him,

Note him, good Charmian, 't is the man; but note him

He was not sad, for he would shine on those

That make their looks by his: he was not merry,

Which seem'd to tell them, his remembrance lay

In Egypt with his joy; but between both:

O heavenly mingle!—Be'st thou sad, or merry,

The violence of either thee becomes,

So does it no man else.—Met'st thou my posts?

Alex. Ay, madam, twenty several messengers.

Why do you send so thick?

Cleo. Who's born that day

When I forget to send to Antony,

Shall die a beggar.—Ink and paper, Charmian.—

Welcome, my good Alexas.—Did I, Charmian,

¹ ports: in f. e. ² deard: in f. e.; fear'd: in folio. ³ lacking: in folio. Theobald made the change. ⁴ Plough. ⁵ vassal: in folio; some eds read: vassels. ⁶ me: in folio, 1623. ⁷ Helmet. ⁸ arm-gaunt: in f. e. ⁹ beavily: in f. e.

Ever love Cæsar so?

Char. O, that brave Cæsar!

Cleo. Be chok'd with such another emphasis!

Say, the brave Antony.

Char. The valiant Cæsar!

Cleo. By Isis, I will give thee bloody teeth,

If thou with Cæsar paragon again

My man of men

Char.

By your most gracious pardon,
I sing but after you.

Cleo.

My sallad days,
When I was green in judgment:—cold in blood,
To say as I said then!—But come, away:
Get me ink and paper;
He shall have every day a severa' greeting,
Or I'll unpeople Egypt. [Exeunt

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Messina. A Room in POMPEY'S House.

Enter POMPEY, MENEKRATES, and MENAS.

Pom. If the great gods be just, they shall assist
The deeds of justest men.

Mene. Know, worthy Pompey,
That what they do delay, they not deny.

Pom. Whiles we are suitors to their throne, decays
The thing we sue for.

Mene. We, ignorant of ourselves,
Beg often our own harms, which the wise powers
Deny us for our good; so find we profit
By losing of our prayers.

Pom. I shall do well.
The people love me, and the sea is mine;
My powers are crescent, and my auguring hope
Says, it will come to the full. Mark Antony
In Egypt sits at dinner, and will make
No wars without doors: Cæsar gets money, where
He loses hearts: Lepidus flatters both,
Of both is flatter'd; but he neither loves,
Nor either cares for him.

Men. Cæsar and Lepidus
Are in the field: a mighty strength they carry.

Pom. Where have you this? 't is false.

Men. From Silvius, sir.

Pom. He dreams: I know, they are in Rome together,
Looking for Antony. But all the charms of love,
Salt Cleopatra, soften thy warm¹ lip!
Let witchcraft join with beauty, lust with both:
Lay² up the libertine in a flood³ of feasts,
Keep his brain fuming; Epicurean cooks,
Sharpen with cloyless sauce his appetite,
That sleep and feeding may prorogue his honour,
Even till a Lethe'd dulness.—How now, Varrius!

Enter VARRIUS.

Var. This is most certain, that I shall deliver.
Mark Antony is every hour in Rome
Expected; since he went from Egypt, 't is
A space for farther travel.

Pom. I could have given less matter
A better ear.—Menas, I did not think,
This amorous surfeiter would have don'd his helm
For such a petty war: his soldiiership
Is twice the other twain. But let us rear
The higher our opinion, that our stirring
Can from the lap of Egypt's widow pluck
The ne'er-lust-wearied Antony.

Men. I cannot hope,
Cæsar and Antony shall well greet together:
His wife that's dead did trespass to Cæsar:
His brother warr'd upon him, although, I think,
Not mov'd by Antony.

Pom. I know not, Menas,
How lesser enmities may give way to greater.
Were't not that we stand up against them all,

'T were pregnant they should square⁴ between themselves;

For they have entertained cause enough
To draw their swords; but how the fear of us
May cement their divisions, and bind up
The petty difference, we yet not know.
Be it as our gods will have 't! It only stands
Our lives upon to use our strongest hands.
Come, Menas. [Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Rome. A Room in the House of LEPIDUS.

Enter ENOBARBUS and LEPIDUS.

Lep. Good Enobarbus, 't is a worthy deed,
And shall become you well, to entreat your captain
To soft and gentle speech.

Eno. I shall entreat him
To answer like himself: if Cæsar move him,
Let Antony look over Cæsar's head,
And speak as loud as Mars. By Jupiter,
Were I the wearer of Antonius' beard,
I would not shave 't to-day.

Lep. 'Tis not a time
For private stomaching.

Eno. Every time
Serves for the matter that is then born in 't.

Lep. But small to greater matters must give way.

Eno. Not if the small come first.

Lep. Your speech is passion
But, pray you, stir no embers up. Here comes
The noble Antony.

Enter ANTONY and VENTIDIUS.

Eno. And yonder, Cæsar.

Enter CÆSAR, MENEKRATES, and AGRIPPA.

Ant. If we compose well here, to Parthia:
Hark you, Ventidius.

Cæs. I do not know,
Mecænas; ask Agrippa.

Lep. Noble friends,
That which combin'd us was most great, and let not
A leaner action rend us. What 's amiss,
May it be gently heard: when we debate
Our trivial difference loud, we do commit
Murder in healing wounds. Then, noble partners,
(The rather, for I earnestly beseech)
Touch you the sourest points with sweetest terms,
Nor curtness grow to the matter.

Ant. 'T is spoken well.
Were we before our armies, and to fight,
I should do thus. [Shake hands

Cæs. Welcome to Rome.

Ant. Thank you.

Cæs. Sit.

Ant. Sit, sir.

Cæs. Nay, then—

Ant. I learn, you take things ill, which are not so
Or, being, concern you not.

Cæs. I must be laugh'd at,
If, or for nothing, or a little, I
Should say myself offended; and with you
Chiefly i' the world: more laugh'd at, that I should Once name you derogately, when to sound your name
It not concern'd me.

Ant. My being in Egypt, Cæsar,
What was't to you?

Cæs. No more than my residing here at Rome
Might be to you in Egypt: yet, if you there
Did practise on my state, your being in Egypt
Might be my question.

Ant. How intend you, practis'd?

Cæs. You may be pleas'd to catch at mine intent,
By what did here befall me. Your wife, and brother,
Made wars upon me, and their contestation
Was theme for you; you were the word of war.

Ant. You do mistake your business: my brother never Did urge me in his act: I did enquire it;
And have my learning from some true reports,
That drew their swords with you. Did he not rather Discredit my authority with yours;
And make the wars alike against my stomach,
Having alike your cause? Of this my letters
Before did satisfy you. If you'll patch a quarrel,
No matter whole you have to make it with,
It must not be with this.

Cæs. You praise yourself
By laying defects of judgment to me; but
You patch'd up your excuses.

Ant. Not so; not so;
I know you could not lack, I am certain on't,
Very necessity of this thought, that I,
Your partner in the cause 'gainst which he fought,
Could not with graceful eyes attend those wars
Which fronted mine own peace. As for my wife,
I would you had her spirit in such another:
The third o' the world is yours, which with a snaffle,
You may pace easy, but not such a wife.

Eno. Would we had all such wives, that the men might go to wars with the women!

Ant. So much uncurbable, her garboils. Cæsar,
Made out of her impatience, (which not wanted
Shrewdness of policy too) I grieving grant,
Did you too much disquiet: for that, you must
But say, I could not help it.

Cæs. I wrote to you,
When rioting in Alexandria; you
Did pocket up my letters, and with taunts
Did gibe my missive out of audience.

Ant. Sir,
He fell upon me, ere admitted: then—
Three kings I had newly feasted, and did want
Of what I was i' the morning; but, next day,
I told him of myself, which was as much
As to have ask'd him pardon. Let this fellow
Be nothing of our strife; if we contend,
Out of our question wipe him.

Cæs. You have broken
The article of your oath, which you shall never Have tongue to charge me with.

Lep. Soft, Cæsar.

Ant. No, Lepidus, let him speak:
The honour's sacred which he talks on now,
Supposing that I lack'd it. But on, Cæsar;
The article of my oath.

Cæs. To lend me arms and aid when I requir'd them,
The which you both denied.

Ant. Neglected, rather;

And then, when poison'd hours had bound me up
From mine own knowledge. As nearly as I may,
I'll play the penitent to you; but mine honesty
Shall not make poor my greatness, nor my power
Work without it. Truth is, that Fulvia,
To have me out of Egypt, made wars here;
For which myself, the ignorant motive, do
So far ask pardon, as befits mine honour
To stoop in such a case.

Lep. 'T is nobly spoken.

Mec. If it might please you, to enforce no farther:
The griefs between ye: to forget them quite,
Were to remember that the present need
Speaks to atone' you.

Lep. Worthily spoken. Mecænas.

Eno. Or, if you borrow one another's love for the instant, you may, when you hear no more words of Pompey, return it again: you shall have time to wrangle in, when you have nothing else to do.

Ant. Thou art a soldier only: speak no more.

Eno. That truth should be silent I had almost forgot

Ant. You wrong this presence; therefore, speak no more.

Eno. Go to then; you? considerate stone.

Cæs. I do not much dislike the matter, but
The manner of his speech; for it cannot be,
We shall remain in friendship, our conditions
So differing in their acts. Yet, if I knew What hoop should hold us staunch, from edge to edge

O' the world I would pursue it.

Aggr. Give me leave, Cæsar,—

Cæs. Speak, Agrippa.

Aggr. Thou hast a sister by the mother's side,
Admir'd Octavia: great Mark Antony
Is now a widower.

Cæs. Say not so, Agrippa:

If Cleopatra heard you, your reproof

Were well deserv'd for rashness.

Ant. I am not married, Cæsar: let me hear
Agrippa farther speak.

Aggr. To hold you in perpetual amity,
To make you brothers, and to knit your hearts
With an unslipping knot, take Antony
Octavia to his wife: whose beauty claims
No worse a husband than the best of men,
Whose virtue and whose general graces speak
That which none else can utter. By this marriage,
All little jealousies, which now seem great,
And all great fears, which now import their dangers,
Would then be nothing: truths would be tales,
Where now half tales be truths: her love to both,
Would, each to other, and all loves to both.
Draw after her. Pardon what I have spoke,
For 't is a studied, not a present thought,
My duty ruminated.

Ant. Will Cæsar speak?

Cæs. Not till he hears how Antony is touch'd
With what is spoke already.

Ant. What power is in Agrippa
If I would say, "Agrippa, be it so,"
To make this good?

Cæs. The power of Cæsar, and
His power unto Octavia.

Ant. May I never
To this good purpose, that so fairly shows,
Dream of impediment!—Let me have thy hand
Further this act of grace, and from this hour,
The hearts of brothers govern in our loves,

And away our great designs.

Cæs. There is my hand.
A sister I bequeath you, whom no brother [Ant. takes it.]
Did ever love so dearly : let her live
To join our kingdoms, and our hearts ; and never Fly off our loves again !

Lep. Happily, amen.

Ant. I did not think to draw my sword 'gainst
Pompey ;

For he hath laid strange courtesies, and great,
Of late upon me : I must thank him, only
Lest my remembrance suffer ill report ;
At heel of that, defy him.

Lep. Time calls upon us :
Of us must Pompey presently be sought,
Or else he seeks out us.

Ant. Where lies he ?

Cæs. About the Mount Misenum.

Ant. What's his strength
By land ?

Cæs. Great, and increasing ; but by sea
He is an absolute master.

Ant. So is the fame.
Would we had spoke together ! Haste we for it ;
Yet, ere we put ourselves in arms, despatch we
The business we have talk'd of.

Cæs. With most gladness ;
And do invite you to my sister's view,
Whither straight I'll lead you.

Ant. Let us, Lepidus,
Not lack your company.

Lep. Noble Antony,
Not sickness should detain me.

[Flourish. Exeunt CÆSAR, ANTONY, and LEPIDUS.]

Mec. Welcome from Egypt, sir.

Eno. Half the heart of Cæsar, worthy Mæcnas !—
my honourable friend, Agrippa !—

Agr. Good Enobarbus !

Mec. We have cause to be glad, that matters are so well digested. You stay'd well by it in Egypt.

Eno. Ay, sir ; we did sleep day out of countenance, and made the night light with drinking.

Mec. Eight wild boars roasted whole at a breakfast, and but twelve persons there ; is this true ?

Eno. This was but as a fly by an eagle : we had much more monstrous matter of feast, which worthily deserved noting.

Mec. She's a most triumphant lady, if report be square to her.

Eno. When she first met Mark Antony, she pursed up his heart, upon the river of Cydnus.

Agr. There she appeared indeed, or my reporter devised well for her.

Eno. I will tell you.
The barge she sat in, like a burnish'd throne,
Burn'd on the water : the poop was beaten gold ;
Purple the sails, and so perfum'd, that
The winds were love-sick with them : the oars were silver ;

Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and made
The water, which they beat, to follow faster,
As amorous of their strokes. For her own person,
It beggar'd all description : she did lie
In her pavilion, (cloth of gold and² tissue)
O'er-picturing that Venus, where we see,
The fancy out-work nature : on each side her,
Stood pretty dimpled boys, like smiling Cupids,
With diverse-colour'd fawns, whose wind did seem
To glow⁴ the delicate cheeks which they did cool,

And what they undid, did.

Agr. O, rare for Antony !

Eno. Her gentlewomen, like the Nereides,
So many mermaids, tended her i' the eyes,
And made their bends adornings : at the helm
A seeming mermaid steers ; the silken tackle
Smell⁵ with the touches of those flower-soft hands,
That rarely⁶ frame the office. From the barge
A strange invisible perfume hits the sense
Of the adjacent wharfs. The city cast
Her people out upon her : and Antony
Enthron'd i' the market-place, did sit alone,
Whistling to the air ; which, but for vacancy,
Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too,
And made a gap in nature.

Agr. Rare Egyptian !

Eno. Upon her landing Antony sent to her,
Invited her to supper : she replied,
It should be better he became her guest,
Which she entreated. Our courteous Antony,
Whom ne'er the word of "No" woman heard speak,
Being barber'd ten times o'er, goes to the feast ;
And for his ordinary pays his heart
For what his eyes eat only.

Agr. Royal wench !
She made great Cæsar lay his sword to bed ;
He plough'd her, and she cropp'd.

Eno. I saw her once
Hop forty paces through the public street ;
And having lost her breath, she spoke, and panted,
That she did make defect perfection.
And, breathless, power breathe forth.

Mec. Now Antony must leave her utterly.

Eno. Never ; he will not.

Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale
Her infinite variety : other women cloy
The appetites they feed, but she makes hungry,
Where most she satisfies ; for vilest things
Become themselves in her, that the holy priests
Bless her when she is riggish.

Mec. If beauty, wisdom, modesty, can settle
The heart of Antony, Octavia is
A blessed lottery to him.

Agr. Let us go.—

Good Enobarbus, make yourself my guest,
Whilst you abide here.

Eno. Humbly, sir, I thank you. [Exeunt]

SCENE III.—The Same. A Room in CÆSAR'S HOUSE

Enter CÆSAR, ANTONY, OCTAVIA between them ;

Attendants.

Ant. The world, and my great office, will sometimes
Divide me from your bosom.

Octa. All which time,
Before the gods my knee shall bow with prayers
To them for you.

Ant. Good night, sir.—My Octavia,
Read not my blemishes in the world's report :
I have not kept my square, but that to come
Shall all be done by the rule. Good night, dear lady.—
Good night, sir.

Cæs. Good night. [Exeunt CÆSAR and OCTAVIA
Enter a Soothsayer.]

Ant. Now, sirrah : you do wish yourself in Egypt.
Sooth. Would I had never come from thence, nor you thither !

Ant. If you can, your reason ?

Sooth. I see it in my motin, have it not in my tongue : but yet hie you to Egypt again.

¹ Not in f. e. ² of in f. e. ³ glove in folio ⁴ Swell in f. e. ⁵ Nimbly

Ant. Say to me, whose fortune shall rise higher,
Cæsar's, or mine?

Sooth. Cæsar's.

Therefore, O Antony! stay not by his side:
Thy dæmon, that's thy spirit which keeps thee, is Noble, courageous, high, unmatchable,
Where Cæsar's is not; but near him thy angel
Becomes afraid,¹ as being o'erpower'd: therefore,
Make space enough between you.

Ant. Speak this no more.

Sooth. To none but thee; no more, but when to thee.
If thou dost play with him at any game,
Thou art sure to lose; and, of that natural luck,
He beats thee 'gainst the odds: thy lustre thickens,
When he shines by. I say again, thy spirit
Is all afraid to govern thee near him,
But, he away, 't is noble.

Ant. Get thee gone:

Say to Ventidius, I would speak with him.—

[Exit Soothsayer.]

He shall to Parthia.—Be it art, or hap,
He hath spoken true: the very dice obey him;
And in our sports my better cunning faints
Under his chance: if we draw lots, he speeds:
His cocks do win the battle still of mine,
When it is all to nought; and his quails ever
Beat mine, inhoop'd, at odds. I will to Egypt:
And though I make this marriage for my peace,

Enter VENTIDIUS.

I' the east my pleasure lies.—O! come, Ventidius,
You must to Parthia: your commission's ready;
Follow me, and receive it.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Street.

Enter LEPIDUS, MÆCENAS, and AGRIPPA.

Lep. Trouble yourselves no farther: pray you, hasten
Your generals after.

Agr. Sir, Mark Antony

Will 'e'en but kiss Octavia, and we'll follow.

Lep. Till I shall see you in your soldier's dress,
Which will become you both, farewell.

Mec. We shall,

As I conceive the journey, be at Mount²
Before you, Lepidus.

Lep. Your way is shorter;

My purposes do draw me much about:

You'll win two days upon me.

Mec. Agr. Sir, good success!

Lep. Farewell. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.

Cleo. Give me some music; music, moody food
(Of us that trade in love.

Attend. The music, ho!

Enter MARDIAN.

Cleo. Let it alone; let's to billiards: come, Charmian.

Char. My arm is sore, best play with Mardian.

Cleo. As well a woman with an eunuch play'd,

As with a woman.—Come, you'll play with me, sir?

Mar. As well as I can, madam. [too short,

Cleo. And when good will is show'd, though 't come

The actor may plead pardon. I'll none now.—

Give me mine angle,—we'll to the river: there,

My music playing far off, I will betray

Tawny-fin'd³ fishes; my bended hook shall pierce

Their slimy jaws, and as I draw them up,

I'll think them every one an Antony,

And say, Ah, ha! you're caught.

Char.

'T was merry, when

You wager'd on your angling; when your diver
Did hang a salt-fish on his hook, which he
With fervency drew up.

Cleo.

That time.—O times!—

I laugh'd him out of patience; and that night

I laugh'd him into patience: and next morn,

Ere the ninth hour, I drunk him to his bed;

Then, put my tires and mantles on him, whilst

I wore his sword Philipian.—

*Enter ELIS, a Messenger.

O! from Italy?—

Ram thou thy fruitful tidings in mine ears,

That long time have been barren.

Mess.

Madam, madam,—

Cleo. Antony's dead?—

If thou say so, villain, thou kill'st thy mistress:

But well and free,

If thou so yield him, there is gold, and here

My bluest veins to kiss; a hand, that kings

Have lipp'd, and trembled kissing.

Mess. First, madam, he is well.

Cleo.

Why, there's more gold

But, sirrah, mark, we use

To say, the dead are well: bring it to that,

The gold I give thee will I melt, and pour

Down thy ill-uttering throat.

Mess. Good madam, hear me.

Cleo.

Well, go to, I will:

But there's no goodness in thy face. If Antony

Be free, and healthful, why so tart a favour

To trumpet such good tidings? if not well,

Thou shouldst come like a fury crown'd with snakes,

Not like a formal man.

Mess.

Will't please you hear me?

Cleo. I have a mind to strike thee, ere thou speak'st

Yet, if thou say, Antony lives, 't is well;

Or friends with Cæsar, or not captive to him,

I'll set thee in a shower of gold, and hail

Rich pearls upon thee.

Mess.

Madam, he's well.

Cleo.

Well said.

Mess. And friends with Cæsar.

Cleo.

Thou'rt an honest man.

Mess. Cæsar and he are greater friends than ever.

Cleo. Make thee a fortune from me.

Mess.

But yet, madam,—

Cleo. I do not like "but yet," it does allay

The good precedence; fie upon "but yet!"

"But yet" is as a gaoler to bring forth

Some monstrous malefactor. Prythee, friend,

Pour out the pack of matter to mine ear.

The good and bad together. He's friends with Cæsar;

In state of health, thou say'st: and, thou say'st, free.

Mess. Free, madam? no; I made no such report:

He's bound unto Octavia.

Cleo.

For what good turn?

Mess. For the best turn 't the bed.

Cleo.

I am pale, Charmian.

Mess. Madam, he's married to Octavia.

Cleo. The most infectious pestilence upon thee!

[Strikes him down]

Mess. Good madam, patience.

Cleo.

What say you?—Hence.

[Strikes him again]

Horrible villain! or I'll spurn thine eyes

Like balls before me: I'll unhair thy head.

[She hales him up and down]

Thou shalt be whipp'd with wire, and stew'd in brine

* A fear: in f. e. ² Mt. Misenum. ³ Tawney-fine: in folio Theobald made the change. ⁴ Enter a Messenger: in 1. e.

Smarting in lingering pækle.

Mess. Gracious madam,
I, that do bring the news, made not the match.

Cleo. Say, 't is not so, a province I will give thee,
And make thy fortunes proud: the blow thou hadst
Shall make thy peace for moving me to rage;
And I will boot thee with what gift beside Thy modesty can beg.

Mess. He's married, madam.
Cleo. Rogue! thou hast liv'd too long. [Draws a Knife.]

Mess. Nay, then I'll run.—
What mean you, madam? I have made no fault. [Exit.]

Char. Good madam, keep yourself within yourself:
The man is innocent.

Cleo. Some innocents 'scape not the thunder-bolt.—
Melt Egypt into Nile! and kindly creatures
Turn all to serpents—Call the slave again:
Though I am mad, I will not bite him.—Call.

Char. He is afraid to come.
Cleo. I will not hurt him.—

These hands do lack nobility, that they strike
A meaner than myself; since I myself
Have given myself the cause.—Come hither, sir.

Re-enter ELIS, the Messenger.
Though it be honest, it is never good
To bring bad news: give to a gracious message
An host of tongues; but let ill tidings tell
Themselves, when they be felt.

Mess. I have done my duty.
Cleo. Is he married?

I cannot hate thee worse than I do,
If thou again say, Yes.

Mess. He's married, madam.
Cleo. The gods confound thee! dost thou hold there still?

Mess. Should I lie, madam?
Cleo. O! I would, thou didst,

So half my Egypt were submerg'd, and made
A cistern for scald snakes. Go, get thee hence:
Hadst thou Narcissus in thy face, to me

Thou wouldst appear most ugly. He is married?
Mess. I crave your highness' pardon.

Cleo. He is married?
Mess. Take no offence, that I would not offend you:

To punish me for what you make me do,
Seems much unequal. He is married to Octavia.

Cleo. O! that his fault should make a knave of thee,
That art not! What! thou'rt sure of²²—Get thee hence:
The merchandise which thou hast brought from Rome,
Are all too dear for me: lie they upon thy hand.

And be undone by 'em! [Exit Messenger.]
Char. Good your highness, patience.

Cleo. In praising Antony, I have disprais'd Cæsar.
Char. Many times, madam.

Cleo. I am paid for't now.
Lead me from hence;

I taint.—O Iras! Charmian!—'T is no matter.—
Go to the fellow, good Alexas: bid him

Report the feature of Octavia, her years,
Her inclination, let him not leave out
The colour of her hair: bring me word quickly.—

[Exit ALEXAS.]
Let him for ever go?—let him not—Charmian,
Though he be painted one way like a Gorgon,
The other way he's a Mars.—Bid you Alexas

[To MARDIAN.]
Bring me word, how tall she is—Pity me, Charmian,
But do not speak to me.—Lead me to my chamber.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Near Misenum.

Flourish. Enter POMPEY and MENAS, at one side, with Drum and Trumpet: at another, CÆSAR, LEPIDUS, ANTONY, ENOBARBUS, MECÆNAS, with Soldiers marching.

Pom. Your hostages I have, so have you mine;
And we shall talk before we fight.

Cæs. Most meet,
That first we come to words; and therefore have we
Our written purposes before us sent,
Which, if thou hast consider'd, let us know
If 't will tie up thy discontented sword,
And carry back to Sicily much tall youth,
That else must perish here.

Pom. To you all three,
The senators alone of this great world,
Chief factors for the gods.—I do not know,
Wherefore my father should revengers want,
Having a son, and friends; since Julius Cæsar,
Who at Philippi the good Brutus ghosted,
There saw you labouring for him. What was it,
That mov'd pale Cassius to conspire? And what
Made the all-honour'd, honest, Roman Brutus,
With the arm'd rest, courtiers of beauteous freedom,
To drench the Capitol, but that they would Have one man but a man? And that is it
Hath made me rig my navy, at whose burden
The anger'd ocean foams; with which I meant
To scourge th' ingratitude that despicable Rome
Cast on my noble father.

Cæs. Take your time.
Ant. Thou canst not fear²³ us, Pompey, with thy sails;

We'll speak with thee at sea: at land, thou know'st
How much we do o'er-count thee.

Pom. At land, indeed,
Thou dost o'er-count me of my father's house:
But, since the cuckoo builds not for himself,
Remain in 't as thou may'st.

Lep. Be pleas'd to tell us,
(For this is from the present) how you take
The offers we have sent you.

Cæs. There's the point.

Ant. Which do not be entreated to, but weigh
What it is worth embrac'd.

Cæs. And what may follow,

To try a larger fortune.

Pom. You have made me offer
Of Sicily, Sardinia; and I must Rid all the sea of pirates; then, to send Measures of wheat to Rome: this 'greed upon,
To part with unhack'd edges, and bear back
Targes undinted.

Cæs. Ant. Lep. That's our offer.

Pom. Know then,
I came before you here, a man prepar'd
To take this offer; but Mark Antony
Put me to some impatience.—Though I lose
The praise of it by telling, you must know,
When Cæsar and your brother were at blows,
Your mother came to Sicily, and did find
Her welcome friendly.

Ant. I have heard it, Pompey.
And am well studied for a liberal thanks,
Which I do owe you.

Pom. Let me have your hand
I did not think, sir, to have met you here.

[They take Hands]

²² Re-enter Messenger: in f. o. ²³ That art not what thou'rt sure of: in folio. ²⁴ Alarm. ²⁵ Not in f. o.

Ant. The beds i' the east are soft; and thanks to you,

That call'd me timelier than my purpose hither,
For I have gain'd by it.

Cæs. Since I saw you last,
There is a change upon you.

Pom. Well, I know not
What counts harsh fortune casts upon my face,
But in my bosom shall she never come,
To make my heart her vassal.

Lep. Well met here.

Pom. I hope so, Lepidus.—Thus we are agreed.
I crave, our composition may be written,
And seal'd between us.

Cæs. That 's the next to do.

Pom. We 'll feast each other, ere we part; and let us
Draw lots who shall begin.

Ant. That will I, Pompey.

Pom. No, Antony, take the lot: but, first
Or last, your fine Egyptian cookery
Shall have the fame. I have heard, that Julius Cæsar
Grew fat with feasting there.

Ant. You have heard much.

Pom. I have fair meanings, sir.

Ant. And fair words to them.

Pom. Then, so much have I heard:

And I have heard, Apollodorus carried—

Eno. No more of that:—he did so.

Pom. What, I pray you?

Eno. A certain queen to Cæsar in a mattress.

Pom. I know thee now: how far'st thou, soldier?

Eno. Well;

And well am like to do; I perceive,

Four feasts are toward.

Pom. Let me shake thy hand:

I never hated thee. I have seen thee fight,

When I have envied thy behaviour.

Eno. Sir,

I never lov'd you much; but I have prais'd you,

When you have well deserv'd ten times as much

As I have said you did.

Pom. Enjoy thy plainness,

It nothing ill becomes thee.—

Aboard my galley I invite you all:

Will you lead, lords?

Cæs. Ant. Lep. Show us the way, sir.

Pom. Come.

[*Exeunt POMPEY, CÆSAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS,
Soldiers and Attendants.*]

Men. Thy father, Pompey, would ne'er have made this treaty.—[Aside.—]—You and I have known, sir.

Eno. At sea, I think.

Men. We have, sir.

Eno. You have done well by water.

Men. And you by land.

Eno. I will praise any man that will praise me;
though it cannot be denied what I have done by land.

Men. Nor what I have done by water.

Eno. Yes; something you can deny for your own safety: you have been a great thief by sea.

Men. And you by land.

Eno. There I deny my land service. But give me your hand, Menas: if our eyes had authority, here they might take two thieves kissing.

Men. All men's faces are true, whatsoe'er their hands are.

Eno. But there is never a fair woman has a true
face.

Men. No slander; they steal hearts.

Eno. We came hither to fight with you.

Men. For my part, I am sorry it is turned to a drinking. Pompey doth this day laugh away his fortune.

Eno. If he do, sure, he cannot weep it back again.

Men. You have said, sir. We looked not for Mark
Antony here: pray you, is he married to Cleopatra?

Eno. Cæsar's sister is call'd Octavia.

Men. True, sir; she was the wife of Caius Marcellus.

Eno. But she is now the wife of Marcus Antonius.

Men. Pray you, sir?

Eno. 'T is true.

Men. Then is Cæsar, and he, for ever knit together.

Eno. If I were bound to divine of this unity, I would not prophesy so.

Men. I think, the policy of that purpose made more in the marriage, than the love of the parties.

Eno. I think so too: but you shall find, the band that seems to tie their friendship together will be the very stranger of their amity. Octavia is of a holy, cold, and still conversation.

Men. Who would not have his wife so?

Eno. Not he, that himself is not so; which is Mark Antony. He will to his Egyptian dish again: then, shall the sighs of Octavia blow the fire up in Cæsar;
and, as I said before, that which is the strength of their amity, shall prove the immediate author of their variance. Antony will use his affection where it is:
he married but his occasion here.

Men. And thus it may be. Come, sir, will you aboard? I have a health for you.

Eno. I shall take it, sir: we have used our throats in Egypt.

Men. Come; let's away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—On Board POMPEY'S Galley, lying near Misenum.

Music. Enter Two or Three Servants, with a Banquet.

1 Serv. Here they 'll be, man. Some o' their plants are ill-rooted already; the least wind i' the world will blow them down.

2 Serv. Lepidus is high-coloured.

1 Serv. They have made him drink alms-drink.

2 Serv. As they pinch one another by the disposition, he cries out, "no more:" reconciles them to his entreaty, and himself to the drink.

1 Serv. But it raises the greater war between him and his discretion.

2 Serv. Why, this it is to have a name in great men's fellowship: I had as lief have a reed that will do me no service, as a partizan I could not heave.

1 Serv. To be called into a huge sphere, and not to be seen to move in 't, are the holes where eyes should be, which pitifully disaster the cheeks.

A Sennet¹ sounded. Enter CÆSAR, ANTONY, POMPEY, LEPIDUS, AGRIPPA, MECENAS, ENOBARBUS MENAS, with other Captains.

Ant. Thus do they, sir. [To CÆSAR.] They tal^s
the flow o' the Nile

By certain scales i' the pyramid: they know.

By the height, the lowness, or the mean, if dearth,

Or foison² follow. The higher Nilus swells.

The more it promises: as it ebbs, the seedsman

Upon the slime and ooze scatters his grain,

And shortly comes to harvest.

Lep. You have strange serpents there.

Ant.

Ay, Lepidus

Lep. Your serpent of Egypt is bred, now, of your mud by the operation of your sun: so is your crocodile

Ant. They are so.

Pom. Sit,—and some wine!—A health to Lepidus.

Lep. I am not so well as I should be, but I'll ne'er out.

Eno. Not till you have slept: I fear me, you'll be in till then.

Lep. Nay, certainly, I have heard, the Ptolemies' pyramids are very goodly things; without contradiction, I have heard that.

Men. [Aside.] Pompey, a word.

Pom. [Aside.] Say in mine ear: what is 't?

Men. [Aside.] Forsake thy seat, I do beseech thee, and hear me speak a word. [captain,

Pom. [Aside.] Forbear me till anon.—

This wine for Lepidus.

Lep. What manner o' thing is your crocodile?

Ant. It is shaped, sir, like itself, and it is as broad as it hath breadth; it is just so high as it is, and moves with its own organs; it lives by that which nourisheth it, and the elements once out of it, it transmigrates.

Lep. What colour is it of?

Ant. Of its own colour too.

Lep. 'T is a strange serpent.

Ant. 'T is so; and the tears of it are wet.

Cæs. Will this description satisfy him?

Ant. With the health that Pompey gives him, else he is a very epicure.

Pom. [To MENAS, aside.] Go, hang, sir, hang! Tell me of that, away!

Do as I bid you.—Where's this cup I call'd for?

Men. [Aside.] If for the sake of merit thou wilt hear Rise from thy stool. [me,

Pom. [Aside.] I think, thou 'rt mad. The matter? [Walks aside.

Men. I have ever held my cap off to thy fortunes.

Pom. Thou hast serv'd me with much faith. What's else to say?

Be jolly, lords.

Ant. These quick-sands, Lepidus, Keep off them, for you sink.

Men. Wilt thou be lord of all the world?

Pom. What say'st thou?

Men. Wilt thou be lord of the whole world? That's twice.

Pom. How should that be?

Men. But entertain it,

And though thou think me poor, I am the man Will give thee all the world.

Pom. Hast thou drunk well?

Men. No, Pompey. I have kept me from the cup.

Thou art, if thou dar'st be, the earthly Jove:

Whate'er the ocean pales,¹ or sky inclips,²

Is thine, if thou wilt have 't.

Pom. Show me which way.

Men. These three world-sharers, these competitors, Are in thy vessel: let me cut the cable;

And, when we are put off, fall to their throats:

All then is thine.

Pom. Ah! 'tis thou shouldst have done,

And not have spoke on 't. In me, 't is villainy;

In thee, 't had been good service. Thou must know,

'T is not my profit that does lead mine honour,

Mine honour, it. Repent, that e'er thy tongue

Hath so betray'd thine act: being done unknown,

I should have found it afterwards well done,

But must condemn it now. Desist, and drink.

Men. [Aside.] For this,

I'll never follow thy pall'd fortunes more.

Who seeks, and will not take, when once 't is offer'd,
Shall never find it more.

Pom.

This health to Lepidus.

Ant. Bear him ashore.—I'll pledge it for him, Pompey

Eno. Here 's to thee, Menas.

Men.

Enobarbus, welcome

Pom. Fill, till the cup be hid.

Eno. There 's a strong fellow, Menas.

[Pointing to the Attendant who carries off LEPIDUS.

Men. Why?

Eno.

He bears

The third part of the world, man: see'st not?

Men. The third part, then, is drunk: would it were all,
That it might go on wheels!³

Eno. Drink thou; increase the reels.

Men. Come.

Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian feast.

Ant. It ripens towards it.—Strike* the vessels, ho!

Here is to Cæsar.

Cæs. I could well forbear it.

It's monstrous labour, when I wash my brain,
And it grows foul.

Ant. Be a child o' the time.

Cæs. Profess* it, I'll make answer; but I had rather fast

From all four days, than drink so much in one.

Eno. Ha, my brave emperor! [To ANTONY.

Shall we dance now the Egyptian Bacchanals,

And celebrate our drink?

Pom.

Let's ha't, good soldier.

Ant. Come, let us all shake hands,

Till that the conquering wine hath steep'd our sense

In soft and delicate Lethe.

Eno.

All take hands.—

Make battery to our ears with the loud music;

The while I'll place you: then, the boy shall sing

The holding* every man shall bear, as loud

As his strong sides can volley.

[Music plays. ENOBARBUS places them hand in hand.

SONG, by the Boy.⁷

Come, thou monarch of the vine,

Plumpty Bacchus, with pink eyne:

In thy vats our cares be drown'd;

With thy grapes our hairs be crown'd;

Cup us, till the world go round;

Cup us, till the world go round! } The burden.

Cæs. What would you more?—Pompey, good night.

—Good brother,

Let me request you off: our graver business

Frowns at this levity.—Gentle lords, let's part;

You see, we have burnt our cheeks. Strong Enobarbo

Is weaker than the wine, and mine own tongue

Splits what it speaks: the wild disguise hath almost Antick'd us all. What needs more words? Good night.—

Good Antony, your hand.

Pom.

I'll try you on the shore.

Ant. And shall, sir. Give's your hand.

Pom.

O, Antony!

You have my father's house.—But what? we are friends.

Come down into the boat.

Eno.

Take heed you fall not.—

[Exit POMPEY, CÆSAR, ANTONY, and Attendants.

Menas, I'll not on shore.

Men.

No, to my cabin.—

These drums!—these trumpets, flutes! what!—

Let Neptune hear, we bid a loud farewell

To these great fellows: sound, and be hang'd! sound

out! [A Flourish

Eno. Ho, says 'a!—There's my cap.

Men. Ho!—noble captain! come. [Exit

ACT III.

SCENE I.—A Plain in Syria.

Enter VENTIDIUS, as it were in triumph, with SILIUS, and other Romans, Officers, and Soldiers; the dead Body of PACORUS borne before him.

Ven. Now, darting Parthia, art thou struck; and now Pleas'd fortune does of Marcus Crassus' death Make me revenger.—Bear the king's son's body Before our army.—Thy Pacorus, Orodes, Pays this for Marcus Crassus.

Sil. Noble Ventidius, Whilst yet with Parthian blood thy sword is warm, The fugitive Parthians follow: spur through Media, Mesopotamia, and the shelters whither The routed fly: so thy grand captain, Antony, Shall set thee on triumphant chariots, and Put garlands on thy head.

Ven. O Silius, Silius! I have done enough: a lower place, note well, May make too great an act; for learn this, Silius, Better to leave undone, than by our deeds acquire Too high a fame, when him we serve's away. Cæsar and Antony have ever won More in their officer, than person: Sossius, One of my place in Syria, his lieutenant, For quick accumulation of renown, Which he achiev'd by the minute, lost his favour. Who does it the wars more than his captain can, Becomes his captain's captain; and ambition, The soldier's virtue, rather makes choice of loss, Than gain which darkens him. I could do more to do Antonius good, But 't would offend him; and in his offence Should my performance perish.

Sil. Thou hast, Ventidius, that Without the which a soldier, and his sword, Gains scarce distinction. Thou wilt write to Antony?

Ven. I'll humbly signify what in his name, That magical word of war, we have effected; How, with his banners and his well-paid ranks, The ne'er-yet-beaten horse of Parthia We have jaded out o' the field.

Sil. Where is he now?
Ven. He purposeth to Athens; whither, with what haste

The weight we must convey with us will permit, We shall appear before him.—On, there! pass along.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Rome. An Ante-Chamber in CÆSAR'S House.

Enter AGRIPPA, and ENOBARBUS, meeting.

Agr. What! are the brothers parted?

Eno. They have despatch'd with Pompey: he is gone;

The other three are sealing. Octavia weeps To part from Rome; Cæsar is sad; and Lepidus, Since Pompey's feast, as Menas says, is troubled With the green sickness.

Agr. 'T is a noble Lepidus.

Eno. A very fine one. O, how he loves Cæsar!

Agr. Nay, but how dearly he adores Mark Antony!

Eno. Cæsar? Why, he's the Jupiter of men.

Agr. What's Antony? The god of Jupiter.

Eno. Spake you of Cæsar? How! the nonpareil!

Agr. O Antony! O thou Arabian bird!

Eno. Would you praise Cæsar, say,—Cæsar:—go no farther.

Agr. Indeed, he ply'd them both with excellent praises.

Eno. But he loves Cæsar best;—yet he loves Antony. Ho! hearts, tongues, figures, scribes, bards, poets cannot Think, speak, cast, write, sing, number, ho! His love to Antony. But as for Cæsar, Kneel down, kneel down, and wonder.

Agr.

Eno. They are his shards,¹ and he their beetle.

So,—

[Trumpets]

This is to horse.—Adieu, noble Agrippa.

Agr. Good fortune, worthy soldier; and farewell.

Enter CÆSAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, and OCTAVIA.

Ant. No farther, sir.

Cæs. You take from me a great part of myself;

Use me well in't.—Sister, prove such a wife

As my thoughts make thee, and as my farthest band

Shall pass on thy approval.—Most noble Antony,

Let not the piece of virtue, which is set

Betwixt us as the cement of our love,

To keep it builded, be the ram to batter

The fortress of it; for better might we

Have loved without this mean, if on both parts

This be not cherish'd.

Ant.

Make me not offended

In your distrust.

Cæs.

I have said.

Ant.

You shall not find,

Though you be therein curious, the least cause

For what you seem to fear. So, the gods keep you,

And make the hearts of Romans serve your ends

We will here part.

Cæs. Farewell, my dearest sister, fare thee well

The elements be kind to thee, and make

Thy spirits all of comfort! fare thee well.

Oct. My noble brother!—

Ant. The April's in her eyes; it is love's spring,

And these the showers to bring it on.—Be cheerful.

Oct. Sir, look well to my husband's house; and—

Cæs. What, Octavia?

Oct. I'll tell you in your ear.

Ant. Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can Her heart inform her tongue; the swan's down feather That stands upon the swell at the fall of tide, And neither way inclines.

Eno. Will Cæsar weep?

[Aside to AGRIPPA.]

Agr.

He has a cloud in's face.

Eno. He were the worse for that, were he a horse; So is he, being a man.

Agr.

Why, Enobarbus,

When Antony found Julius Cæsar dead, He cried almost to roaring; and he wept, When at Philippi he found Brutus slain.

Eno. That year, indeed, he was troubled with a rheum;

What willingly he did confound, he wail'd:

Believe't, till I weep too.

Cæs.

No, sweet Octavia,

You shall hear from me still: the time shall not Out-go my thinking on you.

Ant.

Come, sir, come;

I'll wrestle with you in my strength of love.

Look, here I have you ; thus I let you go,
And give you to the gods.

Cæs. Adieu ; be happy.
Lep. Let all the number of the stars give light
To thy fair way !

Cæs. Farewell farewell. [Kisses OCTAVIA.
Ant. Farewell [Trumpets sound. Exeunt.

SCENE III.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.

Cleo. Where is the fellow ?

Alex. Half afeard to come.

Cleo. Go to, go to.—Come hither, sir.

Enter ELIS, the Messenger.

Alex. Good majesty,

Herod of Jewry dare not look upon you,

But when you are well pleas'd.

Cleo. That Herod's head
I'll have ; but how, when Antony is gone,
Through whom I might command it ?—Come thou near.

Mess. Most gracious majesty,—
Cleo. Didst thou behold

Octavia ?

Mess. Ay, dread queen.

Cleo. Where ?

Mess. Madam, in Rome.
I look'd her in the face ; and saw her led Between her brother and Mark Antony.

Cleo. Is she as tall as me ?

Mess. She is not, madam.

Cleo. Didst hear her speak ? Is she shrill-tongu'd, or low ?

Mess. Madam, I heard her speak : she is low-voic'd.

Cleo. That's not so good : he cannot like her long.

Char. Like her ? O Isis ! 'tis impossible.

Cleo. I think so, Charmian : dull of tongue, and dwarfish !—

What majesty is in her gait ? Remember,
If e'er thou look'dst on majesty.

Mess. She creeps ;

Her motion and her station are as one :

She shows a body rather than a life ;

A statue, than a breather.

Cleo. Is this certain ?

Mess. Or I have no observance.

Char. Three in Egypt

Cannot make better note.

Cleo. He's very knowing,

I do perceive 't.—There's nothing in her yet.—

The fellow has good judgment.

Char. Excellent.

Cleo. Guess at her years, I pr'ythee.

Mess. Madam,

She was a widow.

Cleo. Widow ?—Charmian, hark.

Mess. And I do think, she's thirty.

Cleo. Bear'st thou her face in mind ? is 't long, or round ?

Mess. Round, even to faultiness.

Cleo. For the most part, too, they are foolish that are so,—

Her hair, what colour ?

Mess. Brown, madam ; and her forehead

As low as you could wish it.

Cleo. There's gold for thee :
Thou must not take my former sharpness ill.

I will employ thee back again : I find thee

Most fit for business. Go, make thee ready ;

Our letters are prepar'd. [Exit Messenger.

*Enter a Messenger : in f. e. * Vexed. * not took 't : in t. e.*

Char. A proper man.

Cleo. Indeed, he is so : I repent me much,
That I so harry'd² him. Why, methinks, by him,
This creature 's no such thing.

Char. Nothing, madam.

Cleo. The man hath seen some majesty, and should know.

Char. Hath he seen majesty ? Isis else defend,
And serving you so long !

Cleo. I have one thing more to ask him yet, good Charmian :

But 't is no matter ; thou shalt bring him to me
Where I will write. All may be well enough.

Char. I will warrant you, madam. [Exeunt

SCENE IV.—Athens. A Room in ANTONY'S House.

Enter ANTONY and OCTAVIA.

Ant. Nay, nay, Octavia, not only that,—
That were excusable, that, and thousands more
Of semblable import,—but he hath wag'd
New wars 'gainst Pompey ; made his will, and read it
To public ear,

Spoke scantily of me : when perforce he could not
But pay me terms of honour, coldly and sickly
He vented them ; most narrow measure lent me.
When the best hint was given him, he but look'd,³
Or did it from his teeth.

Oet. O, my good lord !
Believe not all ; or, if you must believe,
Stomach not all. A more unhappy wag'd,
If this division chance, ne'er stood between,
Praying for both parts :
The good gods will mock me presently,
When I shall pray, "O, bless my lord and husband !" ²
Undo that prayer, by crying out as loud,
"O, bless my brother !" ¹ Husband win, win brother
Prays, and destroys the prayer ; no midway
'Twixt these extremes at all.

Ant. Gentle Octavia,
Let your best love draw to that point, which seeks Best to preserve it. If I lose mine honour,
I lose myself ; better I were not yours,
Than yours so branchless. But, as you requested,
Yourself shall go between us : the mean time, lady,
I'll raise the preparation of a war
Shall stay your brother. Make your soonest haste :
So, your desires are yours.

Oet. Thanks to my lord.
The Jove of power make me most weak, most weak,
Your reconciler ! Wars 'twixt you 'twain would be,
As if the world should cleave, and that slain men
Should solder up the rift.

Ant. When it appears to you where this begins,
Turn your displeasure that way ; for our faults
Can never be so equal, that your love
Can equally move with them. Provide your going.
Choose your own company, and command what cost
Your heart has mind to. [Exeunt

SCENE V.—The Same. Another Room in the Same.

Enter ENOBARBUS and EROS, meeting.

Eno. How now, friend Eros ?

Eros. There is strange news come, sir

Eno. What, man ?

Eros. Cæsar and Lepidus have made wars upon
Pompey.

Eno. This is old : what is the success ?

Eros. Cæsar, having made use of him in the war
'gainst Pompey, presently denied him rivalry, would not let him partake in the glory of the action; and not resting here, accuses him of letters he had formerly wrote to Pompey; upon his own appeal, seizes him: so the poor third is up till death enlarge his confine.

Eros. Then, world,¹ thou hast a pair of chaps, no more;

And throw between them all the food thou hast, They'll grind each other. Where is Antony?

Eros. He's walking in the garden—thus; and spurns The rush that lies before him; cries, "Fool, Lepidus!" And threatens the throat of that his officer, That murder'd Pompey.

Eros. Our great navy's rigg'd.

Eros. For Italy, and Cæsar. More, Domitius;

My lord desires you presently: my news

I might have told hereafter.

Eros. 'T will be naught;

But let it be.—Bring me to Antony.

Eros. Come, sir. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Rome. A Room in CÆSAR'S House.

Enter CÆSAR, AGRIPPA, and MÆCENAS.

Cæs. Contemning Rome, he has done all this, and In Alexandria: here's the manner of it. [more,]
P' the market-place, on a tribunal silver'd,
Cleopatra and himself in chairs of gold
Were publicly enthron'd: at their feet sat
Cæsarion, whom they call my father's son,
And all the unlawful issue, that their lust
Since then hath made between them. Unto her
He gave the 'establishment of Egypt; made her
Of lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydia,
Absolute queen.

Mec. This in the public eye?

Cæs. P' the common show-place, where they exercise.
His sons he there² proclaim'd the kings of kings:
Great Media, Parthia, and Armenia,
He gave to Alexander; to Ptolemy he assign'd
Syria, Cilicia, and Phœnicia. She
In the habiliments of the goddess Isis
That day appear'd; and oft before gave audience,
As 'tis reported, so.

Mec. Let Rome be thus Inform'd.

Aggr. Who, queasy with his insolence
Already, will their good thoughts call from him.

Cæs. The people know it; and have now receiv'd
His accusations.

Aggr. Whom does he accuse?

Cæs. Cæsar; and that, having in Sicily
Sextus Pompeius spoil'd, we had not rated him
His part o' the isle: then does he say, he lent me
Some shipping unrestor'd: lastly, he frets,
That Lepidus of the triumvirate
Should be depos'd; and, being, that we detain
All his revenue.

Aggr. Sir, this should be answer'd.

Cæs. 'T is done already, and a messenger gone.

I have told him, Lepidus was grown too cruel;

That he his high authority abus'd,

And did deserve his change: for what I have conquer'd,

I grant him part; but then, in his Armenia,

And other of his conquer'd kingdoms, I

Demand the like.

Mec. He'll never yield to that.

Cæs. Nor must not, then, be yielded to this.

Enter OCTAVIA, with her Train.

Oct. Hail, Cæsar, and my lord! hail, most dear Cæsar!

Cæs. That ever I should call thee cast-away!

Oct. You have not call'd me so, nor have you cause

Cæs. Why have you stol'n upon us thus? You come not

Like Cæsar's sister: the wife of Antony

Should have an army for an usher, and

The neighs of horse to tell of her approach,

Long ere she did appear; the trees by the way,

Should have borne men, and expectation faint'd,

Longing for what it had not; nay, the dust

Should have ascended to the roof of heaven,

Rais'd by your populous troops. But you are come

A market-maid to Rome, and have prevented

The ostentation of our love, which, left unshown,

Is often held³ unlov'd: we should have met you

By sea and land, supplying every stage

With an augmented greeting.

Oct. Good my lord,

To come thus was I not constrain'd, but did it

Of my free-will. My lord, Mark Antony,

Hearing that you prepar'd for war, acquainted

My griev'd ear withal; whereon, I begg'd

His pardon for return.

Cæs. Which soon he granted,

Being an obstruct⁴ 'tween his lust and him.

Oct. Do not say so, my lord.

Cæs. I have eyes upon him,

And his affairs come to me on the wind.

Where is he now?

Oct. My lord, in Athens.

Cæs. No, my most wronged sister; Cleopatra

Hath nodded him to her: he hath given his empire

Up to a whore: they are now levying

The kings o' the earth for war. He hath assembled

Boechus, the king of Lybia; Archelaus,

Of Cappadocia; Philadelphos, king

Of Paphlagonia; the Thracian king, Adallas;

King Malchas of Arabia; king of Pont;

Herod of Jewry; Mithridates, king

Of Comagene; Polemon and Amintas,

The kings of Mede, and Lycaonia,

With a more larger list of sceptres.

Oct. Ah me, most wretched!

That have my heart parted betwixt two friends,

That do afflict each other!

Cæs. Welcome hither.

Your letters did withhold our breaking forth,

Till we perceiv'd, both how you were wronged,⁵

And we in negligent danger. Cheer your heart:

Be you not troubled with the time, which drives

O'er your content these strong necessities;

But let determin'd things to destiny

Hold unbewail'd their way. Welcome to Rome;

Nothing more dear to me. You are abus'd

Beyond the mark of thought; and the high gods,

To do you justice, make his ministers

Of us and those that love you. Best of comfort;

And ever welcome to us.

Aggr. Welcome, lady.

Mec. Welcome, dear madam.

Each heart in Rome does love and pity you:

Only the adulterous Antony, most large

In his abominations, turns you off,

And gives his potent regiment⁶ to a trull,

That noises it against us.

Oct. Is it so, sir?

Cæs. Most certain. Sister, welcome: pray you,

Be ever known to patience. My dear'st sister! [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII.—ANTONY'S Camp, near the Promontory of Actium.

Enter CLEOPATRA and ENOBARBUS.Cleo. I will be even with thee, doubt it not.Eno. But why, why, why?Cleo. Thou hast forspoke my being in these wars, And say'st, it is not fit.Eno. Well, is it, is it?Cleo. If not denounc'd against us, why should not we Be there in person?Eno. [Aside.] Well, I could reply:— If we should serve with horse and mares together, The horse were merely lost; the mares would bear A soldier, and his horse.Cleo. What is't you say?Eno. Your presence needs must puzzle Antony; Take from his heart, take from his brain, from't time, What should not then be spar'd. He is already Tradue'd for levity; and 'tis said in Rome, That Photinus an eunuch, and your maids, Manage this war.Cleo. Sink Rome; and their tongues rot, That speak against us! A charge we bear i' the war, And as the president of my kingdom will Appear there for a man. Speak not against it, I will not stay behind.Eno. Nay, I have done Here comes the emperor.Enter ANTONY and CANIDIUS.Ant. Is't not strange, Canidius, That from Tarentum, and Brundisium, He could so quickly cut the Ionian sea, And take in? Toryne?—You have heard on't, sweet?Cleo. Celerity is never more admir'd, Than by the negligent.Ant. A good rebuke, Which might have well become the best of men, To taunt at slackness.—Canidius, we Will fight with him by sea.Cleo. By sea! what else?Can. Why will my lord do so?Ant. For that he dares us to't.Eno. So hath my lord dar'd him to single fight.Can. Ay, and to wage this battle at Pharsalia, Where Cæsar fought with Pompey; but these offers, Which serve not for his vantage, he shakes off, And so should you.Eno. Your ships are not well mann'd; Your mariners are muliters, reapers, people Ingross'd by swift impress: in Cæsar's fleet Are those, that often have 'gainst Pompey fought. Their ships are yare,¹ yours, heavy: no disgrace Shall fall you for refusing him at sea, Being prepar'd for land.Ant. By sea, by sea.Eno. Most worthy sir, you therein throw away The absolute soldiership you have by land; Distract your army, which doth most consist Of war-mark'd footmen; leave unexecuted Your own renowned knowledge; quite forego The way which promises assurance, and Give up yourself merely to chance and hazard, From firm security.Ant. I'll fight at sea.Cleo. I have sixty sails, Cæsar none better.Ant. Our overplus of shipping will be burn, And with the rest, full-mann'd, from the head of Actium

Beat th' approaching Cæsar: but if we fail,

Enter a Messenger.

We then can do't at land.—Thy business?

Mess. The news is true, my lord; he is descried Cæsar has taken Toryne.Ant. Can he be there in person? 't is impossible; Strange, that his power should be.—Canidius, Our nineteen legions thou shalt hold by land, And our twelve thousand horse: we'll to our ship.Enter a Soldier.

Away, my Thetis!—How now, worthy soldier!

Sold. O, noble emperor! do not fight by sea: Trust not to rotten planks. Do you misdoubt This sword, and these my wounds? Let the Egyptians, And the Phœnicians, go a ducking; we Have used to conquer standing on the earth, And fighting foot to foot.Ant. Well, well.—Away![Exeunt ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, and ENOBARBUS.]Sold. By Hercules, I think, I am i' the right.Can. Soldier, thou art; but his whole action grows Not in the power on't: so our leader's led, And we are women's men.Sold. You keep by land The legions and the horse whole, do you not?Can. Marcus Octavius, Marcus Justeius, Publicola, and Cælius, are for sea; But we keep whole by land. This speed of Cæsar's Carries beyond belief.Sold. While he was yet in Rome, His power went out in such distractions, as Beguil'd all spies.Can. Who's his lieutenant, hear you?Sold. They say, one Taurus.Can. Well I know the man*Enter a Messenger.Mess.* The emperor calls Canidius.Can. With news the time's with labour; and throws forth Each minute some. [Exeunt]

SCENE VIII.—A Plain near Actium.

Enter CÆSAR, TAURUS, Officers, and others.Cæs. Taurus!Taur. My lord.Cæs. Strike not by land; keep whole: Provoke not battle, till we have done at sea. Do not exceed the prescript of this scroll: [Giving it.] Our fortune lies upon this jump. [Exeunt.]Enter ANTONY and ENOBARBUS.Ant. Set we our squadrons on yond' side o' the hill In eye of Cæsar's battle; from which place We may the number of the ships behold, And so proceed accordingly. [Exeunt.]Enter CANIDIUS, marching with his Land Army out Way over the Stage; and TAURUS, the Lieutenant of CÆSAR, the other Way. After their going in is heard the Noise of a Sea-Fight.Alarum. Re-enter ENOBARBUS.Eno. Naught, naught, all naught! I can behold no longer.

The Antoniad, the Egyptian admiral, With all their sixty, fly, and turn the rudder To see't, mine eyes are blasted.

Enter SCARUS.Scar. Gods, and goddesses, All the whole synod of them!Eno. What's thy passion?
Scar. The greater cantle⁴ of the world is lost¹ Spoken against. ² Conquer. ³ Easily managed. ⁴ Not in f. o. ⁵ Portion.

With very ignorance : we have kiss'd away
Kingdoms and provinces.

Eno. How appears the fight ?

Scar. On our side like the token'd pestilence,
Where death is sure. Yond' ribald hag¹ of Egypt,
Whom leprosy o'ertake ! i' the midst o' the fight.—
When vantage, like a pair of twins, appear'd
Both as the same, or rather ours the elder ;—
The brize² upon her like a cow in June,
Hoists sails, and flies.

Eno. That I behele :

Mine eyes did sicken at the sight, and could not Endure a further view.

Scar. She once being loof'd,

The noble ruin of her magic, Antony,
Claps on his sea-wing, and like a doting mallow,
Leaving the fight in height, flies after her.

I never saw an action of such shame :

Experience, manhood, honour, ne'er before
Did violate so itself.

Eno. Alack, alack !

Enter CANDIDIUS.

Can. Our fortune on the sea is out of breath,
And sinks most lamentably. Had our general
Been what he knew himself, it had gone well :
O ! he has given example for our flight,
Most grossly, by his own.

Eno. Ay, are you thereabouts ? Why then, good night
Indeed.

Can. Towards Peloponnesus are they fled.

Scar. 'T is easy to't ; and there I will attend
What farther comes.

Can. To Cæsar will I render

My legions, and my horse : six kings already Made me the way of yielding.

Eno. I'll yet follow

The wounded chance of Antony, though my reason
Sits in the wind against me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IX.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter ANTONY, and Attendants.

Ant. Hark ! the land bids me tread no more upon't ;
It is asham'd to bear me.—Friends, come hither,
I am so lated in the world, that I
Have lost my way for ever.—I have a ship
Laden with gold ; take that, divide it ; fly,
And make your peace with Cæsar.

Att. Fly ! not we.

Ant. I have fled myself, and have instructed cowards
To run, and show their shoulders.—Friends, be gone ;
I have myself resolv'd upon a course,
Which has no need of you ; be gone :
My treasure's in the harbour, take it.—O !
I follow'd that I blush to look upon :
My very hairs do mutiny ; for the white
Reprove the brown for rashness, and they them
For fear and doting.—Friends, be gone : you shall Have letters from me to some friends, that will Sweep your way for you. Pray you, look not sad,
Nor make replies of lothness : take the hint
Which my despair proclaims ; let that be left
Which leaves itself : to the sea-side straightway :
I will possess you of that ship and treasure.
Leave me, I pray, a little ; 'pray you now :
Nay, do so ; for, indeed, I have lost command,
Therefore, I pray you. I'll see you by and by.

[Sits down.]

Enter ERAS, and CLEOPATRA, led by CHARMIAN, and IRAS.

Eros. Nay, gentle madam, to him ; comfort him.

Iras. Do, most dear queen

Char. Do ! Why, what else ?

Cleo. Let me sit down.—O Juno !

Ant. No, no, no, no, no.

Eros. See you here, sir ?

Ant. O fie, fie, fie !

Char. Madam,—

Iras. Madam : O good empress !—

Eros. Sir, sir,—

Ant. Yes, my lord, yes.—He, at Philippi, kept

His sword e'en like a dancer, while I struck
The lean and wrinkled Cassius ; and 't was I
That the mad Brutus ended : he alone
Dealt on lieutenantry, and no practice had
In the brave squares of war ; yet now—No matter.

Cleo. Ah ! stand by.

Eros. The queen, my lord, the queen.

Iras. Go to him, madam, speak to him :

He is unqualitied with very shame.

Cleo. Well then,—sustain me :—O !

Eros. Most noble sir, arise ; the queen approaches
Her head's declin'd, and death will seize her ; but
Your comfort makes the rescue.

Ant. I have offended reputation

By most unnobble swerving.

Eros. Sir, the queen.

Ant. O ! whither hast thou led me, Egypt ? See,
How I convey my shame out of thine eyes,
By looking back what I have left behind
'Stroy'd in dishonour.

Cleo. O my lord, my lord !

Forgive my fearful falls : I little thought,
You would have follow'd.

Ant. Egypt, thou knew'st too well

My heart was to thy rudder tied by the strings,
And thou shouldst tow me after : o'er my spirit
Thy full supremacy thou knew'st, and that Thy beck might from the bidding of the gods
Command me.

Cleo. O, my pardon !

Ant. Now I must

To the young man send humble treaties, dodge
And palter in the shifts of lowness, who
With half the bulk o' the world play'd as I pleas'd,
Making, and marring fortunes. You did know,
How much you were my conqueror ; and that My sword, made weak by my affection, would Obey it on all cause.

Cleo. Pardon, pardon !

Ant. Fall not a tear, I say : one of them rates
All that is won and lost. Give me a kiss ;
Even this repays me.—We sent our schoolmaster ;
Is he come back ?—Love, I am full of lead.—
Some wine, within there, and our viands !—Fortune
knows,

We scorn her most when most she offers blows. [Exeunt]

SCENE X.—CÆSAR'S Camp in Egypt.

Enter CÆSAR, DOLABELLA, THYREUS, and others.

Cæs. Let him appear that's come from Antony.—
Know you him ?

Dol. Cæsar, 't is his schoolmaster :

An argument that he is pluck'd, when hither
He sends so poor a pinion of his wing.

Which had superfluous kings for messengers,
Not many moons gone by.

Enter EUPHRONIUS.

Cæs. Approach, and speak

Eup. Such as I am, I come from Antony

¹ ribald-rag : in f o ² Gad fly

I was of late as petty to his ends,
As is the morn-dew on the myrtle leaf
To his grand sea.

Cæs. Be it so. Declare thine office.

Eup. Lord of his fortunes he salutes thee, and Requires to live in Egypt; which not granted,
He lessens his requests, and to thee sues
To let him breathe between the heavens and earth,
A private man in Athens: this for him.
Next, Cleopatra does confess thy greatness,
Submits her to thy might, and of thee craves
The circle of the Ptolemies for her heirs,
Now hazarded to thy grace.

Cæs. For Antony,
I have no ears to his request. The queen
Of audience, nor desire, shall fail; so she
From Egypt drive her all-disgraced friend,
Or take his life there: this if she perform,
She shall not sue unheard. So to them both.

Eup. Fortune pursue thee!

Cæs. Bring him through the bands.
[Exit EUPHRONIUS.]

To try thy eloquence, now 't is time; despatch.
From Antony win Cleopatra: promise, [To THYREUS.]
And in our name, what she requires; add more,
From thine invention, offers. Women are not
In their best fortunes strong, but want will perjure
The ne'er-touch'd vestal. Try thy cunning, Thyreus;
Make thine own edict for thy pains, which we
Will answer as a law.

Thyr. Cæsar, I go.

Cæs. Observe how Antony becomes his flaw,
And what thou think'st his very action speaks
In every power that moves.

Thyr. Cæsar, I shall. [Exit.

SCENE XI.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, CHARMIAN, and IRAS.

Cleo. What shall we do, Enobarbus?

Eno. Think, and die.

Cleo. Is Antony, or we, in fault for this?

Eno. Antony only, that would make his will Lord of his reason. What though you fled
From that great face of war, whose several ranges
Frighted each other, why should he follow?
The itch of his affection should not then
Have nick'd his captainship; at such a point,
When half to half the world oppos'd, he being
The mooted¹ question. 'T was a shame, no less
Than was his loss, to course your flying flags,
And leave his navy gazing.

Cleo. Pr'ythee, peace.

Enter ANTONY, with EUPHRONIUS.

Ant. Is that his answer?

Eup. Ay, my lord.

Ant. The queen shall then have courtesy, so she Will yield us up.

Eup. He says so.

Ant. Let her know it.—

To the boy Cæsar send this grizzled head,
And he will fill thy wishes to the brim
With principalities.

Cleo. That head, my lord?

Ant. To him again. Tell him, he wears the rose
Of youth upon him, from which the world should note
Something particular: his coin, ships, legions.
May be a coward's: whose ministers would prevail
Under the service of a child, as soon

As i' the command of Cæsar: I dare him, therefore,
To lay his gay comparisons apart,
And answer me declin'd; sword against sword,
Ourselves alone. I'll write it: follow me.

[Exit ANTONY and EUPHRONIUS.]

Eno. Yes, like enough, high-battled Cæsar will Unstate his happiness, and be stag'd t' the show
Against a sword.—I see, men's judgments are
A parcel of their fortunes; and things outward
Do draw the inward qualities² after them,
To suffer all alike. That he should dream,
Knowing all miseries,³ the full Cæsar will Answer his emptiness!—Cæsar, thou hast subdu'd
His judgment too.

Enter an Attendant.

Ant. A messenger from Cæsar.

Cleo. What, no more ceremony?—See, my women!—
Against the blown rose may they stop their nose,
That kneel'd unto the bud.—Admit him, sir.

Eno. Mine honesty and I begin to square.⁴ [Aside.]
The loyalty well held to fools does make
Our faith mere folly; yet he, that can endure
To follow with allegiance a fallen lord,
Does conquer him that did his master conquer,
And earns a place i' the story.

Enter THYREUS.

Cleo. Cæsar's will?

Thyr. Hear it apart.

Cleo. None but friends: say boldly

Thyr. So, haply, are they friends to Antony.

Eno. He needs as many, sir, as Cæsar has,
Or needs not us. If Cæsar please, our master
Will leap to be his friend: for us, you know,
Whose he is, we are, and that 's Cæsar's.

Thyr. So.—

Thus then, thou most renown'd: Cæsar entreats,
Not to consider in what case thou stand'st,
Farther than he is Cæsar.

Cleo. Go on: right royal.

Thyr. He knows, that you embrace not Antony
As you did love, but as you fear'd him.

Cleo. O!

Thyr. The scars upon your honour, therefore, he Does pity, as constrained blemishes,
Not as deserv'd.

Cleo. He is a god, and knows
What is most right. Mine honour was not yielded,
But conquer'd merely.

Eno. [Aside.] To be sure of that,
I will ask Antony.—Sir, sir, thou 'rt so leaky,
That we must leave thee to thy sinking, for Thy dearest quit thee. [Exit ENOBARBUS]

Thyr. Shall I say to Cæsar

What you require of him? for he partly begs
To be desir'd to give. It much would please him,
That of his fortunes you should make a staff
To lean upon; but it would warm his spirits,
To hear from me you had left Antony,
And put yourself under his shroud, who is
The universal landlord.

Cleo. What's your name?

Thyr. My name is Thyreus.

Cleo. Most kind messenger

Say to great Cæsar, that i' deputation⁵
I kiss his conqu'ring hand: tell him, I am prompt
To lay my crown at 's feet, and there to kneel.
Tell him, from his all-obeying breath I hear
The doom of Egypt.

outation: in f. e.

Thyr. 'T is your noblest course.
Wisdom and fortune combating together,
If that the former dare but what it can,
No chance may shake it. Give me grace to lay
My duty on your hand.

Cleo. Your Cæsar's father oft,
When he hath mus'd of taking kingdoms in,
Bestow'd his lips on that unworthy place,
As it rain'd kisses. [Thyr. kisses her Hand.]

Re-enter ANTONY and ENOBARBUS.

Ant. Favours, by Jove that thunders!—
What art thou, fellow?

Thyr. One, that but performs
The bidding of the fullest man, and worthiest
To have command obey'd.

Eno. You will be whipp'd.
Ant. Approach, there.—Ah, you kite!—Now gods and devils!

Authority melts from me: of late, when I cry'd, "ho!"
Like boys upon a muss, kings would start forth,
And cry, "Your will?" Have you no ears? I am

Enter Attendants.

Antony yet. Take hence this Jack, and whip him.

Eno. 'T is better playing with a lion's whelp,
Than with an old one dying.

Ant. Moon and stars!
Whip him.—Were 't twenty of the greatest tributaries
That do acknowledge Cæsar, should I find them
So saucy with the hand of—she here, what 's her name,
Since she was Cleopatra?—Whip him, fellows,
Till, like a boy, you see him cringe his face,
And whine aloud for mercy. Take him hence.

Thyr. Mark Antony,—

Ant. Tug him away: being whipp'd,
Bring him again.—The Jack of Cæsar shall Bear us an errand to him.—

[Exeunt Attend. with THYREUS.]

You were half blasted ere I knew you: ha!
Have I my pillow left unpress'd in Rome,
Forborne the getting of a lawful race,
And by a gem of women, to be abus'd
By one that looks on feeders?

Cleo. Good my lord,—

Ant. You have been a boggler ever:—
But when we in our viciousness grow hard,
(O misery on 't!) the wise gods seal² our eyes,
In our own filth drop our clear judgments; make us
Adore our errors; laugh at us, while we strut
To our confusion.

Cleo. O! is it come to this?

Ant. I found you as a morsel, cold upon
Dead Cæsar's trencher: nay, you were a fragment
Of Cneius Pompey's; besides what hotter hours,
Unregister'd in vulgar fame, you have
Luxuriously pick'd out; for, I am sure,
Though you can guess what temperance should be,
You know not what it is.

Cleo. Wherefore is this?

Ant. To let a fellow that will take rewards,
And say, "God quit you?" be familiar with
My play, fellow, your hand; that kingly seal,
And plighted of high hearts!—O! that I were
Upon the hill of Basan, to outroar
The horned herd, for I have savage cause;
And to proclaim it civilly were like
A halter'd neck, which does the hangman thank
For being rare about him.—

Re-enter Attendants, with THYREUS.

Is he whipp'd?

1 Att. Soundly, my lord.

Ant. Cry'd he? and begg'd he pardon?

1 Att. He did ask favour.

Ant. If that thy father live, let him repent
Thou wast not made his daughter; and be thou sorry
To follow Cæsar in his triumph, since
Thou hast been whipp'd for following him: henceforth
The white hand of a lady fever thee:
Shake but to look on 't. Get thee back to Cæsar,
Tell him thy entertainment: look, thou say,
He makes me angry with him; for he seems
Proud and disdainful, harping on what I am.
Not what he knew I was. He makes me angry,
And at this time most easy 't is to do 't,
When my good stars, that were my former guides,
Have empty left their orbs, and shot their fires
Into the abyss of hell. If he mislike
My speech, and what is done, tell him, he has Hipparchus, my enfranchis'd bondman, whom
He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture,
As he shall like, to quit me. Urge it thou:
Hence, with thy stripes! begone! [Exit THYREUS,
Cleo. Have you done yet?

Ant. Alack! our terrestre moon
Is now eclips'd, and it portends alone
The fall of Antony.

Cleo. I must stay his time.

Ant. To flatter Cæsar, would you mingle eyes
With one that ties his points?

Cleo. Not know me yet?

Ant. Cold-hearted toward me?

Cleo. Ah, dear! if it be so.
From my cold heart let heaven engender hail,
And poison it in the source, and the first stone
Drop in my neck: as it determines, so
Dissolve my life! The next Cæsarian smite,
Till by degrees the memory of my womb,
Together with my brave Egyptians all,
By the discandying* of this pelleted storm,
Lie graveless, till the flies and gnats of Nile
Have buried them for prey!

Ant. I am satisfied.
Cæsar sits down in Alexandria, where
I will oppose his fate. Our force by land
Hath nobly held; our sever'd navy, too,
Have knit again, a fleet threatening most sealike.
Where hast thou been, my heart?—Dost thou hear
lady?

If from the field I shall return once more
To kiss these lips, I will appear in blood;
I and my sword will earn our chronicle:
There 's hope in 't yet.

Cleo. That 's my brave lord!

Ant. I will be treble-sinew'd, hearted, breath'd,
And fight maliciously: for when mine hours
Were nice and lucky, men did ransom lives
Of me for jests; but now I 'll set my teeth,
And send to darkness all that stop me.—Come.
Let 's have one other gaudy* night.—Call to me
All my sad captains: fill our bowls; once more
Let 's mock the midnight bell.

Cleo. It is my birthday:
I had thought to have held it poor; but since my lord
Is Antony again, I will be Cleopatra.

Ant. We will yet do well.

Cleo. Call all his noble captains to my lord.

Ant. Do so, we 'll speak to them; and to-night I 'll force [queen;
The wine peep through their scars.—Come on, my

* Not in f. o. ² Blind. ³ Tags to strings by which garments were fastened ⁴ discandering: in folios. ⁵ Latin, gaudium; festivity.

There's sap in 't yet. The next time I do fight,
I'll make death love me, for I will contend
Even with his pestilent sythe.

[Exeunt ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, and Attendants.

Eno. Now he'll outstare the lightning. To be furious,
Is to be frighted out of fear, and in that mood,

The dove will peck the estridge; and I see still,
A diminution in our captain's brain
Restores his heart. When valour preys on' reason
It eats the sword it fights with. I will seek
Some way to leave him.

[Exit

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—CÆSAR's Camp at Alexandria.

Enter CÆSAR, reading a Letter; AGRIPPA, MECÆNAS, and others.

Cæs. He calls me boy, and chides, as he had power
To beat me out of Egypt; my messenger
He hath whipp'd with rods, dares me to personal combat,

Cæsar to Antony: let the old ruffian know
I have many other ways to die; mean time,
Laugh at his challenge.

Mec. Cæsar must think,
When one so great begins to rage, he's hunted
Even to falling. Give him no breath, but now
Make boot of his distraction: never anger
Made good guard for itself.

Cæs. Let our best heads
Know, that to-morrow the last of many battles
We mean to fight. Within our files there are,
Of those that serv'd Mark Antony but late,
Enough to fetch him in. See it done;
And feast the army: we have store to do 't,
And they have earn'd the waste.—Poor Antony!

[Exeunt.

SCENE II.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace.

Enter ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, CHARMIAN,
IRAS, ALEXAS, and others.

Ant. He will not fight with me, Domitius?

Eno. No.

Ant. Why should he not?

Eno. He thinks, being twenty times of better fortune,
He is twenty men to one.

Ant. To-morrow, soldier,
By sea and land I'll fight: or I will live,
Or bathe my dying honour in the blood
Shall make it live again. Woo't thou fight well?

Eno. I'll strike: and cry, "Take all."

Ant. Well said; come on.—
Call forth my household servants: let's to-night

[Enter Servants.

Be bounteous at our meal.—Give me thy hand,
Thou hast been rightly honest:—so hast thou;—
Thou,—and thou,—and thou:—you have serv'd me
And kings have been your fellows.

Cleo. What means this?

Eno. 'T is one of those odd tricks, which sorrow shoots
Out of the mind.

Ant. And thou art honest too.

I wish I could be made so many men,
And all of you clapp'd up together in
An Antony, that I might do you service,
So good as you have done.

Serv. The gods forbid!

Ant. Well, my good fellows, wait on me to-night;
Scant not my cups, and make as much of me,
As when mine empire was your fellow too,
And suffer'd of my command.

Cleo.

What does he mean?

Eno. To make his followers weep.

Ant.

Tend me to-night!

May be, it is the period of your duty:
Haply, you shall not see me more; or if,
A mangled shadow: perchance, to-morrow
You'll serve another master. I look on you,
As one that takes his leave. Mine honest friends
I turn you not away; but, like a master
Married to your good service, stay till death.
Tend me to-night two hours, I ask no more,
And the gods yield you for 't!

Eno. What mean you, sir.
To give them this discomfort? Look, they weep.
And I, an ass, am onion-ey'd: for shame,
Transform us not to women.

Ant. Ho, ho, ho!
Now, the witch take me, if I meant it thus.
Grace grow where those drops fall! My hearty friends,
You take me in too dolorous a sense,
For I spake to you for your comfort; did desire you
To burn this night with torches. Know, my hearts,
I hope well of to-morrow; and will lead you,
Where rather I'll expect victorious life,
Than death and honour. Let's to supper; come,
And drown consideration.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III.—The Same. Before the Palace.

Enter Two Soldiers, to their Guard.

- 1 Sold. Brother, good night: to-morrow is the day.
 - 2 Sold. It will determine one way: fare you well.
- Heard you of nothing strange about the streets?
- 1 Sold. Nothing. What news?
 - 2 Sold. Belike, 't is but a rumour. Good night to you.
 - 1 Sold. Well, sir, good night.

[Enter Two other Soldiers.

- 2 Sold. Soldiers, have careful watch.
 - 3 Sold. And you. Good night, good night.
- [The first Two place themselves at their Posts.
- 4 Sold. Here we: [They take their Posts.] and if to-morrow

Our navy thrive, I have an absolute hope
Our landmen will stand up.

3 Sold. 'T is a brave army,
And full of purpose.

[Music of Hautboys under the Stage.

- 4 Sold. Peace! what noise?
- 1 Sold. List, list!
- 2 Sold. Hark!
- 1 Sold. Music i' the air.
- 3 Sold. Under the earth.
- 4 Sold. It signs well, does it not?
- 3 Sold. No.
- 1 Sold. Peace! I say. What should this mean?
- 2 Sold. 'T is the god Hercules, who Antony lov'd.
Now leaves him.
- 1 Sold. Walk; let's see if other watchmen
Do hear what we do. [They advance to another Post.

2 Sold. How now, masters!

Omnēs. How now!

How now! do you hear this? [Speaking together.]

1 Sold. Ay; is't not strange?

3 Sold. Do you hear, masters? do you hear?

1 Sold. Follow the noise so far as we have quarter;

Let's see how it will give off.

Omnēs. Content: 'T is strange. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—The Same. A Room in the Palace.

Enter ANTONY, and CLEOPATRA; CHARMIAN, and others, attending.

Ant. Eros! mine armour, Eros!

Cleo. Sleep a little.

Ant. No, my chuck.—Eros, come; mine armour, Eros!

Enter EROS, with Armour.

Come, good fellow, put mine¹ iron on:—

fortune be not ours to-day, it is Because we brave her.—Come.

Cleo. Nay, I'll help too.

What's this for?

Ant. Ah, let be, let be! thou art

The armourer of my heart:—false, false; this, this.

Cleo. Sooth, la! I'll help.²

Ant. Thus it must be.³ Well, well;

We shall thrive now.—Seest thou, my good fellow? Go, put on thy defences.

Eros. Briefly, sir.

Cleo. Is not this buckled well?

Ant. Rarely, rarely:

He that unbuckles this, till we do please

To doff't for our repose, shall bear⁴ a storm.—

Thou fumblest, Eros; and my queen's a squire

More tight at this, than thou. Despatch.—O. love!

That thou couldst see my wars to-day, and knew'st

The royal occupation! thou shouldst see

Enter an armed Soldier.

A workman in't.—Good morrow to thee: welcome:

Thou look'st like him that knows a warlike charge.

To business that we love we rise betime,

And go to't with delight.

Sold. A thousand, sir,

Early though⁵, be, have on thy riveted trim,

And at the port expect you. [Shout. Trumpets flourish.]

Enter Captains, and Soldiers.

Capt. The morn is fair.—Good morrow, general.

All. Good morrow, general.

Ant. 'T is well blown, lads.

This morning, like the spirit of a youth

That means to be of note, begins betimes.—

So so: come, give me that: this way; well said.

Fare thee well, dame: whate'er becomes of me,

This is a soldier's kiss. Rebukable, [Kisses her.]

And worthy shameful cheek it were, to stand

On more mechanic compliment: I'll leave thee

Now, like a man of steel.—You, that will fight,

Follow me close: I'll bring you to't.—Adieu.

[Exeunt ANTONY, EROS, Officers, and Soldiers.]

Char. Please you, retire to your chamber.

Cleo. Lead me.

He goes forth gallantly. That he and Cæsar might Determine this great war in single fight!

Then, Antony,—but now,—well, on. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—ANTONY'S Camp near Alexandria.

Trumpets sound. Enter ANTONY and EROS; a Soldier meeting them

Sold. The gods make this a happy day to Antony!

Ant. Would thou, and those thy scars, had once prevail'd

To make me fight at land!

Sold.

Hadst thou done so,

The kings that have revolted, and the soldier

That has this morning left thee, would have still

Follow'd thy heels.

Ant.

Who's gone this morning?

Sold.

Who:

One ever near thee: call for Enobarbus,

He shall not hear thee; or from Cæsar's camp

Say, "I am none of thine."

Ant.

What say'st thou?

Sold.

Sir,

He is with Cæsar.

Eros.

Sir, his chests and treasure

He has not with him.

Ant.

Is he gone?

Sold.

Most certain

Ant. Go, Eros, send his treasure after; do it:

Detain no jot, I charge thee. Write to him

(I will subscribe) gentle adieus, and greetings:

Say, that I wish he never find more cause

To change a master.—O! my fortunes have Corrupted honest men:—despatch.—Enobarbus!

[Exeunt]

SCENE VI.—CÆSAR'S Camp before Alexandria.

Flourish. Enter CÆSAR, with AGRIPPA, ENOBARBUS, and others.

Cæs. Go forth, Agrippa, and begin the fight.

Our will is, Antony be took alive;

Make it so known.

Agr. Cæsar, I shall.

[Exit AGRIPPA]

Cæs. The time of universal peace is near:

Prove this a prosperous day, the three-nook'd world

Shall bear the olive freely.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess.

Antony

Is come into the field.

Cæs.

Go; charge Agrippa

Plant those that have revolted in the van,

That Antony may seem to spend his fury

Upon himself.

[Exeunt all but ENOBARBUS]

Eno. Alexas did revolt, and went to Jewry on

Affairs of Antony: there did persuade

Great Herod to incline himself to Cæsar,

And leave his master Antony: for this pains

Cæsar hath hang'd him. Canidius, and the rest

That fell away, have entertainment, but

No honourable trust. I have done ill,

Of which I do accuse myself so sorely.

That I will joy no more.

Enter a Soldier of CÆSAR'S.

Sold.

Enobarbus, Antony

Hath after thee sent all thy treasure, with

His bounty overplus: the messenger

Came on my guard, and at thy tent is now

Unloading of his mules.

Eno.

I give it you.

Sold. Mock not, Enobarbus,

I tell you true: best you safed⁶ the bringer

Out of the host; I must attend mine office,

Or would have done't myself. Your emperor

Continues still a Jove.

[Exit Soldier.]

Eno. I am alone the villain of the earth,

And feel I am so most.—O Antony!

Thou mine of bounty, how wouldst thou have paid

¹ thine: in f. e. ² This and the previous speech, are printed as one in the folio. Hammer made the change. ³ f. e. give these words to CLEOPATRA. ⁴ hear: in f. e. ⁵ Exeunt CÆSAR and Train: in f. e. ⁶ Made safe.

My better service, when my turpitude
Thou dost so crown with gold ! This blows my heart :
If swift thought break it not, a swifter mean
Shall outstrike thought : but thought will do 't, I feel.
I fight against thee ?—No : I will go seek
Some ditch, wherein to die ; the foul'st best fits
My latter part of life. [Exit.]

SCENE VII.—Field of Battle between the Camps.

Alarum. Drums and Trumpets. Enter AGRIPPA, and others.

Agr. Retire ; we have engag'd ourselves too far.
Cæsar himself has work, and our oppression
Exceeds what we expected. [Exeunt.]

Alarum. Enter ANTONY, and SCARUS wounded.
Scar. O my brave emperor, this is fought indeed !
Had we done so at first, we had driven them home
With clouts about their heads. [Shouts afar off.]

Ant. Thou bleed'st apace.
Scar. I had a wound here that was like a T,
But now 't is made an H.

Ant. They do retire.
Scar. We'll beat 'em into bench-holes. I have yet
Room for six scotches more.

Enter EROS.

Eros. They are beaten, sir ; and our advantage serves
For a fair victory.

Scar. Let us score their backs,
And snatch 'em up, as we take hares, behind :
'T is sport to maul a runner.

Ant. I will reward thee
Once for thy sprightly comfort, and ten-fold
For thy good valour. Come thee on.

Scar. I'll halt after. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII.—Under the Walls of Alexandria.

Alarum. Enter ANTONY, marching ; SCARUS, and Forces.

Ant. We have beat him to his camp. Run one before,
And let the queen know of our guests.¹ To-morrow,
Before the sun shall see us, we'll spill the blood
That has to-day escap'd. I thank you all,
For doughty-handed are you : and have fought
Not as you serv'd the cause, but as it had been
Each man's, like mine : you have shown all Hector's.
Enter the city, clip your wives, your friends,
Tell them your feats ; whilst they with joyful tears
Wash the congealment from your wounds, and kiss
The honour'd gashes whole.—Give me thy hand :

Enter CLEOPATRA, attended.

To this great fairy I'll commend thy acts.
Make her thanks bless thee.—O, thou day o' the world !
Chain mine arm'd neck ; leap thou, attire and all,
Through proof of harness to my heart, and there
Ride on the pants triumphing.

Cleo. Lord of lords !
O infinite virtue ! com'st thou smiling from
The world's great snare uncaught ?

Ant. My nightingale,
We have beat them to their beds. What, girl ! though grey
Do something mingle with our younger brown ; yet have we

A brain that nourishes our nerves, and can Get goal for goal of youth. Behold this man ;
[Pointing to SCARUS.]

Commend unto his lips thy favouring hand :—
Kiss it, my warrior :—he hath fought to-day,
As if a god, in hate of mankind, had
Destroy'd in such a shape.

Cleo.

I'll give thee, friend,

An armour all of gold ; it was a king's.
Ant. He has deserv'd it, were it carbuncled
Like glowing Phœbus' car.—Give me thy hand.
Through Alexandria make a jolly march ;
Bear our hack'd targets like the men that owe them.
Had our great palace the capacity
To camp this host, we all would sup together,
And drink carouses to the next day's fate,
Which promises royal peril.—Trumpeters,
With brazen din blast you the city's ear ;
Make mingle with our rattling tabourines,
That heaven and earth may strike their sounds together
Applauding our approach. [Exeunt]

SCENE IX.—CÆSAR'S Camp.

Sentinels on their Post. Enter ENOBARBUS.

1 Sold. If we be not reliev'd within this hour,
We must return to the court of guard.⁴ The night
Is shiny, and, they say, we shall embattle
By the second hour i' the morn.

2 Sold. This last day was
A shrewd one to us.

Eno. O ! bear me witness, night,—
3 Sold. What man is this ?

2 Sold. Stand close, and list him.
Eno. Be witness to me, O thou blessed moon !

When men revolted shall upon record
Bear hateful memory, poor Enobarbus did
Before thy face repent.—

1 Sold. Enobarbus !
3 Sold. Peace !
Hark farther.

Eno. O sovereign mistress of true melancholy !
The poisonous damp of night dispose upon me,
That life, a very rebel to my will, [Lying down.]
May hang no longer on me : throw my heart
Against the flint and hardness of my fault,
Which, being dried with grief, will break to powder,
And finish all foul thoughts. O Antony !
Nobler than my revolt is infamous,
Forgive me in thine own particular ;
But let the world rank me in register
A master-leaver, and a fugitive.

O Antony ! O Antony ! [Dies]

2 Sold. Let's speak to him.
1 Sold. Let's hear him ; for the things he speaks
May concern Cæsar.

3 Sold. Let's do so. But he sleeps.
1 Sold. Swoons rather ; for so bad a prayer as his
Was never yet 'fore⁶ sleep.

2 Sold. Go we to him.
3 Sold. Awake, sir ; awake ! speak to us.
2 Sold. Hear you, sir ?
1 Sold. The hand of death hath raght⁷ him. Hark !
the drums [Drums afar off]

Do early wake the sleepers. Let us bear him
To the court of guard ; he is of note. Our hour
Is fully out.

3 Sold. Come on, then ;
He may recover yet. [Exeunt, with the Body]

SCENE X.—Between the two Camps.

Enter ANTONY and SCARUS, with Forces, marching.

Ant. Their preparation is to-day by sea :
We please them not by land.

Scar. For both, my lord.
Ant. I would, they'd fight i' the fire, or i' the air,
We'd fight there too. But this it is : our foot

¹ Not in f. e. ² Deeds. guets in f. e. ³ Not in f. e. ⁴ Place of mustering the guard. ⁵ Not in f. e. ⁶ for in f. e. ⁷ Reached

Upon the hills adjoining to the city
Shall stay with us (order for sea is given,
They have put forth the haven)
Where their appointment we may best discover,
And look on their endeavour. [Exeunt.]

Enter CÆSAR, and his Forces, marching.
Cæs. But¹ being charg'd, we will be still by land,
Which, as I take² it, we shall; for his best force
Is forth to man his galleys. To the vales,
And hold our best advantage! [Exeunt.]

Re-enter ANTONY and SCARUS.
Ant. Yet they are not join'd. Where yond³ pine does
I shall discover all: I'll bring thee word [stand,
Straight, how 't is like to go. [Exit.]

Scar. Swallows have built
In Cleopatra's sails their nests: the augurers⁴
Say, they know not,—they cannot tell;—look grimly,
And dare not speak their knowledge. Antony
Is valiant, and dejected; and by starts
His fretted fortunes give him hope, and fear,
Of what he has, and has not.

[Alarum afar off, as at a Sea-Fight.]
Re-enter ANTONY.

Ant. All is lost!
This foul Egyptian hath betray'd me:
My fleet hath yielded to the foe; and yonder
They cast their caps up, and carouse together
Like friends long lost.—Triple-tur'd whore! 't is thou
Hast sold me to this novice, and my heart
Makes only wars on thee.—Bid them all fly;
For when I am reveng'd upon my charm,
I have done all.—Bid them all fly; be gone. [Exit SCARUS.]

O sun! thy uprise shall I see no more:
Fortune and Antony part here; even here
Do we shake hands.—All come to this?—The hearts
That spaniel'd⁵ me at heels, to whom I gave
Their wishes, do discandy, melt their sweets
On blossoming Cæsar; and this pine is bark'd,
That overtopp'd them all. Betray'd I am.
O this false spell⁶ of Egypt! this great⁷ charm,—
Whose eye beck'd forth my wars, and call'd them home
Whose bosom was my crownet, my chief end,
Like a right gipsy, hath, at fast and loose,⁸
Beguil'd me to the very heart of loss.—
What, Eros! Eros!

Enter CLEOPATRA.
Ah, thou spell! Avaunt!
Cleo. Why is my lord enrag'd against his love?
Ant. Vanish, or I shall give thee thy deserving,
And blemish Cæsar's triumph. Let him take thee,
And hoist thee up to the shouting plebeians:
Follow his chariot, like the greatest spot
Of all thy sex; most monster-like, be shown
For poor'st diminutives, for doits;⁹ and let Patient Octavia plough thy visage up
With her prepared nails. [Exit CLEO.]

'T is well thou 'rt gone,
If it be well to live; but better 't were
Thou fell'st under my fury, for one death
Might have prevented many.—Eros, ho!—
The shirt of Nessus is upon me: teach me,
Alcides, thou mine ancestor, thy rage:
Let me lodge Lichas on the horns of the moon;
And with those hands, that grasp'd the heaviest club,
Subdue my worthless self. The witch shall die:
To the young Roman boy she hath sold me, and I fall
Under this plot; she dies for 't.—Eros, ho! [Exit.]

SCENE XI.—Alexandria. A Room in the Palace
Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and MARDIAN
Cleo. Help me, my women! O! he is more mad
Than Telamon for his shield; the boar of Thessaly
Was never so emboss'd.*

Char. To the monument!
There lock yourself, and send him word you are dead
The soul and body rive not more in parting,
Than greatness going off.

Cleo. To the monument!
Mardian, go tell him I have slain myself;
Say, that the last I spoke was, Antony,
And word it, prythee, piteously. Hence,
Mardian, and bring me how he takes my death.—
To the Monument! [Exeunt]

SCENE XII.—The Same. Another Room.
Enter ANTONY and EROS.

Ant. Eros, thou yet behold'st me.
Eros. Ay, noble lord.
Ant. Sometime, we see a cloud that's dragonish,
A vapour, sometime, like a bear, or lion,
A tower'd citadel, a pendant rock,
A forked mountain, or blue promontory
With trees upon 't, that nod unto the world,
And mock our eyes with air: thou hast seen these signs,
They are black vesper's pageants.

Eros. Ay, my lord.
Ant. That, which is now a horse, even with a thought,
The rack dislimns, and makes it indistinct,
As water is in water.

Eros. It does, my lord.
Ant. My good knave, Eros, now thy captain is Even such a body: here I am Antony,
Yet cannot hold this visible shape, my knave.
I made these wars for Egypt, and the queen,
Whose heart, I thought, I had, for she had mine,
Which, whilst it was mine, had annex'd unto 't
A million more, now lost: she, Eros, has Pack'd cards with Cæsar's, and false play'd my glory
Unto an enemy's triumph.—
Nay, weep not, gentle Eros; there is left us
Ourselves to end ourselves.—O, thy vile lady!

Enter MARDIAN.
She has robb'd me of my sword.
Mar. No, Antony:
My mistress lov'd thee, and her fortunes mingled
With thine entirely.

Ant. Hence, saucy eunuch: peace!
She hath betray'd me, and shall die the death.

Mar. Death of one person can be paid but once,
And that she has discharg'd. What thou wouldst do
Is done unto thy hand: the last she spake
Was, Antony! most noble Antony!
Then, in the midst a tearing groan did break
The name of Antony; it was divided Between her heart and lips. She render'd life,
Thy name so buried in her.

Ant. Dead, then?
Mar. Dead.
Ant. Unarm me, Eros: the long day's task is done,
And we must sleep.—That thou depart'st hence safe,
Does pay thy labour richly; go.—[Exit MARDIAN.]

Off, pluck off!—
The seven-fold shield of Ajax cannot keep
The battery from my heart. O, cleave, my sides!

¹ Unless. ² auguries: in folio. ³ pannelled: in folio. Hammer made the change. ⁴ soul: in f. o. ⁵ grave: in f. o. ⁶ A Kame, now called "pricking in the garter," in vogue with gypsies. ⁷ doits: in folio. ⁸ Foaming at the mouth.

Heart, once be stronger than thy continent,
Crack thy frail case!—Apace, Eros, apace.—
No more a soldier!—bruised pieces, go;
You have been nobly borne.—From me a while.—

[Exit EROS.]

I will o'ertake thee, Cleopatra, and Weep for my pardon. So it must be, for now
All length is torture: since the torch is out,
Lie down, and stray no farther. Now all labour
Mars what it does; yea, very force entangles
Itself with strength: seal then, and all is done.—
EROS!—I come, my queen.—EROS!—Stay for me:
Where souls do couch on flowers, we'll hand in hand,
And with our sprightly port make the ghosts gaze:
Dido and her Æneas shall want troops,
And all the haunt be ours.—Come, Eros! Eros!

Re-enter EROS.

EROS. What would my lord?

Ant.

Since Cleopatra died

I have liv'd in such dishonour, that the gods
Detest my baseness. ¶ That with my sword
Quarter'd the world, and o'er green Neptune's back
With ships made cities, condemn myself to lack
The courage of a woman; less noble minded
Than she, which by her death our Cæsar tells,
"I am conqueror of myself." Thou art sworn, Eros,
That when the exigent should come, (which now
Is come indeed) when I should see behind me
The inevitable prosecution of Disgrace and horror, that on my command
Thou then wouldst kill me: do it; the time is come.
Thou strik'st not me, 't is Cæsar thou defatest.
Put colour in thy cheek.

EROS. The gods withhold me!
Shall I do that, which all the Parthian darts,
Though enemy, lost aim, and could not?

Ant.

EROS,

Wouldst thou be window'd in great Rome, and see
Thy master thus with pleach'd arms, bending down
His corrigible neck, his face subdued
To penetrative shame, whilst the wheel'd seat
Of fortunate Cæsar, drawn before him, branded
His baseness that ensued?

EROS.

I would not see 't.

Ant. Come, then: for with a wound I must be cur'd.
Draw that thy honest sword, which thou hast worn
Most useful for thy country.

EROS.

O, sir! pardon me.

Ant. When I did make thee free, swor'st thou not then

To do this when I bade thee? Do it at once,
Or thy precedent services are all

But accidents unpurpos'd. Draw, and come.

EROS. Turn from me, then, that noble countenance,
Wherin the worship of the whole world lies.

Ant. Lo thee!

[Turning his face from him.]

EROS. My sword is drawn.

Ant.

Then, let it do at once

The thing why thou hast drawn it.

EROS.

My dear master,

My captain, and my emperor, let me say,
Before I strike this bloody stroke, farewell.

Ant. 'T is said, man: and farewell.

EROS. Farewell, great chief. Shall I strike now?

Ant.

Now, Eros.

EROS. Why, there then.—[Falls on his sword.]

Thus do I escape the sorrow

Of Antony's death.

[Dies.]

Ant.

Thrice nobler than myself!

Thou teachest me, O valiant Eros! what
I should, and thou couldst not. My queen and Eros
Have, by their brave instruction, got upon me
A nobleness in record: but I will be
A bridegroom in my death, and run into 't
As to a lover's bed. Come then; and, Eros,
Thy master dies thy scholar: to do thus

[Falling on his sword]

I learn'd of thee.—How! not dead? not dead?—

The guard!—how?—O, despatch me!

Enter DERCETAS and Guard.

1 Guard.

What 's the noise?

Ant. I have done my work ill, friends: O! make an end

Of what I have begun.

2 Guard.

The star is fallen.

1 Guard. And time is at his period.

All.

Alas, and woe!

Ant. Let him that loves me, strike me dead.

1 Guard.

Not I.

2 Guard. Nor I.

3 Guard. Nor any one.

[Exeunt Guard.]

Der. Thy death and fortunes bid thy followers fly
This sword but shown to Cæsar, with this tidings
Shall enter me with him.

Enter DIOMEDES.

Dio. Where 's Antony?

Der. There, Diomed; there.

Dio. Lives he?

Wilt thou not answer, man?

[Exit DERCETAS.]

Ant. Art thou there, Diomed? Draw thy sword, and give me

Sufficing strokes for death.

Dio.

Most absolute lord,

My mistress, Cleopatra, sent me to thee.

Ant. When did she send thee?

Dio.

Now, my lord.

Ant.

Where is she?

Dio. Look'd in her monument. She had a prophesying fear

Of what hath come to pass; for when she saw
(Which never shall be found) you did suspect
She had compos'd with Cæsar, and that your rage
Would not be purg'd, she sent you word she was dead,
But, fearing since how it might work, hath sent
Me to proclaim the truth; and I am come,
I dread, too late.

Ant. Too late, good Diomed. Call my guard, I pray thee.

Dio. What, ho! the emperor's guard! The guard, what, ho!

Come; your lord calls.

Enter some of the Guard.

Ant. Bear me, good fellows, where Cleopatra hides;
'T is the last service that I shall command you.

1 Guard. Woe, woe are we, sir, you may not live to wear

All your true followers out.

All.

Most heavy day!

Ant. Nay, good my fellows, do not please sharp fate
To grace it with your sorrows: bid that welcome
Which comes to punish us, and we punish it,
Seeming to bear it lightly. Take me up:
I have led you oft; carry me now, good fellows,
And have my thanks for all. [Exeunt, bearing ANTONY]

SCENE XIII.—The Same. A Monument.

Enter, above, CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, and IRAS.

Cleo. O Charmian! I will never go from hence.

Char. Be comforted, dear madam.

Cleo.

All strange and terrible events are welcome,
But comforts we despise: our size of sorrow,
Proportion'd to our cause, must be as great

Enter, below, DIOMEDES.

As that which makes it.—How now! is he dead?

Dio. His death's upon him, but not dead.

Look out o' the other side your monument,
His guard have brought him thither.

Enter, below, ANTONY, borne by the Guard.

Cleo. O sun,

Burn the great sphere thou mov'st in!—darkling stand,
Thou' varying shore o' th' world. O Antony, Antony!

Help, Charmian, help, Iras, help: help, friends
Below; let's draw him thither.

Ant.

Peace!

Not Cæsar's valour hath o'erthrown Antony,
But Antony's hath triumph'd on itself.

Cleo. So it should be, that none but Antony
Should conquer Antony; but woe 't is so!

Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying; only
I here importune death a while, until
Of many thousand kisses the poor last
I lay upon thy lips.—

Cleo.

I dare not, dear,

(Dear my lord, pardon) I dare not,

Lest I be taken: not the imperious show

Of the full-fortun'd Cæsar ever shall
Be brooch'd with me; if knife, drugs, serpents, have Edge, sting, or operation, I am safe.

Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes,

And still condition,² shall acquire no honour

Demuring upon me.—But come, come, Antony.—

Help me, my women,—we must draw thee up.—

Assist, good friends.

Ant.

O! quick, or I am gone.

Cleo. Here's port,³ indeed!—How heavy weighs my lord!

Our strength is all gone into heaviness,

That makes the weight: had I great Juno's power,

The strong-wing'd Mercury should fetch thee up,

And set thee by Jove's side. Yet come a little;—

Wishers were ever fools.—O! come, come, come;

[They draw ANTONY up.]

And welcome, welcome! die, where⁴ thou hast liv'd:

Quicken with kissing: had my lips that power,

Thus would I wear them out.

All.

A heavy sight.

Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying.

Give me some wine, and let me speak a little.

Cleo. No, let me speak; and let me rail so high,

That the false housewife Fortune break her wheel,

Provok'd by my offence.

Ant.

One word, sweet queen.

Thus would I wear them out.

Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying.

Give me some wine, and let me speak a little.

Cleo. No, let me speak; and let me rail so high,

That the false housewife Fortune break her wheel,

Provok'd by my offence.

Ant. One word, sweet queen.

Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying.

Give me some wine, and let me speak a little.

Cleo. No, let me speak; and let me rail so high,

That the false housewife Fortune break her wheel,

Provok'd by my offence.

Ant. One word, sweet queen.

Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying.

Give me some wine, and let me speak a little.

Cleo. No, let me speak; and let me rail so high,

That the false housewife Fortune break her wheel,

Of Cæsar seek your honour with your safety.—O!

Cleo. They do not go together.

Ant.

Gentle, hear me

None about Cæsar trust, but Proculeius.

Cleo. My resolution, and my hands, I'll trust;

None about Cæsar.

Ant. The miserable change now at my end
Lament nor sorrow at, but please your thoughts,
In feeding them with those my former fortunes,
Wherein I liv'd the greatest prince o' the world,
The noblest: and do now not basely die,
Nor cowardly put off my helmet to
My countryman, a Roman by a Roman Valiantly vanquish'd. Now, my spirit is going;
I can no more.

[Dies

Cleo. Noblest of men, woo't die?

Hast thou no care of me? shall I abide

In this dull world, which in thy absence is

No better than a sty?—O! see, my women,

The crown o' the earth doth melt.—My lord!—

O! wither'd is the garland of the war,

The soldier's pole is fallen: young boys, and girls,

Are level now with men; the odds is gone,

And there is nothing left remarkable

Beneath the visiting moon.

Char.

O, quietness, lady!

Iras. She is dead too, our sovereign.

Char.

Lady!—

Iras.

Madam!—

Char. O madam, madam, madam!

Iras.

Royal Egypt!

Empress!

Char. Peace, peace, Iras!

Cleo. No more, but e'en a woman; and commanded

By such poor passion as the maid that milks,

And does the meanest chares.—It were for me

To throw my sceptre at the injurious gods;

To tell them, that this world did equal theirs,

Till they had stolen our jewel. All's but naught;

Patience is scottish, and impatience does

Become a dog that's mad: then is it sin,

To rush into the secret house of death,

Ere death dare come to us?—How do you, women?

What, what! good cheer! Why, how now, Charmian!

My noble girls!—Ah, women, women! look.

Our lamp is spent, it's out.—Good sirs, take heart:

[To the Guard below.]

We'll bury him; and then, what's brave, what's noble,

Let's do it after the high Roman fashion,

And make death proud to take us. Come, away

This case of that huge spirit now is cold.

Ah, women, women! come; we have no friend

But resolution, and the briefest end.

[Exeunt; those above bearing off ANTONY's Body]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—CÆSAR's Camp before Alexandria.

Enter CÆSAR, AGRIPPA, DOLABELLA, MÆCENAS, GALLUS, PROCULEIUS, and others.

Cæs. Go to him, Dolabella, bid him yield;

Being so frustrate, tell him, that he mocks

The pauses that he makes.⁴

Dol. Cæsar, I shall.

[Exit DOLABELLA]

Enter DERCETAS, with the Sword of ANTONY.

Cæs. Wherefore is that? and what art thou, that dar'st

Appear thus to us?

Der.

I am call'd Dercetas

Mark Antony I serv'd, who best was worthy

Tell him

[The mock us by the pauses, &c.]

[The mock us by the pauses, &c.]

[The mock us by the pauses, &c.]

[The mock us by the pauses, &c.]

[The mock us by the pauses, &c.]

¹ The: in e. ² conclusion: in f. e. ³ sport: in f. e. ⁴ when: in folio. Pope made the change. ⁵ Chorus. ⁶ in f. e.

Tell him

He mocks us by the pauses, &c.

Best to be serv'd : whilst he stood up, and spoke,
He was my master, and I wore my life,
To spend upon his haters. If thou please
To take me to thee, as I was to him
I'll be to Cæsar; if thou pleasest not,
I yield thee up my life.

Cæs. What is't thou say'st?

Der. I say, O Cæsar! Antony is dead.

Cæs. The breaking of so great a thing should make
A greater crack: the round world should have shook
Lions into civil streets,
And citizens to their dens. The death of Antony
Is not a single doom: in the name lay
A moiety of the world.

Der. He is dead, Cæsar;
Not by a public minister of justice,
Nor by a hired knife; but that self hand,
Which writ his honour in the acts it did,
Hath, with the courage which the heart did lend it,
Split that self noble heart.¹ This is his sword;
I robb'd his wound of it: behold it, stain'd
With his most noble blood.

Cæs. Look you sad, friends?
The gods rebuke me, but it is tidings
To wash the eyes of kings.

Agr. And strange it is,
That nature must compel us to lament
Our most persisted deeds.

Mec. His taints and honours
Weighed² equal with him.

Agr. A rarer spirit never Did steer humanity, but you gods will give us
Some faults to make us men. Cæsar is touch'd.

Mec. When such a spacious mirror's set before him,
He needs must see himself.

Cæs. O Antony!
Have I follow'd thee to this?—but we do lance
Diseases in our bodies. I must perforce
Have shown to thee such a declining day,
Or look on thine: we could not stall together
In the whole world. But yet let me lament,
With tears as sovereign as the blood of hearts,
That thou, my brother, my competitor
In top of all design, my mate in empire,
Friend and companion in the front of war,
The arm of mine own body, and the heart
Where mine his thoughts did kindle, that our stars,
Unreconcilable should divide
Our equalness to this.—Hear me, good friends,—
But I will tell you at some meetest season:

Enter a Messenger.

The business of this man looks out of him;
We'll hear him what he says.—Whence are you?

Mess. A poor Egyptian yet. The queen my mistress,
Confin'd in all she has, her monument,
Of thy intents desires instruction,
That she preparedly may frame herself
To the way she's forced to.

Cæs. Bid her have good heart:
She soon shall know of us, by some of ours,
How honourable and how kindly we Determine for her; for Cæsar cannot live³
To be ungentle.

Mess. So the gods preserve thee! [Exit.]

Cæs. Come hither, Proculeius. Go, and say,
We purpose her no shame: give her what comforts
The quality of her passion shall require,
Lost in her greatness by some mortal stroke
She do defeat us; for her life in Rome

Would be eternal in our triumph. Go,
And with your speediest bring us what she says,
And how you find of her.

Pro. Cæsar, I shall.

[Exit PROCULEIUS,

Cæs. Gallus, go you along.—Where's Dolabella,
To second Proculeius?

[Exit GALLUS

All. Dolabella!

Cæs. Let him alone, for I remember now
How he's employed: he shall in time be ready.
Go with me to my tent, where you shall see
How hardly I was drawn into this war,
How calm and gentle I proceeded still
In all my writings. Go with me, and see
What I can show in this.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Alexandria. A Room in the Monument

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, and IRAS.

Cleo. My desolation does begin to make
A better life. 'Tis paltry to be Cæsar:
Not being fortune, he's but fortune's knave,
A minister of her will; and it is great
To do that thing that ends all other deeds,
Which shackles accidents, and bolts up change;
Which sleeps, and never palates more the dug,⁴
The beggar's nurse and Cæsar's.

Enter, to the Gates of the Monument, PROCULEIUS, GALLUS, and Soldiers.

Pro. Cæsar sends greeting to the queen of Egypt;
And bids thee study on what fair demands
Thou mean'st to have him grant thee.

Cleo. What's thy name?

Pro. My name is Proculeius.

Cleo. Antony

Did tell me of you, bade me trust you; but
I do not greatly care to be deceiv'd,
That have no use for trusting. If your master
Would have a queen his beggar, you must tell him,
That majesty, to keep decorum, must
No less beg than a kingdom: if he please
To give me conquer'd Egypt for my son,
He gives me so much of mine own, as I
Will kneel to him with thanks.

Pro. Be of good cheer;

You are fallen into a princely hand, fear nothing.
Make your full reference freely to my lord,
Who is so full of grace, that it flows over
On all that need. Let me report to him
Your sweet dependancy, and you shall find
A conqueror, that will pray in aid for kindness,
Where he for grace is kneel'd to.

Cleo. Pray you, tell him

I am his fortune's vassal, and I send him
The greatness he has got. I hourly learn
A doctrine of obedience, and would gladly
Look him i' the face.

Pro. This I'll report, dear lady.

Have comfort; for, I know, your plight is pitied
Of him that caus'd it.

Gal. You see how easily she may be surpris'd.

[PROCULEIUS, and two of the Guard, ascend the Monument by a Ladder, and come behind CLEOPATRA. Some of the Guard unbear and open the Gates.]

Guard her till Cæsar come.

[To PROCULEIUS and the Guard. Exit GALLUS.]

Iras. Royal queen!

Char. O Cleopatra! thou art taken, queen!—

Cleo. Quick, quick, good hands. [Drawing a Dagger]

Pro. Hold, worthy lady, hold! [Disarms her]

¹ Split the heart: in f. e. ² Waged: in folio, 1623. ³ leave: in folio. ⁴ Dung: in f. e.

Do not yourself such wrong, who are in this Reliev'd, but not betray'd.

Cleo. What, of death, too,
That rids our dogs of languish?

Pro. Cleopatra,
Do not abuse my master's bounty, by
Th' undoing of yourself: let the world see
His nobleness well acted, which your death
Will never let come forth.

Cleo. Where art thou, death?
Come hither, come! come, come, and take a queen
Worth many babes and beggars!

Pro. O! temperance, lady.
Cleo. Sir, I will eat no meat, I'll not drink, sir;
if idle talk will once be accessory,¹
I'll not sleep neither. This mortal house I'll ruin,
Do Cæsar what he can. Know, sir, that I

Will not wait pinion'd at your master's court,
Nor once be chastis'd with the sober eye
Of dull Octavia. Shall they hoist me up,
And show me to the shouting varletry
Of censuring Rome? Rather a ditch in Egypt
Be gentle grave to me! rather on Nilus' mud
Lay me stark nak'd, and let the water flies
Blow me into abhorring! rather make
My country's high pyramides my gibbet,
And hang me up in chains!

Pro. You do extend
These thoughts of horror farther, than you shall Find cause in Cæsar.

Enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. Proculeius,
What thou hast done thy master Cæsar knows,
And he hath sent for thee: for the queen,
I'll take her to my guard.

Pro. So, Dolabella,
It shall content me best: be gentle to her.—
To Cæsar I will speak what you shall please,
[To CLEOPATRA.]

If you'll employ me to him.

Cleo. Say, I would die.
[Exeunt PROCULEIUS, and Soldiers.]

Dol. Most noble empress, you have heard of me?

Cleo. I cannot tell.

Dol. Assuredly, you know me.

Cleo. No matter, sir, what I have heard or known.
You laugh, when boys, or women, tell their dreams;
Is't not your trick?

Dol. I understand not, madam.

Cleo. I dream'd, there was an emperor Antony:
O, such another sleep, that I might see
But such another man!

Dol. If it might please you,—

Cleo. His face was as the heavens; and therein stuck
A sun, and moon, which kept their course, and lighted
The little O, the earth.

Dol. Most sovereign creature,—

Cleo. His legs bestrid the ocean; his rear'd arm,
Crested the world; his voice was propertied
As all the tuned spheres, and that to friends;
But when he meant to quail and shake the orb,
He was as rattling thunder. For his bounty,
There was no winter in't; an autumn² 't was,
That grew the more by reaping: his delights
Were dolphin-like; they show'd his back above
The element they liv'd in: in his livery
Walk'd crowns, and crownets; realms and islands were
As plates³ dropp'd from his pocket.

Dol.

Cleopatra,—

Cleo. Think you, there was, or might be, such a man
As this I dream'd of?

Dol. Gentle madam, no.

Cleo. You lie, up to the hearing of the gods:
But, if there be, or ever were one such,
It's past the size of dreaming: nature wants stuff
To vie⁴ strange forms with fancy; yet, to imagine
An Antony, were nature's piece 'gainst fancy,
Condemning shadows quite.

Dol. Hear me, good madam.
Your loss is as yourself, great; and you bear it
As answering to the weight: would I might never O'ertake pursu'd success, but I do feel,
By the rebound of yours, a grief that smites⁵
My very heart at root.

Cleo. I thank you, sir.

Know you, what Cæsar means to do with me?

Dol. I am loath to tell you what I would you knew.

Cleo. Nay, pray you, sir,—

Dol. Though he be honourable,—

Cleo. He'll lead me, then, in triumph?

Dol. Madam, he will; I know't.

Within. Make way there!—Cæsar!

Enter CÆSAR, GALLUS, PROCULEIUS, MECÆNAS, SELEUCUS, and Attendants.

Cæs. Which is the queen of Egypt?

Dol. It is the emperor, madam. [CLEOPATRA kneels.]

Cæs. Arise, you shall not kneel.

I pray you, rise; rise, Egypt.

Cleo. Sir, the gods

Will have it thus: my master and my lord
I must obey.

Cæs. Take to you no hard thoughts:
The record of what injuries you did us,
Though written in our flesh, we shall remember
As things but done by chance.

Cleo. Sole sir o' the world,
I cannot project mine own cause so well
To make it clear; but do confess I have Been laden with like frailties, which before
Have often sham'd our sex.

Cæs. Cleopatra, know,
We will extenuate rather than enforce:

If you apply yourself to our intents,
(Which towards you are most gentle) you shall find
A benefit in this change: but if you seek
To lay on me a cruelty, by taking
Antony's course, you shall bereave yourself
Of my good purposes, and put your children
To that destruction which I'll guard them from,
If thereon you rely. I'll take my leave.

Cleo. And may through all the world: 't is yours, and we

Your scutcheons, and your signs of conquest, shall Hang in what place you please. Here, my good lord.

Cæs. You shall advise me in all for Cleopatra.

Cleo. This is the brief of money, plate, and jewels,
I am possess'd of: 't is exactly valued;

[Showing a Paper.]
Not petty things admitted.—Where's Seleucus?

Sel. Here, madam.

Cleo. This is my treasurer: let him speak, my lord,
Upon his peril, that I have reserv'd
To myself nothing.—Speak the truth, Seleucus.

Sel. Madam,

I had rather seal my lips, than to my peril
Speak that which is not.

¹ necessary: in f. e. ² Antony: in fo. i. Theobald made the change. ³ Silver coins. ⁴ A term at cards, to stake. ⁵ suites: in f. e. Not in f. e.

Cleo

What have I kept back?

Sel. Enough to purchase what you have made known.

Cæs. Nay, blush not, Cleopatra; I approve

Your wisdom in the deed.

Cleo.

See, Cæsar! O, behold,

How pomp is follow'd! mine will now be yours,

And should we shift estates, yours would be mine.

The ingratitude of this Seleucus does

Even make me wild.—O slave, of no more trust

Than love that's hir'd!—What! goest thou back? thou shalt

Go back. I warrant thee; but I'll catch thine eyes.

Though they had wings. Slave, soul-less villain, dog. O rarely base!

Cæs. Good queen, let us entreat you.

Cleo. O Cæsar! what a wounding shame is this;

That thou, vouchsafing here to visit me,

Doing the honour of thy lordliness

To one so meek, that mine own servant should

Parcel the sum of my disgraces by

Addition of his envy! Say, good Cæsar,

That I some lady trifles have reserv'd,

Immortal toys, things of such dignity

As we greet modern¹ friends withal; and say,

Some nobler token I have kept apart

For Livia, and Octavia, to induce

Their mediation, must I be unfolded

With one that I have bred? Ye² gods! it smites me

Beneath the fall I have. Pr'ythee, go hence;

[To SELEUCUS.]

Or I shall show the cinders of my spirit³Through th' ashes of mischance.⁴—Wert thou a man,

Thou wouldst have mercy on me.

Cæs. Ferbear, Seleucus. [Exit SELEUCUS.]

Cleo. Be it known, that we, the greatest, are mis-
thought

For things that others do; and when we fall,

We answer others' merits in our name,

And⁵ therefore to be pitied.

Cæs.

Cleopatra,

Not what you have reserv'd, nor what acknowledg'd,

Put we it⁶ the roll of conquest: still be it yours,

Bestow it at your pleasure; and believe,

Cæsar's no merchant, to make prize with you

Of things that merchants sold. Therefore be cheer'd;

Make not your thoughts your prisons: no, dear queen;

For we intend so to dispose you, as Yourself shall give us counsel. Feed, and sleep:

Our care and pity is so much upon you,

That we remain your friend; and so, adieu.

Cleo. My master, and my lord!

Cæs.

Not so. Adieu.

[Flourish. Enter CÆSAR, and his Train.]

Cleo. He words me, girls, he words me, that I should not

Be noble to myself: but hark thee, Charmian.

[Whispers CHARMIAN.]

Iras. Finish, good lady; the bright day is done,

And we are for the dark

Cleo.

Hie thee again:

I have spoken already, and it is provided;

Go, put it to the haste.

Char.

Madam, I will.

Re-enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. Where is the queen?

Char.

Behold, sir. [Exit CHARMIAN.]

Cleo.

Dolabella?

Dol. Madam, as thereto sworn by your command,

Which my love makes religion to obey,

I tell you this: Cæsar through Syria
Intends his journey, and within three days
You with your children will be send before.
Make your best use of this: I have perform'd
Your pleasure, and my promise.

Cleo.

Dolabella,

I shall remain your debtor.

Dol.

I your servant.

Adieu, good queen; I must attend on Cæsar.

Cleo. Farewell, and thanks. [Exit Dol.] Now, Iras, what think'st thou?

Thou, an Egyptian puppet, shalt be shown

In Rome, as well as I: mechanic slaves

With greasy aprons, rules, and hammers, shall

Uplift us to the view: in their thick breaths,

Rank of gross diet, shall we be enclouded,

And forc'd to drink their vapour.

Iras.

The gods forbid!

Cleo. Nay, 't is most certain. Iras. Saucy lictors

Will catch at us, like strumpets: and scald rhymers

Ballad us out o' tune: the quick comedians

Extemporally will stage us, and present

Our Alexandrian revels: Antony

Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall see

Some squeaking Cleopatra boy my greatness

I' the posture of a whore.

Iras.

O, the good gods!

Cleo. Nay, that is certain.

Iras. I'll never see it; for, I am sure, my nails

Are stronger than mine eyes.

Cleo.

Why, that's the way

To foil⁶ their preparation, and to conquerTheir most assur'd⁷ intents.—Now, Charmian?—

Re-enter CHARMIAN.

Show me, my women, like a queen:—go fetch

My best attires:—I am again for Cydnus,

To meet Mark Antony.—Sirrah, Iras, so.—

Now, noble Charmian, we'll despatch indeed;

And, when thou hast done this chare, I'll give thee
leave

To play till dooms-day.—Bring our crown and all.

Wherefore's this noise? [Exit IRAS. A noise within.]

Enter one of the Guard.

Guard.

Here is a rural fellow,

That will not be denied your highness' presence:

He brings you figs.

Cleo. Let him come in.—How poor an instrument

[Exit GUARD.]

May do a noble deed! he brings me liberty.

My resolution's plac'd, and I have nothing

Of woman in me: now from head to foot

I am marble-constant; now the fleeting moon

No planet is of mine.

Re-enter Guard, with a Clown bringing in a Basket
Guard. This is the man.

Cleo. Avoid, and leave him.— [Exit GUARD.]

Hast thou the pretty worm of Niue there,

That kills and pains not?

Clown. Truly I have him; but I would not be the party that should desire you to touch him, for his biting is immortal: those that do die of it do seldom or never recover.

Cleo. Remember'st thou any that have died on't?

Clown. Very many men and women too. I heard of one of them no longer than yesterday: a very honest woman, but something given to lie, as a woman should not do but in the way of honesty how she died of the biting of it, what pain she left.—Truly, she makes a very good report o' the worm; but he thatCommon ¹ The: in f. e. ² spirits: in f. e. ³ my change. in f. e. ⁴ Are: in f. e. ⁵ fool: in f. e. ⁶ absurd: in f. e.

will be'ieve all that they say, shall never be saved by half that they do. But this is most fallible, the worm's an adder-worm.

Cleo. Get thee hence : farewell.

Clown. I wish you all joy of the worm.

Cleo. Farewell. [Clown sets down the Basket.]

Clown. You must think this, look you, that the worm will do his kind.

Cleo. Ay, ay ; farewell.

Clown. Look you, the worm is not to be trusted but in the keeping of wise people ; for, indeed, there is no goodness in the worm.

Cleo. Take thou no care : it shall be heeded.

Clown. Very good. Give it nothing, I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding.

Cleo. Will it eat me ?

Clown. You must not think I am so simple, but I know the devil himself will not eat a woman : I know, that a woman is a dish for the gods. if the devil dress her not ; but, truly, these same whoreson devils do the gods great harm in their women, for in every ten that they make, the devils mar nine.

Cleo. Well, get thee gone : farewell.

Clown. Yes, forsooth ; I wish you joy of the worm. [Exit.]

Re-enter IRAS, with a Robe, Crown, &c.

Cleo. Give me my robe, put on my crown ; I have Immortal longings in me. Now, no more The juice of Egypt's grape shall moist this lip.—Yare, yare, good Iras ; quick.—Methinks, I hear Antony call : I see him rouse himself

To praise my noble act ; I hear him mock The luck of Cæsar, which the gods give men To excuse their after wrath. Husband, I come : Now to that name my courage prove my title.

I am fire, and air ; my other elements I give to baser life.—So,—have you done ? Come then, and take the last warmth of my lips. Farewell, kind Charmian :—Irás, long farewell.

[Kisses them. IRAS falls, and dies.] Have I the aspick in my lips ? Dost fall ?

If thou and nature can so gently part, The stroke of death is as a lover's pinch, Which hurts, and is desir'd. Dost thou lie still ? If thus thou vanishest, thou tell'st the world It is not worth leave-taking.

Char. Dissolve, thick cloud, and rain, that I may say, The gods themselves do weep.

Cleo. This proves me base :

If she first meet the curled Antony, He'll make demand of her, and spend that kiss, Which is my heaven to have. Come, thou mortal wretch, [She applies the Asp to her Breast.]

With thy sharp teeth this knot intrinsicate Of life at once untie : poor venomous fool, Be angry, and despatch. O ! couldst thou speak, That I might hear thee call great Cæsar ass Unpoliced !

Char. O eastern star !

Cleo. Peace, peace ! Dost thou not see my baby at my breast, That sucks the nurse asleep ?

Char. O break ! O, break ! Cleo. As sweet as balm, as soft as air, as gentle.—O Antony !—Nay, I will take thee too.—

[Applying another Asp to her Arm. Why¹ should I stay— [Falls, and dies.]

Char. In this world² world ?—So, fare thee well.—Now boast thee dead, in thy possession lies

A lass unparallel'd.—Downy windows, close ; And golden Phæbus never be beheld Of eyes again so royal ! Your crown's avry³ ; I'll mend it, and then play—

Enter the Guard, rushing in.

1 Guard. Where is the queen ?

Char. Speak softly ; wake her not.

1 Guard. Cæsar hath sent—

Char. Too slow a messenger. [Applies the Asp. O ! come ; apace ; despatch : I partly feel thee.

1 Guard. Approach, ho ! All's not well : Cæsar's beguill'd.

2 Guard. There's Dolabella sent from Cæsar : call him.

1 Guard. What work is here ?—Charmian, is this well done ?

Char. It is well done, and fitting for a princess Descended of so many royal kings.

Ah, soldier ! [Dies]

Enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. How goes it here ?

2 Guard. All dead.

Dol. Cæsar, thy thoughts Touch their effects in this : thyself art coming To see perform'd the dreaded act, which thou So sought'st to hinder.

Within. A way there ! a way for Cæsar !

Enter CÆSAR, and all his Train.

Dol. O, sir ! you are too sure an augurer : That you did fear, is done.

Cæs. Bravest at the last : She levell'd at our purposes, and, being royal, Took her own way.—The manner of their deaths ? I do not see them bleed.

Dol. Who was last with them ?

1 Guard. A simple countryman that brought her figs This was his basket.

Cæs. Poison'd, then.

1 Guard. O Cæsar. This Charmian lived but now ; she stood, and spake. I found her trimming up the diadem On her dead mistress : tremblingly she stood, And on the sudden dropp'd.

Cæs. O noble weakness !— If they had swallow'd poison, 't would appear By external swelling ; but she looks like sleep, As she would catch another Antony In her strong toil of grace.

Dol. Here, on her breast, There is a vent of blood, and something blown The like is on her arm.

1 Guard. This is an aspick's trail ; and these fig-leaves

Have slime upon them, such as the aspick leaves Upon the caves of Nile.

Cæs. Most probable, That so she died ; for her physician tells me, She hath pursu'd conclusions infinite

Of easy ways to die.—Take up her bed, And bear her women from the monument. She shall be buried by her Antony ; No grave upon the earth shall clip in it

A pair so famous. High events as these Strike those that make them ; and their story is No less in pity, than his glory, which Brought them to be lamented. Our army shall, In solemn show, attend this funeral, And then to Rome.—Come, Dolabella, see High order in this great solemnity. [Exeunt]

SCENE, sometimes in Britain, sometimes in Italy.

ACT I.

SCENE I.—Britain. The Garden of CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter Two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. You do not meet a man, but frowns: our bloods

No more obey the heavens, than our courtiers
Still seem as does the king.

2 Gent. But what's the matter?

1 Gent. His daughter, and the heir of's kingdom, whom

He purpos'd to his wife's sole son, (a widow
That late he married) hath refer'd herself
Unto a poor but worthy gentleman. She's wedded;
Her husband banish'd; she imprison'd: all
Is outward sorrow, though, I think, the king
Be touch'd at very heart.

2 Gent. None but the king?

1 Gent. He that hath lost her, too: so is the queen,
That most desir'd the match; but not a courtier,
Although they wear their faces to the bent
Of the king's looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowl at.

2 Gent. And why so?

1 Gent. He that hath miss'd the princess is a thing too bad for bad report; and he that hath her,
(I mean, that married her,—alack, good man!—
And therefore banish'd) is a creature such
As, to seek through the regions of the earth
For one his like, there would be something failing
In him that should compare. I do not think,
So fair an outward, and such stuff within,
Endows a man but he.

2 Gent. You speak him far.

1 Gent. I do extend him, sir, within himself;
Crush him together, rather than unfold
His measure duly.

2 Gent. What's his name, and birth?

1 Gent. I cannot delve him to the root. His father
Was called Sicilius, who did join his honour
Against the Romans with Cassibelan,
But had his titles by Tenantius, whom
He serv'd with glory and admir'd success;
So gain'd the sur-addition, Leonatus:
And had, besides this gentleman in question,
Two other sons, who, in the wars o' the time,
Died with their swords in hand; for which their father
Then old and fond of's issue, took such sorrow,
That he quit being; and his gentle lady,
Big of this gentleman, our theme, deceas'd
As he was born. The king he takes the babe
To his protection; calls him Posthumus Leonatus;
Breeds him, and makes him of his bed-chamber.
Puts him to all the learnings that his time
Could make him the receiver of; which he took,
As we do air, fast as 't was minister'd; and
In his spring became a harvest; liv'd in court,
(Which rare it is to do) most prais'd, most lov'd,
A sample to the youngest, to the more mature,
A glass that feat'd² them; and to the graver,
A child that guided dotards: for his mistress,
For whom he now is banish'd, her own price
Proclaims how she esteem'd him and his virtue;
By her election may be truly read
What kind of man he is.

2 Gent. I honour him,
Even out of your report. But, pray you, tell me,
Is she sole child to the king?

1 Gent. His only child.

He had two sons, (if this be worth your hearing,
Mark it) the eldest of them at three years old,
I' the swathing clothes the other, from their nursery
Were stol'n; and to this hour no guess in knowledge
Which way they went

¹ of: in f. e. ² Made them fine.

2 Gent. How long is this ago?

1 Gent. Some twenty years.

2 Gent. Strange a king's children should be so convey'd,

So slackly guarded, and the search so slow,
That could not trace them!

1 Gent. Howsoe'er 't is strange,

Or that the negligence may well be laugh'd at,
Yet is it true, sir.

2 Gent. I do well believe you.

1 Gent. We must forbear. Here comes the gentleman, the queen, and princess. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same.

Enter the QUEEN, POSTHUMUS, and IMOGEN.

Queen. No, be assur'd, you shall not find me, daughter,

After the slander of most step-mothers,
Evil-ey'd unto you: you are my prisoner, but
Your jailor shall deliver you the keys
That lock up your restraint. For you, Posthumus,
So soon as I can win th' offended king,
I will be known your advocate: marry, yet
The fire of rage is in him; and 't were good,
You lean'd unto his sentence, with what patience
Your wisdom may inform you.

Post. Please your highness,
I will from hence to-day.

Queen. You know the peril.
I'll fetch a turn about the garden, pitying
The pangs of barr'd affections, though the king
Hath charg'd you should not speak together.

[Exit QUEEN.]

Imo. O dissembling courtesy! How fine this tyrant
Can tickle where she wounds!—My dearest husband,
I something fear my father's wrath; but nothing (Always reserv'd my holy duty) what
His rage can do on me. You must be gone;
And I shall here abide the hourly shot
Of angry eyes; not comforted to live,
But that there is this jewel in the world,
That I may see again.

Post. My queen! my mistress!
O, lady! weep no more, lest I give cause
To be suspected of more tenderness
Than doth become a man. I will remain
The loyal'st husband that did e'er plight troth:
My residence in Rome at one Philario's;
Who to my father was a friend, to me
Known but by letter. Thither write, my queen,
And with mine eyes I'll drink the words you send,
Though ink be made of gall.

Re-enter QUEEN.

Queen. Be brief, I pray you:
If the king come, I shall incur I know not How much of his displeasure. [Aside.] Yet I'll move
him

To walk this way. I never do him wrong,
But he does buy my injuries to be friends,
Pays dear for my offences. [Exit.]

Post. Should we be taking leave
As long a term as yet we have to live,
The loathness to depart would grow. Adieu!

Imo. Nay, stay a little:
Were you but riding forth to air yourself,
Such parting were too petty. Look here, love:
This diamond was my mother's; take it, heart;
But keep it till you woo another wife,
When Imogen is dead.

Hawk of a worthless breed. 'a beggar; wouldst, &c.: in f. e.

Post. How! how! another?—

You gentle gods, give me but this I have,
And sear up my embracements from a next
With bonds of death!—Remain, remain thou here
[Putting on the Ring.]

While sense can keep it on. And sweetest, fairest,
As I my poor self did exchange for you,
To your so infinite loss, so in our trifles
I still win of you: for my sake, wear this:
It is a manacle of love; I'll place it
Upon this fairest prisoner.

[Putting a Bracelet on her Arm.]

Imo. O, the gods!

When shall we see again?

Enter CYMBELINE and Lords.

Post. Alack, the king!

Cym. Thou basest thing, avoid! hence, from my sight!
If after this command thou fraught the court
With thy unworthiness, thou diest. Away!
Thou'rt poison to my blood.

Post. The gods protect you,
And bless the good remainders of the court!
I am gone. [Exit.]

Imo. There cannot be a pinch in death
More sharp than this is.

Cym. O disloyal thing!
That shouldst repair my youth, thou heapest
A year's age on me.

Imo. I beseech you, sir,
Harm not yourself with your vexation;
I am senseless of your wrath: a touch more rare
Subdues all pangs, all fears.

Cym. Past grace? obedience?
Imo. Past hope, and in despair; that way, past grace
Cym. That mightst have had the sole son of my queen
Imo. O bless'd, that I might not! I chose an eagle,
And did avoid a puttock.

Cym. Thou took'st a beggar would have made my throne

A seat for baseness.

Imo. No; I rather added

A lustre to it.

Cym. O thou vile one!

Imo. Sir,
It is your fault that I have lov'd Posthumus.
You bred him as my play-fellow; and he is
A man worth any woman; overbuys me
Almost the sum he pays.

Cym. What! art thou mad?
Imo. Almost, sir: heaven restore me!—Would I were

A neatherd's daughter, and my Leonatus
Our neighbour shepherd's son!

Re-enter QUEEN.

Cym. Thou foolish thing!—
They were again together: you have done! To the QUEEN
Not after our command. Away with her,
And pen her up.

Queen. Beseech your patience.—Peace!
Dear lady daughter, peace!—Sweet sovereign,
Leave us to ourselves; and make yourself some comfort
Out of your best advice.

Cym. Nay, let her languish
A drop of blood a day; and, being aged,
Die of this folly. [Exit.]

Enter PISANIO.

Queen. Fie!—You must give way:
Here is your servant.—How now, sir! What news?
Pis. My lord your son drew on my master.

Queen.

No harm, I trust, is done?

Pis.

There might have been,
But that my master rather play'd than fought,
And had no help of anger: they were parted
By gentlemen at hand.

Queen.

I am very glad on't.

Imo. Your son's my father's friend; he takes his part.—

To draw upon an exile!—O brave sir!—

I would they were in Afric both together,

Myself by with a needle, that I might prick

The goer back.—Why came you from your master?

Pis. On his command. He would not suffer me

To bring him to the haven: left these notes

Of what commands I should be subject to,

When't pleas'd you to employ me.

Queen.

This hath been

Your faithful servant: I dare lay mine honour,

He will remain so.

Pis.

I humbly thank your highness.

Queen. Pray, walk a while.

Imo.

About some half hour hence,

Pray you, speak with me. You shall, at least,

Go see my lord aboard: for this time, leave me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A Public Place.

Enter CLOTEN, and Two Lords.

1 Lord. Sir, I would advise you to shift a shirt: the violence of action hath made you reek as a sacrifice.
Where air comes out, air comes in; there's none abroad
so wholesome as that you vent.

Clo. If my shirt were bloody, then to shift it—Have
I hurt him?

2 Lord. [Aside.] No, faith; not so much as his patience.

1 Lord. Hurt him? his body's a passable carcase, if he be not hurt: it is a thoroughfare for steel, if it be not hurt.

2 Lord. [Aside.] His steel was in debt; it went o'
the backside the town.

Clo. The villain would not stand me.

2 Lord. [Aside.] No; but he fled forward still, toward your face.

1 Lord. Stand you! You have land enough of your own; but he added to your having, gave you some ground.

2 Lord. [Aside.] As many inches as you have oceans.
—Puppies!

Clo. I would they had not come between us.

2 Lord. [Aside.] So would I, till you had measured how long a fool you were upon the ground.

Clo. And that she should love this fellow, and refuse
me!

2 Lord. [Aside.] If it be a sin to make a true election, she is damned.

1 Lord. Sir, as I told you always, her beauty and her brain go not together: she's a good sign, but I have seen small reflection of her wit.

2 Lord. [Aside.] She shines not upon fools, lest the reflection should hurt her.

Clo. Come, I'll to my chamber. Would there had been some hurt done!

2 Lord. [Aside.] I wish not so; unless it had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt.

Clo. You'll go with us?

1 Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

Clo. Nay, come, let's go together.

2 Lord. Well, my lord.

Ha!

SCENE IV.—A Room in CYMBELINE's Palace.

Enter IMOGEN and PISANIO.

Imo. I would thou grew'st unto the shores o' the haven.
And question'dst every sail: if he should write,
And I not have it, 't were a paper lost
As offer'd mercy is. What was the last
That he spake to thee?

Pis.

It was, his queen, his queen.

Imo. Then wav'd his handkerchief?

Pis.

And kiss'd it, madam.

Imo. Senseless linen, happier therein than I!—

And that was all?

Pis.

No, madam; for so long

As he could make me with this eye or ear

Distinguish him from others, he did keep

The deck, with glove, or hat, or handkerchief,

Still waving, as the fits and stirs of his mind

Could best express how slow his soul sail'd on,

How swift his ship.

Imo.

Thou shouldst have made him

As little as a crow, or less, ere left

To after-eye him.

Pis.

Madam, so I did.

Imo. I would have broke mine eye-strings, crack'd them, but

To look upon him, till the diminution

Of space had pointed him shap as my needle;

Nay, follow'd him, till he had melted from

The smallness of a gnat to air; and then

Have turn'd mine eye, and wept.—But, good Pisanio,

When shall we hear from him?

Pis.

Be assur'd, madam,

With his next vantage.

Imo. I did not take my leave of him, but had

Most pretty things to say: ere I could tell him,

How I would think on him, at certain hours,

Such thoughts, and such: or I could make him swear

The shes of Italy should not betray

Mine interest, and his honour; or have charg'd him,

At the sixth hour of morn, at noon, at midnight,

T' encounter me with orisons, for then

I am in heaven for him: or ere I could Give him that parting kiss, which I had set

Betwixt two charming words, comes in my father,

And, like the tyrannous breathing of the north,

Shakes all our buds from growing.

Enter a Lady.

The queen, madam,

Desires your highness' company.

Imo. Those things I bid you do, get them despatch'd.—

I will attend the queen.

Pis.

Madam, I shall. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Rome. An Apartment in PHILARIO's House.

Enter PHILARIO, IACHIMO, a Frenchman, a Dutchman, and a Spaniard.

Iach. Believe it, sir, I have seen him in Britain:
he was then of a crescent note; expected to prove so worthy, as since he hath been allowed the name of;
but I could then have looked on him without the help of admiration, though the catalogue of his endowments had been table'd by his side, and I to peruse him by items.

Phi. You speak of him when he was less furnished, than now he is, with that which makes him both with out and within.

French. I have seen him in France: we had very many there could behold the sun with as firm eyes as he.

[Exeunt.]

Iach. This matter of marrying his king's daughter, (wherein he must be weighed rather by her value, than his own) words him, I doubt not, a great deal from the matter.

French. And, then, his banishment.—

Iach. Ay, and the approbations¹ of those that weep this lamentable divorce and her dolours,² are wou^t wonderfully to extend him; be it but to fortify her judgment, which else an easy battery might lay flat, for taking a beggar without more³ quality. But how comes it, he is to sojourn with you? How creeps acquaintance?

Phi. His father and I were soldiers together; to whom I have been often bound for no less than my life.—

Enter POSTHUMUS.

Here comes the Briton. Let him be so entertained amongst you, as suits with gentlemen of your knowing to a stranger of his quality.—I beseech you all, be better known to this gentleman, whom I commend to you, as a noble friend of mine: how worthy he is, I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in his own hearing.

French. Sir, we have known together in Orleans.

Post. Since when I have been debtor to you for courtesies, which I will be ever to pay, and yet pay still.

French. Sir, you o'er-rate my poor kindness. I was glad I did atone⁴ my countryman and you: it had been pity you should have been put together with so mortal a purpose, as then each bore, upon importance of so slight and trivial a nature.

Post. By your pardon, sir, I was then a young traveller; rather shunned to go even with what I heard, than in my every action to be guided by others' experiences: but, upon my mended judgment, (if I not⁵ offend to say it is mended) my quarrel was not altogether slight.

French. Faith, yes, to be put to the arbitrement of swords; and by such two, that would, by all likelihood, have confounded one the other, or have fallen both.

Iach. Can we, with manners, ask what was the difference?

French. Safely, I think. 'Twas a contention in public, which may, without contradiction, suffer the report. It was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of us fell in praise of our country mistresses; this gentleman at that time vouching, (and upon warrant of bloody affirmation) his to be more fair, virtuous, wise, chaste, constant, qualified, and less attainable, than any the rarest of our ladies in France.

Iach. That lady is not now living; or this gentleman's opinion, by this, worn out.

Post. She holds her virtue still, and I my mind.

Iach. You must not so far prefer her fore ours of Italy.

Post. Being so far provoked as I was in France, I would abate her nothing; though I profess myself her adorer, not her friend.

Iach. As fair, and as good, (a kind of hand-in-hand comparison) had been something too fair, and too good, for any lady in Britany. If she went before others I have seen, as that diamond of yours outlustres many I have beheld, I could not but believe⁶ she excelled many; but I have not seen the most precious diamond that is, nor you the lady.

Post. I praised her as I rated her; so do I my stone.

Iach. What do you esteem it at?

Post. More than the world enjoys.

Iach. Either your unparagoned mistress is dead, or she's outprized by a trifle.

Post. You are mistaken: the one may be sold, or given; or if there were wealth enough for the purchase, or merit for the gift: the other is not a thing for sale, and only the gift of the gods.

Iach. Which the gods have given you?

Post. Which, by their graces, I will keep.

Iach. You may wear her in title yours; but, you know, strange fowl light upon neighbouring ponds. Your ring may be stolen, too: so, of your brace of unprizeable estimations, the one is but frail, and the other casual; a cunning thief, or a that way accomplished courtier, would hazard the winning both of first and last.

Post. Your Italy contains none so accomplished a courtier to convince⁷ the honour of my mistress, if in the holding or loss of that you term her frail. I do nothing doubt, you have store of thieves; notwithstanding, I fear not my ring.

Phi. Let us leave here, gentlemen.

Post. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy signior, I thank him, makes no stranger of me; we are familiar at first.

Iach. With five times so much conversation, I should get ground of your fair mistress; make her go back, even to the yielding, had I admittance, and opportunity to friend.

Post. No, no.

Iach. I dare thereupon pawn the moiety of my estate to your ring, which, in my opinion, o'ervalues it something, but I make my wager rather against your confidence, than her reputation: and, to bar your offence herein too, I durst attempt it against any lady in the world.

Post. You are a great deal abused in too bold a persuasion; and I doubt not you'll sustain what you're worthy of by your attempt.

Iach. What's that?

Post. A repulse; though your attempt, as you call it, deserve more,—a punishment too.

Phil. Gentlemen, enough of this; it came in too suddenly: let it die as it was born, and, I pray you, be better acquainted.

Iach. Would I had put my estate, and my neighbour's, on the approbation⁸ of what I have spoke.

Post. What lady would you choose to assail?

Iach. Yours; whom in constancy, you think, stands so safe. I will lay you ten thousand ducats to your ring, that, commend me to the court where your lady is, with no more advantage than the opportunity of a second conference, and I will bring from thence that honour of hers, which you imagine so reserved.

Post. I will wage against your gold, gold to it: my ring I hold dear as my finger; 't is part of it.

Iach. You are afraid,⁹ and therein the wiser. If you buy ladies' flesh at a million a dram, you cannot preserve it from tainting. But I see, you have some religion in you, that you fear.

Post. This is but a custom in your tongue: you bear a graver purpose, I hope.

Iach. I am the master of my speeches; and would undo what's spoken, I swear.

Post. Will you?—I shall but lend my diamond till your return. Let there be covenants drawn between us. My mistress exceeds in goodness the hugeness of your unworthy thinking: I dare you to this match. Here's my ring.

Phil. I will have it no lay.

Iach. By the gods, it is one.—If I bring you no sufficient testimony, that I have enjoyed the dearest bodily part of your mistress, my ten thousand ducats are yours; so is your diamond too: if I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have trust in, she your jewel, this your jewel, and my gold are yours;—provided, I have your commendation, for my more free entertainment.

Post. I embrace these conditions; let us have articles betwixt us.—Only, thus far you shall answer: if you make good¹ your vauntage² upon her, and give me directly to understand you have prevail'd, I am no farther your enemy: she is not worth our debate: if she remain unseduced, (you not making it appear otherwise) for your ill opinion, and the assault you have made to her chastity, you shall answer me with your sword.

Iach. Your hand: a covenant. We will have these things set down by lawful counsel, and straight away for Britain, lest the bargain should catch cold, and starve. I will fetch my gold, and have our two wagers recorded.

Post. Agreed. [Exeunt POSTHUMUS and IACHIMO.]

French. Will this hold, think you?

Phi. Signior Iachimo will not from it. Pray, let us follow 'em. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—Britain. A Room in CYMBELINE's Palace.

Enter QUEEN, Ladies, and CORNELIUS.

Queen. Whiles yet the dew's on ground, gather those flowers:

Make haste. Who has the note of them?

1 Lady.

I, madam.

Queen. Despatch.—

[Exeunt Ladies.]

Now, master doctor, have you brought those drugs?

Cor. Pleaseth your highness, ay: here they are, madam: [Presenting a small Box.]

But I beseech your grace, without offence, (My conscience bids me ask) wherefore you have Commanded me these most poisonous compounds, Which are the movers of a languishing death; But though slow, deadly?

Queen. I wonder, doctor, Thou ask'st me such a question: have I not been Thy pupil long? Hast thou not learn'd me how To make perfumes? distil? preserve? yea, so, That our great king himself doth woo me oft For my confections? Having thus far proceeded, (Unless thou think'st me devilish) is't not meet That I did amplify my judgment in Other conclusions? I will try the forces Of these thy compounds on such creatures as We count not worth the hanging. (but none human) To try the vigour of them, and apply Allayments to their act: and by them gather Their several virtues, and effects.

Cor. Your highness Shall from this practice but make hard your heart: Besides, the seeing these effects will be Both noisome and infectious.

Queen. O! content thee.—

Enter PISANIO.

[Aside.] Here comes a flattering rascal; upon him Will I first work: he's for his master, And enemy to my son—How now, Pisanio!—

Doctor, your service for this time is ended:

Take your own way.

Cor. [Aside.] I do suspect you, madam; But you shall do no harm.

Queen.

Hark thee, a word.—

[She talks apart to PISANIO.]

Cor. I do not like her. She doth think, she has Strange lingering poisons: I do know her spirit, And will not trust one of her malice with A drug of such damn'd nature. Those she has Will stupefy and dull the sense awhile; Which first, perchance, she'll prove on cats, and dogs, Then afterward up higher; but there is No danger in what show of death it makes More than the locking up the spirits a time, To be more fresh, reviving. She is fool'd With a most false effect; and I the truer, So to be false with her.

Queen. No farther service, doctor, Until I send for thee.

Cor.

I humbly take my leave. [Exit.]

Queen. Weeps she still, say'st thou? Dost thou think, in time

She will not quench, and let instruction enter Where folly now possesses? Do thou work: When thou shalt bring me word she loves my son, I'll tell thee on the instant thou art, then, As great as is thy master: greater; for His fortunes all lie speechless, and his name Is at last gap: return he cannot, nor Continue where he is: to shift his being, Is to exchange one misery with another, And every day that comes comes to decay A day's work in him. What shalt thou expect, To be depend on a thing that leans? Who cannot be new-built; nor has no friends,

[The QUEEN drops the Box: PISANIO takes it up and presents it.]

So much as but to prop him.—Thou tak'st up Thou know'st not what; but take it for thy labour. It is a thing I made, which hath the king Five times redeem'd from death: I do not know What is more cordial:—nay, I pr'ythee, take it; It is an earnest of a farther good That I mean to thee. Tell thy mistress how The case stands with her: do't as from thyself. Think what a chance thou chancest on; but think Thou hast thy mistress still; to boot, my son, Who shall take notice of thee. I'll move the king To any shape of thy preferment, such As thou'lt desire; and then myself, I chiefly, That set thee on to this desert, am bound To load thy merit richly. Call my women: Think on my words. [Exit Pis.]—A sly and constant knave,

Not to be shak'd; the agent for his master, And the remembrancer of her, to hold The hand fast to her lord.—I have given him that, Which, if he take, shall quite unpeople her Of liegers for her suite; and which she after, Except she bend her humour, shall be assur'd

Re-enter PISANIO, and Ladies.

To taste of too.—So, so;—well done, well done. The violets, cowslips, and the primroses, Bear to my closet.—Fare thee well, Pisanio; Think on my words. [Exeunt QUEEN and Ladies]

Pis. And shall do; But when to my good lord I prove untrue, I'll choke myself: there's all I'll do for you. [Exit]

SCENE VII.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter IMOGEN.

Imo. A father cruel, and a step-dame false ;
A foolish suitor to a wedded lady,
That hath her husband banish'd :—O, that husband !
My supreme crown of grief, and those repeated
Vexations of it ! Had I been thief-stolen,
As my two brothers, happy ! but most miserable
Is the desire that's glorious : blessed be those,
How mean soe'er, that have their honest wills,
Which seasons comfort.—Who may this be ? Fie !

Enter PISANIO and IACHIMO.

Pis. Madam, a noble gentleman of Rome
Comes from my lord with letters.

Iach. Change you, madam ?
The worthy Leonatus is in safety,
And greets your highness dearly. [Gives a Letter.

Imo. Thanks, good sir :
You are kindly welcome.

Iach. All of her, that is out of door, most rich !
[Aside.

If she be furnish'd with a mind so rare,
She is alone the Arabian bird, and I
Have lost the wager. Boldness, be my friend :
Arm me, audacity, from head to foot.
Or, like the Parthian, I shall flying fight ;
Rather, directly fly.

Imo. [Reads.] "He is one of the noblest note, to whose kindnesses I am most infinitely tied. Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your trust—"
"LEONATUS."

So far I read aloud ;
But even the very middle of my heart
Is warm'd by the rest, and takes it thankfully.—
You are as welcome, worthy sir, as I
Have words to bid you ; and shall find it so
In all that I can do.

Iach. Thanks, fairest lady.—
What ! are men mad ? Hath nature given them eyes
To see this vaulted arch, and the rich cope¹
O'er² sea and land, which can distinguish 'twixt
The fiery orbs above, and the twin'd stones
Upon th' unnumber'd³ beach ; and can we not Partition make with spectacles so precious
'Twixt fair and foul ?

Imo. What makes your admiration ?
Iach. It cannot be i' the eye ; for apes and monkeys,
'Twixt two such shes, would chatter this way, and Contemn with mows the other : nor i' the judgment ;
For idiots, in this case of favour, would
Be wisely definite : nor i' the appetite ;
Sluttry, to such neat excellence oppos'd,
Should make desire vomit to emptiness,
Not so allur'd to feed.

Imo. What is the matter, trow ?

Iach. The cloyed will,
[That satiate yet unsatisfied desire,
That tub both fill'd and running] ravening first
The lamb, longs after for the garbage.

Imo. What, dear sir,
Thus raps you ? Are you well ?

Iach. Thanks, madam, well.—Beseech you, sir, desire
[To PISANIO.
My man's abode where I did leave him ; he
Is strange and peevish.

Pis. I was going, sir,
To give him welcome. [Exit PISANIO.

Imo. Continues well my lord ? His health, 'beseech
you ?

Iach. Well, madam.

Imo. Is he dispos'd to mirth ? I hope, he is.

Iach. Exceeding pleasant : none, a stranger there,
So merry and so gamesome : he is call'd
The Briton reveller.

Imo. When he was here,
He did incline to sadness ; and oft-times
Not knowing why.

Iach. I never saw him sad.
There is a Frenchman his companion, one,
An eminent monsieur, that, it seems, much loves
A Gallian girl at home ; he furnaces
The thick sighs from him, whiles the jolly Briton
(Your lord, I mean) laughs from 's free lungs, cries, "O
Can my sides hold, to think, that man,—who knows
By history, report, or his own proof,
What woman is, yea, what she cannot choose
But must be,—will his free hours languish
For assur'd bondage ?"

Imo. Will my lord say so ?

Iach. Ay, madam, with his eyes in flood with laughter
It is a recreation to be by,
And hear him mock the Frenchman ; but, heavens know,
Some men are much to blame.

Imo. N t he, I hope.

Iach. Not he ; but yet heaven's bounty towards him might

Be us'd more thankfully. In himself, 't is much :
In you,—which I account beyond all talents,—
Whilst I am bound to wonder, I am bound
To pity too.

Imo. What do you pity, sir ?

Iach. Two creatures, heartily.

Imo. Am I one, sir ?

You look on me : what wreck discern you in me,
Deserves your pity ?

Iach. Lamentable ! What !
To hide me from the radiant sun, and solace
I' the dungeon by a snuff ?

Imo. I pray you, sir,
Deliver with more openness your answers
To my demands. Why do you pity me ?

Iach. That others do,
I was about to say, enjoy your—But
It is an office of the gods to vengeance it,
Not mine to speak on 't.

Imo. You do seem to know
Something of me, or what concerns me : pray you.
(Since doubting things go ill, often hurts more
Than to be sure they do ; for certainties
Either are past remedies, or, timely knowing,
The remedy then born) discover to me
What both you spur and stop.

Iach. Had I this cheek
To bathe my lips upon ; this hand, whose touch.
Whose every touch, would force the feeler's soul
To the oath of loyalty ; this object, which Takes prisoner the wild motion of mine eye,
Fixing it only here ; should I (damn'd then)
Slaver with lips as common as the stairs
That mount the Capitol ; join gripes with hands Made hard with hourly falsehood (falsehood as
With labour), then bo-peeping⁴ in an eye,
Base and illustrious as the smoky light
That's fed with stinking tallow, it were fit.
That all the plagues of hell should at one time
Encounter such revolt.

crop : in f. e. ² Of : in f. e. ³ the number'd : in f. e. ⁴ by peep'ng : in f. e.

Imo. My lord, I fear,
Has forgot Britain
Iach. And himself. Not I,
Inclin'd to this intelligence, pronounce
The beggary of his change; but 't is your graces
That, from my mutest conscience, to my tongue
Charms this report out.

Imo. Let me hear no more.
Iach. O dearest soul! your cause doth strike my heart

With pity, that doth make me sick. A lady
So fair, and fasten'd to an empery
Would make the great'st king double, to be partner'd
With tomboys, hir'd with that self exhibition
Which your own coffers yield! with diseas'd ventures,
That pay¹ with all infirmities for gold
Which rottenness can lend nature! such boil'd stuff,
As well might poison poison! Be reveng'd,
Or she that bore you was no queen, and you
Receiv'd from your great stock.

Imo. Reveng'd!
How should I be reveng'd? If this be true,
(As I have such a heart, that both mine ears Must not in haste abuse) if it be true,
How should I be reveng'd?

Iach. Should he make me
Live, like Diana's priest, betwixt cold sheets,
Whiles he is vaulting variable ramps,
In your despite, upon your purse? Revenge it.
I dedicate myself to your sweet pleasure.
More noble than that runagate to your bed,
And will continue fast to your affection,
Still clos'd, as sure.

Imo. What ho. Pisanio!
Iach. Let me my service tender on your lips.
Imo. Away!—I do condemn² mine ears, that have
So long attended thee.—If thou wert honourable,
Thou wouldst have told this tale for virtue, not
For such an end thou seek'st, as base, as strange.
Thou wrong'st a gentleman, who is as far
From thy report, as thou from honour; and Solicit'st here a lady, that disdains
Thee and the devil alike.—What ho, Pisanio!—
The king my father shall be made acquainted
Of thy assault: if he shall think it fit,
A saucy stranger, in his court, to mart
As in a Romish stew, and to expound
His beastly mind to us, he hath a court
He little cares for, and a daughter whom
He not respects at all.—What ho, Pisanio!—

Iach. O happy Leonatus! I may say;
The credit, that thy lady hath of thee,
Deserves thy trust; and thy most perfect goodness
Her assur'd credit.—Blessed live you long!
A lady to the worthiest sir, that ever
Country call'd his: and you his mistress, only
For the most worthiest fit. Give me your pardon.
I have spoke this, to know if your alliance

Were deeply rooted; and shall make your lord,
That which he is, new o'er: and he is one
The truest manner'd; such a holy witch,
That he enchants societies unto him:
Half all men's hearts are his.

Imo. You make amends.
Iach. He sits 'mongst men, like a descended god
He hath a kind of honour sets him off,
More than a mortal seeming. Be not angry,
Most mighty princess, that I have adventur'd
To try your taking of a false report; which hath Honour'd with confirmation your great judgment
In the election of a sir so rare,
Which, you know, cannot err. The love I bear him
Made me to fan you thus; but the gods made you,
Unlike all others, chaffless. Pray, your pardon.

Imo. All's well, sir. Take my power i' the court, for yours.

Iach. My humble thanks. I had almost forgot
T^o entreat your grace but in a small request,
And yet of moment too, for it concerns
Your lord; myself, and other noble friends,
Are partners in the business.

Imo. Pray, what is 't?
Iach. Some dozen Romans of us, and your lord,
(The best feather of our wing) have mingled sums,
To buy a present for the emperor;
Which I, the factor for the rest, have done
In France: 't is plate of rare device, and jewels
Of rich and exquisite form. Their value's great,
And I am something curious, being strange,
To have them in safe stowage: may it please you
To take them in protection?

Imo. Willingly,
And pawn mine honour for their safety: since
My lord hath interest in them, I will keep them
In my bed-chamber.

Iach. They are in a trunk,
Attended by my men; I will make bold
To send them to you, only for this night,
I must aboard to-morrow.

Imo. O! no, no.
Iach. Yes, I beseech; or I shall short my word,
By lengthening my return. From Gallia
I cross'd the seas on purpose, and on promise
To see your grace.

Imo. I thank you for your pains,
But not away to-morrow.

Iach. O! I must, madam:
Therefore, I shall beseech you, if you please
To greet your lord with writing, do 't to-night.
I have outstay'd³ my time, which is material
To the tender of our present.

Imo. I will write.
Send your trunk to me: It shall safe be kept,
And truly yielded you. You're very welcome.

ACT II.

SCENE I.—Court before CYMBELINE'S Palace.
Enter CLOTEN, and Two Lords, as from the Bowling-alley.*

Clo. Was there ever man had such luck! when I kiss'd the jack upon an up-cast, to be hit away! I had a hundred pound on 't: and then a whoreson jackanapes must take me up for swearing; as if I borrowed mine oaths of him, and might not spend them at my pleasure.

1 Lord. What got he by that? You have broke his pate with the bowl.

play: in f. e. ² condemn: in f. e. ³ outstaid: in f. e. * The rest of this direction is not in f. e.

2 Lord. [Aside.] If his wit had been like him that stroke it, it would have run all out.

Clo. When a gentleman is disposed to swear, it is not for any standers-by to curtail his oaths, ha?

2 Lord. No, my lord; [Aside.] nor crop the ears of them.

Clo. Whoreson dog!—I give him satisfaction? Would he had been one of my rank!

2 Lord. [Aside.] To have smelt like a fool.

Clo. I am not vexed more at any thing in the earth.—A pox on't! I had rather not be so noble as I am: they dare not fight with me, because of the queen my mother. Every jack-slave hath his belly full of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that no body can match.

2 Lord. [Aside.] You are cock and capon too; and you crow, cock, with your comb on.

Clo. Sayest thou?

2 Lord. It is not fit your lordship should undertake every companion that you give offence to.

Clo. No, I know that; but it is fit I should commit offence to my inferiors.

2 Lord. Ay, it is fit for your lordship only.

Clo. Why, so I say.

1 Lord. Did you hear of a stranger, that's come to court to-night?

Clo. A stranger! and I not know on't?

2 Lord. [Aside.] He's a strange fellow himself, and knows it not.

1 Lord. There's an Italian come; and 't is thought, one of Leonatus' friends.

Clo. Leonatus! a banished rascal; and he's another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this stranger?

1 Lord. One of your lordship's pages.

Clo. Is it fit I went to look upon him? Is there no derogation in't?

1 Lord. You cannot derogate, my lord

Clo. Not easily, I think.

2 Lord. [Aside.] You are a fool granted; therefore, your issues being foolish do not derogate.

Clo. Come, I'll go see this Italian. What I have lost to-day at bowls, I'll win to-night of him. Come, go.

2 Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

[Exeunt CLOTEN and first Lord.]

That such a crafty devil as is his mother Should yield the world this ass! a woman, that Bears all down with her brain; and this her son Cannot take two from twenty for his heart, And leave eighteen. Alas, poor princess! Thou d vine Imogen, what thou endurest, Betwixt a father by thy step-dame govern'd; A mother hourly coining plots; a wooer, More hateful than the foul expulsion is Of thy dear husband, than that horrid act Of the divorce he'd make! The heavens hold firm The walls of thy dear honour; keep unshak'd That temple, thy fair mind; that thou may'st stand I' enjoy thy banish'd lord, and this great land! [Exit.]

SCENE II.—A Bed-Chamber; in one part of it, a great Trunk.

IMOGEN reading in her Bed; HELEN attending.

Imo. Who's there? my woman, Helen?

Lady. Please you, madam.

Imo. What hour is it?

Lady. Almost midnight, madam.

Imo. I have read three hours, then. Mine eyes are weak;

Fold down the leaf where I have left: to bed.

Take not away the taper, leave it burning; And if thou canst awake by four o' the clock. I prythee, call me. Sleep hath seiz'd me wholly.

[Exit HELEN]

To your protection I commend me, gods! From fairies, and the tempters of the night, Guard me, beseech ye!

[Sleeps]

[Enter IACHIMO from the Trunk.]

Iach. The crickets sing, and man's o'er-labour'd sens Repairs itself by rest: our Tarquin thus Did softly press the rushes, ere he waken'd The chastity he wounded. Cytherea, How bravely thou becom'st thy bed! fresh lily, And whiter than the sheets! That I might touch! But kiss; one kiss!—Rubies unparagon'd, [Kissing her] How dearly they do't.—'T is her breathing that Perfumes the chamber thus: the flame o' the taper Bows toward her, and would under-peep her lids, To see the enclosed lights, now canopied Under the windows; white and azure, lac'd With blue of heaven's own tinct.—But my design, To note the chamber: I will write all down:—

[Takes out his tables.]

Such, and such, pictures:—there the window;—such Th' adornment of her bed:—the arras, figures, Why, such, and such;—and the contents o' the story.— Ah! but some natural notes about her body, Above ten thousand meaner moveables Would testify, t' enrich mine inventory: O sleep, thou ape of death, lie dull upon her, And be her sense but as a monument, Thus in a chapel lying!—Come off, come off;—

[Taking off her Bracelet]

As slippery, as the Gordian knot was hard.— 'T is mine; and this will witness outwardly, As strongly as the conscience does within, To the madding of her lord.—On her left breast A mole cinque-spotted, like the crimson drops I' the bottom of a cowslip: here's a voucher, Stronger than ever law could make: this secret Will force him think I have pick'd the lock, and ta'en The treasure of her honour. No more.—To what end? Why should I write this down, that's riveted, Screw'd to my memory? She hath been reading late The tale of Tereus; here the leaf's turn'd down, Where Philomel gave up.—I have enough: To the trunk again, and shut the spring of it. Swift, swift, you dragons of the night, that dawning May dare the raven's eye: I lodge in fear: Though this a heavenly angel, hell is here.

[Clock strikes.]

One, two, three,—time, time! [Exit into the Trunk.]

SCENE III.—An Ante-Chamber adjoining IMOGEN' Apartment.

[Enter CLOTEN and Lords.]

1 Lord. Your lordship is the most patient man a loss, the most coldest that ever turned up ace.

Clo. It would make any man cold to lose.

1 Lord. But not every man patient, after the noble temper of your lordship. You are most hot, and furious, when you win.

Clo. Winning will put any man into courage. If I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have gold enough. It's almost morning, is't not?

1 Lord. Day, my lord.

Clo. I would this music would come. I am advised to give her music o' mornings; they say, it will penetrate.

1 The covering of floors. 2 Not in f. o. 3 bare in f. o.

Enter Musicians.

Come out; tune: if you can penetrate her with your fingering, so; we'll try with tongue too: if none will do, let her remain; but I'll never give o'er. First, a very excellent good conceited thing; after, a wonderful sweet air, with admirable rich words to it,—and then let her consider.

SONG.

Hark! hark! the lark at heaven's gate sings.

And Phœbus' gins arise,

His steeds to water at those springs

On chalic'd flowers that lies;

And winking Mary-buds begin

To ope their golden eyes;

With every thing that pretty is,

My lady sweet, arise;

Arise, arise!

So, get you gone. If this penetrate, I will consider your music the better: if it do not, it is a fault¹ in her ears, which horse-hairs, and calves' guts, nor the voice of an unpar'd eunuch to boot, can never amend.

[Exeunt Musicians.]

Enter CYMBELINE and QUEEN.

2 Lord. Here comes the king.

Clo. I am glad I was up so late, for that's the reason I was up so early: he cannot choose but take this service I have done, fatherly.—Good morrow to your majesty, and to my gracious mother.

Cym. Attend you here the door of our stern daughter? Will she not forth?

Clo. I have assailed her with music, but she vouchsafes no notice.

Cym. The exile of her minion is too new: She hath not yet forgot him: some more time Must wear the print of his remembrance out, And then she's yours.

Queen. You are most bound to the king; Who lets go by no vantages, that may Prefer you to his daughter. Frame yourself To orderly solicits, and be friended With aptness of the season: make denials Increase your services: so seem, as if You were inspir'd to do those duties which You tender to her; that you in all obey her, Save when command to your dismission tends, And therein you are senseless.

Clo. Senseless? not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. So like you, sir, ambassadors from Rome: The one is Caius Lucius.

Cym. A worthy fellow, Albeit he comes on angry purpose now; But that's no fault of his: we must receive him According to the honour of his sender; And towards himself, his goodness forespent on us, We must extend our notice.—Our dear son, When you have given good morning to your mistress, Attend the queen, and us; we shall have need To employ you towards this Roman.—Come, our queen.

[Exeunt Cym., Queen, Lords, and Mess.]

Clo. If she be up, I'll speak with her; if not, Let her lie still, and dream.—By your leave, ho!— I know her women are about her: what [Calls.² If I do line one of their hands? 'Tis gold Which buys admittance; oft it doth; and makes Diana's rangers, false themselves, yield up Their deer to the stand o' the stealer: and 'tis gold Which makes the true man kill'd, and saves the thief; Nay, sometime, hangs both thief and true man: what

Can it not do, and undo? I will make One of her women lawyer to me; for I yet not understand the case myself. By your leave.

[Knocks

Enter a Lady.

Lady. Who's there, that knocks?

Clo.

A gentleman.

Lady.

No more?

Clo. Yes, and a gentlewoman's son.

Lady.

That's more

Than some, whose tailors are as dear as yours, Can justly boast of. What's your lordship's pleasure?

Clo. Your lady's person: is she ready?

Lady.

Ay,

To keep her chamber.

Clo. There's gold for you: sell me your good report.

Lady. How! my good name? or to report of you What I shall think is good?—the princess—

Enter IMOGEN.

Clo. Good morrow, fairest: sister, your sweet hand.

Imo. Good morrow, sir. You lay out too much pains For purchasing but trouble: the thanks I give, Is telling you that I am poor of thanks, And scarce can spare them.

Clo.

Still, I swear, I love you.

Imo. If you but said so, 't were as deep with me:

If you swear still, your recompense is still That I regard it not.

Clo.

This is no answer.

Imo. But that you shall not say I yield, being silent, I would not speak. I pray you, spare me: faith, I shall unfold equal discourtesy

To your best kindness. One of your great knowing Should learn, being taught, forbearance.

Clo. To leave you in your madness? 't were my sin: I will not.

Imo. Fools are not mad folks.

Clo.

Do you call me fool?

Imo. As I am mad, I do:

If you'll be patient, I'll no more be mad; That cures us both. I am much sorry, sir, You put me to forget a lady's manners, By being so verbal: and learn now, for all, That I, which know my heart, do here pronounce, By the very truth of it, I care not for you; And am so near the lack of charity, (To accuse myself) I hate you; which I had rather You felt than make 't my boast.

Clo.

You sin against

Obedience, which you owe your father. For The contract you pretend with that base wretch, (One, bred of alms, and foster'd with cold dishes, With scraps o' the court) it is no contract, none: And though it be allow'd in meaner parties, (Yet who than he more mean?) to knit their souls (On whom there is no more dependency But brats and beggary) in self-figur'd knot, Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement by The consequence o' the crown, and must not foil! The precious note of it with a base slave, A hiding* for a livery, a squire's cloth, A pantler, not so eminent.

Imo.

Profane fellow!

Wert thou the son of Jupiter, and no more But what thou art besides, thou wert too base To be his groom: thou wert dignified enough, Even to the point of envy, if 't were made Comparative for your virtues, to be styl'd The under hangman of his kingdom, and hated

* A low wretch.

For being preferr'd so well.

Clo. The south-fog rot him!

Imo. He never can meet more mischance, than come To be but nam'd of thee. His meanest garment, That ever hath but clipp'd his body, is dearer In my respect than all the hairs above thee, Were they all made such men.—How now, Pisanio!

Enter PISANIO.

Clo. His garment? Now, the devil—

Imo. To Dorothy my woman lie thee presently—

Clo. His garment?

Imo. I am sprited with a fool; Frighted, and anger'd worse.—Go, bid my woman Search for a jewel, that too casually Hath left mine arm: it was thy master's; 'shrew me, If I would lose it for a revenue Of any king's in Europe. I do think, I saw 't this morning: confident I am, Last night 't was on mine arm; I kiss'd it. I hope, it be not gone to tell my lord That I kiss aught but he.

Pis. 'T will not be lost.

Imo. I hope so: go, and search. [Exit Pis.]

Clo. You have abus'd me.—

His meanest garment?

Imo. Ay; I said so, sir.

If you will make 't an action, call witness to 't.

Clo. I will inform your father.

Imo. Your mother too:

She's my good lady; and will conceive, I hope,

But the worst of me. So I leave you, sir,

To the worst of discontent. [Exit.]

Clo. I'll be reveng'd.—

His meanest garment?—Well. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Rome. An Apartment in PHILARIO'S House.

Enter POSTHUMUS and PHILARIO.

Post. Fear it not, sir: I would, I were so sure To win the king, as I am bold, her honour Will remain hers.

Phi. What means do you make to him?

Post. Not any; but abide the change of time; Quake in the present winter's state, and wish That warmer days would come. In these fear'd hopes, I barely gratify your love; they failing, I must die much your debtor.

Phi. Your very goodness, and your company, O'erplays all I can do. By this, your king Hath heard of great Augustus: Caius Lucius Will do 's commission thoroughly; and, I think, He'll grant the tribute, send the arrearages, Or look upon our Romans, whose remembrance Is yet fresh in their grief.

Post. I do believe,

(Statist though I am none, nor like to be) That this will prove a war; and you shall hear The legion, now in Gallia, sooner landed In our not-fearing Britain, than have tidings Of any penny tribute paid. Our countrymen Are men more order'd, than when Julius Cæsar Smil'd at their lack of skill, but found their courage Worthy his frowning at: their discipline (Now mingled with their courages) will make known To their approvers, they are people, such That mend upon the world.

Enter IACHIMO.

Phi. See! Iachimo?

Post. The swiftest harts have posted you by land,

And winds of all the corners kiss'd your sails, To make your vessel nimble.

Phi. Welcome, sir.

Post. I hope, the briefness of your answer made The speediness of your return.

Iach. Your lady

Is one of the fairest that I have look'd upon.

Post. And, therewithal, the best; or let her beauty Look through a casement to allure false hearts, And be false with them.

Iach. Here are letters for you

Post. Their tenor good, I trust.

Iach. 'T is very like

Phi. Was Caius Lucius in the Britain court,

When you were there?

Iach. He was expected then,

But not approach'd.

Post. All is well yet.— Sparkles this stone as it was wont? or is 't not Too dull for your good wearing?

Iach. If I had lost,³

I should have lost the worth of it in gold.

I'll make a journey twice as far, t' enjoy A second night of such sweet shortness, which Was mine in Britain; for the ring is won.

Post. The stone 's too hard to come by.

Iach. Not a whit

Your lady being so easy.

Post. Make not, sir, Your loss your sport: I hope, you know that we Must not continue friends.

Iach. Good sir, we must,

If you keep covenant. Had I not brought The knowledge of your mistress home. I grant We were to question farther; but I now Profess myself the winner of her honour, Together with your ring; and not the wronger Of her, or you, having proceeded but By both your wills.

Post. If you can make 't apparent

That you have tasted her in bed, my hand

And ring are yours: if not, the foul opinion

You had of her pure honour, gains, or losses,

Your sword, or mine; or masterless leaves both

To who shall find them.

Iach. Sir, my circumstances,

Being so near the truth, as I will make them,

Must first induce you to believe: whose strength

I will confirm with oath; which, I doubt not,

You'll give me leave to spare, when you shall find You need it not.

Post. Proceed.

Iach. First, her bedchamber,

(Where, I confess, I slept not, but, profess,

Had that was well worth watching) it was hang'd

With tapestry of silk and silver; the story,

Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman,

And Cydnus swell'd above the banks, or for

The press of boats, or pride: a piece of work

So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive

In workmanship, and value; which, I wonder'd,

Could be so rarely and exactly wrought,

Since the true life on 't 'twas.²

Post. This is most⁴ true.

And this you might have heard of here, by me,

Or by some other.

Iach. More particulars

Must justify my knowledge.

Post. So they must,

¹ winged: in first folio; second folio, as in text. ² If I have lost it: in f. o. ³ was: in f. o. ⁴ Not in f. o.

Or do your honour injury.

Iach. The chimney
Is south the chamber; and the chimney-piece,
Chaste Dian, bathing: never saw I figures
So likely to report themselves: the cutter
Was as another nature, dumb; outwent her,
Motion and breath left out.

Post. This is a thing,
Which you might from relation likewise reap,
Being, as it is, much spoke of.

Iach. The roof o' the chamber
With golden cherubins is fretted: her andirons
(I had forgot them) were two winged Cupids
Of silver, each on one foot standing, nicely
Depending on their brands.

Post. This is her honour.—
Let it be granted, you have seen all this, (and praise
Be given to your remembrance) the description
Of what is in her chamber nothing saves
The wager you have laid.

Iach. Then, if you can,
Be pale: I beg but leave to air this jewel; see!—
[Producing the Bracelet.]

And now 't is up again: it must be married
To that your diamond; I'll keep them.

Post. Jove!—
Once more let me behold it. Is it that
Which I left with her?

Iach. Sir, (I thank her) that:
She stripp'd it from her arm: I see her yet;
Her pretty action did outsell her gift,
And yet enrich'd it too. She gave it me,
And said, she priz'd it once.

Post. May be, she pluck'd it off,
To send it me.

Iach. She writes so to you, doth she?

Post. O! no, no, no; 't is true. Here, take this too;
[Giving the Ring.]

It is a basilisk unto mine eye.

Kills me to look on't.—Let there be no honour,
Where there is beauty; truth, where semblance; love,
Where there's another man: the vows of women
Of no more bondage be, to where they are made.
Than they are to their virtues, which is nothing.—
O, above measure false!

Phi. Have patience, sir,
And take your ring again: 't is not yet won:
It may be probable she lost it; or,
Who knows, if one of her women, being corrupted,
Hath stolen it from her?

Post. Very true;
And so, I hope, he came by 't.—Back my ring.—
Tender to me some corporal sign about her,
More evident than this, for this was stolen.

Iach. By Jupiter, I had it from her arm.

Post. Hark you, he swears; by Jupiter he swears.
'T is true;—nay, keep the ring—'t is true. I am sure,
She would not lose it: her attendants are
All sworn, and honourable—they induc'd to steal it!
And by a stranger!—No, he hath enjoy'd her:
The cognizance of her incontinency
Is this:—she hath bought the name of where thus dearly.—

There, take thy hire: and all the fiends of hell
Divide themselves between you!

Phi. Sir, be patient.
This is not strong enough to be believ'd
Of one persuaded well of.

Post. Never talk on 't;
She hath been colted by him.

Iach. If you seek
For farther satisfying, under her breast
(Worthy the* pressing) lies a mole, right proud
Of that most delicate lodging: by my life,
I kiss'd it, and it gave me present hunger
To feed again, though full. You do remember
This stain upon her?

Post. Ay, and it doth confirm
Another stain, as big as hell can hold,
Were there no more but it.

Iach. Will you hear more?
Post. Spare your arithmetic: never count the turns
Once, and a million!

Iach. I'll be sworn,——
Post. No swearing
If you will swear you have not done 't, you lie;
And I will kill thee, if thou dost deny
Thou'st made me cuckold.

Iach. I will deny nothing.
Post. O, that I had her here, to tear her limb-in-eal!
I will go there, and do 't; i' the court; before
Her father.—I'll do something. [Exit.]

Phi. Quite besides
The government of patience!—You have won:
Let's follow him, and pervert the present wrath
He hath against himself.

Iach. With all my heart. [Exeunt]

SCENE V.—The Same. Another Room in the Same

Enter POSTHUMUS.

Post. Is there no way for men to be, but women
Must be half-workers? We are all bastards;
And that most venerable man, which I Did call my father, was I know not where
When I was stamp'd; some coiner with his tools
Made me a counterfeit: yet my mother seem'd
The Dian of that time; so doth my wife
The nonpareil of this.—O vengeance, vengeance!
Me of my lawful pleasure she restrain'd,
And pray'd me oft forbearance; did it with
A pudency so rosy, the sweet view on't
Might well have warm'd old Saturn; that I thought her
As chaste as unsunn'd snow;—O, all the devils!
This yellow lachimo, in an hour,—was 't not?—
Or less,—at first; perchance he spoke not, but,
Like a full-acorn'd boar, a foaming² one,
Cry'd "oh!" and mounted; found no opposition
But what he look'd for should oppose, and she Should from encounter guard. Could I find out
The woman's part in me! For there's no motion
That tends to vice in man, but I affirm
It is the woman's part: be it lying, note it,
The woman's; flattering, hers; deceiving, hers;
Lust and rank thoughts, hers, hers; revenges, hers;
Ambitions, covetings, change of prides, disdain,
Nice longings, slanders, mutability,
All faults that may be nam'd; nay, that hell knows,
Why, hers, in part, or all: but, rather, all;
For even to vice

They are not constant, but are changing still
One vice, but of a minute odd, for one
Not half so old as that. I'll write against them,
Detest them, curse them.—Yet 't is greater skill,
In a true hate, to pray they have their will:
The very devils cannot plague them better. [Exit.]

ACT III.

SCENE I.—Britain. A Room of State in CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter CYMBELINE, QUEEN, CLOTEN, and Lords, at one Door; at another, CAIUS LUCIUS, and Attendants.

Cym. Now say, what would Augustus Cæsar with us?

Luc. When Julius Cæsar (whose remembrance yet Lives in men's eyes, and will to ears, and tongues, Be theme, and hearing ever) was in this Britain, And conquer'd it, Cassibelan, thine uncle, (Famous in Cæsar's praises, no whit less Than in his feats deserving it) for him And his succession, granted Rome a tribute, Yearly three thousand pounds; which by thee lately Is left untender'd.

Queen. And, to kill the marvel, Shall be so ever.

Clo. There be many Cæsars, Ere such another Julius. Britain is A world by itself; and we will nothing pay, For wearing our own noses.

Queen. That opportunity, Which then they had to take from us, to resume We have again.—Remember, sir, my liege, The kings your ancestors, together with The natural bravery of your isle; which stands As Neptune's park, ribbed and paled in With rocks¹ unscalable, and roaring waters: With sands, that will not bear your enemies' boats, But such them up to the top-mast. A kind of conquest Cæsar made here; but made not here his brag Of "came," and "saw," and "overcame:" with shame (The first that ever touch'd him) he was carried From off our coast, twice beaten; and his shipping, (Poor ignorant baubles!) on our terrible seas, Like egg-shells mov'd upon their surges, crack'd As easily 'gainst our rocks. For joy whereof The fam'd Cassibelan, who was once at point (O, giglot fortune!) to master Cæsar's sword, Made Lud's town with rejoicing fires bright, And Britons strut with courage.

Clo. Come, there's no more tribute to be paid. Our kingdom is stronger than it was at that time; and, as I said, there is no more such Cæsars: other of them may have crooked noses; but, to owe such straight arms, none.

Cym. Son, let your mother end.

Clo. We have yet many among us can gripe as hard as Cassibelan: I do not say, I am one; but I have a hand.—Why tribute? why should we pay tribute? If Cæsar can hide the sun from us with a blanket, or put the moon in his pocket, we will pay him tribute for light; else, sir, no more tribute, pray you now.

Cym. You must know, Till the injurious Romans did extort This tribute from us, we were free: Cæsar's ambition, (Which swell'd so much, that it did almost stretch The sides o' the world) against all colour, here Did put the yoke upon us; which to shake off, Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon Ourselves to be.

Clo. We do.²

Cym. Say, then, to Cæsar,

Our ancestor was that Mulmutius, which Ordain'd our laws; whose use the sword of Cæsar Hath too much mangled; whose repair, and franchise Shall, by the power we hold, be our good deed, Though Rome be therefore angry. Mulmutius made our laws,

Who was the first of Britain which did put His brows within a golden crown, and call'd Himself a king.

Luc. I am sorry, Cymbeline, That I am to pronounce Augustus Cæsar (Cæsar, that hath more kings his servants, than Thyself domestic officers) thine enemy. Receive it from me, then.—War, and confusion, In Cæsar's name pronounce I 'gainst thee: look For fury not to be resisted.—Thus defied, I thank thee for myself.

Cym. Thou art welcome, Caius. Thy Cæsar knighted me; my youth I spent Much under him; of him I gather'd honour; Which he, to seek of me again, perforce, Behoves me keep at utterance.³ I am perfect, That the Pannonians and Dalmatians, for Their liberties, are now in arms; a precedent Which not to read would show the Britons cold. So Cæsar shall not find them.

Luc. Let proof speak.

Clo. His majesty bids you welcome. Make pasture with us a day or two, or longer: if you seek us afterwards in other terms, you shall find us in our salt-water girdle: if you beat us out of it, it is yours. If you fall in the adventure, our crowns shall fare the better for you; and there's an end.

Luc. So, sir.

Cym. I know your master's pleasure, and he mine: All the remain is, welcome [Exeunt]

SCENE II.—Another Room in the Same.

Enter PISANIO.

Pis. How! of adultery? Wherefore write you not What monsters here accuse?—Leonatus!

O, master! what a strange infection Is fallen into thy ear! What false Italian (As poisonous tongued, as handed) hath prevail'd On thy too ready hearing?—Disloyal? No: She's punish'd for her truth; and undergoes, More goddess-like than wife-like, such assaults As would take in some virtue.—O, my master! Thy mind to her is now as low, as were Thy fortunes.—How! that I should murder her? Upon the love, and truth, and vows, which I Have made to thy command?—I, her?—her blood? If it be so to do good service, never Let me be counted serviceable. How look I, That I should seem to lack humanity, So much as this fact comes to? "Do't. The letter [Reading]

That I have sent her, by her own command Shall give thee opportunity."⁴—O, damn'd paper! Black as the ink that's on thee. Senseless bauble, Art thou a feodary⁵ for this act, and look'st So virgin-like without? Lo! here she comes.

Enter IMOGEN.

I am ignorant in what I am commanded.

¹ locks in folio. Hammer made the change. ² f. e. make these two words part of CYMBELINE'S speech. ³ Fight to extremity ⁴ Con ⁵ accomplish

Imo. How now, Pisanio!

Pis. Madam, here is a letter from my lord.

Imo. Who? thy lord? that is my lord: Leonatus.

O! learn'd indeed were that astronomer,
That knew the stars, as I his characters;
He'd lay the future open.—You good gods,
Let what is here contain'd relish of love,
Of my lord's health, of his content,—yet not,
That we two are asunder,—let that grieve him:
Some griefs are medicinable; that is one of them,
For it doth physic love;—of his content,
All but in that!—Good wax, thy leave.—Bless'd be,
You bees, that make these locks of counsel! Lovers,
And men in dangerous bonds, pray not alike:
Though forfeiters you cast in prison, yet
You clasp young Cupid's tables.—Good news, gods!

[Reads.]

"Justice, and your father's wrath, should he take me in his dominion, could not be so cruel to me, as you, O the dearest of creatures, would even renew me with your eyes. Take notice, that I am in Cambria, at Milford-Haven: what your own love will out of this advise you follow. So, he wishes you all happiness, that remains loyal to his vow; and your, increasing in love,

"LEONATUS POSTHUMUS."

O, for a horse with wings!—Hear'st thou, Pisanio?
He is at Milford-Haven: read, and tell me
How far 't is thither. If one of mean affairs
May plod it in a week, why may not I
Glide thither in a day?—Then, true Pisanio,
(Who long'st, like me, to see thy lord; who long'st,—
O, let me 'bate!—but not like me;—yet long'st,—
But in a fainter kind:—O! not like me,
For mine's beyond beyond) say, and speak thick,¹ (Love's counsellor should fill the bores of hearing,
To the smothering of the sense) how far it is
To this same blessed Milford: and, by the way,
Tell me how Wales was made so happy, as
I² inherit such a haven: but, first of all.
How we may steal from hence; and, for the gap
That we shall make in time, from our hence-going.
And our return, to excuse:—but first, how get hence.
Why should excuse be born, or e'er begot?
We'll talk of that hereafter. Prythee, speak,
How many score of miles may we well ride
'Twixt hour and hour?

Pis. One score 'twixt sun and sun,
Madam, 's enough for you, and too much, too.

Imo. Why, one that rode to 's execution, man,
Could never go so slow: I have heard of riding wagers,
Where horses have been nimbler than the sands
That run i' the clocks by half.³—But this is foolery.—
Go, bid my woman feign a sickness; say
She'll home to her father: and provide me, presently,
A riding suit, no costlier than would fit
A franklin's housewife.

Pis. Madam, you're best consider.

Imo. I see before me, man: nor here, nor here,
Nor what ensues, but have a fog in them,
That I cannot look through. Away, I prythee:
Do as I bid thee. There's no more to say;
Accessible is none but Milford way.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Wales. A mountainous Country, with a Cave.

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. A goodly day not to keep house, with such

Whose roof's as low as ours. Stoop,⁴ boys: this gate
Instructs you how t' adore the heavens, and bows you
To a morning's holy office: the gates of monarchs
Are arch'd so high, that giants may jet⁵ through
And keep their impious turbands on, without
Good-morrow to the sun.—Hail, thou fair heaven!
We house i' the rock, yet use thee not so hardly
As prouder livers do.

Gui.

Hail, heaven!

Arv.

Hail, heaven!

Bel. Now, for our mountain sport. Up to yond' hill:

Your legs are young; I'll tread these flats. Consider,
When you above perceive me like a crow,
That it is place which lessens and sets off;
And you may then revolve what tales I have told you,
Of courts, of princes, of the tricks in war:
That service is not service, so being done,
But being so allow'd: to apprehend thus,
Draws us a profit from all things we see;
And often, to our comfort, shall we find
The sharded beetle in a safer hold
Than is the full-wing'd eagle. O! this life
Is nobler, than attending for a check;
Richer, than doing nothing for a bob,⁶
Prouder, than rustling in unpaid-for silk:
Such gain the cap of him, that makes him fine,
Yet keeps his book uncross'd.⁷ No life to ours.

Gui. Out of your proof you speak: we, poor un-fledg'd,

Have never wing'd from view o' the nest; nor know
not

What air's from home. Haply this life is best,
If quiet life be best; sweeter to you,
That have a sharper known, well corresponding
With your stiff age; but unto us it is
A cell of ignorance, travelling abed,
A prison for⁸ a debtor, that not dares
To stride a limit.

Arv.

What should we speak of,
When we are old as you? when we shall hear
The rain and wind beat dark December, how
In this our pinching cave shall we discourse
The freezing hours away?—We have seen nothing.
We are beastly: subtle as the fox for prey;
Like warlike as the wolf for what we eat:
Our valour is to chase what flies; our cage
We make a quire, as doth the prison'd bird,
And sing our bondage freely.

Bel.

How you speak!

Did you but know the city's usuries,
And felt them knowingly: the art o' the court,
As hard to leave, as keep; whose top to climb
Is certain falling, or so slippery, that
The fear's as bad as falling: the toil of the war,
A pain that only seems to seek out danger
I' the name of fame, and honour; which dies i' th search,

And hath as oft a slanderous epitaph,
As record of fair act; nay, many times,
Doth ill deserve by doing well; what's worse,
Must court'sy at the censure.—O, boys! this story
The world may read in me: my body's mark'd
With Roman swords, and my report was once
First with the best of note. Cymbeline lov'd me:
And when a soldier was the theme, my name
Was not far off: then, was I as a tree,
Whose boughs did bend with fruit; but, in one night,

¹ Kapally ² the clock's behalf: in f. e. ³ Sleep: in folio. Hammer made the change. ⁴ Strut. ⁵ bribe: in f. e. Dyce reads: bribe as expression of contempt. ⁶ His accounts unpaid. ⁷ or: in folio. Pope made the change.

A storm, or robbery, call it what you will,
Shook down my mellow hangings, nay, my leaves,
And left me bare to weather.

Gui. Uncertain favour!

Bel. My fault being nothing (as I have told you oft)
But that two villains, whose false oaths prevail'd
Before my perfect honour, swore to Cymbeline,
I was confederate with the Romans: so,
Follow'd my banishment; and this twenty years
This rock, and these demesnes, have been my world;
Where I have liv'd at honest freedom, paid
More pious debts to heaven, than in all
The fore-end of my time.—But, up to the mountains!
This is not hunter's language.—He that strikes
The venison first shall be the lord of the feast;
To him the other two shall minister,
And we will fear no poison, which attends
In place of greater state. I'll meet you in the valleys.

[Exeunt Gui. and Arv.]

How hard it is, to hide the sparks of nature!

These boys know little, they are sons to the king;
Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive.

They think, they are mine; and, though train'd up thus meanly

I¹ the cave wherein they bow,² their thoughts do hit

The roofs of palaces; and nature prompts them,
In simple and low things, to prince it, much

Beyond the trick of others. This Polydore,—

The heir of Cymbeline and Britain, whom

The king his father call'd Guiderius,—Jove!

When on my three-foot stool I sit, and tell

The warlike feats I have done, his spirits fly out

Into my story: say,—“Thus mine enemy fell;

And thus I set my foot on 's neck;” even then

The princely blood flows in his cheek, he sweats,

Strains his young nerves, and puts himself in posture

That acts my words. The younger brother, Cadwal,

(Once Arrivragus) in as like a vigour,³

Strikes life into my speech, and shows much more

His own conceiving. Hark! the game is rous'd.—

[Horns wind.]

O Cymbeline! heaven, and my conscience, knows,

Thou didst unjustly banish me; whereon

At three, and two years-old, I stole these babes,

Thinking to bar thee of succession, as

Thou reit'st me of my lands. Euriphile,

Thou wast their nurse; they took thee for their mother,

And every day do honour to her grave:

Myself, Belarius, that am Morgan call'd,

They take for natural father. [Horn.—The game is up. [Exit.]

SCENE IV.—Near Milford-Haven.

Enter PISANIO and IMOGEN.

Imo. Thou told'st me, when we came from horse,
the place

Was near at hand.—Ne'er long'd my mother so

To see me first, as I have now. Pisanio! Man!

Where is Posthumus? What is in thy mind

That makes thee stare thus? Wherefore breaks that sigh

From th' inward of thee? One, but painted thus,

Would be interpreted a thing perplex'd

Beyond self-explication: put thyself

Into a havour of less fear, ere wildness

Vanquish my staid senses. What's the matter?

Why tender'st thou that paper to me, with

[Pis. offers a Letter.]

A look untender? If it be summer news,
Smile to 't before; if wintery, thou need'st
But keep that countenance still.—My husband's hand!
That drug-damn'd Italy hath out-crafted him,
And he's at some hard point.—Speak, man: thy
tongue

May take off some extremity, which to read
Would be even mortal to me.

Pis. Please you, read; [Giving it.]

And you shall find me, wretched man, a thing

The most disdain'd of fortune.

Imo. [Reads.] “Thy mistress, Pisanio, hath played the strumpet in my bed; the testimonies whereof 'ie bleeding in me. I speak not out of weak surmises, but from proof as strong as my grief, and as certain as I expect my revenge. That part, thou, Pisanio, must act for me, if thy faith be not tainted with the breach of hers. Let thine own hands take away her life;
I shall give thee opportunity at Milford-Haven; she hath my letter for the purpose: where, if thou fear to strike, and to make me certain it is done, thou art the pander to her dishonour, and equally to me disloyal.”

Pis. What shall I need to draw my sword? the paper
Hath cut her throat already.—No; 't is slander,

Whose edge is sharper than the sword; whose tongue

Outvenoms all the worms of Nile; whose breath

Rides on the posting winds, and doth belie

All corners of the world: kings, queens, and states,

Maid, matrons, nay, the secrets of the grave

This viperous slander enters.—What cheer, madam?

Imo. False to his bed! What is it to be false?

To lie in watch there, and to think on him?

To weep 'twixt clock and clock? if sleep charge nature,

To break it with a fearful dream of him,

And cry myself awake? that's false to his bed,

Is it?

Pis. Alas, good lady!

Imo. I false? Thy conscience witness.—Iachimo,

Thou didst accuse him of incontinency;

Thou then look'd'st like a villain; now, methinks,

Thy favour's good enough. Some jay of Italy,

Who smothers her with painting,⁴ hath betray'd him:

Poor I am stale, a garment out of fashion;

And, for I am richer than to hang by the walls,

I must be ripp'd:—to pieces with me!—O!

Men's vows are women's traitors. All good seeming,

By thy revolt, O husband! shall be thought

Put on for villainy; not born where 't grows,

But worn a bait for ladies.

Pis. Good madam, hear me.

Imo. True honest men being heard, like false Æneas

Were in his time thought false; and Sinon's weeping

Did scandal many a holy tear; took pity

From most true wretchedness: so thou, Posthumus,

Wilt lay the heaven on all proper men:

Goodly, and gallant, shall be false, and perjur'd,

From thy great fall.—Come, fellow, be thou honest:

Do thou thy master's bidding. When thou seest him,

A little witness my obedience: look!

I draw the sword myself: take it; and hit

The innocent mansion of my love, my heart.

Fear not; 't is empty of all things, but grief:

Thy master is not there, who was, indeed,

The riches of it. Do his bidding; strike.

Thou may'st be valiant in a better cause,

But now thou seem'st a coward.

Pis. Hence, vile instrument!

Thou shalt not damn my hand.

¹ where on the bow: in folio. Warburton made the change. ² figure: in f. e. ³ & Not in f. e. ⁴ Whose mother was her raising a f. e.

Imo. Why, I must die;
And if I do not by thy hand, thou art
No servant of thy master's. Against self-slaughter
There is a prohibition so divine,
That cravens my weak hand. Come, here's my heart:
Something's afore 't!—Soft, soft! we'll no defence;
Obedient as the scabbard.—What is here?
The scriptures of the loyal Leonatus.
All turn'd to heresy? Away, away,
Corruptors of my faith! you shall no more
Be stomachers to my heart. Thus may poor fools
Believe false teachers: though those that are betray'd
Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor
Stands in worse case of woe.
And thou, Posthumus, that didst set up
My disobedience 'gainst the king my father,
And make me put into contempt the suits
Of princely followers, shalt hereafter find
It is no act of common passage, but
A strain of rareness: and I grieve myself,
To think, when thou shalt be disedg'd by her
That now thou trust'st on, how thy memory
Will then be pang'd by me.—Pr'ythee, despatch:
The lamb entreats the butcher: where's thy knife?
Thou art too slow to do thy master's bidding,
When I desire it too.

Pis. O gracious lady!
Since I receiv'd command to do this business,
I have not slept one wink.

Imo. Do 't, and to bed, then.
Pis. I'll crack mine eye-balls first.¹

Imo. And² wherefore, then,
Didst undertake it? Why hast thou abus'd
So many miles with a pretence? this place?
Mine action, and thine own? our horses' labour?
The time inviting thee? the perturb'd court,
For my being absent; whereunto I never Purpose return? Why hast thou gone so far,
To be unbent, when thou hast ta'en thy stand,
Th' elected deer before thee?

Pis. But to win time,
To lose so bad employment; in the which I have consider'd of a course. Good lady,
Hear me with patience.

Imo. Talk thy tongue weary; speak:
I have heard I am a strumpet, and mine ear,
Therein false struck, can take no greater wound,
Nor tent to bottom that. But speak.

Pis. Then, madam,
I thought you would not back again.

Imo. Most like,
Bringing me here to kill me.

Pis. Not so, neither:
But if I were as wise as honest, then
My purpose would prove well. It cannot be,
But that my master is abus'd:
Some villain, ay, and singular in his art,
Hath done you both this cursed injury.

Imo. Some Roman courtesan.

Pis. No, on my life.
I'll give but notice you are dead, and send him
Some bloody sign of it: for 't is commanded
I should do so: you shall be miss'd at court,
And that will well confirm it.

Imo. Why, good fellow,
What shall I do the while? where bide? how live?
O: in my life what comfort, when I am
Dead to my husband?

Pis. If you'll back to the court,—
Imo. No court, no father; nor no more ado
With that harsh, noble, simple, empty⁴ nothing,
That Cloten, whose love-suit hath been to me
As fearful as a siege.

Pis. If not at court,
Then not in Britain must you bide.

Imo. Where then?
Hath Britain all the sun that shines? Day, night,
Are they not but in Britain? I' the world's volume
Our Britain seems as of it, but not in it;
In a great pool, a swan's nest: pr'ythee, think
There's livers out of Britain.

Pis. I am most glad
You think of other place. Th' ambassador,
Lucius the Roman, comes to Milford-Haven
To-morrow: now, if you could wear a mind
Dark as your fortune is, and but disguise
That, which, t' appear itself, must not yet be,
But by self-danger, you should tread a course
Privy, yet full of view: yea, haply, near
The residence of Posthumus; so nigh, at least,
That though his actions were not visible, yet
Report should render him hourly to your ear,
As truly as he moves.

Imo. O, for such means!
Though peril to my modesty, not death on 't,
I would adventure.

Pis. Well then, here's the point
You must forget to be a woman; change
Command into obedience; fear, and niceness,
(The handmaids of all women, or more truly,
Woman it pretty self) into a waggish carriage.⁵
Ready in gibes, quick-answer'd, saucy, and
As quarrelous as the weasel: nay, you must Forget that rarest treasure of your cheek,
Exposing it (but, O, the harder heart!
Alack, no remedy!) to the greedy touch
Of common-kissing Titan; and forget
Your laboursome and dainty trims, wherein
You made great Juno angry.

Imo. Nay, be brief:
I see into thy end, and am almost
A man already.

Pis. First, make yourself but like one.
Forethinking this, I have already fit
(Tis in my cloak-bag) doublet, hat, hose, all
That answer to them: would you, in their serving,
With what imitation you can borrow
From youth of such a season, 'fore noble Lucius
Present yourself, desire his service, tell him
Wherein you are happy, (which you'll make him know
If that his head have ear in music) doubtless,
With joy he will embrace you; for he's honourable,
And, doubling that, most holy. Your means abroad,
You have me, rich; and I will never fail
Beginning nor supplyment.

Imo. Thou art all the comfort
The gods will diet me with. Pr'ythee, away:
There's more to be consider'd, but we'll even
All that good time will give us. This attempt
I'm soldier to, and will abide it with
A prince's courage. Away, I pr'ythee.

Pis. Well, madam, we must take a short farewell,
Lest, being miss'd, I be suspected of
Your carriage from the court. My noble mistress,
Here is a box; I had it from the queen:
What's in 't is precious; if you are sick at sea,

¹ Foot: in folio. Rowe made the change. ² fellows: in f. e. ³ Feed on, like a bird of prey. ⁴ I'll wake mine eye-balls blind nrs
e. f. ⁵ This word is not in f. e. ⁶ Pretty, and full, &c.: in f. e. ⁷ courage: in f. e. ⁸ Not in folio

Or stomach-qualm'd at land, a dram of this
Will drive away distemper.—To some shade,
And fit you to your manhood.—May the gods
Direct you to the best!

Imo. Amen. I thank thee. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—A Room in CYMBELINE'S Palace.

Enter CYMBELINE, QUEEN, CLOTEN, LUCIUS, and Lords.

Cym. Thus far; and so farewell.

Luc. Thanks, royal sir.

My emperor hath wrote, I must from hence;
And am right sorry that I must report ye
My master's enemy.

Cym. Our subjects, sir,
Will not endure his yoke: and for ourself,
To show less sovereignty than they, must needs
Appear unkinglike.

Luc. So, sir. I desire of you
A conduct over land to Milford-Haven.—

Madam, all joy befall your grace, and you!

Cym. My lords, you are appointed for that office
The due of honour in no point omit.
So, farewell, noble Lucius.

Luc. Your hand, my lord.

Clo. Receive it friendly; but from this time forth
I wear it as your enemy.

Luc. Sir, the event
Is yet to name the winner. Fare you well.

Cym. Leave not the worthy Lucius, good my lords,
Till he have cross'd the Severn.—Happiness!

[Exeunt Lucius and Lords.]

Queen. He goes hence frowning; but it honours us,
That we have given him cause.

Clo. 'T is all the better:
Your valiant Britons have their wishes in it.

Cym. Lucius hath wrote already to the emperor
How it goes here. It fits us, therefore, ripe,
Our chariots and our horsemen be in readiness:
The powers that he already hath in Gallia
Will soon be drawn to head, from whence he moves
His war for Britain.

Queen. 'T is not sleepy business,
But must be look'd to speedily, and strongly.

Cym. Our expectation that it would be thus Hath made us forward. But, my gentle queen,
Where is our daughter? She hath not appear'd
Before the Roman, nor to us hath tender'd
The duty of the day. She looks us like
A thing more made of malice, than of duty:
We have noted it.—Call her before us, for
We have been too slight in sufferance. [Exit an Attendant.]

Queen. Royal sir,
Since the exile of Posthumus, most retir'd
Hath her life been; the cure whereof, my lord,
'T is time must do. Beseech your majesty,
Forbear sharp speeches to her: she's a lady
So tender of rebuke, that words are strokes,
And strokes death to her.

Re-enter an Attendant.

Cym. Where is she, sir? How
Can her contempt be answer'd?

Atten. Please you, sir,
Her chambers are all lock'd; and there's no answer
That will be given to the loud'st noise we make.

Queen. My lord, when last I went to visit her,
She pray'd me to excuse her keeping close;
Whereto constrain'd by her infirmity,
She should that duty leave unpaid to you,
Which daily she was bound to proffer: thus

She wish'd me to make known, but our great court
Made me to blame in memory.

Cym. Her doors lock'd?
Not seen of late? Grant, heavens, that which I Fear prove false! [Exit.]

Queen. Son, I say, follow the king.

Clo. That man of hers, Pisanio, her old servant,
I have not seen these two days.

Queen. Go, look after.— [Exit CLOTEN]

Pisanio, thou that stand'st so for Posthumus,
He hath a drug of mine: I pray, his absence
Proceed by swallowing that, for he believes
It is a thing most precious. But for her,
Where is she gone? Haply, despair hath seiz'd her;
Or, wing'd with fervour of her love, she's flown
To her desir'd Posthumus. Gone she is
To death, or to dishonour; and my end
Can make good use of either: she being down,
I have the placing of the British crown.

Re-enter CLOTEN.

How now, my son!

Clo. 'T is certain, she is fled.

Go in, and cheer the king: he rages; none
Dare come about him.

Queen. All the better: may
This night forestal him of the coming day! [Exit QUEEN.]

Clo. I love, and hate her, for she's fair and royal;
And that she hath all courtly parts, more exquisite
Than lady, ladies, woman: from every one
The best she hath, and she, of all compounded, Outsells them all. I love her therefore; but,
Disdaining me, and throwing favours on
The low Posthumus, slanders so her judgment,
That what's else rare is chok'd; and in that point
I will conclude to hate her; nay, indeed,
To be reveng'd upon her: for, when fools shall—

Enter PISANIO.

Who is here?—What! are you packing, sirrah?
Come hither. Ah, you precious pandar! Villain,
Where is thy lady? In a word, or else
Thou art straightway with the fiends.

Pis. O, good my lord

Clo. Where is thy lady? or, by Jupiter—

I will not ask again. Close villain,
I'll have this secret from thy heart, or rip
Thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus?
From whose so many weights of baseness cannot
A dram of worth be drawn.

Pis. Alas, my lord!
How can she be with him? When was she miss'd?
He is in Rome.

Clo. Where is she, sir? Come nearer,
No farther halting: satisfy me home
What is become of her?

Pis. O, my all-worthy lord!

Clo. All-worthy villain!

Discover where thy mistress is, at once,
At the next word.—No more of worthy lord,—
Speak, or thy silence on the instant is Thy condemnation and thy death.

Pis. Then sir,
This paper is the history of my knowledge

Touching her flight. [Presenting a Letter.]

Clo. Let's see 't.—I will pursue her
Even to Augustus' throne.

Pis. [Aside.] Or this, or perish.
She's far enough; and what he learns by this,
May prove his travel, not her danger.

Clo. Humph!

Pis. [Aside.] I'll write to my lord she's dead. O Imogen.

Safe may'st thou wander, safe return again!

Clo. Sirrah, is this letter true?

Pis. Sir, as I think.

Clo. It is Posthumus's hand; I know't.—Sirrah, if thou wouldst not be a villain, but do me true service, undergo those employments, wherein I should have cause to use thee, with a serious industry,—that is, what villany so'er I bid thee do, to perform it directly and truly. I would think thee an honest man: thou shouldst neither want my means for thy relief, nor my voice for thy preferment.

Pis. Well, my good lord.

Clo. Wilt thou serve me? For since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare fortune of that beggar Posthumus, thou canst not, in the course of gratitude, but be a diligent follower of mine. Wilt thou serve me?

Pis. Sir, I will.

Clo. Give me thy hand: here's my purse. Hast any of thy late master's garments in thy possession?

Pis. I have, my lord, at my lodging, the same suit he wore when he took leave of my lady and mistress.

Clo. The first service thou dost me, fetch that suit hither: let it be thy first service: go.

Pis. I shall, my lord.

[Exit.]

Clo. Meet thee at Milford-Haven.—I forgot to ask him one thing: I'll remember't anon.—Even there thou villain, Posthumus, will I kill thee.—I would, these garments were come. She said upon a time (the bitterness of it I now beleeve from my heart) that she held the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble and natural person, together with the adornment of my qualities. With that suit upon my back, will I ravish her: first kill him, and in her eyes; there shall she see my valour, which will then be a torment to her contempt. He on the ground, my speech of insultment ended on his dead body,—and when my lust hath dined, (which, as I say, to vex her, I will execute in the clothes that she so praised) to the court I'll knock her back, foot her home again. She hath despised me rejoicingly, and I'll be merry in my revenge.

Re-enter PISANIO, with the Clothes.

Be those the garments?

Pis. Ay, my noble lord.

Clo. How long is't since she went to Milford-Haven?

Pis. She can scarce be there yet.

Clo. Bring this apparel to my chamber; that is the second thing that I have commanded thee; the third is, that thou wilt be a voluntary mute to my design. Be but dutious, and true preferment shall tender itself to thee.—My revenge is now at Milford: would I had wings to follow it.—Come, and be true.

[Exit.]

Pis. Thou bidd'st me to thy loss: for true to thee were to prove false, which I will never be. To him that is most true.—To Milford go, And find not her whom thou pursuest. Flow, flow, You heavenly blessings, on her! This fool's speed Be cross'd with slowness: labour be his need! [Exit.]

SCENE VI.—Before the Cave of BELARIUS.

Enter IMOGEN, attired like a Boy.

Imo. I see a man's life is a tedious one: I have 'tried' myself, and for two nights together Have made the ground my bed: I should be sick, But that my resolution helps me.—Milford, When from the mountain-top Pisanio show'd thee,

Thou wast within a ken. O Jove! I think, Foundations fly the wretched; such, I mean, Where they should be reliev'd. Two beggars told me I could not miss my way: will poor folks lie, That have afflictions on them, knowing 't is A punishment, or trial? Yes; no wonder, When rich ones scarce tell true: to lapse in fulness Is sorer, than to lie for need; and falsehood Is worse in kings, than beggars.—My dear lord! Thou art one o' the false ones: now I think on thee, My hunger's gone; but even before, I was At point to sink for food.—But what is this?

[Seeing the Cave.]

Here is a path to it: 't is some savage hold: I were best not call; I dare not call; yet famine, Ere clean it o'erthrow nature, makes it valiant. Plenty, and peace, breed cowards; hardness ever Of hardness is mother.—Ho! Who's here? If any thing that's civil, speak; if savage, Take, or lend.—Ho!—No answer? then, I'll enter. Best draw my sword; and if mine enemy But fear the sword like me, he'll scarcely look on 't. Such a foe, good heavens! [Exit into the Cave.]

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. You, Polydore, have prov'd best woodman, and Are master of the feast: Cadwal, and I, Will play the cook and servant; 't is our match: The sweat of industry would dry, and die, But for the end it works to. Come; our stomachs Will make what's homely, savoury; weariness Can snore upon the flint, when resty's sloth Finds the down pillow hard.—Now, peace be here, Poor house, that keep'st thyself!

Gui.

I am thoroughly weary.

Arv. I am weak with toil, yet strong in appetite.

Gui. There is cold meat i' the cave: we'll browse on that,

Whilst what we have kill'd be cook'd.

Bel.

Stay: come not in. [Looking in.]

But that it eats our victuals, I should think

Here were a fairy.

Gui.

What's the matter, sir?

Bel. By Jupiter, an angel! or, if not, An earthly paragon!—Behold divineness No elder than a boy!

Enter IMOGEN.

Imo. Good masters, harm me not:

Before I enter'd here, I call'd: and thought To have begg'd, or bought, what I have took. Good troth, I have stolen nought; nor would not, though I had found Gold strew'd i' the floor. Here's money for my meat: I would have left it on the board, so soon As I had made my meal, and parted With prayers for the provider.

Gui.

Money, youth?

Arv. All gold and silver rather turn to dirt; As 't is no better reckon'd, but of those Who worship dirty gods.

Imo.

I see, you are angry.

Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should Have died, had I not made it.

Bel.

Whither bound?

Imo. To Milford-Haven.

Bel. What's your name?

Imo. Fidele, sir. I have a kinsman, who Is bound for Italy: he embark'd at Milford; To whom being going, almost spent with hunger, I am fallen in this offence.

Bel. Pr'ythee, fair youth,
Think us no churls, nor measure our good minds
By this rude place we live in. Well encounter'd.
'T is almost night : you shall have better cheer
Ere you depart ; and thanks, to stay and eat it.—
Boys, bid him welcome.

Gui. Were you a woman, youth,
I should woo hard, but be your groom.—In honesty,
I bid for you, as I do buy.

Arr. I'll make 't my comfort,
He is a man : I'll love him as my brother ;
And such a welcome as I'd give to him
After long absence, such is yours.—Most welcome.
Be sprightly, for you fall 'mongst friends.

Imo. 'Mongst friends !
If brothers?—[Aside.] Would it had been so, that they Had been my father's sons : then, had my prize
Been less ; and so more equal ballasting
To thee, Posthumus.

Bel. He wrings at some distress.

Gui. Would I could free 't !
Arr. Or I ; what'er it be,
What pain it cost, what danger. Gods !

Bel. Hark, boys. [Whispering.]

Imo. Great men,
That had a court no bigger than this cave,
That did attend themselves, and had the virtue
Which their own conscience seal'd them, (laying by
That nothing gift of differing¹ multitudes)
Could not out-peer these twain. Pardon me, gods !
I'd change my sex to be companion with them,
Since Leonatus false.

Be. It shall be so.
Boys, we'll go dress our hunt.—Fair youth, come in Discourse is heavy, fasting ; when we have suppd,
We'll mannerly demand thee of thy story,
So far as thou wilt speak it.

Gui. Pray, draw near.

Arr. The night to the owl, and morn to the lark less welcome.

Imo. Thanks, sir.

Arr. I pray, draw near. [Exeunt,² into the Cave]

SCENE VII.—Rome.

Enter Two Senators and Tribunes.

1 Sen. This is the tenour of the emperor's writ
That since the common men are now in action
'Gainst the Pannonians and Dalmatians ;
And that the legions now in Gallia are Full weak to undertake our wars against
The fallen-off Britons, that we do incite
The gentry to this business. He creates
Lucius pro-consul ; and to you, the tribunes,
For this immediate levy he commends
His absolute commission. Long live Cæsar !

Tri. Is Lucius general of the forces ?

2 Sen.

Ay.

Tri. Remaining now in Gallia ?

1 Sen.

With those legions

Which I have spoke of, whereunto your levy
Must be suppliant : the words of your commission
Will tie you to the numbers, and the time
Of their despatch.

Tri. We will discharge our duty. [Exeunt]

ACT IV.

SCENE I.—The Forest, near the Cave.

Enter CLOTEN.

Clo. I am near to the place where they should meet, in Pisanio have mapped it truly. How fit his garments serve me ! Why should his mistress, who was made by him that made the tailor, not be fit too ? the rather (saving reverence of the word) for 't is said, a woman's finess comes by fits. Therein I must play the workman. I dare speak it to myself, (for it is not vainglory for a man and his glass to confer in his own chamber) I mean, the lines of my body are as well-drawn as his ; no less young, more strong, not beneath him in fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of the time, above him in birth, alike conversant in general services, and more remarkable in single oppositions :
yet this perverse errant³ thing loves him in my despite.
What mortality is ! Posthumus, thy head, which now is growing upon thy shoulders, shall within this hour be off, thy mistress enforced, thy garments cut to pieces before thy face ; and all this done, spurn her home to her father, who may, haply, be a little angry for my so rough usage, but my mother, having power of his testiness, shall turn all into my commendations.
My horse is tied up safe : out, sword, and to a sore purpose. Fortune, put them into my hand ! This is the very description of their meeting-place, and the fellow dares not deceive me. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—Before the Cave.

Enter, from the Cave, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, and IMOGEN.

Bel. You are not well : [To IMOGEN.] remain here in the cave :

We'll come to you after hunting.

Arr. Brother, stay here : [To IMOGEN]
Are we not brothers ?

Imo. So man and man should be.

But clay and clay differs in dignity,

Whose dust is both alike. I am very sick.

Gui. Go you to hunting ; I'll abide with him.

Imo. So sick I am not,—yet I am not well ;

But not so citizen a wanton, as

To seem to die, ere sick. So please you, leave me.

Stick to your journal course : the breach of custom
Is breach of all. I am ill ; but your being by me
Cannot amend me : society is no comfort

To one not sociable. I am not very sick,
Since I can reason of it : pray you, trust me here.
I'll rob none but myself, and let me die,
Stealing so poorly.

Gui. I love thee ; I have spoke it
How much the quantity, the weight as much,
As I do love my father.

Bel. What ! how ? how ?

Arr. If it be sin to say so, sir, I yoke me
In my good brother's fault : I know not why

¹ Discordant. ² The rest of this direction is not in f. e. ³ this imperseverant thing : in f. e.

I love this youth; and I have heard you say,
Love's reason's without reason: the bier at door,
And a demand who is 't shall die, I'd say,
My father, not this youth.

Bel. [Aside.] O noble strain!
O worthiness of nature! breed of greatness!
Cowards father cowards, and base things sire base:
Nature hath meal and bran: contempt and grace.
I am not their father; yet who this should be Doth miracle itself, lov'd before me.—
'T is the ninth hour o' the morn.

Arr. Brother, farewell.
Imo. I wish ye sport.
Arr. You health.—So please you, sir.
Imo. [Aside.] These are kind creatures. Gods, what lies I have heard!

Our courtiers say, all's savage but at court:
Experience, O! thou disprov'st report.
Th' imperious seas breed monsters; for the dish,
Poor tributary rivers as sweet fish.
I am sick still; heart-sick.—Pisano,
I'll now taste of thy drug.

Gui. I could not stir him.
He said, he was gentle, but unfortunate;
Dishonestly afflicted, but yet honest.
Arr. Thus did he answer me; yet said, hereafter
I might know more.

Bel. To the field, to the field!—
We'll leave you for this time; go in, and rest.
Arr. We'll not be long away.

Bel. Pray, be not sick,
Imo. Well, or ill,
I am bound to you.

Bel. And shalt be ever. [Exit IMOGEN.
This youth, howe'er distress'd, appears he hath had Good ancestors.

Arr. How angel-like he sings. [characters;
Gui. But his neat cookery: he cut our roots in
And sauc'd our broths, as Juno had been sick,
And he her dieter.

Arr. Nobly he yokes
A smiling with a sigh, as if the sigh
Was that it was, for not being such a smile;
The smile mocking the sigh, that it would fly
From so divine a temple, to commix
With winds that sailors rail at.

Gui. I do note,
That grief and patience, rooted in him¹ both,
Mingle their spurs² together.

Arr. Grow, patience!
And let the stinking elder, grief, untwine
His perishing root with the increasing vine!

Bel. It is great morning. Come, away!—Who's there? [They stand back.]

Enter CLOTEN.
Clo. I cannot find those runagates: that villain
Hath mock'd me.—I am faint.

Bel. Those runagates!
Means he not us? I partly know him; 't is Cloten, the son of the queen. I fear some ambush.
I saw him not these many years, and yet
I know 't is he.—We are held as outlaws: hence!

Gui. He is but one. You and my brother search
What companies are near: pray you, away;
Let me alone with him.

[Exit BELARIUS and ARVIRAGUS.
Clo. Soft! what are you
That fly me thus? some villain mountaineers?

I have heard of such.—What slave art thou?

Gui. A thing
More slavish did I ne'er, than answering
A slave without a knock.
Clo. Thou art a robber,
A law-breaker, a villain. Yield thee, thief.

Gui. To whom? to thee? What art thou? Have An arm as big as thine? a heart as big? [not I
Thy words, I grant, are bigger; for I wear not My dagger in my mouth. Say, what thou art,
Why I should yield to thee.

Clo. Thou villain base,
Know'st me not by my clothes?
Gui. No, nor thy tailor, rascal
Who is thy grandfather: he made those clothes,
Which, as it seems, make thee.

Clo. Thou precious varlet,
My tailor made them not.
Gui. Hence then, and thank
The man that gave them thee. Thou art some fool;
I am loath to beat thee.

Clo. Thou injurious thief,
Hear but my name, and tremble.
Gui. What's thy name?
Clo. Cloten, thou villain.

Gui. Cloten, thou double villain, be thy name,
I cannot tremble at it: were it toad, or adder, spider,
'T would move me sooner.

Clo. To thy farther fear,
Nay, to thy mere confusion, thou shalt know
I'm son to the queen.

Gui. I am sorry for 't, not seeming
So worthy as thy birth.

Clo. Art not afraid?
Gui. Those that I reverence, those I fear, the wise.
At fools I laugh, not fear them.

Clo. Die the death.
When I have slain thee with my proper hand,
I'll follow those that even now fled hence,
And on the gates of Lud's town set your heads.
Yield, rustic, mountaineer. [Exit, fighting]

Enter BELARIUS and ARVIRAGUS.
Bel. No company 's abroad.
Arr. None in the world. You did mistake him, sure
Bel. I cannot tell: long is it since I saw him,
But time hath nothing blurr'd those lines of favour
Which then he wore: the snatches in his voice,
And burst of speaking, were as his. I am absolute
'T was very Cloten.

Arr. In this place we left them.
I wish my brother make good time with him,
You say he is so fell.

Bel. Being scarce made up,
I mean, to man, he had not apprehension
Of roaring terrors; for th' effect⁴ of judgment
Is oft the cause of fear. But see, thy brother.

Re-enter GUIDERIUS, with CLOTEN'S Head.
Gui. This Cloten was a fool, an empty purse.
There was no money in 't. Not Hercules
Could have knock'd out his brains, for he had none;
Yet I not doing this, the fool had borne
My head, as I do his.

Bel. What hast thou done?
Gui. I am perfect what: cut off one Cloten's head
Son to the queen after his own report;
Who call'd me traitor, mountaineer; and swore,
With his own single hand he'd take us in,
Displace our heads, where (thank the gods!) they grow
And set them on Lud's town.

Bel. We are all undone.

Gui. Why, worthy father, what have we to lose, But that he swore to take, our lives? The law Protects not us; then, why should we be tender, To let an arrogant piece of flesh threaten us; Play judge, and executioner, all himself, For we do fear the law? What company Discover you abroad?

Bel. No single soul Can we set eye on, but in all safe reason He must have some attendants. Though his humour¹, Was nothing but mutation; ay, and that From one bad thing to worse; not frenzy, not Absolute madness, could so far have rav'd, To bring him here alone. Although, perhaps, It may be heard at court, that such as we Have here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in time May make some stronger head; the which he hearing, (As it is like him) might break out, and swear He'd fetch us in, yet is 't not probable To come alone, either he so undertaking, Or thy so suffering: then, on good ground we fear, If we do fear this body hath a tail More perilous than the head.

Arv. Let ordinance Come as the gods foresay it: howsoever, My brother hath done well.

Bel. I had no mind To hunt this day: the boy Fidele's sickness Did make my way long forth.

Gui. With his own sword, Which he did wave against my throat, I have ta'en His head from him: I'll throw 't into the creek Behind our rock; and let it to the sea, And tell the fishes he's the queen's son, Cloten: That's all I reckon. [Exit.]

Bel. I fear, 't will be reveng'd. Would, Polydore, thou hadst not done 't, though valour Becomes thee well enough.

Arv. 'Would I had done 't, So the revenge alone pursued me.—Polydore, I love thee brotherly, but envy much, Thou hast robb'd me of this deed: I would revenges, That possible strength might meet, would seek us through, And put us to our answer.

Bel. Well, 't is done. We'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger Where there's no profit. I pry'thee, to our rock: You and Fidele play the cooks; I'll stay Till hasty Polydore return, and bring him To dinner presently.

Arv. Poor sick Fidele! I'll willingly to him: to gain his colour, I'd let a parish of such Clotens blood, And praise myself for charity. [Exit.]

Bel. O thou goddess, Thou divine Nature, how² thyself thou blazon'st In these two princely boys! They are as gentle As zephyrs blowing below the violet, Not wagging his sweet head; and yet as rough, Their royal blood enchain'd, as the rud'st wind, That by the top doth take the mountain pine, And make him stoop to the vale. 'T is wonder, That an invisible instinct should frame them To royalty unlearn'd, honour untaught, Civility not seen from other, valour That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop

As if it had been sow'd! Yet still it's strange, What Cloten's being here to us portends, Or what his death will bring us.

Re-enter GUIDERICS.

Gui. Where's my brother? I have sent Cloten's clotpoll down the stream In embassy to his mother: his body's hostage For his return. [Solemn Music]

Bel. My ingenious instrument! Hark, Polydore, it sounds; but what occasion Hath Cadwal now to give it motion? Hark!

Gui. Is he at home?

Bel. He went hence even now.

Gui. What does he mean? since death of my dear'st mother

It did not speak before. All solemn things Should answer solemn accidents. The matter? Triumphs for nothing, and lamenting toys, Is jollity for apes, and grief for boys. Is Cadwal mad?

Re-enter ARVIRAGUS, bearing in his Arms IMOGEN, as dead.

Bel. Look! here he comes, And brings the dire occasion in his arms Of what we blame him for.

Arv. The bird is dead, That we have made so much on. I had rather Have skip'd from sixteen years of age to sixty, To have turn'd my leaping time into a crutch, Than have seen this.

Gui. O sweetest, fairest lily! My brother wears thee not the one half so well, As when thou grew'st thyself.

Bel. O, melancholy! Who ever yet could sound thy bottom? find The ooze, to show what coast thy sluggish crare³ Might easiliest harbour in?—Thou blessed thing: Jove knows what man thou mightst have made; but I, Thou diest a most rare boy, of melancholy.—How found you him?

Arv. Stark, as you see: Thus smiling, as some fly had tickled slumber, Not as death's dart, being laugh'd at; his right cheek Reposing on a cushion.

Gui. Where? Arv. O' the floor; His arms thus leagu'd: I thought he slept, and put My clouted brogues⁴ from off my feet, whose rudeness Answer'd my steps too loud.

Gui. Why, he but sleeps; If he be gone, he'll make his grave a bed: With female fairies will his tomb be haunted, And worms will not come to thee.

Arv. With fairest flowers Whilst summer lasts, and I live here, Fidele, I'll sweeten thy sad grave: thou shalt not lack The flower, that's like thy face, pale primrose; nor The azur'd hare-bell, like thy veins; no, nor The leafy eglantine,⁵ whom not to slander, Out-sweeten'd not thy breath: the ruddock⁶ would, With charitable bill (O bill, sore-shaming Those rich-left heirs, that let their fathers lie Without a monument!) bring thee all this; Yea, and furr'd moss besides, when flowers are none To winter-guard⁷ thy corse.

Gui. Pry'thee, have done. And do not play in wench-like words with that Which is so serious. Let us bury him,

¹ honour: in folio. Theobald made the change. ² thou: in folio. ³ leaf of eglantine: in f. o. ⁴ Red-breast. ⁵ winter-ground: in f. e.

Malone made the change. ⁶ A small vessel. ⁷ Irish, brog, a shoe.

And not protract with admiration what
Is now due debt.—To the grave!

Arv. Say, where shall 's lay him?

Gwi. By good Euriphile, our mother.

Arv. Be 't so:

And let us, Polydore, though now our voices
Have got the mannish crack, sing him to the ground,
As once! our mother: use like note, and words,
Save that Euriphile must be Fidele.

Gwi. Cadwal.

I cannot sing: I'll weep, and word it with thee;

For notes of sorrow, out of tune, are worse

Than priests and fancies that lie.

Arv. We'll speak it, then.

Bel. Great griefs, I see, medicine the less; for Cloten
Is quite forgot. He was a queen's son, boys;

And, though he eame our enemy, remember.

He was paid for that: though mean and mighty, rotting

Together, have one dust, yet reverence,

(That angel of the world) doth make distinction

Of place 'twixt high and low. Our foe was princely,

And though you took his life, as being our foe,

Yet bury him as a prince.

Gwi. Pray you, fetch him hither.

Thersites' body is as good as Ajax,

When neither is alive.

Arv. If you'll go fetch him.

We'll say our song the whilst.—Brother, begin.

[Exit BELARIUS.]

Gwi. Nay, Cadwal, we must lay his head to the east;

My father hath a reason for 't.

Arv. 'T is true.

Gwi. Come on then, and remove him.

Arv. So.—Begin.

SONG.

Gwi. Fear no more the heat o' the sun,

Nor the furious winter's rages;

Thou thy worldly task hast done,

Home art gone, and to'en thy wages:

Golden lads and lasses must

As chimney-sweepers, come to dust.

Arv. Fear no more the frown o' the great,

Thou art past the tyrant's stroke;

Care no more to clothe, and eat;

To thee the reed is as the oak;

The sceptre, learning, physic, must

All follow thee, and come to dust.

Gwi. Fear no more the lightning-flash,

Arv. Nor th' all-dreaded thunder-stone;

Gwi. Fear not slander, censure rash;

Arv. Thou hast finish'd joy and morn;

Both. All lovers young, all lovers must

Consign to thee, and come to dust

Gwi. No excoriser harm thee!

Arv. Nor no witchcraft charm thee!

Gwi. Ghost undead forbear thee!

Arv. Nothing ill come near thee!

Both. Quiet consummation have;

And renowned be thy grave!

Re-enter BELARIUS, with the Body of CLOTEN.

Gwi. We have done our obsequies. Come, lay him down. [They place him beside IVOGEN.]

Bel. Here 's a few flowers, but about midnight more:
The herbs that have on them cold dew o' the night,

Are strewings fit't for graves.—Upon their faces,—

You were as flowers, now wither'd; even so

These herb'lets shall, which we upon you strew.—

Come on, away; apart upon our knees.

The ground that gave them first has them again:

Their pleasures here are past, so is their pain.

[Exeunt BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.]

Imo. [Awaking.] Yes, sir, to Milford-Haven; which is the way?—

I thank you.—By yond' bush?—Pray, how far thither?

'Ods pittikins!—can it be six miles yet?—

I have gone all night:—'faith, I'll lie down and sleep.

But, soft! no bedfellow.—O, gods and goddesses!

[Seeing the Body.]

These flowers are like the pleasures of the world;

This bloody man, the care on 't.—I hope I dream,

For lo! I thought I was a cave-keeper,

And cook to honest creatures; but 't is not so:

'T was but a bolt of nothing, shot at nothing,

Which the brain makes of fumes. Our very eyes

Are sometimes like our judgments, blind. Good faith,

I tremble still with fear; but if there be

Yet left in heaven as small a drop of pity

As a wren's eye, fear'd gods, a part of it!

The dream 's here still: even when I wake, it is Without me, as within me; not imagin'd, felt.

A headless man!—The garment of Posthumus!

I know the shape of 's leg: this is his hand;

His foot Mercurial; his Martial thigh;

The brawns of Hercules: but his Jovial face—

Murder in heaven!—How?—'T is gone.—Pisanio,

All curses madd'd Heeuba gave the Greeks,

And mine to boot, be darted on thee! Thou,

Conspir'd with that irregular devil, Cloten,

Hast here cut off my lord.—To write, and read,

Be henceforth treacherous!—Damn'd Pisanio

Hath with his forged letters,—damn'd Pisanio—

From this most bravest vessel of the world

Struck the main-top!—O, Posthumus! alas!

Where is thy head? where 's that? Ah me! where 's that?

Pisanio might have kill'd thee at the heart,

And left thy head on.—How should this be? Pisanio!

'T is he, and Cloten: malice and lucre in them

Have laid this woe here. O! 't is pregnant, pregnant.

The drug he gave me, which, he said, was precious

And cordial to me, have I not found it

Murderous to the senses? That confirms it home:

This is Pisanio's deed, and Cloten's: O!—

Give colour to my pale cheek with thy blood,

That we the horrider may seem to those

Which chance to find us. O, my lord, my lord!

Enter Lucius, a Captain, and other Officers, and a Soothsayer.

Cap. To them the legions garrison'd in Gallia,

After your will, have cross'd the sea; attending

You, here at Milford-Haven, with your ships:

They are in readiness.

Luc. But what from Rome?

Cap. The senate hath stirr'd up the confiners,

And gentlemen of Italy; most willing spirits,

That promise noble service, and they come

Under the conduct of bold Iachimo,

Sienna's brother.

Luc. When expect you them?

Cap. With the next benefit o' the wind.

Luc. This forwardness

Makes our hopes fair. Command, our present numbers

Be muster'd; bid the captains look to 't.—Now, sir,

What have you dream'd of late of this war's purpose?

Sooth. Last night the very gods show'd me a vision.

(I fast, and pray'd, for their intelligence) thus:—

I saw Jove's bird, the Roman eagle, wing'd

* to our; in folio. * and girls all must; in f. e. * Not in f. e.

* so; in f. e. * Like Jove.

From the spongy south to this part of the west,
There vanish'd in the sunbeams: which portends,
(Unless my sins abuse my divination)
Success to the Roman host.

Luc. Dream often so,
And never false.—Soft, ho? what trunk is here,
Without his top? The ruin speaks, that sometime
It was a worthy building.—How? a page!— dead, or sleeping on him? But dead rather; nature doth abhor to make his bed ith the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.—
Let's see the boy's face.

Cap. He is alive, my lord.
Luc. He'll then instruct us of this body.—Young
one,

Inform us of thy fortunes: for, it seems,
They crave to be demanded. Who is this,
Thou mak'st thy bloody pillow? Or who was he,
That, otherwise than noble nature did,
Hath alter'd that good picture? What's thy interest
In this sad wreck? How came it? Who is it?
What art thou?

Imo. I am nothing: or if not,
Nothing to be were better. This was my master,
A very valiant Briton, and a good,
That here by mountaineers lies slain.—Alas!
There are no more such masters: I may wander
From east to occident, cry out for service,
Try many, all good, serve truly, never Find such another master.

Luc. 'Lack, good youth!
Thou mov'st no less with thy complaining, than Thy master in bleeding. Say his name, good friend.

Imo. Richard du Champ [Aside.] If I do lie, and do
No harm by it, though the gods hear, I hope
They'll pardon.—Say you, sir?

Luc. Thy name?
Imo. Fidele, sir.

Luc. Thou dost approve thyself the very same:
Thy name well fits thy faith; thy faith, thy name.
Will take thy chance with me? I will not say,
Thou shalt be so well master'd, but, be sure,
No less belov'd. The Roman emperor's letters,
Sent by a consul to me, should not sooner,
Than thine own worth, prefer thee: go with me.

Imo. I'll follow, sir. But first, an't please the gods,
I'll hide my master from the flies, as deep
As these poor pickaxes can dig: and when
With wild wood-leaves and weeds I have strew'd his grave,

And on it said a century of prayers,
Such as I can, twice o'er, I'll weep, and sigh;
And, leaving so his service, follow you,
So please you entertain me.

Luc. Ay, good youth;
And rather father thee, than master thee.—My friends,
The boy hath taught us manly duties: let us
Find out the prettiest daisied plot we can,
And make him with our pikes and partisans
A grave: come, arm him.—Boy, he is preferr'd
By thee to us, and he shall be interr'd,
As soldiers can. Be cheerful; wipe thine eyes:
Some falls are means the happier to arise. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—A Room in CYMBELINE's Palace.

Enter CYMBELINE, Lords, and PISANIO.

Cym. Again: and bring me word how 't is with her.
A fever with the absence of her son:
A madness, of which her life 's in danger.—Heavens,
How deeply you at once do touch me! Imogen,

3 F

The great part of my comfort, gone; my queen
Upon a desperate bed, and in a time
When fearful wars point at me: her son gone,
So needful for this present: it strikes me past
The hope of comfort.—But for thee, fellow,
Who needs must know of her departure, and Dost seem so ignorant, we'll enforce it from thee
By a sharp torture.

Pis. Sir, my life is yours,
I humbly set it at your will; but, for my mistress,
I nothing know where she remains, why gone,
Nor when she purposes to return. Beseech your highness
Hold me your loyal servant.

1 Lord. Good my liege,
The day that she was missing he was here:
I dare be bound he's true, and shall perform
All parts of his subjection loyally. For Cloten,
There wants no diligence in seeking him,
And will, no doubt, be found.

Cym. The time is troublesome
We'll slip you for a season; but with jealousy
[To PISANIO]

You yet depend.

1 Lord. So please your majesty.
The Roman legions, all from Gallia drawn,
Are landed on your coast, with a supply
Of Roman gentlemen by the senate sent.

Cym. Now for the counsel of my son and queen!—
I am amaz'd with matter.

1 Lord. Good my liege,
Your preparation can affront no less Than what you hear of: come more, for more you're ready.

The want is, but to put these powers in motion,
That long to move.

Cym. I thank you. Let's withdraw.
And meet the time, as it seeks us: we fear not What can from Italy annoy us, but
We grieve at chances here.—Away! [Exeunt.]

Pis. I had no letter from my master, since
I wrote him Imogen was slain. 'T is strange:
Nor hear I from my mistress, who did promise
To yield me often tidings; neither know I
What is betid to Cloten, but remain
Perplex'd in all: the heavens still must work.
Wherein I am false, I am honest; not true, to be true.
These present wars shall find I love my country,
Even to the note o' the king, or I'll fall in them.
All other doubts by time let them be clear'd;
Fortune brings in some boats that are not steer'd. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Before the Cave.

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Gui. The noise is round about us.

Bel. Let us from it.

Arv. What pleasure, sir, find we in life, to lock it
From action and adventure?

Gui. Nay, what hope
Have we in hiding us? this way the Romans
Must or for Britons slay us, or receive us
For barbarous and unnatural revolts
During their use, and slay us after.

Bel. Sons,
We'll higher to the mountains; there secure us.
To the king's party there's no going: newness
Of Cloten's death (we being not known, not muster'd Among the bands) may drive us to a render
Where we have liv'd; and so extort from 's that Which we have done, whose answer would be death
Drawn on with torture.

Gui. This is, sir, a doubt,
In such a time nothing becoming you,
Nor satisfying us.

Arr. It is not likely,
That when they hear the¹ Roman horses neigh,
Behold their quarter'd fires, have both their eyes
And ears so cloy'd importantly as now,
That they will waste their time upon our note,
To know from whence we are.

Bel. O! I am known
Of many in the army: many years,
Though Cloten bent and young, you see, not wore him
From my remembrance: and, besides, the king
Hath not deserv'd my service, nor your loves,
Who find in my exile the want of breeding,
The certainty of this hard life; aye, hopeless
To have the courtesy your cradle promis'd,
But to be still hot summer's tanlings, and
The shrinking slaves of winter.

Gui. Than be so,
Better to stay to be. Pray, sir, to the army:
I and my brother are not known; yourself,
So out of thought, and thereto so o'ergrown,
Cannot be question'd.

Arr. By this sun that shines,
I'll thither. What thing is 't, that I never Did see man die? scarce ever look'd on blood,
But that of coward hares, hot goats, and venison?
Never bestrid a horse, save one that had
A rider like myself, who ne'er wore rowel,
Nor, iron, on his heel? I am asham'd
To look upon the holy sun, to have
The benefit of his bless'd beams, remaining
So long a poor unknown.

Gui. By heavens, I'll go.
If you will bless me, sir, and give me leave,
I'll take the better care; but if you will not,
The hazard therefore due fall on me by
The hands of Romans.

Arr. So say I. Amen.
Bel. No reason I, since of your lives you set
So slight a valuation, should reserve
My crack'd one to more care. Have with you, boys.
If in your country wars you chance to die,
That is my bed too, lads, and there I'll lie:
Lead, lead! The time seems long; their blood thinks scorn,
Till it fly out, and show them princes born. [Exeunt.]

ACT V.

SCENE I.—A Field between the British and Roman Camps.

Enter POSTHUMUS, with a bloody Handkerchief.

Post. Yea, bloody cloth, I'll keep thee: for I wish'd²
Thou shouldst be colour'd thus. You married ones,
If each of you should take this course, how many
Must murder wives much better than themselves,
For wringing but a little?—O, Pisanio!
Every good servant does not all commands;
No bond, but to do just ones.—Gods! if you
Should have ta'en vengeance on my faults, I never Had liv'd to put on³ this: so had you saved
The noble Imogen to repent, and struck
Me, wretch, more worth your vengeance. But, alack!
You snatch some hence for little faults; that's leve.
To have them fall no more: you some permit
To second ills with ills, each later⁴ worse,
And make men⁵ dread it, to the doer's thrift.
But Imogen is your own: do your best wills,
And make me bless'd to obey!—I am brought hither
Among the Italian gentry, and to fight
Against my lady's kingdom: 't is enough
That, Britain, I have kill'd thy mistress; peace!
I'll give no wound to thee. Therefore, good heavens,
Hear patiently my purpose. I'll disrobe me
Of these Italian weeds, and suit myself
As does a Briton peasant: so I'll fight
Against the part I come with; so I'll die
For thee, O Imogen! even for whom my life
Is, every breath, a death: and thus unknown,
Pitied nor hated, to the face of peril
Myself I'll dedicate. Let me make men know
More valour in me, than my habits show.
Gods, put the strength o' the Leonati in me!
To shame the guise o' the world, I will begin
The fashion, less without, and more within. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—The Same.

Trumpets and Drums. Enter at one Side, LUCIUS, IACHIMO, and the Roman Army: at the other Side, the British Army; LEONATUS POSTHUMUS following like a poor Soldier. They march over and go out. Alarums. Then enter again in skirmish, IACHIMO and POSTHUMUS: he vanquisheth and disarmeth IACHIMO, and then leaves him. Alarums on both sides

Iach. The heaviness and guilt within my bosom
Takes off my manhood: I have belied a lady,
The princess of this country, and the air on 't
Revengingly enfeeble me; or could this earl,⁶
A very drudge of nature's, have subdu'd me
In my profession? Knighthoods and honours, borne
As I wear mine, are titles but of scorn.
If that thy gentry, Britain, go before
This lout, as he exceeds our lords, the odds
Is, that we scarce are men, and you are gods. [Exit.]
Alarums. The Battle continues: the Britons fly;
CYMBELINE is taken: then enter, to his rescue, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. Stand, stand! We have the advantage of the ground.
The lane is guarded: nothing routs us, but
The villainy of our fears.

Gui. Arr. Stand, stand, and fight!
Alarums. Enter POSTHUMUS, and seconds the Britons, they rescue CYMBELINE, and exeunt: then, enter LUCIUS, IACHIMO, and IMOGEN.

Luc. Away, boy, from the troops, and save thyself
For friends kill friends, and the disorder's such
As war were hood-wink'd.

Iach. 'T is their fresh supplies
Luc. It is a day turn'd strangely: or betimes
Let's re-enforce, or fly. [Exeunt]

¹ their: in folio ² am wish'd: in folio. Pope made the change. ³ Instigate ⁴ elder: in f. o. ⁵ them: in f. o. ⁶ Churl.

SCENE III.—Another Part of the Field.

Enter POSTHUMUS and a Briton Lord.Lord. Cam'st thou from where they made the stand?Post. Through you, it seems, come from the fliers.Lord. I did.

Post. No blame be to you, sir; for all was lost,
 But that the heavens fought. The king himself
 Of his wings destitute, the army broken,
 And but the backs of Britons seen, all flying
 Through a strait lane: the enemy full-hearted.
 Lolling the tongue with slaughtering, having work
 More plentiful than tools to do't, struck down
 Some mortally, some slightly touch'd, some falling
 Merely through fear; that the strait pass was damm'd
 With dead men hurt behind, and cowards living
 To die with lengthen'd shame.

Lord. Where was this lane?Post. Close by the battle, ditch'd, and wall'd with turf;

Which gave advantage to an ancient soldier,
 An honest one. I warrant; who deserv'd
 So long a breeding, as his white beard came to,
 In doing this for 's country: athwart the lane,
 He, with two striplings, (lads more like to run
 The country base,¹ than to commit such slaughter;
 With faces fit for masks, or, rather, fairer
 Than those for preservation cas'd, or shame)
 Made good the passage; cried to those that fled,
 "Our Britain's harts die flying, not our men:
 To darkness fleet souls that fly backwards! Stand;
 Or we are Romans, and will give you that
 Like beasts, which you shun beastly, and may save,
 But to look back in frown: stand, stand!"—These three,
 Three thousand confident, in act as many,
 (For three performers are the file, when all
 The rest do nothing) with this word, "stand, stand!"
 Accommodated by the place, more charming
 With their own nobleness (which could have turn'd
 A distaff to a lance) gilded pale looks,
 Part shame, part spirit renew'd; that some, turn'd
 coward

But by example (O, a sin in war, Damnd in the first beginners!) 'gan to look
 The way that they did, and to grin like lions
 Upon the pikes o' the hunters. Then began
 A stop p' the chaser, a retire; anon,
 A rout, confusion thick: forthwith they fly,
 Chickens, the way which they stopp'd eagles; slaves,
 The strides they victors made. And now our cowards (Like fragments in hard voyages) became
 The life o' the need: having found the back-door open
 Of the unguarded hearts, Heavens, how they wound!
 Some slain before; some dying; some, their friends,
 O'er-borne i' the former wave: ten chac'd by one,
 Are now each one the slaughter-man of twenty:
 Those that would die or ere resist are grown
 The mortal bugs² o' the field.

Lord. This was strange chance:
 A narrow lane, an old man, and two boys?

Post. Nay, do not wonder at it: you are made
 Rather to wonder at the things you hear
 Than to work any. Will you rhyme upon 't,
 And vent it for a mockery? Here is one:
 "Two boys, an old man twice a boy, a lane,
 Preserv'd the Britons, was the Romans' bane."

Lord. Nay, be not angry, sir.Post. 'Lack! to what end?

Who dares not stand his foe, I'll be his friend;
 For if he'll do, as he is made to do,
 I know, he'll quickly fly my friendship too.
 You have put me into rhyme.

Lord. Farewell; you are angry. [Exit
Post. Still going?—This is a lord. O noble misery!

To be i' the field, and ask, what news, of me.

To-day, how many would have given their honours
 To have sav'd their carcasses? took heel to do't,
 And yet died too? I, in mine own woe charm'd,
 Could not find death where I did hear him groan,
 Nor feel him where he struck: being an ugly monster,
 'Tis strange he hides him in fresh cups, soft beds,
 Sweet words; or hath more ministers than we
 That draw his knives i' the war.—Well, I will find him

For being now a faviour to the Briton,
 No more a Briton, I have resum'd again

The part I came in. Fight I will no more,
 But yield me to the veriest hind, that shall Once touch my shoulder. Great the slaughter is Here made by the Roman; great the answer be Britons must take; for me, my ransom 's death.
 On either side I come to spend my breath,
 Which neither here I'll keep, nor bear again,
 But end it by some means for Imogen.

Enter two Briton Captains, and Soldiers.

1 Cap. Great Jupiter be prais'd! Lucius is taken.
 'Tis thought, the old man and his sons were angels.

2 Cap. There was a fourth man, in a silly habit,
 That gave th' affront with them.

1 Cap. So 't is reported;
 But none of them can be found.—Stand! who is there?

Post. A Roman,
 Who had not now been drooping here, if seconds
 Had answer'd him.

2 Cap. Lay hands on him; a dog!
 A leg of Rome shall not return to tell What crows have peck'd them here. He brags his service,

As if he were of note. Bring him to the king.

Enter CYMBELINE, attended; BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, PISANIO, and Roman Captives. The Captains present POSTHUMUS to CYMBELINE, who delivers him over to a Jailor; after which, all go out.

SCENE IV.—A Prison.

Enter POSTHUMUS, and Two Jailors.

1 Jail. You shall not now be stolen; you have locks upon you:

So, graze as you find pasture.

2 Jail. Ay, or a stomach. [Exeunt Jailors.

Post. Most welcome, bondage, for thou art a way,
 I think, to liberty. Yet am I better
 Than one that 's sick o' the gout; since he had rather Groan so in perpetuity, than be cur'd
 By the sure physician, death, who is the key
 'T' unbar these locks. My conscience, thou art fetter'd
 More than my shanks, and wrists: you good gods, give me

The penitent instrument to pick that bolt,
 Then, free for ever! Is't enough. I am sorry?
 So children temporal fathers do appease;
 Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repent?
 I cannot do it better than in gyves,
 Desir'd, more than constrain'd: to satisfy,
 If of my freedom 't is the main part, take
 No stricter render of me than my all.

I know, you are more clement than vile men,
 Who of their broken debtors take a third.

A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again
On their abatement : that's not my desire.
For Imogen's dear life, take mine ; and thought
'T is not so dear, yet 't is a life ; you cou'd it :
'Tween man and man they weigh not every stamp,
Though light, take pieces for the figure's sake :
You rather mine, being yours ; and so, great powers,
If you will take this audit, take this life,
And cancel these cold bonds. O Imogen !
I'll speak to thee in silence. [He sleeps.]

Solemn Music. Enter, as an Apparition, SICILIUS LEONATUS. Father to POSTHUMUS, an old Man attired like a Warrior ; leading in his Hand an ancient Matron, his Wife and Mother to POSTHUMUS, with Music before them : then, after other Music, follow the Two young Leonati, Brothers to POSTHUMUS, with Wounds as they died in the Wars. They circle POSTHUMUS round as he lies sleeping.

Sici. No more, thou thunder-master, show
Thy spite on mortal flies :
With Mars fall out, with Juno chide,
That thy adulteries
Rates and revenges.

Hath my poor boy done aught but well ?

Whose face I never saw ;
I died, whilst in the womb he stay'd
Attending nature's law.

Whose father, then, (as men report,
Thou orphans' father art)
Thou shouldst have been, and shielded him
From this earth-vexing smart.

Moth. Lucina lent not me her aid,
But took me in my throes ;
That from me was Posthumus ript,
Came crying 'mongst his foes,
A thing of pity.

Sici. Great nature, like his ancestry,
Moulded the stuff so fair,
That he deserv'd the praise of the world,
As great Sciiilius' heir.

1 Bro. When once he was mature for man,
In Britain where was he,
That could stand up his parallel,
Or fruitful object be
In eye of Imogen, that best
Could deem his dignity ?

Moth. With marriage wherefore was he mock'd,
To be exil'd, and thrown
From Leonati's seat, and east
From her his dearest one,
Sweet Imogen ?

Sici. Why did you suffer Iachimo,
Slight thing of Italy,
To taint his nobler heart and brain
With needless jealousy ;
And to become the geck¹ and scorn
O' the other's villainy ?

2 Bro. For this from stiller seats we came,
Our parents, and we twain,
That striking in our country's cause
Fell bravely, and were slain ;
Our fealty, and Tenantius' right,
With honour to maintain.

1 Bro. Like hardiment Posthumus hath
To Cymbeline perform'd :
Then, Jupiter, thou king of gods,
Why hast thou thus adjourn'd

The graces for his merits due,
Being all to dolours turn'd ?

Sici. Thy crystal window ope ; look² out.
No longer exercise,
Upon a valiant race, thy harsh
And potent injuries.

Moth. Since, Jupiter, our son is good,
Take off his miseries.

Sici. Peep through thy marble mansion ; help !
Or we poor ghosts will cry,
To the shining synod of the rest,
Against thy deity.

2 Bro. Help, Jupiter ! or we appeal,
And from thy justice fly.

JUPITER descends in Thunder and Lightning, sitting upon an Eagle : he throws a Thunderbolt ; the Ghosts fall on their Knees.

Jup. No more, you petty spirits of regions low,
Offend our hearing : hush !—How dare you ghosts
Accuse the thunderer, whose bolt you know,
Sky-planted, batters all rebelling coasts ?
Poor shadows of Elysium, hence ; and rest
Upon your never-withering banks of flowers :

Be not with mortal accidents oppress ;
No care of yours it is ; you know, 't is ours.

Whom best I love, I cross ; to make my gift,
The more delay'd, delighted. Be content ;
Your low-laid son our godhead will uplift :

His comforts thrive, his trials well are spent.
Our Jovial star reign'd at his birth, and in
Our temple was he married.—Rise, and fade !—
He shall be lord of lady Imogen,
And happier much by his affliction made.

This tablet lay upon his breast, wherein
Our pleasure his full fortune doth confine ;
And so, away : no farther with your din
Express impatience, lest you stir up mine.—
Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline. [Ascends]
Sici. He came in thunder : his celestial breath
Was sulphurous to smell : the holy eagle
Stoop'd, as to foot us : his ascension is More sweet than our bless'd fields. His royal bird
Prunes the immortal wing, and cloyes his beak,
As when his god is pleas'd.

All. Thanks, Jupiter.

Sici. The marble pavement closes ; he is enter'd
His radiant roof.—A way ! and, to be blest,
Let us with care perform his great behest. [Ghosts vanish]

Post. [Waking.] Sleep, thou hast been a grandsire and begot

A father to me ; and thou hast created
A mother, and two brothers. But (O scorn !)
Gone ! they went hence so soon as they were born,
And so I am awake.—Poor wretches, that depend
On greatness' favour, dream as I have done ;
Wake, and find nothing.—But, alas, I swerve :
Many dream not to find, neither deserve,
And yet are steep'd in favours ; so am I,
That have this golden chance, and know not why.

[Finding the Tablet.]
What fairies haunt this ground ? A book ? O, rare one !
Be not, as in our fangled world, a garment
Nobler than that it covers : let thy effects
So follow, to be most unlike our courtiers,
As good as promise.

[Reads.] "When as a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air ; and when from a stately cedar

shall be lopp'd branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow, then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty."

T't is still a dream, or else such stuff as madmen Tongue, and brain not; either both, or nothing: Or senseless speaking, or a speaking such As sense cannot untie. Be what it is, The action of my life is like it, which I'll keep, if but for sympathy.

Re-enter Jailors.

Jail. Come, sir, are you ready for death?

Post. Over-roasted, rather; ready long ago.

Jail. Hanging is the word, sir: if you be ready for that, you are well cooked.

Post. So, if I prove a good repast to the spectators, the dish pays the shot.

Jail. A heavy reckoning for you, sir; but the comfort is, you shall be called to no more payments, fear no more tavern bills, which are often the sadness of parting, as the procuring of mirth. You come in faint for want of meat, depart reeling with too much drink; sorry that you have paid too much, and sorry that you are paid too much; purse and brain both empty: the brain the heavier for being too light, the purse too light, being drawn of heaviness. O! of this contradiction you shall now be quit.—O, the charity of a penny cord! it sums up thousands in a trice: you have no true debtor and creditor but it; of what's past, is, and to come, the discharge.—Your neck, sir, is pen, book, and counters; so the acquaintance follows.

Post. I am merrier to die, than thou art to live.

Jail. Indeed, sir, he that sleeps feels not the tooth-ache; but a man that were to sleep your sleep, and a hangman to help him to bed, I think, he would change places with his officer; for, look you, sir, you know not which way you shall go.

Post. Yes, indeed do I, fellow.

Jail. Your death has eyes in 's head, then; I have not seen him so pictured: you must either be directed by some that take upon them to know, or take upon yourself that, which I am sure you do not know, or jump! the after-inquiry on your own peril: and how you shall speed in your journey's end, I think, you'll never return to tell one.

Post. I tell thee, fellow, there are none want eyes to direct them the way I am going, but such as wink, and will not use them.

Jail. What an infinite mock is this, that a man should have the best use of eyes to see the way of blindness! I am sure, hanging's the way of winking.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Knock off his manacles: bring your prisoner to the king.

Post. Thou bring'st good news. I am called to be made free.

Jail. I'll be hang'd, then.

Post. Thou shalt be then freer than a jailor: no bolts for the dead. [Exeunt POSTHUMUS and Messenger.]

Jail. Unless a man would marry a gallows, and begot young gibbets, I never saw one so prone. Yet, on my conscience, there are verier knaves desire to live, for all he be a Roman; and there be some of them too, that die against their wills: so should I, if I were one. I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good: O, there were desolation of jailors, and gallowses! I speak against my present profit, but my wish hath a preferment in't. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—CYMBELINE'S Tent.

Enter CYMBELINE, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, PISANIO, Lords, Officers, and Attendants.

Cym. Stand by my side you, whom the gods have made Preservers of my throne. Woe is my heart, That the poor soldier, that so richly fought, Whose rags sham'd gilded arms, whose naked breast Stepp'd before target of proof, cannot be found: He shall be happy that can find him, if Our grace can make him so.

Bel. I never saw Such noble fury in so poor a thing; Such precious deeds in one, that promis'd nought But beggary and poor looks.

Cym. No tidings of him?

Pis. He hath been search'd among the dead and living, But no trace of him.

Cym. To my grief, I am The heir of his reward; which I will add To you, the liver, heart, and brain of Britain, By whom, I grant, she lives. 'T is now the time To ask of whence you are: report it.

Bel. Sir, In Cambria are we born, and gentlemen. Farther to boast, were neither true nor modest, Unless I add, we are honest.

Cym. Bow your knees.— Arise, my knights o' the battle: I create you Companions to our person, and will fit you With dignities becoming your estates.

Enter CORNELIUS and Ladies.

There's business in these faces.—Why so sadly Greet you our victory? you look like Romans, And not o' the court of Britain.

Cor. Hail, great king!

To sour your happiness, I must report The queen is dead.

Cym. Whom worse than a physician Would this report become? But I consider, By medicine life may be prolong'd, yet death Will seize the doctor too.—How ended she?

Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life; Which, being cruel to the world, concluded Most cruel to herself. What she confess'd, I will report, so please you: these her women Can trip me, if I err, who, with wet cheeks, Were present when she finish'd.

Cym. Pr'ythee, say.

Cor. First, she confess'd she never lov'd you; only Affected greatness got by you, not you: Married your royalty, was wife to your place, Abhor'd your person.

Cym. She alone knew this; And, but she spoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed.

Cor. Your daughter, whom she bore in hand to love With such integrity, she did confess Was as a scorpion to her sight: whose life, But that her flight prevented it, she had Ta'en off by poison.

Cym. O most delicate fiend! Who is't can read a woman?—Is there more?

Cor. More, sir, and worse. She did confess, she had For you a mortal mineral; which, being took, Should by the minute feed on life, and lingering By inches waste you: in which time she purpos'd By watching, weeping, tendance, kissing, to O'ercome you with her show; and in time

(When she had fitted you with her craft) to work
Her son into th' adoption of the crown:
But failing of her end by his strange absence,
Grew shameless-desperate; open'd, in despite
Of heaven and men, her purposes: repented
The evils she hatch'd were not effected; so,
Despairing died.

Cym. Hear'd you all this, her women?

Lady. We did so, please your highness.

Cym. Mine eyes

Were not in fault, for she was beautiful;
Mine ears, that heard her flattery: nor my heart,
That thought her like her seeming: it had been vicious,
To have mistrusted her: yet, O my daughter!
That it was folly in me, thou may'st say,
And prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend all!
Enter LUCIUS, IACHIMO, the Soothsayer, and other Roman Prisoners, guarded; POSTHUMUS behind, and IMOGEN.
Thou com'st not, Caius, now for tribute: that
The Britons have raz'd out, though with the loss
Of many a bold one; whose kinsmen have made suit,
That their good souls may be appeas'd with slaughter
Of thy their captives, which ourself have granted.
So, think of your estate.

Luc. Consider, sir, the chance of war: the day
Was yours by accident; had it gone with us,
We should not, when the blood was cool, have threaten'd
Our prisoners with the sword. But since the gods
Will have it thus, that nothing but our lives
May be call'd ransom, let it come: sufficeth,
A Roman with a Roman's heart can suffer.
Augustus lives to think on't; and so much
For my peculiar care. This one thing only
I will entreat: my boy, a Briton born,
Let him be ransom'd: never master had
A page so kind, so duteous, diligent,
So tender over his occasions, true.
So feat,¹ so nurse-like. Let his virtue join
With my request, which, I'll make bold, your highness
Cannot deny: he hath done no Briton harm,
Though he have serv'd a Roman. Save him, sir,
And spare no blood beside.

Cym. I have surely seen him:
His favour² is familiar to me.—Boy,
Thou hast look'd thyself into my grace,
And art mine own.—I know not why, nor³ wherefore,
To say, live, boy: ne'er thank thy master; live,
And ask of Cymbeline what boon thou wilt,
Fitting my bounty and thy state, I'll give it;
Yea, though thou do demand a prisoner,
The noblest taken.

Imo. I humbly thank your highness.
Luc. I do not bid thee beg my life, good lad,
And yet I know thou wilt.

Imo. No, no; alack!
There's other work in hand.—I see a thing
Bitter to me as death.—Your life, good master,
Must shuffle for itself.

Luc. The boy disdains me,
He leaves me, scorns me: briefly die their joys,
That place them on the truth of girls and boys.—
Why stands he so perplex'd?

Cym. What wouldst thou, boy?
I love thee more and more: think more and more
What's best to ask. Know'st him thou look'st on?
⁴ Speak;

Wilt have him live? Is he thy kin? thy friend?

Imo. He is a Roman; no more kin to me,
Than I to your highness, who, being born your vassal,

Am something nearer.

Cym. Wherefore ey'st him so?

Imo. I'll tell you, sir, in private, if you please
To give me hearing.

Cym. Ay, with all my heart,
And lend my best attention. What's thy name?

Imo. Fidele, sir.

Cym. Thou art my good youth, my page
I'll be thy master: walk with me; speak freely

[CYMBELINE and IMOGEN converse apart.]

Bel. Is not this boy reviv'd from death?

Arv. One said another

Not more resembles: that sweet rosy lad,
Who died, and was Fidele.—What think you?

Gwi. The same dead thing alive.

Bel. Peace, peace! see farther; he eyes us not forebear.

Creatures may be alike: were't he, I am sure
He would have spoke to us.

Gwi. But we saw him dead.

Bel. Be silent; let's see farther.

Pis. [Aside.] It is my mistress!

Since she is living, let the time run on,

To good, or bad.

[CYMBELINE and IMOGEN come forward.]

Cym. Come, stand thou by our side:

Make thy demand aloud.—Sir, [To IACHIMO.] step
you forth;

Give answer to this boy, and do it freely,
Or, by our greatness, and the grace of it,
Which is our honour, bitter torture shall
Winnow the truth from falsehood.—On, speak to him.

Imo. My boon is, that this gentleman may render
Of whom he had this ring.

Post. [Aside.] What's that to him?

Cym. That diamond upon your finger, say,
How came it yours?

Iach. Thou'lt torture me to leave unspoken that
Which, to be spoke, would tortur's thee.

Cym. How! me?

Iach. I am glad to be constrain'd to utter that, which Torments me to conceal. By villain!

I got this ring: 't was Leonatus' jewel;
Whom thou didst banish; and (which more may grieve
thee,

As it doth me) a nobler sir ne'er liv'd
'Twixt sky and ground. Wilt thou hear more, my lord?

Cym. All that belongs to this.

Iach. That paragon, thy daughter, er,
For whom my heart drops blood, and my face spurs
Quail to remember.—Give me leave; I faint.

Cym. My daughter! what of her? renew thy strength:

I had rather thou shouldst live while nature will,
Than die ere I hear more. Strive, man, and speak!

Iach. Upon a time, (unhappy was the clock
That struck the hour) it was in Rome, (accurs'd
The mansion where) 't was at a feast, (O! would
Our viands had been poison'd,) or at least
Those which I heav'd to head, the good Posthumus
(What should I say? he was too good to be
Where ill men were, and was the best of all
Amongst the rarest of good ones) sitting sadly,
Hearing us praise our loves of Italy

For beauty, that made barren the swell'd boast
Of him that best could speak: for feature, laming
The shrine of Venus, or straight-pight Minerva,
Postures beyond brief nature; for condition,

A shop of all the qualities that man
Loves woman for; besides, that hook of wiving,
Fairness, which strikes the eye. —

Cym. I stand on fire.
Come to the matter.

Iach. All too soon I shall,
Unless thou wouldst grieve quickly. — This Posthumus,
(Most like a noble lord in love, and one
That had a royal lover) took his hint;
And, not dispraising whom we prais'd, (therein
He was as calm as virtue) he began
His mistress' picture; which by his tongue being made,
And then a mind put in't, either our brags
Were crack'd of kitchen trulls, or his description
Prov'd us unspeaking sots.

Cym. Nay, nay, to the purpose.
Iach. Your daughter's chastity — there it begins.

He spake of her as Dian had hot dreams,
And she alone were cold: whereat, I, wretch,
Made scruple of his praise; and wager'd with him
Pieces of gold 'gainst this, which then he wore
Upon his honour'd finger, to attain
In suit the place of his bed, and win this ring
By hers and mine adultery. He, true knight,
No less of her honour confident
Than I did truly find her, stakes this ring;
And would so, had it been a carbuncle
Of Phœbus' wheel; and might so safely, had it
Been all the worth of his car. Away to Britain
Post I in this design: well may you, sir,
Remember me at court, where I was taught
Of your chaste daughter the wide difference
'Twixt amorous and villainous. Being thus quench'd
Of hope, not longing, mine Italian brain
'Gan in your duller Britain operate
Most vilely; for my vantage, excellent;
And, to be brief, my practice so prevail'd,
That I return'd with simular proof, enough
To make the noble Leonatus mad,
By wounding his belief in her renown
With tokens thus, and thus; averring notes
Of chamber-hanging, pictures, this her bracelet,
(O cunning, how I got it!) nay, some marks
Of secret on her person, that he could not
But think her bond of chastity quite crack'd,
I having ta'en the forfeit. Whereupon, —
Methinks, I see him now, —

Post. Ay, so thou dost,
[Coming forward.]

Italian fiend! — Ah me! most credulous fool,
Egregious murderer, thief, any thing
That's due to all the villains past, in being,
To come! — O, give me cord, or knife, or poison,
Some upright justice! Thou, king, send out
For torturers ingenious: it is I
That all the abhorred things of the earth amend,
By being worse than they. I am Posthumus,
That kill'd thy daughter: — villain-like, I lie;
That caus'd a lesser villain than myself,
A sacrilegious thief, to do't. — The temple
Of virtue was she: — yea, and she herself
Spit, and throw stones, cast mire upon me; set
The dogs of the street to bay me: every villain
Be call'd Posthumus Leonatus, and
Be villainy less than 't was! — O Imogen!
My queen, my life, my wife! O Imogen,
Imogen, Imogen!

Imo. Peace, my lord! hear, hear! —
Post. Shall's have a play of this? Thou scornful page,

There lie thy part. [Striking her: she falls]
Pis. O, gentlemen! help
Mine, and your mistress. — O, my lord Posthumus!
You ne'er kill'd Imogen till now. — Help, help! —
Mine honour'd lady!

Cym. Does the world go round?
Post. How come these staggers on me?
Pis. Wake, my mistress.
Cym. If this be so, the gods do mean to strike me
To death with mortal joy.

Pis. How fares my mistress?
Imo. O! get thee from my sight;
Thou gav'st me poison: dangerous fellow, hence!
Breathe not where princes are.

Cym. The tune of Imogen
Pis. Lady,

The gods throw stones of sulphur on me, if
That box I gave you was not thought by me
A precious thing: I had it from the queen.

Cym. New matter still?
Imo. It poison'd me. O gods!

Cor. I left out one thing which the queen confess'd,
Which must approve thee honest: if Pisanio
Have, said she, given his mistress that confection
Which I gave him for a cordial, she is serv'd
As I would serve a rat.

Cym. What's this, Cornelius?

Cor. The queen, sir, very oft importun'd me
To temper poisons for her; still pretending
The satisfaction of her knowledge, only
In killing creatures vile, as cats and dogs
Of no esteem: I, dreading that her purpose
Was of more danger, did compound for her
A certain stuff, which, being ta'en, would cease
The present power of life: but, in short time,
All offices of nature should again
Do their due functions. — Have you ta'en of it?

Imo. Most like I did, for I was dead.
Bel. My boys,
There was our error.

Gai. This is, sure, Fidele.
Imo. Why did you throw your wedded lady from you?
Think, that you are upon a rock; and now
Throw me again. [Embracing POSTHUMUS.]

Post. Hang there like fruit, my soul,
Till the tree die!

Cym. How now! my flesh, my child?
What! mak'st thou me a dullard in this act?
Wilt thou not speak to me?

Imo. Your blessing, sir. [Kneeling]
Bel. Though you did love this youth, I blame ye not:
You had a motive for't. [To GUIDERIUS and ARVIRACUS]

Cym. My tears that fall,
Prove holy water on thee! Imogen,
Thy mother's dead.

Imo. I am sorry for't, my lord.
Cym. O! she was naught; and 'long of her it was
That we meet here so strangely: but her son
Is gone, we know not how, nor where.

Pis. My lord,
Now fear is from me, I'll speak troth. Lord Cloten,
Upon my lady's missing, came to me
With his sword drawn: foam'd at the mouth, and swore
If I discover'd not which way she was gone,
It was my instant death. By accident,
I had a feigned letter of my master's
Then in my pocket, which directed him
To seek her on the mountains near to Milford.
Where, in a frenzy, in my master's garments

Which he infore'd from me away he posts
With unchaste purpose, and with oath to violate
My lady's honour: what became of him,
I farther know not.

Gu. Let me end the story.

I slew him there.

Cym. Marry, the gods forefend!

I would not thy good deeds should from my lips
Pluck a hard sentence: prythee, valiant youth,
Deny't again.

Gu. I have spoke it, and I did it.

Cym. He was a prince.

Gu. A most unceivil one. The wrongs he did me
Were nothing prince-like: for he did provoke me
With language that would make me spurn the sea,
If it could so roar to me. I cut off's head:
And am right glad, he is not standing here
To tell this tale of mine.

Cym. I am sorry for thee:
By thine own tongue thou art condemn'd, and must Endure our law. Thou art dead.

Imo. That headless man
I thought had been my lord.

Cym. Bind the offender,
And take him from our presence.

Bel. Stay, sir king.
This man is better than the man he slew,
As well descended as thyself: and hath
More of thee merited, than a band of Clotens
Had ever scar for.—Let his arms alone:

[To the Guard.

They were not born for bondage.

Cym. Why, old soldier,
Wilt thou undo the worth thou art unpaid for,
By tasting of our wrath? How of descent
As good as we?

Arv. In that he spake too far.

Cym. And thou shalt die for't.

Bel. We will die all three;
But I will prove that two on's are as good
As I have given out him.—My sons, I must
For mine own part unfold a dangerous speech,
Though, haply, well for you.

Arv. Your danger's ours.

Gu. And our good his.

Bel. Have at it, then, by leave.
Thou hadst, great king, a subject, who was call'd Belarius.

Cym. What of him? he is
A banish'd traitor.

Bel. He it is that hath
Assum'd this age: inde-d, a banish'd man;
I know not how, a traitor.

Cym. Take him hence.
The whole world shall not save him.

Bel. Not too hot:
First pay me for the nursing of thy sons;
And let it be confiscate all, so soon
As I have receiv'd it.

Cym. Nursing of my sons?

Bel. I am too blunt, and sauey; here's my knee:
Ere I arise, I will prefer my sons:

Then, spare not the old father. Mighty sir,
These two young gentlemen, that call me father,
And think they are my sons, are none of mine:
They are the issue of your lous, my liege,
And blood of your begetting.

Cym. How! my issue?

Bel. So sure as you your father's, I, old Morgan,

Am that Belarius whom you sometime banish'd:
Your pleasure was my mere offence, my punishment
Itself, and all my treason: that I suffer'd
Was all the harm I did. These gentle princes
(For such, and so they are) these twenty years
Have I train'd up; those arts they have, as I Could put into them: my breeding was, sir, as
Your highness knows. Their nurse, Euriphile,
Whom for the theft I wedded, stole these children
Upon my banishment: I mov'd her to't;
Having receiv'd the punishment before,
For that which I did then: beaten for loyalty
Excited me to treason. Their dear loss,
The more of you 't was felt, the more it shap'd
Unto my end of stealing them. But, gracious sir,
Here are your sons again; and I must use
Two of the sweet'st companions in the world.—
The benediction of these covering heavens
Fall on their heads like dew! for they are worthy
To inlay heaven with stars.

Cym. Thou weep'st, and speak'st
The service, that you three have done, is more
Unlike than this thou tell'st. I lost my children
If these be they, I know not how to wish
A pair of worthier sons.

Bel. Be pleas'd a while.—
This gentleman, whom I call Polydore,
Most worthy prince, as yours is true Guiderius:
This gentleman, my Cadwal, Arviragus,
Your younger princely son: he, sir, was lapp'd
In a most curious mantle, wrought by the hand
Of his queen mother, which, for more probation,
I can with ease produce.

Cym. Guiderius had
Upon his neck a mole, a sanguine star:
It was a mark of wonder.

Bel. This is he,
Who hath upon him still that natural stamp.
It was wise nature's end in the donation,
To be his evidence now.

Cym. O! what am I
A mother to the birth of three? Ne'er mother
Rejoic'd deliverance more.—Bless'd pray you be,
That after this strange starting from your orbs,
You may reign in them now.—O Imogen!
Thou hast lost by this a kingdom.

Imo. No, my lord,
I have got two worlds by't.—O, my gentle brothers!
Have we thus met? O! never say hereafter,
But I am truest speaker: you call'd me brother,
When I was but your sister; I you brothers,
When you were so indeed.

Cym. Did you e'er meet?

Arv. Ay, my good lord.

Gu. And at first meeting lov'd
Continued so, until we thought he died.

Cor. By the queen's dram she swallow'd.

Cym. O rare instinct!
When shall I hear all through? This fierce abridgment Hath to it circumstantial branches, which Distinction should be rich in.—Where? how liv'd you
And when came you to serve our Roman captive?
How parted with your brothers? how first met them?
Why fled you from the court, and whither? These,
And your three motives to the battle, with
I know not how much more, should be demanded.
And all the other by-dependencies,
From chance to chance; but nor the time, nor place
Will serve our long intergatories. See,

Posthumus anchors upon Imogen;
And she, like harmless lightning, throws her eye
On him, her brothers, me, her master, hitting
Each object with a joy: the counterchange
Is severally in all. Let's quit this ground,
And smoke the temple with our sacrifices.—
Thou art my brother: so we'll hold thee ever.

[To BELARIUS.]

Imo. You are my father, too; and did relieve me,
To see this gracious season.

Cym. All o'erjoy'd,
Save these in bonds: let them be joyful too,
For they shall taste our comfort.

Imo. My good master,
I will yet do you service.

Luc. Happy be you!

Cym. The forlorn soldier, that so nobly fought,
He would have well become¹ this place, and grac'd
The thankings of a king.

Post. I am, sir,
The soldier that did company these three
In poor beseeching: 't was a fitment for
The purpose I then follow'd.—That I was he,
Speak, Iachimo: I had you down, and might
Have made you finish.

Iach. I am down again; [Kneeling].
But now my heavy conscience sinks my knee.
As then your force did. Take that life, beseech you,
Which I so often owe; but your ring first,
And here the bracelet of the truest princess
That ever swore her faith.

Post. Kneel not to me:
The power that I have on you is to spare you;
The malice towards you to forgive you. Live,
And deal with others better.

Cym. Nobly doom'd.
We'll learn our freeness of a son-in-law:
Pardon's the word to all.

Arr. You help us, sir,
As you did mean indeed to be our brother;
Joy'd are we, that you are.

Post. Your servant, princes.—Good my lord of Rome,

Call forth your soothsayer. As I slept, methought,
Great Jupiter, upon his eagle back'd,
Appear'd to me, with other spritely shows
Of mine own kindred: when I wak'd, I found
This label on my bosom; whose containing
Is so from sense in hardness, that I can Make no collection of it: let him show
His skill in the construction.

Luc. Philarnonius!

Sooth. Here, my good lord. [Coming forward.]

Luc. Read, and declare the meaning.

Sooth. [Reads.] "When as a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which being dead many years shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow, then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate, and flourish in peace and plenty."

Thou, Leonatus, art the lion's whelp;
The fit and apt construction of thy name,
Being Leo-natus, doth import so much.

The piece of tender air, thy virtuous daughter,

[To CYMBELINE.]

Which we call mollis aer; and mollis aer
We term it mulier: which mulier, I divine,
Is this most constant wife; who, even now,
Answering the letter of the oracle,
Unknown to you, unsought, were clipp'd about
With this most tender air.

Cym. This hath some seeming.

Sooth. The lofty cedar, royal Cymbeline,
Personates thee; and thy lopp'd branches point
Thy two sons forth; who, by Belarius stolen,
For many years thought dead, are now reviv'd,
To the majestic cedar join'd, whose issue
Promises Britain peace and plenty.

Cym. Well,
My peace we will begin.—And, Caius Lucius,
Although the victor, we submit to Cæsar,
And to the Roman empire; promising
To pay our wonted tribute, from the which
We were dissuaded by our wicked queen;
Whom heavens, in justice, both on her and hers
Have laid most heavy hand.

Sooth. The fingers of the powers above do tune
The harmony of this peace. The vision,
Which I made known to Lucius ere the stroke
Of this yet scarce-cold battle, at this instant
Is full accomplish'd; for the Roman eagle,
From south to west on wing soaring aloft,
Lessen'd herself, and in the beams o' the sun
So vanish'd: which foreshow'd our princely eagle,
Th' imperial Cæsar, should again unite
His favour with the radiant Cymbeline,
Which shines here in the west.

Cym. Laud we the gods,
And let our crooked smokes climb to their nostrils
From our bless'd altars. Publish we this peace
To all our subjects. Set we forward. Let
A Roman and a British ensign wave
Friendly together; so through Lud's town march,
And in the temple of great Jupiter
Our peace we'll ratify; seal it with feasts.—
Set on there!—Never was a war did cease,
Ere bloody hands were wash'd, with such a peace.

[Exeunt]

ACT I.

Enter GOWER.

Before the Palace of Antioch.

To sing a song that old was sung,
 From ashes ancient Gower is come;
 Assuming man's infirmities,
 To glad your ear, and please your eyes.
 It hath been sung at festivals,
 On ember-eves, and holy ales,¹
 And lords and ladies in their lives
 Have read it for restoratives:
 The purpose² is to make men glorious;
Et bonum quo antiquius, eo melius.
 If you, born in these latter times,
 When wit's more ripe, accept my rhymes,
 And that to hear an old man sing,
 May to your wishes pleasure bring,
 I life would wish, and that I might Waste it for you, like taper-light.—
 This Antioch, then: Antiochus the great
 Built up this city for his chiefest seat,
 The fairest in all Syria;
 I tell you what my authors say:
 This king unto him took a feere,³
 Who died and left a female heir,
 So buxom, blithe, and full of face,
 As heaven had lent her all his grace;
 With whom the father liking took,
 And her to incest did provoke.
 Bad child, worse father, to entice his own
 To evil, should be done by none.
 By⁴ custom what they did begin
 Was with long use account no sin.
 The beauty of this sinful dame
 Made many princes thither frame,
 To seek her as a bed-fellow,
 In marriage pleasures play-fellow:
 Which to prevent he made a law,

To keep her still and men in awe,
 That whoso ask'd her for his wife,
 His riddle told not, lost his life:
 So, for her many a wight did die,
 As yond' grim looks⁵ do testify.
 What now ensues, to the judgment of your eye
 I give, my cause who best can justify. [Exit]

SCENE I.—Antioch. A Room in the Palace.

Enter ANTIOCHUS, PERICLES, and Attendants.

Ant. Young prince of Tyre, you have at large receiv'd
 The danger of the task you undertake.

Per. I have, Antiochus, and with a soul
 Embolden'd with the glory of her praise,
 Think death no hazard in this enterprise. [Music.]

Ant. Bring in our daughter, clothed like a bride,
 For the embracements even of Jove himself;
 At whose conception. (till Lucina reign'd)
 Nature this dowry gave, to glad her presence,
 The senate-house of planets all did sit,
 To knit in her their best perfections.

Enter the Daughter of ANTIOCHUS.

Per. See, where she comes, apparell'd like the spring
 Graces her subjects, and her thoughts the king
 Of every virtue gives renown to men!

Her face, the book of praises, where is read
 Nothing but curious pleasures, as from thence Sorrow were ever ras'd,⁶ and testy wrath
 Could never be her mild companion.

Ye gods, that made me man, and sway in love,
 That have inflam'd desire in my breast,
 To taste the fruit of yon celestial tree,
 Or die in the adventure, be my helps,
 As I am son and servant to your will,
 To compass such a boundless⁷ happiness!

Ant. Prince Pericles,—

Per. That would be son to great Antiochus.

Ant. Before thee stands this fair Hesperides,

¹ Festivals; days: in old copies. Farmer made the change. ² purchase: in old copies. ³ Mate. ⁴ But: in old copies. ⁵ Of the deep stated heads over the city gate. ⁶ rack'd: in old copies. ⁷ boundless: in old copies. Rowe made the change.

With golden fruit, but dangerous to be touch'd;
 For death-like dragons here affright thee hard:
 Her face, like heaven, enticeth thee to view
 Her countless glory, which desert must gain;
 And which, without desert, because thine eye
 Presumes to reach, all thy whole heap must die.
 Yond' sometime famous princes, like thyself,
 Drawn by report, adventurous by desire,
 Tell thee with speechless tongues, and semblance pale,
 That, without covering, save yond' field of stars,
 They here stand martyrs, slain in Cupid's wars;
 And with dead cheeks advise thee to desist,
 For going on death's net, whom none resist.

Per. Antiochus, I thank thee, who hath taught
 My frail mortality to know itself,
 And by those fearful objects to prepare
 This body, like to them, to what I must:
 For death remember'd should be like a mirror,
 Who tells us, life's but breath; to trust it, error.
 I'll make my will, then; and as sick men do,
 Who know the world, see heaven, but feeling woe,
 Gripe not at earthly joys, as erst they did:
 So, I bequeath a happy peace to you,
 And all good men, as every prince should do:
 My riches to the earth from whence they came,
 But my unspotted fire of love to you.

[To the Daughter of ANTIOCHUS.]

Thus, ready for the way of life or death,
 I wait the sharpest blow.

Ant. Scorning advice, read the conclusion, then;
 Which read and not expounded, 't is decreed,
 As these before thee, thou thyself shalt bleed.

Dough. Of all, 'say'd yet, may'st thou prove prosperous!

Of all, 'say'd yet, I wish thee happiness.

Per. Like a bold champion, I assume the lists,
 Nor ask advice of any other thought
 But faithfulness, and courage.

THE RIDDLE.

*I am no viper, yet I feed
 On mother's flesh, which did me breed;
 I sought a husband, in which labour,
 I found that kindness in a father:
 He's father, son, and husband mild,
 I mother, wife, and yet his child.
 How they may be, and yet in two,
 As you will live, resolve it you.*

Sharp physick is the last: but, O! you powers,
 That give heaven countless eyes to view men's acts,
 Why cloud they not their sights perpetually,
 If this be true, which makes me pale to read it?
 Fair glass of light, I lov'd you, and could still,
 Were not this glorious casket stor'd with ill;
 But I must tell you,—now, my thoughts revolt,
 For he's no man on whom perfections wait,
 That, knowing sin within, will touch the gate.
 You're a fair viol, and your sense the strings,
 Who, finger'd to make man his lawful music,
 Would draw heaven down and all the gods to hearken;
 But being play'd upon before your time,
 Hell only danceth to so harsh a chime.
 Good sooth, I care not for you.

Ant. Prince Pericles, touch not, upon thy life,
 For that's an article within our law,
 As dangerous as the rest. Your time's expir'd:
 Either expound now, or receive your sentence.

Per. Great king,
 Few love to hear the sins they love to act;
 'T would 'braid yourself too near for me to tell it.

Who has a book of all that monarchs do,
 He's more secure to keep it shut, than shown;
 For vice repeated is like the wandering wind,
 Blows dust in others' eyes, to spread itself;
 And yet the end of all is bought thus dear,
 The breath is gone, and the sore eyes see clear:
 To stop the air would hurt them. The blind mole casts
 Copp'd hills towards heaven, to tell the earth is throng'd
 By man's oppression; and the poor worm doth die for 't
 Kings are earth's gods; in vice their law's their will,
 And if Jove stray, who dares say Jove doth ill?
 It is enough you know; and it is fit,
 What being more known grows worse, to smother it.
 All love the womb that their first beings bred,
 Then, give my tongue like leave to love my head.

Ant. [Aside.] Heaven, that I had thy head! he has found the meaning;

But I will gloze with him. [To him.] Young prince of Tyre,

Though by the tenour of our strict edict,
 Your exposition misinterpreting,
 We might proceed to cancel of your days,
 Yet hope, succeeding from so fair a tree
 As your fair self, doth tune us otherwise.
 Forty days longer we do respite you;
 If by which time our secret be undone,
 This mercy shows, we'll joy in such a son:
 And until then your entertain shall be,
 As doth befit our honour, and your worth.

[Exeunt ANTIOCHUS, his Daughter, and Attendants.]

Per. How courtesy would seem to cover sin,
 When what is done is like an hypocrite,
 The which is good in nothing but in sight.
 If it be true that I interpret false,
 Then were it certain, you were not so bad,
 As with foul incest to abuse your soul;
 Where now you're both a father and a son,
 By your untimely clasplings with your child.
 (Which pleasure fits a husband, not a father)
 And she an eater of her mother's flesh,
 By the defiling of her parent's bed;
 And both like serpents are, who though they feed
 On sweetest flowers, yet they poison breed.
 Antioch, farewell! for wisdom sees, those men
 Blush not in actions blacker than the night,
 Will shun' no course to keep them from the light.
 One sin, I know, another doth provoke:
 Murder's as near to lust, as flame to smoke.
 Poison and treason are the hands of sin,
 Ay, and the targets, to put off the shame:
 Then, lest my life be clogg'd to keep you clear,
 By flight I'll shun the danger which I fear. [Exit]

Re-enter ANTIOCHUS.

Ant. He hath found the meaning, for the which we mean

To have his head.
 He must not live to trumpet forth my infamy,
 Nor tell the world Antiochus doth sin
 In such a loathed manner:
 And therefore instantly this prince must die;
 For by his fall my honour must keep high
 Who attends us there?

Enter THALIARD.

Thal. Doh your highness call?

Ant. Thaliard,
 You're of our chamber, and our mind partakes
 Her private actions to your secrecy;
 And for your faithfulness we will advance you.
 Thaliard, behold, here's poison, and here's gold;

¹ show : in old copies. Malone made the change.

We hate the prince of Tyre, and thou must kill him:
It fits thee not to ask the reason why,
Because we bid it. Say, is it done?

Thal. My lord,
'T is done.

Enter a Messenger.

Ant. Enough.—
Let your breath cool yourself, telling your haste.

Mess. My lord, prince Pericles is fled.
[Exit Messenger.]

Ant. As thou
Wilt live, fly after: and, as¹ an arrow, shot
From a well-experienc'd archer, hits the mark
His eye doth level at, so ne'er return,
Unless thou say Prince Pericles is dead.

Thal. My lord, if I
Can get him once within my pistol's length,
I'll make him sure: so, farewell to your highness. [Exit.]

Ant. Thaliard, adieu.—Till Pericles be dead;
My heart can lend no succour to my head. [Exit.]

SCENE II.—Tyre. A Room in the Palace.

Enter PERICLES, HELICANUS, and other Lords.

Per. Let none disturb us: why should this change of thoughts?

The sad companion, dull-ey'd melancholy,
By me so us'd a guest is, not an hour,
In the day's glorious walk, or peaceful night,
The tomb where grief should sleep, can breed me quiet.
Here pleasures court mine eyes, and mine eyes shun
them.

And danger, which I fear'd, is at Antioch,
Whose arm seems far too short to hit me here;
Yet neither pleasure's art can joy my spirits,
Nor yet the other's distance comfort me.

Then, it is thus: that passions of the mind,
That have their first conception by mis-dread,
Have after-nourishment and life by care;
And what was first but fear what might be done,
Grows elder now, and cares it be not done:

And so with me:—the great Antiochus
(Gainst whom I am too little to contend,
Since he's so great, can make his will his act)
Will think me speaking, though I swear to silence:
Nor boots it me to say, I honour.

If he suspect I may dishonour him:
And what may make him blush in being known,
He'll stop the course by which it might be known.

With hostile forces he'll o'erspread the land,
And with the ostent² of war will look so huge,
Amazement shall drive courage from the state;
Our men be vanquish'd ere they do resist,

And subjects punish'd that ne'er thought offence:
Which care of them, not pity of myself,

Who am³ no more but as the tops of trees,
Which fence the roots they grow by, and defend them)
Makes both my body pine, and soul to languish,
And punish that before, that he would punish.

1 Lord. Joy and all comfort in your sacred breast.

2 Lord. And keep your mind, till you return to us,
Peaceful and comfortable.

Hel. Peace, peace! and give experience tongue.
They do abuse the king, that flatter him:

For flattery is the bellows blows up sin;
The thing the which is flatter'd, but a spark,

To which that blast⁴ gives heat⁵ and stronger glowing;
Whereas reproof, obedient and in order,

Fits kings, as they are men, for they may err:

When signior Sooth, here, does proclaim a peace,
He flatters you, makes war upon your life.

Prince, pardon me, or strike me, if you please;
I cannot be much lower than my knees.

Per. All leave us else; but let your cares o'er-look
What shipping, and what lading's in our haven,
And then return to us. [Exeunt Lords.] Helicanus, thou

Hast moved us: what seest thou in our looks?

Hel. An angry brow, dread lord.

Per. If there be such a dart in prince's frowns,
How durst thy tongue move anger to our face?

Hel. How dare the plants look up to heaven, from whence

They have their nourishment?

Per. Thou know'st I have power
To take thy life from thee.

Hel. I have ground the axe myself;
Do you but strike the blow.

Per. Rise, pr'ythee rise.

Sit down; thou art no flatterer:

I thank thee for it; and heaven forbid,
That kings should let their ears hear their faults hid

Fit counsellor, and servant for a prince,
Who by thy wisdom mak'st a prince thy servant,
What wouldst thou have me do?

Hel. To bear with patience
Such griefs as you yourself do lay upon yourself.

Per. Thou speak'st like a physician, Helicanus,
That ministers a potion unto me.

That thou wouldst tremble to receive thyself.

Attend me, then: I went to Antioch,
Where, as thou know'st, against the face of death

I sought the purchase of a glorious beauty,
From whence an issue I might propagate,

Are arms to princes, and bring joys to subjects.

Her face was to mine eye beyond all wonder;

The rest (hark in thine ear) as black as incest:

Which by my knowledge found, the sinful father
Seem'd not to strike, but smooth; but thou know'st this,

'T is time to fear, when tyrants seem to kiss.

Which fear so grew in me, I hither fled

Under the covering of a careful night,
Who seem'd my good protector: and being here,
Bethought me what was past, what might succeed.

I knew him tyrannous; and tyrants' fears

Decrease not, but grow faster than the years.

And should he doubt⁶ it, (as no doubt he doth)

That I should open to the listening air,

How many worthy princes' bloods were shed,

To keep his bed of blackness unlaid ope,

To top that doubt he'll fill this land with arms,

And make pretence of wrong that I have done him,

When all, for mine, if I may call't, offence,

Must feel war's blow, who spares not innocence:

Which love to all, of which thyself art one,

Who now reprov'st me for it—

Hel. Alas, sir!

Per. Drew sleep out of mine eyes, blood from my cheeks,

Musings into my mind, a thousand doubts

How I might stop this tempest ere it came;

And finding little comfort to relieve them,

I thought it princely charity to grieve them.

Hel. Well, my lord, since you have given me leave to speak,

Freely will I speak. Antiochus you fear,

And justly too, I think, you fear the tyrant.

Who either by public war, or private treason,
Will take away your life.

Therefore, my lord, go travel for a while,
Till that his rage and anger be forgot,
Or till the Destinies do cut his thread of life.
Your rule direct to any; if to me,
Day serves not light more faithful than I'll be.

Per. I do not doubt thy faith;
But should he wrong my liberties in my absence?

Hel. We'll mingle our bloods together in the earth,
From whence we had our being and our birth.

Per. Tyre, I now look from thee, then; and to Tharsus
Intend my travel, where I'll hear from thee,
And by whose letters I'll dispose myself.
The care I had, and have, of subjects' good,
On thee I lay, whose wisdom's strength can bear it.
I'll take thy word for faith, not ask thine oath;
Who shuns not to break one, will sure¹ crack both.
But in our orbs we live so round and safe,
That time of both this truth shall ne'er convince,²
Thou show'dst a subject's shine, I a true prince.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III.—Tyre. An Ante-chamber in the Palace.

Enter THALIARD.

Thal. So, this is Tyre, and this is the court. Here must I kill king Pericles; and if I do not, I am sure to be hang'd at home: 't is dangerous.—Well, I perceive he was a wise fellow, and had good discretion, that being bid to ask what he would of the king, desired he might know none of his secrets: now do I see he had some reason for it; for if a king bid a man be a villain, he is bound by the indenture of his oath to be one.—
Hush! here come the lords of Tyre.

Enter HELICANUS, ESCANES, and other Lords.

Hel. You shall not need, my fellow peers of Tyre,
Farther to question me of your king's departure:
His seal'd commission, left in trust with me,
Doth speak sufficiently, he's gone to travel.

Thal. [Aside.] How! the king gone?

Hel. If farther yet you will be satisfied,
Why, as it were unlicens'd of your loves,
He would depart, I'll give some light unto you.
Being at Antioch—

Thal. [Aside.] What from Antioch?

Hel. Royal Antiochus (on what cause I know not)
Took some displeasure at him: at least, he judg'd so;
And doubting lest that he had err'd or sinn'd,
To show his sorrow he'd correct himself;
So puts himself unto the shipman's toil.
With whom each minute threatens life or death.

Thal. [Aside.] Well, I perceive
I shall not be hang'd now, although I would;
But since he's gone, the king's seas must please:
He 'scap'd the land, to perish at the sea.—
I'll present myself.—[To them.] Peace to the lords of Tyre.

Hel. Lord Thaliard from Antiochus is welcome.

Thal. From him I come,

With message unto princely Pericles:
But since my landing I have understood,
Your lord hath betook himself to unknown travels,
My message must return from whence it came.

Hel. We have no reason to desire it,
Commended to our master, not to us;
Yet, ere you shall depart, this we desire,
As friends to Antioch we may feast in Tyre. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Tharsus. A Room in the Governor's House.

Enter CLEON, DIONYZA, and Attendants.

Cle. My Dionyza, shall we rest us here,
And by relating tales of other's griefs,
See if 't will teach us to forget our own?

Dio. That were to blow at fire in hope to quench it
For who digs hills because they do aspire,
Throws down one mountain to cast up a higher
O my distressed lord! even such our griefs;
Here they're but felt, and seen with mischief's eyes,
But like to groves, being topp'd, they higher rise.

Cle. O Dionyza,
Who wanteth food, and will not say he wants it,
Or can conceal his hunger, till he famish?
Our tongues and sorrows do sound deep
Our woes into the air; our eyes do weep,
Till tongues fetch breath that may proclaim them louder;
That if heaven slumber, while their creatures want,
They may awake their helps to comfort them.
I'll then discourse our woes, felt several years,
And, wanting breath to speak, help me with tears.

Dio. I'll do my best, sir.

Cle. This Tharsus, o'er which I have the government,
A city, on whom plenty held full hand,
For riches strew'd herself even in the streets,
Whose towers bore heads so high, they kiss'd the clouds,
And strangers ne'er beheld, but wonder'd at;
Whose men and dames so jettied³ and adorn'd,
Like one another's glass to trim them by:
Their tables were stor'd full to glad the sight,
And not so much to feed on as delight;
All poverty was scor'd, and pride so great,
The name of help grew odious to repeat.

Dio. O! 't is too true.

Cle. But see what heaven can do! By this our change
These mouths, whom but of late, earth, sea, and air,
Were all too little to content and please,
Although they gave their creatures in abundance,
As houses are defil'd for want of use,
They are now starv'd for want of exercise:
Those palates, who not yet two summers⁴ younger,
Must have inventions to delight the taste,
Would now be glad of bread, and beg for it:
Those mothers who to nouse up their babes
Thought nought too curious, are ready now
To eat those little darlings whom they lov'd.
So sharp are hunger's teeth, that man and wife
Draw lots, who first shall die to lengthen life.
Here stands a lord, and there a lady weeping;
Here many sink, yet those which see them fall,
Have scarce strength left to give them burial.
Is not this true?

Dio. Our cheeks and hollow eyes do witness it.

Cle. O! let those cities, that of plenty's cup
And her prosperities so largely taste,
With their superfluous riots, hear these tears:
The misery of Tharsus may be theirs.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Where's the lord governor?

Cle. Here.

Speak out thy sorrows which thou bring'st in haste
For comfort is too far for us to expect.

Lord. We have descried, upon our neighbouring shore
A portly sail of ships make hitherward.

Cle. I thought as much.

One sorrow never comes, but brings an heir
That may succeed as his inheritor;

And so in ours. Some neighbouring nation,
Taking advantage of our misery,
Hath' stuff'd these hollow vessels with their power,
To beat us down, the which are down already;
And make a conquest of unhappy me,
Whereas no glory's got to overcome.

Lord. That's the least fear; for by the semblance
Of their white flags display'd, they bring us peace,
And come to us as favourers, not as foes.

Cle. Thou speak'st like him's¹ untutor'd to repeat;
Who makes the fairest show means most deceit.
But bring they what they will, and what they can,
What need we fear?

The ground's the low'st, and we are half way there.
Go, tell their general we attend him here,
To know for what he comes, and whence he comes,
And what he craves.

Lord. I go, my lord.

[Exit.]

Cle. Welcome is peace, if he on peace consist;
If wars, we are unable to resist.

Enter PERICLES, with Attendants.

Per. Lord governor, for so we hear you are,
Let not our ships and number of our men,
Be, like a beacon fir'd, to amaze your eyes.

We have heard your miseries as far as Tyre,
And seen the desolation of your streets;
Nor come we to add sorrow to your tears,
But to relieve them of their heavy load:
And these our ships you happily may think
Are like the Trojan horse, was stuff'd within
With bloody veins, expecting overthrow,
Are stor'd with corn to make your needy bread,
And give them life whom hunger starv'd half dead.

All. The gods of Greece protect you!
And we'll pray for you.

Per. Arise, I pray you, arise:
We do not look for reverence, but for love,
And harbourage for ourself, our ships, and men.

Cle. The which when any shall not gratify,
Or pay you with unthankfulness in thought,
Be it our wives, our children, or ourselves,
The curse of heaven and men succeed their evils!
Till when, (the which, I hope, shall ne'er be seen)
Your grace is welcome to our town and us.

Per. Which welcome we'll accept; feast here a while,
Until our stars that frown lend us a smile. [Exeunt]

ACT II.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Here have you seen a mighty king
His child, I wis, to incest bring;
A better prince, and benign lord,
That will prove awful both in deed and word.
Be quiet, then, as men should be,
Till he hath pass'd necessity.
I'll show you those in trouble's reign,
Losing a mite, a mountain gain.
The good in conversation
(To whom I give my benizon)
Is still at Tharsus, where each man
Thinks all is writ he spoken can:
And to remember what he does,
Build his statue to make him glorious;
But tidings to the contrary
Are brought your eyes; what need speak I?

Dumb show.

Enter at one door PERICLES, talking with CLEON; all the Train with them. Enter at another door, a Gentleman, with a Letter to PERICLES: PERICLES shows the Letter to CLEON; then gives the Messenger a reward, and knights him. Exeunt PERICLES, CLEON, &c. severally.

Gow. Good Helicane hath stay'd at home,
Not to eat honey like a drone,
From others' labours: for though he strive
To killen bad, keep good alive;
And, to fulfil his prince's desire,
Sends word of all that haps in Tyre:
How Thaliard came full bent with sin,
And hid intent, to murder him;
And that in Tharsus was not best
Longer for him to make his rest.
He knowing so,¹ put forth to seas,
Where when men been, there's seldom ease,
For now the wind begins to blow;
Thunder above, and deeps below,

Make such unquiet, that the ship,
Should house him safe, is wreck'd and split;
And he, good prince, having all lost,
By waves from coast to coast is tost.
All perishen of man, of pelf,
Ne aught escapen but himself;
Till fortune, tired with doing bad,
Threw him ashore, to give him glad:
And here he comes. What shall be next,
Pardon old Gower; this 'longs' the text. [Exit]

SCENE I.—Pentapolis. An open Place by the Sea-side.

Enter PERICLES, wet.

Per. Yet cease your ire, you angry stars of heaven!
Wind, rain, and thunder, remember, earthly man
Is but a substance that must yield to you;
And I, as fits my nature, do obey you.
Alas! the sea hath cast me on the rocks,
Wash'd me from shore to shore, and left me breath
Nothing to think on, but ensuing death:
Let it suffice the greatness of your powers,
To have bereft a prince of all his fortunes;
And having thrown him from your watery grave,
Here to have death in peace is all he'll crave.

Enter three Fishermen.

1 Fish. What, ho, Pilch!¹
2 Fish. Ho! come, and bring away the nets
1 Fish. What, Patch-breech, I say!
3 Fish. What say you, master?
1 Fish. Look how thou stirrest now. Come away or I'll fetch thee with a wannion.
3 Fish. Faith, master, I am thinking of the poor men, that were cast away before us even now.
1 Fish. Alas, poor souls! it griev'd my heart to hear what pitiful cries they made to us to help them, when,
well-a-day, we could scarce help ourselves.
3 Fish. Nay, master, said not I as much, when I saw the porpus, how he bounced and tumbled? they say

¹ That: in old copies. ² Him who is. ³ Stand. ⁴ that: in old copies. ⁵ doing so: in old copies. Stevens made the ob age
Beeching. ⁶ A feather, or covering.

they are half fish, half flesh : a plague on them ! they ne'er come, but I look to be washed. Master, I marvel how the fishes live in the sea.

1 Fish. Why as men do a-land : the great ones eat up the little ones. I can compare our rich misers to nothing so fitly as to a whale ; a' plays and tumbles, driving the poor fry before him, and at last devours them all at a mouthful. Such whales have I heard on the land, who never leave gaping, till they've swallowed the whole parish, church, steeple, bells and all.

Per. A pretty moral.

3 Fish. But, master, if I had been the sexton, I would have been that day in the belfry.

2 Fish. Why, man ?

3 Fish. Because he should have swallowed me too ; and when I had been in his belly, I would have kept such a jangling of the bells, that he should never have left, till he cast bells, steeple, church, and parish, up again. But if the good king Simonides were of my mind—

Per. Simonides ?

3 Fish. We would purge the land of these drones, that rob the bee of her honey.

Per. How from the finny¹ subject of the sea These fishers tell the infirmities of men ; And from their watery empire recollect All that may men approve, or men detect !—Peace be at your labour, honest fishermen.

2 Fish. Honest ! good fellow, what's that ? if it be a day fits you, search out of the calendar, and no body look after it.

Per. Y' may see, the sea hath cast me upon your coast—

2 Fish. What a drunken knave was the sea, to cast thee in our way.

Per. A man whom both the waters and the wind, In that vast tennis-court, hath made the ball For them to play upon, entreates you pity him ; He asks of you, that never us'd to beg.

1 Fish. No, friend, cannot you beg ? here's them in our country of Greece, gets more with begging, than we can do with working.

2 Fish. Canst thou catch any fishes, then ?

Per. I never practis'd it.

2 Fish. Nay, then thou wilt starve, sure ; for here's nothing to be got now a-days, unless thou canst fish for't.

Per. What I have been I have forgot to know, But what I am want teaches me to think on ; A man throng'd up with cold : my veins are chill, And have no more of life, than may suffice To give my tongue that heat to ask your help ; Which if you shall refuse, when I am dead, For that I am a man, pray see me buried.

1 Fish. Die quoth-a ? Now, gods forbid it ! I have a gown here ; come, put it on ; keep thee warm. Now, afore me, a handsome fellow ! Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have flesh for holidays, fish for fasting-days, and moreo'er puddings and flap-jacks ;² and thou shalt be welcome.

Per. I thank you, sir.

2 Fish. Hark you, my friend, you said you could not beg.

Per. I did but crave.

2 Fish. But crave ? Then I'll turn craver too, and so I shall 'scape whipping.

Per. Why, are all your beggars whipped, then ?

2 Fish. O ! not all, my friend, not all ; for if all your beggars were whipped, I would wish no better office than to be beadle. But, master, I'll go draw up the net. [Exeunt Two of the Fishermen.]

Per. How well this honest mirth becomes their labour !

1 Fish. Hark you, sir ; do you know where you are ?

Per. Not well.

1 Fish. Why, I'll tell you : this is called Pentapolis, and our king the good Simonides.

Per. The good king Simonides, do you call him ?

1 Fish. Ay, sir ; and he deserves to be so called, for his peaceable reign, and good government.

Per. He is a happy king, since he gains from his subjects the name of good by his government. How far is his court distant from this shore ?

1 Fish. Marry, sir, half a day's journey : and I'll tell you, he hath a fair daughter, and to-morrow is her birth-day ; and there are princes and knights come from all parts of the world, to joust and tourney for her love.

Per. Were my fortunes equal to my desires. I could wish to make one there.

1 Fish. O, sir ! things must be as they may ; and what a man cannot get, he may lawfully deal for. His wife's soul—

Re-enter the Two Fishermen, drawing up a Net.

2 Fish. Help, master, help ! here's a fish hangs in the net, like a poor man's right in the law ; 't will hardly come out. Ha ! bots on 't ; 't is come at last, and 't is turned to a rusty armour.

Per. An armour, friends ! I pray you, let me see it. Thanks, fortune, yet, that after all crosses Thou giv'st me somewhat to repair myself :

And though it was mine own, part of mine heritage, Which my dear father did bequeath to me, With this strict charge (even as he left his life)

"Keep it, my Pericles, it hath been a shield

"Twixt me and death ;" (and pointed to this brace)

"For that it sav'd me, keep it ; in like necessity,

The which the gods protect thee from, it may defend thee."

It kept where I kept, I so dearly lov'd it, Till the rough seas, that spare not any man, Took it in rage, though calm'd, have given 't again. I thank thee for 't : my shipwreck now's no ill, Since I have here my father's gift in's will.

1 Fish. What mean you, sir ?

Per. To beg of you, kind friends, this coat of worth, For it was sometime target to a king ; I know it by this mark. He lov'd me dearly, And for his sake I wish the having of it ; And that you'd guide me to your sovereign's court, Where with it I may appear a gentleman ; And if that ever my low fortunes better, I'll pay your bounties ; till then, rest your debtor.

1 Fish. Why, wilt thou tourney for the lady ?

Per. I'll show the virtue I have borne in arms.

1 Fish. Why, do ye take it ; and the gods give thee good on't !

2 Fish. Ay, but hark you, my friend ; 't was we that made up this garment through the rough seams of the waters : there are certain condolements, certain vails I hope, sir, if you thrive, you'll remember from whence you had it.

Per. Believe it, I will.

By your furtherance I am cloth'd in steel ; And spite of all the rapture³ of the sea, This jewel holds his biding⁴ on my arm : Unto thy value will I mount myself Upon a courser, whose delightful steps

¹ finny : in old copies. Stevens made the change.

² Pancakes, or fritters

³ rapture : in old copies.

Shall make the gazer joy to see him tread.—
Only, my friend, I yet am unprovided
Of a pair of bases.¹

2 Fish. We'll sure provide: thou shalt have my best gown to make thee a pair, and I'll bring thee to the court myself.

Per. Then honour be but a goal to my will!
This day I'll rise, or else add ill to ill. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—The Same. A Platform leading to the Lists. A Pavilion near it, for the reception of the King, Princess, Ladies, Lords, &c.

Enter SIMONIDES, THAISA, Lords, and Attendants.

Sim. Are the knights ready to begin the triumph?

1 Lord. They are, my liege;
And stay your coming to present themselves.

Sim. Return them, we are ready; and our daughter,
In honour of whose birth these triumphs are,
Sits here, like beauty's child, whom nature gat
For men to see, and seeing wonder at. [Exit a Lord.]

Thai. It pleaseth you, my royal father, to express
My commendations great, whose merit's less.

Sim. 'T is fit it should be so: for princes are
A model, which heaven makes like to itself:

As jewels lose their glory if neglected.

So princes their renown, if not respected.

'T is now your honour, daughter, to explain²
The labour of each knight in his device.

Thai. Which, to preserve mine honour, I'll perform.

Enter a Knight: he passes over the Stage, and his Squire presents his Shield to the Princess.

Sim. Who is the first that doth prefer himself?

Thai. A knight of Sparta, my renowned father;

And the device he bears upon his shield

Is a black Ethiop, reaching at the sun;

The word, Lux tua vita mihi.

Sim. He loves you well that holds his life of you.

[The second Knight passes over.

Who is the second that presents himself?

Thai. A prince of Macedon, my royal father;

And the device he bears upon his shield

Is an arm'd knight, that's conquer'd by a lady:

The motto thus, in Spanish, Piu per dulzura que per fuerza. [The third Knight passes over.

Sim. And what the third?

Thai. The third of Antioch;

And his device, a wreath of chivalry:

The word, Me pompæ proxit apex.

[The fourth Knight passes over.

Sim. What is the fourth?

Thai. A burning torch, that's turned upside down;

The word, Quod me lit. me extinguit.

Sim. Which shows that beauty hath his power and will,

Which can as well inflame, as it can kill.

[The fifth Knight passes over.

Thai. The fifth, a hand environed with clouds,

Holding out gold that's by the touchstone tried:

The motto thus, Sic spectanda fides.

[The sixth Knight passes over.

Sim. And what's the sixth and last, the which the knight himself

With such a graceful courtesy deliver'd?

Thai. He seems to be a stranger; but his present is
A wither'd branch, that's only green at top:

The motto, In hac spe vivo.

Sim. A pretty moral:

From the dejected state wherein he is,
He hopes by you his fortunes yet may flourish.

1 Lord. He had need mean better, than his outward show

Can any way speak in his just commend;

For by his rusty outside he appears

To have practis'd more the whiptock,³ than the lance.

2 Lord. He well may be a stranger, for he comes
To an honour'd triumph strangely furnished.

3 Lord. And on set purpose let his armour rust
Until this day, to scour it in the dust.

Sim. Opinion's but a fool, that makes us scan

The outward habit by the inward man.

But stay, the knights are coming: we'll withdraw
Into the gallery. [Exeunt

[Great Shouts, and all cry, The mean knight.

SCENE III.—The Same. A Hall of State. A Banquet prepared.

Enter SIMONIDES, THAISA, Ladies, Lords, Knights, and Attendants.

Sim. Knights,

To say you are welcome were superfluous.

To place upon the volume of your deeds,

As in a title-page, your worth in arms,

Were more than you expect, or more than 's fit,

Since every worth in show commends itself.

Prepare for mirth, for mirth becomes a feast:

You are princes, and my guests.

Thai. But you, [To PER.] my knight and guest;

To whom this wreath of victory I give,

And crown you king of this day's happiness.

Per. 'T is more by fortune, lady, than my merit.

Sim. Call it by what you will, the day is yours:

And here, I hope, is none that envies it.

In framing an artist art hath thus decreed,

To make some good, but others to exceed;

And you're her labour'd scholar. Come, queen o' the feast,

(For, daughter, so you are) here take your place:

Marshal the rest, as they deserve their grace.

Knights. We are honour'd much by good Simonides.

Sim. Your presence glads our days: honour we love,
For who hates honour hates the gods above.

Marshal. Sir, yond's your place.

Per.

1 Knight. Contend not, sir; for we are gentlemen,

That neither in our hearts, nor outward eyes,

Envy the great, nor do the low despise.

Per. You are right courteous knights.

Sim.

Sit, sir; sit.

By Jove, I wonder, that is king of thoughts,

These eates resist me, he not thought upon.

Thai. By Juno, that is queen

Of marriage, all the viands that I eat

Do seem unsavoury, wishing him my meat.

Sure, he's a gallant gentleman.

Sim. He's but a country gentleman

He has done no more than other knights have done,

He has broken a staff, or so: so, let it pass.

Thai. To me he seems like diamond to glass.

Per. Yond' king's to me like to my father's picture

Which tells me in that glory once he was;

Had princes sit, like stars, about his throne,

And he the sun for them to reverence.

None that beheld him, but like lesser lights

Did vail their crowns to his supremacy;

Where now his son, like a glow-worm in the night,

The which hath fire in darkness, none in light:

Whereby I see that Time's the king of men;

He's both their parent, and he is their grave,

¹ A mantle, hanging from the middle to the knees. ² entertain: in old copies. Steevens made the change. ³ Whip handle.

And gives them what he will, not what they crave.

Sim. What! are you merry, knights?

1 Knight. Who can be other, in this royal presence?

Sim. Here, with a cup that's stor'd unto the brim,
(As you do love, fill to your mistress' lips)
We drink this health to you.

Knights. We thank your grace.

Sim. Yet pause a while;
Yond' knight doth sit too melancholy,
As if the entertainment in our court,
Had not a show might countervail his worth.
Note it not you, Thaisa?

Thai. What is it
To me, my father?

Sim. O! attend, my daughter:
Princes, in this, should live like gods above,
Who freely give to every one that comes
To honour them; and princes, not doing so,
Are like to gnats, which make a sound, but kill'd
Are wonder'd at. Therefore,
To make his entrance more sweet, here say,
We drink this standing-bowl of wine to him.

Thai. Alas, my father! it befits not me
Unto a stranger knight to be so bold:
He may my proffer take for an offence,
Since men take women's gifts for impudence.

Sim. How!
Do as I bid you, or you'll move me else.

Thai. [Aside.] Now, by the gods, he could not please me better.

Sim. And farther tell him, we desire to know,
Of whence he is, his name, and parentage.

Thai. The king my father, sir, has drunk to you.
Per. I thank him.

Thai. Wishing it so much blood unto your life.
Per. I thank both him and you, and pledge him freely.

Thai. And, farther, he desires to know of you,
Of whence you are, your name and parentage.

Per. A gentleman of Tyre (my name, Pericles,
My education been in arts and arms)
Who looking for adventures in the world,
Was by the rough seas reft of ships and men,
And after shipwreck driven upon this shore.

Thai. He thanks your grace; names himself Pericles,
A gentleman of Tyre,
Who only by misfortune of the seas
Bereft of ships and men, cast on the shore.

Sim. Now by the gods, I pity his misfortune,
And will awake him from his melancholy.
Come, gentlemen, we sit too long on trifles,
And waste the time which looks for other revels.
Even in your armour, as you are address'd,
Will very well become a soldier's dance.
I will not have excuse, with saying, this
Loud music is too harsh for ladies' heads,
Since they love men in arms, as well as beds.

[The Knights dance.]

So, this was well ask'd, 't was so well perform'd.
Come, sir;

Here is a lady that wants breathing too:
And I have often heard, you knights of Tyre
Are excellent in making ladies trip,
And that their measures are as excellent.

Per. In those that practise them, they are, my lord.

Sim. O! that's as much, as you would be denied
[The Knights and Ladies dance.]

Of your fair courtesy.—Unclasp, unclasp:
Thanks, gentlemen, to all; all have done well, [duet]
But you the best. [To PERICLES.] Pages and lights, to con-

These knights unto their several lodgings!—Yours, sir
We have given order to be next our own.

Per. I am at your grace's pleasure.

Sim. Princes, it is too late to talk of love,
And that's the mark I know you level at:
Therefore, each one betake him to his rest;
To-morrow all for speeding do their best. [Exeunt]

SCENE IV.—Tyre. A Room in the Governor's House

Enter HELICANUS and ESCANES.

Hel. No, Escanes; know this of me,
Antiochus from incest liv'd not free:
For which the most high gods, not minding longer
To withhold the vengeance, that they had in store,
Due to this heinous capital offence,
Even in the height and pride of all his glory,
When he was seated, and his daughter with him,
In a chariot of inestimable value,
A fire from heaven came, and shrivell'd up
Those bodies, even to loathing: for they so stunk,
That all those eyes ador'd them ere their fall,
Scorn now their hand should give them burial.

Esa. 'T was very strange.

Hel. And yet but just; for though
This king were great, his greatness was no guard
To bar heaven's shaft, but sin had his reward.

Esa. 'T is very true.

Enter Three Lords.

1 Lord. See! not a man, in private conference
Or council, has respect with him but he.

2 Lord. It shall no longer grieve without reproof.

3 Lord. And curs'd be he that will not second it.

1 Lord. Follow me, then.—Lord Helicane, a word.

Hel. With me? and welcome.—Happy day, my lords!

1 Lord. Know, that our griefs are risen to the top,
And now at length they overflow their banks.

Hel. Your griefs! for what? wrong not the prince you love.

1 Lord. Wrong not yourself, then, noble Helicane;
But if the prince do live, let us salute him.
Or know what ground's made happy by his breath.
If in the world he live, we'll seek him out;
If in his grave he rest, we'll find him there;
And be resolved, he lives to govern us,
Or dead, gives cause to mourn his funeral,
And leaves us to our free election.

2 Lord. Whose death's, indeed, the strongest in our censure:

And knowing this kingdom is without a head,
Like goodly buildings left without a roof,
Soon fall to ruin, your noble self,
That best know'st how to rule, and how to reign,
We thus submit unto, our sovereign.

All. Live, noble Helicane!

Hel. Try! honour's cause; forbear your suffrages
If that you love prince Pericles, forbear.

Take I your wish, I leap into the seas,
Where's hourly trouble for a minute's ease.

A twelvemonth longer, let me entreat you
To forbear the absence of your king:

If in which time expir'd he not return,
I shall with aged patience bear your yoke.

But if I cannot win you to this love,

Go search like nobles, like noble subjects.

And in your search spend your adventurous worth.

Whom if you find, and win unto return,
You shall like diamonds sit about his crown.

1 Lord. To wisdom he's a fool that will not yield
And since lord Helicane enjoineth us,

We with our travels will endeavour.

Hel. Then, you love us, we you, and we'll clasp
Lands:

When peers thus knit a kingdom ever stands. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V.—Pentapolis. A Room in the Palace.

Enter SIMONIDES, reading a Letter: the Knights meet him.

1 Knight. Good morrow to the good Simonides.

Sim. Knights, from my daughter this I let you know:
That for this twelvemonth she'll not undertake
A married life.

Her reason to herself is only known,
Which yet from her by no means can I get.

2 Knight. May we not get access to her, my lord?

Sim. 'Faith, by no means: she hath so strictly tied her
To her chamber, that it is impossible.

One twelve moons more she'll wear Diana's livery;
This by the eye of Cynthia hath she vow'd,
And on her virgin honour will not break it.

3 Knight. Though loath to bid farewell, we take our leaves. [Exeunt.]

Sim. So,

They're well despatch'd; now to my daughter's letter.
She tells me here, she'll wed the stranger knight,
Or never more to view nor day nor light.

'Tis well, mistress; your choice agrees with mine;
I like that well:—nay, how absolute she's in 't,
Not minding whether I dislike or no.

Well, I commend her choice,
And will no longer have it be delay'd.

So! here he comes: I must dissemble it.

Enter PERICLES.

Per. All fortune to the good Simonides!

Sim. To you as much, sir. I am beholding to you
For your sweet music this last night: I do
Protest, my ears were never better fed
With such delightful pleasing harmony.

Per. It is your grace's pleasure to commend,
Not my desert.

Sim. Sir, you are music's master.

Per. The worst of all her scholars, my good lord.

Sim. Let me ask one thing.

What do you think of my daughter, sir?

Per. As of a most virtuous princess.

Sim. And she is fair too, is she not?

Per. As a fair day in summer; wondrous fair.

Sim. My daughter, sir, thinks very well of you;

Ay, so well, sir, that you must be her master;

And she'll your scholar be: therefore, look to it.

Per. I am unworthy for her schoolmaster.

Sim. She thinks not so; peruse this writing else.

Per. [Aside.] What's here?

A letter, that she loves the knight of Tyre?

'Tis the king's subtilty, to have my life.

[To him.] O! seek not to entrap me, gracious lord,
A stranger and distressed gentleman.

That never aim'd so high to love your daughter,
But bent all offices to honour her.

Sim. Thou hast bewitch'd my daughter, and thou art
A villain.

Per. By the gods, I have not.

Never did thought of mine levy offence;

Nor never did my actions yet commence

A deed might gain her love, or your displeasure.

Sim. Traitor, thou liest.

Per. Traitor!

Sim. Ay, traitor.

Per. Even in his throat, unless it be the king,

That calls me traitor, I return the lie.

Sim. [Aside.] Now, by the gods, I do applaud his courage.

Per. My actions are as noble as my thoughts,
That never relish'd of a base descent.

I came unto your court for honour's cause,

And not to be a rebel to her state;

And he that otherwise accounts of me,

This sword shall prove he's honour's enemy.

Sim. No!—

Here comes my daughter, she can witness it.

Enter THAISIA.

Per. Then, as you are as virtuous as fair,
Resolve your angry father, if my tongue
Did e'er solicit, or my hand subscribe
To any syllable that made love to you?

Thai. Why, sir, if you had,
Who takes offence at that would make me glad?

Sim. Yea, mistress, are you so peremptory?—

[Aside.] I am glad on't with all my heart.

[To her.] I'll tame you; I'll bring you in subjection.

Will you, not having my consent,

Bestow your love and your affections

Upon a stranger? [Aside.] who, for aught I know

May be, (nor can I think the contrary)

As great in blood as I myself.

[To her.] Therefore, hear you, mistress; either frame

Your will to mine; and you, sir, hear you,

Either be rul'd by me, or I will make you—

Man and wife.—Nay, come; your hands,

And lips must seal it too;

And being join'd, I'll thus your hopes destroy;

And for farther grief,—God give you joy!—

What, are you both pleas'd?

Thai. Yes, if you love me, sir

Per. Even as my life, my blood that fosters it.

Sim. What! are you both agreed?

Both. Yes, if't please your majesty.

Sim. It pleaseth me so well, I'll see you wed;

Then, with what haste you can, get you to bed.

[Exeunt]

ACT III.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Now sleep yslak'd hath the rout;
No din but snores the house about,
Made louder by the o'er-fed breast
Of this most pompous marriage feast.
The cat with cyme of burning coal,
Now couches 'fore the mouse's hole;

And crickets sing at the oven's mouth,
Are the blither for their drouth.
Hymen hath brought the bride to bed,
Where, by the loss of maidenhead,
A babe is moulded.—Be attent,
And time that is so briefly spent,
With your fine fancies quaintly eche'l;
What's dumb in show, I'll plain with speech.

Dumb Show.

Enter PERICLES and SIMONIDES at one door, with Attendants; a Messenger meets them, kneels, and gives PERICLES a Letter: PERICLES shows it to SIMONIDES; the Lords kneel to PERICLES. Then, enter THAISA with child, and LYCHORIDA: SIMONIDES shows his Daughter the Letter; she rejoices: she and PERICLES take leave of her Father, and all depart.

Gow. By many a der. and painful perch
Of Pericles the careful search
By the four opposing coignes,
Which the world together joins,
Is made, with all due diligence,
That horse, and sail, and high expence,
Can stand the quest. At last from Tyre
(Fame answering the most strange inquire,)
To the court of king Simonides
Are letters brought, the tenour these:—
Antiochus and his daughter dead:
The men of Tyrus on the head
Of Helicanus would set on
The crown of Tyre, but he will none
The mutiny he there hates t' oppress,
Says to them, if king Pericles
Come not home in twice six moons,
He, obedient to their dooms,
Will take the crown. The sum of this,
Brought hither to Pentapolis,
Yraved the regions round,
And every one with claps 'gan sound,
“Our heir apparent is a king!
Who dream'd, who thought of such a thing?”
Brief, he must hence depart to Tyre:
His queen, with child, makes her desire
(Which who shall cross?) along to go.
Omit we all their dole and woe:
Lychorida, her nurse, she takes,
And so to sea. Then, vessel shakes
On Neptune's billow; half the flood
Hath their keel cut; but fortune's mood
Varies again: the grizzly north
Disgorges such a tempest forth
That, as a duck for life that dives,
So up and down the poor ship drives.
The lady shrieks, and well-a-need,
Does fall in travail with her fear:
And what ensues in this self storm
Shall for itself itself perform.
I will relate, action may Conveniently the rest convey,
Which might not what by me is told.
In your imagination hold
This stage the ship, upon whose deck
The seas-tost Pericles appears to speak. [Exit

SCENE I.

Enter PERICLES, on shipboard.

Per. Thou God of this great vast, rebuke these surges,
Which wash both heaven and hell; and thou, that hast
Upon the winds command, bind them in brass,
Having call'd them from the deep. O! still Thy deafening, dreadful thunders; duly quench
Thy nimble, sulphurous flashes!—O! how, Lychorida,
How does my queen?—Thou storm, venomously
Wilt thou spit all thyself?—The seaman's whistle
Is as a whisper in the ears of death,
Unheard.—Lychorida!—Lucina, O!

Divinest patroness and midwife, gentle
To those that cry by night, convey thy deity
Aboard our dancing boat; make swift the pangs
Of my queen's travails!—Now, Lychorida—

Enter LYCHORIDA, with an Infant.

Lyc. Here is a thing too young for such a place,
Who, if it had conceit, would die as I Am like to do. Take in your arms this piece
Of your dead queen.

Per. How! how, Lychorida!

Lyc. Patience, good sir; do not assist the storm.
Here's all that is left living of your queen,
A little daughter: for the sake of it,
Be manly, and take comfort.

Per. O you gods!
Why do you make us love your goodly gifts,
And snatch them straight away? We, here below,
Recall not what we give, and therein may Use honour with you.

Lyc. Patience, good sir,
Even for this charge.

Per. Now, mild may be thy life,
For a more blust'rous birth had never babe:
Quiet and gentle thy conditions;
For thou'rt the rudest welcome to this world,
That e'er was prince's child. Happy what follows!
Thou hast as chiding a nativity,
As fire, air, water, earth, and heaven can make,
To herald thee from the womb: even at the first,
Thy loss is more than can thy portage quit,
With all thou canst find here.—Now the good gods
Throw their best eyes upon it!

Enter Two Sailors.

1 Sail. What, courage, sir! God save you.
Per. Courage enough. I do not fear the flaw;
It hath done to me the worst: yet, for the love
Of this poor infant, this fresh new sea-farer,
I would it would be quiet.

1 Sail. Slack the bowlines there; thou wilt not, wilt thou?—Blow, and split thyself.

2 Sail. But sea-room, an the brine and cloudy billow kiss the moon, I care not.

1 Sail. Sir, your queen must overboard: the sea works high, the wind is loud, and will not lie till the ship be cleared of the dead.

Per. That's your superstition.

1 Sail. Pardon us, sir; with us at sea it hath been still observed, and we are strong in earnest.¹ There fore briefly yield her, for she must overboard straight.

Per. As you think meet.—Most wretched queen!

Lyc. Here she lies, sir.

Per. A terrible child-bed hast thou had, my dear!
No light, no fire: the unfriendly elements
Forgot thee utterly; nor have I time

To give thee hallow'd to thy grave, but straight
Must cast thee, scarcely coffin'd, in the ooze;
Where, for a monument upon thy bones,
And aye*-remaining lamps, the belching whale,
And humming water must o'erwhelm thy corpse,
Lying with simple shells.—O Lychorida!
Bid Nestor bring me spices, ink and paper.
My casket and my jewels; and bid Nicander
Bring me the satin coffer²: lay the babe
Upon the pillow. Hie thee, whiles I say
A priestly farewell to her: suddenly, woman.

[Exit LYCHORIDA]

2 Sail. Sir, we have a chest beneath the hatches, caulk'd and bitum'd ready.

¹ daily: in old copies. ² Blast. ³ eastern: in old copies. M. Mason made the change. Boswell reads: custom. ⁴ aye: in old copies. Malone made the change. ⁵ coffin: in old copies.

Per. I thank thee. Mariner, say what coast is this?

2 Sail. We are near Tharsus.*

Per. Thither, gentle mariner,

Alter thy course for Tyre. When canst thou reach it?

2 Sail. By break of day, if the wind cease.

Per. O! make for Tharsus.—

There will I visit Cleon, for the babe

Cannot hold out to Tyrrus: there I'll leave it

At careful nursing.—Go thy ways, good mariner:

I'll bring the body presently. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II.—Ephesus. A Room in CERIMON'S House.

Enter CERIMON, a Servant, and some Persons who have been Shipwrecked.

Cer. Philemon, ho!

Enter PHILEMON.

Phil. Doth my lord call?

Cer. Get fire and meat for these poor men:

It has been a turbulent and stormy night.

Serv. I have been in many; but such a night as this, Till now I ne'er endur'd.

Cer. Your master will be dead ere you return:

There's nothing can be minister'd to nature,

That can recover him. Give this to the 'pothecary,

And tell me how it works. [To PHILEMON.]

[Exeunt PHILEMON, Servant, and the rest.]

Enter Two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Good morrow, sir.

2 Gent. Good morrow to your lordship.

Cer. Gentlemen,

Why do you stir so early?

1 Gent. Sir,

Our lodgings, standing bleak upon the sea,

Shook, as the earth did quake;

The very principals did seem to rend.

And all to topple. Pure surprise and fear

Made me to quit the house.

2 Gent. This is the cause we trouble you so early;

'Tis not our husbandry.

Cer. O! you say well.

1 Gent. But I much marvel that your lordship, having

Rich tire about you, should at these early hours

Shake off the golden slumber of repose.

'Tis most strange.

Nature should be so conversant with pain,

Being thereto not compell'd.

Cer. I hold it ever.

Virtue and cunning¹ were endowments greater

Than nobleness and riches: careless heirs

May the two latter darken and expend;

But immortality attends the former,

Making a man a god. 'Tis known, I ever

Have studied physic, through which secret art,

By turning o'er authorities, I have

[Together with my practice] made familiar

To me and to my aid, the best infusions

That dwell in vegetives, in metals, stones;

And can speak of the disturbances that nature

Works, and of her cures: which doth give me

A more content, in course of true delight,

Than to be thirsty after tottering honour,

Or to my treasure up in silken bags,

To please the fool and death.

2 Gent. Your honour has through Ephesus pour'd forth

Your charity, and hundreds call themselves

Your creatures, who by you have been restor'd:

And not your knowledge, your personal pain, but even

Your purse, still open, hath built lord Cerimon

* Knowledge.

Such strong renown as time shall never—

Enter Two Servants with a Chest.

Serv. So; lift there.

Cer. What is that?

Serv. Sir, even now

Did the sea toss upon our shores this chest:

'T is of some wreck.

Cer. Set it down; let's look upon 't.

2 Gent. 'T is like a coffin, sir.

Cer. Whate'er it be,

'T is wondrous heavy. Wrench it open straight:

If the sea's stomach be o'ercharg'd with gold,

'T is a good constraint of fortune it belches upon us.

2 Gent. 'T is so, my lord.

Cer. How close 't is caulk'd and bitum'd

Did the sea cast it up?

Serv. I never saw so huge a billow, sir,

As toss'd it upon shore.

Cer. Come, wrench it open.

Soft, soft! it smells most sweetly in my sense.

2 Gent. A delicate odour.

Cer. As ever hit my nostril. So, up with it,

O, you most potent gods! what's here? a corse?

1 Gent. Most strange!

Cer. Shrouded in cloth of state; balm'd and en-treasured

With full bags of spices! A passport too:

Apollo, perfect me i' the characters! [Unfolds a Scroll]

"Here I give to understand,

(If e'er this coffin drive a-land)

I, king Pericles, have lost

This queen, worth all our mundane cost,

Who finds her, give her burying;

She was the daughter of a king:

Besides this treasure for a fee,

The gods requite his charity!"

If thou liv'st, Pericles, thou hast a heart

That even cracks for woe!—This chane'd to-night.

2 Gent. Most likely, sir.

Cer. Nay, certainly to-night;

For look, how fresh she looks.—They were too rough,

That threw her in the sea. Make fire within:

Fetch hither all the boxes in my closet.

Death may usurp on nature many hours,

And yet the fire of life kindle again

The overpressed spirits. I heard

Of an Egyptian, that had nine hours lien dead,

Who was by good appliance recovered.

Enter a Servant, with Boxes, Napkins, and Fire.

Well said, well said: the fire and the cloths.—

The rough and woful music that we have,

Cause it to sound, 'beseech you.

The vial once more:—how thou stirr'st, thou block!—

The music there!—I pray you, give her air.

Gentlemen.

This queen will live: nature awakes a warm

Breath out of her: she hath not been entranc'd

Above five hours. See, how she 'gins to blow

Into life's flower again!

1 Gent. The heavens

Through you increase our wonder, and set up

Your fame for ever.

Cer. She is alive! behold,

Her eyelids, cases to those heavenly jewels

Which Pericles hath lost,

Begin to part their fringes of bright gold:

The diamonds of a most praised water

Do appear to make the world twice rich. Live,

And make us weep to hear your fate, fair creature.

Rare as you seem to be!

[She moves.]

Thai. O dear Diana!

Where am I? Where's my lord? What world is this?

2 Gent. Is not this strange?

1 Gent. Most rare.

Cer. Hush, gentle neighbours!

Lend me your hands; to the next chamber bear her.

Get linen: now this matter must be look'd to,

For her relapse is mortal. Come, come;

And Æsculapius guide us!

[Exeunt, carrying THAISA out.]

SCENE III.—THARSUS. A Room in CLEON'S House.

Enter PERICLES, CLEON, DIONYZA, Lychorida, and MARINA.

Per. Most honour'd Cleon, I must needs be gone:

My twelve months are expir'd, and Tyrus stands

In a litigious peace. You, and your lady,

Take from my heart all thankfulness; the gods

Make up the rest upon you!

Cle. Your shafts¹ of fortune, though they hurt² you
Yet glance full wanderingly³ on us. [mortally,]

Dion. O, your sweet queen!

That the strict fates had pleas'd you had brought her
To have bless'd mine eyes! [hither,]

Per. We cannot but obey

The powers above us. Could I rage and roar

As doth the sea she lies in, yet the end

Must be as 't is. My gentle babe Marina (whom,

For she was born at sea, I have nam'd so) here

I charge your charity withal, and leave her

The infant of your care; beseeching you

To give her princely training, that she may

Be manner'd as she is born.

Cle. Fear not, my lord, but think

Your grace, that fed my country with your corn,

(For which the people's prayers still fall upon you)

Must in your child be thought on. If neglection

Should therein make me vile, the common body,

By your reliev'd, would force me to my duty;

But if to that my nature need a spur,

The gods revenge it upon me and mine,

To the end of generation.

Per.

I believe you;

Your honour and your goodness teach me to't,

Without your vows. Till she be married, madam,

By bright Diana, whom we honour all,

Unscissar'd shall this hair of mine remain,

Though I show will⁴ in't. So I take my leave.

Good madam, make me blessed in your care

In bringing up my child.

Dion.

I have one myself,

Who shall not be more dear to my respect,

Than yours, my lord.

Per. Madam, my thanks and prayers

Cle. We'll bring your grace even to the edge o' the shore;

Then give you up to the mask'd Neptune, and

The gentlest winds of heaven.

Per.

I will embrace

Your offer. Come, dear'st madam.—O! no tears,

Lychorida, no tears:

Look to your little mistress, on whose grace

You may depend hereafter.—Come, my lord. [Exeunt]

SCENE IV.—Ephesus. A Room in CERIMON'S House

Enter CERIMON and THAISA.

Cer. Madam, this letter, and some certain jewels,

Lay with you in your coffer, which are

At your command. Know you the character?

Thai. It is my lord's.

That I was shipp'd at sea, I well remember,

Even on my yearning time; but whether there

Delivered or no, by the holy gods,

I cannot rightly say. But since king Pericles,

My wedded lord, I ne'er shall see again,

A vestal livery will I take me to,

And never more have joy.

Cer. Madam, if this you purpose as you speak,

Diana's temple is not distant far,

Where you may abide till your date expire.

Moreover, if you please, a niece of mine

Shall there attend you.

Thai. My recompense is thanks, that's all:

Yet my good will is great, though the gift small. [Exeunt]

ACT IV.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Imagine Pericles arriv'd at Tyre,

Welcome'd and settled to his own desire:

His woful queen we leave at Ephesus,

Unto Diana there a votaress.

Now to Marina bend your mind,

Whom our fast-growing scene must find

At Tharsus, and by Cleon train'd

In music, letters; who hath gain'd

Of education all the grace,

Which makes her both the heart and place

Of general wonder. But alack!

That monster envy, oft the wrack

Of earnest praise, Marina's life

Seeks to take off by treason's knife

And in this kind hath our Cleon

One daughter, and a wench full grown,

Even ripe for marriage rite:⁵ this maid

Hight Philoten; and it is said

For certain in our story, she

Would ever with Marina be:

Be't when she weav'd the sleided⁶ silk

With fingers, long, small, white as milk:

Or when she would with sharp needle wound

The cambrie, which she made more sound

By hurting it; or when to the lute

She sung, and made the night-bird mute,

That still records with moan; or when

She would with rich and constant pen

Vail to her mistress Dian; still

This Philoten contends in skill

With absolute Marina: so

With the dove of Paphos might the crow

Vie feathers white. Marina gets

All praises, which are paid as debts,

And not as given. This so darks

In Philoten all graceful marks,

That Cleon's wife, with envy rare,

A present murderer does prepare

For good Marina, that her daughter

Might stand peerless by this slaughter.

The sooner her vile thoughts to stead,
 Lychorida, our nurse, is dead :
 And cursed Dionyza hath
 The pregnant instrument of wrath
 Prest¹ for this blow. The unborn event
 I do commend to your content :
 Only I carried winged time
 Post on the lame feet of my rhyme ;
 Which never could I so convey,
 Unless your thoughts went on my way.—
 Dionyza doth appear,
 With Leonine, a murderer.

[Exit.

SCENE I.—Tharsus. An open Place near the Sea-shore.

Enter DIONYZA and LEONINE.

Dion. Thy oath remember ; thou hast sworn to do't :
 'Tis but a blow, which never shall be known.
 Thou canst not do a thing i' the world so soon,
 To yield thee so much profit. Let not conscience,
 Which is but cold, inflaming love in thy bosom,
 Inflame too nicely ; nor let pity, which Even women have cast off, melt thee, but be
 A soldier to thy purpose.

Leon. I'll do't : but yet she is a goodly creature.

Dion. The fitter then the gods should have her. Here
 She comes weeping for her old nurse's² death.
 Thou art resolv'd ?

Leon. I am resolv'd.

Enter MARINA, with a Basket of Flowers.

Mar. No, I will rob Tellus of her weed,
 To strew thy grave³ with flowers : the yellows, blues,
 The purple violets, and marigolds,
 Shall, as a carpet, hang upon thy grave,
 While summer days do last. Ah me, poor maid !
 Born in a tempest, when my mother died,
 This world to me is like a lasting storm,
 Whirring me from my friends.

Dion. How now, Marina ! why do you weep⁴ alone ?
 How chance my daughter is not with you ? Do not Consume your blood with sorrowing : you have
 A nurse of me. Lord ! how your favour's⁵ chang'd
 With this unprofitable woe. Come, come ;
 Give me your flowers, ere the sea mar it.
 Walk with Leonine : the air is quick there,
 And it pierces and sharpens the stomach. Come,
 Leonine, take her by the arm, walk with her.

Mar. No, I pray you ;
 I'll not bereave you of your servant.

Dion. Come, come ;
 I love the king your father, and yourself,
 With more than foreign heart. We every day
 Expect him here : when he shall come, and find
 Our paragon to all reports thus blasted.
 He will repent the breadth of his great voyage ;
 Blame both my lord and me, that we have taken
 No care to your best courses. Go, I pray you ;
 Walk, and be cheerful once again : reserve
 That excellent complexion, which did steal
 The eyes of young and old. Care not for me ;
 I can go home alone.

Mar. Well, I will go ;
 But yet I have no desire to it.

Dion. Come, come, I know 't is good for you.—
 Walk half an hour, Leonine, at least.
 Remember what I have said.

Leon. I warrant you, madam.

Dion. I'll leave you, my sweet lady, for a while.
 Pray you walk softly, do not heat your blood :

What ! I must have care of you.

Mar. Thanks, sweet madam.—[Exit DIONYZA
 Is the wind westerly that blows ?

Leon. South-west.

Mar. When I was born, the wind was north.
 Leon. Was 't so ?

Mar. My father, as nurse said, did never fear,
 But cry'd "good scamen !" to the sailors, galling
 His kingly hands hauling ropes ;
 And, clasping to the mast, endur'd a sea
 That almost burst the deck.

Leon. When was this ?

Mar. When I was born :
 Never were waves nor wind more violent ;
 And from the ladder-tackle washes off
 A canvass-climber. "Ha !" says one, "wilt out ?"
 And with a dropping industry they skip
 From stem to stern : the boatswain whistles, and
 The master calls, and trebles their confusion.

Leon. Come ; say your prayers.

Mar. What mean you ?

Leon. If you require a little space for prayer
 I grant it. Pray ; but be not tedious,
 For the gods are quick of ear, and I am sworn
 To do my work with haste.

Mar. Why will you kill me ?

Leon. To satisfy my lady.

Mar. Why would she have me kill'd ?

Now as I can remember, by my troth,
 I never did her hurt in all my life.
 I never spake bad word, nor did ill turn
 To any living creature : believe me, la,
 I never kill'd a mouse, nor hurt a fly :
 I trod upon a worm against my will,
 But I wept for it. How have I offended,
 Wherein my death might yield her profit, or
 My life imply her any danger ?

Leon. My commission
 Is not to reason of the deed, but do it.

Mar. You will not do 't for all the world, I hope.
 You are well favour'd, and your looks foreshow
 You have a gentle heart. I saw you lately,
 When you caught hurt in parting two that fought :
 Good sooth, it show'd well in you : do so now :
 Your lady seeks my life ; come you between,
 And save poor me, the weaker.

Leon. I am sworn,
 And will despatch.

Enter Pirates, whilst MARINA is struggling.

1 Pirate. Hold, villain ! [LEONINE runs away
 2 Pirate. A prize ! a prize !
 3 Pirate. Half-part, mates, half-part. Come, let's have her aboard suddenly. [Exeunt Pirates with MARINA

SCENE II.—Near the Same.

Enter LEONINE.

Leon. These roguing thieves serve the great pirate
 Valdes ;
 And they have seiz'd Marina. Let her go :
 There's no hope she'll return. I'll swear she's dead
 And thrown into the sea.—But I'll see farther ;
 Perhaps they will but please themselves upon her,
 Not carry her aboard. If she remain,
 Whom they have ravish'd must by me be slain. [Exit

SCENE III.—Mitylene. A Room in a Brothel

Enter PANDER, BAUD, and BOULT.

Pand. Boul't.

Boul't. Sir.

Pand. Search the market narrowly; Mitylene is full of gallants: we lost too much money this mart, by being too wenchless.

Baud. We were never so much out of creatures. We have but poor three, and they can do no more than they can do; and they with continual action are even as good as rotten.

Pand. Therefore, let's have fresh ones, whate'er we pay for them. If there be not a conscience to be used in every trade, we shall never prosper.

Baud. Thou say'st true: 'tis not the bringing up of poor bastards, as I think, I have brought up some eleven—

Boul. Ay, to eleven; and brought them down again. But shall I search the market?

Baud. What else, man? The stuff we have, a strong wind will blow it to pieces, they are so pitifully sodden.

Pand. Thou say'st true: they're too unwholesome of conscience. The poor Transilvanian is dead, that lay with the little baggage.

Boul. Ay, she quickly pooped him; she made him roast-meat for worms. But I'll go search the market.

[Exit BOULT.]

Pand. Three or four thousand chequins were as pretty a proportion to live quietly, and so give over.

Baud. Why, to give over, I pray you? is it a shame to get when we are old?

Pand. O! our credit comes not in like the commodity; nor the commodity wages not with the danger: therefore, if in our youths we could pick up some pretty estate, 't were not amiss to keep our door hatched. Besides, the sore terms we stand upon with the gods will be strong with us for giving over.

Baud. Come; other sorts offend as well as we.

Pand. As well as we? ay, and better too; we offend worse. Neither is our profession any trade; it's no railing. But here comes Boul.

Enter BOULT, and the Pirates with MARINA.

Boul. Come your ways. My masters, you say she's a virgin?

1 Pirate. O, sir! we doubt it not.

Boul. Master, I have gone thorough for this piece, you see: if you like her, so; if not, I have lost my earnest.

Baud. Boul, has she any qualities?

Boul. She has a good face, speaks well, and has excellent good clothes: there's no farther necessity of qualities can make her be refused.

Baud. What's her price, Boul?

Boul. I cannot be bated one doit of a thousand pieces.

Pand. Well, follow me, my masters, you shall have your money presently. Wife, take her in: instruct her what she has to do, that she may not be raw in her entertainment.

[Exeunt Pander and Pirates.]

Baud. Boul, take you the marks of her: the colour of her hair, complexion, height, her age, with warrant of her virginity, and cry, "He that will give most, shall have her first." Such a maidenhead were no cheap thing, if men were as they have been. Get this done as I command you.

Boul. Performance shall follow.

[Exit BOULT.]

Mar. Alack, that Leonie was so slack, so slow! He should have struck, not spoke; or that these pirates, (Not enough barbarous) had not o'erboard thrown me For to seek my mother!

Baud. Why lament you, pretty one?

Mar. That I am pretty.

Baud. Come, the gods have done their part in you.

Mar. I accuse them not.

Baud. You are lit into my hands, where you are like to live.

Mar. The more my fault,¹

To 'scape his hands where I was like to die.

Baud. Ay, and you shall live in pleasure.

Mar. No.

Baud. Yes, indeed, shall you, and taste gentlemen of all fashions. You shall fare well: you shall have the difference of all complexions. What! do you stop your ears?

Mar. Are you a woman?

Baud. What would you have me be, an I be not a woman?

Mar. An honest woman, or not a woman.

Baud. Marry, whip thee, gosling: I think I shall have something to do with you. Come, you are a young foolish sapling, and must be bowed as I would have you.

Mar. The gods defend me!

Baud. If it please the gods to defend you by men, then men must comfort you, men must feed you, men stir you up.—Boul's returned.

Re-enter BOULT.

Now, sir, hast thou cried her through the market?

Boul. I have cried her almost to the number of her hairs: I have drawn her picture with my voice.

Baud. And I pray thee, tell me, how dost thou find the inclination of the people, especially of the younger sort?

Boul. Faith, they listened to me, as they would have hearkened to their father's testament. There was a Spaniard's mouth so watered, that he went to bed to her very description.

Baud. We shall have him here to-morrow with his best ruff on.

Boul. To-night, to-night. But, mistress, do you know the French knight that covers i' the hams?

Baud. Who? monsieur Veroles?

Boul. Ay: he offered to cut a caper at the proclamation; but he made a groan at it, and swore he would see her to-morrow.

Baud. Well, well; as for him, he brought his disease hither: here he does but repair it. I know, he will come in our shadow, to scatter his crowns in the sun.

Boul. Well, if we had of every nation a traveller, we should lodge them with this sign.

Baud. Pray you, come hither awhile. You have fortunes coming upon you. Mark me: you must seem to do that fearfully, which you commit willingly; to despise profit, where you have most gain. To weep that you live as you do makes pity in your lovers: seldom, but that pity begets you a good opinion, and that opinion a mere² profit.

Mar. I understand you not.

Boul. O! take her home, mistress, take her home: these blushes of hers must be quenched with some present practice.

Baud. Thou say'st true, i' faith, so they must; for your bride goes to that with shame, which is her way to go with warrant.

Boul. Faith, some do, and some do not. But, mistress, if I have bargained for the joint.—

Baud. Thou may'st cut a morsel off the spit.

Boul. I may so?

Baud. Who should deny it? Come, young one, I like the manner of your garments well.

Boul. Ay, by my faith, they shall not be changed yet.

Baud. Boul, spend thou that in the town: report

what a sojourner we have; you'll lose nothing by custom. When nature framed this piece, she meant thee a good turn: therefore, say what a paragon she is, and thou hast the harvest out of thine own report.

Boudt. I warrant you, mistress, thunder shall not so awake the beds of eels, as my giving out her beauty stir up the lewdly inclined. I'll bring home some to-night.

Bard. Come your ways; follow me.

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep, Untied I still my virgin knot will keep. Diana, aid my purpose!

Bard. What have we to do with Diana? Pray you, will you go with us? [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.—Tharsus. A Room in CLEON'S House.

Enter CLEON and DIONYZA.

Dion. Why, are you foolish? Can it be undone?

Cle. O Dionyza! such a piece of slaughter The sun and moon ne'er look'd upon.

Dion. I think, You'll turn a child again.

Cle. Were I chief lord of all this spacious world, I'd give it to undo the deed. O lady!

Much less in blood than virtue, yet a princess To equal any single crown o' the earth.

P the justice of compare! O villain Leonine! Whom thou hast poison'd too.

If thou hadst drunk to him, it had been a kindness Becoming well thy face: what canst thou say, When noble Pericles shall demand his child?

Dion. That she is dead. Nurses are not the fates, To foster it, nor ever to preserve.

She died at night; I'll say so. Who can cross it, Unless you play the pious innocent,

And for an honest attribute, cry out, "She died by foul play?"

Cle. O! go to. Well, well; Of all the faults beneath the heavens, the gods Do like this worst.

Dion. Be one of those, that think The pretty wrens of Tharsus will fly hence,

And open this to Pericles. I do shame To think of what a noble strain you are,

And of how coward a spirit.

Cle. To such proceeding Who ever but his approbation added,

Though not his pre-consent, he did not flow From honourable courses.

Dion. Be it so, then: Yet none does know, but you, how she came dead,

Nor none can know, Leonine being gone. She did disdain² my child, and stood between

Her and her fortunes: none would look on her, But cast their gazes on Marina's face;

Whilst ours was blurted at, and held a malkin,⁴ Not worth the time of day. It pierc'd me thorough;

And though you call my course unnatural, You not your child well loving, yet I find,

It greets me as an enterprise of kindness, Perform'd to your sole daughter.

Cle. Heavens forgive it!

Dion. And as for Pericles, What should he say? We wept after her hearse,

And even yet we mourn: her monument Is almost finish'd, and her epitaphs

In glittering golden characters express

A general praise to her, and care in us

At whose expense 't is done.

Cle.

Thou art like the harpy Which, to betray, doth with thine angel's face, Seize with thine eagle's talons.

Dion. You are like one, that superstitiously Doth swear to the gods, that winter kills the flies: But yet, I know, you'll do as I advise. [Exeunt.]

Enter GOWER, before the Monument of MARINA at Tharsus.

Gow. Thus time we waste, and longest leagues make short;

Sail seas in cockles, have, and wish but for't; Making (to take your imagination)

From bourn to bourn, region to region.

By you being pardon'd, we commit no crime

To use one language, in each several clime,

Where our scenes seem to live. I do beseech you,

To learn of me, who stand i' the gaps to teach you,

The stages of our story. Pericles

Is now again thwarting the wayward seas,

Attended on by many a lord and knight.

To see his daughter, all his life's delight.

Old Escanes, whom Helicanus late

Advanc'd in time to great and high estate,

Is left to govern. Bear you it in mind,

Old Helicanus goes along behind.

Well-sailing ships, and bounteous winds, have brought

This king to Tharsus, (think this pilot thought,

So with his steerage shall your thoughts grow on)

To fetch his daughter home, who first is gone

Like notes and shadows see them move awhile;

Your ears unto your eyes I'll reconcile.

Dumb show.

Enter PERICLES with his Train, at one door; CLEON and DIONYZA at the other. CLEON shows PERICLES the Tomb of MARINA; whereat PERICLES makes lamentation, puts on Sackcloth, and in a mighty passion departs.

Gow. See, how belief may suffer by foul show The borrow'd passion stands for true old woe;

And Pericles, in sorrow all devour'd,

With sighs shot through, and biggest tears o'er-show'd,

Leaves Tharsus, and again embarks. He swears

Never to wash his face, nor cut his hairs;

He puts on sackcloth, and to sea. He bears

A tempest, which his mortal vessel tears,

And yet he rides it out. Now, please you, wit

The epitaph is for Marina writ

By wicked Dionyza.

"The fairest, sweet st, and best, lies here,

Who wither'd in her spring of year:

She was of Tyros, the king's daughter.

On whom foul death hath made this slaughter.

Marina was she call'd; and at her birth,

Thetis, being proud, swallow'd some part o' the earth.

Therefore the earth, fearing to be o'erflow'd,

Hath Thetis' birth-child on the heavens bestow'd:

Wherefore she does (and swears she'll never stin¹)

Make raging battery upon shores of flint.²

No visor does become black villainy.

So well as soft and tender flattery.

Let Pericles believe his daughter's dead,

And bear his courses to be ordered

By lady fortune; while our scene must play

His daughter's woe and heavy well-a-day,

In her unholy service. Patience then,

And think you now are all in Mitylen [Exu]

SCENE V.—Mitylene. A Street before the Brothel.

Enter from the Brothel, two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Did you ever hear the like?

2 Gent. No; nor never shall do in such a place as this, she being once gone.

1 Gent. But to have divinity preach'd there, did you ever dream of such a thing?

2 Gent. No, no. Come, I am for no more bawdy-houses. Shall we go hear the vestals sing?

1 Gent. I'll do any thing now that is virtuous; but I am out of the road of rutting for ever. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI.—The Same. A Room in the Brothel.

Enter Pander, Bawd, and BOULT.

Pand. Well, I had rather than twice the worth of her. she had ne'er come there.

Bawd. Fie, fie upon her! she is able to freeze the god Priapus, and undo a whole generation: we must either get her ravished, or be rid of her. When she should do for clients her fitment, and do me the kindness of our profession, she has me her quirks, her reasons, her master reasons, her prayers, her knees, that she would make a puritan of the devil, if he should cheapen a kiss of her.

Boult. Faith, I must ravish her, or she'll disfigure us of all our cavaliers, and make all our swearers priests.

Pand. Now, the pox upon her green-sickness for me!

Bawd. 'Faith, there's no way to be rid on't, but by the way to the pox. Here comes the lord Lysimachus, disguised.

Boult. We should have both lord and lowly, if the peevish baggage would but give way to customers.

Enter LYSIMACHUS.

Lys. How now! How a dozen of virginities?

Bawd. Now, the gods to-bless your honour!

Boult. I am glad to see your honour in good health.

Lys. You may say: 't is the better for you that your resorters stand upon sound legs. How now, wholesome iniquity! have you that a man may deal withal, and defy the surgeon?

Bawd. We have here one, sir, if she would—but there never came her like in Mitylene.

Lys. If she'd do the deeds of darkness, thou wouldst say.

Bawd. Your honour knows what 't is to say, well enough.

Lys. Well; call forth, call forth.

Boult. For flesh and blood, sir, white and red, you shall see a rose; and she were a rose indeed, if she had but—

Lys. What, pr'ythee?

Boult. O, sir! I can be modest.

Lys. That dignifies the renown of a bawd, no less than it gives a good report to a number to be chaste.

Enter MARINA.

Bawd. Here comes that which grows to the stalk;—never pluck'd yet, I can assure you.—Is she not a fair creature?

Lys. Faith, she would serve after a long voyage at sea. Well, there's for you: leave us.

Bawd. I beseech your honour, give me leave: a word and I'll have done presently.

Lys. I beseech you, do.

Bawd. First, I would have you note, this is an honourable man. [To MARINA.]

Mar. I desire to find him so, that I may worthily note him.

Bawd. Next, he's the governor of this country and a man whom I am bound to.

Mar. If he govern the country, you are bound to him indeed; but how honourable he is in that, I know not.

Bawd. 'Pray you, without any more virginal fencing, will you use him kindly? He will line your apron with gold.

Mar. What he will do graciously, I will thankfully receive.

Lys. Have you done?

Bawd. My lord, she's not paced yet; you must take some pains to work her to your manage.—Come, we will leave his honour and her together. Go thy ways [Exeunt Bawd, Pander, and BOULT.]

Lys. Now, pretty one, how long have you been at this trade?

Mar. What trade, sir?

Lys. Why, I cannot name but I shall offend.

Mar. I cannot be offended with my trade. Please you to name it.

Lys. How long have you been of this profession?

Mar. Ever since I can remember.

Lys. Did you go to it so young? Were you a gamester at five, or at seven?

Mar. Earlier too, sir, if now I be one.

Lys. Why, the house you dwell in proclaims you to be a creature of sale.

Mar. Do you know this house to be a place of such resort, and will come into it? I hear say, you are of honourable parts, and are the governor of this place.

Lys. Why, hath your principal made known unto you who I am?

Mar. Who is my principal?

Lys. Why, your herb-woman; she that sets seed and roots of shame and iniquity. O! you have heard something of my power, and so stand aloof for more serious wooing. But I protest to thee, pretty one, my authority shall not see thee, or else, look friendly upon thee. Come, bring me to some private place: come, come.

Mar. If you were born to honour, show it now;

If put upon you, make the judgment good

That thought you worthy of it.

Lys. How's this? how's this?—Some more, —be sage.

Mar. For me,

That am a maid, though most ungente fortune
Hath plac'd me in this sty, where, since I came,
Diseases have been sold dearer than physic,—
That the gods

Would set me free from this unhallow'd place,
Though they did change me to the meanest bird
That flies i' the purer air!

Lys. I did not think

Thou couldst have spoke so well; ne'er dream'd thou couldst.

Had I brought hither a corrupted mind,
Thy speech had alter'd it. Hold, here's gold for thee
Persevere in that clear way thou goest,
And the gods strengthen thee.

Mar. The gods preserve you!

Lys. For me, be you thoughten

That I came with no ill intent; for to me
The very doors and windows savour vilely.

Farewell. Thou art a piece of virtue, and
I doubt not but thy training hath been noble.

Hold, here's more gold for thee.

A curse upon him, die he like a thief,
That robs thee of thy goodness! If thou dost hear
From me, it shall be for thy good.

Enter BOULT.

Boult. I beseech your honour, one piece for me

Lys. Avaunt, thou damned door-keeper! Your house, But for this virgin that doth prop it, would Sink, and overwhelm you. Away!

[Exit LYSIMACHUS.]

Boult. How's this? We must take another course with you. If your peevish chastity, which is not worth a breakfast in the cheapest country under the cope,¹ shal² undo a whole household, let me be gelded like a spaniel. Come your ways.

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Boult. I must have your maidenhead taken off, or the common hangman shall execute it. Come your way. We'll have no more gentlemen driven away. Come your ways, I say.

Re-enter Bawd.

Bawd. How now! what's the matter?

Boult. Worse and worse, mistress: she has here sp³oken holy words to the lord Lysimachus.

Bawd. O, abominable!

Boult. She makes our profession as it were to stink afore the face of the gods.

Bawd. Marry, hang her up for ever!

Boult. The nobleman would have dealt with her like a nobleman, and she sent him away as cold as a snow-ball; saying his prayers, too.

Bawd. Boult, take her away; use her at thy pleasure: crack the glass of her virginity, and make the rest malleable.

Boult. An if she were a thornier piece of ground than she is, she shall be ploughed.

Mar. Hark, hark, you gods!

Bawd. She conjures: away with her. Would she had never come within my doors.—Marry, hang you!—She's born to undo us.—Will you not go the way of women-kind? Marry come up, my dish of chastity with rosemary and bays!

[Exit Bawd.]

Boult. Come, mistress; come your way with me.

Mar. Whither wilt thou have me?

Boult. To take from you the jewel you hold so dear.

Mar. Prythee, tell me one thing first.

Boult. Come now, your one thing.

Mar. What canst thou wish thine enemy to be?

Boult. Why, I could wish him to be my master; or rather, my mistress.

Mar. Neither of these are so bad as thou art, Since they do better thee in their command. Thou hold'st a place, for which the pained'st fiend Of hell would not in reputation change: Thou'rt the damn'd door-keeper to every coystrel³ That hither comes inquiring for his Tib; To the cholerick fisting of each rogue thy ear Is liable; thy food is such

As hath been beleh'd on by infected lungs.

Boult. What would you have me do? go to the wars would you? where a man may serve seven years for the loss of a leg, and have not money enough in the end to buy him a wooden one?

Mar. Do any thing but this thou dost. Empty Old receptacles, or common sewers, of filth; Serve by indenture to the common hangman: Any of these ways are yet better than this; For what thou professest, a baboon, could he speak, Would own a name too dear. That the gods Would safely deliver me from this place! Here, here's gold for thee.

If that thy master would gain by me, Proclaim that I can sing, weave, sew, and dance, With other virtues, which I'll keep from boast; And I will undertake all these to teach.

I doubt not but this populous city will Yield many scholars.

Boult. But can you teach all this you speak of?

Mar. Prove that I cannot, take me home again, And prostitute me to the basest groom That doth frequent your house.

Boult. Well, I will see what I can do for thee: if I can place thee, I will.

Mar. But, amongst honest women?

Boult. Faith, my acquaintance lies little amongst them. But since my master and mistress have bought you, there's no going but by their consent; therefore, I will make them acquainted with your purpose, and I doubt not but I shall find them tractable enough. Come; I'll do for thee what I can: come your ways.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Marina thus the brothel scapes, and chanches into an honest house, our story says.

She sings like one immortal, and she dances,

As goddess-like, to her admired lays.

Deep clerks she dumbs, and with her needle composes

Nature's own shape, of bud, bird, branch, or berry,

That even her art sisters the natural roses;

Her niple,¹ silk, twin with the rubied cherry:

That pupils lacks she none of noble race,

Who pour their bounty on her; and her gain

She gives the curs'd bawd. Here we her place,

And to her father turn our thoughts again.

Where we left him on the sea, tumbled and tost;

And, driven before the winds, he is arriv'd

Here where his daughter dwells: and on this coast

Suppose him now at anchor. The city striv'd

God Neptune's annual feast to keep: from whence

Lysimachus our Tyrian ship espies.

His banners sable, trimm'd with rich expense:

And to him in his barge with fervour hies.

In your supposing once more put your sight;

Of heavy Pericles think this the bark:

Where, what is done in action, more, if might,

Shall be discover'd; please you, sit, and hark. [Exi.]

SCENE I.—On board PERICLES' Ship, off Mitylene.

A Pavilion on deck, with a Curtain before it; PERICLES within it, reclining on a Couch. A Barge lying beside the Tyrian Vessel.

Enter Two Sailors, one belonging to the Tyrian Vessel, the other to the Barge; to them HELICANUS

Tyr. Sail. Where's the lord Helicanus? he can resolve you. [To the Sailor of Mitylene]

O here he is.—

Sir, there's a barge put off from Mitylene,

And in it is Lysimachus, the governor,

Who craves to come aboard. What is your will?

Hel. That he have his. Call up some gentlemen

Tyr. Sail. Ho, gentlemen! my lord calls.

Enter Two or Three Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Doth your lordship call?

Hel. Gentlemen,
There is some of worth would come aboard: I pray
Greet them fairly.

[Gentlemen and Sailors descend, and go on board the Barge.]

Enter, from thence, LYSIMACHUS and Lords; the Tyrian Gentlemen, and the Two Sailors.

Tyr. Sail. Sir,
This is the man that can in aught you would Resolve you.

Lys. Hail, reverend sir! The gods preserve you!

Hel. And you, sir, to outlive the age I am,
And die as I would do.

Lys. Sir, You wish me well.
Being on shore, honouring of Neptune's triumphs,
Seeing this goodly vessel ride before us,
I made to it to know of whence you are.

Hel. First, what is your place?

Lys. I am the governor of this place you lie before.

Hel. Sir,
Our vessel is of Tyre, in it the king;
A man, who for this three months hath not spoken
To any one, nor taken sustenance,
But to prorogue his grief.

Lys. Upon what ground is his distemperature?

Hel. It would be too tedious to repeat;
But the main grief of all springs from the loss
Of a beloved daughter and a wife.

Lys. May we not see him, then?

Hel. You may,
But bootless is your sight; he will not speak
To any.

Lys. Yet, let me obtain my wish.

Hel. Behold him. [PERICLES discovered.] This was a goodly person,
Till the disaster that one mortal night
Drove him to this.

Lys. Sir king, all hail! the gods preserve you!
Hail, royal sir!

Hel. It is in vain; he will not speak to you.

1 Lord. Sir, we have a maid in Mitylene, I durst wager,
Would win some words of him.

Lys. 'T is well bethought.
She, questionless, with her sweet harmony,
And other choice attractions, would allure,
And make a battery through his deafen'd parts,
Which now are midway stopp'd:
She is all happy as the fair'st of all,
And with her fellow maids is now upon
The leafy shelter that abuts against
The island's side.

[He whispers one of the attendant Lords.—Exit Lord.]
Hel. Sure, all effectless; yet nothing we'll omit,
That bears recovery's name.

But, since your kindness we have stretch'd thus far,
Let us beseech you,
That for our gold we may provision have,
Wherein we are not destitute for want,
But weary for the staleness.

Lys. O, sir! a courtesy,
Which, if we should deny, the most just God
For every graft would send a caterpillar,
And so afflict¹ our province.—Yet once more
Let me entreat to know at large the cause
Of your king's sorrow.

Hel. Sit, sir, I will recount it to you.—

But see, I am prevented.

Enter Lord, MARINA, and a young Lady.

Lys. O! here is
The lady that I sent for. Welcome, fair one!
Is't not a goodly presence?

Hel. She's a gallant lady.

Lys. She's such a one, that were I well assur'd she came

Of gentle kind, and noble stock, I'd wish
No better choice, and think me rarely wed.—
Fair one, all goodness that consists in bounty
Expect even here, where is a kingly patient:
If that thy prosperous and artificial feat
Can draw him but to answer thee in aught,
Thy sacred physic shall receive such pay
As thy desires can wish.

Mar. Sir, I will use
My utmost skill in his recovery,
Provided none but I and my companion
Be suffer'd to come near him.

Lys. Come, let us leave her;
And the gods make her prosperous! [MARINA sings]

Lys. Mark'd he your music?

Mar. No, nor look'd on us
Lys. See, she will speak to him.

Mar. Hail, sir! my lord, lend ear.—

Per. Hum! ha!

Mar. I am a maid,
My lord, that ne'er before invited eyes,
But have been gaz'd on like a comet: she speaks,
My lord, that may be, hath endur'd a grief
Might equal yours, if both were justly weigh'd.
Though wayward fortune did malign my state,
My derivation was from ancestors
Who stood equivalent with mighty kings;
But time hath rooted out my parentage,
And to the world and awkward casualties
Bound me in servitude.—I will desist;
But there is something glows upon my cheek,
And whispers in mine ear, "Go not till he speak."
Per. My fortunes—parentage—good parentage—
To equal mine!—was it not thus? what say you?
Mar. I said, my lord, if you did know my parentage,
You would not do me violence.

Per. I do think so.
I pray you, turn your eyes again upon me.—
You are like something that—What countrywoman?
Here of these shores?

Mar. No, nor of any shores;
Yet I was mortally brought forth, and am
No other than I appear.

Per. I am great with woe, and shall deliver weeping.
My dearest wife was like this maid, and such a one
My daughter might have been: my queen's square
brows;

Her stature to an inch; as wand-like straight;
As silver-voic'd; her eyes as jewel-like,
And eas'd as richly: in pace another Juno;
Who starves the ears she feeds, and makes them hungry
The more she gives them speech.—Where do you live?

Mar. Where I am but a stranger: from the deck
You may discern the place.

Per. Where were you bred?
And how achiev'd you these endowments, which
You make more rich to owe?

Mar. Should I tell my history
'T would seem like lies, disdain'd in the reporting

Per. Pr'ythee, speak:
Falseness cannot come from thee, for thou look'st

Mo lest as justice, and thou seem'st a palace
For the crown'd truth to dwell in. I'll believe thee,
And make my senses credit thy relation
To points that seem impossible; for thou look'st
Like one I lov'd indeed. What were thy friends?
Didst thou not say, when I did push thee back,
(Which was when I perceiv'd thee) that thou cam'st
From good descending?

Mar. So indeed I did.

Per. Report thy parentage. I think thou saidst
Thou hadst been toss'd from wrong to injury,
And that thou thought'st thy griefs might equal mine,
If both were open'd.

Mar. Some such thing
I said, and said no more but what my thoughts
Did warrant me was likely.

Per. Tell thy story;
If thine consider'd prove the thousandth part
Of my endurance, thou art a man, and I
Have suffer'd like a girl: yet thou dost look
Like Patience, gazing on kings' graves, and smiling
Extremity out of act. What were thy friends?
How lost thou them? Thy name, my most kind virgin?
Recount, I do beseech thee. Come, sit by me.

Mar. My name is Marina.

Per. O! I am mock'd,
And thou by some incensed god sent hither
To make the world to laugh at me.

Mar. Patience, good sir,
Or here I'll cease.

Per. Nay, I'll be patient.
Thou little know'st how thou dost startle me,
To call thyself Marina.

Mar. The name
Was given me by one that had some power;
My father, and a king.

Per. How! a king's daughter?
And call'd Marina?

Mar. You said you would believe me;
But, not to be a troubler of your peace,
I will end here.

Per. But are you flesh and blood?
Have you a working pulse? and are no fairy
Motion?—Well: speak on. Where were you born,
And wherefore call'd Marina?

Mar. Call'd Marina,
For I was born at sea.

Per. At sea! what mother?

Mar. My mother was the daughter of a king;
Who died the minute I was born.
As my good nurse Lychorida hath oft
Deliver'd weeping.

Per. O! stop there a little.
This is the rarest dream that e'er dull'd sleep
Did mock sad fools withal: this cannot be.
My daughter's buried.—Well:—where were you bred?
I'll hear you more, to the bottom of your story,
And never interrupt you.

Mar. You scorn: believe me, 't were best I did give
Per. I will believe you by the syllable [o'er.
Of what you shall deliver. Yet, give me leave:
How came you in these parts? where were you bred?

Mar. The king, my father, did in Tharsus leave me.
Till cruel Cleon, with his wicked wife,
Did seek to murder me; and having wou'd
A villain to attempt it, who having drawn to do 't,
A crew of pirates came and rescued me;
Brought me to Mitylene. But, good sir,
Whither will you have me? Why do you weep? It may be,

You think me an impostor: no, good faith,
I am the daughter to king Pericles,
If good king Pericles be.

Per. Ho, Helicanus!

Hel.

Calls my gracious lord?

Per. Thou art a grave and noble counsellor,
Most wise in general: tell me, if thou canst,
What this maid is, or what is like to be,
That thus hath made me weep?

Hel.

I know not. but

Here is the regent, sir, of Mitylene,
Speaks nobly of her.

Lys.

She would never tell

Her parentage; being demanded that,
She would sit still and weep.

Per. O Helicanus! strike me, honour'd sir;
Give me a gash, put me to present pain,
Lest this great sea of joys rushing upon me,
O'erbear the shores of my mortality,
And drown me with their sweetness. O! come
hither,

Thou that beget'st him that did thee beget;
Thou that wast born at sea, buried at Tharsus,
And found at sea again.—O Helicanus!

Down on thy knees, thank the holy gods as loud

As thunder threatens us: this is Marina!

What was thy mother's name? tell me but that,
For truth can never be confirm'd enough,
Though doubts did ever sleep.

Mar.

First, sir, I pray,

What is your title?

Per. I am Pericles of Tyre: but tell me, now,
My drown'd queen's name, (as in the rest you said
Thou hast been godlike perfect) the heir of kingdoms,
And another like to Pericles thy father.

Mar. Is it no more to be your daughter, than
To say, my mother's name was Thaisa?
Thaisa was my mother, who did end
The minute I began.

Per. Now, blessing on thee! rise; thou art my child.

Give me fresh garments! Mine own, Helicanus.
She is not dead at Tharsus, as she should have been,
By savage Cleon: she shall tell thee all;
When thou shalt kneel and justify in knowledge,
She is thy very princess.—Who is this?

Hel. Sir, 't is the governor of Mitylene,
Who, hearing of your melancholy state,
Did come to see you.

Per.

I embrace you,

Give me my robes! I am wild in my beholding.
O heavens, bless my girl! But hark! what music?—
Tell Helicanus, my Marina, tell him
O'er, point by point, for yet he seems to doubt,
How sure you are my daughter.—But what music?

Hel. My lord I hear none.

Per. None?

The music of the spheres! list, my Marina.

Lys. It is not good to cross him: give him way.

Per. Rarest sounds! Do ye not hear?

Lys. Music? My lord, I hear—

Per.

Most heavenly music:

It nips me unto list'ning, and thick slumber
Hangs upon mine eyes: let me rest. [He sleeps

Lys. A pillow for his head.

[The Curtain before the Pavilion of PERICLES is closed
So, leave him all.—Well, my companion-friends,
If this but answer to my just belief,
I'll well remember you.

[Exit LYSIMACHUS, HELICANUS, MARINA, and Lady

SCENE II.—The Same.

PERICLES on the Deck asleep; DIANA appearing to him in a vision.

Dia. My temple stands in Ephesus: hie thee thither, And do upon mine altar sacrifice.

There, when my maiden priests are met together, Before the people all,

Reveal how thou at sea didst lose thy wife:

To mourn thy crosses, with thy daughter's, call,

And give them repetition to the life.

Or perform my bidding, or thou liv'st in woe:

Do't, and be' happy, by my silver bow.

Awake, and tell thy dream. [DIANA disappears.]

Per. Celestial Dian, goddess argentine,

I will obey thee.—Helicanus!

Enter LYSIMACHUS, HELICANUS, and MARINA.

Hel. Sir.

Per. My purpose was for Tharsus, there to strike

The inhospitable Cleon; but I am

For other service first: toward Ephesus

Turn our blown sails; eftsoons I'll tell thee why.—

Shall we refresh us, sir, upon your shore,

And give you gold for such provision

As our intents will need?

Lys. Sir, with all my heart, and when you come ashore,

I have another suit.

Per. You shall prevail, Were it to woo my daughter; for, it seems, You have been noble towards her.

Lys. Sir, lend your arm.

Per. Come, my Marina. [Exeunt.]

Enter GOWER, before the Temple of DIANA at Ephesus.

Gow. Now our sands are almost run;

More a little, and then dumb.

This, as¹ my last boon, give me,

For such kindness most relieve me,

That you aptly will suppose

What pagantry, what feats, what shows,

What minstrelsy, and pretty din,

The regent made in Mitylene,

To greet the king. So he thriv'd,

That he is promis'd to be wiv'd

To fair Marina; but in no wise

Till he had done his sacrifice,

As Dian bade: whereto being bound,

The interim, pray you, all confound.

In feather'd briefness sails are fil'd,

And wishes fall out as they're will'd.

At Ephesus, the temple see,

Our king and all his company.

That he can hither come so soon,

Is by your fancy's thankful doom. [Exit.]

SCENE III.—The Temple of DIANA at Ephesus;

THAISA standing near the Altar, as high Priestess; a number of Virgins on each side: CERIMON and other Inhabitants of Ephesus attending

Enter PERICLES, with his Train; LYSIMACHUS, HELICANUS, MARINA, and a Lady.

Per. Hail Dian! to perform thy just command,

I here confess myself the king of Tyre;

Who, frighted from my country, did wed

At Pentapolis, the fair Thaisa.

At sea in childbed died she, but brought forth

A maid-child call'd Marina; who, O goddess!

Wears yet thy silver livery. She at Tharsus

Was nurs'd with Cleon, whom at fourteen years

He sought to murder, but her better stars

Brought her to Mitylene; against whose shore

Riding, her fortunes brought the maid aboard us,

Where, by her own most clear remembrance, she

Made known herself my daughter.

Thai. Voice and favour! —

You are, you are—O royal Pericles! — [She faints.]

Per. What means the woman? she dies; help, gentlemen!

Cer. Noble sir,

If you have told Diana's altar true,

This is your wife.

Per. Reverend appearer, no.

I threw her overboard with these very arms

Cer. Upon this coast, I warrant you.

Per. 'T is most certain.

Cer. Look to the lady.—O! she's but o'erjoy'd.

Early in blust'ring morn this lady was Thrown on this shore. I op'd the coffin,

Found there rich jewels; recover'd her, and plac'd her

Here, in Diana's temple.

Per. May we see them?

Cer. Great sir, they shall be brought you to my house,

Whither I invite you. Look! Thaisa is recover'd

Thai. O! let me look.

If he be none of mine, my sanctity

Will to my sense bend no licentious ear,

But curb it, spite of seeing. O, my lord!

Are you not Pericles? Like him you speak,

Like him you are. Did you not name a tempest,

A birth, and death?

Per. The voice of dead Thaisa!

Thai. That Thaisa am I, supposed dead, and drown'd.

Per. Immortal Dian!

Thai. Now I know you better.—

When we with tears parted Pentapolis,

The king, my father, gave you such a ring.

[Shows a Ring.]

Per. This, this no more, you gods! your present kindness

Makes my past miseries sports: you shall do well.

That on the touching of her lips I may

Melt, and no more be seen. O! come, be buried

A second time within these arms.

Mar. My heart

Leaps to be gone into my mother's bosom.

[Kneels to THAISA.]

Per. Look, who kneels here. Flesh of thy flesh

Thaisa;

Thy burden at the sea, and call'd Marina,

For she was yielded there.

Thai. Bless'd, and mine own!

Hel. Hail, madam, and my queen!

Thai. I know you not.

Per. You have heard me say, when I did fly from Tyre,

I left behind an ancient substitute:

Can you remember what I call'd the man?

I have nam'd him oft.

Thai. 'T was Helicanus, then.

Per. Still confirmation!

Embrace him, dear Thaisa; this is he.

Now do I long to hear how you were found,

How possibly preserv'd, and whom to thank

Besides the gods, for this great miracle.

Thai. Lord Cerimon, my lord; this man

Through whom the gods have shown their power, that can

From first to last resolve you.

Per. Reverend sir

The gods can have no mortal officer
More like a god than you. Will you deliver
How this dead queen re-lives?

Cer. I will, my lord
Beseech you, first go with me to my house,
Where shall be shown you all was found with her,
How she came placed here in the temple,
No needful thing omitted.

Per. Pure Dian! bless thee for thy vision,
I will offer night oblations to thee. Thaisa,
This prince, the fair-betrothed of your daughter,
Shall marry her at Pentapolis. And now,
This ornament,
Makes me look dismal, will I clip to form;
And what this fourteen years no razor touch'd,
To grace thy marriage-day, I'll beautify.

Thai. Lord Cerimon hath letters of good credit:
Sir, my father's dead.

Per. Heavens, make a star of him! Yet there, my
queen,

We'll celebrate their nuptials, and ourselves
Will in that kingdom spend our following days:
Our son and daughter shall in Tyrus reign.

Lord Cerimon, we do our longing stay,
To hear the rest untold.—Sir, lead's the way. [Exeunt]

Enter Gower.

Gow. In Antiochus, and his daughter, you have heard

Of monstrous lust the due and just reward:
In Pericles, his queen, and daughter, seen,
Although assail'd with fortune fierce and keen,
Virtue preserv'd from fell destruction's blast,
Led on by heaven, and crown'd with joy at last
In Helicanus may you well desery
A figure of truth, of faith, and loyalty:
In reverend Cerimon there well appears,
The worth that learned charity aye wears.
For wicked Cleon and his wife, when fame
Had spread their cursed deed, the honour'd name
Of Pericles, to rage the city turn;
That him and his they in his palace burn.
The gods for murder seem'd so content
To punish them;² although not done, but meant
So on your patience evermore attending,
New joy wait on you! Here our play has ending.

POEMS

VENUS AND ADONIS.

INTRODUCTION.

We are told by Shakespeare, in his dedication of this poem to the Earl of Southampton, in 1593, that it was "the first heir of his invention;" and as it was the earliest printed, so probably, it was the earliest written of his known productions. At what time it is likely that he commenced the composition of it, is a question which we have considered in the biography of the poet.

The popularity of it is indisputable: having been originally printed by Richard Field, in 1593, 4to., that edition seems to have been soon exhausted, and it was republished by the same printer in 1594, 4to., before 25th June, because on that day, according to the Stationers' Registers, he assigned over his interest in it to John Harrison, for whom Field printed an octavo impression in 1596. Field's second edition of 1594 was unknown to Malone and his contemporaries; and as it was not a re-issue of some remaining copies of 1593 with a new title-page, but a distinct re-impression, it affords some various readings, and not a few important confirmations of the correctness of the older text, corrupted more or less in all subsequent editions. Harrison published his second edition in 1600, which was the fourth time "Venus and Adonis" had been printed in seven years. It had been entered at Stationers' Hall by W. Leake, in 1596. After this date it went through the press many times, and copies in 1602, 1616, 1620, &c. are known: in 1627 it was printed by John Weittoun, at Edinburgh.

The popularity of "Venus and Adonis" is established also by the frequent mention of it in early writers. It is probable that Peele died in 1597, and very soon afterwards his "Merry Conceited Jest" must have been published, although no edition of them is known older than that of 1607. In one of these, a tapster, "much given to poetry," is represented as having in his possession "the Knight of the Sun, Venus and Adonis, and other pamphlets." Thomas Heywood's "Fair Maid of the Exchange," was printed in 1607, but written some few years before, and there a young lover is recommended to court his mistress by the aid of "Venus and Adonis." How long this reputation, and for the same purpose, was maintained, may be seen from a passage in Lewis Sharpe's "Noble Stranger," 1640, where Pupillus exclaims, "Oh, for the book of Venus and Adonis, to court my mistress by!" Thomas Cranley, in his "Amanda," 1635, makes "Venus and Adonis" part of the library of a courtesan:

"—amorous pamphlets, that best like thine eyes,
And songs of love, and sonnets exquisite;
Among these Venus and Adonis lies,
With Salmacis and her Hermaphrodite;
Pygmalion's there with his transform'd delight."

"Salmacis and her Hermaphrodite" refers to the poem imputed (perhaps falsely) to Beaumont, printed in 1604; and the third poem is "Pygmalion's Image," by Marston, published in 1598.

S. Nicholson, in his "Acolastus his Afterwitte," 1600, committed the most impudent plagiarisms from "Venus and Adonis;" and R. S., the author of "Phillis and Flora," 1593, did not scruple to copy, almost with verbal exactness, part of the description Shakespeare gives of the horse of Adonis: we extract the following lines, that the reader may be able to make a comparison (See p. 366):—

"His mayne thin hair'd, his neck high crested,
Small eare, short head, and burly breasted * * *
Strait legg'd, large thigh'd, and hollow hove'd,
All nature's skill in him was proved."

Our text of "Venus and Adonis," is that of the earliest quarto, 1593, which, for the time, is very correctly printed, and we will illustrate by a single quotation the importance of resorting to it: the line which there stands,

"He cheers the morn, and all the earth relieveth," is misprinted in all modern editions,

"He cheers the morn, and all the world relieveth."

The corruption was introduced in the quarto, 1594, and it has ever since been repeated. The same remark will apply to other changes; such as "all swoln with chasing," instead of "chaffing;" "to love's alarm," instead of "alarms;" "from morn to night," instead of "till night," &c.; all which show strange carelessness of collation, but it is not necessary here to dwell upon them, as they are pointed out in the notes.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE

HENRY WRIOTHESLY,
EARL OF SOUTHAMPTON, AND BARON OF TICHFIELD.

RIGHT HONOURABLE,

I know not how I shall offend in dedicating my unpolished lines to your lordship, nor how the world will censure me for choosing so strong a prop to support so weak a burden: only, if your honour seem but pleased, I account myself highly praised, and vow to take advantage of all idle hours, till I have honoured you with some graver labour. But if the first heir of my invention prove deformed, I shall be sorry it had so noble a god-father, and never after ear so barren a land, for fear it yield me still so bad a harvest. I leave it to your honourable survey, and your honour to your heart's content which I wish may always answer your own wish, and the world's hopeful expectation.

Your honour's in all duty,

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

EVEN as the sun with purple-colour'd face
Had ta'en his last leave of the weeping morn,
Rose-cheek'd Adonis hid him to the chase;
Hunting he lov'd, but love he laugh'd to scorn:
Sick-thoughted Venus makes amain unto him,
And like a bold-fac'd suitor 'gins to woo him.

Thrice fairer than myself, (thus she began)
The field's chief flower, sweet above compare,
Stain to all nymphs, more lovely than a man,
More white and red than doves or roses are;

Nature that made thee, with herself at strife,
Saith, that the world hath ending with thy life.

* The memorandum of it in the Stationers' Registers runs thus:—
"18 April 1593.

"Richard Field" Entered as his Copy, licensed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the Wardens, a book intitled Venus and Adonis."

* Malone adverts to Richard Barnfield's notice of "Venus and Adonis," and "Lucrece," in 1598, (reprinted in 1605; see Bridge-water Catalogue, 4to, 1837, p. 23) as well as to William Barksdale's allusion to it in 1607, in his "Myrrha the Mother of Adonis." To these may be added the praise of Shakespeare, and of his "Venus and Adonis," and "Lucrece," in the play of "The Return from Par-nassus," which was certainly produced before the death of Queen Elizabeth.

Vouchsafe, thou wonder, to alight thy steed,
And rein his proud head to the saddle-bow;
If thou wilt deign this favour, for thy meed
A thousand honey secrets shalt thou know:
Here come and sit, where never serpent kisses
And being set, I'll smother thee with kisses

And yet not cloy thy lips with leath'd satiety,
But rather famish them amid their plenty,
Making them red and pale with fresh variety;
Ten kisses short as one, one long as twenty:
A summer's day will seem an hour but short,
Being wasted in such time-beguiling sport.

With this she seizeth on his sweating palm,
The precedent of pith and livelihood,
And, trembling in her passion, calls it balm,
Earth's sovereign salve to do a goddess good:
Being so enrag'd, desire doth lend her force
Courageously to pluck him from his horse.

Over one arm the lusty courser's rein,
Under her other was the tender boy,
Who blush'd and pouted in a dull disdain,
With leaden appetite, unapt to toy;
She red and hot as coals of glowing fire,
He red for shame, but frosty in desire.

The studded bridle on a ragged bough
Nimble she fastens: (O, how quick is love!)
The steed is stalled up, and even now
To tie the rider she begins to prove:
Backward she push'd him, as she would be thrust,
And govern'd him in strength, though not in lust.

So soon was she along, as he was down,
Each leaning on their elbows and their hips:
Now doth she stroke his cheek, now doth he frown,
And 'gins to chide, but soon she stops his lips:
And kissing speaks, with lustful language broken,
If thou wilt chide, thy lips shall never open.

He burns with bashful shame, she with her tears
Doth quench the maiden burning of his cheeks;
Then with her windy sighs, and golden hairs,
To fan and blow them dry again she seeks:
He saith she is immodest, blames her 'miss:'
What follows more she murders² with a kiss.

Even as an empty eagle, sharp by fast,
Tires³ with her beak on feathers, flesh, and bone,
Shaking her wings, devouring all in haste,
Till either gorge be stuff'd, or prey be gone:
Even so she kiss'd his brow, his cheek, his chin,
And where she ends she doth anew begin.

For'd to content,⁴ but never to obey,
Panting he lies, and breatheth in her face;
She feedeth on the steam, as on a prey,
And calls it heavenly moisture, air of grace.
Wishing her cheeks were gardens full of flowers,
So they were dew'd with such distilling showers.

Look how a bird lies tangled in a net,
So fasten'd in her arms Adonis lies;
Pure shame and aw'd resistance made him fret,
Which bred more beauty in his angry eyes:
Rain added to a river that is rank,⁵
Perforce will force it overflow the bank.

Still she entreats, and prettily entreats,
For to a pretty ear she tunes her tale;
Still is he sullen, still he lowers and frets,
'Twixt crimson shame, and anger ashy-pale;
Being red, she loves him best; and being white,
Her best is better'd with a more delight.

Look how he can, she cannot choose but love;
And by her fair immortal hand she swears
From his soft bosom never to remove,
Till he take truce with her contending tears,
Which long have rain'd, making her cheeks all wet,
And one sweet kiss shall pay this countless debt.

Upon this promise did he raise his chin,
Like a dive-dapper⁶ peering through a wave,
Who being look'd on ducks as quickly in;
So offers he to give what she did crave,
But when her lips were ready for his pay,
He winks, and turns his lips another way.

Never did passenger in summer's heat,
More thirst for drink than she for this good turn.
Her help she sees, but help she cannot get;
She bathes in water, yet her fire must burn.
O, pity, 'gan she cry, flint-hearted boy!
'T is but a kiss I beg; why art thou coy?

I have been woo'd as I entreat thee now,
Even by the stern and dreadful god of war,
Whose sinewy neck in battle ne'er did bow,
Who conquers where he comes, in every jar;
Yet hath he been my captive and my slave,
And begg'd for that which thou unask'd shalt have.

Over my altars hath he hung his lance,
His batter'd shield, his uncontrolled crest,
And for my sake hath learn'd to sport and dance,
To toy,⁷ to wanton, dally, smile, and jest:
Scorning his churlish drum, and ensign red,
Making my arms his field, his tent my bed.

Thus he that over-rul'd, I oversway'd,
Leading him prisoner in a red rose chain:
Strong-temper'd steel his stronger strength obey'd,
Yet was he servile to my coy disdain.
O! be not proud, nor brag not of thy might,
For mastering her that foil'd the god of fight.

Touch but my lips with those fair lips of thine,
Though mine be not so fair, yet are they red,
The kiss shall be thine own as well as mine.
What seest thou in the ground? hold up thy head:
Look in mine eye-balls, there thy beauty lies:
Then, why not lips on lips, since eyes in eyes?

Art thou asham'd to kiss? then, wink again,
And I will wink: so shall the day seem night;
Love keeps his revels where there are but twain;
Be bold to play, our sport is not in sight:
These blue-vein'd violets whereon we lean,
Never can blab, nor know not what we mean.

The tender spring upon thy tempting lip
Shows thee unripe, yet may'st thou well be tasted
Make use of time, let not advantage slip;
Beauty within itself should not be wasted:
Fair flowers that are not gather'd in their prime
Rot and consume themselves in little time.

Were I hard-favour'd, foul, or wrinkled old,
 Ill-nurtur'd, crooked, churlish, harsh in voice,
 O'er-worn, despised, rheumatic, and cold,
 Thick-sighted, barren, lean, and lacking juice,
 Then mightst thou pause, for then I were not for thee;
 But having no defects, why dost abhor me?

Thou canst not see one wrinkle in my brow;
 Mine eyes are grey¹ and bright, and quick in turning:
 My beauty as the spring doth yearly grow,
 My flesh is soft and plump, my narrow burning:
 My smooth moist hand, were it with thy hand felt,
 Would in thy palm dissolve, or seem to melt.

Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear,
 Or like a fairy trip upon the green,
 Or like a nymph with long dishevelled hair,
 Dance on the sands, and yet no footing seen:
 Love is a spirit, all compact of fire,
 Not gross to sink, but light, and will aspire.

Witness this primrose bank whereon I lie;
 These forceless flowers like sturdy trees support me;
 Two strengthless doves will draw me through the sky,
 From morn till night, even where I list to sport me:
 Is love so light, sweet boy, and may it be
 That thou shouldst think it heavy unto thee?

Is thine own heart to thine own face affected?
 Can thy right hand seize love upon thy left?
 Then woo thyself, be of thyself rejected,
 Steal thine own freedom, and complain on theft.
 Narcissus so himself himself forsook,
 And died to kiss his shadow in the brook.

Torches are made to light, jewels to wear,
 Dainties to taste, fresh beauty for the use;
 Herbs for their smell, and sappy plants to bear;
 Things growing to themselves are growth's abuse:
 Seeds spring from seeds, and beauty breedeth beauty;
 Thou wast begot, to get it is thy duty.

Upon the earth's increase why shouldst thou feed,
 Unless the earth in thy increase be fed?
 By law of nature thou art bound to breed,
 That thine may live, when thou thyself art dead;
 And so in spite of death thou dost survive,
 In that thy likeness still is left alive.

By this, the love-sick queen began to sweat,
 For where they lay the shadow had forsook them,
 And Titan, 'tired in the mid-day heat,
 With burning eye did hotly overlook them;
 Wishing Adonis had his team to guide,
 So he were like him, and by Venus' side.

And now Adonis, with a lazy sprite,
 And with a heavy, dark, disliking eye,
 His lowering brows o'er-whelming his fair sight,
 Like misty vapours, when they blot the sky,
 Souring his cheeks, cries, Fie! no more of love:
 The sun doth burn my face; I must remove.

Ah me! (quoth Venus,) young, and so unkind?
 What bare excuses mak'st thou to be gone!
 I'll sigh celestial breath, whose gentle wind
 Shall cool the heat of this descending sun;
 I'll make a shadow for thee of my hairs;
 If they burn too, I'll quench them with my tears.

The sun that shines from heaven shines but warm.
 And lo! I lie between that sun and thee:
 The heat I have from thence doth little harm.
 Thine eye darts forth the fire that burneth me;
 And were I not immortal, life were done,
 Between this heavenly and earthly sun.

Art thou obdurate, flinty, hard as steel?
 Nay more than flint, for stone at rain relenteth;
 Art thou a woman's son, and canst not feel,
 What 't is to love? how want of love tormenteth?
 O! had thy mother borne so hard a mind,
 She had not brought forth thee, but died unkind.

What am I, that thou shouldst contemn me this?
 Or what great danger dwells upon my suit?
 What were thy lips the worse for one poor kiss?
 Speak fair; but speak fair words, or else be mute.
 Give me one kiss, I'll give it thee again,
 And one for interest, if thou wilt have twain.

Fie! lifeless picture, cold and senseless stone,
 Well-painted idol, image dull and dead,
 Statue, contenting but the eye alone,
 Thing like a man, but of no woman bred:
 Thou art no man, though of a man's complexion,
 For men will kiss even by their own direction.

This said, impatience chokes her pleading tongue,
 And swelling passion doth provoke a pause;
 Red cheeks and fiery eyes blaze forth her wrong:
 Being judge in love, she cannot right her cause:
 And now she weeps, and now she fain would speak,
 And now her sobs do her intendments break.

Sometimes she shakes her head, and then his hand,
 Now gazeth she on him, now on the ground;
 Sometimes her arms infold him like a band:
 She would, he will not in her arms be bound;
 And when from thence he struggles to be gone,
 She locks her lily fingers one in one.

Fondling, she saith, since I have hemm'd thee here,
 Within the circuit of this ivory pale,
 I'll be a park, and thou shalt be my deer;
 Feed where thou wilt, on mountain or in dale:
 Graze on my lips, and if those hills be dry,
 Stray lower, where the pleasant fountains lie.

Within this limit is relief enough,
 Sweet bottom-grass, and high delightful plain,
 Round rising hillocks, brakes obscure and rough,
 To shelter thee from tempest, and from rain:
 Then, be my deer, since I am such a park;
 No dog shall rouse thee, though a thousand bark.

At this Adonis smiles, as in disdain,
 That in each cheek appears a pretty dimple:
 Love made those hollows, if himself were slain,
 He might be buried in a tomb so simple;
 Fore-knowing well, if there he came to lie,
 Why, there Love liv'd, and there he could not die.

These lovely caves, the round enchanting pits,
 Open'd their mouths to swallow Venus' liking.
 Being mad before, how doth she now for wits?
 Struck dead at first, what needs a second striking?
 Poor queen of love, in thine own law forlorn,
 To love a cheek that smiles at thee in scorn!

¹ Blue eyes were sometimes called grey.

Now which way shall she turn? what shall she say?
 Her words are done, her woes the more increasing;
 The time is spent, her object will away,
 And from her twining arms doth urge releasing.
 Pity! she cries, some favour, some remorse!
 A way he springs, and hasteth to his horse!

But lo! from forth a copse that neighbours by,
 A breeding jennet, lusty, young, and proud,
 Adonis' trampling courser doth espy.
 And forth she rushes, snorts, and neighs aloud:
 The strong-neck'd steed, being tied unto a tree,
 Breaketh his rein, and to her straight goes he.

Imperiously he leaps, he neighs, he bounds,
 And now his woven girths he breaks asunder;
 The bearing earth with his hard hoof he wounds,
 Whose hollow womb resounds like heaven's thunder:
 The iron bit he crusheth 'tween his teeth,
 Controlling what he was controlled with.

His ears up prick'd, his braided hanging mane
 Upon his compass'd crest now stands on end;
 His nostrils drink the air, and forth again,
 As from a furnace, vapours doth he send:
 His eye, which scornfully glisters like fire,
 Shows his hot courage, and his high desire.

Sometime he trots, as if he told the steps
 With gentle majesty, and modest pride;
 Anon he rears upright, curvets and leaps,
 As who should say, lo! thus my strength is tried;
 And this I do, to captivate the eye
 Of the fair breeder that is standing by.

What reckoneth he his rider's angry stir,
 His flattering holla, or his "Stand, I say?"
 What cares he now for curbs, or pricking spur,
 For rich caparisons, or trapping gay?
 He sees his love, and nothing else he sees,
 For nothing else with his proud sight agrees.

Look, when a painter would surpass the life,
 In limning out a well-proportion'd steed,
 His art with nature's workmanship at strife,
 As if the dead the living should exceed;
 So did his horse excel a common one,
 In shape, in courage, colour, pace, and bone.

Round-hoof'd, short-jointed, the fetlocks shag and long,
 Broad breast, full eye, small head, and nostril wide,
 High crest, short ears, straight legs, and passing strong,
 Thin mane, thick tail, broad buttock, tender hide:
 Look, what a horse should have he did not lack,
 Save a proud rider on so proud a back.

Sometime he scuds far off, and there he stares;
 Anon he starts at stirring of a feather:
 To bid the wind a base! he now prepares,
 And wher he run, or fly, they know not whether;
 For through his mane and tail the high wind sings,
 Fanning the hairs, who wave like feather'd wings.

He looks upon his love, and neighs unto her;
 She answers him, as if she knew his mind:
 Being proud, as females are, to see him woo her,
 She puts on outward strangeness, seems unkind:
 Spurns at his love, and scorns the heat he feels,
 Beating his kind embraces with her heels.

Then, like a melancholy malcontent,
 He vails his tail, that, like a falling plume,
 Cool shadow to his melting buttock lent:
 He stamps, and bites the poor flies in his fume.
 His love, perceiving how he is enrag'd,
 Grew kinder, and his fury was assuag'd.

His testy master goeth about to take him,
 When lo! the unback'd breeder, full of fear,
 Jealous of catching, swiftly doth forsake him.
 With her the horse, and left Adonis there.
 As they were mad, unto the wood they hie them,
 Out-stripping crows that strive to over-fly them.

All swoln with chafing,² down Adonis sits,
 Banning his boisterous and unruly beast:
 And now the happy season once more fits,
 That love-sick love by pleading may be blest;
 For lovers say, the heart hath treble wrong,
 When it is barr'd the aidance of the tongue.

An oven that is stopp'd, or river stay'd,
 Burneth more hotly, swelleth with more rage:
 So of concealed sorrow may be said,
 Free vent of words love's fire doth assuage;
 But when the heart's attorney once is mute,
 The client breaks, as desperate in his suit.

He sees her coming, and begins to glow,
 Even as a dying coal revives with wind,
 And with his bonnet hides his angry brow;
 Looks on the dull earth with disturbed mind,
 Taking no notice that she is so nigh,
 For all askance he holds her in his eye.

O! what a sight it was, wistly to view
 How she came stealing to the wayward boy;
 To note the fighting conflict of her hue,
 How white and red each other did destroy:
 But now her cheek was pale, and by and by
 It flash'd forth fire, as lightning from the sky.

Now was she just before him as he sat,
 And like a lowly lover down she kneels;
 With one fair hand she heaveth up his hat,
 Her other tender hand his fair cheek feels:
 His tenderer cheek receives her soft hand's print,
 As apt as new-fall'n snow takes any dint.

O, what a war of looks was then between them!
 Her eyes, petitioners, to his eyes suing:
 His eyes saw her eyes as they had not seen them;
 Her eyes woo'd still, his eyes disdain'd the wooing
 And all this dumb play had his acts made plain
 With tears, which, chorus-like, her eyes did rain.

Full gently now she takes him by the hand,
 A lily prison'd in a jail of snow,
 Or ivory in an alabaster band;
 So white a friend engirts so white a foe:
 This beauteous combat, wilful and unwilling,
 Show'd like two silver doves that sit a billing.

Once more the engine of her thoughts began:
 O fairest mover on this mortal round,
 Would thou wert as I am, and I a man,
 My heart all whole as thine, thy heart my wound.
 For one sweet look thy help I would assure thee
 Though nothing but my body's bane would cure thee,

¹ A race, or game of prison-base, or prison-bars ² chafing: in ed 1600.

Give me my hand, saith he, why dost thou feel it ?
 Give me my heart, saith she, and thou shalt have it ;
 O ! give it me, lest thy hard heart do steel it ;
 And being steel'd, soft sighs can never grate it :
 Then, love's deep groans I never can regard,
 Because Adonis' heart hath made mine hard.

For shame ! he cries, let go, and let me go ;
 My day's delight is past, my horse is gone,
 And 't is your fault I am bereft him so :
 I pray you hence, and leave me here alone ;
 For all my mind, my thought, my busy care,
 Is how to get my palfrey from the mare.

Thus she replies : thy palfrey, as he should,
 Welcomes the warm approach of sweet desire :
 Affection is a coal that must be cool'd ;
 Else, suffer'd, it will set the heart on fire.
 The sea hath bounds, but deep desire hath none .
 Therefore, no marvel though thy horse be gone.

How like a jade he stood, tied to the tree,
 Servilely mastered with a leathern rein ;
 But when he saw his love, his youth's fair fee,
 He held such petty bondage in disdain ;
 Throwing the base thong from his bending crest,
 Enfranchising his mouth, his back, his breast.

Who sees his true-love in her naked bed,
 Teaching the sheets a whiter hue than white,
 But, when his glutton eye so full hath fed,
 His other agents aim at like delight ?
 Who is so faint, that dare not be so bold
 To touch the fire, the weather being cold ?

Let me excuse thy courser, gentle boy,
 And learn of him, I heartily beseech thee,
 To take advantage on presented joy ;
 Though I were dumb, yet his proceedings teach thee :
 O ! learn to love ; the lesson is but plain,
 And once made perfect, never lost again.

I know not love, quoth he, nor will not know it :
 Unless it be a boar, and then I chase it ;
 T is much to borrow, and I will not owe it ;
 My love to love is love but to disgrace it ;
 For I have heard it is a life in death,
 That laughs, and weeps, and all but with a breath.

Who wears a garment shapeless and unfinish'd ?
 Who plucks the bud before one leaf put forth ?
 If springing things be any jot diminish'd,
 They wither in their prime, prove nothing worth :
 The colt that 's back'd and burden'd being young,
 Loseth his pride, and never waxeth strong.

You hurt my hand with wringing , let us part,
 And leave this idle theme, this bootless chat :
 Remove your siege from my unyielding heart ,
 To love's alarms it will not ope the gate :
 Dismiss your vows, your feigned tears, your flattery,
 For where a heart is hard, they make no battery.

What ! canst thou talk ? (quoth she,) hast thou a tongue ?
 O, would thou hadst not, or I had no hearing !
 Thy mermaid's voice hath done me double wrong !
 I had my load before, now press'd with bearing :
 Melodious discord, heavenly tune harsh-sounding,
 Ear's deep sweet music, and heart's deep sore wounding.

Had I no eyes, but ears, my ears would love
 That inward beauty and invisible ;
 Or, were I deaf, thy outward parts would move
 Each part in me that that were but sensible :
 Though neither eyes nor ears, to hear nor see,
 Yet should I be in love by touching thee.

Say, that the sense of feeling were bereft me,
 And that I could not see, nor hear, nor touch,
 And nothing but the very smell were left me,
 Yet would my love to thee be still as much ;
 For from the stillitory of thy face excelling [ing
 Comes breath perfum'd, that breedeth love by smell.]

But O ! what banquet wert thou to the taste,
 Being nurse and feeder of the other four :
 Would they not wish the feast might ever last,
 And bid suspicion double lock the door,
 Lest jealousy, that sour unwelcome guest,
 Should by his stealing in disturb the feast ?

Once more the ruby-colour'd portal opened,
 Which to his speech did honey-passage yield ;
 Like a red morn, that ever yet betoken'd
 Wreck to the sea-man, tempest to the field,
 Sorrow to shepherds, woe unto the birds,
 Gusts and foul flaws to herdmen and to herds.

This ill presage advisedly she marketh :
 Even as the wind is hush'd before it raineth ;
 Or as the wolf doth grin before he barketh,
 Or as the berry breaks before it staineth ;
 Or like the deadly bullet of a gun,
 His meaning struck her ere his words begun.

And at his look she flatly falleth down,
 For looks kill love, and love by looks reviveth :
 A smile recures the wounding of a frown ;
 But blessed bankrupt that by love so thriveth !
 The silly boy, believing she is dead,
 Claps her pale cheek, till clapping makes it red .

And all amaz'd brake off his late intent,
 For sharply he did think to reprehend her,
 Which cunning love did wittily prevent :
 Fair fall the wit that can so well defend her !
 For on the grass she lies, as she were slain,
 Till his breath breatheth life in her again.

He wrings her nose, he strikes her on the cheeks,
 He bends her fingers, holds her pulses hard,
 He chafes her lips ; a thousand ways he seeks
 To mend the hurt that his unkindness marr'd :
 He kisses her ; and she, by her good will,
 Will never rise, so he will kiss her still.

The night of sorrow now is turn'd to day :
 Her two blue windows faintly she up-heaveth,
 Like the fair sun, when in his fresh array
 He cheers the morn, and all the earth¹ relieveth .
 And as the bright sun glorifies the sky,
 So is her face illumin'd with her eye ;

Whose beams upon his hairless face are fix'd,
 As if from thence they borrow'd all their shine.
 Were never four such lamps together mix'd,
 Had not his clouded with his brow's repine :
 But hers, which through the crystal tears gave light
 Shone like the moon in water seen by night.

O! where am I? quoth she, in earth or heaven,
Or in the ocean drench'd, or in the fire?
What hour is this? or morn or weary even?
Do I delight to die, or life desire?
But now I liv'd, and life was death's annoy;
But now I died, and death was lively joy.

O! thou didst kill me; kill me once again:
Thy eye's shrewd tutor, that hard heart of thine,
Hath taught them scornful tricks, and such disdain,
That they have murder'd this poor heart of mine;
And these mine eyes, true leaders to their queen,
But for thy piteous lips no more had seen.

Long may they kiss each other for this cure!
O! never let their crimson liveries wear,
And as they last, their verdure still endure,
To drive infection¹ from the dangerous year!
That the star-gazers, having writ on death,
May say, the plague is banish'd by thy breath.

Pure lips, sweet seals in my soft lips imprinted,
What bargains may I make, still to be sealing?
To sell myself I can be well contented,
So thou wilt buy, and pay, and use good dealing;
Which purchase if you make, for fear of slips
Set thy seal-manual on my wax-red lips.

A thousand kisses buys my heart from me,
And pay them at thy leisure, one by one.
What is ten hundred touches unto thee?
Are they not quickly told, and quickly gone?
Say, for non-payment that the debt should double,
Is twenty hundred kisses such a trouble?

Fair queen, quoth he, if any love you owe me,
Measure my strangeness with my unripe years:
Before I know myself, seek not to know me;
No fisher but the ungrown fry forbears:
The mellow plum doth fall, the green sticks fast,
Or being early pluck'd is sour to taste.

Look, the world's comforter, with weary gait,
His day's hot task hath ended in the west:
The owl, night's herald, shrieks, 't is very late;
The sheep are gone to fold, birds to their nest,
And coal-black clouds that shadow heaven's light,
Do summon us to part, and bid good night.

Now let me say good night; and so say you;
If you will say so, you shall have a kiss.
Good night, quoth she; and, ere he says adieu,
The honey-fee of parting tender'd is:
Her arms do lend his neck a sweet embrace;
Incorporate then they seem, face grows to face.

Till breathless he disjoin'd, and backward drew
The heavenly moisture, that sweet coral mouth,
Whose precious taste her thirsty lips well knew,
Whereon they surfeit, yet complain on drought:
He with her plenty press'd, she faint with dearth,
Their lips together glued, fall to the earth.

Now quick desire hath caught the yielding prey,
And glutton-like she feeds, yet never filleth;
Her lips are conquerors, his lips obey,
Paying what ransom the insulter willeth;
Whose venture thought doth pitch the price so high,
That she will draw his lips' rich treasure dry.

And having felt the sweetness of the spoil,
With blindfold fury she begins to forage;
Her face doth reek and smoke, her blood doth boil,
And careless lust stirs up a desperate courage;
Planting oblivion, beating reason back,
Forgetting shame's pure blush, and honour's wrack

Hot, faint, and weary, with her hard embracing,
Like a wild bird being tam'd with too much handling,
Or as the fleet-foot roe that's tir'd with chasing,
Or like the froward infant still'd with dandling,
He now obeys, and now no more resisteth,
While she takes all she can, not all she listeth.

What wax so frozen but dissolves with tempering,
And yields at last to every light impression?
Things out of hope are compass'd oft with venturing,
Chiefly in love, whose leave exceeds commission:
Affection faints not like a pale-fac'd coward,
But then woos best, when most his choice is froward

When he did frown, O! had she then gave over,
Such nectar from his lips she had not suck'd.
Foul words and frowns must not repel a lover;
What though the rose have prickles, yet 't is pluck'd:
Were beauty under twenty locks kept fast,
Yet love breaks through, and picks them all at last.

For pity now she can no more detain him;
The poor fool prays her that he may depart:
She is resolv'd no longer to restrain him,
Bids him farewell, and look well to her heart,
The which, by Cupid's bow she doth protest,
He carries thence incaged in his breast.

Sweet boy, she says, this night I'll waste in sorrow
For my sick heart commands mine eyes to watch.
Tell me, love's master, shall we meet to-morrow?
Say, shall we? shall we? wilt thou make the match?
He tells her, no; to-morrow he intends
To hunt the boar with certain of his friends.

The boar! (quoth she) whereat a sudden pale,
Like lawn being spread upon the blushing rose,
Usurps her cheek: she trembles at his tale,
And on his neck her yoking arms she throws;
She sinketh down, still hanging by his neck,
He on her belly falls, she on her back.

Now is she in the very lists of love,
Her champion mounted for the hot encounter:
All is imaginary she doth prove,
He will not manage her, although he mount her;
That worse than Tantalus¹ is her annoy,
To clip² Elysium, and to lack her joy.

Even as poor birds, deceiv'd with painted grapes,
Do surfeit by the eye, and pine the maw,
Even so she languisheth in her mishaps,
As those poor birds that helpless berries saw.
The warm effects which she in him finds missing
She seeks to kindle with continual kissing:

But all in vain; good queen, it will not be:
She hath assay'd as much as may be prov'd;
Her pleading hath deserv'd a greater fee:
She's love, she loves, and yet she is not lov'd.
Fie, fie! he says, you crush me; let me go:
You have no reason to withhold me so.

Thou hadst been gone, quoth she, sweet boy, ere this,
But that thou told'st me, thou wouldst hunt the boar.
O! be advis'd; thou know'st not what it is
With javelin's point a churlish swine to gore.
Whose tushes never-seaht'd he wheteth still,
Like to a mortal butcher, bent to kill.

On his bow-back he hath a battle set
Of bristly pikes, that ever threat his foes;
His eyes like glow-worms shine when he doth fret,
His snout digs sepulchres where'er he goes;
Being mov'd, he strikes whate'er is in his way,
And whom he strikes his cruel tushes slay.

His brawny sides, with hairy bristles armed,
Are better proof than thy spear's point can enter;
His short thick neck cannot be easily harmed;
Being ireful on the lion he will venture:
The thorny brambles and embracing bushes,
As fearful of him, part; through whom he rushes.

Alas! he nought esteems that face of thine,
To which love's eyes pay tributary gazes;
Nor thy soft hands, sweet lips, and crystal eyne,
Whose full perfection all the world amazes;
But having thee at vantage, (wondrous dread!)
Would root these beauties, as he roots the mead.

O! let him keep his loathsome cabin still;
Beauty hath nought to do with such foul fiends:
Come not within his danger! by thy will;
They that thrive well take counsel of their friends.
When thou didst name the boar, not to dissemble,
I fear'd thy fortune, and my joints did tremble.

Didst thou not mark my face? Was it not white?
Sw'ist thou not signs of fear lurk in mine eye?
Grew I not faint? and fell I not downright?
Within my bosom, whereon thou dost lie,
My bodiny heart pants, beats, and takes no rest,
But like an earthquake shakes thee on my breast.

For where love reigns, disturbing jealousy
Doth call himself affection's sentinel;
Gives false alarms, suggesteth mutiny,
And in a peaceful hour doth cry, "kill, kill;"
Distempering gentle love in his desire,
As air and water do abate the fire.

This sour informer, this bate²-breeding spy,
This canker that eats up love's tender spring,
This carry-tale, dissentious jealousy,
That sometime true news, sometime false doth bring,
Knocks at my heart, and whispers in mine ear,
That if I love thee, I thy death should fear:

And more than so, presenteth to mine eye
The picture of an angry chafing boar,
Under whose sharp fangs on his back doth lie
An image like thyself, all stain'd with gore;
Whose blood upon the fresh flowers being shed,
Doth make them droop with grief, and hang the head.

What should I do, seeing thee so indeed,
That tremble at th' imagination?
The thought of it doth make my faint heart bleed,
And fear doth teach it divination:
I prophesy thy death, my living sorrow,
If thou encounter with the boar to-morrow.

But if thou needs wilt hunt, be rul'd by me;
Uncouple at the timorous flying hare,
Or at the fox, which lives by subtlety,
Or at the roe, which no encounter dare:
Pursue these fearful creatures o'er the downs,
And on thy well-breath'd horse keep with thy hounds

And when thou hast on foot the purblind hare,
Mark the poor wretch, to overshut³ his troubles,
How he out-runs the wind, and with what care
He cranks⁴ and crosses with a thousand doubles:
The many musets⁵ through the which he goes,
Are like a labyrinth to amaze his foes.

Sometimes he runs among a flock of sheep,
To make the cunning hounds mistake their smell;
And sometime where earth-delving conies keep,
To stop the loud pursuers in their yell;
And sometime sorteth⁶ with a herd of deer.
Danger deviseth shifts; wit waits on fear:

For there his smell, with others being mingled,
The hot scent-snuffing hounds are driven to doubt,
Ceasing their clamorous cry, till they have singler
With much ado the cold fault cleanly out;
Then do they spend their mouths: echo replies,
As if another chase were in the skies.

By this, poor Wat, far off upon a hill,
Stands on his hinder legs with listening ear,
To harken if his foes pursue him still:
Among their loud alarums he doth hear;
And now his grief may be compared well
To one sore sick, that hears the passing bell.

Then shalt thou see the dew-bedabbled wretch
Turn, and return, indenting with the way;
Each envious brier his weary legs doth scratch,
Each shadow makes him stop, each murmur stay
For misery is trodden on by many,
And being low, never reliev'd by any.

Lie quietly, and hear a little more;
Nay, do not struggle, for thou shalt not rise:
To make thee hate the hunting of the boar,
Unlike myself thou hear'st me moralize,
Applying this to that, and so to so;
For love can comment upon every woe.

Where did I leave?—No matter where, quoth he;
Leave me, and then the story aptly ends:
The night is spent. Why, what of that? quoth she
I am, quoth he, expected of my friends;
And now 't is dark, and going I shall fall.
In night, quoth she, desire sees best of all

But if thou fall, O! then imagine this,
The earth, in love with thee, thy footing trips,
And all is but to rob thee of a kiss.
Rich preys make true-men thieves; so do thy lips
Make modest Dian cloudy and forlorn,
Lest she should steal a kiss, and die forsworn.

Now, of this dark night I perceive the reason:
Cynthia for shame obscures her silver shine,
Till forging Nature be condemn'd of treason,
For stealing moulds from heaven that were divine,
Wherein she fram'd thee, in high heaven's despite,
To shame the sun by day, and her by night.

¹ In his power. ² Contention. ³ Steevens reads: overshoot. ⁴ Winds. ⁵ The aperture in a hedge made by the hare in its frequent passage through it. ⁶ Consorteth.

And therefore hath she brib'd the Destinies,
To cross the curious workmanship of nature;
To mingle beauty with infirmities,
And pure perfection with impure defeature;
Making it subject to the tyranny
Of mad mischances, and much misery;

As burning fevers, agues pale and faint,
Life-poisoning pestilence, and frenzies wood;
The marrow-eating sickness, whose attaint
Disorder breeds by heating of the blood:
Surfeits, impostumes, grief, and damn'd despair,
Swear nature's death for framing thee so fair.

And not the least of all these maladies
But in one minute's fight brings beauty under:
Both favour, savour, hue, and qualities,
Whereat th' impartial gazer late did wonder.
Are on the sudden wasted, thaw'd, and done,
As mountain snow melts with the midday sun.

Therefore, despite of fruitless chastity,
Love-lacking vestals, and self-loving nuns,
That on the earth would breed a scarcity,
And barren dearth of daughters and of sons,
Be prodigal: the lamp that burns by night,
Dries up his oil to lend the world his light.

What is thy body but a swallowing grave,
Seeming to bury that posterity
Which by the rights of time thou needs must have,
If thou destroy them not in dark obscurity?
If so, the world will hold thee in disdain,
Sith in thy pride so fair a hope is slain.

So in thyself thyself art made away,
A mischief worse than civil home-bred strife,
Or theirs whose desperate hands themselves do slay,
Or butcher sire that reaves his son of life.
Foul cankering rust the hidden treasure frets,
But gold that's put to use more gold begets.

Nay then, quoth Adon, you will fall again
Into your idle over-handled theme:
The kiss I gave you is bestow'd in vain,
And all in vain you strive against the stream;
For by this black-fac'd night, desire's foul nurse,
Your treatise makes me like you worse and worse.

If love have lent you twenty thousand tongues,
And every tongue more moving than your own,
Bewitching like the wanton mermaid's songs,
Yet in mine ear the tempting tune is blown;
For know, my heart stands arined in mine ear,
And will not let a false sound enter there;

Least the deceiving harmony should run
Into the quiet closure of my breast,
And then my little heart were quite undone,
In his bedchamber to be barr'd of rest.
No, lady, no; my heart longs not to groan,
But soundly sleeps, while now it sleeps alone.

What have you urg'd that I cannot reprove?
The path is smooth that leadeth on to danger;
I hate not love, but your device in love,
That lends embraces unto every stranger.
You do it for increase: O strange excuse!
When reason is the bawd to lust's abuse

Call it not love, for love to heaven is fled,
Since sweating lust on earth usurp'd his name;
Under whose simple semblance he hath fed
Upon fresh beauty, blotting it with blame:
Which the hot tyrant stains, and soon bereaves,
As caterpillars do the tender leaves.

Love comforteth like sunshine after rain,
But lust's effect is tempest after sun;
Love's gentle spring doth always fresh remain,
Lust's winter comes ere summer half be done:
Love surfeits not, lust like a glutton dies;
Love is all truth, lust full of forged lies.

More I could tell, but more I dare not say;
The text is old, the orator too green.
Therefore, in sadness, now I will away;
My face is full of shame, my heart of teen:
Mine ears, that to your wanton talk attended,
Do burn themselves for having so offended.

With this he breaketh from the sweet embrace
Of those fair arms which bound him to her breast
And homeward through the dark lawn runs apace,
Leaves Love upon her back deeply distress'd.
Look, how a bright star shooteth from the sky,
So glides he in the night from Venus' eye;

Which after him she darts, as one on shore
Gazing upon a late-embarked friend,
Till the wild waves will have him seen no more,
Whose ridges with the meeting clouds contend:
So did the merciless and pitchy night
Fold in the object that did feed her sight.

Whereat amaz'd, as one that unaware
Hath dropp'd a precious jewel in the flood,
Or 'stonish'd as night wanderers often are,
Their light blown out in some mistrustful wood;
Even so confounded in the dark she lay,
Having lost the fair discovery of her way.

And now she beats her heart, whereat it groans,
That all the neighbour-caves, as seeming troubled,
Make verbal repetition of her moans:
Passion on passion deeply is redoubled.
Ah me! she cries, and twenty times, woe, woe!
And twenty echoes twenty times cry so.

She marking them, begins a wailing note,
And sings extemporally a woeful ditty;
How love makes young men thrall, and old men dote,
How love is wise in folly, foolish witty:
Her heavy anthem still concludes in woe,
And still the choir of echoes answer so.

Her song was tedious, and outwore the night,
For lovers' hours are long, though seeming short
If pleas'd themselves, others, they think, delight
In such like circumstance, with such like sport:
Their copious stories, oftentimes begun,
End without audience, and are never done.

For who hath she to spend the night withal,
But idle sounds resembling parasites;
Like shrill-tongu'd tapsters answering every call.
Soothing the humour of fantastic wits?
She says, 'tis so: they answer all, 'tis so;
And would say after her, if she said no.

Lo! here the gentle lark, weary of rest,
From his moist cabinet mounts up on high,
And wakes the morning, from whose silver breast
The sun ariseth in his majesty;
Who doth the world so graciously behold,
That cedar-tops and hills seem burnish'd gold.

Venus salutes him with this fair good-morrow.
O thou clear god, and patron of all light,
From whom each lamp and shining star doth borrow
The beauteous influence that makes him bright,
There lives a son that suck'd an earthly mother,
May lend thee light, as thou dost lend to other.

This said, she hasteth to a myrtle grove,
Musing the morning is so much o'er-worn;
And yet she hears no tidings of her love:
She hearkens, for his hounds, and for his horn:
Anon she hears them chaunt it lustily.
And all in haste she coasteth¹ to the cry.

And as she runs, the bushes in the way
Some catch her by the neck, some kiss her face,
Some twin'd about her thigh to make her stay.
She wildly breaketh from their strict embrace,
Like a milch doe, whose swelling dugs do ache,
Hasting to feed her fawn hid in some brake.

By this she hears the hounds are at a bay,
Whereat she starts, like one that spies an adder
Wreath'd up in fatal folds, just in his way,
The fear whereof doth make him shake and shudder:
Even so the timorous yelping of the hounds
Appals her senses, and her spirit confounds.

For now she knows it is no gentle chase,
But the blunt boar, rough bear, or lion proud,
Because the cry remaineth in one place,
Where fearfully the dogs exclaim aloud;
Finding their enemy to be so curst,
They all strain courtesy who shall cope him first.

This dismal cry rings sadly in her ear,
Through which it enters to surprise her heart;
Who, overcome by doubt and bloodless fear,
With cold-pale weakness numbs each feeling part:
Like soldiers, when their captain once doth yield,
They basely fly, and dare not stay the field.

Thus stands she in a trembling extasy,
Till cheering up her senses all² dismay'd,
She tells them, 't is a causeless fantasy,
And childish error that they are afraid;
Bids them leave quaking, bids them fear no more:
And with that word she spied the hunted boar;

Whose frothy mouth bepainted all with red,
Like milk and blood being mingled both together,
A second fear through all her sinews spread,
Which madly hurries her she knows not whither:
This way she runs, and now she will no further,
But back retires to rate the boar for murder.

A thousand spleens bear her a thousand ways;
She treads the path that she untreads again:
Her more than haste is mated with delays,³
Like the proceedings of a drunken brain;
Full of respect,⁴ yet nought at all respecting,
In hand with all things, nought at all affecting.

Here kennel'd in a brake she finds a hound,
And asks the weary caitiff for his master;
And there another licking of his wound,
'Gainst venom'd sores the only sovereign plaster;
And here she meets another sadly scowling,
To whom she speaks, and he replies with howling

When he hath ceas'd his ill-resounding noise,
Another flap-mouth'd mourner, black and grim,
Against the welkin vollieth out his voice;
Another and another answer him,
Clapping their proud tails to the ground below,
Shaking their scratch'd ears, bleeding as they go.

Look, how the world's poor people are amazed
At apparitions, signs, and prodigies,
Whereon with fearful eyes they long have gazed,
Infusing them with dreadful prophecies;
So she at these sad signs draws up her breath,
And, sighing it again, exclaims on death.

Hard-favour'd tyrant, ugly, meagre, lean,
Hateful divorce of love, (thus chides she death)
Grim grinning ghost, earth's worm, what dost thou mean
To stifle beauty, and to steal his breath,
Who when he liv'd, his breath and beauty set
Gloss on the rose, smell to the violet?

If he be dead.—O no! it cannot be,
Seeing his beauty, thou shouldst strike at it.
O yes! it may; thou hast no eyes to see,
But hatefully at random dost thou hit.
Thy mark is feeble age; but thy false dart
Mistakes that aim, and cleaves an infant's heart.

Hadst thou but bid beware, then he had spoke,
And hearing him thy power had lost his power.
The destinies will curse thee for this stroke;
They bid thee crop a weed, thou pluck'st a flower.
Love's golden arrow at him should have fled,
And not death's ebon dart, to strike him dead.

Dost thou drink tears, that thou provok'st such weeping?
What may a heavy groan advantage thee?
Why hast thou cast into eternal sleeping
Those eyes that taught all other eyes to see?
Now Nature cares not for thy mortal vigour,
Since her best work is ruin'd with thy rigour

Here overcome, as one full of despair,
She vail'd her eye-lids, who, like sluices, stopped
The crystal tide that from her two cheeks fair
In the sweet channel of her bosom dropped;
But through the flood-gates breaks the silver rain,
And with his strong course opens them again.

O, how her eyes and tears did lend and borrow!
Her eyes seen in the tears, tears in her eye;
Both crystals, where they view'd each other's sorrow
Sorrow that friendly sighs sought still to dry;
But like a stormy day, now wind, now rain,
Sighs dry her cheeks, tears make them wet again.

Variable passions throng her constant woe,
As striving who should best become her grief;
All entertain'd, each passion labours so,
That every present sorrow seemeth chief
But none is best; then, join they all together,
Like many clouds consulting for foul weather

By t'is far off she hears some huntsman hollow;
 A nurse's song ne'er pleas'd her babe so well:
 The dire imagination she did follow
 This sound of hope doth labour to expel;
 For now reviving joy bids her rejoice,
 And flatters her it is Adonis' voice.

Whereat her tears began to turn their tide,
 Being prison'd in her eye, like pearls in glass;
 Yet sometimes falls an orient drop beside,
 Which her cheek melts, as scorning it should pass
 To wash the foul face of the sluttish ground,
 Who is but drunken, when she seemeth drown'd.

O hard-believing love, how strange it seems
 Not to believe, and yet too credulous!
 Thy weal and woe are both of them extremes;
 Despair and hope make thee ridiculous:
 The one doth flatter thee in thoughts unlikely,
 In likely thoughts the other kills thee quickly.

Now she unweaves the web that she hath wrought;
 Adonis lives, and Death is not to blame:
 It was not she that call'd him all to nought;
 Now she adds honours to his hateful name:
 She clothes him king of graves, and grave for kings,
 Imperious supreme of all mortal things.

No, no, quoth she, sweet Death, I did but jest;
 Yet pardon me, I felt a kind of fear,
 When as I met the boar, that bloody beast,
 Which knows no pity, but is still severe;
 Then, gentle shadow, (truth I must confess)
 I rail'd on thee, fearing my love's decease.

'T is not my fault: the boar provok'd my tongue;
 He wreak'd on him, invisible commander;
 'T is he, foul creature, that hath done thee wrong;
 did but act, he's author of thy slander.
 Grief hath two tongues, and never woman yet
 Could rule them both, without ten women's wit.

Thus hoping that Adonis is alive,
 Her rash suspect she doth extenuate;
 And that his beauty may the better thrive,
 With death she humbly doth insinuate:
 Tells him of trophies, statues, tombs, and stories,
 His victories, his triumphs, and his glories.

O Jove! quoth she, how much a fool was I,
 To be of such a weak and silly mind,
 To wail his death, who lives, and must not die,
 Till mutual overthrow of mortal kind;
 For he being dead, with him is beauty slain,
 And, beauty dead, black chaos comes again.

Fie, fie, fond love! thou art so full of fear.
 As one with treasure laden, hemm'd with thieves:
 Trifles, unwitnessed with eye or ear.
 Thy coward heart with false bethinking grieves.
 Even at this word she hears a merry horn,
 Whereat she leaps that was but late forlorn.

As falcons¹ to the lure, away she flies:
 The grass stoops not, she treads on it so light;
 And in her haste unfortunately spies
 The foul boar's conquest on her fair delight:
 Which seen, her eyes, as murder'd with the view,
 Like stars ashamed of day, themselves withdrew.

Or, as the snail, whose tender horns being hit,
 Shrinks backward in his shelly cave with pain,
 And there all smother'd up in shade doth sit,
 Long after fearing to creep forth again:
 So, at his bloody view, her eyes are fled
 Into the deep-dark cabins of her head:

Where they resign their office and their light
 To the disposing of her troubled brain;
 Who bids them still consort with ugly night,
 And never wound the heart with looks again;
 Who, like a king perplexed in his throne,
 By their suggestion gives a deadly groan,

Whereat each tributary subject quakes;
 As when the wind, imprison'd in the ground,
 Struggling for passage, earth's foundation shakes,
 Which with cold terror doth men's minds confound.
 This mutiny each part doth so surprise,
 That from their dark beds once more leap her eyes

And, being open'd, threw unwilling light
 Upon the wide wound that the boar had trench'd
 In his soft flank; whose wonted lily white
 With purple tears, that his wound wept, was drench'd
 No flower was nigh, no grass, herb, leaf, or weed,
 But stole his blood, and seem'd with him to bleed

This solemn sympathy poor Venus noteth;
 Over one shoulder doth she hang her head,
 Dumbly she passions, frantically she doteth;
 She thinks he could not die, he is not dead:
 Her voice is stopp'd, her joints forget to bow,
 Her eyes are mad that they have wept till now.

Upon his hurt she looks so stedfastly,
 That her sight dazzling makes the wound seem three
 And then she reprehends her mangling eye,
 That makes more gashes where no breach should be:
 His face seems twain, each several limb is doubled
 For oft the eye mistakes, the brain being troubled.

My tongue cannot express my grief for one,
 And yet, quoth she, behold two Adons dead!
 My sighs are blown away, my salt tears gone,
 Mine eyes are turn'd to fire, my heart to lead:
 Heavy heart's lead, melt at mine eyes' red fire!
 So shall I die by drops of hot desire.

Alas, poor world, what treasure hast thou lost!
 What face remains alive that's worth the viewing?
 Whose tongue is music now? what canst thou boast
 Of things long since, or any thing ensuing?
 The flowers are sweet, their colours fresh and trim
 But true sweet beauty liv'd and died with him.

Bonnet nor veil henceforth no creature wear;
 Nor sun nor wind will ever strive to kiss you:
 Having no fair to lose, you need not fear;
 The sun doth scorn you, and the wind doth hiss you:
 But when Adonis liv'd, sun and sharp air
 Lurk'd like two thieves, to rob him of his fair:

And therefore would he put his bonnet on,
 Under whose brim the gaudy sun would peep,
 The wind would blow it off, and, being gone,
 Play with his locks: then, would Adonis weep,
 And straight in pity of his tender years,
 They both would strive who first should dry his tears,

To see his face, the lion walk'd along
Behind some hedge, because he would not fear' him;
To recreate himself when he hath sung,
The tiger would be tame, and gently hear him;
If he had spoke, the wolf would leave his prey,
And never fright the silly lamb that day.

When he beheld his shadow in the brook,
The fishes spread on it their golden gills:
When he was by, the birds such pleasure took,
That some would sing, some other in their bills
Would bring him mulberries, and ripe red cherries;
He fed them with his sight, they him with berries.

But this foul, grim, and urchin-snouted² boar,
Whose downward eye still looketh for a grave,
Ne'er saw the beauteous livery that he wore;
Witness the entertainment that he gave:
If he did see his face, why then, I know,
He thought to kiss him, and hath kill'd him so.

'T is true, 't is true: thus was Adonis slain.
He ran upon the boar with his sharp spear,
Who did³ not whet his teeth at him again,
But by a kiss thought to persuade him there;
And nuzzling in his flank, the loving swine
Sheath'd, unaware, the tusk in his soft groin.

Had I been tooth'd like him, I must confess,
With kissing him I should have kill'd him first:
But he is dead, and never did he bless
My youth with his, the more am I accurst.
With this she falleth in the place she stood,
And stains her face with his congealed blood.

She looks upon his lips, and they are pale;
She takes him by the hand, and that is cold;
She whispers in his ears a heavy tale,
As if they heard the woful words she told:
She lifts the coffer-lids that close his eyes,
Where lo! two lamps, burnt out, in darkness lies:

Two glasses, where herself herself beheld
A thousand times, and now no more reflect;
Their virtue lost, wherein they late excell'd,
And every beauty robb'd of his effect:
Wonder of time, quoth she, this is my spite,
That, thou⁴ being dead, the day should yet be light.

Since thou art dead, lo! here I prophesy,
Sorrow on love hereafter shall attend:
It shall be waited on with jealousy,
Find sweet beginning, but unsavoury end;
Ne'er settled equally, but high or low,
That all love's pleasure shall not match his woe.

It shall be fickle, false, and full of fraud;
Bud and be blasted in a breathing-while;
The bottom poison, and the top o'er-straw'd

With sweets, that shall the truest sight beguile:
The strongest body shall it make most weak,
Strike the wise dumb, and teach the fool to speak.

It shall be sparing, and too full of riot,
Teaching decrepit age to tread the measures;
The staring ruffian shall it keep in quiet,
Pluck down the rich, enrich the poor with treasures
It shall be raging mad, and silly mild,
Make the young old, the old become a child.

It shall suspect, where is no cause of fear;
It shall not fear, where it should most mistrust;
It shall be merciful, and too severe,
And most deceiving, when it seems most just;
Perverse it shall be, where it shows most toward;
Put fear to valour, courage to the coward.

It shall be cause of war, and dire events,
And set dissension 'twixt the son and sire;
Subject and servile to all discontents,
As dry combustious matter is to fire:
Sith in his prime death doth my love destroy,
They that love best, their loves shall not enjoy.

By this the boy, that by her side lay kill'd,
Was melted like a vapour from her sight,
And in his blood, that on the ground lay spill'd,
A purple flower sprung up, chequer'd with white;
Resembling well his pale cheeks, and the blood
Which in round drops upon their whiteness stood.

She bows her head the new-sprung flower to smell,
Comparing it to her Adonis' breath;
And says, within her bosom it shall dwell,
Since he himself is reft from her by death:
She crops the stalk, and in the breach appears
Green dropping sap, which she compares to tears.

Poor flower, quoth she, this was thy father's guise,
Sweet issue of a more sweet-smelling sire,
For every little grief to wet his eyes:
To grow unto himself was his desire,
And so 't is thine; but know, it is as good
To wither in my breast, as in his blood.

Here was thy father's bed, here in my breast;
Thou art the next of blood, and 't is thy right:
Lo! in this hollow cradle take thy rest,
My throbbing heart shall rock thee day and night
There shall not be one minute in an hour,
Wherein I will not kiss my sweet love's flower.

Thus weary of the world, away she hies,
And yokes her silver doves; by whose swift aid
Their mistress mounted through the empty skies
In her light chariot quickly is convey'd;
Holding their course to Paphos, where their queer
Means to immure herself and not be seen.

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE.

INTRODUCTION.

["Lucrece. London. Printed by Richard Field, for Iohn Harrison, and are to be sold at the signe of the white Greyhound in Paules Church-yard. 1594." 4to. 47 leaves.
"Lucrece At London, Printed by P. S. for Iohn Harrison. 1598." 8vo. 36 leaves.
"Lucrece London. Printed by I. H. for Iohn Harrison. 1600." 8vo. 36 leaves.
"Lucrece. At London, Printed be N. O. for Iohn Harison. 1607." 8vo. 32 leaves.]

"LUCRECE," as it is merely called in the earlier impressions, came out in the year following "Venus and Adonis," and it was printed for Iohn Harrison, the publisher of the edition of "Venus and Adonis," in 1596. It had been previously entered, under a more explanatory title, in the Stationers' Registers:

"9 May 1594.

"Mr. Harrison, sen.] A booke intituled the Ravyshement of Lucrece."

Like, "Venus and Adonis," it was dedicated to the Earl of Southampton, but in a more confident and assured spirit.

This second production was, probably, not quite so popular as the first, and it was not again printed until 1598, for the same book-seller, who put forth a third edition of it in 1600: the fourth edition was issued in 1607: these are not so marked, and Malone tells us that he had heard of impressions in 1596 and 1602, but they have not since come to light; and our belief is, that "Lucrece" was only printed four times between 1594 and 1607. An edition in 1616 purports to have been "newly revised and corrected;" but, as Malone truly states, "it is the most inaccurate and corrupt of the ancient copies;" and he adds that "most of the alterations seem to have been made, because the reviser did not understand the poet's meaning." That Shakespeare had nothing to do with the revision and correction of this edition requires no proof; and so little was it esteemed, that it was not followed in its changes in the edition of 1624, which also professes to have been "newly revised." This list is accompanied by marginal notes, prosaically explanatory of the incidents poetically narrated.

The earliest mention of "Lucrece" occurs in the year in which it made its first appearance. Michael Drayton published his "Matilda," (a poem in seven-line stanzas, like "Lucrece," in 1594, and there we meet with the following passage:—

"Lucrece, of whom proud Rome hath boasted long,
Late y revy'd to live another age,
And here arriv'd to tell of Tarquin's wrong,
Her chaste denial, and the tyrant's rage,
Acting her passion on our stately stage;
She is remember'd, all forgetting me,
Yet I as fair and chaste as ever was she."

A difficulty here may arise out of the fifth line, as if Drayton were referring to a play upon the story of Lucrece, and it is very possible that one was then in existence. Thomas Heywood's tragedy, "The Rape of Lucrece," did not appear in print until 1608, and he could hardly have been old enough to have been the author of such a drama in 1594; he may, nevertheless, have availed himself of an elder play, and, according to the practice of the time, he may have felt warranted in publishing it as his own. It is likely, however, that Drayton's expressions are not to be taken literally, and that his meaning merely was, that the story of Lucrece had lately been revived, and brought upon the stage of the world; if this opinion be correct, the stanza we have above quoted contains a clear allusion to Shakespeare's "Lucrece," and a question then presents itself, why Drayton entirely omitted it in the after-impression of his "Matilda." He was a poet who, as we have shown in the Introduction to "Julius Cæsar," was in the habit of making extensive alterations in his productions, as they were severally reprinted, and the suppression of this stanza may have proceeded from many other causes than repentance of the praise he had bestowed upon a rival.

The edition of "Lucrece" we have taken as our text is the first, which, like "Venus and Adonis," was printed by Richard Field, though not on his own account. It may be stated on the whole to be an extremely creditable specimen of his typography; as the sheets were going through the press, some material errors were, however, observed in them, and they are therefore in several places corrected. This fact has hitherto escaped remark, but the variations are explained in our notes.

Modern editors have performed their task without due care, but of their want of attention we shall only here adduce two specimens. In one of the speeches in which Lucrece endeavours to dissuade Tarquin from his purpose, she tells him,

"Thou back'st reproach against long-living laud."

Which every modern editor misprints,

"Thou back'st reproach against long-lived laud."

Our second proof is from a later portion of the poem, just after Collatine has returned home, and meets his dishonoured wife: the true text, speaking of Collatine and Lucretia, is,

"Both stood like old acquaintance in a trance
Met far from home, wondering each other's chance."

Malone, and all editors after him, make nonsense of the couplet, by printing,

"But stood like old acquaintance in a trance," &c.

depriving the verb of its nominative, and destroying the whole force of the figure. It would be easy to add other instances of the same kind, but we refer for them to our notes.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE

HENRY WRIOTHESLY,

EARL OF SOUTHAMPTON, AND BARON OF TICHFIELD.

THE love I dedicate to your lordship is without end; whereof this pamphlet, without beginning, is but a superfluous moiety. The warrant I have of your honourable disposition, not the worth of my untutored lines, makes it assured of acceptance. What I have done is yours; what I have to do is yours; being part in all I have, devoted yours. Were my worth greater, my duty would show greater; mean time, as it is, it is bound to your lordship, to whom I wish long life, still lengthen'd with all happiness.

Your lordship's in all duty,

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

THE ARGUMENT.

Lucius Tarquinius (for his excessive pride surnamed Superbus) after he had caused his own father-in-law, Servius Tullius, to be cruelly murdered, and, contrary to the Roman laws and customs, not requiring or staying for the people's suffrages, had possessed himself of the kingdom, went, accompanied with his sons and other noblemen of Rome, to besiege Ardea: during which siege, the principal men of the army meeting one evening at the tent of Sextus Tarquinius, the king's son, in their discourses after supper every one commended the virtues of his own wife; among whom Collatinus extolled the incomparable chastity of his wife Lucretia. In this pleasant humour they all posted to Rome; and intending by their secret and sudden arrival, to make trial of that which every one had before avouched, only Collatinus finds his wife (though it were late in the night) spinning amongst her maids: the other ladies were all found dancing and reveling, or in several disports; whereupon the noblemen yielded Collatinus the victory, and his wife the fame. At that time Sextus Tarquinius, being inflamed with Lucrece' beauty, yet smothering his passions for the present, departed with the rest back to the camp; from whence he shortly after privily withdrew himself, and was (according to his estate) royally entertained and lodged by Lucrece at Collatium. The same night he treacherously stole into her chamber, violently ravished her, and early in the morning speedeth away. Lucrece, in this lamentable plight, hastily dispatcheth messengers, one to Rome for her father, another to the camp for Collatine. They came, the one accompanied with Junius Brutus, the other with Publius Valerius; and finding Lucrece attired in mourning habit, demanded the cause of her sorrow. She, first taking an oath of them for her revenge, revealed the act, and whole manner of his dealing; and withal suddenly stabbed herself: which done, with one consent they all vowed to root out the whole hated family of the Tarquins; and bearing the dead body to Rome, Brutus acquainted the people with the deed, and manner of the vile deed, with a bitter invective against the tyranny of the king; wherewith the people were so moved, that, with one consent and a general acclamation, the Tarquins were all exiled, and the state government changed from kings to consuls.

[The word "should" is greater.] Some of the later impressions, in the editions of 1607 and 1624 for instance, read should for "would."

FROM the besieged Ardea all in post,
Borne by the trustless wings of false desire,
Lust-breathed Tarquin leaves the Roman host,
And to Collatium bears the lightless fire
Which, in pale embers hid, lurks to aspire,
And girdle with embracing flames the waist
Of Collatine's fair love, Lucrece the chaste.

Haply that name of chaste unhappily set
This bateless edge on his keen appetite;
When Collatine unwisely did not let
To praise the clear unmatched red and white,
Which triumph'd in that sky of his delight;
Where mortal stars, as bright as heaven's beauties,
With pure aspects did him peculiar duties.

For he the night before, in Tarquin's tent,
Unlock'd the treasure of his happy state;
What priceless wealth the heavens had lent
In the possession of his beauteous mate;
Reckoning his fortune at such high proud rate,
That kings might be espoused to more fame,
But king nor peer to such a peerless dame.

O happiness! enjoy'd but of a few;
And, if possess'd, as soon decay'd and done,
As is the morning's silver-melting dew
Against the golden splendour of the sun;
An expir'd date, cancell'd ere well begun:
Honour and beauty, in the owner's arms,
Are weakly fortress'd from a world of harms.

Beauty itself doth of itself persuade
The eyes of men without an orator;
What needeth, then, apologies be made
To set forth that which is so singular?
Or why is Collatine the publisher
Of that rich jewel he should keep unknown?
From thievish ears, because it is his own?

Perchance his boast of Lucrece' sovereignty
Suggested¹ this proud issue of a king,
For by our ears our hearts oft tainted be:
Perchance that envy of so rich a thing,
Braving compare, disdainfully did sting
His high-pitch'd thoughts, that meaner men should
That golden hap which their superiors want.

But some untimely thought did instigate
His all too timeless speed, if none of those:
His honour, his affairs, his friends, his state,
Neglected all, with swift intent he goes
To quench the coal which in his liver glows.
O rash, false heat! wrapt in repentant cold,
Thy hasty spring still blasts, and ne'er grows old.

When at Collatium this false lord arrived,
Well was he welcom'd by the Roman dame,
Within whose face beauty and virtue strived
Which of them both should underprop her fame.
When virtue bragg'd, beauty would blush for shame.
When beauty boasted blushes, in despite
Virtue would stain that o'er with silver white.

But beauty, in that white intitled,
From Venus' doves doth challenge that fair field;
Then, virtue claims from beauty beauty's red,
Which virtue gave the golden age to gild
Their silver cheeks, and call'd it then their shield;
Teaching them thus to use it in the fight,
When shame assail'd, the red should fence the white.

This heraldry in Lucrece' face was seen,
Argued by beauty's red, and virtue's white:
Of either's colour was the other queen,
Proving from world's minority their right,
Yet their ambition makes them still to fight,
The sovereignty of either being so great,
That oft they interchange each other's seat.

This silent war of lilies and of roses,
Which Tarquin view'd in her fair face's field,
In their pure ranks his traitor eye encloses;
Where, lest between them both it should be kill'd,
The coward captive vanquished doth yield
To those two armies, that would let him go,
Rather than triumph in so false a foe.

Now thinks he, that her husband's shallow tongue,
The niggard prodigal that prais'd her so,
In that high task hath done her beauty wrong,
Which far exceeds his barren skill to show:
Therefore, that praise which Collatine doth owe
Enchanted Tarquin answers with surmise
In silent wonder of still gazing eyes.

This earthly saint, adored by this devil,
Little suspecteth the false worshipper,
For unstain'd thoughts do seldom dream on evil;
Birds never lim'd no secret bushes fear:
So guiltless she securely gives good cheer,
And reverend welcome to her princely guest,
Whose inward ill no outward harm express'd.

For that he colour'd with his high estate,
Hiding base sin in plaits of majesty;
That nothing in him seem'd inordinate,
Save sometime too much wonder of his eye,
Which, having all, all could not satisfy;
But, poorly rich, so wanteth in his store,
That cloy'd with much, he pineth still for more.

But she, that never cop'd with stranger eyes,
Could pick no meaning from their prating looks,
Nor read the subtle shining secrecies
Write in the glassy margins of such books:
She touch'd no unknown baits, nor fear'd no hooks

¹ Instigated

Nor could she moralize his wanton sight,
More than his eyes were open'd to the light.

He stories to her ears her husband's fame,
Won in the fields of fruitful Italy;
And decks with praises Collatine's high name,
Made glorious by his manly chivalry,
With bruised arms and wreaths of victory:
Her joy with heav'd-up hand she doth express,
And wordless so greets heaven for his success.

Far from the purpose of his coming thither,
He makes excuses for his being there:
No cloudy show of stormy blustering weather
Doth yet in his fair welkin once appear;
Till sable night, mother of dread and fear,
Upon the world dim darkness doth display,
And in her vaulty prison stows the day.

For then is Tarquin brought unto his bed,
Intending¹ weariness with heavy sprite;
For after supper long he questioned
With modest Lucrece, and wore out the night:
Now slumber with life's strength doth fight,
And every one to rest themselves betake, [wake
Save thieves, and cares, and troubled minds, that

As one of which doth Tarquin lie revolving
The sundry dangers of his will's obtaining;
Yet ever to obtain his will resolving,
Though weak-built hopes persuade him to abstaining:
Despair to gain doth traffick oft for gaining;
And when great treasure is the meed proposed,
Though death be adjunct, there's no death supposed.

Those that much covet are with gain so fond,
That what they have not, that which they possess,
They scatter and unloose it from their bond,
And so, by hoping more, they have but less;
Or, gaining more, the profit of excess
Is but to surfeit, and such griefs sustain,
That they prove bankrupt in this poor rich gain.

The aim of all is but to nurse the life
With honour, wealth, and ease, in waning age;
And in this aim there is such thwarting strife,
That one for all, or all for one we gage;
As life for honour in fell battles' rage:
Honour for wealth, and oft that wealth doth cost
The death of all, and all together lost.

So that in venturing ill, we leave to be
The things we are for that which we expect;
And this ambitious foul infirmity,
In having much, torments us with defect
Of that we have: so then we do neglect
The thing we have: and, all for want of wit,
Make something nothing by augmenting it.

Such hazard now must doting Tarquin make,
Pawning his honour to obtain his lust,
And for himself himself he must forsake:
Then, where is truth, if there be no self-trust?
When shall he think to find a stranger just.
When he himself himself confounds, betrays
To slanderous tongues, and wretched hateful days?

Now stole upon the time the dead of night,
When heavy sleep had clos'd up mortal eyes;

No comfortable star did lend his light,
No noise but owls' and wolves' death-boding cries:
Now serves the season that they may surprise
The silly lambs. Pure thoughts are dead and still,
While lust and murder wake, to stain and kill

And now this lustful lord leap'd from his bed,
Throwing his mantle rudely o'er his arm,
Is madly toss'd between desire and dread;
Th' one sweetly flatters, th' other feareth harm,
But honest fear, bewitch'd with lust's foul charm
Doth too too oft betake him to retire,
Beaten away by brain-sick rude desire.

His falchion on a flint he softly smiteth,
That from the cold stone sparks of fire do fly,
Whereat a waxen torch forthwith he lighteth,
Which must be lode-star to his lustful eye;
And to the flame thus speaks advsedly:
As from this cold flint I enforc'd this fire,
So Lucrece must I force to my desire.

Here, pale with fear, he doth premeditate
The dangers of his loathsome enterprise,
And in his inward mind he doth debate
What following sorrow may on this arise:
Then, looking scornfully, he doth despise
His naked armour of still slaughtered lust,
And justly thus controls his thoughts unjust.

Fair torch, burn out thy light, and lend it not
To darken her whose light excelleth thine;
And die, unhallow'd thoughts, before you blot
With your uncleanness that which is divine:
Offer pure incense to so pure a shrine:
Let fair humanity abhor the deed,
That spots and stains love's modest snow-white weed

O shame to knighthood, and to shining arms!
O foul dishonour to my household's grave!
O impious act, including all foul harms!
A martial man to be soft fancy's slave!
True valour still a true respect should have;
Then, my digression is so vile, so base,
That it will live engraven in my face.

Yea, though I die, the scandal will survive,
And be an eye-sore in my golden coat;
Some loathsome dash the herald will contrive,
To cipher me how fondly I did dote;
That my posterity, sham'd with the note,
Shall curse my bones, and hold it for no sin
To wish that I their father had not been.

What win I, if I gain the thing I seek?
A dream, a breath, a froth of fleeting joy.
Who buys a minute's mirth to wail a week,
Or sells eternity to get a toy?
For one sweet grape who will the vine destroy?
Or what fond beggar, but to touch the crown,
Would with the sceptre straight be stricken down?

If Collatinus dream of my intent,
Will he not wake, and in a desperate rage
Post hither, this vile purpose to prevent?
This siege that hath engirt his marriage,
This blur to youth, this sorrow to the sage,
This dying virtue, this surviving shame,
Whose crime will bear an ever-during blame.

¹ Pretending

O! what excuse can my invention make,
When thou shalt charge me with so black a deed?
Will not my tongue be mute, my frail joints shake,
Mine eyes forego their light, my false heart bleed?
The guilt being great, the fear doth still exceed;
And extreme fear can neither fight nor fly,
But coward-like with trembling terror die.

Had Collatinus kill'd my son or sire,
Or lain in ambush to betray my life,
Or were he not my dear friend, this desire
Might have excuse to work upon his wife,
As in revenge or quital of such strife;
But as he is my kinsman, my dear friend,
The shame and fault finds no excuse nor end.

Shameful it is;—ay, if the fact be known:
Hateful it is;—there is no hate in loving:
I'll beg her love;—but she is not her own:
The worst is but denial, and reproving.
My will is strong, past reason's weak removing:
Who fears a sentence, or an old man's saw,
Shall by a painted cloth be kept in awe.

Thus, graceless, holds he disputation
'Tween frozen conscience and hot burning will,
And with good thoughts makes dispensation,
Urging the worse sense for vantage still;
Which in a moment doth confound and kill
All pure effects, and doth so far proceed,
That what is vile shows like a virtuous deed.

Quoth he, she took me kindly by the hand,
And gaz'd for tidings in my eager eyes,
Fearing some hard news from the warlike band,
Where her beloved Collatinus lies.
O, how her fear did make her colour rise!
First red as roses that on lawn we lay,
Then, white as lawn, the roses took away.

And how her hand, in my hand being lock'd,
Fore'd it to tremble with her loyal fear!
Which struck her sad, and then it faster rock'd,
Until her husband's welfare she did hear:
Whereat she smiled with so sweet a cheer,
That had Narcissus seen her as she stood,
Self-love had never drown'd him in the flood.

Why hunt I, then, for colour or excuses?
All orators are dumb when beauty pleadeth;
Poor wretches have remorse in poor abuses;
Love thrives not in the heart that shadows dreadeth:
Affection is my captain, and he leadeth;
And when his gaudy banner is display'd,
The coward fights, and will not be dismay'd.

Then, childish fear, avaunt! debating, die!
Respect and reason, wait on wrinkled age!
My heart shall never countermand mine eye:
Sad pause and deep regard besem the sage;
My part is youth, and beats these from the stage.
Desire my pilot is, beauty my prize;
Then, who fears sinking where such treasure lies?

As corn o'er-grown by weeds, so heedful fear
Is almost chok'd by unresisted lust.
Away he steals with open listening ear,
Full of foul hope, and full of fond mistrust;
Both which, as servitors to the unjust,

So cross him with their opposite persuasion,
That now he vows a league, and now invasion.

Within his thought her heavenly image sits,
And in the selfsame seat sits Collatine:
That eye which looks on her confounds his wits;
That eye which him beholds, as more divine,
Unto a view so false will not incline;
But with a pure appeal seeks to the heart,
Which, once corrupted, takes the worse part;

And therein heartens up his servile powers,
Who, flatter'd by their leader's jocund show,
Stuff up his lust, as minutes fill up hours;
And as their captain, so their pride doth grow,
Paying more slavish tribute than they owe.
By reprobate desire thus madly led,
The Roman lord marcheth to Lucrece' bed.

The locks between her chamber and his will,
Each one by him enforce'd retires his ward;
But as they open they all rate his ill,
Which drives the creeping thief to some regard:
The threshold grates the door to have him heard;
Night-wandering weesels shriek, to see him there;
They fright him, yet he still pursues his fear.

As each unwilling portal yields him way,
Through little vents and crannies of the place
The wind wars with his torch to make him stay,
And blows the smoke of it into his face,
Extinguishing his conduct in this case;
But his hot heart, with fond desire doth scorch,
Puffs forth another wind that fires the torch:

And being lighted, by the light he spies
Lucretia's glove, wherein her needle sticks:
He takes it from the rushes where it lies.
And griping it, the needle his finger pricks;
As who should say, this glove to wanton tricks
Is not inur'd; return again in haste;
Thou seest our mistress' ornaments are chaste.

But all these poor forbiddings could not stay him,
He in the worst sense construes their denial:
The doors, the wind, the glove, that did delay him,
He takes for accidental things of trial,
Or as those bars which stop the hourly dial;
Who with a ling'ring stay his course doth let,
Till every minute pays the hour his debt.

So, so, quoth he: these letts attend the time,
Like little frosts that sometime threat the spring,
To add a more rejoicing to the prime,
And give the sneaped¹ birds more cause to sing.
Pain pays the income of each precious thing; [sands.
Huge rocks, high winds, strong pirates, shelves and
The merchant fears, ere rich at home he lands.

Now is he come unto the chamber-door,
That shuts him from the heaven of his thought,
Which with a yielding latch, and with no more,
Hath barr'd him from the blessed thing he sought.
So from himself impiety hath wrought.
That for his prey to pray he doth begin,
As if the heavens should countenance his sin.

But in the midst of his unfruitful prayer,
Having solicited th' eternal power

That his foul thoughts might compass his fair fair,
 And they would stand auspicious to the hour,
 Even there he starts :—quoth he, I must deflower :
 The powers to whom I pray abhor this fact,
 How can they, then, assist me in the act ?

Then Love and Fortune be my gods, my guide !
 My will is back'd with resolution :
 Thoughts are but dreams, till their effects be tried ;
 The blackest sin is clear'd with absolution ;
 Against love's fire fear's frost hath dissolution.
 The eye of heaven is out, and misty night
 Covers the shame that follows sweet delight.

This said, his guilty hand pluck'd up the latch,
 And with his knee the door he opens wide.
 The dove sleeps fast that this night-owl will catch :
 Thus treason works ere traitors be espied.
 Who sees the lurking serpent steps aside ;
 But she, sound sleeping, fearing no such thing,
 Lies at the mercy of his mortal sting.

Into the chamber wickedly he stalks,
 And gazeth on her yet-unstained bed.
 The curtains being close, about he walks,
 Rolling his greedy eye-balls in his head :
 By their high treason is his heart misled ;
 Which gives the watch-word to his hand full soon,
 To draw the cloud that hides the silver moon.

Look, as the fair and fiery pointed sun,
 Rushing from forth a cloud, bereaves our sight ;
 Even so, the curtain drawn, his eyes begun
 To wink, being blinded with a greater light :
 Whether it is, that she reflects so bright,
 That dazzleth them, or else some shame supposed,
 But blind they are, and keep themselves enclosed.

O ! had they in that darksome prison died,
 Then had they seen the period of their ill :
 Then Collatine again, by Lucrece' side,
 In his clear bed might have reposed still ;
 But they must ope, this blessed league to kill,
 And holy-thoughted Lucrece to their sight
 Must sell her joy, her life, her world's delight.

Her lily hand her rosy cheek lies under,
 Cozening the pillow of a lawful kiss,
 Who, therefore angry, seems to part in sunder,
 Swelling on either side to want his bliss,
 Between whose hills her head intomb'd is ;
 Where, like a virtuous monument, she lies,
 To be admir'd of lewd unhallowed eyes.

Without the bed her other fair hand was,
 On the green coverlet : whose perfect white
 Show'd like an April daisy on the grass,
 With pearly sweat, resembling dew of night.
 Her eyes, like marigolds, had sheath'd their light,
 And canopied in darkness sweetly lay,
 Till they might open to adorn the day.

Her hair, like golden threads, play'd with her breath ;
 O modest wantons ! wanton modesty !
 Showing life's triumph in the map of death,
 And death's dim look in life's mortality :
 Each in her sleep themselves so beautify,
 As if between them twin there were no strife,
 But that life liv'd in death, and death in life.

Her breasts, like ivory globes circled with blue,
 A pair of maiden worlds unconquered ;
 Save of their lord, no bearing yoke they knew,
 And him by oath they truly honoured.
 These worlds in Tarquin new ambition bred ;
 Who, like a foul usurper, went about
 From this fair throne to heave the owner out.

What could he see, but nightly he noted ?
 What did he note, but strongly he desired ?
 What he beheld, on that he firmly doted,
 And in his will his wilful eye he tired.¹
 With more than admiration he admired
 Her azure veins, her alabaster skin,
 Her coral lips, her snow-white dimpled chin.

As the grim lion fawneth o'er his prey,
 Sharp hunger by the conquest satisfied,
 So o'er this sleeping soul doth Tarquin stay,
 His rage of lust by gazing qualified ;
 Slak'd, not suppress'd ; for standing by her side,
 His eye, which late this mutiny restrains,
 Unto a greater uproar tempts his veins :

And they, like straggling slaves for pillage fighting,
 Obdurate vassals fell exploits effecting,
 In bloody death and ravishment delighting,
 Nor children's tears, nor mothers' groans respecting,
 Swell in their pride, the onset still expecting :
 Anon his beating heart, alarm striking,
 Gives the hot charge, and bids them do their liking

His drumming heart cheers up his burning eye,
 His eye commends the leading to his hand ;
 His hand, as proud of such a dignity,
 Smoking with pride, march'd on to make his stand
 On her bare breast, the heart of all her land,
 Whose ranks of blue veins, as his hand did scale,
 Left their round turrets destitute and pale.

They, mustering to the quiet cabinet
 Where their dear governess and lady lies,
 Do tell her she is dreadfully beset,
 And fright her with confusion of their cries :
 She, much amaz'd, breaks ope her lock'd-up eyes,
 Who, peeping forth this tumult to behold,
 Are by his flaming torch dimm'd and controll'd.

Imagine her as one in dead night
 From forth dull sleep by dreadful fancy waking,
 That thinks she hath beheld some ghastly sprite,
 Whose grim aspect sets every joint a shaking ;
 What terror 't is ! but she, in worse taking,
 From sleep disturbed, heedfully doth view
 The sight which makes supposed terror true.

Wrapp'd and confounded in a thousand fears,
 Like to a new-kill'd bird she trembling lies ;
 She dares not look ; yet, winking, there appears
 Quick-shifting antics, ugly in her eyes :
 Such shadows are the weak brain's forgeries ;
 Who, angry that the eyes fly from their lights,
 In darkness daunts them with more dreadful sights.

His hand, that yet remains upon her breast,
 (Rude ram to batter such an ivory wall)
 May feel her heart (poor citizen !) distress'd,
 Wounding itself to death, rise up and fall,
 Beating her bulk, that his hand shakes withal

This moves in him more rage, and lesser pity,
To make the breach, and enter this sweet city.

First, like a trumpet, doth his tongue begin
To sound a parley to his heartless foe;
Who o'er the white sheet peers her whiter chin,
The reason of this rash alarm to know,
Which he by dumb demeanour seeks to show;
But she with vehement prayers urgeth still,
Under what colour he commits this ill.

Thus he replies: The colour in thy face
That even for anger makes the lily pale,
And the red rose blush at her own disgrace,
Shall plead for me, and tell my loving tale;
Under that colour am I come to scale
Thy never conquer'd fort: the fault is thine,
For those thine eyes betray thee unto mine.

Thus I forestall thee, if thou mean to chide:
Thy beauty hath ensnar'd thee to this night,
Where thou with patience must my will abide,
My will, that marks thee for my earth's delight,
Which I to conquer sought with all my might;
But as reproof and reason beat it dead,
By thy bright beauty was it newly bred.

I see what crosses my attempt will bring,
I know what thorns the growing rose defends,
I think the honey guarded with a sting;
All this beforehand counsel comprehends,
But will is deaf, and hears no heedful friends:
Only he hath an eye to gaze on beauty,
And dotes on what he looks, 'gainst law or duty.

I have debated, even in my soul,
What wrong, what shame, what sorrow I shall breed;
But nothing can affection's course control,
Or stop the headlong fury of his speed.
I know repentant tears ensue the deed,
Reproach, disdain, and deadly enmity,
Yet strive I to embrace mine infamy.

This said, he shakes aloft his Roman blade,
Which, like a falcon towering in the skies,
Coucheth the fowl below with his wings' shade,
Whose crooked beak threatens, if he mount he dies:
So under his insulting falchion lies
Harmless Lucretia, marking what he tells,
With trembling fear, as fowl hear falcon's bells

Lucrece, quoth he, this night I must enjoy thee:
If thou deny, then force must work my way,
For in thy bed I purpose to destroy thee.
That done, some worthless slave of thine I'll slay
To kill thine honour with thy life's decay;
And in thy dead arms do I mean to place him,
Swearing I slew him, seeing thee embrace him

So thy surviving husband shall remain
The scornful mark of every open eye;
Thy kinsmen hang their heads at this disdain,
Thy issue blurr'd with nameless bastardy:
And thou, the author of their obloquy,
Shalt have thy trespass cited up in rhymes,
And sung by children in succeeding times.

But if thou yield, I rest thy secret friend:
The fault unknown is as a thought unacted;

A little harm, done to a great good end,
For lawful policy remains enacted.
The poisonous simple sometimes is compounded
In a pure compound; being so applied,
His venom in effect is purified.

Then, for thy husband and thy children's sake,
Tender my suit: bequeath not to their lot
The shame that from them no device can take,
The blemish that will never be forgot;
Worse than a slavish wipe, or birth-hour's blot;
For marks deserv'd in men's nativity
Are nature's faults, not their own infamy.

Here, with a cockatrice' dead-killing eye,
He rouseth up himself, and makes a pause;
While she, the picture of pure piety,
Like a white hind under the gripe's¹ sharp claws,
Pleads in a wilderness, where are no laws,
To the rough beast that knows no gentle right,
Nor aught obeys but his foul appetite.

But when a black-fac'd cloud the world doth threat,
In his dim mist th' aspiring mountains hiding,
From earth's dark womb some gentle gust doth get,
Which blows these pitchy vapours from their biding,
Hindering their present fall by this dividing:
So his unhallowed haste her words delays,
And moody Pluto winks, while Orpheus plays.

Yet, foul night-waking cat, he doth but dally,
While in his hold-fast foot the weak mouse panteth:
Her sad behaviour feeds his vulture folly,
A swallowing gulf that even in plenty wanteth.
His ear her prayers admits, but his heart granteth
No penetrable entrance to her plaining:
Tears harden lust, though marble wears with raining

Her pity-pleading eyes are sadly fixed
In the remorseless wrinkles of his face;
Her modest eloquence with sighs is mixed,
Which to her oratory adds more grace.
She puts the period often from his place;
And 'midst the sentence so her accent breaks,
That twice she doth begin, ere once she speaks.

She conjures him by high almighty Jove,
By knighthood, gentry, and sweet friendship's oath,
By her untimely tears, her husband's love,
By holy human law, and common troth,
By heaven and earth, and all the power of both,
That to his borrow'd bed he make retire,
And stoop to honour, not to foul desire.

Quoth she, reward not hospitality:
With such black payment as thou hast pretended;²
Mud not the fountain that gave drink to thee;
Mar not the thing that cannot be amended;
End thy ill aim before thy shoot be ended:
He is no wood-man, that doth bend his bow
To strike a poor unseasonable doe.

My husband is thy friend, for his sake spare me;
Thyself art mighty, for thine own sake leave me:
Myself a weakling, do not then ensnare me:
Thou look'st not like deceit, do not deceive me.
My sighs, like whirlwinds, labour hence to heave thee
If ever man were mov'd with woman's moans,
Be moved with my tears, my sighs, my groans.

All which together, like a troubled ocean,
Beat at thy rocky and wreck-threatening heart,
To soften it with their continual motion;
For stones dissolv'd to water do convert.
O, if no harder than a stone thou art,
Melt at my tears and be compassionate!
Soft pity enters at an iron gate.

In Tarquin's likeness I did entertain thee;
Hast thou put on his shape to do him shame?
To all the host of heaven I complain me,
Thou wrong'st his honour, wound'st his princely name:
Thou art not what thou seem'st; and if the same,
Thou seem'st not what thou art, a god, a king;
For kings like gods should govern every thing.

How will thy shame be seeded in thine age,
When thus thy vices bud before thy spring?
If in thy hope thou dar'st do such outrage,
What dar'st thou not, when once thou art a king?
O, be remember'd! no outrageous thing
From vassal actors can be wip'd away;
Then, kings' misdeeds cannot be hid in clay

This deed will make thee only lov'd for fear;
But happy monarchs still are fear'd for love
With foul offenders thou perforce must bear,
When they in thee the like offences prove:
If but for fear of this, thy will remove;
For princes are the glass, the school, the book,
Where subjects' eyes do learn, do read, do look.

And wilt thou be the school where lust shall learn?
Must he in thee read lectures of such shame?
Wilt thou be glass, wherein it shall discern
Authority for sin, warrant for blame,
To privilege dishonour in thy name?
Thou back'st reproach against long-living laud,
And mak'st fair reputation but a bawd.

Hast thou command? by him that gave it thee,
From a pure heart command thy rebel will:
Draw not thy sword to guard iniquity,
For it was lent thee all that brood to kill.
Thy princely office how canst thou fulfil,
When, pattern'd by thy fault, foul sin may say,
He learn'd to sin, and thou didst teach the way?

Think but how vile a spectacle it were,
To view thy present trespass in another.
Men's faults do seldom to themselves appear;
Their own transgressions partially they smother:
This guilt would seem death-worthy in thy brother.
O, how are they wrapp'd in with infamies,
That from their own misdeeds askeance their eyes!

To thee, to thee, my heav'd-up hands appeal,
Not to seducing lust, thy rash reliev;
I sue for exil'd majesty's repeal:
Let him return, and flattering thoughts retire:
His true respect will prison false desire,
And wipe the dim mist from thy dotting eyne,
That thou shalt see thy state, and pity mine.

Have done, quoth he: my uncontrolled tide
Turns not, but swells the higher by this let.
Small lights are soon blown out, huge fires abide,
And with the wind in greater fury fret:
The petty streams, that pay a daily debt

To their salt sovereign with their fresh falls' haste,
Add to his flow, but alter not his taste.

Thou art, quoth she, a sea, a sovereign king;
And lo! there falls into thy boundless flood
Black lust, dishonour, shame, misgoverning,
Who seek to stain the ocean of thy blood.
If all these petty ills shall change thy good,
Thy sea within a puddle's womb is hersed,
And not the puddle in thy sea dispersed.

So shall these slaves be king, and thou their slave,
Thou nobly base, they basely dignified;
Thou their fair life, and they thy fouler grave:
Thou loathed in their shame, they in thy pride:
The lesser thing should not the greater hide;
The cedar stoops not to the base shrub's foot,
But low shrubs wither at the cedar's root.

So let thy thoughts, low vassals to thy state—
No more, quoth he; by heaven, I will not hear thee
Yield to my love; if not, enforced hate,
Instead of love's coy touch, shall rudely tear thee;
That done, despitefully I mean to bear thee
Unto the base bed of some rascal groom,
To be thy partner in this shameful doom.

This said, he sets his foot upon the light,
For light and lust are deadly enemies:
Shame, folded up in blind concealing night,
When most unseen, then most doth tyrannize.
The wolf hath seiz'd his prey, the poor lamb cries;
Till with her own white fleece her voice controll'd
Entombs her outcry in her lips' sweet fold:

For with the nightly linen that she wears,
He pens her piteous clamours in her head,
Cooling his hot face in the chastest tears
That ever modest eyes with sorrow shed.
O, that prone lust should stain so pure a bed!
The spots whereof could weeping purify,
Her tears should drop on them perpetually.

But she hath lost a dearer thing than life,
And he hath won what he would lose again;
This forced league doth force a further strife,
This momentary joy breeds months of pain:
This hot desire converts to cold disdain.
Pure chastity is rifled of her store,
And lust, the thief, far poorer than before.

Look, as the full-fed hound, or gorged hawk,
Unapt for tender smell, or speedy flight,
Make slow pursuit, or altogether balk
The prey wherein by nature they delight:
So surfeit-taking Tarquin fares this night:
His taste delicious, in digestion souring,
Devours his will, that liv'd by foul devouring.

O deeper sin, than bottomless conceit
Can comprehend in still imagination!
Drunken desire must vomit his receipt,
Ere he can see his own abomination.
While lust is in his pride, no exclamation
Can curb his heat, or rein his rash desire,
Till, like a jade, self-will himself doth tire.

And then, with lank and lean discolour'd cheek,
With heavy eye, kn't brow, and strengthless pace,

Feeble desire, all recreant, poor, and meek,
Like to a bankrupt beggar wails his case :
The flesh being proud, desire doth fight with grace,
For there it revels ; and when that decays,
The guilty rebel for remission prays.

So fares it with this faultful lord of Rome,
Who this accomplishment so hotly chased ;
For now against himself he sounds this doom,
That through the length of times he stands disgraced :
Besides, his soul's fair temple is defaced ;
To whose weak ruins muster troops of cares,
To ask the spotted princess how she fares.

She says, her subjects with foul insurrection
Have batter'd down her consecrated wall,
And by their mortal fault brought in subjection
Her immortality, and made her thrall
To living death, and pain perpetual :
Which in her prescience she controlled still,
But her foresight could not fore-stall their will.

Even in this thought through the dark night he stealeth,
A captive victor that hath lost in gain ;
Bearing away the wound that nothing healeth,
The scar that will despite of cure remain ;
Leaving his spoil perplex'd in greater pain.
She bears the load of lust he left behind,
And he the burden of a guilty mind.

He, like a thievish dog, creeps sadly thence,
She like a wearied lamb lies panting there ;
He scowls, and hates himself for his offence,
She desperate with her nails her flesh doth tear ;
He faintly flies, sweating with guilty fear ;
She stays, exclaiming on the direful night :
He runs, and chides his vanish'd, loath'd delight.

He thence departs a heavy convertite,
She there remains a hopeless cast-away ;
He in his speed looks for the morning light,
She prays she never may behold the day ;
For day, quoth she, night's scapes doth open lay,
And my true eyes have never practis'd how
To cloke offences with a cunning brow.

They think not but that every eye can see
The same disgrace which they themselves behold,
And therefore would they still in darkness be,
To have their unseen sin remain untold ;
For they their guilt with weeping will unfold,
And grave, like water that doth eat in steel,
Upon my cheeks what helpless shame I feel.

Here she exclaims against repose and rest,
And bids her eyes hereafter still be blind.
She wakes her heart by beating on her breast.
And bids it leap from thence, where it may find
Some purer chest to close so pure a mind.
Frantic with grief thus breathes she forth her spite
Against the unseen secrecy of night.

O, comfort-killing night, image of hell !
Dim register and notary of shame !
Black stage for tragedies and murders fell !
Vast sin-concealing chaos ! nurse of blame !
Blind muffled bawd ! dark harbour for defame !
Grim cave of death, whispering conspirator
With close-tongu'd treason and the ravisher !

O, hateful, vaporous, and foggy night !
Since thou art guilty of my cureless crime,
Muster thy mist to meet the eastern light,
Make war against proportion'd course of time .
Or if thou wilt permit the sun to climb
His wonted height, yet ere he go to bed,
Knit poisonous clouds about his golden head

With rotten damps ravish the morning air ;
Let their exhal'd unwholesome breaths make sick
The life of purity, the supreme fair.
Ere he arrive his weary noon-tide prick ;
And let thy musty vapours march so thick,
That in their smoky ranks his smother'd light
May set at noon, and make perpetual night.

Were Tarquin night, as he is but night's child.
The silver-shining queen he would detain ;
Her twinkling handmaids too, by him defil'd,
Through night's black bosom should not peep again .
So should I have copartners in my pain ;
And fellowship in woe doth woe assuage,
As palmer's chat makes short their pilgrimage.

Where, now, I have no one to blush with me,
To cross their arms, and hang their heads with mine,
To mask their brows, and hide their infamy ;
But I alone, alone must sit and pine,
Seasoning the earth with showers of silver brine,
Mingling my talk with tears, my grief with groar :
Poor wasting monuments of lasting moans.

O night ! thou furnace of foul-reeking smoke,
Let not the jealous day behold that face
Which underneath thy black all-hiding cloak
Immodestly lies martyr'd with disgrace :
Keep still possession of thy gloomy place,
That all the faults which in thy reign are made,
May likewise be sepulcher'd in thy shade.

Make me not object to the tell-tale day !
The light will show, character'd in my brow,
The story of sweet chastity's decay.
The impious breach of holy wedlock vow :
Yea, the illiterate, that know not how
To cipher what is writ in learned books,
Will quote¹ my loathsome trespass in my looks.

The nurse to still her child will tell my story,
And fright her crying babe with Tarquin's name .
The orator to deck his oratory
Will couple my reproach to Tarquin's shame ;
Feast-finding minstrels, tuning my defame,
Will tie the hearers to attend each line,
How Tarquin wronged me, I Collatine.

Let my good name, that senseless reputation,
For Collatine's dear love be kept unspotted .
If that be made a theme for disputation,
The branches of another root are rotted,
And undeserv'd reproach to him allotted,
That as clear from this attain of mine,
As I ere this was pure to Collatine.

O unseen shame ! invisible disgrace !
O unfelt sore ! crest-wounding, private scar !
Reproach is stamp'd in Collatinus' face,
And Tarquin's eye may read the mot² afar,
How he in peace is wounded, not in war

Alas! how many bear such shameful blows,
Which not themselves, but he that gives them, knows.

If, Collatine, thine honour lay in me,
From me by strong assault it is bereft.
My honey lost, and I, a drone-like bee,
Have no perfection of my summer left,
But robb'd and ransack'd by injurious theft:
In thy weak hive a wandering wasp hath crept,
And suck'd the honey which thy chaste bee kept.

Yet am I guilty of thy honour's wreck;
Yet for thy honour did I entertain him;
Coming from thee, I could not put him back,
For it had been dishonour to disdain him:
Besides, of weariness he did complain him,
And talk'd of virtue.—O, unlook'd for evil,
When virtue is profan'd in such a devil!

Why should the worm intrude the maiden bud,
Or hateful cuckoos hatch in sparrows' nests?
Or toads infect fair founts with venom mud?
Or tyrant folly lurk in gentle breasts?
Or kings be breakers of their own behests?
But no perfection is so absolute,
That some impurity doth not pollute.

The aged man that coffers up his gold,
Is plagu'd with cramps, and gout, and painful fits,
And scarce hath eyes his treasure to behold,
But like still-pining Tantalus he sits,
And useless barns the harvest of his wits,
Having no other pleasure of his gain.
But torment that it cannot cure his pain.

So, then he hath it, when he cannot use it,
And leaves it to be master'd by his young;
Who in their pride do presently abuse it:
Their father was too weak, and they too strong,
To hold their cursed-blessed fortune long.
The sweets we wish for turn to loathed sour,
Even in the moment that we call them ours.

Unruly blasts wait on the tender spring.
Unwholesome weeds take root with precious flowers,
The adder hisses where the sweet birds sing,
What virtue breeds, iniquity devours;
We have no good that we can say is ours,
But ill annexed opportunity
Or kills his life, or else his quality.

O, Opportunity! thy guilt is great:
'T is thou that execut'st the traitor's treason:
Thou sett'st the wolf where he the lamb may get;
Whoever plots the sin, thou 'point'st the season:
'T is thou that spurn'st at right, at law, at reason:
And in thy shady cell, where none may spy him,
Sits sin to seize the souls that wander by him.

Thou mak'st the vestal violate her oath:
Thou blow'st the fire, when temperance is thaw'd;
Thou murder'st honesty, thou murder'st truth:
Thou foul abettor! thou notorious bawd!
Thou plann'st scandal, and displac'st land:
Thou ravisher, thou traitor, thou false thief,
Thy honey turns to gall, thy joy to grief!

Thy secret pleasure turns to open shame,
Thy private feasting to a public fast:

Thy smoothing titles to a ragged¹ name,
Thy sugar'd tongue to bitter wormwood taste.
Thy violent vanities can never last.
How comes it then, vile Opportunity,
Being so bad, such numbers seek for thee?

When wilt thou be the humble suppliant's friend,
And bring him where his suit may be obtain'd?
When wilt thou sort² an hour great strifes to end,
Or free that soul which wretchedness hath chained?
Give physic to the sick, ease to the pained?
The poor, lame, blind, halt, creep, cry out for thee
But they ne'er meet with Opportunity.

The patient dies while the physician sleeps;
The orphan pines while the oppressor feeds;
Justice is feasting while the widow weeps;
Advice is sporting while infection breeds:
Thou grant'st no time for charitable deeds.
Wrath, envy, treason, rape, and murders rage
Thy heinous hours wait on them as their pages

When truth and virtue have to do with thee,
A thousand crosses keep them from thy aid:
They buy thy help; but sin ne'er gives a fee:
He gratis comes, and thou art well appay'd.³
As well to hear, as grant what he hath said.
My Collatine would else have come to me,
When Tarquin did; but he was stay'd by thee

Guilty thou art of murder and of theft;
Guilty of perjury and subornation;
Guilty of treason, forgery, and shift;
Guilty of incest, that abomination:
An accessory by thine inclination
To all sins past, and all that are to come,
From the creation to the general doom.

Mis-shapen Time, copesmate of ugly night,
Swift subtle post, carrier of grisly care;
Eater of youth, false slave to false delight,
Base watch of woes, sin's pack-horse, virtue's snare;
Thou nursest all, and murderest all that are.
O hear me, then, injurious, shifting Time!
Be guilty of my death, since of my crime.

Why hath thy servant, Opportunity,
Betray'd the hours thou gav'st me to repose?
Cancelld my fortunes, and enchained me
To endless date of never-ending woes?
Time's office is to fine⁴ the hate of foes;
To eat up errors by opinion bred,
Not spend the dowry of a lawful bed.

Time's glory is to calm contending kings,
To unmask falsehood, and bring truth to light,
To stamp the seal of time in aged things,
To wake the morn, and sentinel the night,
To wrong the wronger till he render right;
To ruinat proud buildings with thy hours,
And smear with dust their glittering golden towers

To fill with worm-holes stately monuments,
To feed oblivion with decay of things,
To blot old books, and alter their contents,
To pluck the quills from ancient ravens' wings,
To dry the old oak's sap, and cherish springs:
To spoil antiquities of hammer'd steel,
And turn the giddy round of Fortune's wheel

To show the beldame daughters of her daughter,
 To make the child a man, the man a child,
 To slay the tiger that doth live by slaughter,
 To tame the unicorn and lion wild;
 To mock the subtle, in themselves beguill'd;
 To cheer the ploughman with increaseful crops,
 And waste huge stones with little water-drops;

Why work'st thou mischief in thy pilgrimage,
 Unless thou couldst return to make amends?
 One poor retiring¹ minute in an age
 Would purchase thee a thousand thousand friends,
 Lending him wit that to bad debtors lends:
 O! this dread night, wouldst thou one hour come back,
 I could prevent this storm, and shun thy wrack.

Thou ceaseless lackey to eternity,
 With some mischance cross Tarquin in his flight:
 Devise extremes beyond extremity
 To make him curse this cursed crimeful night:
 Let ghastly shadows his lewd eyes affright,
 And the dire thought of his committed evil
 Shape every bush a hideous shapeless devil.

Disturb his hours of rest with restless trances,
 Afflict him in his bed with bedrid groans;
 Let there bechance him pitiful mischances,
 To make him moan, but pity not his moans:
 Stone him with harden'd hearts, harder than stones;
 And let mild women to him lose their mildness,
 Wilder to him than tigers in their wildness.

Let him have time to tear his curled hair,
 Let him have time against himself to rave,
 Let him have time of time's help to despair,
 Let him have time to live a loathed slave;
 Let him have time a beggar's orts to crave,
 And time to see one that by alms doth live,
 Disdain to him disdain'd scraps to give.

Let him have time to see his friends his foes,
 And merry fools to mock at him resort;
 Let him have time to mark how slow time goes
 In time of sorrow, and how swift and short
 His time of folly, and his time of sport:
 And ever let his unrecalling crime
 Have time to wail th' abusing of his time.

O Time, thou tutor both to good and bad,
 Teach me to curse him that thou taught'st this ill!
 At his own shadow let the thief run mad,
 Himself himself seek every hour to kill!
 Such wretched hands such wretched blood should spill;
 For who so base should such an office have
 As slanderous death's-man to so base a slave?

The baser is he, coming from a king,
 To shame his hope with deeds degenerate:
 The mightier man, the mightier is the thing
 That makes him honour'd, or begets him hate;
 For greatest scandal waits on greatest state.
 The moon being clouded presently is miss'd,
 But little stars may hide them when they list.

The crow may bathe his coal-black wings in mire,
 And unperceiv'd fly with the filth away;
 But if the like the snow-white swan desire,
 The stain upon his silver down will stay,
 Poor grooms are sightless night, kings glorious day:

Gnats are unnoted wheresoe'er they fly,
 But eagles gaz'd upon with every eye.

Out, idle words! servants to shallow fools,
 Unprofitable sounds, weak arbitrators!
 Busy yourselves in skill-contending schools;
 Debate where leisure serves with dull debaters.
 To trembling clients be you mediators:
 For me, I force² not argument a straw,
 Since that my case is past the help of law.

In vain I rail at Opportunity,
 At Time, at Tarquin, and uncheerful night;
 In vain I cavil with mine infamy.
 In vain I spurn at my confirm'd despite:
 This helpless smoke of words doth me no right.
 The remedy, indeed, to do me good,
 Is to let forth my foul, defiled blood.

Poor hand, why quiver'st thou at this decree?
 Honour thyself to rid me of this shame;
 For if I die, my honour lives in thee.
 But if I live, thou liv'st in my defame:
 Since thou couldst not defend thy loyal dame,
 And wast afraid to scratch her wicked foe,
 Kill both thyself and her for yielding so.

This said, from her be-tumbled couch she starteth,
 To find some desperate instrument of death;
 But this no slaughter-house no tool imparteth,
 To make more vent for passage of her breath,
 Which, thronging through her lips, so vanisheth
 As smoke from Ætna, that in air consumes,
 Or that which from discharged cannon fumes.

In vain, quoth she, I live; and seek in vain
 Some happy mean to end a hapless life:
 I fear'd by Tarquin's falchion to be slain,
 Yet for the self-same purpose seek a knife;
 But when I fear'd, I was a loyal wife.
 So am I now:—O no! that cannot be:
 Of that true type hath Tarquin rifled me

O! that is gone, for which I sought to live,
 And therefore now I need not fear to die.
 To clear this spot by death, at least, I give
 A badge of fame to slander's livery;
 A dying life to living infamy.

Poor helpless help, the treasure stol'n away,
 To burn the guiltless casket where it lay!

Well, well, dear Collatine, thou shalt not know
 The stained taste of violated troth;
 I will not wrong thy true affection so.
 To flatter thee with an infringed oath;
 This bastard graff shall never come to growth:
 He shall not boast, who did thy stock pollute,
 That thou art doting father of his fruit.

Nor shall he smile at thee in secret thought,
 Nor laugh with his companions at thy state;
 But thou shalt know thy interest was not bought
 Basely with gold, but stolen from forth thy gate.
 For me, I am the mistress of my fate,
 And with my trespass never will dispense,
 Till life to death acquit my forc'd offence.

I will not poison thee with my attaint,
 Nor fold my fault in cleanly coin'd excuses

My sable ground of sin ! will not paint,
To hide the truth of this false night's abuses :
My tongue shall utter all ; mine eyes, like sluices,
As from a mountain spring that feeds a dale,
Shall gush pure streams to purge my impure tale.

By this, lamenting Philomel had ended
The well-tun'd warble of her nightly sorrow.
And solemn night with slow, sad gait descended
To ugly hell ; when lo ! the blushing morrow
Lends light to all fair eyes that light will borrow :
But cloudy Lucrece shames herself to see,
And therefore still in night would cloister'd be.

Revealing day through every cranny spies,
And seems to point her out where she sits weeping ;
To whom she sobbing speaks : O eye of eyes !
Why pry'st thou through my window ? leave thy peeping ;
Mock with thy tickling beams eyes that are sleeping :
Brand not my forehead with thy piercing light.
For day hath nought to do what's done by night.

Thus evils she with every thing she sees.
True grief is fond and testy as a child.
Who wayward once, his mood with nought agrees :
Old woes, not infant sorrows, bear them mild ;
Continuance tames the one ; the other wild ;
Like an unpractis'd swimmer plunging still,
With too much labour drowns for want of skill.

So she, deep drenched in a sea of care,
Holds disputation with each thing she views.
And to herself all sorrow doth compare :
No object but her passion's strength renews,
And as one shifts, another straight ensues :
Sometime her grief is dumb, and hath no words ;
Sometime 't is mad, and too much talk affords.

The little birds that tune their morning's joy,
Make her moans mad with their sweet melody ;
For mirth doth search the bottom of annoy :
Sad souls are slain in merry company ;
Grief best is pleas'd with grief's society :
True sorrow then is feelingly suffic'd.
When with like semblance it is sympathy'd.

'T is double death to drown in ken of shore ;
He ten times pines, that pines beholding food ;
To see the salve doth make the wound ache more ;
Great grief grieves most at that would do it good :
Deep woes roll forward like a gentle flood.
Who, being stopp'd, the bounding banks o'erflows :
Grief dallied with nor law nor limit knows.

You mocking birds, quoth she, your tunes entomb
Within your hollow swelling feather'd breasts.
And in my hearing be you mute and dumb :
My restless discord loves no stops nor rests :
A woful hostess brooks not merry guests.
Relish your nimble notes to pleasing ears :
Distress likes dumps, when time is kept with tears.

Come, Philomel, that sing'st of ravishment,
Make thy sad grave in my dishevel'd hair
As the dank earth weeps at thy languishment.
So I at each sad strain will strain a tear.
And with deep groans the diapason bear :
For burden-wise I'll hum on Tarquin still,
While thou on Tereus descant'st, better skill.*

And whiles against a thorn thou bear'st thy part,
To keep thy sharp woes waking, wretched I,
To imitate thee well, against my heart
Will fix a sharp knife, to affright mine eye,
Who, if it wink, shall thereon fall and die.
These means, as frets upon an instrument,
Shall tune our heart-strings to true languishment.

And for, poor bird, thou sing'st not in the day,
As shaming any eye should thee behold.
Some dark deep desert, seated from the way,
That knows not parching heat nor freezing cold,
Will we find out ; and there we will unfold
To creatures stern sad tunes to change their kinds.
Since men prove beasts, let beasts bear gentle minds.

As the poor frightened deer, that stands at gaze,
Wildly determining which way to fly,
Or one encompass'd with a winding maze,
That cannot tread the way out readily ;
So with herself is she in mutiny,
To live or die which of the twain were better,
When life is sham'd, and death reproach's debtor.

To kill myself, quoth she, alack ! what were it,
But with my body my poor soul's pollution ?
They that lose half, with greater patience bear it,
Than they whose whole is swallow'd in confusion.
That mother tries a merciless conclusion,
Who having two sweet babes, when death takes one
Will slay the other, and be nurse to none.

My body or my soul, which was the dearer,
When the one pure, the other made divine ?
Whose love of either to myself was nearer,
When both were kept for heaven and Collatine ?
Ah me ! the bark peel'd from the lofty pine,
His love will wither, and his sap decay :
So must my soul, her bark being peel'd away.

Her house is sack'd, her quiet interrupted,
Her mansion batter'd by the enemy ;
Her sacred temple spotted, spoil'd, corrupted,
Grossly engirt with daring infamy :
Then, let it not be call'd impiety,
If in this blemish'd fort I make some hole,
Through which I may convey this troubled soul.

Yet die I will not, till my Collatine
Have heard the cause of my untimely death.
That he may vow, in that sad hour of mine,
Revenge on him that made me stop my breath.
My stained blood to Tarquin I'll bequeath,
Which by him tainted shall for him be spent,
And as his due writ in my testament.

My honour I'll bequeath unto the knife
That wounds my body so dishonoured.
'T is honour to deprive dishonour'd life ;
The one will live, the other being dead :
So of shame's ashes shall my fame be bred ;
For in my death I murder shameful scorn :
My shame so dead, mine honour is new-born.

Dear lord of that dear jewel I have lost,
What legacy shall I bequeath to thee ?
My resolution, love, shall be thy boast,
By whose example thou reveng'd may'st be.
How Tarquin must be us'd, read it in me :

* Terms in music. * Melancholy music. * i. e. with better skill ; * descant' seems to have meant what we now call variations

Myself, thy friend, will kill myself, thy foe,
And for my sake serve thou false Tarquin so.

This brief abridgment of my will I make :—
My soul and body to the skies and ground ;
My resolution, husband, do thou take ;
Mine honour be the knife's that makes my wound ,
My shame be his that did my fame confound ;
And all my fame that lives disbursed be
To those that live, and think no shame of me.

Thou, Collatine, shalt oversee this will :¹
How was I overseen that thou shalt see it !
My blood shall wash the slander of mine ill ;
My life's foul deed my life's fair end shall free it.
Faint not, faint heart, but stoutly say, "so be it."
Yield to my hand ; my hand shall conquer thee :
Thou dead, both die, and both shall victors be.

This plot of death when sadly she had laid,
And wip'd the brinish pearl from her bright eyes,
With untun'd tongue she hoarsely calls² her maid,
Whose swift obedience to her mistress hies ;
For fear-wing'd duty with thought's feathers flies.
Poor Lucrece' cheeks unto her maid seem so,
As winter meads when sun doth melt their snow.

Her mistress she doth give demure good-morrow,
With soft slow tongue, true mark of modesty,
And sorts a sad look to her lady's sorrow,
For why, her face wore sorrow's livery ;
But durst not ask of her audaciously
Why her two suns were cloud-eclipsed so,
Nor why her fair cheeks over-wash'd with woe.

But as the earth doth weep, the sun being set,
Each flower moisten'd like a melting eye,
Even so the maid with swelling drops 'gan wet
Her circled eyne, enforc'd by sympathy
Of those fair suns set in her mistress' sky,
Who in a salt-war'd ocean quench their light,
Which makes the maid weep like the dewy night.

A pretty while these pretty creatures stand,
Like ivory conduits coral cisterns filling :
One justly weeps, the other takes in hand
No cause but company of her drops spilling :
Their gentle sex to weep are often willing,
Grieving themselves to guess at others' smart,
And then they drown their eyes, or break their hearts :

For men have marble, women waxen, minds,
And therefore are they form'd as marble will ;
The weak oppress'd, th' impression of strange kinds
Is form'd in them by force, by fraud, or skill :
Then, call them not the authors of their ill,
No more than wax shall be accounted evil,
Wherein is stamp'd the semblance of a devil.

Their smoothness, like a goodly champaign plain,
Lays open all the little worms that creep :
In men, as in a rough-grown grove, remain
Cave-keeping evils that obscurely sleep.
Through crystal walls each little mote will peep :
Though men can cover crimes with bold stern looks,
Poor women's faces are their own faults' books.

No man inveigh against the withered flower,
But chide rough winter that the flower hath kill'd.

Not that devour'd, but that which doth devour,
Is worthy blame. O ! let it not be hid³
Poor women's faults, that they are so fulfill'd
With men's abuses : those proud lords, to blame,
Make weak-made women tenants to their shame.

The precedent whereof in Lucrece view,
Assail'd by night, with circumstances strong
Of present death, and shame that might ensue
By that her death, to do her husband wrong :
Such danger to resistance did belong.

That dying fear through all her body spread ;
And who cannot abuse a body dead ?

By this, mild patience bid fair Lucrece speak
To the poor counterfeit of her complaining :
My girl, quoth she, on what occasion break
Those tears from thee, that down thy cheeks are raining ;
If thou dost weep for grief of my sustaining,
Know, gentle wench, it small avails my mood :
If tears could help, mine own would do me good.

But tell me, girl, when went—(and there she stay'd Till after a deep groan) Tarquin from hence ?
Madam, ere I was up, replied the maid ;
The more to blame my sluggard negligence :
Yet with the fault I thus far can dispense ;
Myself was stirring ere the break of day,
And, ere I rose, was Tarquin gone away.

But, lady, if your maid may be so bold,
She would request to know your heaviness.
O peace ! quoth Lucrece : if it should be told,
The repetition cannot make it less ;
For more it is than I can well express :
And that deep torture may be call'd a hell,
When more is felt than one hath power to tell.

Go, get me hither paper, ink, and pen,—
Yet save that labour, for I have them here.
What should I say ?—One of my husband's men
Bid thou be ready by and by, to bear
A letter to my lord, my love, my dear :
Bid him with speed prepare to carry it ;
The cause craves haste, and it will soon be writ.

Her maid is gone, and she prepares to write,
First hovering o'er the paper with her quill.
Conceit and grief an eager combat fight ;
What wit sets down is blotted straight with will :
This is too curious-good, this blunt and ill :
Much like a press of people at a door
Through her inventions, which shall go before.

At last she thus begins : "Thou worthy lord
Of that unworthy wife that greeteth thee,
Health to thy person : next, vouchsafe t' afford
(If ever, love, thy Lucrece thou wilt see)
Some present speed to come and visit me.

So I commend me from our house in grief :
My woes are tedious, though my words are brief."⁴

Here folds she up the tenour of her woe,
Her certain sorrow writ uncertainly.
By this short schedule Collatine may know
Her grief, but not her grief's true quality :
She dares not thereof make discovery,
Lest he should hold it her own gross abuse,
Ere she with blood had stain'd her stain'd excuse.

¹ It was usual for testators to appoint not only executors, but overseers of their wills. Shakespeare did so. ² called : in mod. eds. ³ Ecce

Besides, the life and feeling of her passion
 She hoards, to spend when he is by to hear her;
 When sighs and groans and tears may grace the fashion
 Of her disgrace, the better so to clear her
 From that suspicion which the world might bear her.
 To shun this blot she would not blot the letter
 With words, till action might become them better.

To see sad sights moves more than hear them told,
 For then the eye interprets to the ear
 The heavy motion that it doth behold.
 When every part a part of woe doth bear:
 'Tis but a part of sorrow that we hear;
 Deep sounds make lesser noise than shallow fords,
 And sorrow ebbs, being blown with wind of words.

Her letter now is seal'd, and on it writ,
 "At Ardea to my lord, with more than haste."
 The post attends, and she delivers it,
 Charging the sour-fac'd groom to hie as fast
 As lagging fowls before the northern blast:
 Speed more than speed but dull and slow she deems;
 Extremity still urgeth such extremes.

The homely villain court'sies to her low,
 And, blushing on her, with a steadfast eye
 Receives the scroll, without or yea or no,
 And forth with bashful innocence doth hie;
 But they whose guilt within their bosoms lie,
 Imagine every eye beholds their blame,
 For Lucrece thought he blush'd to see her shame;

When, silly groom! God wot, it was defect
 Of spirit, life, and bold audacity.
 Such harmless creatures have a true respect
 To talk in deeds, while others sanctify
 Promise more speed, but do it leisurely:
 Even so this pattern of a vorn-out age
 Pawn'd honest looks, but lay'd no words to gage.

His kindled duty kindled her mistrust,
 That two red fires in both their faces blazed:
 She thought he blush'd, as knowing Tarquin's lust,
 And, blushing with him, wistly on him gazed;
 Her earnest eye did make him more amazed:
 The more she saw the blood his cheeks replenish,
 The more she thought he spied in her some blemish.

But long she thinks till he return again,
 And yet the duteous vassal scarce is gone.
 The weary time she cannot entertain,
 For now 'tis stale to sigh, to weep, and groan:
 So woe hath wearied woe, moan tired moan,
 That she her plants a little while doth stay,
 Pausing for means to mourn some newer way.

At last she calls to mind where hangs a piece
 Of skilful painting, made for Priam's Troy:
 Before the which is drawn the power of Greece,
 For Helen's rape the city to destroy.
 Threatening cloud kissing Ilion with annoy:
 Which the conceited painter drew so proud,
 As heaven it seem'd to kiss the turrets bow'd.

A thousand lamentable objects there,
 In scorn of nature, art gave lifeless life.
 Many a dry drop seem'd a weeping tear,
 Shed for the slaughter'd husband by the wife:
 The red blood reek'd to show the painter's strife;

And dying eyes gleam'd forth their ashy lights
 Like dying coals burnt out in tedious nights.

There might you see the labouring pioneer
 Begrim'd with sweat, and smeared all with dust;
 And from the towers of Troy there would appear
 The very eyes of men through loop-holes thrust,
 Gazing upon the Greeks with little lust:
 Such sweet observance in this work was had,
 That one might see those far-off eyes look sad.

In great commanders grace and majesty
 You might behold, triumphing in their faces;
 In youth quick bearing and dexterity;
 And here and there the painter interlaces
 Pale cowards, marching on with trembling paces:
 Which heartless peasants did so well resemble, [bie
 That one would swear he saw them quake and trem

In Ajax and Ulysses, O, what art
 Of physiognomy might one behold!
 The face of either 'cipher'd either's heart;
 Their face their manners most expressly told.
 In Ajax' eyes blunt rage and rigour roll'd;
 But the mild glance that sly Ulysses lent,
 Show'd deep regard and smiling government.

There pleading might you see grave Nestor stand,
 As 't were encouraging the Greeks to fight;
 Making such sober action with his hand.
 That it beguill'd attention, charm'd the sight.
 In speech, it seem'd, his beard, all silver white,
 Wagg'd up and down, and from his lips did fly
 Thin winding breath, which pur'd up to the sky.

About him were a press of gaping faces,
 Which seem'd to swallow up his sound advice
 All jointly listening, but with several graces,
 As if some mermaid did their ears entice:
 Some high, some low; the painter was so nice,
 The scalps of many, almost hid behind,
 To jump up higher seem'd, to mock the mind.

Here one man's hand lean'd on another's head,
 His nose being shadow'd by his neighbour's ear;
 Here one, being throng'd, bears back, all boll'd and red
 Another, smother'd, seems to pelt and swear;
 And in their rage such signs of rage they bear,
 As, but for loss of Nestor's golden words,
 It seem'd they would debate with angry swords.

For much imaginary work was there;
 Conceit deceitful, so compact, so kind,
 That for Achilles' image stood his spear,
 Grip'd in an armed hand: himself behind
 Was left unseen, save to the eye of mind.
 A hand, a foot, a face, a leg, a head,
 Stood for the whole to be imagin'd.

And from the walls of strong besieged Troy
 When their brave hope, bold Hector, march'd to field
 Stood many Trojan mothers, sharing joy
 To see their youthful sons bright weapons wield;
 And to their hope they such odd action yield,
 That through their light joy seem'd to appear
 (Like bright things stain'd) a kind of heavy fear.

And from the strond of Dardan, where they fought,
 To Simois' reedy banks the red blood ran,

Whose waves to imitate the battle sought
 With swelling ridges ; and their ranks began
 To break upon the galled shore, and than¹
 Retire again, till meeting greater ranks,
 They join, and shoot their foam at Simois' banks.

To this well-painted piece is Lucrece come,
 To find a face where all distress is steld².
 Many she sees, where cares have carved some,
 But none where all distress and dolour dwell'd,
 Till she despairing Hecuba beheld,
 Staring on Priam's wounds with her old eyes,
 Which bleeding under Pyrrhus' proud foot lies.

In her the painter had anatomiz'd
 Time's ruin, beauty's wreck, and grim care's reign :
 Her cheeks with chaps and wrinkles were disguis'd,
 Of what she was no semblance did remain ;
 Here blue blood chang'd to black in every vein,
 Wanting the spring that those shrunk pipes had fed,
 Show'd life imprison'd in a body dead.

On this sad shadow Lucrece spends her eyes,
 And shapes her sorrow to the beldam's woes,
 Who nothing wants to answer but her cries,
 And bitter words to ban her cruel foes :
 The painter was no God to lend her those ;
 And therefore Lucrece swears he did her wrong,
 To give her so much grief, and not a tongue.

Poor instrument, quoth she, without a sound,
 I'll tune thy woes with my lamenting tongue,
 And drop sweet balm in Priam's painted wound,
 And rail on Pyrrhus that hath done him wrong,
 And with my tears quench Troy, that burns so long,
 And with my knife scratch out the angry eyes
 Of all the Greeks that are thine enemies.

Show me the strumpet that began this stir,
 That with my nails her beauty I may tear.
 Thy heat of lust, fond Paris, did incur
 This load of wrath that burning Troy doth bear :
 Thine eye kindled the fire that burneth here ;
 And here, in Troy, for trespass of thine eye,
 The sire, the son, the dame, and daughter die.

Why should the private pleasure of some one
 Become the public plague of many more ?
 Let sin, alone committed, light alone
 Upon his head that hath transgressed so ;
 Let guiltless souls be freed from guilty woe.
 For one's offence why should so many fall,
 To plague a private sin in general ?

Lo ! here weeps Hecuba, here Priam dies,
 Here manly Hector faints, here Troilus swoons ;
 Here friend by friend in bloody channel lies,
 And friend to friend gives unadvised wounds,
 And one man's lust these many lives confounds.
 Had doting Priam check'd his son's desire,
 Troy had been bright with fame and not with fire.

Here feelingly she weeps Troy's painted woes ;
 For sorrow, like a heavy hanging bell,
 Once set on ringing, with his own weight goes ;
 Then little strength rings out the doleful knell :
 So Lucrece, set a-work, sad tales doth tell
 To pencil'd pensiveness and colour'd sorrow ; frow.
 She lends them words, and she their looks doth bor-

She throws her eyes about the painting, round,
 And whom she finds forlorn she doth lament :
 At last she sees a wretched image bound,
 That piteous looks to Phrygian shepherds lent ;
 His face, though full of cares, yet show'd content.
 Onward to Troy with the blunt swains he goes,
 So mild, that patience seem'd to scorn his woes

In him the painter labour'd with his skill
 To hide deceit, and give the harmless show ;
 An humble gait, calm looks, eyes wailing still,
 A brow unbent that seem'd to welcome woe ;
 Cheeks neither red nor pale, but mingled so
 That blushing red no guilty instance gave,
 Nor ashy pale the fear that false hearts have.

But, like a constant and confirmed devil,
 He entertain'd a show so seeming just,
 And therein so ensconced his secret evil,
 That jealousy itself could not mistrust,
 False-creeping craft and perjury should thrust
 Into so bright a day such black-face'd storms,
 Or blot with hell-born sin such saint-like forms.

The well-skill'd workman this mild image drew
 For perjur'd Sinon, whose enchanting story
 The credulous old Priam after slew ;
 Whose words like wild-fire burnt the shining glory
 Of rich-built Ilium, that the skies were sorry,
 And little stars shot from their fixed places,
 When their glass fell wherein they view'd their faces

This picture she advisedly perused,
 And chid the painter for his wondrous skill,
 Saying, some shape in Sinon's was abused ;
 So fair a form lodg'd not a mind so ill :
 And still on him she gaz'd ; and gazing still,
 Such signs of truth in his plain face she spied,
 That she concludes the picture was belied.

It cannot be, quoth she, that so much guile—
 (She would have said) can lurk in such a look ;
 But Tarquin's shape came in her mind the while,
 And from her tongue, "can lurk" from "cannot" took
 "It cannot be" she in that sense forsook,
 And turn'd it thus : it cannot be, I find,
 But such a face should bear a wicked mind

For even as subtle Sinon here is painted,
 So sober-sad, so weary, and so mild,
 (As if with grief or travail he had fainted)
 To me came Tarquin armed ; too⁴ beguil'd⁵ ?
 With outward honesty, but yet defil'd
 With inward vice : as Priam him did cherish,
 So did I Tarquin ; so my Troy did perish.

Look, look ! how listening Priam wets his eyes,
 To see those borrow'd tears that Sinon sheds.
 Priam, why art thou old, and yet not wise ?
 For every tear he falls a Trojan bleeds :
 His eye drops fire, no water thence proceeds ;
 Those round clear pearls of his, that move thy pity
 Are balls of quenchless fire to burn thy cry.

Such devils steal effects from lightless hell,
 For Sinon in his fire doth quake with cold,
 And in that cold, hot-burning fire doth dwell ;
 These contraries such unity do hold,
 Only to flatter fools and make them bold :

¹ Often used, as here, for "then." ² No other instance is known of the use of this word. In Sonnet XXIV. we have steep'd used in similar sense. ³ More ⁴ as : in mod. eds. Masked, or in the guise of.

So Priam's trust false Sinon's tears doth flatter,
That he finds means to burn his Troy with water.

Here, all enrag'd, such passion her assails,
That patience is quite beaten from her breast.
She tears the senseless Sinon with her nails,
Comparing him to that unhappy guest:
Whose deed hath made herself herself detest:
At last she smilingly with this gives o'er;
Fool! fool! quoth she, his wounds will not be sore.

Thus ebbs and flows the current of her sorrow,
And time doth weary time with her complaining.
She longs for night, and then she longs for morning,
And both she thinks too long with her remaining.
Short time seems long in sorrow's sharp sustaining:
Though woe be heavy, yet it seldom sleeps;
And they that watch see time how slow it creeps.

Which all this time hath overslipp'd her thought,
That she with painted images hath spent,
Being from the feeling of her own grief brought
By deep surmise of others' detriment;
Losing her woes in shows of discontent.
It easeth some, though none it ever cures,
To think their dolour others have endured.

But now the mindful messenger, come back;
Brings home his lord and other company.
Who finds his Lucrece clad in mourning black;
And round about her tear-distained eye
Blue circles stream'd, like rainbows in the sky:
These water-galls in her dim element
Foretel new storms to those already spent.

Which when her sad-beholding husband saw,
Amazed in her sad face he stares:
Her eyes, though sod in tears, look'd red and raw;
Her lively colour kill'd with deadly cares.
He hath no power to ask her how she fares;
Both stood like old acquaintance in a trance,
Met far from home, wondering each other's chance.

At last he takes her by the bloodless hand,
And thus begins: What uncouth ill event
Hath thee befall'n, that thou dost trembling stand?
Sweet love, what spite hath thy fair colour spent?
Why art thou thus attir'd in discontent?
Unmask, dear dear, this moody heaviness,
And tell thy grief that we may give redress.

Three times with sighs she gives her sorrow fire,
Ere once she can discharge one word of woe:
At length, address'd to answer his desire,
She modestly prepares to let them know
Her honour is ta'en prisoner by the foe;
While Collatine and his consorted lords
With sad attention long to hear her words.

And now this pale swan in her watery nest
Begins the sad dirge of her certain ending.
Few words, quoth she, shall fit the trespass best,
Where no excuse can give the fault amending:
In me no woes than words are now depending;
And my laments would be drawn out too long,
To tell them all with one poor tired tongue.

Then, be this all the task it hath to say:
Dear husband, in the interest of thy bed

A stranger came, and on that pillow lay
Where thou wast wont to rest thy weary head:
And what wrong else may be imagined
By foul enforcement might be done to me,
From that, alas! thy Lucrece is not free.

For in the dreadful dead of dark midnight,
With shining falchion in my chamber came
A creeping creature, with a flaming light,
And softly cried, Awake, thou Roman dame,
And entertain my love; else lasting shame
On thee and thine this night I will inflict,
If thou my love's desire do contradict.

For some hard-favour'd groom of thine, quoth he,
Unless thou yoke thy liking to my will,
I'll murder straight, and then I'll slaughter thee
And swear I found you where you did fulfil
The loathsome act of lust, and so did kill
The lechers in their deed: this act will be
My fame, and thy perpetual infamy.

With this I did begin to start and cry,
And then against my heart he set his sword,
Swearing, unless I took all patiently,
I should not live to speak another word;
So should my shame still rest upon record,
And never be forgot in mighty Rome
Th' adulterate death of Lucrece and her groom.

Mine enemy was strong, my poor self weak,
And far the weaker with so strong a fear:
My bloody judge forbade my tongue to speak;
No rightful plea might plead for justice there:
His scarlet lust came evidence to swear
That my poor beauty had purloin'd his eyes,
And when the judge is rob'd, the prisoner dies.

O! teach me how to make mine own excuse,
Or, at the least, this refuge let me find:
Though my gross blood be stain'd with this abuse.
Immaculate and spotless is my mind;
That was not forc'd; that never was inclin'd
To accessory yieldings, but still pure
Doth in her poison'd closet yet endure.

Lo! here the hopeless merchant of this loss,
With head declin'd, and voice damm'd up with woe
With sad set eyes, and wretched arms across,
From lips new waxen pale begins to blow
The grief away, that stops his answer so;
But wretched as he is, he strives in vain,
What he breathes out, his breath drinks up again.

As through an arch the violent roaring tide
Out-runs the eye that doth behold his haste,
Yet in the eddy boundeth in his pride
Back to the strait that forc'd him on so fast,
In rage sent out, recall'd in rage, being past;
Even so his sighs, his sorrows, make a saw,
To push grief on, and back the same grief draw.

Which speechless woe of his poor she attendeth,
And his untimely frenzy thus awaketh:
Dear lord, thy sorrow to my sorrow lendeth
Another power; no flood by raining maketh
My woe, too sensible, thy passion maketh
More feeling painful: let it, then, suffice
To drown one woe, one pair of weeping eyes.

And for my sake, when I might charm thee so,
For she that was thy Lucrece, now attend me :
Be suddenly revenged on my foe,
Thine, mine, his own : suppose thou dost defend me
From what is past, the help that thou shalt lend me
Comes all too late, yet let the traitor die ;
For sparing justice feeds iniquity.

But ere I name him, you fair lords, quoth she,
(Speaking to those that came with Collatine)
Shall plight your honourable faiths to me,
With swift pursuit to venge this wrong of mine ;
For 't is a meritorious fair design,
To chase injustice with revengeful arms : [harmes.
Knights, by their oaths, should right poor ladies'

At this request, with noble disposition
Each present lord began to promise aid,
As bound in knighthood to her imposition,
Longing to hear the hateful foe bewray'd ;
But she, that yet her sad task hath not said,
The protestation stops. O ! speak, quoth she,
How may this forced stain be wip'd from me ?

What is the quality of mine offence,
Being constrain'd with dreadful circumstance ?
May my pure mind with the foul act dispense,
My low-declin'd honour to advance ?
May any terms acquit me from this chance ?
The poison'd fountain clears itself again,
And why not I from this compelled stain ?

With this, they all at once began to say,
Her body's stain her mind untainted clears ;
While with a joyless smile she turns away
The face, that map which deep impression bears
Of hard misfortune, carv'd in it with tears.
No, no, quoth she ; no name, hereafter living,
By my excuse shall claim excuse's giving.

Here, with a sigh as if her heart would break,
She throws forth Tarquin's name : " he, he," she says,
But more than " he" her poor tongue could not speak ;
Till after many accents and delays,
Untimely breathings, sick and short assays,
She utters this : he, he, fair lords, 't is he,
That guides this hand to give this wound to me.

Even here she sheathed in her harmless breast
A harmful knife, that thence her soul unsheathed :
That blow did bail it from the deep unrest
Of that polluted prison where it breathed :
Her contrite sighs unto the clouds bequeathed
Her winged sprite, and through her wounds doth fly
Life's lasting date from cancel'd destiny.

Stone-still, astonish'd with this deadly deed,
Stood Collatine and all his lordly crew ;
Till Lucrece' father, that beholds her bleed,
Himself on her self-slaughter'd body threw :
And from the purple fountain Brutus drew
The murderous knife, and as it left the place,
Her blood, in poor revenge, held it in chase ;

And bubbling from her breast, it doth divide
In two slow rivers, that the crimson blood
Circles her body in on every side,
Who like a late-sack'd island vastly stood,
Bare and unpeopled, in this fearful flood.

Some of her blood still pure and red remain'd,
And some look'd black, and that false Tarquin stain'd

About the mourning and congealed face
Of that black blood a watery rigol¹ goes,
Which seems to weep upon the tainted place :
And ever since, as pitying Lucrece' woes,
Corrupted blood some watery tokens shows ;
And blood untainted still doth red abide,
Blushing at that which is so putrid² f'd.

Daughter, dear daughter ! old Lucretius cries,
That life was mine, which thou hast here deprived
If in the child the father's image lies,
Where shall I live, now Lucrece is unliv'd ?
Thou wast not to this end from me derived.

If children pre-decease progenitors,
We are their offspring, and they none of ours.

Poor broken glass, I often did behold
In thy sweet semblance my old age new-born ;
But now that fair fresh mirror, dim and old,
Shows me a bare-bon'd death by time out-worn.
O ! from thy cheeks my image thou hast torn,
And shiver'd all the beauty of my glass,
That I no more can see what once I was.

O time ! cease thou thy course, and last no longer
If they surcease to be that should survive.
Shall rotten death make conquest of the stronger,
And leave the faltering feeble souls alive ?
The old bees die, the young possess their hive :
Then, live sweet Lucrece ; live again, and see
Thy father die, and not thy father thee !

By this starts Collatine as from a dream,
And bids Lucretius give his sorrow place ;
And then in key-cold Lucrece' bleeding stream
He falls, and bathes the pale fear in his face,
And counterfeits to die with her a space ;
Till manly shame bids him possess his breath.
And live to be revenged on her death.

The deep vexation of his inward soul
Hath serv'd a dumb arrest upon his tongue ;
Who, mad that sorrow should his use control,
Or keep him from heart-easing words so long,
Begins to talk ; but through his lips do throng
Weak words, so thick come in his poor heart's aid,
That no man could distinguish what he said.

Yet sometime Tarquin was pronounced plain,
But through his teeth, as if the name he tore.
This windy tempest, till it blow up rain,
Held back his sorrow's tide to make it more ;
At last it rains, and busy winds give o'er :
Then, son and father weep with equal strife,
Who should weep most, for daughter or for wife.

The one doth call her his, the other his,
Yet neither may possess the claim they lay.
The father says, She's mine : O ! mine she is Replies her husband : Do not take away
My sorrow's interest ; let no mourner say
He weeps for her, for she was only mine,
And only must be wail'd by Collatine.

O ! quoth Lucretius, I did give that life,
Which she too early and too late hath spill'd.

¹ Circle.

Woe, woe! quoth Collatine, she was my wife,
I ow'd her, and 't is mine that she hath kill'd,
"My daughter" and "my wife" with clamours
fill'd

The dispers'd air, who holding Lucrece' life,
Answer'd their cries, "my daughter and my wife."

Brutus, who pluck'd the knife from Lucrece' side,
Seeing such emulation in their woe,
Began to clothe his wit in state and pride,
Burying in Lucrece' wound his folly's show.
He with the Romans was esteemed so
As silly jeering idiots are with kings,
For sportive words, and uttering foolish things:

But now he throws that shallow habit by,
Wherein deep policy did him disguise,
And arm'd his long-bid wits advisedly,
To check the tears in Collatinus' eyes.
Thou wronged lord of Rome, quoth he, arise:
Let my unsounded self, suppos'd a fool,
Now set thy long-experienc'd wit to school.

Why, Collatine, is woe the cure for woes?
Do wounds help wounds, or grief help grievous deeds?

Is it revenge to give thyself a blow,
For his foul act by whom thy fair wife bleeds?
Such childish humour from weak minds proceeds;
Thy wretched wife mistook the matter so,
To slay herself that should have slain her foe.

Courageous Roman, do not steep thy heart
In such relenting dew of lamentations,
But kneel with me, and help to bear thy part,
To rouse our Roman gods with invocations,
That they will suffer these abominations,
Since Rome herself in them doth stand disgraced,
By our strong arms from forth her fair streets chased.

Now, by the Capitol that we adore,
And by this chaste blood so unjustly stained,
By heaven's fair sun that breeds the fat earth's store,
By all our country rights in Rome maintained,
And by chaste Lucrece' soul, that late complained
Her wrongs to us, and by this bloody knife,
We will revenge the death of this true wife.

This said, he struck his hand upon his breast,
And kiss'd the fatal knife to end his vow;
And to his protestation urg'd the rest,
Who, wondering at him, did his words allow;
Then, jointly to the ground their knees they bow,
And that deep vow which Brutus made before,
He doth again repeat, and that they swore.

When they had sworn to this advised doom
They did conclude to bear dead Lucrece thence
To show her bleeding body thorough Rome,
And so to publish Tarquin's foul offence:
Which being done with speedy diligence,
The Romans plausibly¹ did give consent
To Tarquin's everlasting banishment.

SONNETS.

INTRODUCTION.

Shakespeare's Sonnets. Nener before Imprinted. At London By G. Eld for T. T. and are to be sold by William Aspley. 1609. 4to. 40 leaves.

A Louers complaint. By William Shakespeare, occupies eleven pages at the end of this volume. The late Mr. Caldecot presented a copy of "Shakespeare's Sonnets" to the Bodleian Library, with the following imprint: "At London By G. Eld for T. T. and are to be sold by Iohn Wright, dwelling at Christ Church gate." It is no doubt the same edition as that "to be sold by William Aspley," for in other respects they agree exactly, excepting that the copy bearing the name of Iohn Wright has no date at the bottom of the title-page: it was very possibly cut off by the binder.

"Shakespeare's Sonnets" were printed under that title, and with the name of the poet in unusually large capital letters, in 1609. No Christian name is to be found until we arrive at "A Lover's Complaint," but "Shakespeare's Sonnets" is repeated at the head of the first of the series. Hence we may possibly be warranted in assuming that they were productions well known to have been for some time floating about among the lovers and admirers of poetry, and then collected into a volume. The celebrity of the author seems proved, if any proof of the kind were wanting, by the manner in which his "Sonnets" were put forth to the world.

There is one fact connected with the original publication of "Shakespeare's Sonnets" which has hitherto escaped remark, none of the commentators, apparently, being aware of it; viz. that although there were not two editions of them in 1609, there is an important difference in the title-pages of some copies of the impression of that year, which shows that a bookseller, not hitherto connected with the publication of any of our poet's works, was in some way concerned in the first edition of his "Sonnets." The usual imprint informs us, that they were printed by G. Eld, for T. T. and were to be sold by William Aspley (without any address); but the late Mr. Caldecot had a copy which stated that they were to be sold, not by William Aspley, (who had been one of the partners in "Much ado about Nothing," 1600, 4to., and "Henry IV.," part ii. 1600, 4to.) but by "John Wright, dwelling at Christ Church Gate." No other copy with which we are acquainted has this variation in the title-page, and possibly T. T. had some reason for having it cancelled, and for substituting the name of Aspley for that of Wright: the former might be better known to the ordinary buyers of such books, and to the two quarto plays in which he was interested, he, perhaps, did not think it necessary to append the place where his business was carried on.

The application of the initials T. T., on the title-page, is ascertained from the Registers of the Stationers' Company, where the subsequent entry is found:—

"20 May 1609.

Tho. Thorpe] A booke called Shakespeare's Sonnets."

Thorpe was a bookseller of considerable eminence, who usually put his name at full length upon his title-pages, and why he did not do so in this instance, and also subscribed only T. T. to the dedication of the Sonnets, is a matter we should consider of little or no consequence, if it related to the productions of perhaps any other author but Shakespeare. It sometimes happened of old, that if it were suspected that a work might contain anything publicly or personally objectionable, the printer or the stationer only allowed their initials to appear in connection with it. That such was the case here, there is no sufficient ground for believing; and Eld avowed himself the printer, and Aspley the seller of "Shakespeare's Sonnets."

A question has arisen, and has been much disputed of late years, who was the individual to whom Thorpe dedicated these sonnets, and whom, in a very unprecedented and peculiar form, he addresses as "Mr. W. H." That form is precisely as follows, on a separate leaf immediately succeeding the title-page:—

TO. THE. ONLIE. BEGETTER. OF.
THESE. INSVING. SONNETS.
MR. W. H. ALL. HAPPINESSE.
AND. THAT. ETERNITIE.
PROMISED.
BY.
OUR. EVER-LIVING. POET.
WISETH.
THE. WELL-WISHING.
ADVENTYRER. IN.
SETTING.
FORTH.
T. T.

We are not aware that there is another instance in our language, at that period, of a dedication of a similar kind, and in a similar style. It was not at all uncommon for booksellers to subscribe dedications; but it more frequently happened after the death of an author than during his life, and never, that we recollect, in a manner so remarkable. The discussion has been carried on with some pertinacity on the question, what person was addressed as "Mr. W. H.?" and various replies have been made to it. Farmer conjectured wildly that he might be William Hart, the poet's nephew, who was only born in 1600: Tyrwhitt guessed from a line in one of the sonnets (Son. XX.) that the name was W. Hughes, or Hews:

"A man in hue, all hues in his controlling."

which is thus printed in the 4to, 1609:

"A man in hew all Hews in his contrawling."

Although the word "hue" is repeatedly spelt hew in the old edition, this is the only instance in which it is printed in Italic type, and with a capital letter, exactly the same as Will, in Sonnets CXXXV., CXXXVI., and CXLIII., where the author plays upon his own name. Dr. Drake imagined that W. H. were the initials of Henry Wrothesley, Earl of Southampton, inverted ("Shakespeare and his Times," vol. ii. p. 62); and of late years Bodden, with great ingenuity, has contended that W. H. meant William Herbert, Earl of Pembroke! This last notion seems too much taken for granted by Mr. C. Armitage Brown, in his very clever and, in many respects, original work, "Shakespeare's Autobiographical Poems," 8vo., 1833; but we own that we cannot accord in that, or in any other theory that has yet been advanced upon the point. We have no suggestion of our own to offer, and acquiescence in one opinion or in another in no way affects any position regarding them which we might be disposed to take up; but it seems to us the very height of improbability that a bookseller in the year 1609, when peculiar respect was paid to nobility and station, would venture to address an Earl and a Knight of the Garter merely as "Mr. W. H.?" How-

¹ In a small pamphlet, entitled "On the Sonnets of Shakespeare, identifying the Person to whom they were addressed, and elucidating several points in the Poet's History. By James Bodden." 8vo. 1838. The whole substance of the tract had been published in 1832 in a periodical work. We differ from Mr. Bodden with the more reluctance, because it appears that his notion was supported by the opinion of Mr. B. Heywood Bright, well known for his acuteness and learning, who, without any previous communication, had fallen upon the same conjecture before it was broached by Bodden.

² Upon this particular point we concur with Mr. Peter Cunningham, in a note to his excellent edition of Mr. T. Campbell's "Specimens of British Poets," (Essay, p. lxxi.) but we can by no means follow him in thinking that Shakespeare's Sonnets have been "ever-rated," or that the Earl of Pembroke could not have been addressed in them, because he was only nine years old in 1595. Shakespeare had written sonnets at that date, according to the undoubted testimony of Meres, but those in which the Earl has been supposed to be addressed may have been produced at a considerably later period. Still, at the age of eighteen or nineteen, which the Earl reached in 1609, it does not seem likely that Shakespeare would have thought it necessary, with so much vehemence, to urge him to marry.

ever, notwithstanding the pains taken to settle the dispute, we hold it to be one of comparatively little importance, and it is certainly one upon which we are not likely to arrive at a final and satisfactory decision. To the desperate speculation of Chalmers, that not a few of the Sonnets were addressed to Queen Elizabeth, though maintained with considerable ability and learning, it is hardly necessary even to advert.

It is evident that the Sonnets were written at very different periods of Shakespeare's life, and under very different circumstances—some in youth, some in more advanced age; some when he was hopeful and happy, and some when he was desponding and afflicted at his own condition in life, and place in society. In many there are to be found most remarkable indications of self-confidence, and of assurance in the immortality of his verses, and in this respect the author's opinion was constant and uniform. He never scrupled to express it, and perhaps there is no writer of ancient or of modern times who, for the quantity of such writings left behind him, has so frequently or so strongly declared his firm belief that what he had written, in this department of poetry, "the world would not willingly let die." This conviction seems hardly reconcilable with the carelessness he appears to have displayed for the preservation of his dramatic writings. We know from Francis Meres that Shakespeare's Sonnets were scattered among his friends in 1598, and no doubt he continued to add to them from year to year; but it was left to a bookseller in 1609, perhaps, to cause them to be collected, and to be printed in a separate volume.

It is with reference to this circumstance that we understand Thorpe to address "Mr. W. H.," in the dedication, as "the only begetter of these ensuing Sonnets." Boswell quoted a passage from Dekker's "Satiromastix," 1602, (and many other instances might be adduced) to prove that "begetter" only meant obtainer or procureur; and as Thorpe had been under some obligation to W. H., for collecting Shakespeare's scattered Sonnets from various parties, for this reason, perhaps, he inscribed them to him. There is no doubt that "Mr. W. H." could not be "the only begetter" of the Sonnets in any other sense, for it is indisputable that many of them are addressed to a woman; and though a male object might have been the cause of some of them, and particularly of the first twenty-six, could not have been the cause of the last twenty-seven Sonnets.

We have already mentioned Mr. Brown's work, "Shakespeare's Autobiographical Poems," which, with a few errors and inconsistencies of little moment, contains the best solution of various difficulties arising out of these Sonnets yet published. He contends that Shakespeare used the form of the sonnet as Spenser and many others employed stanzas of various descriptions, and that 152 of the 154 Sonnets are divisible into six distinct poems. His arrangement of them is the following; and we think with him, that if they be read with this key, much will be intelligible which upon any other supposition must remain obscure:—

First Poem. Sonnets 1 to 26. To his friend, persuading him to marry.

Second Poem. Sonnets 27 to 55. To his friend, forgiving him for having robbed him of his mistress.

Third Poem. Sonnets 56 to 77. To his friend, complaining of his oldness, and warning him of life's decay.

Fourth Poem. Sonnets 78 to 101. To his friend, complaining that he prefers another poet's praises, and reproving him for faults that may injure his character.

Fifth Poem. Sonnets 102 to 126. To his friend, excusing himself for having been some time silent, and disclaiming the charge of inconstancy.

I.

FROM fairest creatures we desire increase,
That thereby beauty's rose might never die,
But as the ripper should by time decrease,
His tender heir might bear his memory;
But thou, contracted to thine own bright eyes,
Feed'st thy light's flame with self-substantial fuel.

The following are the words Meres uses:—"As the scale of Earth runs we desire to live in Pithagoras, so the sweetest writte of Ovid lives in me: Ovid is and honest-tongued Shakespeare. Withall his Venus and Adonis his Lucrece, his sugred Sonnets among his private friends."—Petricha Tania, 1590, fo. 24, b.

This is the first where Shakespeare (Sen. xxxv. lxxv) calls "a better verse" and "a better" in Seneca, in xxxv. lxxv. Ac. Some have supposed that the poet Spenser, others Daniel; but Mr. P. C. in his collection of Sonnets, published in 1594, under the title of "Idea's Mirror" in Shakespeare's twenty-first Sonnet, in these lines:—

Sixth Poem. Sonnets 127 to 152. To his mistress, on her infidelity.

Mr. Brown asserts, and goes far to prove, that the Sonnets in the first five of these divisions are consecutive, following up the same thought, and working out the same purpose. With regard to the "sixth poem," as he terms it, he contends that the Sonnets have been confused, and that they are not, like the others, to be read in the order in which they were printed in the edition of 1609. He rejects the last two Sonnets as no part of any of the six poems, and they are unquestionably somewhat incongruous.

Many years ago, long before the appearance of Mr. Brown's volume, it had occurred to us, as a mode merely of removing some of the difficulties attending this portion of the works of Shakespeare, that it was possible that he had consented to write some of them, not in his own person, but for individuals who asked his assistance. We entirely abandon that supposition, notwithstanding we are aware that such was not an uncommon practice in Shakespeare's age. Gascoigne, who died in 1577, mentions that he had been frequently employed: the author of "The Forest of Fancy," 1579, tells us that he had written many of the poems it contains for persons "who had occasion to crave his help in that behalf;" and Sir John Harrington, in his Epigrams, written probably about 1591, states expressly,

"Verses are grown such merchantable ware,
That now for Sonnets sellers are and buyers."

Marston, in his Satires, 1598, accuses "Roscio the tragedian" of having written some love-verses for Mutio, and he adds elsewhere that "absolute Castilio" had supplied himself in a similar manner, in order that he might pay acceptable court to his mistress. Therefore, if Shakespeare had now and then condescended to supply the wants of his friends in this way, who thus became possessed of his "sugred Sonnets," as Meres calls them, it would, at all events, not have been without precedent.

Thorpe's edition of "Shakespeare's Sonnets" is a well printed volume, although not perhaps so good a specimen of the typography of that time, as Field's impressions of "Venus and Adonis" and "Lucrece." It is remarkable, that while most of Shakespeare's plays came from the press in the quarto editions in so slovenly and uncorrected a state, his minor poems have been handed down to us, perhaps, more accurately printed than those of any poets of the time, with the exception of Daniel and Drayton, who seem generally to have bestowed great pains upon their productions. At the end of the "Sonnets" is a poem, called "A Lover's Complaint;" and here, although it has no fresh title-page, we are assured that it is "by William Shakespeare." There could in fact be no doubt respecting the authorship of it; but on what occasion, or for what purpose it was written, we have no information.

The ensuing Sonnets, with other poems, were reprinted in 1640, 8vo, with a frontispiece of the author, engraved by Marshall. It is an edition of no authority: it repeats and multiplies the errors of the previous separate impressions, and includes productions with which Shakespeare had no concern.

Our text is that of the 4to, 1609, in every case where a reason is not assigned for deviating from it. In all modern reprints various errors have been committed in consequence of carelessness of collation, or because one editor copied the mistakes of another: of these our notes will contain a sufficient indication.

Making a famine where abundance lies,
Thyself thy foe, to thy sweet self too cruel.
Thou that art now the world's fresh ornament,
And only herald to the gaudy spring,
Within thine own buduriest thy content.
And, tender churl, mak'st waste in niggarding.
Pity the world, or else this glutton be,
To eat the world's due, by the grave and thee.

"So is it not with me, as with that muse,
Stirred by a painted beauty to his verse,
Who heaven itself for ornament do use,
And every fair with his fair doth compare," &c.

It may be doubted whether in these, and the succeeding lines, Shakespeare had any individual reference. Drayton's "Idea's Mirror" has only been discovered of late years; and it seems not improbable that, like his "Endymion and Phoebe," (see the Bridge-water Catalogue, p. 110) he, for some reason, suppressed it. Only a single copy of each has been preserved.

II.

When forty winters shall besiege thy brow,
And dig deep trenches in thy beauty's field,
Thy youth's proud livery, so gaz'd on now,
Will be a tatter'd weed, of small worth held:
Then, being ask'd where all thy beauty lies,
Where all the treasure of thy lusty days,
To say, within thine own deep-sunken eyes,
Were an all-eating shame, and thriftless praise.
How much more praise deserv'd thy beauty's use,
If thou couldst answer—"This fair child of mine
Shall sum my count, and make my old excuse,—"
Proving his beauty by succession thine.

This were to be new made, when thou art old,
And see thy blood warm, when thou feel'st it cold.

III.

Look in thy glass, and tell the face thou viewest,
Now is the time that face should form another;
Whose fresh repair if now thou not renewest,
Thou dost beguile the world, unless some mother.
For where is she so fair, whose un-ear'd¹ womb
Disdains the tillage of thy husbandry?
Or who is he so fond,² will be the tomb
Of his self-love, to stop posterity?
Thou art thy mother's glass, and she in thee
Calls back the lovely April of her prime:
So thou through windows of thine age shalt see,
Despite of wrinkles, this thy golden time.

But if thou live, remember'd not to be,
Die single, and thine image dies with thee.

IV.

Unthrifty loveliness, why dost thou spend
Upon thyself thy beauty's legacy?
Nature's bequest gives nothing, but doth lend;
And being frank, she lends to those are free.
Then,auteous niggard, why dost thou abuse
The bounteous largess given thee to give?
Profitless usurer, why dost thou use
So great a sum of sums, yet canst not live?
For, having traffic with thyself alone,
Thou of thyself thy sweet self dost deceive.
Then how, when nature calls thee to be gone,
What acceptable audit canst thou leave?

Thy unus'd beauty must be tomb'd with thee,
Which, used, lives thine's executor to be.

V.

Those hours, that with gentle work did frame
The lovely gaze where every eye doth dwell,
Will play the tyrants to the very same,
And that unfair, which fairly doth excel:
For never-resting time leads summer on
To hideous winter, and confounds him there;
Sap check'd with frost, and lusty leaves quite gone,
Beauty o'er-snow'd and bareness every where:
Then, were not summer's distillation left,
A liquid prisoner pent in walls of glass,
Beauty's effect with beauty were bereft,
Nor it, nor no remembrance what it was:

But flowers distill'd, though they with winter meet,
Leese³ but their show; their substance still lives sweet.

VI.

Then, let not winter's ragged hand deface
In thee thy summer, ere thou be distill'd:
Make sweet some phial; treasure thou some place

With beauty's treasure, ere it be self-kill'd.
That use is not forbidden usury,
Which happies those that pay the willing loan;
That's for thyself to breed another thee,
Or ten times happier, be it ten for one:
Ten times thyself were happier than thou art,
If ten of thine ten times refigur'd thee.
Then what could death do if thou shouldst depart,
Leaving thee living in posterity?
Be not self-will'd, for thou art much too fair
To be death's conquest, and make worms thine heir.

VII.

Lo! in the orient when the gracious light
Lifts up his burning head, each under eye
Doth homage to his new-appearing sight,
Serving with looks his sacred majesty;
And having climbd the steep-up heavenly hill,
Resembling strong youth in his middle age,
Yet mortal looks adore his beauty still,
Attending on his golden pilgrimage:
But when from high-most pitch with weary ear,
Like feeble age, he reeleth from the day,
The eyes, fore duteous, now converted are
From his low tract, and look another way
So thou, thyself out-going in thy noon,
Unlook'd on diest, unless thou get a son.

VIII.

Music to hear⁴, why hear'st thou music sadly?
Sweets with sweets war not, joy delights in joy.
Why lov'st thou that which thou receiv'st not gladly
Or else receiv'st with pleasure thine annoy?
If the true concord of well-tuned sounds,
By unions married, do offend thine ear,
They do but sweetly chide thee, who confounds
In singleness the parts that thou shouldst bear.
Mark, how one string, sweet husband to another,
Strikes each in each by mutual ordering;
Resembling sire and child and happy mother,
Who all in one one pleasing note do sing:
Whose speechless song, being many, seeming one,
Sings this to thee,—thou single wilt prove none.

IX.

Is it for fear to wet a widow's eye,
That thou consum'st thyself in single life?
Ah! if thou issueless shalt hap to die,
The world will wail thee like a makeless⁵ wife,
The world will be thy widow, and still weep,
That thou no form of thee hast left behind,
When every private widow well may keep
By children's eyes, her husband's shape in mind.
Look, what an unthrif in the world doth spend,
Shifts but his place, for still the world enjoys it;
But beauty's waste hath in the world an end,
And kept unus'd, the user so destroys it.
No love to toward others in that bosom sits,
That on himself such murderous shame committs

X.

For shame! deny that thou bear'st love to any,
Who for thyself art so unprovident.
Grant, if thou wilt, thou art below'd of many,
But that thou none lov'st is most evident:
For thou art so possess'd with murderous hate,
That 'gainst thyself thou stick'st not to conspire,
Seeking that beauteous roof to ruinate,

¹ Unploughed. ² Foolish. ³ thy: in mod. eds. ⁴ Lo ⁵ Thou, whom it is music to hear. ⁶ Used indifferently for materials

Which to repair should be thy chief desire.
 O, change thy thought, that I may change my mind !
 Shall hate be fairer lodg'd than gentle love ?
 Be, as thy presence is, gracious and kind.
 Or, to thyself, at least, kind-hearted prove :
 Make thee another self, for love of me,
 That beauty still may live in thine or thee.

XI.

As fast as thou shalt wane, so fast thou growest
 In one of thine, from that which thou departest :
 And that fresh blood which youngly thou bestowest,
 Thou may'st call thine, when thou from youth convertest.
 Herein lives wisdom, beauty, and increase ;
 Without this, folly, age, and cold decay :
 If all were minded so, the times should cease,
 And threescore year would make the world away.
 Let those whom nature hath not made for store,
 Harsh, featureless, and rude, barrenly perish :
 Look, whom she best endow'd, she gave the more ;
 Which bounteous gift thou shouldst in bounty cherish.
 She carv'd thee for her seal, and meant thereby,
 Thou shouldst print more, not let that copy die.

XII.

When I do count the clock that tells the time,
 And see the brave day sunk in hideous night ;
 When I behold the violet past prime,
 And sable curls all silver'd o'er with white ;
 When lofty trees I see barren of leaves,
 Which erst from heat did canopy the herd,
 And summer's green all girded up in sheaves,
 Borne on the bier with white and bristly beard ;
 Then, of thy beauty do I question make,
 That thou among the wastes of time must go.
 Since sweets and beauties do themselves forsake,
 And die as fast as they see others grow ;
 And nothing 'gainst time's scythe can make defence,
 Save breed, to brave him, when he takes thee hence.

XIII.

O, that you were yourself ! but, love, you are
 No longer yours, than you yourself here live :
 Against this coming end you should prepare.
 And your sweet semblance to some other give :
 So should that beauty which you hold in lease,
 Find no determination : then, you were
 Yourself again, after yourself's decease,
 When your sweet issue your sweet form should bear.
 Who lets so fair a house fall to decay,
 Which husbandry in honour might uphold,
 Against the stormy gusts of winter's day,
 And barren rage of death's eternal cold ?
 O ! none but unthrifths. Dear my love, you know,
 You had a father : let your son say so.

XIV.

Not from the stars do I my judgment pluck,
 And yet, methinks, I have astronomy.
 But not to tell of good, or evil luck,
 Of plagues, or dearths, or seasons' quality ;
 Nor can I fortune to brief minutes tell,
 Pointing to each his thunder, rain, and wind ;
 Or say with princes if it shall go well,
 By oft predict that I in heaven find :
 But from thine eyes my knowledge I derive,
 And, constant stars, in them I read such art,
 As truth and beauty shall together thrive,

If from thyself to store thou wouldst convert :
 Or else of thee this I prognosticate,
 Thy end is truth's and beauty's doom and date.

XV.

When I consider every thing that grows
 Holds in perfection but a little moment ;
 That this huge stage presenteth nought but shows,
 Whereon the stars in secret influence comment,
 When I perceive that men as plants increase,
 Cheered and check'd even by the selfsame sky,
 Vant in their youthful sap, at height decrease
 And wear their brave state out of memory ;
 Then, the conceit of this inconstant stay
 Sets you most rich in youth before my sight,
 Where wasteful time debateth with decay,
 To change your day of youth to sullied night ;
 And, all in war with time, for love of you,
 As he takes from you, I engraft you new

XVI.

But wherefore do not you a mightier way
 Make war upon this bloody tyrant, time,
 And fortify yourself in your decay
 With means more blessed than my barren rhyme ?
 Now stand you on the top of happy hours,
 And many maiden gardens, yet unset,
 With virtuous wish would bear your living flowers,
 Much liker than your painted counterfeit :
 So should the lines of life that life repair,
 Which this, time's pencil, or my pupil pen,
 Neither in inward worth, nor outward fair,
 Can make you live yourself in eyes of men.
 To give away yourself, keeps yourself still,
 And you must live, drawn by your own sweet skill.

XVII.

Who will believe my verse in time to come,
 If it were fill'd with your most high deserts ?
 Though yet, heaven knows, it is but as a tomb
 Which hides your life, and shows not half your parts
 If I could write the beauty of your eyes,
 And in fresh numbers number all your graces,
 The age to come would say, " this poet lies ;
 Such heavenly touches ne'er touch'd earthly faces " !
 So should my papers, yellow'd with their age,
 Be scorn'd, like old men of less truth than tongue,
 And your true rights be term'd a poet's rage,
 And stretched metre of an antique song ;
 But were some child of yours alive that time,
 You should live twice—in it, and in my rhyme.

XVIII.

Shall I compare thee to a summer's day ?
 Thou art more lovely and more temperate :
 Rough winds do shake the darling buds of May,
 And summer's lease hath all too short a date.
 Sometime too hot the eye of heaven shines,
 And often is his gold complexion dimm'd,
 And every fair from fair sometime declines,
 By chance, or nature's changing course, untrimm'd
 But thy eternal summer shall not fade,
 Nor lose possession of that fair thou owest ;
 Nor shall death brag thou wander'st in his shade
 When in eternal lines to time thou growest.
 So long as men can breathe, or eyes can see,
 So long lives this, and this gives life to thee

XIX.

Devouring Time, blunt thou the lion's paws,
And make the earth devour her own sweet brood;
Pluck the keen teeth from the fierce tiger's jaws,
And burn the long-liv'd phoenix in her blood:
Make glad and sorry seasons as thou fleets,
And do whate'er thou wilt, swift-footed Time,
To the wide world, and all her fading sweets;
But I forbid thee one most heinous crime:
O! carve not with thy hours my love's fair brow,
Nor draw no lines there with thine antique pen;
Him in thy course untainted do allow,
For beauty's pattern to succeeding men.

Yet, do thy worst, old Time: despite thy wrong,
My love shall in my verse ever live young.

XX.

A woman's face, with nature's own hand painted,
Hast thou, the master-mistress of my passion;
A woman's gentle heart, but not acquainted
With shifting change, as is false women's fashion:
An eye more bright than theirs, less false in rolling,
Gilding the object whereupon it gazeth;
A man in hue, all hues in his contrivance,
Which steals men's eyes, and women's souls amazeth;
And for a woman wert thou first created;
Till nature, as she wrought thee, fell a-doting,
And by addition me of thee defeated,
By adding one thing to my purpose nothing.

But since she prick'd thee out for women's pleasure,
Mine be thy love, and thy love's use their treasure.

XXI.

So is it not with me, as with that muse
Stirr'd by a painted beauty to his verse,
Who heaven itself for ornament doth use,
And every fair with his fair doth rehearse;
Making a complement of proud compare,
With sun and moon, with earth and sea's rich gems,
With April's first-born flowers, and all things rare
That heaven's air in this huge rondure hems.
O! let me, true in love, but truly write,
And then, believe me, my love is as fair
As any mother's child, though not so bright
As those gold candles fix'd in heaven's air:

Let them say more that like of hear-say well;
I will not praise, that purpose not to sell.

XXII.

My glass shall not persuade me I am old,
So long as youth and thou are of one date;
But when in thee time's furrows I behold,
Then look I death my days should expiate;
For all that beauty that doth cover thee,
Is but the seemly raiment of my heart,
Which in thy breast doth live, as thine in me.
How can I, then, be elder than thou art?
O. therefore, love, be of thyself so wary,
As I, not for myself, but for thee will,
Bearing thy heart, which I will keep so chary
As tender nurse her babe from faring ill.

Presume not on thy heart, when mine is slain;
Thou gav'st me thine, not to give back again.

XXIII.

As an imperfect actor on the stage,
Who with his fear is put besides his part,
Or some fierce thing replete with too much rage,

* worth: in old eda. Theoba.d made the change.

Whose strength's abundance weakens his own heart,
So I, for fear of trust, forget to say
The perfect ceremony of love's rite,
And in mine own love's strength seem to decay,
O'er-charg'd with burden of mine own love's might.
O! let my books be, then, the eloquence
And dumb presagers of my speaking breast,
Who plead for love, and look for recompense,
More than that tongue that more hath more express'd
O! learn to read what silent love hath writ:
To hear with eyes belongs to love's fine wit.

XXIV.

Mine eye hath play'd the painter, and hath steel'd
Thy beauty's form in table of my heart:
My body is the frame wherein 't is held,
And perspective it is best painter's art;
For through the painter must you see his skill,
To find where your true image pictur'd lies;
Which in my bosom's shop is hanging still,
That hath his windows glazed with thine eyes.
Now, see what good turns eyes for eyes have done:
Mine eyes have drawn thy shape, and thine for me
Are windows to my breast, where-through the sun
Delights to peep, to gaze therein on thee;
Yet eyes this cunning want to grace their art,
They draw but what they see, know not the heart

XXV.

Let those who are in favour with their stars
Of public honour and proud titles boast,
Whilst I, whom fortune of such triumph bars,
Unlook'd for joy in that I honour most.
Great princes' favourites their fair leaves spread,
But as the marigold at the sun's eye;
And in themselves their pride lies buried,
For at a frown they in their glory die.
The painful warrior, famous for fight,¹
After a thousand victories once foil'd,
Is from the book of honour razed quite,
And all the rest forgot for which he toil'd:
Then, happy I, that love and am beloved,
Where I may not remove, nor be removed.

XXVI.

Lord of my love, to whom in vassalage
Thy merit hath my duty strongly knit,
To thee I send this written embassy,
To witness duty, not to show my wit:
Duty so great, which wit so poor as mine
May make seem bare, in wanting words to show it,
But that I hope some good conceit of thine
In thy soul's thought, all naked, will bestow it;
Till whatsoever star that guides my moving,
Points on me graciously with fair aspect,
And puts apparel on my tattered loving,
To show me worthy of thy sweet respect:
Then may I dare to boast how I do love thee; [me
Till then, not show my head where thou may'st prove

XXVII.

Weary with toil I haste me to my bed,
The dear repose for limbs with travel tired;
But then begins a journey in my head,
To work my mind, when body's work's expired
For then my thoughts (from far where I abide)
Intend a zealous pilgrimage to thee,
And keep my drooping eyelids open wide,

Looking on darkness which the blind do see :
 Save that my soul's imaginary sight
 Presents thy shadow to my sightless view,
 Which, like a jewel hung in ghastly night,
 Makes black night beautiful, and her old face new.
 Lo! thus by day my limbs, by night my mind,
 For thee, and for myself, no quiet find.

XXVIII.

How can I, then, return in nappy plight,
 That am debar'd the benefit of rest?
 When day's oppression is not eas'd by night,
 But day by night, and night by day, oppress'd?
 And each, though enemies to either's reign,
 Do in consent shake hands to torture me;
 The one by toil, the other to complain
 How far I toil, still farther off from thee.
 I tell the day, to please him thou art bright,
 And dost him grace when clouds do blot the heaven:
 So flatter I the swart-complexion'd night,
 When sparkling stars twine not, thou gild'st the even:
 But day doth daily draw my sorrows longer,
 And night doth nightly make grief's length seem stronger.

XXIX.

When in disgrace with fortune and men's eyes,
 I all alone beweep my outcast state,
 And trouble deaf heaven with my bootless cries,
 And look upon myself, and curse my fate,
 Wishing me like to one more rich in hope,
 Fear'd like him, like him with friends possess'd,
 Desiring this man's art, and that man's scope,
 With what I most enjoy contented least;
 Yet in these thoughts myself almost despising,
 Haply I think on thee, and then my state
 (Like to the lark at break of day arising
 From sullen earth) sings hymns at heaven's gate:
 For thy sweet love remember'd such wealth brings,
 That then I scorn to change my state with kings.

XXX.

When to the sessions of sweet silent thought
 I summon up remembrance of things past,
 I sigh the lack of many a thing I sought,
 And with old woes new wail my dear time's waste:
 Then can I drown an eye, unush'd to flow,
 For precious friends hid in death's dateless night,
 And weep afresh love's long since cancell'd woe,
 And mean th' expense of many a vanish'd sight.
 Then can I grieve at grievances fore-gone,
 And heavily from woe to woe tell o'er
 The sad account of fore-bemoaned moan.
 Which I new pay, as if not paid before:
 But if the while I think on thee, dear friend,
 All losses are restor'd, and sorrows end.

XXXI.

Thy bosom is endeared with all hearts,
 Which I by lacking have supposed dead,
 And there reigns love, and all love's loving parts,
 And all those friends which I thought buried.
 How many a holy and obsequious tear
 Hath dear religious love stol'n from mine eye,
 As interest of the dead, which now appear
 But things remov'd, that hidden in thee be!
 Thou art the grave where buried love doth live,
 Hung with the trophies of my lovers gone.

Who all their parts of me to thee did give;
 That due of many now is thine alone:
 Their images I lov'd I view in thee,
 And thou (all they) hast all the all of me.

XXXII.

If thou survive my well-contented day,
 When that churl death my bones with dust shall cover,
 And shalt by fortune once more re-survey
 These poor rude lines of thy deceased lover,
 Compare them with the bettering of the time;
 And though they be out-stripp'd by every pen,
 Reserve them for my love, not for their rhyme,
 Exceeded by the height of happier men.
 O! then vouchsafe me but this loving thought:
 "Had my friend's muse grown with this growing age
 A dearer birth than this his love had brought,
 To march in ranks of better equipage:
 But since he died, and poets better prove,
 Theirs for their style I'll read, his for his love."

XXXIII.

Full many a glorious morning have I seen
 Flatter the mountain tops with sovereign eye,
 Kissing with golden face the meadows green,
 Gilding pale streams with heavenly alchemy;
 Anon permit the basest clouds to ride
 With ugly rack on his celestial face,
 And from the forlorn world his visage hide,
 Stealing unseen to west with this disgrace.
 Even so my sun one early morn did shine,
 With all triumphant splendour on my brow;
 But out, alack! he was but one hour mine,
 The region cloud hath mask'd him from me now.
 Yet him for this my love no whit disdaineth;
 Suns of the world may stain, when heaven's sun [staineth]

XXXIV.

Why didst thou promise such a beautiful day,
 And make me travel forth without my cloak,
 To let base clouds o'ertake me in my way,
 Hiding thy bravery in their rotten smoke?
 'T is not enough that through the cloud thou break,
 To dry the rain on my storm-beaten face,
 For no man well of such a salve can speak,
 That heals the wound, and cures not the disgrace:
 Nor can thy shame give physic to my grief:
 Though thou repent, yet I have still the loss:
 Th' offender's sorrow lends but weak relief
 To him that bears the strong offence's cross.
 Ah! but those tears are pearl, which thy love sheds
 And they are rich and ransom all ill deeds.

XXXV.

No more be griev'd at that which thou hast done:
 Roses have thorns, and silver mountains mud;
 Clouds and eclipses stain both moon and sun,
 And loathsome canker lives in sweetest bud.
 All men make faults, and even I in this,
 Authorizing thy trespass with compare;
 Myself corrupting, salving thy amiss,
 Excusing thy sins more than thy sins are:
 For to thy sensual fault I bring in sense,
 Thy adverse party is thy advocate,
 And 'gainst myself a lawful plea commence.
 Such civil war is in my love and hate,
 That I an accessory needs must be
 To that sweet thief which sourly robs from me

XXXVI.

Let me confess that we two must be twain,
 Although our undivided loves are one :
 So shall those blots that do with me remain,
 Without thy help by me be borne alone.
 In our two loves there is but one respect,
 Though in our lives a separable spite,
 Which though it alter not love's sole effect,
 Yet doth it steal sweet hours from love's delight.
 I may not evermore acknowledge thee,
 Lest my bewailed guilt should do thee shame ;
 Nor thou with public kindness honour me,
 Unless thou take that honour from thy name :
 But do not so ; I love thee in such sort,
 As, thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

XXXVII.

As a decrepit father takes delight
 To see his active child do deeds of youth,
 So I, made lame by fortune's dearest spite,
 Take all my comfort of thy worth and truth ;
 For whether beauty, birth, or wealth, or wit,
 Or any of these all, or all, or more,
 Entitled in thy parts do crowned sit,
 I make my love engrafted to this store :
 So then I am not lame, poor, nor despis'd,
 Whilst that this shadow doth such substance give,
 That I in thy abundance am suffic'd,
 And by a part of all thy glory live.

Look what is best, that best I wish in thee :
 This wish I have ; then, ten times happy me !

XXXVIII.

How can my muse want subject to invent,
 While thou dost breathe, that pour'st into my verse
 Thine own sweet argument, too excellent
 For every vulgar paper to rehearse ?
 O ! give thyself the thanks, if aught in me
 Worthy perusal stand against thy sight :
 For who's so dumb that cannot write to thee,
 When thou thyself dost give invention light ?
 Be thou the tenth muse, ten times more in worth
 Than those old nine which rhymers invoke ;
 And he that calls on thee, let him bring forth
 Eternal numbers to out-live long date.

If my slight muse do please these curious days,
 The pain be mine, but thine shall be the praise.

XXXIX.

O ! how thy worth with manners may I sing,
 When thou art all the better part of me ?
 What can mine own praise to mine own self bring ?
 And what is 't but mine own, when I praise thee ?
 Even for this let us divided live,
 And our dear love lose name of single one,
 That by this separation I may give
 That due to thee which thou deserv'st alone.
 O absence ! what a torment wouldst thou prove,
 Were it not thy sour leisure gave sweet leave
 To entertain the time with thoughts of love,
 Which time and thoughts so sweetly doth^{*} deceive,
 And that thou teachest how to make one twain,
 By praising him here, who doth hence remain.

XL.

Take all my loves, my love ; yea, take them all :
 What hast thou then more than thou hadst before ?
 No love, my love, that thou may'st true love call :

All mine was thine before thou hadst this more.
 Then, if for my love thou my love receivest,
 I cannot blame thee, for my love thou usest ;
 But yet be blam'd, if thou thyself deceivest
 By wilful taste of what thyself refusest.
 I do forgive thy robbery, gentle thief,
 Although thou steal thee all my poverty ;
 And yet love knows it is a greater grief
 To bear love's wrong, than hate's known injury
 Lascivious grace, in whom all ill well shows.
 Kill me with spites, yet we must not be foes.

XLI.

Those pretty wrongs that liberty commits,
 When I am sometime absent from thy heart,
 Thy beauty and thy years full well befits,
 For still temptation follows where thou art.
 Gentle thou art, and therefore to be won,
 Beauteous thou art, therefore to be assailed ;
 And when a woman woos, what woman's son
 Will sourly leave her till she have prevailed.
 Ah me ! but yet thou might'st my seat forbear,
 And chide thy beauty and thy straying youth,
 Who lead thee in their riot even there
 Where thou art forc'd to break a two-fold truth^{*} :
 Hers, by thy beauty tempting her to thee,
 Thine, by thy beauty being false to me.

XLII.

That thou hast her, it is not all my grief,
 And yet it may be said, I lov'd her dearly ;
 That she hath thee, is of my wailing chief,
 A loss in love that touches me more nearly.
 Loving offenders, thus I will excuse ye :—
 Thou dost love her, because thou know'st I love her^{*} ;
 And for my sake even so doth she abuse me,
 Suffering my friend for my sake to approve her.
 If I lose thee, my loss is my love's gain.
 And losing her, my friend hath found that loss ;
 Both find each other. And I lose both twain,
 And both for my sake lay on this cross :
 But here's the joy ; my friend and I are one.
 Sweet flattery !—then, she loves but me alone.

XLIII.

When most I wink, then do mine eyes best see,
 For all the day they view things undespect'd ;
 But when I sleep, in dreams they look on thee,
 And darkly bright are bright in dark directed.
 Then thou, whose shadow shadows doth make bright,
 How would thy shadow's form, form happy show
 To the clear day with thy much clearer light,
 When to unseeing eyes thy shade shines so ?
 How would, I say, mine eyes be blessed made
 By looking on thee in the living day,
 When in dead night thy fair imperfect shade
 Through heavy sleep on sightless eyes doth stay ?
 All days are nights to see, till I see thee, [me.
 And nights bright days, when dreams do show thee

XLIV.

If the dull substance of my flesh were thought,
 Injurious distance should not stop my way :
 For, then, despite of space, I would be brought
 From limits far remote where thou dost stay.
 No matter then, although my foot did stand
 Upon the farthest earth remov'd from thee :
 For nimble thought can jump both sea and land

* doth in old eds.

As soon as think the place where he would be.
But ah! thought kills me, that I am not thought,
To leap large lengths of miles when thou art gone,
But that, so much of earth and water wrought,
I must attend time's leisure with my moan;
Receiving nought by elements so slow
But heavy tears, badges of either's woe.

XLV.

The other two, slight air and purging fire,
Are both with thee, wherever I abide;
The first my thought, the other my desire,
These present-absent with swift motion slide:
For when these quicker elements are gone
In tender embassy of love to thee,
My life, being made of four, with two alone
Sinks down to death, oppress'd with melancholy
Until life's composition be reured
By those swift messengers return'd from thee,
Who even but now come back again, assured
Of thy fair health, recounting it to me:
This told, I joy: but then, no longer glad,
I send them back again, and straight grow sad.

XLVI.

Mine eye and heart are at a mortal war,
How to divide the conquest of thy sight;
Mine eye my heart thy picture's sight would bar,
My heart mine eye the freedom of that right.
My heart doth plead, that thou in him dost lie,
(A closet never pierc'd with crystal eyes)
But the defendant doth that plea deny,
And says in him thy fair appearance lies.
To 'cide' this title is impannelled
A quest of thoughts, all tenants to the heart;
And by their verdict is determined
The clear eye's moiety,¹ and the dear heart's part:
As thus; mine eye's due is thine outward part,
And my heart's right thine inward love of heart.

XLVII.

Between mine eye and heart a league is took,
And each doth good turns now unto the other.
When that mine eye is famish'd for a look,
Or heart in love with sighs himself doth smother,
With my love's picture then my eye doth feast,
And to the painted banquet bids my heart:
Another time mine eye is my heart's guest,
And in his thoughts of love doth share a part:
So, either by thy picture or my love,
Thyself away art present still with me;
For thou not farther than my thoughts canst move,
And I am still with them, and they with thee;
Or, if they sleep, thy picture in my sight
Awakes my heart to heart's and eye's delight.

XLVIII.

How careful was I, when I took my way,
Each trifle under truest bars to thrust:
That to my use it might unused stay
From hands of falsehood, in sure wards of trust!
But thou, to whom my jewels trifles are,
Most worthy comfort, now my greatest grief,
Thou, best of dearest, and mine only care,
Art left the prey of every vulgar thief.
Thou have I not lock'd up in any chest,
Save where thou art not, though I feel thou art,
Within the gentle closure of my breast,

From whence at pleasure thou may'st come and part
And even thence thou wilt be stol'n, I fear,
For truth proves thievish for a prize so dear.

XLIX.

Against that time, if ever that time come,
When I shall see thee frown on my defects,
When as thy love hath cast his utmost sum,
Call'd to that audit by advis'd respects;
Against that time, when thou shalt strangely pass,
And scarcely greet me with that sun, thine eye
When love, converted from the thing it was,
Shall reasons find of settled gravity;
Against that time do I ensconce me here,
Within the knowledge of mine own desert,
And this my hand against myself uprear,
To guard the lawful reasons on thy part:
To leave poor me thou hast the strength of laws,
Since why to love I can allege no cause.

L.

How heavy do I journey on the way,
When what I seek (my weary travel's end)
Doth teach that ease and that repose to say,
"Thus far the miles are measur'd from thy friend"
The beast that bears me, tired with my woe,
Plods dully on² to bear that weight in me,
As if by some instinct the wretch did know,
His rider lov'd not speed being made from thee
The bloody spur cannot provoke him on
That sometimes anger thrusts into his hide,
Which heavily he answers with a groan,
More sharp to me than spurring to his side;
For that same groan doth put this in my mind,
My grief lies onward, and my joy behind.

LI.

Thus can my love excuse the slow offence
Of my dull bearer, when from thee I speed:
From where thou art why should I haste me thence?
Till I return of posting is no need.
O! what excuse will my poor beast then find,
When swift extremity can seem but slow?
Then should I spur, though mounted on the wind
In winged speed no motion shall I know:
Then can no horse with my desire keep pace;
Therefore desire, (of perfect love being made)
Shall neigh (no dull flesh) in his fiery race;
But love, for love, thus shall excuse my jade;
Since from thee going he went wilful-slow,
Towards thee I'll run, and give him leave to go.

LII.

So am I as the rich, whose blessed key
Can bring him to his sweet up-locked treasure,
The which he will not every hour survey,
For blunting the fine point of seldom pleasure,
Therefore, are feasts so solemn and so rare,
Since seldom coming, in the long year set
Like stones of worth, they thinly placed are,
Or captain jewels in the carcanet.
So is the time that keeps you as my chest,
Or as the wardrobe which the robe doth hide,
To make some special instant special-blest,
By new unfolding his imprison'd pride.
Blessed are you, whose worthiness gives scope,
Being had, to triumph, being lack'd, to hope.

LIII.

What is your substance, whereof are you made,
That millions of strange shadows on you tend?
Since every one hath, every one, one shade,
And you, but one, can every shadow lend.
Describe Adonis, and the counterfeit
Is poorly imitated after you;
On Helen's cheek all art of beauty set,
And you in Grecian tires are painted new:
Speak of the spring, and foison¹ of the year,
The one doth shadow of your beauty show,
The other as your bounty doth appear;
And you in every blessed shape we know.
In all external grace you have some part,
But you like none, none you, for constant heart.

LIV.

O, how much more doth beauty beautiful seem,
By that sweet ornament which truth doth give!
The rose looks fair, but fairer we it deem
For that sweet odour which doth in it live.
The canker²-blooms have full as deep a dye,
As the perfumed tincture of the roses;
Hang on such thorns, and play as wantonly
When summer's breath their masked buds discloses;
But, for their virtue only is their show,
They live unwoo'd, and unrespected fade;
Die to themselves. Sweet roses do not so;
Of their sweet deaths are sweetest odours made:
And so of you, beautiful and lovely youth,
When that shall fade, my³ verse distils your truth.

LV.

Not marble, nor the gilded monuments
Of princes, shall out-live this powerful rhyme;
But you shall shine more bright in these contents
Than unswept stone, besmear'd with sluttish time.
When wasteful war shall statues overturn,
And broils root out the work of masonry,
Nor Mars his sword, nor war's quick fire shall burn
The living record of your memory.
'Gainst death and all-oblivious enmity
Shall you pace forth: your praise shall still find room
Even in the eyes of all posterity,
That wear this world out to the ending doom.
So, till the judgment that yourself arise,
You live in this, and dwell in lovers' eyes.

LVI.

Sweet love, renew thy force; be it not said,
Thy edge should blunter be than appetite,
Which but to-day by feeding is allay'd,
To-morrow sharpen'd in his former might:
So, love, be thou; although to-day thou fill
Thy hungry eyes, even till they wink with fulness,
To-morrow see again, and do not kill
The spirit of love with a perpetual dullness.
Let this sad interim like the ocean be
Which parts the shore, where two contracted new Come daily to the banks, that when they see
Return of love more blest may be the view;
Or call it winter, which being full of care, [rare.
Makes summer's welcome thrice more wish'd, more

LVII.

Being your slave, what should I do but tend
Upon the hours and times of your desire?
I have no precious time at all to spend,

Nor services to do, till you require.
Nor dare I chide the world-without-end hour,
Whilst I, my sovereign, watch the clock for you,
Nor think the bitterness of absence sour,
When you have bid your servant once adieu:
Nor dare I question with my jealous thought,
Where you may be, or your affairs suppose:
But, like a sad slave, stay and think of nought,
Save where you are, how happy you make those.
So true a fool is love, that in your will (Though you do any thing) he thinks no ill.

LVIII.

That God forbid, that made me first your slave,
I should in thought control your times of pleasure,
Or at your hand th' account of hours to crave,
Being your vassal, bound to stay your leisure!
O! let me suffer (being at your beck)
Th' imprison'd absence of your liberty;
And patience, tame to sufferance, bide each check,
Without accusing you of injury.
Be where you list; your charter is so strong,
That you yourself may privilege your time:
Do what you will, to you it doth belong
Yourself to pardon of self-doing crime.
I am to wait, though waiting so be hell,
Not blame your pleasure, be it ill or well.

LIX.

If there be nothing new, but that which is Hath been before, how are our brains beguil'd,
Which, labouring for invention, bear amiss
The second burden of a former child?
O! that record could with a backward look,
Even of five hundred courses of the sun,
Show me your image in some antique book,
Since mind at first in character was done;
That I might see what the old world could say
To this composed wonder of your frame;
Whether we are mended, or where better they,
Or whether revolution be the same.
O! sure I am, the wits of former days
To subjects worse have given admiring praise.

LX.

Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore,
So do our minutes hasten to their end;
Each changing place with that which goes before,
In sequent toil all forwards do contend.
Nativity, once in the main of light,
Crawls to maturity, wherewith being crown'd,
Crooked eclipses 'gainst his glory fight,
And time that gave doth now his gift confound.
Time doth transfix the flourish set on youth,
And delves the parallels in beauty's brow;
Feeds on the rarities of nature's truth,
And nothing stands but for his scythe to mow:
And yet to times in hope my verse shall stand,
Praising thy worth, despite his cruel hand.

LXI.

Is it thy will, thy image should keep open
My heavy eyelids to the weary night?
Dost thou desire my slumbers should be broken,
While shadows, like to thee, do mock my sight?
Is it thy spirit that thou send'st from thee
So far from home, into my deeds to pry;
To find out shames and idle hours in me,

¹ Plenty. ² Dog-rose. ³ by: in old eds. Malone made the change.

The scope and tenour of thy jealousy ?
O no! thy love, though much, is not so great :
It is my love that keeps mine eye awake ;
Mine own true love that doth my rest defeat,
To play the watchman ever for thy sake :

For thee watch I, whilst thou dost wake elsewhere,
From me far off, with others all too near.

LXII.

Sin of self-love possesseth all mine eye,
And all my soul, and all my every part ;
And for this sin there is no remedy,
It is so grounded inward in my heart.
Methinks no face so gracious is as mine,
No shape so true, no truth of such account ;
And for myself mine own worth do define,
As I all other in all worths surmount.
But when my glass shows me myself indeed,
Beated and chopp'd with tann'd antiquity,
Mine own self-love quite contrary I read ;
Self so self-loving were iniquity.

'T is thee (myself) that for myself I praise,
Painting my age with beauty of thy days.

LXIII.

Against my love shall be, as I am now,
With time's injurious hand crush'd and o'erworn ;
When hours have drain'd his blood, and fill'd his brow
With lines and wrinkles ; when his youthful morn
Hath travell'd on to age's steepy night ;
And all those beauties, whereof now he's king,
Are vanishing, or vanish'd out of sight,
Stealing away the treasure of his spring ;
For such a time do I now fortify
Against confounding age's cruel knife,
That he shall never cut from memory
My sweet love's beauty, though my lover's life ;
His beauty shall in these black lines be seen,
And they shall live, and he in them still green.

LXIV.

When I have seen by Time's fell hand defaced
The rich proud cost of out-worn buried age ;
When sometime lofty towers I see down-rased,
And brass eternal, slave to mortal rage ;
When I have seen the hungry ocean gain
Advantage on the kingdom of the shore,
And the firm soil win of the watery main,
Increasing store with loss, and loss with store ;
When I have seen such interchange of state,
Or state itself confounded to decay,
Ruin hath taught me thus to ruminat—
That time will come and take my love away.
This thought is as a death, which cannot choose
But weep to have that which it fears to lose.

LXV.

Since brass, nor stone, nor earth, nor boundless sea,
But sad mortality o'er-sways their power,
How with this rage shall beauty hold a plea,
Whose action is no stronger than a flower ?
O! how shall summer's honey-breath hold out
Against the wreckful siege of battering days,
When rocks inpregnable are not so stout,
Nor gates of steel so strong, but time decays ?
O fearful meditation! where, alack,
Shall time's best jewel from time's chest lie hid ?
Or what strong hand can hold his swift foot back ?

Or who his spoil of beauty can forbid ?
O none! unless this miracle have might,
That in black ink my love may still shine bright.

LXVI.

Tir'd with all these, for restful death I cry ;—
As, to behold desert a beggar born,
And needy nothing trimm'd in jollity,
And purest faith unhappily forsworn,
And gilded honour shamefully misplac'd,
And maiden virtue rudely strumpeted,
And right perfection wrongfully disgrac'd,
And strength by limping sway disabled,
And art made tongue-tied by authority,
And folly (doctor-like) controlling skill,
And simple truth miscall'd simplicity,
And captive good attending captain ill :

Tir'd with all these, from these would I be gone,
Save that to die I leave my love alone.

LXVII.

Ah! wherefore with infection should he live,
And with his presence grace impied,
That sin by him advantage should achieve,
And lace¹ itself with his society ?
Why should false painting imitate his cheek,
And steal dead seeing of his living hue ?
Why should poor beauty indirectly seek Roses of shadow, since his rose is true ?
Why should he live, now nature bankrupt is,
Beggard of blood to blush through lively veins ?
For she hath no exchequer now but his,
And, proud of many, lives upon his gains.
O! him she stores, to show what wealth she had
In days long since, before these last so bad.

LXVIII.

Thus is his cheek the map of days out-worn,
When beauty liv'd and died as flowers do now,
Before these bastard signs of fair were borne,
Or durst inhabit on a living brow ;
Before the golden tresses of the dead,
The right of sepulchres, were shorn away,
To live a second life on second head ;
Ere beauty's dead fleece made another gay.
In him those holy antique hours are seen,
Without all ornament, itself, and true,
Making no summer of another's green,
Robbing no old to dress his beauty new ;
And him as for a map doth nature store,
To show false art what beauty was of yore.

LXIX.

Those parts of thee that the world's eye doth view,
Want nothing that the thought of hearts can mend ;
All tongues (the voice of souls) give thee that due,²
Uttering bare truth, even so as foes commend.
Thine outward thus with outward praise is crown'd ;
But those same tongues that give thee so thine own,
In other accents do this praise confound,
By seeing farther than the eye hath shown.
They look into the beauty of thy mind,
And that, in guess, they measure by thy deeds ; [kind
Then (churls) their thoughts, although their eyes were
To thy fair flower add the rank smell of weeds :
But why thy odour matcheth not thy show,
The solve³ is this ;—that thou dost common grow

¹ From adorn ² and : in old eds Tyrwhitt made the change. ³ Solution.

LXX.

That thou art blam'd shall not be thy defect,
 For slander's mark was ever yet the fair;
 The ornament of beauty is suspect,
 A crow that flies in heaven's sweetest air.
 So thou be good, slander doth but approve
 Thy worth the greater, being woo'd of time;
 For canker vice the sweetest buds doth love,
 And thou present'st a pure unstained prime.
 Thou hast past by the ambush of young days,
 Either not assail'd, or victor being charged;
 Yet this thy praise cannot be so thy praise,
 To tie up envy, evermore enlarged:
 If some suspect of ill mask'd not thy show,
 Then, thou alone kingdoms of hearts shouldst owe.

LXXI.

No longer mourn for me when I am dead,
 Than you shall hear the surly sullen bell
 Give warning to the world that I am fled
 From this vile world, with vilest worms to dwell:
 Nay, if you read this line, remember not
 The hand that writ it; for I love you so,
 That I in your sweet thoughts would be forgot,
 If thinking on me then should make you woe.
 O! if (I say) you look upon this verse,
 When I perhaps compounded am with clay,
 Do not so much as my poor name rehearse,
 But let your love even with my life decay;
 Lest the wise world should look into your moan,
 And mock you with me after I am gone.

LXXII.

O! lest the world should task you to recite
 What merit liv'd in me, that you should love
 After my death, dear love, forget me quite,
 For you in me can nothing worthy prove;
 Unless you would devise some virtuous lie,
 To do more for me than mine own desert,
 And hang more praise upon deceased I,
 Then niggard truth would willingly impart.
 O! lest your true love may seem false in this,
 That you for love speak well of me untrue,
 My name be buried where my body is,
 And live no more to shame nor me nor you.
 For I am sham'd by that which I bring forth,
 And so should you, to love things nothing worth.

LXXIII.

That time of year thou may'st in me behold,
 When yellow leaves, or none, or few, do hang
 Upon those boughs which shake against the cold,
 Bare ruin'd choirs, where late the sweet birds sang.
 In me thou seest the twilight of such day
 As after sun-set fadeth in the west,
 Which by and by black night doth take away,
 Death's second self, that seals up all in rest:
 In me thou seest the glowing of such fire,
 That on the ashes of his youth doth lie,
 As the death-bed whereon it must expire,
 Consum'd with that which it was nourish'd by. [strong,
 This thou perceiv'st, which makes thy love more
 To love that well which thou must leave ere long:

LXXIV.

But be contented: when that fell arrest
 Without all bail shall carry me away,
 My life hath in this line some interest,

Which for memorial still with thee shall stay.
 When thou reviewest this, thou dost review
 The very part was consecrate to thee.
 The earth can have but earth, which is his due;
 My spirit is thine, the better part of me:
 So then thou hast but lost the dregs of life,
 The prey of worms, my body being dead;
 The coward conquest of a wretch's knife,
 Too base of thee to be remembered.
 The worth of that is that which it contains,
 And that is this, and this with thee remains.

LXXV.

So are you to my thoughts, as food to life,
 Or as sweet-season'd showers are to the ground;
 And for the peace of you I hold such strife
 As 'twixt a miser and his wealth is found:
 Now proud as an enjoyer, and anon
 Doubting the filching age will steal his treasure;
 Now counting best to be with you alone,
 Then better'd that the world may see my pleasure.
 Sometime all full with feasting on your sight,
 And by and by clean starved for a look;
 Possessing or pursuing no delight,
 Save what is had or must from you be took
 Thus do I pine and surfeit day by day;
 Or gluttoning on all, or all away.

LXXVI.

Why is my verse so barren of new pride,
 So far from variation or quick change?
 Why, with the time, do I not glance aside
 To new-found methods and to compounds strange?
 Why write I still all one, ever the same,
 And keep invention in a noted weed,
 That every word doth almost tell my name,
 Showing their birth, and where they did proceed?
 O! know, sweet love, I always write of you,
 And you and love are still my argument;
 So, all my best is dressing old words new,
 Spending again what is already spent:
 For as the sun is daily new and old,
 So is my love, still telling what is told.

LXXVII.

Thy glass will show thee how thy beauties wear,
 Thy dial how thy precious minutes waste;
 The vacant leaves thy mind's imprint will bear,
 And of this book this learning may'st thou taste:
 The wrinkles which thy glass will truly show,
 Of mouthed graves will give thee memory;
 Thou by thy dial's shady stealth may'st know
 Time's thievish progress to eternity.
 Look, what thy memory cannot contain,
 Commit to these waste blanks, and thou shalt find
 Those children nurs'd, deliver'd from thy brain,
 To take a new acquaintance of thy mind.
 These offices, so oft as thou wilt look,
 Shall profit thee, and much enrich thy book.

LXXVIII.

So oft have I invoc'd thee for my muse,
 And found such fair assistance in my verse,
 As every alien pen hath got my use,
 And under thee their poesy disperse.
 Thine eyes that taught the dumb on high to sing,
 And heavy ignorance aloft to fly,
 Have added feathers to the learned's wing,

And given grace a double majesty.
 Yet be most proud of that which I compile,
 Whose influence is thine, and born of thee :
 In others' works thou dost but mend the style,
 And arts with thy sweet graces graced be ;
 But thou art all my art, and dost advance
 As high as learning my rude ignorance.

LXXIX.

Whilst I alone did call upon thy aid,
 My verse alone had all thy gentle grace ;
 But now my gracious numbers are decay'd,
 And my sick muse doth give another place.
 grant, sweet love, thy lovely argument
 Deserves the travail of a worthier pen ;
 Yet what of thee thy poet doth invent,
 He robs thee of, and pays it thee again.
 He lends thee virtue, and he stole that word
 From thy behaviour ; beauty doth he give,
 And found it in thy cheek ; he can afford
 No praise to thee but what in thee doth live.
 Then, thank him not for that which he doth say,
 Since what he owes thee, thou thyself dost pay.

LXXX.

O ! how I faint when I of you do write,
 Knowing a better spirit doth use your name,
 And in the praise thereof spends all his might,
 To make me tongue-tied, speaking of your fame :
 But since your worth (wide as the ocean is)
 The humble as the proudest sail doth bear,
 My saucy bark, inferior far to his,
 On your broad main doth wallowfully appear.
 Your shallowest help will hold me up afloat,
 Whilst he upon your soundless deep doth ride ;
 Or, being wreck'd, I am a worthless boat,
 He of tall building, and of goodly pride :
 Then, if he thrive, and I be cast away,
 The worst was this—my love was my decay.

LXXXI.

Or I shall live your epitaph to make,
 Or you survive when I in earth am rotten :
 From hence your memory death cannot take,
 Although in me each part will be forgotten.
 Your name from hence immortal life shall have,
 Though I, once gone, to all the world must die :
 The earth can yield me but a common grave,
 When you entombed in men's eyes shall lie.
 Your monument shall be my gentle verse,
 Which eyes not yet created shall o'er-read ;
 And tongues to be your being shall rehearse,
 When all the breathers of this world are dead ;
 You still shall live (such virtue hath my pen,)
 Where breath most breathes, even in the mouths of men.

LXXXII.

I grant thou wert not married to my muse,
 And therefore may'st without attain't o'er-look
 The dedicated words which writers use
 Of their fair subject, blessing every book.
 Thou art as fair in knowledge as in hue,
 Finding thy worth a limit past my praise ;
 And, therefore, art enforce'd to seek anew
 Some fresher stamp of the time-bettering days.
 And do so, love : yet when they have devis'd
 What strained touches rhetoric can lend,
 Thou truly fair, wert truly sympathiz'd

In true plain words, by thy true-telling friend ;
 And their gross painting might be better used
 Where cheeks need blood : in thee it is abused.

LXXXIII.

I never saw that you did painting need,
 And, therefore, to your fair no painting set ;
 I found, or thought I found, you did exceed
 The barren tender of a poet's debt :
 And, therefore, have I slept in your report,
 That you yourself, being extant, well might show
 How far a modern quill doth come too short,
 Speaking of worth, what worth in you doth grow.
 This silence for my sin you did impute,
 Which shall be most my glory, being dumb ;
 For I impair not beauty being mute,
 When others would give life, and bring a tomb.
 There lives more life in one of your fair eyes,
 Than both your poets can in praise devise.

LXXXIV.

Who is it that says most ? which can say more,
 Than this rich praise, that you alone are you ?
 In whose confine immured is the store,
 Which should example where your equal grew.
 Lean penury within that pen doth dwell,
 That to his subject lends not some small glory,
 But he that writes of you, if he can tell
 That you are you, so dignifies his story,
 Let him but copy what in you is writ,
 Not making worse what nature made so clear,
 And such a counterpart shall fame his wit,
 Making his style admired every where.
 You to your beauteous blessings add a curse,
 Being fond on praise, which makes your praises worse.

LXXXV.

My tongue-tied muse in manners holds her still,
 While comments of your praise, richly compil'd,
 Reserve their character with golden quill,
 And precious phrase by all the muses fil'd.
 I think good thoughts, whilst other write good words,
 And, like unletter'd clerk, still cry " Amen"
 To every hymn that able spirit affords,
 In polish'd form of well-refined pen.
 Hearing you prais'd, I say, "'t is so, 't is true,"
 And to the most of praise add something more ;
 But that is in my thought, whose love to you,
 Though words come hindmost, holds his rank before :
 Then, others for the breath of words respect,
 Me for my dumb thoughts, speaking in effect.

LXXXVI.

Was it the proud full sail of his great verse,
 Bound for the prize of all too precious you,
 That did my ripe thoughts in my brain inhere,
 Making their tomb the womb wherein they grew ?
 Was it his spirit, by spirits taught to write
 Above a mortal pitch, that struck me dead ?
 No, neither he, nor his compeers by night
 Giving him aid, my verse astonished :
 He, nor that affable familiar ghost,
 Which nightly gulls him with intelligence,
 As victors of my silence cannot boast.
 I was not sick of any fear from thence ;
 But when your countenance fill'd up his line,
 Then lack'd I matter ; that enfeebled me.

LXXXVII.

Farewell : thou art too dear for my possessing,
 And like enough thou know'st thy estimate :
 The charter of thy worth gives thee releasing,
 My bonds in thee are all determinate.
 For how do I hold thee but by thy granting ?
 And for that riches where is my deserving ?
 The cause of this fair gift in me is wanting,
 And so my patent back again is swerving.
 Thyself thou gav'st, thy own worth then not knowing,
 Or me, to whom gav'st it, else mistaking ;
 So thy great gift, upon misprision growing,
 Comes home again, on better judgment making.
 Thus have I had thee, as a dream doth flatter,
 In sleep a king, but waking, no such matter.

LXXXVIII.

When thou shalt be dispos'd to set me light,
 And place my merit in the eye of scorn,
 Upon thy side against myself I'll fight,
 And prove thee virtuous, though thou art forsworn :
 With mine own weakness being best acquainted,
 Upon thy part I can set down a story
 Of faults conceal'd, wherein I am attainted,
 That thou, in losing me, shalt win much glory :
 And I by this will be a gainer too ;
 For bending all my loving thoughts on thee,
 The injuries that to myself I do,
 Doing thee vantage, double vantage me.
 Such is my love, to thee I so belong,
 That for thy right myself will bear all wrong.

LXXXIX.

Say that thou didst forsake me for some fault,
 And I will comment upon that offence :
 Speak of my lameness, and I straight will halt,
 Against thy reasons making no defence.
 Thou canst not, love, disgrace me half so ill,
 To set a form upon desired change,
 As I'll myself disgrace : knowing thy will,
 I will acquaintance strangle, and look strange ;
 Be absent from thy walks ; and in my tongue
 Thy sweet beloved name no more shall dwell,
 Lest I (too much profane) should do it wrong,
 And haply of our old acquaintance tell.
 For thee, against myself I'll vow debate,
 For I must ne'er love him whom thou dost hate.

XC.

Then, hate me when thou wilt ; if ever, now :
 Now, while the world is bent my deeds to cross,
 Join with the spite of fortune, make me bow,
 And do not drop in for an after loss.
 Ah ! do not, when my heart hath scap'd this sorrow,
 Come in the rearward of a conquer'd woe ;
 Give not a windy night a rainy morrow,
 To linger out a purpos'd overthrow.
 If thou wilt leave me, do not leave me last,
 When other petty griefs have done their spite,
 But in the onset come : so shall I taste
 At first the very worst of fortune's might ;
 And other strains of woe, which now seem woe,
 Compar'd with loss of thee, will not seem so.

XCI.

Some glory in their birth, some in their skill,
 Some in their wealth, some in their body's force ;
 Some in their garments, though new-fangled ill ;

Some in their hawks and hounds, some in their horse
 And every humour hath his adjunct pleasure,
 Wherein it finds a joy above the rest ;
 But these particulars are not my measure :
 All these I better in one general best.
 Thy love is better than high birth to me,
 Richer than wealth, prouder than garments' cost,
 Of more delight than hawks or horses be ;
 And having thee, of all men's pride I boast :
 Wretched in this alone, that thou may'st take
 All this away, and me most wretched make.

XCII.

But do thy worst to steal thyself away,
 For term of life thou art assured mine ;
 And life no longer than thy love will stay,
 For it depends upon that love of thine :
 Then, need I not to fear the worst of wrongs,
 When in the least of them my life hath end.
 I see a better state to me belongs
 Than that which on thy humour doth depend.
 Thou canst not vex me with inconstant mind,
 Since that my life on thy revolt doth lie.
 O ! what a happy title do I find,
 Happy to have thy love, happy to die :
 But what's so blessed fair that fears no blot ?
 Thou may'st be false, and yet I know it not.

XCIII.

So shall I live, supposing thou art true,
 Like a deceived husband ; so love's face
 May still seem love to me, though alter'd new ;
 Thy looks with me, thy heart in other place :
 For there can live no hatred in thine eye ;
 Therefore, in that I cannot know thy change.
 In many's looks the false heart's history
 Is writ in moods, and frowns, and wrinkles strange ;
 But heaven in thy creation did decree,
 That in thy face sweet love should ever dwell ;
 Whate'er thy thoughts or thy heart's workings be,
 Thy looks should nothing thence but sweetness tell.
 How like Eve's apple doth thy beauty grow,
 If thy sweet virtue answer not thy show !

XCIV.

They that have power to hurt, and will do none,
 That do not do the thing they most do show,
 Who, moving others, are themselves as stone,
 Unmoved, cold, and to temptation slow ;
 They rightly do inherit heaven's graces,
 And husband nature's riches from expense ;
 They are the lords and owners of their faces,
 Others but stewards of their excellence.
 The summer's flower is to the summer sweet,
 Though to itself it only live and die ;
 But if that flower with base infection meet,
 The basest weed outbraves his dignity ;
 For sweetest things turn sourest by their deeds :
 Lilies that fester smell far worse than weeds.

XCV.

How sweet and lovely dost thou make the shame,
 Which, like a canker in the fragrant rose,
 Doth spot the beauty of thy budding name ?
 O, in what sweets dost thou thy sins enclose !
 That tongue that tells the story of thy days,
 (Making lascivious comments on thy sport)
 Cannot dispraise but in a kind of praise,

Naming thy name blesses an ill report.
 O! what a mansion have those vices got,
 Which for their habitation chose out thee,
 Where beauty's veil doth cover every blot,
 And all things turn to fair that eyes can see!
 Take heed, dear heart, of this large privilege;
 The hardest knife ill us'd doth lose his edge.

XCVI.

Some say, thy fault is youth, some wantonness;
 Some say, thy grace is youth, and gentle sport;
 Both grace and faults are lov'd of more and less;
 Thou mak'st faults graces that to thee resort.
 As on the finger of a throned queen
 The basest jewel will be well esteem'd,
 So are those errors that in thee are seen
 To truths translated, and for true things deem'd.
 How many lambs might the stern wolf betray,
 If like a lamb he could his looks translate!
 How many gazers mightst thou lead away,
 If thou wouldst use the strength of all thy state!
 But do not so; I love thee in such sort,
 As thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

XCVII.

How like a winter hath my absence been
 From thee, the pleasure of the fleeting year!
 What freezings have I felt, what dark days seen,
 What old December's bareness every where!
 And yet this time remov'd was summer's time;
 The teeming autumn, big with rich increase,
 Bearing the wanton burden of the prime,
 Like widow'd wombs after their lords' decease:
 Yet this abundant issue seem'd to me
 But hope of orphans, and unfather'd fruit;
 For summer and his pleasures wait on thee,
 And, thou away, the very birds are mute;
 Or, if they sing, 't is with so dull a cheer,
 That leaves look pale, dreading the winter's near.

XCVIII.

From you have I been absent in the spring,
 When proud-pied April, dress'd in all his trim,
 Hath put a spirit of youth in every thing,
 That heavy Saturn laugh'd and leap'd with him:
 Yet nor the lays of birds, nor the sweet snell
 Of different flowers in odour and in hue,
 Could make me any summer's story tell,
 Or from their proud lap pluck them where they grew:
 Nor did I wonder at the lily's white,
 Nor praise the deep vermillion in the rose;
 They were but sweet, but figures of delight,
 Drawn after you: you pattern of all those.
 Yet seem'd it winter still, and, you away,
 As with your shadow I with these did play:

XCIX.

The forward violet thus did I chide:—
 Sweet thief, whence didst thou steal thy sweet that
 I not from my love's breath? the purple pride
 Which on thy soft cheek for complexion dwells,
 In my love's veins thou hast too grossly dyed.
 The lily I condemned for thy hand,
 And buds of marjoram had stol'n thy hair:
 The roses fearfully on thorns did stand,
 One blushing shame, another white despair;
 A third, nor red nor white, had stolen of both,
 And to this robbery had annex'd thy breath;

But, for his theft, in pride of all his growth
 A vengeful canker eat him up to death.
 More flowers I noted, yet I none could see,
 But sweet or colour it had stol'n from thee.

C.

Where art thou, Muse, that thou forget'st so long
 To speak of that which gives thee all thy might?
 Spend'st thou thy fury on some worthless song,
 Darkening thy power to lend base subjects light?
 Return, forgetful Muse, and straight redeem
 In gentle numbers time so idly spent:
 Sing to the ear that doth thy lays esteem,
 And gives thy pen both skill and argument.
 Rise, resty Muse, my love's sweet face survey
 If Time have any wrinkle graven there;
 If any, be a satire to decay,
 And make Time's spoils despised everywhere.
 Give my love fame faster than Time wastes life;
 So thou prevent'st his scythe, and crooked knife.

CI.

O truant Muse! what shall be thy amends,
 For thy neglect of truth in beauty dyed?
 Both truth and beauty on my love depends;
 So doth thou too, and therein dignified.
 Make answer, Muse: wilt thou not haply say,
 "Truth needs no colour, with his colour fix'd;
 Beauty no pencil, beauty's truth to lay;
 But best 's best, if never intermix'd."
 Because he needs no praise, wilt thou be dumb?
 Excuse not silence so; for 't lies in thee
 To make him much out-live a gilded tomb,
 And to be prais'd of ages yet to be.
 Then, do thy office, Muse: I teach thee how
 To make him seem long hence as he shows now.

CII.

My love is strengthen'd, though more weak in seeming
 I love not less, though less the show appear:
 That love is merchandiz'd, whose rich esteeming
 The owner's tongue doth publish every where.
 Our love was new, and then but in the spring,
 When I was wont to greet it with my lays;
 As Philomel in summer's front doth sing,
 And stops his pipe in growth of ripper days:
 Not that the summer is less pleasant now,
 Than when her mournful hymns did hush the night,
 But that wild music burdens every bough,
 And sweets grown common lose their dear delight.
 Therefore, like her I sometime hold my tongue,
 Because I would not dull you with my song.

CIII.

Alack! what poverty my muse brings forth,
 That having such a scope to show her pride,
 The argument, all bare, is of more worth,
 Than when it hath my added praise beside
 O! blame me not, if I no more can write:
 Look in y'r glass, and there appears a face,
 That over-goes my blunt invention quite,
 Dulling my lines, and doing me disgrace.
 Were it not sinful, then, striving to mend,
 To mar the subject that before was well?
 For to no other pass my verses tend,
 Than of your graces and your gifts to tell;
 And more, much more, than in my verse can sit,
 Your own glass shows you, when you look in it

CIV.

To me, fair friend, you never can be old,
 For as you were, when first your eye I ey'd,
 Such seems your beauty still. Three winters cold
 Have from the forests shook three summers' pride;
 Three beauteous springs to yellow autumn turn'd,
 In process of the seasons have I seen;
 Three April perfumes in three hot Junes burn'd,
 Since first I saw you fresh, which yet are green.
 Ah! yet doth beauty, like a dial hand,
 Steal from his figure, and no pace perceived;
 So your sweet hue, which methinks still doth stand,
 Hath motion, and mine eye may be deceived:
 For fear of which, hear this, thou age unbred.—
 Ere you were born was beauty's summer dead.

CV.

Let not my love be call'd idolatry,
 Nor my beloved as an idol show,
 Since all alike my songs and praises be,
 To one, of one, still such, and ever so.
 Kind is my love to-day, to-morrow kind,
 Still constant in a wondrous excellence;
 Therefore, my verse to constancy confin'd,
 One thing expressing, leaves out difference.
 Fair, kind, and true, is all my argument,
 Fair, kind, and true, varying to other words;
 And in this change is my invention spent,
 Three themes in one, which wondrous scope affords.
 Fair, kind, and true, have often liv'd alone,
 Which three, till now, never kept seat in one.

CVI.

When in the chronicle of wasted time
 I see descriptions of the fairest wights,
 And beauty making beautiful old rhyme,
 In praise of ladies dead, and lovely knights;
 Then, in the blazon of sweet beauty's best,
 Of hand, of foot, of lip, of eye, of brow,
 I see their antique pen would have express'd
 Even such a beauty as you master now.
 So all their praises are but prophecies
 Of this our time, all you prefiguring;
 And for they look'd but with divining eyes,
 They had not skill enough your worth to sing:
 For we, which now behold these present days,
 Have eyes to wonder, but lack tongues to praise.

CVII.

Not mine own fears, nor the prophetic soul
 Of the wide world, dreaming on things to come,
 Can yet the lease of my true love control,
 Suppos'd as forfeit to a confin'd doom.
 The mortal moon hath her eclipse endur'd,
 And the sad augurs mock their own presage;
 Incertainties now crown themselves assur'd,
 And peace proclaims olives of endless age.
 Now, with the drops of this most balmy time
 My love looks fresh, and death to me subscribes,
 Since, spite of him, I'll live in this poor rhyme,
 While he insults o'er dull and speechless tribes:
 And thou in this shalt find thy monument,
 When tyrants' crests, and tombs of brass are spent.

CVIII.

What's in the brain that ink may character,
 Which hath not figur'd to thee my true spirit?
 What's new to speak, what now to register,

That may express my love, or thy dear merit?
 Nothing, sweet boy; but yet, like prayers divine,
 I must each day say o'er the very same,
 Counting no old thing old, thou mine, I thine.
 Even as when first I hallow'd thy fair name
 So that eternal love, in love's fresh case,
 Weighs not the dust and injury of age;
 Nor gives to necessary wrinkles place,
 But makes antiquity for aye his page;
 Finding the first conceit of love there bred,
 Where time and outward form would show it dead.

CIX.

O! never say that I was false of heart,
 Though absence seem'd my flame to qualify.
 As easy might I from myself depart,
 As from my soul, which in thy breast doth lie.
 That is my home of love: if I have rang'd,
 Like him that travels, I return again,
 Just to the time, not with the time exchang'd;
 So that myself bring water for my stain.
 Never believe, though in my nature reign'd
 All frailties that besiege all kinds of blood,
 That it could so preposterously be stain'd,
 To leave for nothing all thy sum of good;
 For nothing this wide universe I call,
 Save thou, my Rose; in it thou art my all.

CX.

Alas! 't is true, I have gone here and there,
 And made myself a motley to the view:
 Gor'd mine own thoughts, sold cheap what is most dear,
 Made old offences of affections new:
 Most true it is, that I have look'd on truth
 Askance and strangely; but, by all above,
 These blenches¹ gave my heart another youth,
 And worse essays prov'd thee my best of love.
 Now all is done, save² what shall have no end:
 Mine appetite I never more will grind
 On newer proof, to try an older friend,
 A god in love, to whom I am confin'd.
 Then, give me welcome, next my heaven the best,
 Even to thy pure, and most most loving breast.

CXI.

O! for my sake do you with fortune chide,
 The guilty goddess of my harmful deeds,
 That did not better for my life provide
 Than public means, which public manners breeds.
 Thence comes it that my name receives a brand;
 And almost thence my nature is subdu'd
 To what it works in, like the dyer's hand.
 Pity me, then, and wish I were renew'd;
 Whilst, like a willing patient, I will drink
 Potions of eyesel³ 'gainst my strong infection;
 No bitterness that I will bitter think.
 Nor double penance, to correct correction.
 Pity me, then, dear friend, and I assure ye,
 Even that your pity is enough to cure me.

CXII.

Your love and pity doth th' impression fill
 Which vulgar scandal stamp'd upon my brow;
 For what care I who calls me well or ill,
 So you o'er-green my bad, my good allow?
 You are my all-the-world, and I must strive
 To know my shames and praises from your tongue,
 None else to me, nor I to none alive,

To blench is to start from. ² have: in old eds. Tyrwhitt made the change. ³ Vinegar.

That my steel'd sense or changes, right or wrong.

In so profound abyssm I throw all care

Of others' voices, that my adder's sense

To critic and to flatterer stopp'd are.

Mark how with my neglect I do dispense :—

You are so strongly in my purpose bred.

That all the world besides methinks they are dead.¹

CXIII.

Since I left you mine eye is in my mind,

And that which governs me to go about

Doth part his function, and is partly blind,

Seems seeing, but effectually is out ;

For it no form delivers to the heart

Of bird, of flower, or shape, which it doth latch :²

Of his quick objects hath the mind no part,

Nor his own vision holds what it doth catch ;

For if it see the rud'st or gentlest sight,

The most sweet favour, or deformed'st creature,

The mountain or the sea, the day or night,

The crow or dove, it shapes them to your feature :

Incapable of more, replete with you,

My most true mind thus maketh mine untrue.³

CXIV.

Or whether doth my mind, being crown'd with you,

Drink up the monarch's plague, this flattery ?

Or whether shall I say, my eye saith true,

And that your love taught it this alchymy,

To make, of monsters and things indigest,

Such cherubins as your sweet self resemble,

Creeping every bad a perfect best,

As fast as objects to his beams assemble ?

O ! 't is the first : 't is flattery in my seeing.

And my great mind most kingly drinks it up :

Mine eye well knows what with his gust is 'greeing,

And to his palate doth prepare the cup :

If it be poison'd, 't is the lesser sin

That mine eye loves it, and doth first begin.

CXV.

Those lines that I before have writ do lie,

Even those that said I could not love you dearer ;

Yet then my judgment knew no reason why

My most full flame should afterwards burn clearer.

But reckoning time, whose million'd accidents

Creep in 'twixt vows, and change decrees of kings,

Tan sacred beauty, blunt the sharp'st intents,

Divert strong minds 't the course of altering things ;

Alas ! why, fearing of time's tyranny,

Might I not then say, " now I love you best,"

When I was certain of her uncertainty,

Crowning the present, doubting of the rest ?

Love is a babe ; then might I not say so,

To give full growth to that which still doth grow ?

CXVI.

Let me not to the marriage of true minds

Admit impediments : love is not love,

Which alters when it alteration finds,

Or bends with the remover to remove :

O no ! it is an ever-fix'd mark,

That looks on tempests, and is never shaken ;

'T is the star to every wandering bark,

Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken,

Love's not Time's fool, though rosy lips and cheeks

Within his bending sickle's compass come ;

Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks,
But bears it out even to the edge of doom.

If this be error, and upon me proved,

I never writ, nor no man ever loved.

CXVII.

Accuse me thus : that I have scanted all

Wherein I should your great deserts repay ;

Forgot upon your dearest love to call,

Whereto all bonds do tie me day by day ;

That I have frequent been with unknown minds,

And given to time your own dear-purchas'd right ;

That I have hoisted sail to all the winds

Which should transport me farthest from your sight

Book both my wilfulness and errors down,

And on just proof surmise accumulate ;

Bring me within the level of your frown,

But shoot not at me in your waken'd hate,

Since my appeal says, I did strive to prove

The constancy and virtue of your love.

CXVIII.

Like as, to make our appetites more keen,

With eager compounds we our palate urge ;

As, to prevent our maladies unseen,

We sicken to shun sickness when we purge ;

Even so, being full of your ne'er-cloying sweetness,

To bitter sauces did I frame my feeding ;

And, sick of welfare, found a kind of meetness

To be diseas'd, ere that there was true needing.

Thus policy in love, 't anticipate

The ills that were not, grew to faults assur'd,

And brought to medicine a healthful state,

Which, rank of goodness, would by ill be cur'd ;

But thence I learn, and find the lesson true,

Drugs poison him that so fell sick of you.

CXIX.

What potions have I drunk of syren tears,

Distill'd from limbeck fowl as hell within,

Applying fears to hopes, and hopes to fears,

Still losing when I saw myself to win !

What wretched errors hath my heart committed,

Whilst it hath thought itself so blessed never !

How have mine eyes out of their spheres been fitted

In the distraction of this madding fever !

O benefit of ill ! now I find true,

That better is by evil still made better ;

And ruin'd love, when it is built anew,

Grows fairer than at first, more strong, far greater.

So I return rebuk'd to my content,

And gain by ill thrice more than I have spent.

CXX.

That you were once unkind befriends me now,

And for that sorrow, which I then did feel,

Needs must I under my transgression bow,

Unless my nerves were brass or hammer'd steel.

For if you were by my unkindness shaken,

As I by yours, you have pass'd a hell of time ;

And I, a tyrant, have no leisure taken

To weigh how once I suffer'd in your crime.

O ! that our night of woe might have remember'd

My deepest sense, how hard true sorrow hits ;

And soon to you, as you to me, then tender'd

The humble salve which wounded bosoms fit !

But that your trespass now becomes a fee :

Mine ransoms yours, and yours must ransom me

¹ methinks they are dead in old cop. Dyce omits "they" ² lack : in old eds. Malone made the change. ³ Used as a substantive

⁴ For a deeper sense

CXXI.

T is better to be vile, than vile esteemed,
 When not to be receives reproach of being ;
 And the just pleasure lost, which is so deemed,
 Not by our feeling, but by others' seeing :
 For why should others' false adulterate eyes
 Give salutation to my sportive blood ?
 Or on my frailties why are frailer spies,
 Which in their wills count bad what I think good ?
 No, I am that I am ; and they that level
 At my abuses, reckon up their own :
 I may be straight, though they themselves be bevel.
 By their rank thoughts my deeds must not be shown ;
 Unless this general evil they maintain,
 All men are bad, and in their badness reign.

CXXII.

Thy gift, thy tables, are within my brain
 Full character'd with lasting memory,
 Which shall above that idle rank remain,
 Beyond all date, even to eternity ;
 Or, at the least, so long as brain and heart
 Have faculty by nature to subsist ;
 Till each to ras'd oblivion yield his part
 Of thee, thy record never can be miss'd.
 That poor retention could not so much hold,
 Nor need I tallies thy dear love to score ;
 Therefore to give them from me was I bold,
 To trust those tables that receive thee more :
 To keep an adjunct to remember thee,
 Were to import forgetfulness in me.

CXXIII.

No ! Time, thou shalt not boast that I do change :
 Thy pyramids, built up with newer might,
 To me are nothing novel, nothing strange ;
 They are but dressings of a former sight.
 Our dates are brief, and therefore we admire
 What thou dost foist upon us that is old,
 And rather make them born to our desire,
 Than think that we before have heard them told.
 Thy registers and thee I both defy,
 Not wondering at the present, nor the past ;
 For thy records and what we see do lie,
 Made more or less by thy continual haste.
 This I do vow, and this shall ever be ;
 I will be true, despite thy scythe and thee ;

CXXIV.

If my dear love were but the child of state,
 It might for fortune's bastard be unfathered,
 As subject to time's love, or to time's hate,
 Weeds among weeds, or flowers with flowers gathered.
 No, it was builded far from accident ;
 It suffers not in smiling pomp, nor falls
 Under the blow of thrall'd discontent,
 Whereto th' inviting time our fashion calls :
 It fears not policy, that heretic,
 Which works on leases of short number'd hours,
 But all alone stands hugely politic,
 That it nor grows with heat, nor drowns with showers.
 To this I witness call the fools of time,
 Which die for goodness, who have liv'd for crime.

CXXV.

Were 't aught to me I bore the canopy,
 With my extern the outward honouring
 Or laid great bases for eternity,

Which prove more short than waste or ruining ?
 Have I not seen dwellers on form and favour
 Lose all, and more, by paying too much rent ;
 For compound sweet foregoing simple savour,
 Pitiful thrivers, in their gazing spent ?
 No : let me be obsequious in thy heart,
 And take thou my oblation, poor but free,
 Which is not mix'd with seconds, knows no art,
 But mutual render, only me for thee.
 Hence, thou suborn'd informer ! a true soul,
 When most impeach'd, stands least in thy control

CXXVI.

O thou, my lovely boy ! who in thy power
 Dost hold Time's fickle glass, his sickle, hour :
 Who hast by waning grown, and therein show'st
 Thy lovers withering, as thy sweet self grow'st.
 If nature, sovereign mistress over wrack,
 As thou goest onwards still will pluck thee back,
 She keeps thee to this purpose, that her skill
 May time disgrace, and wretched minutes kill.
 Yet fear her, O thou minion of her pleasure !
 She may detain, but not still keep her treasure :
 Her audit, though delay'd, answer'd must be,
 And her quietus is to render thee.

CXXVII.

In the old age black was not counted fair,
 Or if it were, it bore not beauty's name ;
 But now is black beauty's successive heir,
 And beauty slander'd with a bastard shame ;
 For since each hand hath put on nature's power,
 Fairing the foul with art's false borrow'd face,
 Sweet beauty hath no name, no holy bower,
 But is profan'd, if not lives in disgrace.
 Therefore, my mistress' eyes are raven black,
 Her eyes so suited ; and they mourners seem
 At such, who, not born fair, no beauty lack,
 Slandering creation with a false esteem :
 Yet so they mourn, becoming of their woe,
 That every tongue says, beauty should look so.

CXXVIII.

How oft, when thou, my music, music playest,
 Upon that blessed wood, whose motion sounds
 With thy sweet fingers, when thou gently swayest
 The wiry concord that mine ear confounds,
 Do I envy those jacks,¹ that nimble leap
 To kiss the tender inward of thy hand,
 Whilst my poor lips, which should that harvest reap,
 At the wood's boldness by thee blushing stand.
 To be so tickled, they would change their state
 And situation with those dancing chips,
 O'er whom thy fingers walk with gentle gait,
 Making dead wood more bless'd than living lins.
 Since saucy jacks so happy are in this,
 Give them thy fingers, me thy lips to kiss

CXXIX.

Th' expense of spirit in a waste of shame
 Is lust in action ; and till action, lust
 Is perjur'd, murderous, bloody, full of blame,
 Savage, extreme, rude, cruel, not to trust ;
 Enjoy'd no sooner but despised straight ;
 Past reason hunted, and no sooner had,
 Past reason hated, as a swallow'd bait,
 On purpose laid to make the taker mad :
 Mad in pursuit, and in possession so ;
 Had, having, and in quest to have extreme :

A bliss in proof—and prov'd, a very woe;¹
 Before, a joy propos'd: behind, a dream.
 All this the world well knows, yet none knows well
 To shun the heaven that leads men to this hell.

CXXX.

My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun;
 Coral is far more red than her lips' red;
 If snow be white, why then her breasts are dun;
 If hairs be wires, black wires grow on her head.
 I have seen roses damask'd, red and white,
 But no such roses see I in her cheeks;
 And in some perfumes is there more delight
 Than in the breath that from my mistress reeks.
 I love to hear her speak, yet well I know
 That music hath a far more pleasing sound:
 I grant I never saw a goddess go;
 My mistress, when she walks, treads on the ground.
 And yet, by heaven, I think my love as rare
 As any she belied with false compare.

CXXXI.

Thou art as tyrannous, so as thou art,
 As those whose beauties proudly make them cruel;
 For well thou know'st, to my dear dotting heart
 Thou art the fairest and most precious jewel.
 Yet, in good faith, some say that thee behold,
 Thy face hath not the power to make love groan:
 To say they err I dare not be so bold,
 Although I swear it to myself alone.
 And, to be sure that is not false I swear,
 A thousand groans, but thinking on thy face,
 One on another's neck, do witness bear,
 Thy black is fairest in my judgment's place.
 In nothing art thou black, save in thy deeds,
 And thence this slander, as I think, proceeds.

CXXXII.

Thine eyes I love, and they, as pitying me,
 Knowing thy heart torments² me with disdain,
 Have put on black, and loving mourners be,
 Looking with pretty ruth upon my pain.
 And, truly, not the morning sun of heaven
 Better becomes the grey cheeks of the east,
 Nor that full star that ushers in the even
 Doth half that glory to the sober west,
 As those two mourning eyes become thy face
 O! let it, then, as well besem thy heart
 To mourn for me, since mourning doth thee grace,
 And suit thy pity like in every part;
 Then will I swear, beauty herself is black,
 And all thy foul that thy complexion lack.

CXXXIII.

Beshrew that heart, that makes my heart to groan
 For that deep wound it gives my friend and me!
 Is't not enough to torture me alone,
 But slave to slavery my sweet'st friend must be?
 Me from myself thy cruel eye hath taken,
 And my next self thou harder hast engrossed:
 Of him, myself, and thee, I am forsaken;
 A torment threefold thus to be crossed.
 Prison my heart in thy steel bosom's ward,
 But, then, my friend's heart let my poor heart bail;
 Whoe'er keeps me, let my heart be his guard;
 Thou canst not then use rigour in my jail:

And yet thou wilt; for I, being pent in thee,
 Perforce am thine, and all that is in me

CXXXIV.

So, now I have confess'd that he is thine,
 And I myself am mortgag'd to thy will;
 Myself I'll forfeit, so that other mine
 Thou wilt restore, to be my comfort still:
 But thou wilt not, nor he will not be free,
 For thou art covetous, and he is kind;
 He learn'd but, surety-like, to write for me,
 Under that bond that him as fast doth bind.
 The statute³ of thy beauty thou wilt take,
 Thou usurer, that put'st forth all to use,
 And sue a friend, came debtor for my sake;
 So him I lose through my unkind abuse.
 Him have I lost; thou hast both him and me:
 He pays the whole, and yet am I not free.

CXXXV.

Whoever hath her wish, thou hast thy Will,⁴
 And Will to boot, and Will in over-plus;
 More than enough am I, that vex thee still,
 To thy sweet will making addition thus.
 Wilt thou, whose will is large and spacious,
 Not once vouchsafe to hide my will in thine?
 Shall will in others seem right gracious,
 And in my will no fair acceptance shine?
 The sea, all water, yet receives rain still,
 And in abundance addeth to his store;
 So thou, being rich in Will, add to thy Will
 One will of mine, to make thy large Will more.
 Let no unkind, no fair beseechers kill;
 Think all but one, and me in that one Will.

CXXXVI.

If thy soul check thee that I come so near,
 Swear to thy blind soul that I was thy Will,
 And will, thy soul knows, is admitted there;
 Thus far for love, my love-suit, sweet, fulfil.
Will will fulfil the treasure of thy love,
 Ay, fill it full with wills, and my will one.
 In things of great receipt with ease we prove,
 Among a number one is reckon'd none:
 Then, in the number let me pass untold,
 Though in thy stores' account I one must be;
 For nothing hold me, so it please thee hold
 That nothing me, a something sweet to thee:
 Make but my name thy love, and love that still,
 And then thou lov'st me,—for my name is Will.

CXXXVII.

Thou blind fool, Love, what dost thou to mine eyes
 That they behold, and see not what they see?
 They know what beauty is, see where it lies,
 Yet what the best is, take the worst to be.
 If eyes, corrupt by over-partial looks,
 Be anchor'd in the bay where all men ride,
 Why of eyes' falsehood hast thou forged hooks,
 Whereto the judgment of my heart is tied?
 Why should my heart think that a several place?
 Which my heart knows the wide world's common place?
 Or mine eyes seeing this, say, this is not,
 To put fair truth upon so foul a face?
 In things right true my heart and eyes have erred,
 And to this false plague are they now transferr'd.

¹ and proof and very woe: in old eds. Malone made the change. ² torment: in old eds. ³ Security. ⁴ Whoever hath her wish, thou hast thy Will. As there is in this and the next sonnet, as well as in Sonnet cxliii, an obvious play upon the Christian name of the poet we have printed Security instead of will in the quarto, 1609, and as it probably stood in the manuscript from which it was printed. ⁵ A piece of ground which has been "common," or uninclosed, but has been separated and made private property.

CXXXVIII.¹

When my love swears that she is made of truth,
 I do believe her, though I know she lies,
 That she might think me some untutor'd youth,
 Unlearned in the world's false subtleties.
 Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young,
 Although she knows my days are past the best,
 Simply I credit her false-speaking tongue:
 On both sides thus is simple truth suppress'd.
 But wherefore says she not, she is unjust?
 And wherefore say not I, that I am old?
 O! love's best habit is in seeming trust,
 And age in love loves not to have years told:
 Therefore I lie with her, and she with me,
 And in our faults by lies we flatter'd be.

CXXXIX.

O! call not me to justify the wrong,
 That thy unkindness lays upon my heart;
 Wound me not with thine eye, but with thy tongue,
 Use power with power, and slay me not by art.
 Tell me thou lov'st elsewhere; but in my sight,
 Dear heart, forbear to glance thine eye aside: [might
 What need'st thou wound with cunning, when thy
 Is more than my o'er-press'd defence can 'bide?
 Let me excuse thee: ah! my love well knows
 Her pretty looks have been mine love's enemies,
 And therefore from my face she turns my foes,
 That they elsewhere might dart their injuries.
 Yet do not so; but since I am near slain,
 Kill me out-right with looks, and rid my pain.

CXL.

Be wise as thou art cruel; do not press
 My tongue-tied patience with too much disdain;
 Lest sorrow lend me words, and words express
 The manner of my pity-wanting pain.
 If I might teach thee wit, better it were,
 Though not to love, yet, love, to tell me so;
 As testy sick men, when their deaths be near,
 No news but health from their physicians know:
 For, if I should despair, I should grow mad,
 And in my madness might speak ill of thee;
 Now this ill-wresting world is grown so bad,
 Mad slanderers by mad ears believed be.
 That I may not be so, nor thou believ'd, [wide.
 Bear thine eyes straight, though thy proud heart go to

CXLI.

In faith I do not love thee with mine eyes,
 For they in thee a thousand errors note;
 But 't is my heart that loves what they despise,
 Who in despite of view is pleas'd to dote.
 Nor are mine ears with thy tongue's tune delighted;
 Nor tender feeling, to base touches prone,
 Nor taste, nor smell, desire to be invited
 To any sensual feast with thee alone:
 But my five wits, nor my five senses can
 Dissuade one foolish heart from serving thee,
 Who leave unsway'd the likeness of a man,
 Thy proud heart's slave and vassal wretch to be:
 Only my plague thus far I count my gain,
 That she that makes me sin awards me pain.

CXLII.

Love is my sin, and thy dear virtue hate,
 Hate of my sin, grounded on sinful loving.

O! but with mine compare thou thine own state,
 And thou shalt find it merits not reproving;
 Or, if it do, not from those lips of thine,
 That have profan'd their scarlet ornaments,
 And seal'd false bonds of love as oft as mine,
 Robb'd others' beds revenues of their rents.
 Be it lawful I love thee, as thou lov'st those Whom thine eyes woo as mine importune thee:
 Root pity in thy heart, that when it grows,
 Thy pity may deserve to pitied be.
 If thou dost seek to have what thou dost hide,
 By self-example may'st thou be denied¹

CXLIII.

Lo! as a careful housewife runs to catch
 One of her feather'd creatures broke away,
 Sets down her babe, and makes all swift dispatch
 In pursuit of the thing she would have stay;
 Whilst her neglected child holds her in chase,
 Cries to catch her whose busy care is bent
 To follow that which flies before her face,
 Not prizing her poor infant's discontent:
 So run'st thou after that which flies from thee,
 Whilst I, thy babe, chase thee afar behind;
 But if thou catch thy hope, turn back to me,
 And play the mother's part, kiss me, be kind:
 So will I pray that thou may'st have thy Will
 If thou turn back, and my loud crying still.

CXLIV.²

Two loves I have of comfort and despair,
 Which like two spirits do suggest³ me still:
 The better angel is a man, right fair,
 The worse spirit a woman, colour'd ill.
 To win me soon to hell, my female evil
 Tempteth my better angel from my side,
 And would corrupt my saint to be a devil,
 Wooing his purity with her foul pride.
 And whether that my angel be turn'd fiend,
 Suspect I may, yet not directly tell:
 But being both from me, both to each friend,
 I guess one angel in another's hell:
 Yet this shall I ne'er know, but live in doubt,
 Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

CXLV.

Those lips that Love's own hand did make,
 Breath'd forth the sound that said, "I hate."
 To me that languish'd for her sake;
 But when she saw my woeful state,
 Straight in her heart did mercy come,
 Chiding that tongue, that ever sweet
 Was us'd in giving gentle doom,
 And taught it thus anew to greet.
 "I hate," she alter'd with an end,
 That follow'd it as gentle day
 Doth follow night, who, like a fiend,
 From heaven to hell is flown away:
 "I hate" from hate away she threw,
 And sav'd my life, saying—"not you."

CXLVI.

Poor soul, the center of my sinful earth,
 Fool'd by those rebel powers that thee array,⁴
 Why dost thou pine within, and suffer dearth,
 Painting thy outward walls so costly gay?
 Why so large cost, having so short a lease,

¹ This sonnet, with variations, was first printed in "The Passionate Pilgrim" 1599. It is inserted hereafter as it stands in that work, the reader may have an opportunity of comparing the two copies. ² See note to "King Lear," Act III, sc. iv. ³ This sonnet, with some variations, will be found hereafter in "The Passionate Pilgrim." ⁴ Tempt. ⁵ Old ed. reads: My sinful earth these rebel powers: not thee array. Malone made the change.

Dat thou upon thy fading mansion spend?
 Shall worms, inheritors of this excess,
 Eat up thy charge? is this thy body's end?
 Then, soul, live thou upon thy servant's loss,
 And let that pine to aggravate thy store;
 Buy terms divine in selling hours of dress,
 Within be fed, without be rich no more:
 So shalt thou feed on death, that feeds on men,
 And, death once dead, there's no more dying then.

CXLVII.

My love is as a fever, longing still
 For that which longer nurseth the disease;
 Feeding on that which doth preserve the ill,
 Th' uncertain sickly appetite to please.
 My reason, the physician to my love,
 Angry that his prescriptions are not kept,
 Hath left me, and I desperate now approve,
 Desire is death, which physie did except.
 Past cure I am, now reason is past care,
 And frantic mad with evermore unrest:
 My thoughts and my discourse as mad men's are,
 At random from the truth vainly express'd;
 For I have sworn thee fair, and thought thee bright,
 Who art as black as hell, as dark as night.

CXLVIII.

O me! what eyes hath love put in my head,
 Which have no correspondence with true sight!
 Or, if they have, where is my judgment fled,
 That censures falsely what they see aright?
 If that be fair whereon my false eyes dote,
 What means the world to say it is not so?
 If it be not, then love doth well denote
 Love's eye is not so true as all men's: no,
 How can it? O! how can love's eye be true,
 That is so vex'd with watching and with tears?
 No marvel, then, though I mistake my view;
 The sun itself sees not, till heaven clears.
 O cunning love! with tears thou keep'st me blind,
 Lest eyes well-seeing thy foul faults should find.

CXIX.

Canst thou, O Cruel! say, I love thee not,
 When I against myself, with thee partake?
 Do I not think on thee, when I forget
 Am of myself, all tyrant, for thy sake?
 Who hateth thee that I do call my friend?
 On whom frown'st thou that I do fawn upon?
 Nay, if thou low'st on me, do I not spend
 Revenge upon myself with present moan?
 What merit do I in myself respect,
 That is so proud thy service to despise,
 When all my best doth worship thy defect,
 Commanded by the motion of thine eyes?
 But, love, hate on, for now I know thy mind:
 Those that can see thou lov'st, and I am blind.

CL.

O! from what power hast thou this powerful might,
 With insufficiency my heart to sway?
 To make me give the lie to my true sight,
 And swear that brightness doth not grace the day?
 Whence hast thou this becoming of things ill,
 That in the very refuse of thy deeds
 There is such strength and warrant of skill,
 That in my mind thy worst all best exceeds?
 Who taught thee how to make me love thee more,
 The more I hear and see just cause of hate?

O! though I love what others do abhor,
 With others thou shouldst not abhor my state:
 If thy unworthiness rais'd love in me,
 More worthy I to be belov'd of thee.

CLI.

Love is too young to know what conscience is;
 Yet who knows not, conscience is born of love?
 Then, gentle cheater, urge not my amiss,
 Lest guilty of my faults thy sweet self prove:
 For, thou betraying me, I do betray
 My nobler part to my gross body's treason;
 My soul doth tell my body that he may
 Triumph in love; flesh stays no farther reason,
 But rising at thy name, doth point out thee
 As his triumphant prize. Proud of this pride,
 He is contented thy poor drudge to be,
 To stand in thy affairs, fall by thy side.
 No want of conscience hold it, that I call
 Her love, for whose dear love I rise and fall.

CLII.

In loving thee thou know'st I am forsworn,
 But thou art twice forsworn, to me love swearing;
 In act thy bed-vow broke, and new faith torn,
 In vowing new hate after new love bearing.
 But why of two oaths' breach do I accuse thee,
 When I break twenty? I am perjur'd most;
 For all my vows are oaths but to misuse thee,
 And all my honest faith in thee is lost:
 For I have sworn deep oaths of thy deep kindness,
 Oaths of thy love, thy truth, thy constancy;
 And to enlighten thee, gave eyes to blindness,
 Or made them swear against the thing they see;
 For I have sworn thee fair: more perjur'd I,
 To swear against the truth so foul a lie!

CLIII.

Cupid laid by his brand, and fell asleep:
 A maid of Dian's this advantage found,
 And his love-kindling fire did quickly steep
 In a cold valley-fountain of that ground;
 Which borrow'd from this holy fire of love
 A dateless lively heat, still to endure,
 And grew a seething bath, which yet men prove
 Against strange maladies a sovereign cure.
 But at my mistress' eye love's brand new-fired,
 The boy for trial needs would touch my breast;
 I sick withal, the help of bath desired,
 And thither hied, a sad distemper'd guest,
 But found no cure: the bath for my help lies
 Where Cupid got new fire, my mistress' eyes.

CLIV.

The little Love-god lying once asleep,
 Laid by his side his heart-inflaming brand,
 Whilst many nymphs, that vow'd chaste life to keep
 Came tripping by; but in her maiden hand
 The fairest votary took up that fire
 Which many legions of true hearts had warm'd
 And so the general of hot desire
 Was, sleeping, by a virgin hand disarm'd.
 This brand she quenched in a cool well by,
 Which from love's fire took heat perpetual.
 Growing a bath, and healthful remedy
 For men diseas'd; but I, my mistress' thrall,
 Came there for cure, and this by that I prove,
 Love's fire heats water, water cools not love.

A LOVER'S COMPLAINT

From off a hill whose concave womb re-worded
A plaintful story from a sisting vane,
My spirits t' attend this double voice accorded,
And down I laid to list the sad-tun'd tale;
Ere long espy'd a fickle maid full pale,
Tearing of papers, breaking rings a-twain,
Storming her world with sorrow's wind and rain.

Upon her head a platted hive of straw,
Which fortified her visage from the sun,
Whereon the thought might think sometime it saw
The carcase of a beauty spent and done:
Time had not scythed all that youth begun,
Nor youth all quit; but, spite of heaven's fell rage,
Some beauty peep'd through lattice of sear'd age.

Oft did she heave her napkin to her eyne,
Which on it had conceited characters,
Laundering the silken figures in the brine
That season'd woe had pelleted in tears,
And often reading what contents it bears;
As often shrieking undistinguish'd woe
In clamours of all size, both high and low.

Sometimes her level'd eyes their carriage ride,
As they did battery to the spheres intend;
Sometime, diverted, their poor balls are tied
To the orb'd earth; sometimes they do extend
Their view right on; anon their gazes lend
To every place at once, and no where fix'd,
The mind and sight distractedly commix'd.

Her hair, nor loose, nor tied in formal plat,
Proclaim'd in her a careless hand of pride;
For some, untuck'd, descended her sheav'd¹ hat,
Hanging her pale and pined cheek beside;
Some in her threaden fillet still did bide,
And, true to bondage, would not break from thence,
Though slackly braided in loose negligence.

A thousand favours from a maund² she drew
Of amber, crystal, and of bedded jet,
Which one by one she in a river threw,
Upon whose weeping margin she was set;
Like usury, applying wet to wet,
Or monarchs' hands, that let not bounty fall
Where want cries "some," but where excess begs all.

Of folded schedules had she many a one,
Which she perus'd, sigh'd, tore, and gave the flood;
Crack'd many a ring of posied gold and bone,
Bidding them find their sepulchres in mud;
Found yet more letters sadly pen'd in blood,
With sleided³ silk feat and affectedly
Enswath'd, and seal'd to curious secrecy.

These often bath'd she in her fluxive eyes,
And often kiss'd, and often 'gan' to tear;
Cry'd, O false blood! thou register of lies
What unapproved witness dost thou bear!
Ink would have seem'd more black and damned here
This said, in top of rage the lines she rents,
Big discontent so breaking their contents.

A reverend man that graz'd his cattle nigh,
Sometime a blusterer, that the ruffle knew
Of court, of city, and had let go by
The swiftest hours, observed as they flew,
Towards this afflicted fancy fastly drew;
And, privileged by age, desires to know,
In brief, the grounds and motives of her woe.

So slides he down upon his grained bat,
And comely-distant sits he by her side;
When he again desires her, being sat,
Her grievance with his hearing to divide:
If that from him there may be ought applied,
Which may her suffering ecstacy assuage,
'T is promis'd in the charity of age.

Father, she says, though in me you behold
The injury of many a blasting hour,
Let it not tell your judgment I am old;
Not age, but sorrow, over me hath power:
I might as yet have been a spreading flower,
Fresh to myself, if I had self-applied
Love to myself, and to no love beside.

But woe is me! too early I attended
A youthful suit, it was to gain my grace;
O! one by nature's outwards so commended,
That maidens' eyes stuck over all his face:
Love lack'd a dwelling, and made him her place,
And when in his fair parts she did abide,
She was new lodg'd, and newly deified.

His browny locks did hang in crooked curls,
And every light occasion of the wind
Upon his lips their silken parcels hurls:
What 's sweet to do, to do will aptly find;
Each eye that saw him did enchant the mind,
For on his visage was in little drawn,
What largeness thinks in paradise was sawn.⁴

Small show of man was yet upon his chin:
His phoenix down began but to appear,
Like unshorn velvet, on that termless skin.
Whose bare out-brag'd the web it seem'd to wear,
Yet show'd his visage by that cost most⁵ dear,
And nice affections wavering stood in doubt
If best were as it was, or best without.

Malone made the change. ⁶ The northern provincialism for seven

His qualities were beauteous as his form,
For maiden-tongu'd he was, and thereof free;
Yet, if men mov'd him, was he such a storm
As oft 'twixt May and April is to see,
When winds breathe sweet, unruly though they be.
His rudeness so, with his authoriz'd youth,
Did livery falseness in a pride of truth.

Well could he ride, and often men would say,
"That horse his mettle from his rider takes:
Proud of subjection, noble by the sway, [makes!]
What rounds, what bounds, what course, what stop he
And controversy hence a question takes,
Whether the horse by him became his deed,
Or he his manage by the well-doing steed.

But quickly on this side the verdict went.
His real habitude gave life and grace
To appertainings and to ornament,
Accomplish'd in himself, not in his case:
All aids, themselves made fairer by their place,
Came¹ for additions, yet their purpos'd trim
Piec'd not his grace, but were all grac'd by him.

So on the tip of his subduing tongue,
All kind of arguments and question deep,
All replication prompt, and reason strong,
For his advantage still did wake and sleep:
To make the weeper laugh, the laughter weep,
He had the dialect and different skill,
Catching all passions in his craft of will:

That he did in the general bosom reign
Of young, of old; and sexes both enchanted,
To dwell with him in thoughts, or to remain
In personal duty, following where he haunted:
Consents, bewitch'd, ere he desire have granted;
And dialogued for him what he would say,
Ask'd their own wills, and made their wills obey.

Many there were that did his picture get,
To serve their eyes, and in it put their mind;
Like fools that in th' imagination set
The goodly objects which abroad they find
Of lands and mansions, theirs in thought assign'd;
And labouring in more pleasures to bestow them,
Than the true gouty laudlord which doth owe them.

So many have, that never touch'd his hand,
Sweetly suppos'd them mistress of his heart.
My woeful self, that did in freedom stand,
And was my own tee-simple. (not in part)
What with his art in youth, and youth in art,
Threw my affections in his charmed power,
Reserv'd the stalk, and gave him all my flower.

Yet did I not, as some my equals did,
Demand of him, nor, being desir'd, yielded;
Finding myself in honour so forbid.
With safest distance I mine honour shielded.
Experience for me many bulwarks build'd
Of proofs new-bleeding, which remain'd the foil
Of this false jewel, and his amorous spoil.

But ah! who ever shunn'd by precedent
The destin'd ill she must herself assay?
Or forc'd examples, 'gainst her own content,
To put the by-pass'd perils in her way?
Counsel may stop a while what will not stay;

For when we rage, advice is often seen
By blunting us to make our wits more keen.

Nor gives it satisfaction to our blood,
That we must curb it upon others' proof,
To be forbid the sweets that seem so good,
For fear of harms that preach in our behoof.
O appetite, from judgment stand aloof!
The one a palate hath that needs will taste,
Though reason weep, and cry, "it is thy last."

For farther I could say, "this man's untrue,"
And knew the patterns of his foul beguiling;
Heard where his plants in others' orchards grew,
Saw how deceits were gilded in his smiling;
Knew vows were ever brokers to defiling;
Thought characters, and words, merely but art,
And bastards of his foul adulterate heart.

And long upon these terms I held my city,
Till thus he 'gan besiege me: "Gentle maid,
Have of my suffering youth some feeling pity,
And be not of my holy vows afraid:
That's to you sworn, to none was ever said;
For feasts of love I have been call'd unto,
Till now did ne'er invite, nor never vow

All my offences that abroad you see,
Are errors of the blood, none of the mind:
Love made them not: with acture² they may be,
Where neither party is nor true nor kind:
They sought their shame that so their shame did find,
And so much less of shame in me remains,
By how much of me their reproach contains.

Among the many that mine eyes have seen,
Not one whose flame my heart so much as warm'd.
Or my affection put to the smallest teen.³
Or any of my leisures ever charm'd:
Harm have I done to them, but ne'er was harmed;
Kept hearts in liveries, but mine own was free,
And reign'd, commanding in his monarchy.

Look here, what tributes wounded fancies sent me,
Of paled pearls, and rubies red as blood;
Figuring that their passions likewise lent me
Of grief and blushes, aptly understood
In bloodless white and the encrimson'd mood;
Effects of terror and dear modesty,
Encamp'd in hearts, but fighting outwardly.

And lo! behold these talents of their hair,
With twisted metal amorously impleach'd,⁴
I have receiv'd from many a several fair,
(Their kind acceptance weepingly beseech'd)
With the annexions of fair gems enrich'd,
And deep-brain'd sonnets, that did amplify
Each stone's dear nature, worth, and quality.

The diamond; why, 't was beautiful and hard,
Whereto his invis'd⁵ properties did tend,
The deep-green emerald, in whose fresh regard
Weak sights their sickly radiance do amend;
The heaven-hued sapphire, and the opal blend
With objects manifold: each several stone,
With wit well blazon'd, smil'd, or made some moan

Lo! all these trophies of affections hot,
Of pensiv'd and subdued desires the tender,

Nature hath charg'd me that I hoard them not,
But yield them up where I myself must render;
That is, to you, my origin and end:
For these, of force, must your oblations be,
Since I their altar, you enpatron me.

O! then, advance of yours that phraseless hand,
Whose white weighs down the airy scale of praise;
Take all these similes to your own command,
Hallow'd with sighs that burning lungs did raise.
What me, your minister, for you obey,
Works under you: and to your audit comes
Their distract parcels in combined sums.

Lo! this device was sent me from a nun,
Or sister sanctified, of holiest note;
Which late her noble suit in court did shun,
Whose rarest havings made the blossoms' dote:
For she was sought by spirits of richest coat,
But kept cold distance, and did thence remove,
To spend her living in eternal love.

But O, my sweet! what labour is 't to leave
The thing we have not, mastering what not strives?
Paling¹ the place which did no form receive;
Playing patient sports in unconstrained gyves?
She that her fame so to herself contrives,
The scars of battle scapeth by the flight,
And makes her absence valiant, not her might.

O, pardon me, in that my boast is true!
The accident which brought me to her eye,
Upon the moment did her force subdue,
And now she would the caged cloister fly;
Religious love put out religion's eye:
Not to be tempted, would she be immur'd,²
And now, to tempt all, liberty procur'd.

How mighty then you are, O hear me tell!
The broken bosoms that to me belong,
Have emptied all their fountains in my well,
And mine I pour your ocean all among:
I strong o'er them, and you o'er me being strong,
Must for your victory us all congest,
As compound love to physic your cold breast

My parts had power to charm a sacred sun,
Who, disciplin'd, I dieted³ in grace,
Believ'd her eyes, when they t' assail begun,
All vows and consecrations giving place.
O most potential love! vow, bond, nor space,
In thee hath neither sting, knot, nor confine,
For thou art all, and all things else are thine.

When thou impresses, what are precepts worth
Of stale example? When thou wilt inflame,
How coldly those impediments stand forth
Of wealth, of filial fear, law, kindred, fame?
Love's arms are peace, 'gainst rule, 'gainst sense, 'gainst⁴ shame;
And sweetens, in the suffering pangs it bears,
The aloe of all forces, shocks, and fears.

Now, all these hearts that do on mine depend,
Feeling it break, with bleeding groans they pine;
And supplicant their sighs to you extend,
To leave the battery that you make 'gainst mine,
Lending soft audience to my sweet design,
And credent soul to that strong-bonded oath,
That shall prefer and undertake my troth."

This said, his watery eyes he did dismount,
Whose sights till then were level'd on my face;
Each cheek a river running from a fount
With brinish current downward flow'd apace,
O. how the channel to the stream gave grace!
Who, glaz'd with crystal, gate the glowing roses
That flame through water which their hue inclose

O father! what a hell of witchcraft lies
In the small orb of one particular tear;
But with the inundation of the eyes
What rocky heart to water will not wear?
What breast so cold that is not warmed here?
O⁵ cleft effect! cold modesty, hot wrath,
Both fire from hence and chill extincture hath!

For lo! his passion, but an art of craft,
Even there resolv'd my reason into tears;
There my white stole of chastity I daff'd;
Shook off my sober guards, and civil fears:
Appear to him, as he to me appears,
All melting; though our drops this difference bore,
His poison'd me, and mine did him restore.

In him a plenitude of subtle matter,
Applied to cautels, all strange forms receives,
Of burning blushes, or of weeping water,
Or swooning paleness; and he takes and leaves,
In either's aptness, as it best deceives
To blush at speeches rank, to weep at woes,
Or to turn white, and swoon at tragic shows:

That not a heart which in his level came,
Could scape the hail of his all-hurting aim,
Showing fair nature is both kind and tame,
And veil'd in them, did win whom he would maim
Against the thing he sought he would exclaim,
When he most burn'd in heart-wish'd luxury,
He preach'd pure maid, and prais'd cold chastity.

Thus, merely with the garment of a grace
The naked and concealed fiend he cover'd;
That th' unexperienc'd gave the tempter place,
Which, like a cherubin, above them hover'd.
Who, young and simple, would not be so lover'd?
Ah me! I fell; and yet do question make,
What I should do again for such a sake.

O, that infected moisture of his eye!
O, that false fire, which in his cheek so glow'd!
O, that fore'd thunder from his heart did fly!
O, that sad breath his spungy lungs bestowed!
O, all that borrow'd motion, seeming owed,
Would yet again betray the fore-betray'd,
And new pervert a reconciled maid!

THE PASSIONATE PILGRIM.

INTRODUCTION.

The Passionate Pilgrime By W. Shakespeare. At London Printed for W. Jaggard, and are to be sold by W. Leake, at the Greyhound in Pauls Churchyard. 1599." 16mo. 30 leaves.

The title-page first given to the edition of 1612 ran thus: "The Passionate Pilgrime. Or Certaine Amorous Sonnets, betwene Venus and Adonis, newly corrected and augmented. By W. Shakespeare. The third Edition. Whereunto is newly added two Lute-Epistles, the first from Paris to Hellen, and Hellen's answer backe againe to Paris. Printed by W. Jaggard. 1612." The title-page substituted for the above differs in no other respect but in the omission of "By W. Shakespeare."]

In the following pages we have reprinted "The Passionate Pilgrim," 1599, as it came from the press of W. Jaggard, with the exception only of the orthography. Malone omitted several portions of it; some because they were substantially repetitions of poems contained elsewhere, and others because they appeared to have been improperly assigned to Shakespeare: one piece, the last in the tract, is not inserted at all in Boswell's edition, although Malone reprinted it in 1780, and no reason is assigned for rejecting it. We have given the whole, and in our notes we have stated the particular circumstances belonging to such pieces, as there is reason to believe did not come from the pen of our great dramatist. "The Passionate Pilgrim" was reprinted by W. Jaggard, in 1612, with additions, and the facts attending the publication of the two impressions are peculiar.

In 1598, Richard Barnfield put his name to a small collection of productions in verse, entitled "The Encomion of Lady Peunia," which contained more than one poem attributed to Shakespeare in "The Passionate Pilgrim," 1599: the first was printed by John, and the last by William Jaggard. Boswell suggests, that John Jaggard in 1598 might have stolen Shakespeare's verses and attributed them to Barnfield; but the answer to this supposition is two-fold—first, that Barnfield formally, and in his own name, printed them as his in 1598; and next, that he reprinted them under the same circumstances in 1605, notwithstanding they had been in the mean time assigned to Shakespeare. The truth seems to be that W. Jaggard took them in 1599 from Barnfield's publication, printed by John Jaggard in 1598. In 1612 W. Jaggard went even more boldly to work; for in the impression of "The Passionate Pilgrim" of that year, he not only reprinted Barnfield's poems of 1598, but included two of Ovid's Epistles, which had been translated by Thomas Heywood, and printed by him with his name in his "Troja Britannica," 1609. The epistles were made, with some little ambiguity, to appear in "The Passionate Pilgrim" of 1612, to have been also the work of Shakespeare. When, therefore, Heywood published his next work in 1612, he exposed the wrong that had been thus done to him, and claimed the performances as his own. (See the Reprint of "The Apology for Actors," by the Shakespeare Society, pp. 62 and 66.) He seems also to have taken steps against W. Jaggard; for the latter canceled the title-page of "The Passionate Pilgrim," 1612, which contained the name of Shakespeare, and substituted another without any name, so far discrediting Shakespeare's right to any of the poems the work contained, although some were his beyond all dispute. Malone's copy in the Bodleian Library has both title-pages.

To what extent, therefore, we may accept W. Jaggard's assertion of the authorship of Shakespeare of the poems in "The Passionate Pilgrim," is a question of some difficulty. Two Sonnets, with which the little volume opens, are contained (with variations, on which account we print them again here) in Thorpe's edition of "Shakespeare's Sonnets," 1609: three other pieces (also with changes) are found in "Love's Labour's Lost," which had been printed the year before "The Passionate Pilgrim" originally came out:—another, and its "answer," notoriously belong to Marlowe and Raleigh; a sonnet, with some slight differences, had been printed as his in 1596, by a person of the name of Griffin, while one production appeared in "England's Helicon" in 1600, under the signature of Ignoto. The various circumstances attending each poem, wherever any remark seemed required, are stated in our notes, and it is not necessary therefore to enter further into the question here.

It ought to be mentioned, that although the signatures at the bottom of the pages are continued throughout, after the poem beginning, "Lord, how mine eyes throw gazes to the east!" we meet with a new and dateless title-page, which runs thus:—"Sonnets to sundry Notes of Musicks." At London Printed for W. Jaggard, and are to be sold by W. Leake, at the Greyhound in Pauls Churchyard." Hence we may infer that all the productions inserted after this division had been set by popular composers: that some of them had received this distinction, evidence has descended to our day: we refer particularly to the lyrical poem, "My flocks feed not," (p. 965) and to the well-known lines, "Live with me and be my love," (p. 966) the air to which seems to have been so common, that it was employed by Deloney as a ballad-tune. See his "Strange Histories," 1607, p. 28 of the reprint by the Percy Society.

One object with W. Jaggard in 1612, when he reprinted "The Passionate Pilgrim" with unwarrantable additions, was probably to swell the bulk of it; and so much had he felt this want in 1599, that, excepting the three last leaves, all the rest of the volume is printed on one side of the paper only, a peculiarity we do not recollect to belong to any other work of the time: by the insertion of Heywood's translations from Ovid, this course was rendered unnecessary in 1612, and although the volume is still of small bulk, it was not so insignificant in its appearance as it had been in 1599. Only a single copy of

² This edition of Barnfield's work was unknown to bibliographers until a copy of it was met with in the library of Lord Francis Egerton. See the Bridgewater Catalogue, i. 37, p. 21. It was not a mere reprint of the edition of 1598, but it was really "newly corrected and enlarged" by the author, as stated on the title-page; so that Barnfield's attention was particularly directed to the contents of his small volume, and he perhaps to the manner in which part of them had been stolen by W. Jaggard in 1599. It is to be remarked also that John Jaggard was not concerned in the second edition of Barnfield's "Encomion," as he had been in the first: it was printed by W. I. (probably W. Jaggard, the very person who had committed the theft in 1599) and it was "to be sold by John Holdgates." Both editions contain the tribute to Spenser, Daniel Drayton, and Shakespeare, the lines to the latter would hardly have been reprinted in 1605, if Barnfield had supposed that Shakespeare had in any way given his sanction to the transference of two pieces from "The Encomion" to "The Passionate Pilgrim."

³ On the title page it is called "the third edition," but no second edition is known, although it is very probable that it had been republished in the interval between 1599 and 1612.

⁴ Nicholas Breton seems to have written his "Passionate Shepherd," 1601, in imitation of the title and of the style of some of the poems in the "Passionate Pilgrim." The only known copy of this production is in private hands. It is very possible that a second edition of "The Passionate Pilgrim" (that of 1612, as we have observed, is called "the third impression") came out about 1604, and that on this account Breton was led to imitate the title, and the form of verse of some of the pieces in it. As "The Passionate Shepherd" is a great curiosity, not being even mentioned by bibliographers, and as it is thus connected with the name and works of Shakespeare, an exact copy of the title-page may be acceptable:—

"The Passionate Shepherd, or The Shepherdes Loue: set downe in Passions to his Shepherdesse Aglaia. With many excellent conceited Poems and pleasant Sonnets, fit for young heads to passe away idle houres. London Imprinted by E. Allide for Iohn Tappe, and are to be sold at his Shop, at the Tower-Hill, neere the Bow-ward Gate. 1604." &c.

⁵ It is as small a poetical volume as we remember to have seen, excepting a copy of George Peele's "Tale of Troy," which was reprinted in 1604, of the size of an inch and a half high by an inch the edition of 1599, we believe, has been preserved, and that among Capell's books in the library of Trinity College, Cambridge. No other copy of "The Passionate Pilgrim" of 1612 has the two title-pages, with and without the name of Shakespeare, but that formerly belonging to Malone, and bequeathed by him, with so many other valuable rarities, to the Bodleian Library.

"The Passionate Pilgrim," 1599, concludes with a piece of moral satire, "Whilst as fickle fortune smil'd," &c., and we have followed it by a poem found only in a publication by broad. It contains some curious variations from the text of the first edition in 1599. 4to.

¹ It is called "Love's Martyr, or Rosalin's Complaint." Of the author or editor nothing is known; but he is not to be confounded with Charles Chester, called Carlo Buffone in Ben Jonson's "Every Man out of his Humour," and respecting whom see Nash's "Pierce

Robert Chester, dated 1601¹. Malone preceded "The Phoenix and the Turtle," by the song "Take, O! take those lips away:" this we have not thought it necessary to repeat, because we have given the whole of it, exactly in the same words, in "Measure for Measure," Act IV., Sc. 1. The first verse only is found in Shakespeare, and the second, which is much inferior, in Beaumont and Fletcher's "Bloody Brother." It may be doubted, therefore, whether Shakespeare wrote it, or, like Beaumont and Fletcher, only introduced part of it into his play as a popular song of the time.

Penniless," 1592. (Shakespeare Society's reprint, pp. 38. 99) and Thoms's "Anecdotes and Traditions," (printed for the Camden Society) p. 56. Charles Chester is several times mentioned by name in "Skiaethia," a collection of Epigrams and Satires, by E. Guilpin printed in 1598, as well as in "Ulysses upon Ajax," 1596.

WHEN my love swears that she is made of truth
I do believe her, though I know she lies,
That she might think me some untutor'd youth
Unskilful in the world's false forgeries.

Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young,
Although I know my years be past the best,
I smiling credit her false speaking tongue,
Out-facing faults in love with love's ill rest.
But wherefore says my love that she is young?
And wherefore say not I that I am old?
O! love's best habit is a soothing tongue,
And age, in love, loves not to have years told.

Therefore I'll live with love, and love with me,
Since that our faults in love thus smother'd be.

II.^a

Two loves I have of comfort and despair,
Which like two spirits do suggest me still:
The better angel is a man, right fair,
The worser spirit a woman, colour'd ill.
To win me soon to hell, my female evil
Tempteth my better angel from my side,
And would corrupt a saint to be a devil,
Wooing his purity with her fair pride;
And whether that my angel be turn'd fiend,
Suspect I may, but not directly tell;
For being both to me, both to each friend,
I guess one angel in another's hell.

The truth I shall not know, but live in doubt,
Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

III.^a

Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye,
'Gainst whom the world could not hold argument,
Persuade my heart to this false perjury?
Vows for thee broke deserve not punishment.
A woman I forswore; but I will prove,
Thou being a goddess, I forswore not thee:
My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love;
Thy grace being gain'd cures all disgrace in me.
My vow was breath, and breath a vapour is:
Then thou fair sun, that on this earth dost shine,
Exhale this vapour now; in thee it is:
If broken, then it is no fault of mine.

If by me broke, what fool is not so wise
To break an oath, to win a paradise?

IV.

Sweet Cytherea, sitting by a brook,
With young Adonis, lovely, fresh and green,
Did court the lad with many a lovely look,
Such looks as none could look but beauty's queen.
She told him stories to delight his ear;
She show'd him favours to allure his eye:

To win his heart, she touch'd him here and there
Touches so soft still conquer chastity.

But whether unripe years did want conceit,
Or he refus'd to take her figur'd^a proffer,
The tender nibbler would not touch the bait,
But smile and jest at every gentle offer:

Then, fell she on her back, fair queen, and toward:
He rose and ran away; ah, fool too froward!

V.^a

If love make me forsworn, how shall I swear to love?
O! never faith could hold, if not to beauty vow'd:
Though to myself forsworn, to thee I'll constant prove,
Those thoughts, to me like oaks, to thee like osiers bow'd.

Study his bias leaves, and makes his book thine eyes.
Where all those pleasures live, that art can comprehend.
If knowledge be the mark, to know thee shall suffice;
Well learned is that tongue that well can thee commend;

All ignorant that soul that sees thee without wonder,
Which is to me some praise, that I thy parts admire:
Thine eye Jove's lightning seems, thy voice his dreadful thunder,

Which (not to anger bent) is music and sweet fire.
Celestial as thou art, O! do not love that wrong.
To sing the heavens' praise with such an earthly tongue.

VI.

Scarce had the sun dried up the dewy morn,
And scarce the herd gone to the hedge for shade,
When Cytherea, all in love forlorn,
A longing tarrance for Adonis made,
Under an osier growing by a brook,
A brook, where Adon us'd to cool his spleen:
Hot was the day; she hotter that did look
For his approach, that often there had been.
Anon he comes, and throws his mantle by,
And stood stark naked on the brook's green brim;
The sun look'd on the world with glorious eye,
Yet not so wistly as this queen on him:

¹ This sonnet is substantially the same as Sonnet cxxxviii. in the quarto published by Thorpe, in 1609. ² This sonnet is also included in the collection of 1609. (Sonnet cxlv.) but with some verbal variations. ³ This sonnet is found in "Love's Labour's Lost" but with some slight variations, published in 1598. ⁴ We may suspect, notwithstanding the concurrence of the two ancient editions in our text that the true reading was sugar'd, the long s having been, as in other places, mistaken for the letter f. ⁵ This poem, with variations, is read by Sir Nathaniel, in "Love's Labour's Lost."

He spying her, boun'd in, whereas he stood :
O Jove! quoth she, why was not I a flood?

VII.

Fair is my love, but not so fair as fickle,
Mild as a dove, but neither true nor trusty;
Brighter than glass, and yet, as glass is, brittle,
Softer than wax, and yet as iron rusty:
A lily pale, with damask dye to grace her.
None fairer, nor none false to deface her.

Her lips to mine how often hath she joined.
Between each kiss her oaths of true love swearing!
How many tales to please me hath she coined,
Dreading my love, the loss whereof still fearing!
Yet in the midst of all her pure protestings,
Her faith, her oaths, her tears, and all were jestings.

She burn'd with love, as straw with fire flameth;
She burn'd out love, as soon as straw out burneth:
She fram'd the love, and yet she foil'd the framing;
She bade love last, and yet she fell a turning.
Was this a lover, or a lecher whether?
Bad in the best, though excellent in neither.

VIII.

If music and sweet poetry agree.
As they must needs, the sister and the brother,
Then, must the love be great twixt thee and me
Because thou lov'st the one, and I the other.
Doulard to thee is dear, whose heavenly touch
Upon the lute doth ravish human sense;
Spenser to me, whose deep conceit is such,
As passing all conceit needs no defence.
Thou lov'st to hear the sweet melodious sound
That Phœbus' lute (the queen of music) makes;
And I in deep delight am chiefly drown'd
Whenas himself to singing he betakes.
One god is god of both, as poets feign,
One knight loves both, and both in thee remain.

IX.

Fair was the morn, when the fair queen of love,*
* * * * *

Paler for sorrow than her milk-white dove,
For Adon's sake, a youngster proud and wild;
Her stand she takes upon a steep up hill:
Anon Adonis comes with horn and hounds:
She only queen, with more than love's good will,
Forbade the boy he should not pass those grounds.
Thence, (quoth she) did I see a fair sweet youth
Here in these brakes deep-wounded with a boar,
Deep in the thigh, a spectacle of ruth!
See, in my thigh, (quoth she) here was the sore.
She showed hers: he saw more wounds than one,
And blushing fled, and left her all alone.

X.

Sweet rose, fair flower, untimely pluck'd, soon faded,
Pluck'd in the bud, and faded in the spring!
Bright orient pearl, alack! too timely shaded,
Fair creature, kill'd too soon by death's sharp sting!
Like a green plum that hangs upon a tree,
And falls, through wind) before the fall should be.

I weep for thee, and yet no cause I have;
For why? thou left'st me nothing in thy will.
And yet thou left'st me more than I did crave;
For why? I craved nothing of thee still:
O yes, (dear friend,) I pardon crave of thee.
Thy discontent thou didst bequeath to me.

XI.

Venus with Adonis sitting by her,
Under a myrtle shade, began to woo him:
She told the youngling how god Mars did try her,
And as he fell to her, she fell to him.
Even thus, (quoth she) the warlike god embrac'd me;
And then she clipp'd Adonis in her arms;
Even thus, (quoth she) the warlike god unlac'd me,
As if the boy should use like loving charms:
Even thus, (quoth she) he seized on my lips,
And with her lips on his did act the seizure;
And as she fetch'd breath, away he skips,
And would not take her meaning, nor her pleasure
Ah! that I had my lady at this bay,
To kiss and clip me till I ran away!

XII.

Crabbed age and youth
Cannot live together;
Youth is full of plesance,
Age is full of care:
Youth like summer morn.
Age like winter weather;
Youth like summer brave,
Age like winter bare.
Youth is full of sport,
Age's breath is short;
Youth is nimble, age is lame:
Youth is hot and bold,
Age is weak and cold;
Youth is wild, and age is tame
Age, I do abhor thee,
Youth, I do adore thee;
O, my love, my love is young!
Age, I do defy thee;
O, sweet shepherd! hie thee,
For methinks thou stay'st too long.

XIII.

Beauty is but a vain and doubtful good,
A shining gloss that fadeth suddenly;
A flower that dies, when first it 'gins to bud;
A brittle glass, that's broken presently:
A doubtful good, a gloss, a glass, a flower,
Lost, faded, broken, dead within an hour.

And as goods lost are sold or never found,
As faded gloss no rubbing will refresh;
As flowers dead lie wither'd on the ground,
As broken glass no cement can redress;
So beauty blemish'd once, for ever lost,
In spite of physie, painting, pain, and cost.

XIV.

Good night, good rest. Ah! neither be my share.
She bade good night, that kept my rest away;
And daff'd me to a cabin hang'd with care,
To descant on the doubts of my decay.
Farewell, quoth she, and come again to-morrow:
Fare well I could not, for I supp'd with sorrow.

* This poem was published in 1599, in R. barclay Barnfield's "Encomion of Lady Pecunia." There is little doubt that it is his property, notwithstanding its appearance in the "Passionate Pilgrim," 1599, and it was reprinted as Barnfield's in the new edition of his "Encomion," in 1600. The next line is a variation, with considerable variations, in the third in a collection of seventy-two sonnets, published in 1600, under the title of "Pecunia," with the name of B. Grailin, as the author. A syllabic defect in the first line is there remedied by the insertion of "young" before "Adonis." A manuscript of the time, now before us, is without the epithet, and has the initials W. S. in the margin. The same manuscript contains also of "The Passionate Pilgrim," and in the contemporaneous manuscript; but in Grailin's "Pecunia," the line is "And in the end, to her, in the end of the day."

Yet at my parting sweetly did she smile,
 In scorn or friendship, nill I construe whether :
 'T may be, she joy'd to jest at my exile,
 'T may be, again to make me wander thither ;
 "Wander," a word for shadows like thyself,
 As take the pain, but cannot pluck the pelf.

XV.

Lord, how mine eyes throw gazes to the east !
 My heart doth charge the watch, the morning rise
 Doth cite each moving sense from idle rest.
 Not daring trust the office of mine eyes,
 While Philomela sits and sings, I sit and mark,
 And wish her lays were tuned like the lark ;

For she doth welcome day-light with her ditty,
 And drives away dark dismal-dreaming night :
 The night so pack'd, I post unto my pretty ;
 Heart hath his hope, and eyes their wished sight ;
 Sorrow chang'd to solace, solace mix'd with sorrow ;
 For why ? she sigh'd, and bade me come to-morrow.

Were I with her, the night would post too soon ;
 But now are minutes added to the hours ;
 To spite me now, each minute seems a moon ;¹
 Yet not for me, shine sun to succour flowers !

Pack night, peep day, good day, of night now borrow :
 Short, night, to-night, and length thyself to-morrow.

XVI.*

It was a lording's daughter,
 The fairest one of three,
 That liked of her master
 As well as well might be,
 Till looking on an Englishman,
 The fairest that eye could see,
 Her fancy fell a turning.

Long was the combat doubtful,
 That love with love did fight,
 To leave the master loveless,
 Or kill the gallant knight :
 To put in practice either,
 Alas ! it was a spite
 Unto the silly damsel.

But one must be refused,
 More meekle was the pain,
 That nothing could be used,
 To turn them both to gain ;
 For of the two the trusty knight
 Was wounded with disdain :
 Alas ! she could not help it.

Thus art with arms contending
 Was victor of the day,
 Which by a gift of learning
 Did bear the maid away ;
 Then lullaby, the learned man
 Hath got the lady gay ;
 For now my song is ended.

XVII.

On a day (alack the day !)
 Love, whose month was ever May,
 Spied a blossom passing fair,
 Playing in the wanton air :
 Through the velvet leaves the wind,
 All unseen, 'gan passage find ;
 That the lover (sick to death)
 Wish'd himself the heaven's breath,
 Air (quoth he) thy cheeks may blow ;
 Air, would I might triumph so !
 But, alas ! my hand hath sworn
 Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn :
 Vow, alack ! for youth unmeet :
 Youth, so apt to pluck a sweet.
 Thou for whom Jove would swear
 Juno but an Ethiop were ;
 And deny himself for Jove.
 Turning mortal for thy love.

XVIII.*

My flocks feed not,
 My ewes breed not,
 My rams speed not,
 All is amiss :
 Love is dying,¹
 Faith's defying,
 Heart's denying,²
 Causer of this.

All my merry jigs are quite forgot,
 All my lady's love is lost (God wot) :
 Where her faith was firmly fix'd in love,
 There a nay is plac'd without remove.
 One silly cross
 Wrought all my loss :
 O frowning Fortune, cursed, fickle dame
 For now I see
 Inconstancy
 More in women than in men remain.

In black mourn I,
 All fears scorn I,
 Love hath forlorn me,
 Living in thrall :
 Heart is bleeding,
 All help needing,
 O cruel speeding !
 Fraughted with gall !
 My shepherd's pipe can sound no deal,³
 My wether's bell rings doleful knell ;
 My curtail dog that wont to have play'd,
 Plays not at all, but seems afraid ;
 My sighs so deep⁴,
 Procure to weep,
 In howling-wise, to see my doleful plight
 How sighs resound
 Through heartless ground,
 Like a thousand vanquish'd men in blood fight !

¹ an hour : in old eds. Steevens made the change ; moon having the sense of month. ² This is the first piece in the division of "The Passionate Pilgrim," 1599, called "Sonnetts to sundry Notes of Music." As the signatures of the pages run on throughout the small volume, we have continued to mark the poems by numerals, in the order in which they were printed. ³ This poem, in a more complete state, and with the addition of two lines only found there, may be seen in "Love's Labour's Lost." The poem is also printed in "England's Helicon," (sign. H.) a miscellany of poetry, first published in 1600, (reprinted in 1812) where "W. Shakespeare" is appended to it. ⁴ In "England's Helicon," 1600, this poem immediately follows "On a day (alack the day)" but it is there entitled, "The unknown Shepherd's Complaint," and it is subscribed Ignoto. Hence, we may suppose that the compiler of that collection knew that it was not by Shakespeare, although it had been attributed to him in "The Passionate Pilgrim," of the year preceding. It had appeared anonymously, with the music, in 1597, in a collection of Madrigals, by Thomas Weelkes. ⁵ Love's defying : in "England's Helicon." ⁶ Heart's weeping : in "England's Helicon." ⁷ Part. ⁸ Both editions of "The Passionate Pilgrim," have With for My, which last not only is necessary for the sense, but is confirmed as the true reading by Weelkes' Madrigals, 1597.

Clear wells spring not,
Sweet birds sing not,
Green plants bring not
Forth their dye;¹

Herds stand weeping,
Flocks all sleeping,
Nymphs back peeping
Fearfully;

All our pleasure known to us poor swains,
All our merry meetings on the plains,
All our evening sport from us is fled;
All our love is lost, for love is dead.

Farewell, sweet lass,²
Thy like ne'er was

For a sweet content, the cause of all my moan³

Poor Coridon

Must live alone,

Other help for him I see that there is none.

XIX.⁴

When as thine eye hath chose the dame,
And staid the deer that thou shouldst strike,
Let reason rule things worthy blame,
As well as partial fancy like:

Take counsel of some wiser head,
Neither too young, nor yet unweid.

And when thou com'st thy tale to tell,
Smooth not thy tongue with filed talk,
Lest she some subtle practice smell;
A cripple soon can find a halt:

But plainly say thou lov'st her well,
And set thy person forth to sell.⁵

What though her frowning brows be bent,
Her cloudy looks will clear ere night;
And then too late she will repent
That thus dissembled her delight;

And twice desire, ere it be day,
That which with scorn she put away.

What though she strive to try her strength,
And ban and brawl, and say thee nay,
Her feeble force will yield at length.

When craft hath taught her thus to say,—
"Had women been so strong as men,
In faith you had not had it then."

And to her will frame all thy ways:
Spare not to spend, and chiefly there
Where thy desert may merit praise,
By ringing in thy lady's ear:

The strongest castle, tower, and town,
The golden bullet beats it down.

Serve always with assured trust,
And in thy suit be humble, true;
Unless thy lady prove unjust,
Seek never thou to choose a new.

When time shall serve, be thou not slack
To proffer, though she put thee back.

The wiles and guiles that women work,
Dissembled with an outward show,
The tricks and toys that in them lurk,
The cock that treats them shall not know
Have you not heard it said full oft,
A woman's nay doth stand for nought?*

Think, women still to strive with men
To sin, and never for to saint:
There is no heaven; be holy then,
When time with age shall them attain
Were kisses all the joys in bed,
One woman would another wed.

But soft! enough,—too much, I fear;
Lest that my mistress hear my song,
She will not stick to warm my ear⁶,
To teach my tongue to be so long:
Yet will she blush, here be it said,
To hear her secrets so bewray'd.

XX.⁷

Live with me and be my love,
And we will all the pleasures prove,
That hills and valleys, dales and fields,
And the craggy mountain yields.

There will we sit upon the rocks,
And see the shepherds feed their flocks
By shallow rivers, to whose falls
Melodious birds sing madrigals.

There will I make thee a bed of roses,
With a thousand fragrant posies;
A cap of flowers, and a kirtle
Embroider'd all with leaves of myrtle.

A belt of straw and ivy buds,
With coral clasps and amber studs;
And if these pleasures may thee move,
Then, live with me and be my love.

LOVE'S ANSWER.

If that the world and love were young,
And truth in every shepherd's tongue,
These pretty pleasures might me move,
To live with thee and be thy love.

¹ Both editions of "The Passionate Pilgrim," and "England's Helicon." Malone preferred the passage as it stands in Weelkes' Mad

Loud bells ring not

Cheerfully.

² The Passionate Pilgrim, and "England's Helicon," both have lass for lass, which the rhyme shows to be the true reading, as it reads in Weelkes' Madrigals, 1597. ³ So "England's Helicon" and Weelkes' Madrigals: "The Passionate Pilgrim, 1599, has moan for moan. In some modern editions, the stanzas of this poem have been given in an order different to that in which they stand in "The Passionate Pilgrim, 1599; to that order we restore them, and that text we follow, excepting where it is evidently corrupt. The line, "As well as partial fancy like," we have corrected by a manuscript of the time. The edition of 1599 reads: "As well as fancy party al, night," which is decidedly wrong. Malone substituted "As well as fancy, partial tide." The manuscript by which we have corrected the fourth line of the stanza also gives the two last lines of it thus:—

"Ask counsel of some other head,

Neither unwise nor yet unweid."

But no change from the old printed copy is here necessary. In the manuscript the whole has Shakespeare's initials at the end. ⁴ So the manuscript in our possession, and another that Malone used: the old copies read, with obvious corruption,

"And set her person forth to sale."

⁵ So the manuscript in our possession: "The Passionate Pilgrim, 1599, has it, "She will not stick to round me on th' ear." ⁶ This poem, here incomplete, and what is called "Love's Answer," still more imperfect, may be seen at length in "Percy's Reliques," Vol. I. They belong to Christopher Marlowe and Sir Walter Raleigh: the first is assigned by name to Marlowe, in "England's Helicon," 1600 (sign A.2) and the last appears in the same collection, under the name of Ignatio, which was a signature sometimes adopted by Sir Walter Raleigh. They are, besides, assigned to both these authors in Walton's "Angler," (p. 149, edit. 1808) under the titles of "The milk-maid's song," and "The Milk-maid's Mother's answer."
